Consumer prices leveling in Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Nearly eight weeks after Russia launched price reforms, the cost of food and goods is no longer rising as rapidly and supplies have improved some, an Associated Press survey showed Tuesday.

Consumers also have changed their buying and eating habits because of the higher prices. Sausage, cheese, butter, eggs and some other staples that were hard to find before the Jan. 2 price increases are now readily available, but at prices that force shoppers to buy less.

Spot shortages of some goods, such as cooking oil, continue.

The price of butter, which jumped from 10 rubles a kilogram before Jan. 2 to 52 rubles on Jan. 14, seems to have leveled off at 56 rubles, according to the AP's "Moscow Marketbasket" survey of selected stores in the capital.

Kerrey draws 37 percent in South Dakota primary

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Sen. Bob Kerrey won the South Dakota primary Tuesday, boosting his standing in the Democratic presidential race. President Bush, the unopposed Republican winner, was buffeted by a protest vote.

Kerrey's farm-state rival, Sen. Tom Harkin, was running second and looking ahead to the burst of primaries in March.

The Republican results had to be sobering for the White House. With 42 percent of the precincts reporting, Bush had 69 percent of the total and 31 percent chose uncommitted.

Kerrey was gaining 37 percent of the Democratic vote in South Dakota, compared to 30 percent for Harkin and 19 percent for Clinton. Paul Tsongas trailed with 9 percent, and Jerry Brown with 4 percent.

President readying for drug summit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — White House drug policy adviser Bob Martinez defended the Bush administration's anti-drug spending Tuesday and predicted a drug summit here will yield more cooperation and show continued need for economic incentives to reduce coca production.

Martinez made the remarks on the eve of a two-day summit President Bush is hosting Wednesday and Thursday for leaders of Colombia, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador and Mexico and the foreign minister of Venezuela.

The summit is a follow-up to a similar meeting Bush attended in 1990 in Cartagena, Colombia, where the United States, Colombia, Peru and Bolivia were represented.

Duke outlines issues at Texas campaign kickoff

by BRIAN COFER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Presidential candidate David Duke expressed concern for the future of the United States and laid out solutions to many of the nation's problems in a press conference Tuesday at Lubbock International Airport.

"We've got to change the direction this country is moving in. We are moving toward higher taxes, more government, and less personal freedom," he said. "It seems ironic that we're doing this as the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe are moving away from bigger government and toward more personal freedom."

Duke laid much of the blame for this decline on President Bush's policies.

"He said, 'Read my lips. No new taxes.' Apparently, what he meant was kiss his lips, not read his lips because there were massive tax increases."

He said a primary contributing factor to the recession is trade policies that are not advantageous to American manufacturers.

"I believe it's time to put America first," he said.

The free trade agreement that the United States, Mexico and Canada are negotiating will eventually lead to a loss in American jobs and deepen the recession, he said.

"Why in the world is GM closing down plants in the United States, while at the same time, keeping plants open in Mexico?" he asked. "We do not need free trade. We need fair trade. The only way we can have fair trade is if there is fair competition, and there is not fair competition between the U.S. and the Third World."

He said action must also be taken to equalize trade with Japan and Europe.

Welfare reform was another issue that Duke touched upon. Instead of relieving poverty, Duke said welfare has strengthened its grip, and contributed to such problems as drug use and crime.

THE UNIVERSITY DAILY: WALTER GRANBERY

Republican presidential hopeful David Duke kicked off his campaign tour through Texas Tuesday at the Lubbock International Airport. Duke is trying to gain support for the March 10 primary.

In addition to the problems welfare creates, he said welfare spending contributes to the budget deficit and contributes to mounting inability to finance health care.

"It's time we make sure people realize they get more rewards by working and being responsible than by being irresponsible," he said.

Candidates address space exploration

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Here are the views of the major presidential candidates on the question: "Should the government pursue Bush's space exploration initiative to colonize the moon and send a manned expedition to Mars?"

DEMOCRATS

•Jerry Brown: "Yes. We should pursue space exploration."

•Bill Clinton: A spokesman said Clinton supports efforts to colonize the moon and the long-term goal of a manned expedition to Mars.

•Tom Harkin: "While I will continue to support the space program's efforts to colonize the moon and put explorers on Mars, I believe our immediate priority as a nation must be to invest our tax dollars in programs such as universal health care, child care, Head Start and support for education and infrastructure, which will benefit the most number of people."

•Bob Kerrey: A spokesman said Kerrey supports NASA programs.

•Paul Tsongas: "The government must realign its priorities to address the serious economic issues that many Americans are facing."

REPUBLICANS

•Bush: NASA's 1993 budget of $15 billion includes $99 million to advance the Bush administration's long term national goal of returning to the Moon and sending astronauts to Mars.

•Patrick Buchanan: "Yes."

•David Duke: "Yes."

CAN offers option for traditional spring break

by STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

For the first time, Texas Tech's Community Action Network is offering students an alternative to the typical spring break vacation.

Through CAN, Tech students may travel to El Paso to participate in community service activities while combining travel, sight-seeing and spending time with students from the University of Texas at El Paso.

The cost of the trip is $65, which includes transportation to and from El Paso, six nights lodging and six meals. The deadline for registration is Feb. 28.

"El Paso has a lot of culture and historical significance," said Mary Donahue, an assistant coordinator of student activities. "Being a border town, it has a lot to offer and is a very diverse experience."

Students will leave March 15, and will return March 21. Tech will provide transportation and students will live in residence halls on the UTEP campus.

