Serbs attack northern Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP)—Flush with victory over the stunning capture of a strategic city, Serb rebels pounded government-held towns in northern Bosnia on Thursday, prompting threats of foreign intervention.

The Bosnian capital, Sarajevo, was relatively quiet. Repair crews set out to restore cut utilities to the city and its surroundings, and a senior U.N. general warned the U.N. troops escorting them would return fire if the crews were attacked.

But near Bosnia's northern border with Croatia, Serb artillery pounded the towns of Gradacac and Maglaj with "destructive howitzer shells, particularly incendiary ones," and attacked them by air, Bosnian radio said.

Board recommends funding increase

AUSTIN (AP)—The State Board of Education tentatively recommended a two-year, $5.3 billion school funding increase Thursday that would include teacher pay raises and a longer school year for some students.

The board is scheduled to take a final vote Friday on the proposed recommendation to the Legislature. It also would account for growth in the number of students and inflation.

Board member Will Davis of Austin said the increases are necessary, although he acknowledged that lawmakers are unlikely to pass the whole package.

For example, he said of proposed 9 percent annual teacher pay increases, "We must do it to have any kind of educational program. But I don't think the Legislature will do it."

Clinton calls Bush attacks 'desperate'

Bill Clinton said Thursday that President Bush had "sunk to a new low" in making a campaign issue of his college trip to Moscow and overseas war protests of two decades ago. Bush said he'd merely "expressed what was on my heart" and wasn't about to stop.

"I just think he's desperate," Clinton said before leaving Little Rock, Ark., for Missouri to prepare for Sunday's leadoff presidential debate. "I felt real sad for Mr. Bush yesterday. Here we are on our way to debate the great issues facing this country and its future, and we've descended to that level."

Bush said Wednesday night on CNN that Clinton should "level with the American people on the draft, on whether he went to Moscow, how many demonstrations he led against his own country from a foreign soil."

Lawless requests $115 million for FY 1994

BY SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech President Robert Lawless presented a $115 million funding request for fiscal year 1994 and a $123 million request for 1995 to the Governor's Office of Budget and Planning and the Legislative Budget Office Thursday.

"It looks like we are requesting almost $15 million more than we got this year, even in the face of Texas' budget problems," said Vice President for Fiscal Affairs Don Cosby.

Tech was allocated $101 million for fiscal year 1993. "It is more realistic to look at the money requested in the special needs categories," he said.

Lawless said Tech relies on special need requests to fund certain projects because it does not have a state-funded system administration although it is the largest Texas university under a common board of regents.

Tech's request emphasizes a need for full-formula funding, money for special need items and more optional retirement benefits for university faculty and staff. Tech's request also includes additional Higher Education Assistance Fund money for building repairs and new research.

Special need items include library enhancements and environmental, textile and robotics research.

Tech administrators also are seeking $200,000 for student assistance scholarships for 300 students. In 1992, $72,216 was spent on 112 Tech students.

The items requested will help Tech increase diversity and quality in undergraduate education, according to the introduction to the appropriations request.

These goals are being accomplished already through higher admissions standards, stronger emphasis on minority recruitment and improved counseling services.

Tech is requesting additional funds for plant stress research, wind engineering technology and development of the leather industry.

The appropriations request also includes $477,700 to be spent on a Hispanic Studies Center in 1994 with $516,875 for the center in 1995.

"The unique geographic position and cultural heritage of Texas allows, almost necessitates, that it assume a broad-based leadership role in providing to Hispanics the necessary skills for employment and full participation in government, politics, business and society," Tech's appropriations request stated.

Tech also is seeking resources to support the American with Disabilities Act to provide convenient facilities for the 700 disabled students and employees on campus.

Tech's request for grounds maintenance funding decreased from the $901,882 spent in 1992 to a $769,535 request for 1994.

Proposal may give undergrads second chance

BY JULIE ANN ANDRES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech undergraduate students may have a second chance to improve their overall grade point averages by repeating courses in which low grades were earned.

Virginia Sowell, associate vice president for academic affairs, said the Academic Council and Faculty and Student Senates are considering a proposed policy that would implement a grade point average adjustment.

If implemented, the policy will allow students to repeat a class to adjust their GPA. It has not been decided whether the adjusted GPA will erase the original course grade. If the grade is not erased, the original GPA will appear on the transcript in addition to the adjusted GPA.

If a higher grade is earned, the GPA will change for the term the course is repeated, but original course grades will remain on the transcript to identify academic standing.

