

HOME TOWN Talk

By R. C. THOMAS

Sometimes when a community institution is not in the limelight for a spell, such as during a fund drive or special publicity campaign, many of us tend to forget its importance—even its existence. We take its presence for granted, and during our daily and weekly and monthly activities, give it no thought, unless our individual attention is purposely focused to it for some reason or another.

The Winters Public Library is such an institution. There was a time, some years ago, when the library was new in its present location on North Main Street, and was beginning to earn its rightful place in the ranks of such libraries, there was a lot of publicity surrounding it, and we all thought about it quite a bit. But it grew up, so to speak, and became a permanent fixture of the community, and lately, as it stands there daily serving the public in the way libraries do, it is out of the spotlight.

It is a natural thing for us to take our public library for granted, and devote our thoughts and efforts to another avenue. It doesn't mean the library is completely forgotten—there are many people who constantly work to upgrade it, and to solve the many problems constantly surrounding it. It's just that we are so busy with noticing other projects we tend to forget.

Winters has one of the finest public libraries in the country, much finer even than in many larger cities. And it's been a "bootstrap" operation all the way—no public funds have been used to pay the expenses of operation and stocking. Everything has come from contributions and memorial gifts. The work has been done by volunteers, from organization to operation and purchasing of books. It is an institution which has become very important to the community.

This is a good place—on the threshold of summer school vacation time—to give some thought to the Winters Public Library. To those who have been steady all-season patrons, there will be little change, except for perhaps an increase in visitations. But for others, the summer non-school-work period is an ideal time to become more acquainted with the library. For those school children who will have heavy time on their hands during the summer months, good books will prove an outlet. (To say nothing of the advantage afforded mothers after a few days of having the kids underfoot all the time!)

So if your family is not a member, and have not been around to the library for some time, make it a point to visit again right soon. You'll profit from it.

City Officials Discuss Water Storage Plans

City officials of Winters and Ballinger Thursday night discussed the feasibility and desirability of impounding water in lakes on the watershed of Elm Creek for use by Winters and Ballinger.

All members of the City Councils from the two towns, and members of the board of directors of Elm Creek Water Control District, heard a report on the progress of work in the district, and a report on the preliminary survey of the watershed which is being made this week.

W. M. Hays of Winters, chairman of the board of Elm Creek Water Control District, reported on the progress of work in the district. All preparations are being made toward making application for federal funds to build water retaining dams on Elm Creek and its tributaries, he said. The survey being made this week is only one step in that direction, he said.

Harvey Kahlden of the unincorporated County Soil Conservation Service office, briefed those in attendance on the survey being made by a watershed work plan staff. He said the survey will attempt to determine the feasibility of building a dam for impounding water on Elm Creek as well as whether more than one lake would be needed to serve the two towns.

If the study shows the need for impounding the water, officials will try to determine the best methods of financing the projects.

The present Elm Creek Water Control District is an outgrowth of a meeting between leaders of Winters and Ballinger about six years ago, searching for additional water supplies for the two cities. It has been proposed that a lake be situated some place on Elm Creek watershed, to provide recreational facilities, as well as flood control use. Such a water supply also could be used as a source for the proposed rural water supply system.

Ebb Grindstaff, chairman of the Upper Colorado River Authority, also was present, and spoke to the group.

In his talk to the group, Hays pointed out that in all work connected with the Elm Creek project will conform to ecological regulations from the state, along with federal regulations. This would include a main supply reservoir for Winters and Ballinger, as well as the water retaining structures proposed upstream.

Another meeting was scheduled for Thursday night of this week, at which representatives of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department were expected.

Results of the preliminary survey of the Elm Creek District will be made known within a few weeks, Hays says, and many questions concerning all proposals probably will be answered. The survey is being made by a work plan team of the State Water and Soil Conservation Board.

Gas Company Is Seeking Increase In City Gate Rate

Lone Star Gas Company has announced that it filed an application with the Texas Railroad Commission Friday (May 11) for an increase in the city gate rate for gas delivered to each town served by the company in Texas.