The alternative spring break program was developed in response to student's increasing interest in community service, according to a news release from the University Center's Activities Office.

"The trip will not be all work," Donahue said. "There will be time for recreation, but the main emphasis of the trip is community service."

Major activities include building and repairing home for Habitat for Humanity, which helps low income families, and helping Project Bravo, which targets servmission, which works with juvenile offenders.

"We will also be visiting with orphans at the House of Cornelias," Donahue said.

"This will be a dinner, a time for the orphans to meet people other than the ones they come in contact with daily. But, during their free time, the UTEP students are interested in getting together with the Tech students."

Scheduled trips include visits to Hueco Tanks State Park, Carlsbad Caverns and Old El Paso/Juarez, an area over 400 years old.

Students also will be spending time at the Tigua Indian Reservation in El Paso.

"The UTEP students will be hosting a barbecue at Hueco Tanks for us," Donahue said.

Duke proposed a work requirement for able-bodied welfare recipients, as well as mandatory drug testing and birth control requirements for recipients.

Illegal immigration is another problem that is threatening Americans' way of life and adding to the burden of social spending, he said.

"If we do not regain control over our borders, we're going to lose the very fabric of our society," he said. "We've got to look at the Mexican-American border and defend it with the same kind of intensity with which we defended the borders of Kuwait."

He said the border should be defended by American troops who would otherwise be discharged under defense budget cuts. Uncontrolled immigration could lead to an undermining of common American values, he said.

"We are overwhelmingly of European descent, and we are overwhelmingly of the Christian faith," he said. "That doesn't mean we shouldn't have religious freedom, but I think we are losing our anchor."

Duke down played his past involvement with the Ku Klux Klan, and said it was a mistake from his past that should not be held against him.

"I was too intolerant as a young man, and that's not the way it should be," he said.

Student leaders prepare to lobby for state funds

by STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In light of the recent budget cuts in higher education, a group of student leaders met in Austin recently to plan for the state legislature's 1993 session.

Chris Loveless, chairman of the committee on intergovernmental relations in Texas Tech's Student Senate, said the leaders were meeting so they could be better prepared for next year.

"The universities will be hit the hardest," Loveless said. "We were in a crisis last year and we are trying to avoid that next year."

"There used to be a public outcry for higher education," he said. "Currently, there is a public outcry for a prison and not for higher education. The state can not fund everything, so education must be the number one priority for the legislators."

Loveless said the student leaders are preparing to justify higher education over prisons to the legislature.

"They can stimulate the economy by funding higher education," he said. "When students graduate, they can go into business and provide the state with a thriving economy."

"It is more important to have an educated constituency than criminals," Loveless said. "While the prison will provide jobs to build it, people will be out of a job once it is complete. Education will help the state more than a prison."

He said the student leaders predict the sharpest cuts will come during the next legislative session, and said tuition increases seem inevitable.

"Right now, it seems that tuition will increase by $2 (per semester credit hour) every year," he said.

"Once it hits $30 (per credit hour), it will be reevaluated."

Loveless said the budget for Texas colleges and universities is a set amount that is then distributed among the different institutions depending on individual needs.

"It is a delegated fund that will be cut, meaning the university will be funded for less money," he said. "This year, we were funded for a little less than $100 million, and this amount could go down next year."

Loveless said because of this, the student leaders across the state are preparing to fight for higher education in the state legislature.

"The four main universities are Tech, UT, A&M and the University of Houston," he said. "We are very similar in our needs while the junior colleges have different agendas. We need to spend money to prepare, but the smaller universities do not want to spend the money. They just want a big say in what happens."

Loveless said the smaller universities will likely follow the lead established by the larger universities. He said that working together, the student leaders can have a large impact in Austin.

"Our administration works well with us, although it does not always seem that way," he said. "We also have a large number of graduates in the state legislature as does UT, A&M and the University of Houston. Sen. John Montford, the chairman of the finance committee, which comes up with the budget, lives in Lubbock and knows how important Texas Tech is to the city. He watches out for us."

ULTIMATUM NEEDED

The land of milk and honey has long been an unknown paradise, but for one group of people, "milk and honey" simply means a place to call home. The group is the Palestinians.

Since the Arabs lost the Six-Day War in 1967, Israelis have taken control of the disputed territories of the West Bank and Gaza. Palestinians who are living in the region do so under Israeli military power. The Israelis continue to push the Palestinians farther and farther from their land by building Jewish settlements in the disputed lands. But Secretary of State James Baker III delivered an ultimatum to the Israelis Monday: Stop settling in disputed territories or lose $10 billion in U.S. aid.

Baker and the U.S. government deserve to be honored for the action. The United States was founded on the value of equal human rights for all. Yet, the United States has consistently sent funds to Israel despite Israel's blatant actions to keep the Palestinians from having a land of their own.

Suppression is a policy not supported by the United States, so why does Israel continue to skirt fundamental U.S. beliefs?

Israelis claim that God gave them the land, and they can throw anyone who trespasses against God and/or Israel out. And the United States has agreed to Israel's ill-formed logic, even though it is a direct contradiction of the U.S. Declaration of Independence. We applaud Baker. We just hope he carries through with his statement. The Israelis will listen because they need the money to help absorb refugees from the now defunct Soviet Union.

And everyone needs a place to call home. Even the Palestinians. [5:0]

IT'S ALL ABOUT $$$

What has happened to our great American pastime?

The days of the baseball player who plays for the love of the game is over — it all boils down to how much money he can make.

