Bailey County 4-H Working On Center

A State 4-H Center for Texas! This proposed project is moving from the drawing board around muleshoe with the journal staff

Searching operations continue this week for the body of Larry Bynum of Muleshoe who is feared drowned in Bull Lake. Bynum disappeared Tuesday afternoon after the seaplane he was in overturned on the lake. Both Bynum and Morgan Locker, also in the plane, attempted to swim to shore. Morgan made it to shore, but Bynum is still missing.

Cleta Williams, former Journal employee, now news editor of the Friona Star, has to reality, but in order for this to happen all interested and concerned citizens of Bailey County have an opportunity to assist. This word comes from County Extension Agent, Spencer Tanksley.

"Put It All Together with a 4-H Center" is the theme selected for the State 4-H Center campaign.

To construct the facility, a total of $1.5 million is needed. Local 4-H leaders, members and friends of 4-H are now working to raise funds for the Center. Thus far, 4-H members have earned $134,000 from chocolate sales, and business and industry groups have pledged another $200,000 for the project. The Bailey County Leaders Association and 4-H members have set the County goal for this campaign at $3,750,000 dollars which is their share of the $75,000,000 that will be raised by the 20 counties in Extension District 2. The center will be constructed on a 78 acre site at Lake Brownwood. This facility will offer many new opportunities and dimension for 4-H Programs and activities. One of the main purposes of the center will be to train adults and youth for leadership roles. One project being initiated to help raise the local funds is that the Bailey County 4-H Clubs are asking producers of corn and grain sorghums to donate 1000 pounds of one of these commodities to this good cause. A greater or lesser amount would be accepted and greatly appreciated.

Any interested person, group, or business who would like to make a donation, for this project may do so by contacting W.C. Eubanks, Maple, Texas, Chairman of the drive or sending it to the Bailey County 4-H Council Fund in care of the local extension office.

SPD Will Sponsor Agricultural Meeting

An excellent crop can turn into trailer loads of headaches if producers do not plan well enough for cotton harvesting and handling, says Spencer Tanksley, county Extension agent.

Growers might be able to save themselves hundreds or even thousands of dollars by taking advantage of information to be offered at a meeting for producers and area citizens at the Agricultural Building in Earth, Texas on October 8, 1973 at 1:30 p.m.

Designed to update producers on facts about harvest-aid chemicals, cotton harvesting and field storage, the meeting is being held sponsored by the South Plains Development Program and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Specialists with the Extension Service based at Lubbock will present facts on the use of harvest-aid chemicals, equipment systems for harvesting and field storage systems, with specific information on labor, time and cost comparisons.

They are Roy Childers, area agricultural engineer - cotton mechanization, and Robert B. Metzger, area agronomist-cotton.

SPD is a volunteer organization composed of citizens interested in the economic and social growth of the South Plains.

Mules Lose Game To Littlefield 53-13

The Muleshoe Mules went up against a stiff opponent Friday night and were defeated 53-13 by Littlefield.

In the first quarter Muleshoe received the kick off but had to punt. Littlefield drove to around the 18 yard line and their quarterback Terry Bryson went around left end for an 18 yard touchdown. The PAT attempt was no good making the score 6-0.

Muleshoe got the ball and took it to Littlefield's one yard line. The play was set up by a pass play from Don Long to Perry Stockard for 25 yards. Long took the ball in from the one yard line for the touchdown. The PAT was good so the Mules led 7-6.

Littlefield then received the kick off and drove to the Mules 27 yard line where Bryson again swept left end for a 27 yard touchdown. The PAT was no good making the score 12-7.

The Mules were forced to punt and a run by fullback Kenny Owens took the ball to the Muleshoe 47 yard line. Bryson swept left again for a 47 yard touchdown. The PAT was no good. The first quarter score was Littlefield 18, Muleshoe 7.