Under the current policy, the original course grade is averaged with the grade earned in a repeated course.

During the June 6 Faculty Senate meeting, a concern was raised that Tech students may compare poorly to students from other universities which have an implemented grade adjustment policy.

Sowell said the program was initiated by Faculty Senate members to benefit students while still retaining academic integrity.

"There has generally been a feeling that some opportunity should be given to the students to improve their GPAs," she said.

The proposals will be presented to the Provost's office before a recommendation is given to Tech President Robert Lawless.

Play reading sheds light on lives of AIDS patients

BY JENNIFER SANDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In an effort to relieve the tensions of those whose loved ones have been affected by AIDS and to add increased awareness of the disease, the South Plains AIDS Resource Center is presenting a reading about the disease, "The Way We Live Now," on Saturday.

The reading will be performed at The Phoenix Theatre, 83rd Street and Indiana Avenue at 8 p.m. Tickets cost $10 and will be available at the door. All proceeds will benefit SPARC.

The reading consists of conversations between mutual friends concerning their common friend's discovery of his HIV positive status, developing AIDS and his death.

The piece will be read by five readers and is similar to a play, but the readers all hold their scripts during the performance and sit on stools. The reading is similar to a discussion, said Darrell Strange, a member of SPARC.

"The cast members all have their own special interest in AIDS," Strange said. "Some have lost friends to the disease or know people with AIDS, and one reader's stepson recently died of AIDS. The script is really very strong. It's about five friends sitting around and talking about a disease that has hurt them in one way or another."

The play was written by Susan Sontag and will be performed as part of the National AIDS Awareness Week, Oct. 11-18. Strange said Sontag has "treated AIDS with dignity and compassion, which many writers are unable to do."

John Packard, director of the play, said he and some friends were sitting around one night and decided to get together and present the reading.

"We chose this particular play because we thought it was a different outlook on the AIDS issue," Packard said. "It really shows how people are feeling about the disease. It gives a lot of good information and shows different aspects of AIDS in different lives."

Cast members include: David Breith, Becky Burt, Sam Miller, Barbara Pierce and Packard. Music will be provided by John Griffith.

Packard said the rehearsals for the play have been working out well. He said it does not feel much like see AIDS, page 3

Committee prioritizes city projects for bond election

BY LYDIA GUAJARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The installation of wheelchair ramps topped Lubbock's list of priorities Thursday during a subcommittee meeting of the Citizens' Advisory Committee.

The committee met for three hours to prioritize the 1991 and 1992 project requests. It will submit its recommendations to the Lubbock City Council as possible bond proposals.

The committee placed all requests on a graph of high, medium or low priority. Items eliminated from the list include the Maxey Park Storm Sewer Relief project.

At the top of the high priority list is the American Disabled Act Wheelchair Ramps. The ramps will be installed at 1,700 intersections and will cost about $1 million. The proposal to expand Indiana Avenue followed the wheelchair ramps in priority.

The committee placed the removal of water from lakes located in south Lubbock at the bottom of the high priority list. After flooding, water will be removed from the lakes and diverted to a canyon site. The project is estimated to cost $14.5 million.

The project includes dewatering Casey Park, Clapp Park, Trinity Church Lake, and Lakeridge Lake. Although project efforts will not concentrate on flood control, proposals have been made to add sewer pipes that will send flood waters from the lakes to a canyon.

The committee also is proposing the purchase of new buses for the city between 1996 and 1998. Smaller buses also are being considered. The buses are estimated to cost more than $1 million.

Former candidate urges women not to back down

BY KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The growth of women in Lubbock politics is stunted, Lubbock attorney Wanda Wray told the League of Women Voters in its October forum Thursday.

"We have a long way to go," Wray said.

She said that although more women in Lubbock are taking seats on the city council, school board and county offices, Lubbock is still behind other Texas cities in the number of women holding political offices.

Wray has twice been a candidate for Lubbock's district attorney position and previously entered the county judge and state representative races.

As a candidate, Wray said, some people opposed her entry in the race because she is a woman. She said she had a difficult time building campaign funds for the same reason.

"I looked at it as applying for a job," Wray said.

Wray, who has relied on her own funds in recent elections, said she thinks women should form a bipartisan organization to support women candidates who need financial assistance in their campaigns.

"You cannot and will not get the support you need to fund your campaign (if you are a woman)," Wray said. "We need a group of women working together on a bi-partisan level. We've got a long hard road ahead of us."