Lets take for example, Texas Ranger star Ruben Sierra, who has not yet signed with the club. The Rangers offered him $4.25 million, plus a retirement plan that would pay him more than $200,000 a year between the ages of 40 and 69.

Sounds like a pretty good deal, right? Wrong! Sierra's agent laughed at the offer and now Sierra's case is in arbitration. A court room is now the battleground for the sport of baseball — and high salaries.

The high salaries and the egos of these ballplayers have helped to shake what respect people have left about the game. But the real problem lies with the agents, who are nothing but lawyers by trade.

They are telling the players to get as much money as possible out of the owners, because they want nothing but a cut of what they get in the contract. The salaries are entirely too high. At one time major league baseball did have what they call "the slave rule," which means the players were property of the owners. Back in the early 1970s they introduced free agency to the game.

A good idea at the beginning, but now it has gotten way out of hand. Players are just playing until it is time for their free agency and can milk the owners for all they can get. Once again the lawyers get involved and tell these players they are worth more than what they are paid.

At one time players were not paid very well and perhaps need to be paid well. But, after all, baseball is just a game — and how much can you pay someone just to play a game?

In baseball today, there is no loyalty and players are just looking to up their value for when their free agency comes up. Baseball is not what it used to be, the history is just not there. Sure, the Atlanta Braves rose from last to compete in the World Series but their rise was overshadowed by the New York Mets signing outfielder Bobby Bonilla, who became the highest paid major league baseball player, ever.

What are the kids of the future going to think about today's game? [5:0]

1992 just a preview of 1996

WILLIAM SAFIRE

WASHINGTON — My early prognostication still holds. Clinton gets the Democratic nomination, chooses Kerrey for veep, and they run a respectable race; the economy turns up briskly and the Bush-Quayle ticket wins.

To check this out on the morning after New Hampshire,

I called a former boss and observed how this was a great day for Old Nixon Hands.

"You're referring to Bush?" he asked.

That was a snappy comeback for a man pushing 80, but comebacks are Richard Nixon's thing, and he counts George Bush as well as Pat Buchanan among his old hands.

He sees the Democrats winning the Northeast and leading in California, where recession came late and will last longer.

The Republicans hold the South, take the Midwest and win.

But Buchanan has exposed Bush's beatability; how should the president handle him?

"He shouldn't bash Buchanan," replied Nixon, "he'll need those people. And in the end, conservatives will vote for Bush."

That is how Nixon retained support of Goldwater's people after the 1964 debacle wiped out Republicans everywhere.

Nor should Bush pander to the isolationism or nativism of the movement reborn: "He's as far right as he ought to be."

That's Nixon's advice; now let me take a long look ahead on my own.

Buchanan has wounded Bush.

The media-savvy slugger will be forced to split the protest vote with David Duke for a while, and it will be a long time before he sees 40 percent again.

But Buchanan's anti-immigrant oratory will touch a chord of racist resentment in California.

The Republican Convention of 1992 will be a replay of 1976: the incumbent president wins, but the challenger's withdrawal speech steals the show.

Buchanan will try to play challenger Reagan to Bush's President Ford: At convention's close, Buchanan will grimly endorse the ticket, with his supporters aware that he privately hopes the Republicans lose.

In the fall of 1992, we will be into the campaign of 1996.

Both parties choose centrists in 1992; most of the Buchanan far right, no more than 10 percent of the electorate, casts a "clothespin vote" — holding its nose and voting for Bush.

If Bush wins, internecine war would start early, with low presidential ratings in a surly second term helping fan ultra-right flames.

Vice President Quayle, the Bush loyalist, would be mired in the swamp of disenchantment at the end of most second terms.

Buchanan and his anti-minority minority then dust off F. Clifton White's old playbook and make their bid for an ideological coup. Back to New Hampshire, this time not to wound but to win.

What conservative — to the right of Bush, but nowhere near the deep end — would rally the majority of Republicans?

Who would remind the primary voters of the self-indulgent folly of implosion that, last time, led inexorably to Democratic landslide, the

IF [BUCHANAN'S] REPUBLICAN COUP FAILS IN 1996, HE IS LIKELY TO LEAD HIS LEGION OUT INTO A REINCARNATION OF THE KNOW-NOTHINGS — INSURING AN ERA OF DEMOCRATIC DOMINANCE.

Great Society and unwinnable war?

There is Jack Kemp, his Reaganite speeches becoming succinct as he matures; there's Gov. Pete Wilson of California, taking a beating now but sure to come back with his state; there's Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, if the South becomes the Republican redoubt.

Not one of this trio (or quartet, with Quayle) is burdened with the arrogance and elitism of Nelson Rockefeller, the Goldwater foil.

But not one is building the organizational base or drafting the long-range plans to keep the party in the Eisenhower-Nixon-Reagan mainstream, out of the hands of a little band of willful extremists.

Pat Buchanan has already proven he is far more politically adept than his early idol, Barry Goldwater; he also hates harder and has more of a "movement" messianism.

If his Republican coup fails in 1996, he is likely to lead his legion out into a reincarnation of the Know-Nothings — insuring an era of Democratic dominance.

Has George Bush thought any of this through? If he cares, he will conduct his campaign and his presidency in a way that builds the vital center of the party of the right.

MAILBAG Beating a dead horse

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that passive smoking causes 50,000 deaths a year to nonsmokers in the United States. The Centers for Disease Control estimates that 37,000 deaths a year from heart disease are caused by passive smoke. Passive smoke causes 10,000 lung cancers a year. The list of the harmful effects of the passive smoking goes on: pulmonary emphysema, chronic bronchitis, respiratory cancers, brain cancer, sinus cancer etc.