In the second quarter, Littlefield's No. 20 Pat Henderson on a fourth down and 15 from the Mules' 25, ran the ball in for a score on a reverse play. The PAT was good.

At the end of the quarter Littlefield ran a 75 yard touchdown. The try for two points failed making the score 32-7 at the end of the half.

In the third quarter Muleshoe took the kick off and took it in for a touchdown. The TD was set up by a 27 yard pass play from Long to Terry Stewart. Ronnie Parker took the ball in from the two yard line for the touchdown. The Mules tried for two, but failed in their attempt.

Littlefield got the ball and had runs of 21, 17 and five yards that set up a TD when Bryson ran it in from the 11 yard line. The PAT was good making the score 39-13.

In the final quarter Littlefield's Henderson received the ball on their 35 yard line and ran it all the way back for a 65 yard touchdown. The PAT was good making the score 46-13.

BollWeevil Control Program Successful

Starkville, Miss.--A three-state experiment to eradicate the boll weevil shows that the billion-dollar insect can be stamped out as an economic cotton pest in the United States. Eradication would lower by 30 per cent the total insecticide load placed into the environment by all American farmers. The two-year long experiment, conducted on some 18,000 acres of cotton in southern Mississippi and adjacent areas of Louisiana and Alabama, was cooperatively sponsored by cotton growers through their company, Cotton Incorporated, and agencies of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the three participating states. The technical guidance committee for the experiment met at Mississippi State University huge entomological complex here to hear summary reports following the conclusion of the test in August. Final monitorings of native weevil populations in the eradication test area revealed no infestations in the core zone in buffer zones extending outward in concentric circles, where suppression measures were employed to protect the core zone, weevil counts were negligible. The committee issued a statement declaring elimination of the weevil as an economic factor in cotton production is technically and operationally feasible, using techniques that are ecologically acceptable. Economic and environmental benefits of eliminating the boll weevil would far exceed any costs that might be incurred, the committee reported. Techniques used in the eradication experiment included the application of insecticides, pheromone traps, trap crops, the release of sterile male weevils, and cultural controls, such as restricted planting dates, early stalk destruction following harvest, and the use of cotton growth inhibitors. "All suppression techniques employed in the experiment were ecologically sound," said Dr. J. R. Brazzel of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, co-chairman of the technical guidance committee. The eradication experiment was deliberately placed in an area representative of the most severe boll weevil conditions likely to be encountered anywhere in the country. "We were confident that if elimination of the boll weevil could be demonstrated in that area, the pest could be eliminated anywhere else in the United States," said committee co-chairman Dr. E.F. Knipping of USDA's Agricultural Research Service. Brazzel and Knipping said the committee recommended that while plans for launching a national eradication campaign are being developed, research be intensified to improve the techniques used in the experiment and to make them more economical to use. The experiment also proved the value of weevil control techniques that cotton farmers may use immediately to reduce cotton losses, said Dr.

George A. Slater, associate director of agricultural research for Cotton Incorporated, the firm that placed $1 million of cotton grower dollar-a-bale funds in the experiment. "We urge cotton growers in boll weevil areas to make use now of such measures as reproduction - diapause controls and early stalk destruction, and next year of trap crops to further lower the number of overwintering weevils," Slater said. The boll weevil has plagued cotton growers in the United States for more than 75 years. Cotton losses run around $200 million a year, and control measures cost an additional $75 million. Control efforts directed to the boll weevil also account for almost one-third of all insecticides applied to crops in the United States. "In the long run, the environmental and ecological benefits of eliminating the billion-dollar pest could outweigh the economic benefits," said Brazzel and Knipping. A planning committee for beltwide eradication is already at work making preliminary determinations of the factors that would be involved in an all-out national campaign to eliminate the boll weevil. Scientists who conducted and evaluated the experiment cautioned that a successful beltwide eradication program must be carried out with thoroughness and precision. It would involve participation by a number of agencies and the complete cooperation of all cotton growers.