The primary factors involved in Lone Star's application relate to the cost of maintaining an adequate gas supply for customers, and contracting for new supplies to meet growing consumer demands. The individual items included in the company's rate increase proposal are: (1) the right to recover costs and return of $7.2 million associated with the firm's West Texas Gas Supply System, an approximate 400 mile large-diameter pipeline system from West Texas to the Dallas-Fort Worth area; (2) the right to recover costs and return of $0.8 million on approximately $9.6 million in advance payments and pre-payments the company thus far has made to producers as a part of new gas purchase agreements; (3) to bring the company's weighted average cost of gas used in the Commission's calculation of Lone Star's base city gate rate up from the 16.29-cents per thousand cubic feet to the present level of 20.53-cents per thousand; (4) to allow Lone Star to "pass on" 100 percent of its increased cost of purchased gas on a monthly basis, rather than the presently allowed 65 percent every six months.

The cost adjustments would mean an 8.1-cent per thousand cubic feet increase in the city gate rate, and an increase of $10.5 million in Lone Star's annual revenue when costs are flowed through to customers, based on a 1972 volume of approximately 130 billion cubic feet.

The company further noted that all proposed rate increases are cost justified and within nationally established price control guidelines for utilities established last year.

Screwworm Cases On Increase, Wet, Warm Weather To Blame, Says Agent

Screwworm cases in Texas are on the upswing, bearing out the fears of officials of the Screwworm Eradication Project that continued warm, wet weather would boost the activity of the livestock pest, Runnels County Agricultural Agent T. T. Parker has announced.

As of May 1, Parker said, 89 cases have been confirmed in the state this year. Twenty-one cases popped up during the past two weeks as the screwworm flies began moving northward from overwintering areas in northern Mexico and southern Texas, he said.

Of special notice is a case confirmed in San Saba County on April 27, Parker said. This case, plus a previous San Saba case and one in adjacent Llano County, could be a sign of things to come, Parker warns. They are the northernmost cases to be confirmed this year.

The weather is going to be a key factor this year in determining the screwworm situation, the county agent believes. With all the moisture over much of the state at the present time, the situation could rapidly change, he warns.

The agent urges all livestock producers in the county to keep a close check on their herds and to inspect closely any cuts or wounds on animals. A sample of any worms found should be sent to the Screwworm Lab, Box 969, Mission, Texas 78572, for identification. If the worm is identified as a screwworm, sterile flies will be dropped over the area where the case originated. Prompt reporting by producers is critical to the effectiveness of the eradication program, Parker emphasized.

Total U. S. cases now stand at 97, with Arizona recording seven and New Mexico, one.

BERMUDA CAUSING CATTLE PROBLEMS

Another area of trouble for cattle producers is bermuda grass pastures. County Agent Parker said this week.

Cattle recently turned in on young rapidly growing bermuda grass pastures may be affected by bovine pulmonary emphysema. Pulmonary emphysema means that the lungs become inflated with air, Parker said. The air sacs in the lungs rupture and allow the air to escape, interfering with the exchange of air between the lungs and the atmosphere and causing labored breathing in animals.

Just what causes this condition is still unknown, Parker said. Usually cattle have been grazing pastures from two days to two weeks when the first animals are affected. A few head or half the herd may become affected, Parker said. Animals may die rapidly or become chronic cases and do poorly. Sometimes up to 50 percent of the affected animals may die.

Parker suggests ranchers be on the lookout for these symptoms: One or more cows standing in a field with their necks stretched out and muzzle elevated. Some breathe with their mouths open and emit a grunting sound on expiration.

—Worsening of condition if animals are excited or forced to move.

To help prevent or reduce losses from emphysema, avoid moving cattle suddenly from dry mature feed to immature green feed. Try to introduce cattle gradually onto pastures that contain green forage, the county agent said. Limit access to such pastures to less than an hour the first day and gradually increase the time, taking at least a week to reach full use.

Parker suggests that if cattle are affected, gently remove them from the pasture and place the visibly affected ones in a dry lot. Locate the remainder on a field of dry, mature grass. Excitement may cause affected cattle to die and others to show symptoms, Parker said.

Call a veterinarian as soon as possible for advice on treating the affected animals, Parker adds. Drugs such as antihistamines, stimulants and corticosteroids help, but should be utilized in proper dosages without exciting the animals.