Yes, we do not see fellow students dropping dead daily, we only have to wait 20-30 years to see who might have lived longer. Millions, however, suffer now from irritating effects of smoke.

In a study of 250 nonsmokers, it was found that 69 percent developed eye irritation when exposed to passive smoke, 29 percent had nasal symptoms, 32 percent had headaches, and 25 percent developed a cough.

The effects to people who are allergic to smoke are much more drastic. I know, because I am allergic to smoke. This letter is an attempt to bring some facts into the discussion concerning the upcoming decision on the smoking ban on campus. Does banning smoking infringe in smokers rights? Yes it does, if you consider causing death and physical pain a right. I really do not care that smoking killed an estimated 43,000 smokers prematurely in 1990, or that smoking costs the United States economy an estimated $60 billion a year.

What I care about are the deadly effects of the passive smoking. Can we limit smoking to designated areas of offices? No, since the air is recirculated through the ventilation system to other areas. Studies have shown that environmental tobacco smoke (ETS) will be distributed throughout the building by ventilation system within a short time. Also the smoke particulate mass of ETS smoke decays very slowly, to 67 percent of the maximum value within three hours in an enclosed space, the decrease in particulate mass is accompanied by an increase of gas phase hydrocarbons. Why is passive smoking so dangerous? Four thousand chemical compounds have been identified in tobacco smoke, at least 50 of them are known carcinogens. The health risks due to tobacco smoke are not additive when other risk factors are involved, but rather multiplicative with other factors.

Although there is a multitude of studies (The Bibliography on Smoking and Health lists about 2,000 citations and abstracts each year) that confirm the deadly effects of passive smoking, many people still do not believe the harmful effects of passive smoke. The multi-billion dollar tobacco industry has been very successful in asserting that "controversy, debate, and uncertainty exist among scientists concerning smoking as an important cause of illness."

In an article, "What Scientists Believe About the Hazard of Cigarette Smoking," published by American Journal of Public Health (July 1991), the results of the questionnaire that was sent to 179 scientists, by the Council for Tobacco Research (CTR), shows that 94 percent of the respondents agreed with the statement "smoke from someone else's cigarette is harmful to a nonsmoker." Also 91 percent of the scientists agreed that most deaths from lung cancer are caused by smoking.

The results are remarkable considering that the scientists are funded by the CTR and the CTR was formed and is funded by cigarette manufacturers. The tobacco industry's conclusion: the scientific community is divided on the question of the effect of smoking. Texas Tech will not be the first school to adopt a no-smoking policy, it is already long overdue. The American College Health Association in May 1988 adopted a No Smoking policy and encourages colleges and universities to be diligent in their efforts to achieve a campus wide tobacco/smoke-free environment. Many schools in the United States already have adopted a smoke-free campus.

Juha Kilpinen Clear the air

Boy! I hate mailbag wars, but this time I have to throw in my two cents!

These letters of the past few days have told of the potential distress to the poor smoker who may have to risk his health in the harsh cold outside in order to breathe carcinogenic materials into his lungs, if this proposition of smoke-free buildings is accepted. And he doesn't understand why the evil "Health Nazis" don't like to breathe in this material...

I guess their option is not to breathe in at all.

Smokers claim they have a need to smoke, even a right, to do so.

It is, after all, your own body and you may damage it any way you see fit to do so.

However, the right to control your personal habits should and does end when your actions harm the innocent bystanders around you.

So there.

Texas denied request to preclear redistricting map

by MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The state of Texas Tuesday lost another round in its legal battle to gain approval for a state Senate redistricting plan that has not found favor with the Justice Department.

A three-judge federal panel in Washington unanimously denied the state's request to preclear the plan approved last month by the Legislature.

It marked the latest in a series of setbacks for the state, which has been twice denied by the U.S. Supreme Court in recent days.

The high court earlier refused to postpone the Senate primary, scheduled for March 10, and on Monday refused to speed up its review of the state's challenge.

State officials had not seen the ruling Tuesday afternoon and had no immediate comment.

Assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks had appeared before the three-judge panel on Friday, asking them to preclear the plan or force the Justice Department to decide whether the map meets federal guidelines.

The Justice Department and the judicial panel in Washington are the only entities that can preclear redistricting maps under the Voting Rights Act, which protects the rights of minorities.

Justice officials last November approved an earlier incarnation of the state Senate plan — which is identical to the map passed in special session by lawmakers.

But the federal agency later changed course and threw its support behind a rival state Senate map drawn by a three-judge federal panel in Austin.

The legislative plan was resubmitted to the Justice Department on March 9, and the state has urged federal officials to act quickly on the matter.

But Justice officials, who have until March 9 to rule, have said they are in no hurry to do so. That deadline falls the day before the Texas primaries.

The attorney general's office and Texas Democrats are fighting the court-ordered plan on the grounds it was tainted by partisan politics and discriminates against minorities.

Some elections experts say the court-drawn map gives the GOP a chance to win as many as 15 of the 31 Senate seats, their largest number this century. Republicans currently hold only nine.

Democrats and minority groups claim the court plan violates the Voting Rights Act by reducing the number of districts where a minority could get elected.

Attorney General Dan Morales has a motion pending before the Supreme Court to vacate the court plan and remove one of the Austin judges from the case.

In addition to the legal filings in Washington, Texas has challenges pending in the Texas Supreme Court and Austin federal court.