United States Senate COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

There are two very critical subjects under discussion in Washington today that are of extreme importance to every one of us. These subjects are food and oil, and the foreign policy implications that stem from the enormous worldwide growth in demand for both commodities. If the economics and politics of these two commodities are understood by American voters, the government will have better support to shape appropriate domestic and foreign policies to assure that American needs for the future are met.

First, let us look at the food situation. We are all aware of the substantial increases in food prices recently, and, obviously, no one likes to pay higher prices for anything -- particularly something as essential as food. But this is not such a simple matter that we can automatically condemn higher food prices as inherently bad, and insist on total government efforts to return food prices to previous familiar levels. If we were to take such a single-minded view, we could roll back prices to levels of two years ago, and then suffer the consequences of greatly decreased production and severe food shortages. Obviously, we must look at the context of food economics before coming to a conclusion about the proper course of any government action affecting food.

The economics of food can be described rather easily; farmers will produce more of commodities which are in relatively greater demand, and therefore carry a relatively more attractive price. If we as consumers want more beef, for instance, our increased demand for it raises the price of the existing supply, and encourages more production of cattle for the future. This, then, brings down the price to more reasonable levels. This is the way a market economy functions -- producing more of those goods which people tend to demand more of, upon appropriate signals from the price structure.

Because of the political aspects of rising prices, we face the danger of shaping our food policies according to the clamor for lower prices, rather than the economic principles of supply and demand. In addition to the public sentiment for controlled prices, some are demanding tight controls of agricultural exports to keep the supplies at home, I fear this, too, is a pipe dream, like a rollback of food prices would be. Instead of improving our long-term interests in adequate supplies at reasonable prices, extensive use of export controls would in fact depress domestic farm prices and discourage more production to meet growing needs both at home and abroad.

This is the point where the politics of food become entwined with foreign policy, and with the problem of assuring enough oil for our own future. Strong export controls on our farm commodities would injure both our trading and diplomatic relations with other countries.

Such actions thus would greatly reduce our ability to pay for the oil we will need to import for decades to come. The United States is the most productive farm country in the history of the world. We can out-produce and out-sell virtually any other country in any crop or farm product that we produce, in spite of high world transport costs. But our farmers for years have been cut off from much of the potential foreign demand for our products by restrictive barriers abroad. Now, many countries acknowledge that this protectionism is bad for themselves, and are turning to us more and more for supplies. Although this sudden world market may mean a degree of higher food prices for the American consumer, it means a great deal more than this. It means virtual elimination of an annual $4 billion tax subsidy for farmers... it means increased tax revenues... and it means finally that we can pay for the oil we must import for the future.

Higher food prices are not the most welcome thing in the world for the consumer, but neither are all of the economic and social ills that have troubled our nation for decades -- persistent poverty, crime, drug abuse and pollution. Foreign spending for U.S. farm products can help alleviate many of these ills so to conclude, I would urge Texans to look skeptically at calls for price and export controls on food. While no one likes to pay higher prices for anything, that does not mean that a structural shift in price levels for farm products is not, on balance, a beneficial development for our country. We are the potential food supplier to the world. Higher price levels for farm products will boost American incomes in both rural and urban areas and will help assure us of future oil supplies, while at the same time the increased reliance on the U.S. for food by other countries will greatly strengthen our foreign policy powers.

Expressing a firm belief in the value of forward contracting as a cotton marketing tool "despite its shortcomings," Donald Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, told a beltwide meeting of industry representatives in Dallas September 10 that "no avenue to improving the utility of forward contracting should be neglected."

The subject of advanced cotton sales came in for full discussion by mills, shippers and producers at a day-long meeting of the Producer Steering Committee of the National Cotton Council.

Expressing doubt that forward contracting alone or in conjunction with the upcoming government cotton program can provide the stable supplies and prices needed in the industry, Johnson said it nevertheless could be a useful marketing device in reaching that goal. He said the utility of forward contracting "can be greatly enhanced" by a way or ways to assure both producers and buyers that contract provisions will be met regardless of price action after contracts are signed.