Stockmen can help prevent losses by closely observing cattle individually and watching for early symptoms in animals recently turned in on lush green pastures. The sooner the affected animals are spotted, the more opportunity there is for taking effective preventive measures, Parker said.

Generally, cattle should not be returned to green pastures for at least 10 days to two weeks, and then for only short periods.

Capitol Report

BY REP. LYNN NABERS

Last week the House of Representatives began a six day work schedule in order to make the most out of the remaining few weeks of this regular session. Several major bills were considered on the House floor, including the controversial drug bill, competitive insurance rating, and reinstatement of the death penalty.

After two days of heated debate the House passed the drug and Marijuana bill. However, many amendments were added and the amount of possession for a misdemeanor was set at one ounce or less with a penalty of up to six months in jail and a fine of $1000. Although the penalty for possession was lightened, the punishment for the sale of marijuana to minors was raised to a sentence of 10 to 99 years in jail. The House also approved an amendment by Rep. Matt Garcia of San Antonio which would allow those previously convicted of possession of one ounce or less to be sentenced at the discretion of the sentencing judge. This bill was approved with a vote of 9 to 38 and now goes to the Senate for consideration.

The House also passed a bill which would allow competitive rating on car insurance. The bill which is supported by Governor Briscoe was a compromise between those who favor all-out competition and those who favor board-set rates.

A bill reinstating the death penalty was passed by the House of Representatives. The bill, H.B. 200 by Rep. Dean Cobb of Dumas, states that the penalty for murder in certain instances will be death. This includes the murder of a peace officer or fireman, murder for the promise of remuneration, and murder of an employee of a penal institution during an escape or attempted escape. There was also an amendment approved by the House which would require the death penalty for those committing murder intentionally while committing kidnapping, burglary, robbery, forcible rape, or arson. The bill has been sent to the Senate for further approval.

Also under consideration in the House is the Senate Bill by Senator Bob Gammage which will give equal rights to all 18 year olds.

"Minimum Tillage" Farming Reduces Air Pollution, Lowers Farming Costs

Reduced air pollution, lower farming costs — these are two goals of a new farming technique being used by Texas conservation farmers, according to Harvey R. Kahlden, district conservationist for the U. S. Soil Conservation Service in Runnels County.

Called minimum tillage, the system limits cultural operations to only those essential to crop production.

Kahlden said that with minimum tillage farming, crops are planted directly into a mulch left undisturbed from the previous crop. Competition is controlled with herbicides.

"This system leaves a year-long cover on the soil surface," the conservationist pointed out. "Cover from dead stalks and leaves is one of the best known methods of reducing wind and water erosion."

Kahlden said farmers using the system can eliminate approximately three tractor trips across a field per crop. This not only saves time but it also reduces production costs. Some of these savings, however, are offset by costs of herbicides, he said.

Cotton yields generally have been increased by the minimum tillage method, especially on the sandier soils. Kahlden said. Grain sorghum yields have been about the same or slightly less with minimum tillage.

Kahlden listed these other major advantages of minimum tillage:

—Conservation of moisture. The protective mulch of crop residues keeps the soil cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter, effectively reducing evaporation.

—Better survival of seedlings. Surface residues protect young seedlings from wind damage or from being covered by soil dislodged during heavy rains.

The system helps to increase wildlife food and cover. Stalks, leaves and scattered seed left on the soil surface greatly benefit quail, dove, deer, and other wildlife.

To begin a minimum tillage farming system, Kahlden said farmers should either start with a high residue-producing crop, such as grain sorghum, or plant the first crop into a thick mulch of crop residues. He said minimum tillage systems can fail if a crop such as cotton is planted on land without sufficient cover to protect the young seedlings. Most farmers adapt equipment on hand for minimum tillage farming. Flex planters, coulters, and packer wheels are usually mounted on double or triple tool bar hookups for planting in surface mulches.

One minimum tillage trial will be carried out in the Runnels Soil and Water Conservation District this year, Kahlden said. The conservationist said Soil Conservation technicians, working through the Runnels Soil and Water Conservation District, can help farmers plan minimum tillage farming systems. He also said SCS has a booklet available which explains minimum tillage in detail. To get a free copy, contact the SCS field office, or write Soil Conservation Service, Box 648, Temple, Tex.