The Texas Democratic Party is pursuing its own efforts to overturn the court plan.

Democrats and state officials contend the court-ordered map was tainted by allegedly partisan conduct by U.S. Judge James Nowlin.

Engineering prof to design motor controller

by DAWN TRAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

National Semi-Conductors of Dallas awarded Michael Giesselmann, an assistant professor of electrical engineering, $75,000 for his proposal to build a motor controller.

Giesselmann proposed to design a computer-controlled motor that will run at a wide range of speeds instead of just one.

"This is important work and there is a big market for it in the growing world of technology," Giesselmann said.

Deepak Divan, of the University of Wisconsin, and Jack Lawler, of the University of Tennessee, said statistics show the market for adjustable speed drives are projected to grow from $12.6 billion in 1987, to $15.3 billion by 1992.

Giesselmann said his objectives are to design a motor that is more compact and easy to build.

"I want the motor to be contained in a smaller package but able to control the speeds of motors in bigger things," Giesselmann said.

He said the completed motor controller will have a positive impact on energy consumption.

Cliff Eldrid, a Tech electrical engineering graduate, is working with Giesselmann on the project.

"I saw it as an excellent opportunity to gain experience for real-life application that can be used in the industry," Eldrid said.

Eldrid was offered a job after graduating in December, but turned it down to work on the project and to pursue his master's degree.

"The industry will always be there, but once you leave school it's really hard to go back," Eldrid said.

Eldrid plans to finish the project to design and build the motor controller with Giesselmann, write his thesis on the project, and have his master's by the spring of 1993.

Unemployment rates continuing to rise in Texas

AUSTIN (AP)—Texas unemployment jumped to 8.3 percent in January, up from 6.7 percent in December to its highest rate in nearly four years, the Texas Employment Commission reports.

"There were 721,800 unemployed Texans this past month, and that along with other economic data indicates a definite slowing of economic growth in Texas," Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers said Tuesday.

Texas has not had an 8.3 percent jobless rate since March 1988, Ms. Nabers said.

The average jobless rate in 1990 was 6.2 percent, and it rose to 6.6 percent in 1991.

Between 1990 and 1991, Texas employers generated about 68,000 non-farm salaried jobs, compared with 260,000 created in 1990, Ms. Nabers said.

Manufacturing lost 10,000 jobs over the year, she said, and more than 5,000 were lost in finance, insurance and real estate.

TEC analysts said the jobless increase was due in part to seasonal cutbacks in retail trade.

Second case of mumps reported on campus

Dr. Cheryl Tyler, director of student health services at Texas Tech, said a second case of mumps has been reported on campus.

The student currently lives in Chitwood Hall, and Tyler said students living in the Chitwood and Weymouth Halls should receive their second measles/mumps/rubella shot if they have not done so.

MMR shots will be given at Thompson Hall between the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for $4.

Continuing ed director appointed to chair

Michael Mezack, director of Texas Tech's Division of Continuing Education and associate professor of education, was appointed by Robert W. Comfort to chair the 1992-93 Survey Research Advisory Committee of the National University Continuing Education Association in Washington, D.C.

Clinical depression labeled serious illness

by JULIE COLLINS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Depression is a bio-chemical deficiency...

— Jean Strahlendorf

Most individuals suffer from depression at some point in time, and medical research has shown that clinical depression is a serious medical illness that affects millions of Americans.

Jean Strahlendorf, a physiologist at Texas Tech's physiology department, said that despite some misconceptions surrounding depression, medical evidence indicates that depression is an organic medical disease, and not a disease that individuals can alleviate on their own.

"Depression is a bio-chemical deficiency that decreases various biogenic amines including serotonin and norepinephrine," Strahlendorf said.

Low levels of serotonin can cause depression, loss of appetite and sleep, and produces a docile behavior in individuals, she said.

High levels of serotonin can cause an individual to become aggressive and anxious.

"Symptoms of depression range from sleeping all the time to not sleeping enough, to sexual problems," Strahlendorf said.

From a bio-chemical standpoint, she said depression caused bi-polar emotions ranging from happiness to sadness in short periods of time. Therefore, a balance must be maintained between these levels for depression to be controlled.

Various tri-cyclic anti-depressant drugs can be prescribed, including Prozac, a drug that controls emotional swings.

Strahlendorf said Prozac contains some serious side-effects, such as aggression, but is still widely used in the prevention of depression.

Tech students seeking counseling for depression have a number of avenues they can explore including the psychology clinic located on campus.

Jim Clopton, an associate professor of psychology, trains counselors at the clinic on various signs and symptoms of depression. Clinical counselors consist mainly of graduate students studying psychology.

Clopton said the biggest danger signal counselors need to be aware of are signs of suicidal tendencies in individuals who come to the clinic.

"Some people come into the clinic and admit that they are depressed, while other people come in and won't admit they're depressed. Our counselors are trained to watch for depression signs including loss of sleep and fatigue," Clopton said.

He said depression can be controlled, and that individual sufferers of the disease have many opportunities to beat depression.

New J&B location doubles as musical venue

by KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The husband-and-wife team of Kathleen Jones and Dean Morris want customers to feel as though they have stepped into a store that might be found in some cosmopolitan, romantic city when they walk into their J&B Coffee Co.

Ten years ago, Jones opened the first gourmet coffee store in Lubbock, and in August she and Morris opened a second store on 82nd and Quaker in the Kingsgate Shopping Center.

Both stores feature 125 varieties of coffee and 75 different teas. The original store is a combination coffee store and card shop where customers can purchase coffee in beans or already ground and gift-related items.