Johnson also made the point that the producer's problem with contract performance on the part of the buyer is significantly more complicated than the problem faced by merchants.

He explained that buyers now from the beginning that a producer has the ability to meet the terms of a contract. "The producer is responsible only for delivery of his individual crop. And if he doesn't have the equipment and other visible assets that are placed in jeopardy. "On the other hand," Johnson continued, "a merchant may contract for thousands of bales of cotton from any number of producers, and he may or may not have the financial ability to perform if the price goes against him and he may or may not have his commitments to producers backed up by corresponding commitments from consuming establishments. And if the buyer simply doesn't have and can't get the financing to meet his obligations, the producer in effect has no recourse."

With this explanation Johnson concluded that "The merchant's and the mill's problem with performance can be solved, largely, with more iron-clad contracts. But the producers' problem is much more complicated, and is the principal problem to which this group should address itself."

WASHINGTON REPORT BY Lloyd Bentsen,
United States Senator

SENATE APPROVES PENSION REFORM
After seven years of doubt, disagreement and uncertainty, the Senate has now approved landmark legislation to reform our nation's private retirement system.

There has been general agreement on the need for pension reform for several years, but time after time the search for a solution bogged down in disagreement over what approach to take.

For example, I have strongly opposed suggestions of some that the federal Government take over the private pension system. The need to eliminate abuses and inequities is obvious. But, to wipe out a system that is performing as intended for the overwhelming majority of pension plan participants and replace it with an untested government program would be like burning down the barn to kill a few rats.

Generally, America's private retirement system has performed very well for the millions of retired persons who now receive their pension plan benefits as promised.
Unfortunately, though, there are thousands of other workers who have not received the retirement benefits that they have earned. Last year alone, more than 15,000 workers lost more than $40 million in anticipated retirement incomes because their pension plans terminated with insufficient assets to meet all plan obligations. Safeguard earned benefits.

I have been concerned about this problem for some time, and early this year I introduced a bill that would both safeguard the earned pension rights of American working men and women, and encourage the millions of workers who do not now participate in the private retirement system to independently save for their retirement.
My bill was approved by the Senate Finance Committee and reported to the Senate Floor.

The Senate Labor Committee had approved a different version of pension reform and the prospects of a fight on the issue threatened to again delay passage of workable legislation.
The purpose of the resulting legislation is not to establish an ideal pension plan, but rather to set certain minimum standards to assure that all workers receive the pension benefits they have earned.
We were careful to avoid making the standards so tough that they will discourage the creation of new pension plans, but we made them tough enough to eliminate flagrant abuses and inequities.

REASONABLE MINIMUM STANDARDS SET
One problem the legislation eliminates involves unreasonable vesting requirements which deny earned pension benefits to workers who change jobs after long periods of employment. Under this bill, an employee earns a nonforfeitable right to 25% of the money contributed to a pension plan on his behalf after five years of employment; 100% after 15 years.

This bill also sets minimum funding standards to insure that pension plans maintain enough assets to meet their obligation.
And, it provides termination insurance to protect employees in the event that their pension plan is terminated-- for whatever reason-- before it becomes fully funded.
Interest rates head down in credit markets.

This past week the Freshman Greenhands have been busy obtaining the signatures of upper classmen as a part of initiation. Greenhands are encouraged to get enough signatures to total one hundred. Every member counts one point, the officers five points, and ten points for the American Farmer. At the meeting Tuesday night, twenty-five Greenhands will be initiated into the chapter. Meanwhile the Greenhands are busy seeking signatures, each in hope of having the most points.

Mule's Backs Grab Honors This Week

This past week, two members of Muleshoe's offensive backfield were selected for weekly honors.