Wray also said that while political action committees do not always have a positive influence on the political process, she thinks some PACs offer benefits by contributing to women's campaigns.

Wray said that although women are often defeated when running for office that should continue to remain active.

"You can't give up, you can't back down," she said.

Morris Wilkes, of the Lubbock government relations firm, The Wilkes Company, also said he thinks women should continue to remain active in politics.

Wilkes also said voters need to be involved in the political process and informed about government processes. "I think one of the biggest problems in this country is that only 12.5 percent of the population are making the decisions," Wilkes said.

He said that according to a poll taken in Texas this year, 83 percent of those questioned could not name one of their state senators and about 90 percent did not know the name of any of their state representatives.

Wilkes said he thinks voters need to be more familiar with how city, county and state governments operate to make informed decisions when voting.

Wilkes also addressed term limitation, saying that while re-election is a high priority on candidates' lists, incumbency can benefit voters.

Military bashing not 'stylish'

JAMES DAVID

War sucks. There it is, my disclaimer right off the bat. I am a veteran. No, not a Vietnam veteran, a Desert Storm veteran.

Let me start this off with a little background. My father, grandfather and uncle are all Vietnam veterans. My father went to Vietnam as a young second lieutenant in the infantry and left two years later as a captain.

My uncle and grandfather were both Air Force pilots and flew combat missions in the war.

I was a sergeant in the First Marine Division last year during Desert Storm. I participated in the liberation of Kuwait as a motorcycle courier with a mechanized infantry regiment. My partner and I would go forward of friendly lines and scout routes for the regiment to go through and run messages and map overlays back and forth between higher headquarters and subordinate units.

My partner and I were involved in several firefights. We personally shot and killed four Iraqi soldiers. Why? Because they were trying to kill us.

Sometimes I have dreams about it. One of the Iraqis we shot was a woman. She bled to death. I vomited when I got to her. But I have no regrets. We did what we had to do. I'm not some bloodthirsty warmonger, and neither am I a maladjusted veteran, leeching off society.

I am trying to further my education and "make something of myself" and so are most of the Persian Gulf veterans I know.

In the "politically correct" atmosphere of a university, why is it that criticizing gays or feminists or minority groups is taboo, but it's OK to bash the military and the veterans of America? I know knocking the establishment and the government is fashionable these days; however, people should remember why they have the freedom of speech and demonstration in this country. They can thank the U.S. military and the millions of men and women who served their country during times of crisis.

I've been to dozens of third world countries around the world during my Marine Corps career. In some places I've been, you get shot or jailed for disagreeing with the government. I don't want to sound corny, but we're damn lucky to be living in the United States.

War is hell, as the old adage goes, and the people who are involved in the actual fighting of wars know it best.

Vietnam was a poorly conducted war. I'm not arguing that point. But don't blame the military. Blame the politicians who sold our fighting men down the river. We fought a 10-year war of attrition and lost 58 thousand American lives because the presidents in charge did not want to take the war to the north. In every major engagement on the battlefield, U.S. forces proved their superiority.

Some people contend that the Vietnam War was full of murderous, uncontrollable rampage on the part of U.S. forces. Yes, there were incidents of atrocities in the Vietnam War, on both sides. Incidents on our side were isolated.

If my commanding officer ordered me to shoot an unarmed civilian my answer would be "no sir, that's not a lawful order." I would then report the incident up my chain of command at the earliest possible opportunity. We have a code of conduct in the military which applies here, known as "the law of land warfare" which specifically prohibits that type of conduct, and destroying any more than necessary.

This brings me to my next point. There are numerous fake veterans out there, telling bogus war stories to anyone who will listen. If you doubt this, ask a real combat veteran. The statistics on Vietnam are interesting. Only one out of 13 U.S. military personnel were in frontline combat units. So even if they were there, it doesn't mean they necessarily saw any actual combat.

My father never participated in or witnessed the killing or execution of civilians. He went on to retire from the Army as a brigadier general. My uncle and grandfather both retired from the Air Force. None of them is a "vet leeching off the system."

Most of the Vietnam veterans I know are working, productive members of society. Several are on the Texas Tech faculty.

I'm a member of a large veterans organization. The Vietnam veterans there are not drunkards, drug addicts or violent malcontents. Yes, there are a significant number of veterans with alcohol and drug problems. There also is a large segment of society as a whole with those problems. The only difference is, there is a small minority of veterans who blame their problems on their military service and expect society to feel sorry for them. These veterans are a vocal minority of the larger group, who are leaders in government, business leaders, and otherwise functioning, productive members of society.