"It's probably the closest card store to Tech," Morris said.

The Kingsgate store, which is featured in the March issue of Texas Monthly, has an atmosphere all its own.

Not only is it the largest retail coffee store in West Texas, it is the only coffee shop in Lubbock to sponsor live entertainment every weekend.

"We're far beyond reach in coffee stores in West Texas," Morris said. "We're real proud of it."

Most of the coffees sold at J&B are served at the store's coffee bar which also offers hot and iced tea, Italian drinks and pastries.

In addition to gourmet items, the store serves regular and caffeine-free coffee daily.

Morris said the store's in-house special, the J&B Cappuccino, is one of the bar's best sellers, and the store was recently awarded "The Best Cup of Coffee in West Texas" by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal and Z102.

The store carries a variety of candies and gift items in addition to its large selection of coffees.

Adjacent to the store is a lounge and bar that seat approximately 60 people, and is available for patrons of the coffee bar.

During the weekends the lounge serves as center stage for entertainers.

On Friday nights, the store hosts an open mike where local musicians can perform.

On Saturday evenings, Morris schedules performers to play for an entire evening. He said he chooses performers from open mike or artists who have previously recorded work.

Morris said there is no cover charge either night.

"We feel that Lubbock has a lot of talent to offer, and why should we charge people to see it," Morris said.

In addition, he said the atmosphere is unique because it is a smoke and alcohol-free environment which, he said, is a better environment for entertainers.

Morris said performers who have participated at J&B's open mike previously said they feel like the audience is paying more attention to them and that their music is more appreciated.

Participants are not paid, but they do accept tips, and Morris said many of them play for exposure and experience.

"This guy told me 'Dean, this is the hottest place in Lubbock to play right now,'" Morris said.

Morris said the store's clientele ranges from high school age customers to older, retired age groups.

"This is such a mixed atmosphere," Morris said. "Everybody can get together and have a good time."

"We'd like a lot of Tech students to come out," he added.

Jones and Morris are responsible for the design and decor of the store, and Morris said they, with the help of friends, did the artwork on the walls of the store and the lounge.

He also said that the employees contribute a great deal of artistic talent to the store.

"They work with us, not for us," Morris said.

He said 90 percent of the employees at both stores are Tech students.

Adjacent to J&B is The Book Gallery which stays open on weekends for open mike and Saturday performances.

"We don't limit ourselves," Morris said.

J&B is open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and until 11 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

Art department's jewelry show opens

by HEATHER PARKER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Advanced Metals Exhibition opens today in the art building's main gallery.

This annual jewelry show will be on display through March 4.

"The exhibition is an exceptional example of student's work over the course of the year," said Rob Glover, head of the art department's jewelry and metalsmithing.

The jewelry on display comes from students in both the beginning and advanced metalsmithing classes.

This the fourth year for the show. In last year's show, Matthew Morrow had a silver pitcher on display.

His work went on to win the 1991 student Sterling Design Competition.

Morrow received $750 as prize money. His pitcher was on display at Tiffany's in New York and at the Lever House. He was also featured in the art magazine, Metalsmith.

Glover believes that the art show is an excellent initiative for young metalsmith artists.

"I feel that the jewelry and metalsmith field will be one of the most exciting areas of art in the next ten years," Glover said. "It is my goal to help produce some of the important artists in this field."

The exhibition can be viewed from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the art gallery.

It is closed on Saturdays and Sundays. However, Glover said that accommodations could be made if a group wants to view the show on one of those days.

UC display features Mexican artist

by CHRIS WELDON
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

A special exhibit from a visiting Mexican artist is currently on display in the University Center's Faculty Club.

"Painters fall in love with their muses after they start painting. I was in love with my muse before I started," said Filberto Cano, an artist from Parral, Chihuahua, Mexico.

Cano, who chose Tech for his first exhibit in the U.S., says he feels this will be "impetus to the growth of his paintings."

By trade a mechanic, Cano has a varied style and uses a variety of media. He classifies his style as being predominantly Realism but with a definite Mexican influence. He works in oils, India ink, acrylic and water paintings. His favorite theme is still life and Michelangelo is a major influence.

Cano's work goes from breathtaking to almost childlike. It is easy to see the work and emotion he puts into every painting. He uses bold colors to make his paintings almost come alive.

The exhibits' best work is done in pointillism, which is an art form in which the artist uses a pattern of dots to create a picture. Only five or six works are done in this style, but they are, by far, the best.

Cano's works stand best when viewed for pleasure and not with a critical eye. He says he created them for his pleasure and to express himself. They are meant to be viewed for this same reason.

The exhibit will be displayed in the University Center's Faculty Club until March 14.

Melodic sounds of Slowdive debut perfect for a rainy day

by LARA CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Imagine waking up on a cold, wet, rainy day. Then imagine the perfect music playing in the background while you decide going to class is not that important, and stay in your warm bed the rest of the day.

The music you have chosen is Slowdive, and the album is their debut "Just For A Day."

Having experienced success in Britain with a self-titled EP, Slowdive's move to the United States is bold. This soundtrack is unique. Without a doubt this album offers something unusual to the listener and will allow the thousands trapped in the pop music wasteland a chance to expand their horizons.

Nine songs appear on this debut soundtrack, all of which are filled with soft sounds from the guitar, and slow, easy vocals.

"Spanish Air," the album's longest song at six minutes, is its best. It begins with a smooth mix of guitars and drums and moves into vocals that are graceful and natural.