KGNC and the Amarillo Globe news chose Mules' Q.B. Don Long and T.B. David Wheat as their top weekly player's, respectively. Both played a top-notch defensive and offensive game but were probably chosen for their offensive explosiveness with Don Long running a Friona punt back 55 yards for a touchdown - one of the two he scored for the night-David Wheat carrying 13 times for 190 yards and two touchdowns!

The staff of the Mule's Tale extends their congratulations to these two fine representatives of M.H.S.

Choir News

This year the Mules have been blessed with a group of men who have some very fine qualities-not only talent but also leadership and a sense of responsibility. The Mules will rely on these qualities to carry them through District toward a district championship.

An example of this are the sophomores who have been moved up to varsity. Robert Shafer and Larry Richardson played very well against Friona, contributing to the Mule's success in that game. They realize their new responsibilities and are expected to play well under the pressure of district competition.

The Mules Coaches were pleased with the offensive and defensive play of Senior tackle Jerry Hodge. Jerry was instrumental in developing a winning attitude for the Victory against Friona.

Art Is In The Picture

Old photos never die, they just fade away . . . and become scratched or scrawled over. Yet old photos are just the "raw materials" of the art objects you can create for your home.

Grandparents in their formal Victorian poses, Aunt Sadie in her 1920s flapper dress and parasol, your parents enjoying a honeymoon idyll, you in your baby carriage - vintage treasures like these are the stuff that today's newest decorative art is made of.

First comes a trip to the restorer-and for this you can't do better than at your local photo studio whose operators work closely with experts like those at Pro Color, the professional center for photo restoration in Yonkers, N.Y. Not only do they do away with obvious defects and damage; they can also come up with all kinds of special tricks to make the most of the photos, eliminating ugly backgrounds, even isolating one person from a group photo to make a beautiful single portrait.

Next comes the fun of finding frames. Spend a Saturday rummaging through thrift shops and junk shops-or at a country auction. You're likely to find fabulous old carved frames going for a song. And now for the really creative part, combining pictures, frames and mats to make the final product, a group of impressive art objects.

To make the most of your pictures, mass them together in a single, dramatic composition on one wall. The result will be a decorative focal point.

Ecology?..... Man, I'll be glad when they're wiped out.

About 1400 A.D., graphite appeared in pencils and was given the name "black lead."

Experiment Shows Boll Weevil Eradication Possible In U.S.

INSECTICIDE BOLL WEEVIL—The tenth year of insecticide application in the successful High Plains Boll Weevil Control Program began "on a happy note" and the first aerial spraying went on "in fine style," according to Ed Dean, Field Service Director for the coordinator of the program, Lubbock based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

The "happy note" was supplied by the fact that it was only necessary to spray about 41,000 acres in the initial application whereas earlier indications had been that up to 100,000 acres might require treatment. Officials laid the reduction in expected weevil infestation to the hot, dry weather during the first three weeks of August.

"Weevil grubs and larvae in squares that fell from the cotton plant to the ground during this period simply died from heat and lack of moisture," Dean said, "and while that kind of weather wasn't good for the area crop as a whole, it certainly proved a boon to the boll weevil program."
Dean went on to say that officials were highly pleased with the performance of this year's aerial spray contractors and that "this first 41,000 acres was covered in fine style, beginning August 27, in a little over two days." The contract for spraying Unit I in this program, which lies North of Highway 82 along the eastern edge of the Plains, was let this year to Palmer Aero Services of Harrisburg, Arkansas, South of Highway 82, in Unit II, the contract is held by Slaton Flying Service of Slaton.