While each of the songs is relaxing, the songs tend to run together. At times one may have to check the CD player to see what song is playing.

"Celia's Dream," "Catch the Breeze," and "Ballad of Sister Sue" sound so much alike they could be the same song.

One of the most impressive aspects of this album is Slowdive's ability to allow the listener to escape, simply by closing his or her eyes. This music is mellow and refreshing, much like that of Enya.

Slowdive's seemingly effortless, unconstrained sound is without a doubt worth looking into.

Tech falls short in overtime game

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A tough loss is hard to swallow, especially on the home court.

The Texas Tech men's basketball team got a taste of overtime basketball, as the Red Raiders dropped a close game to the Houston Cougars, 83-80, Tuesday night at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum in front of 5,102 Tech faithful.

With 11 seconds left in the overtime period, Lance Hughes made a layup cutting the Cougars lead to two at 82-80. The Red Raiders then called time out.

A foul by senior point guard Bryant Moore with eight seconds left, sent his counterpart point guard Derrick Daniels to the charity stripe.

Daniels iced the victory by sinking one free throw making the final score 83-80. A last desperation shot by Tech was not good, as the Raiders' record fell to 13-11 overall and 5-7 in the Southwest Conference. Houston upped their record to 19-5 and 8-3 in the SWC.

"This is a disappointing loss and they (Houston) did what they had to do," coach James Dickey said after the game. "They made the plays down the stretch. This is just a tough loss because our guys played their hearts out."

With 34 seconds remaining in regulation, Cougar senior forward Sam Mack hit a three pointer that tied the score at 73-73 sending the game into overtime. The Raiders went down the court looking for the last shot, but Moore's shot at the buzzer fell short.

"This is the toughest game we have lost all year," senior center Will Flemons said after the game. "Mack took over and we made some critical mistakes at the end. We just could not get over the hump."

Flemons finished with his 15th double-double as he scored 13 points and pulled down 12 rebounds.

The Raiders had a seemingly comfortable lead of 69-59 at 5:17 after junior forward Damon Ashley made an 18-foot jumper. The Cougars then embarked on a 13-4 run started by center Charles Outlaw at 5:09 cutting the Raiders' lead to 69-61.

An unusual foul on a three-point shot committed by Hughes sent Mack to the free throw line. Mack made all three shots making the score 73-70 with 52 seconds left in the contest.

Mack finished the game with 30 points, as he made 12 of 13 shots from

Not in time

Texas Tech junior center Will Flemons goes up for a layup in the Red Raiders' 83-80 overtime loss to the Houston Cougars last night. With the loss Tech's record falls to 13-11 overall and 5-7 in the Southwest Conference, while the Cougars upped their record to 19-5 and 8-3 in the SWC.

the charity stripe and 8 of 10 from the field.

Hughes finished with a team-high 26 points, as he was perfect from the free throw line at 7 of 7.

"We basically gave them the game and they hit a couple of shots that were crucial," Hughes said after the game.

Sophomore forward Brad Dale hit two free throws with five seconds left until the intermission, giving the Raiders the lead going into the locker room at 37-25, capping off a 14-9 run at the end of the first half.

Mack sparks Cougars' come from behind win

by JOSEPH HAYES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech men's basketball team's hopes for a third straight Southwest Conference win were washed away by two three-point plays from Houston senior forward Sam Mack.

Although the Red Raiders led for most of the contest by as many as 12 points, it was Mack who led the Cougars to their eighth straight win.

The final shot, which was made with 34 seconds left to play, helped to tie the game at 73-73.

Mack, who is currently the sixth highest scorer in the SWC, said he knew he would have to make the shots to send the game into overtime.

"It was terrific. We needed someone to step up and make the shots, so I did it," Mack said. "They just kicked it out to me, and I knew it was good as soon as it left my hand."

Cougar coach Pat Foster said he was not surprised that Mack came through for the team with the game on the line.

"He's capable of doing that," Foster said. "He can shoot from the outside as well as take it to you on the inside."

"Coach Foster told me that after we threw it in, to get open and take the shots," Mack said. "It was really a team effort. I just made the baskets."

Prior to making the three-pointer to end regulation, Mack also sank three free throws after a questionable foul by freshman guard Lance Hughes, with 52 seconds left.

"He was going up for the three-point shot. There was no question about it," Foster said.

Mack continued to lead the Cougars in overtime, as he added another seven points, three of which were from the free throw line, to his game-high total of 30. With Houston's record now at 8-3 in SWC play and 19-5 overall, Mack said Tuesday night's win should help the team with the conference tournament approaching.

"We needed this win because it was on the road. Now we get to go home and prepare for our next game," Mack said.

Tuesday night's win, which left the Red Raiders at 5-7 in SWC play and 13-11 overall, was the Cougars second close come from behind win in the last 28 days.

"The game is never over until it's over," Mack said. "We proved it against A&M, and we did it again tonight."

Wilson comfortable with role as leader

by MIKE HEWLETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

She was the 1991 Southwest Conference Newcomer of the year; she's been Tech's leading rebounder nine times this season and high point player twice, most recently Saturday in the Rice game.

She's recorded at least one block in each of her last 14 games and currently leads the SWC in the blocks-per-game category with 1.4.

There can only be one player on the Texas Tech women's basketball team that can claim these achievements as her own, that's right, it's senior forward Tami Wilson.

"Last year I wasn't expecting to win the Newcomer of the Year, going out and playing together as a team was more important than the individual awards," Wilson said. "I know everybody likes to receive them but if you just get to be on a winning team knowing you can contribute is recognition enough."