The 41,000 acres treated in the first aerial pass of this year's program are located primarily in Dickens and Motley Counties, with smaller acreages in Floyd, Briscoe, Crosby and Kent Counties.
The program, designed to prevent the spread of cotton's number one pest into the vast High Plains cotton acreages above the Caprock, was initiated by PCG in 1964 and weevils have been successfully knocked back off the Caprock each year since. The program is jointly financed by cotton producers in PCG's 25-county territory through a per-bale contribution each year, and by the Plant Protection Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, with some equipment and personnel being supplied by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Asked about the effect on the program of rainy weather which blew into the Plains on September 6, Dean said "we got such good and such timely coverage in the first application that, barring a drawn-out period of bad weather we shouldn't be hurt at all."
Non-toxic ultra low volume Malathion is the insecticide used in the control effort. Weevil populations are kept extremely low and thus confined to a relatively small area by breaking the weevil's reproductive cycle in the spring and then killing as many as possible of the remaining populations in the fall before they go into winter hibernation.

Two New Staff Divisions Announced By Farm Bureau

WACO -- (Sp) -- Major restructuring of Texas Farm Bureau staff with the creation of two new staff divisions has been announced by Warren Newberry, TFB Executive Director.

A Leadership and program Development Division will be headed by Wayne Little who for the past nine years has been director of the TFB field service department. This division will be responsible for developing and coordinating training activities for County Farm Bureau leaders, Newberry said, "County Farm Bureau officers, board members and committee members will be assisted in their work through leader development programs. Farm Bureau and Affiliated staff training will be developed and coordinated through this division," he explained. The purchasing and personnel departments and management of all equipment and facilities will operate in this division, he added.

Also announced was the formation of a Farm Bureau Field Activities Division. This division will include the field services department and the safety department, and will be responsible for the Farm Bureau Policy Development programs and staff leadership for the Young Farmers and Ranchers Programs. Heading the Field Activities Division will be James Burns, former Area Field Services Director with the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Replacing Little as director of the field services department will be Don Neumann who for the past four years has been assistant director of the department. He will head the 15-member field services staff which is responsible for the implementation of Farm Bureau programs in the counties.

In explaining the action, Newberry said the TFB and Affiliated Companies have experienced "dramatic growth" during recent years. "This growth, along with the directives of the delegates in the Expanded Program adopted in 1971 has made it necessary to better organize the staff of the 145,000-member family organization," he said. "Establishing these new divisions will make it possible to serve the needs of the membership more effectively."

Little joined the staff of the Texas Farm Bureau in 1949

as a field representative. He was promoted to organization director in 1964. The name of the department was later changed from "organization" to "field services."

A native of Anderson County, Little finished high school at Elkhart and is a graduate of Texas A&M University. He served with the 75th and 83rd Infantry Divisions in the states during World War II and spent 23 months overseas with the Chinese government.

Burns grew up on a 3,500-acre general farm in the Mississippi delta area of Arkansas near Memphis, Tennessee. He is a graduate of the University of Arkansas and was employed by the University as a research assistant on its Cotton Branch Experiment Station at Marianna, Arkansas for two years. He was then employed by the Arkansas Food Plant Company, a service affiliate of the Arkansas Farm Bureau.

After 18 months with the service affiliate, he became director of farm safety for the Arkansas Farm Bureau. Four years later, he was employed by the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation as director of field services for that organization. He held this position until his employment by the American Farm Bureau. Four years later, he was employed by the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation as director of field services for that organization. He held this position until his employment by the American Farm Bureau Federation as Midwest Area Services Director, serving the states of Missouri, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, and Kansas. Neumann is a native of Hon-do and is a graduate of Texas A&M University. He joined the vetfb staff in 1966 as a field representative for 18 South Central Texas Counties.

Neumann received his commission as an officer in the U.S. Air Force while attending Texas A&M. The major portion of his four years active duty was spent as a Deputy Missile Combat Crew Commander with the Atlas "F" ICMB in New York State.

After being graduated from college, he taught and coached in Medina Valley Independent School District. Prior to joining the Texas Farm Bureau staff, he assistant county agent in San Patricio County.

In addition to assisting Little, Neumann has had specific responsibilities as coordinator of Young Farmers and Ranchers and other youth activities and Constitution Revision activities for the state farm organization.

Constitutional Amendments

AUSTIN--The proposed Constitutional amendment at the top of this November's general election ballot very well may be the most controversial of the nine being offered.

Amendment 1 provides for annual sessions of the Legislature and a $15,000 annual salary for its members.

The proposal provides for a regular session of not more than 180 days in odd-numbered years, and a 60-day session in even-numbered years.

The shorter session would be authorized to deal only with fiscal matters and emergencies submitted by the governor, who could extend the short session by 30 days.

The salary for a legislator would be raised from $4,800 to $15,000 a year. During the sessions representatives and senators would receive an expense allowance of $18 a day, compared with $12 a day they get now.

I have joined Governor Dolph Briscoe, Attorney General John Hill, and Speaker of the House, Price Daniel, Jr. in supporting this amendment.

To me, one of the most important aspects of this amendment is that it requires annual budgeting of state tax money. Texas government is big business by any standard, apening $5 billion a year. In writing a two-year budget, state administrators are asked to estimate their needs three years in advance.

Sound business principles dictate that this guesswork is inefficient at best and often shamefully wasteful.

Taxpayers throughout the country are becoming more and more vocal in their demands for greater economy and efficiency in government. And well they should.

I believe adoption of Amendment 1 will aid this cause greatly.

Government in Texas is no longer the part-time business it was when our Constitution was written 97 years ago.

The present $4,800 salary severely taxes a legislator's dedication to public service. Moreover, it is totally unrealistic in today's economy.

The proposed $15,000 salary is barely adequate for the full time responsibilities placed on our legislators. But I believe it is sufficient to enable any citizen to consider serving in the Legislature.

Of necessity, legislators must have outside employment to provide for their families. No doubt many otherwise qualified and dedicated persons have not sought office because their jobs would not permit lengthy absences.

I believe Amendment 1 can do much to open up the processes of state government by attracting more candidates.

I feel sure the savings offered by annual budgeting will pay many times over for the additional expense of realistic salaries for legislators.

Take Bad With Good
Wife (heatedly)--You're crazy, you're worthless, you're bad tempered, you're shiftless, you're a thorough liar.
Husband (reasonably)--Well, my dear, no man is perfect.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm comes out flat-footedly, probably while sitting down, for a new election proposal this week.

Dear editor:

People are always talking about "inflation, about the high cost of things from groceries to tractor bolts to borrowing money, but I don't know of anything that inflation has hit harder than politics.

I guess you'd call it inflation, if you mean paying twice as much for the same product, with or without a warranty. Just because you're paying more doesn't mean you're getting a better tractor bolt or Congressman.

According to an article I read in a newspaper last night, 1,893 candidates running for U.S. House and Senate seats last year reported spending more than 77 million dollars in primary and general elections. How much was reported in a matter between the candidates and their conscience, something I wish my hands of.

Now less than a fourth of those 1,896 candidates got elected, but if they'd all got elected, it means they spent 77 million dollars for offices which would pay, at the current salary of $42,500 a year, about 80 million dollars. Talk about inflation!

Naturally those candidates, except in a very few rare instances, didn't spend their own money. It came from contributors, the vast majority of whom were big contributors, on the theory I guess that the more money a man has the more interested he is in good government.

Now some people dispute this, saying a lot of big contributors are just making investments with a satisfactory return on their money expected, and to offset this some people are proposing that all contributions to campaigns be banned, that elections be financed by a dollar a head tax on all citizens.

Under this system, no person would have more than 50 cents apiece invested in his two Senators and, depending on the size of his state, around 10 or 15 cents in his Congressman.