Wilson is highly noted as a shot-blocker and rebounder, while modestly attributing her success to her ability to "get up."

"I guess I can get up pretty good and I have pretty long arms for my height so that could be some reasons," Wilson said. "A lot of times if a player is tall they might also be a little heavy so I can get there quicker than they can."

The fact she is a senior and on the verge of her 24th birthday, Wilson said she is comfortable with the leadership role her experience and talent have forced upon her.

"I just try to set a good example and let the younger players see me working hard in practice," Wilson said. "We (the seniors) aren't going to be here after this year so somebody has to step into that leader's spot and that's why we are trying to give them a good example by our actions and practice

Wilson traces her love of basketball back to an elementary school little dribblers team, on which she played with her two older sisters.

"Coming from a sports minded family I couldn't help but get involved or I would've gotten left behind," Wilson said. "When I was a sophomore in high school my older sisters and I started on varsity together. They helped to keep me motivated and I came back after graduation and played for Western Texas College before transferring to Tech in 1990."

Wilson said she sees the Raider women doing well in postseason play because they have significant momentum going into their final three games.

"We've got a good chance to make it to at least regionals or maybe even farther. We've found our chemistry now and I don't see many teams that can stop us," Wilson said. "I'm not saying that we are unbeatable. I'm just saying that it's going to take a real good team to beat us."

Rec Sports Briefs

SOFTBALL FREE AGENTS MEETING SET

Individual wishing to play intramural softball but without a team on which to play are encouraged to attend the Free Agents Meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 26 at 6 p.m. in SRC 205. At that meeting Rec Sports personnel will attempt to form teams of interested individuals or locate teams seeking additional players. Team captains needing an extra players or two are encouraged to attend the meeting since players will be available at that time.

INJURY CLINIC RESUMES TONIGHT

Wednesday's Free Injury Clinic hosted by Dr. Robert Yost and the Orthopedic residents from the Health Science Center resumes tonight at 7 p.m. in room 205 of the Student Recreation Center. The weekly clinic allows students with athletic type injuries to have a free examination and receive advice on treatment, care and possible referral. The clinic will continue each Wednesday evening.

For further information, call the Rec Sports office at 742-3351 or drop in at tonight's clinic.

GET SET TO ROW

Those who workout on the LifeRowers might note that there will be a rowing competition on Sunday, March 1 beginning at 12:30 p.m. The rules are simple — each rower will row for 15 minutes. The top 4 in each division (men and women) will advance to the finals to compete head-to-head. Rowers will be set at 38 strokes/minutes for men and 30 strokes/minute for women. Free — no entry fee. Deadline to enter is Friday, Feb. 28 in the Fitness/Wellness Center. Come and have some fun.

RACQUETBALL CLASS TO BEGIN

Register now for the Beginning Racquetball class which will be held on Mondays/Wednesdays from 5-6 p.m., March 1-26. There is no charge for the class; register in the Fitness/Wellness Center or by calling 742-3828. Learn a new sport — or get better at the one you like.

TABLE TENNIS DOUBLE CHAMPS CROWNED

Seven double teams vied for the two division titles last Thursday night at the Rec Center for the Table Tennis Doubles championships. Perennial champ, Edison Dy teamed up with Ahmad Mian to breeze to the Men's A crown. Dy and Mian swept undefeated to a 3-0. Mohammad Gaffar and A.K.M. Jubaiyed went on to eliminate the remaining competition to post a 2-1 record to claim the runners-up honors in Men's A. Chris Fickes and Jeff Reiling likewise posted an unblemished 3-0 mark to become the Men's titlist. David Mills and Jeff Bearhart claimed runners-up honors in the Men's B division.

LEARN HOW TO JUMP START A LIFE

The perfect gift for someone you love — save their life. 75 percent of all medical emergencies occur outside the hospital environment. Most likely, it will be someone you know! The American Red Cross South Plains Chapter and the Recreational Sports Department is sponsoring "MASS CPR DAY". The event is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 29. The program will be conducted at the Student Rec Center and will begin at 8:30 a.m. Pre-registration is required. However, a limited number of walk-ins will be accepted. The course will teach you choking and CPR skills for adult, child and infant victims. Written and reading materials will be provided. The cost of the program is $20. For further information, please call the American Red Cross at 765-8534.

SOFTBALL ENTRIES DUE

Teams are registering, as you read, for spring softball leagues. Entries are due tomorrow by 5 p.m. in Room 203 of the Student Recreation Center. The earlier you register the better chance of securing the most favorable playing time for your team. To enter a team, bring a list of your players' names, addresses, and phone numbers to SRC 203 and a refundable $25 forfeit fee. If you would love to play, but have no team, then plan on attending the Free Agents Meeting at 6 p.m. tonight in SRC Room 205 and bring a buddy. There will be a rules clarification meeting Tuesday, March 3 at 5:15 p.m. in the SRC classroom #201. All teams are urged to have a representative present.

Do not forget to sign up your team for the Saddle Tramp Softball Tournament being held this weekend, Feb. 28, 29 and March 1. This is the perfect opportunity to give your team an edge for the intramural season which begins March 8. This tournament is designed as a pre-season practice for teams as well as umpires. The entry fee is $50 per team including game balls and teams are guaranteed two games. Team trophies will be awarded to first and second place teams. Entries are due today by 5 p.m. in the Saddle Tramp Office in the UC. For more information call the Saddle Tramp Office at 742-1896.