This is what I'd call whipping inflation.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

An investment in Your Future

ATTEND CHURCH

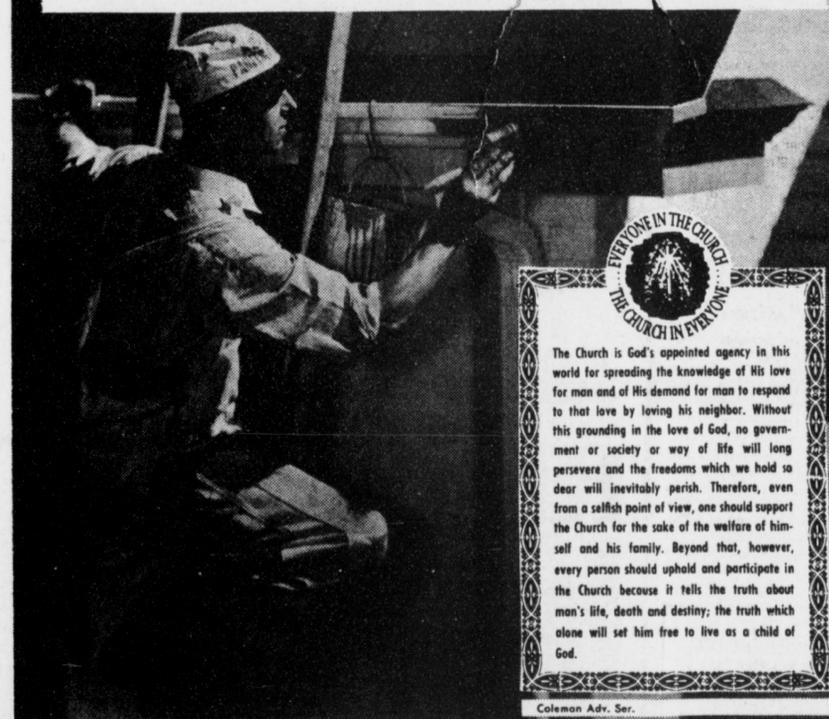

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

PAINT . . . Protects wood and metal

GOD'S WORD . . . Protects the soul

As paint protects wood and metal from decay, rust, and corrosion, so the promises found in God's word protect the soul from the evils of sin, anxiety and despair. Hear God's wonderful promises proclaimed from the pulpit in the church of your choice this Sunday. These promises so heard will accomplish wonderful things in your soul and heart, for God says of His Word, "It shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Isaiah 55:11

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN -- This morning's mail to the Attorney General's Office included a letter from a woman in one of our small Texas towns, who complained that her 81-year-old mother-in-law had been misled by an insurance company promotion which was designed to look like a Medicare mailout.

The printed material did state that the health insurance for which Social Security recipients can qualify (Medicare) does not cover all costs of all care and treatment procedures, and seemed to imply that the insurance company had a working agreement to pick up where Medicare leaves off.

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which administers the Medicare program for the federal government does not have a working arrangement with any private insurance company. And both federal and state laws prohibit the deceptive trade practice of misrepresenting that there is any governmental endorsement of a private business venture.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office took note of the complaint, then referred it to the State Board of Insurance for investigation or whatever action that agency might deem necessary.

The State Insurance Commissioner has the legal authority to call a hearing on any complaint of an insurance company activity if he determines that it may be a violation of the board's regulations on advertising practices.

In a little more than a year, these hearings on deceptive advertising practices have resulted in some 40 cease-and-desist orders having been issued by the commissioner.

Misleaders about Medicare have accounted for some of the hearings, since the state requires that insurance companies offering a form of coverage designed to supplement Medicare make it "clear and conspicuous" that that is all their insurance does. They must disclaim any affiliation with the federal government and Social Security.

To prevent other possible frauds upon the consumers, the advertising of any insurance plan must state the "negatives" in a given policy, as well as the benefits offered. For instance, if a policy precludes benefits for a preexisting illness for two years from the date of the issuance of the policy, the advertising should show that.

If the policy includes in-hospital benefits, such as $25 per day for each day in the hospital, but those daily benefits are not payable until after the first three days, the potential policy buyer should be put on notice.

Most insurance companies which operate in Texas do follow the state law and Board of Insurance guidelines meticulously.