If a Vietnam or Persian Gulf War veteran needs help adjusting, the Vet-Center, located on 34th Street, gives free counseling to veterans of these conflicts with problems.

Let's stop the negative stereotyping of veterans, and Vietnam veterans in particular.

In conclusion, war sucks. But someone needs to know how to do it and be willing to fight for our country. If no one ever did, do you think we'd be a democracy today?

James David is a reporter for The University Daily.

Book errors inexcusable

To find out how sad the public educational system is in our country, just look in our history books.

Textbook critics Mel and Norma Gabler discovered more than 500 factual errors in history books sent to Texas schools, the Dallas Morning News reported Wednesday. The mistakes were revealed after the 10 publishers were previously fined about $1.5 million for earlier inaccuracies.

The State Board of Education will fine the publishers $3,000 for each error if the Gablers findings are confirmed — an additional $1.5 million.

An attorney for the publishers argued that the information is as accurate as can be expected. "It is clear in the last year that publishers have spent an awful lot of time and money and energy trying to be perfect," Joe Bill Watkins told the Morning News. "This once again proves that perfection is impossible."

The Texas Education Agency, however, is not seeking perfection. Merely correct information. We cannot believe the texts contained 500 typos. The errors show a lack of effort and blatant carelessness on the part of the publishers.

And when publishers use Texas and California — which have the largest number of public school students — as the marketing grounds for new textbooks, such mistakes reflect a lazy attitude toward our country's educational system as a whole.

Smaller states are not given the attentive ear of the publishing companies because those companies cannot afford to waste time or money developing different books for each state.

All the more reason 500 errors are inexcusable. We allow these companies the luxury of creating only a few textbooks, trusting the publishers to give our schools the best products.

Today's students have enough difficulties without their school books being wrong.

The publishing companies should be sent to the principal's office for an attitude adjustment.

Solving forest problems

To burn or not to burn? That is the question plaguing many forest service officials on what to do in the bone-dry Pacific Northwest.

Starting controlled fires and clear cutting, or leaving the forest dry and safe for wildlife.

Dry weather in recent years often has resulted in the forests becoming infernos and, at times, fires have been set intentionally. These "controlled burns" are intended to help rejuvenate the land and, in the process, keep the dead dry waste off the forest floor to prevent bigger fires from happening.

The most recent man-made fire in this area happened in Yellowstone National Park. This fire raged out of control for about six months, with virtually no way to put it out.

This is controlled burning at the extreme, but is one of the risks. But beyond these risks, this seems to be only way to help control these fires in the Northwest.

One of the main reasons for the controlled burning is to keep the fires from affecting the populated areas of the forest.

One of the options the forest service has suggested is to use clear-cutting, which limits the risk of fires.

But the major benefit clear-cutting produces is more than 3,000 jobs in one valley in northeastern Oregon. The mills of the Pacific Northwest are starving for lumber, and many have shut down due to the shortage of the fires have caused.

Creating these jobs seems like something that may only last for a short period of time and then the jobs will be lost once again. But the simple fact is if the clear-cutting is managed right then the jobs will be continual.

Environmental concerns also are part of this. Of course the hard-core environmentalist wants to save the forest, while the jobs lure some people.

If the forest is clear-cut in sections, then wildlife can adapt to the environment gradually, adapting to the younger, newer string of trees planted cyclicly.

Controlled burning and clear-cutting seem to be the best answer for a question that has many answers. Fires continue to rage in the forests of the Northwest that have not been started by man but by nature. Because of nature they are out of control, and controlled burning could have saved much of this wasted forest land.

America's Team doesn't deserve early criticism

To the editor:

In regards to Len Hayward's column on Thursday, I don't mean to sound nit-picky, but just who the hell do you think you are? On behalf of the many Dallas Cowboy fans at Texas Tech, I would like to take my chance to voice MY opinion of your article. First, I would like to point out that your article was perhaps one of the most biased, uneducated and totally outrageous articles that pen has put to paper. It was bad enough that you insulted a great team simply for having an off night, but then you went so far as to insult the fans of the team. (And as one of the fans that was with them when they were 1-15, I don't take kindly to that.) Then, after you insult the Cowboys, you had the gumption, no, better yet, the sheer nerve to say that have great respect for them.

You can't even stick to your argument!

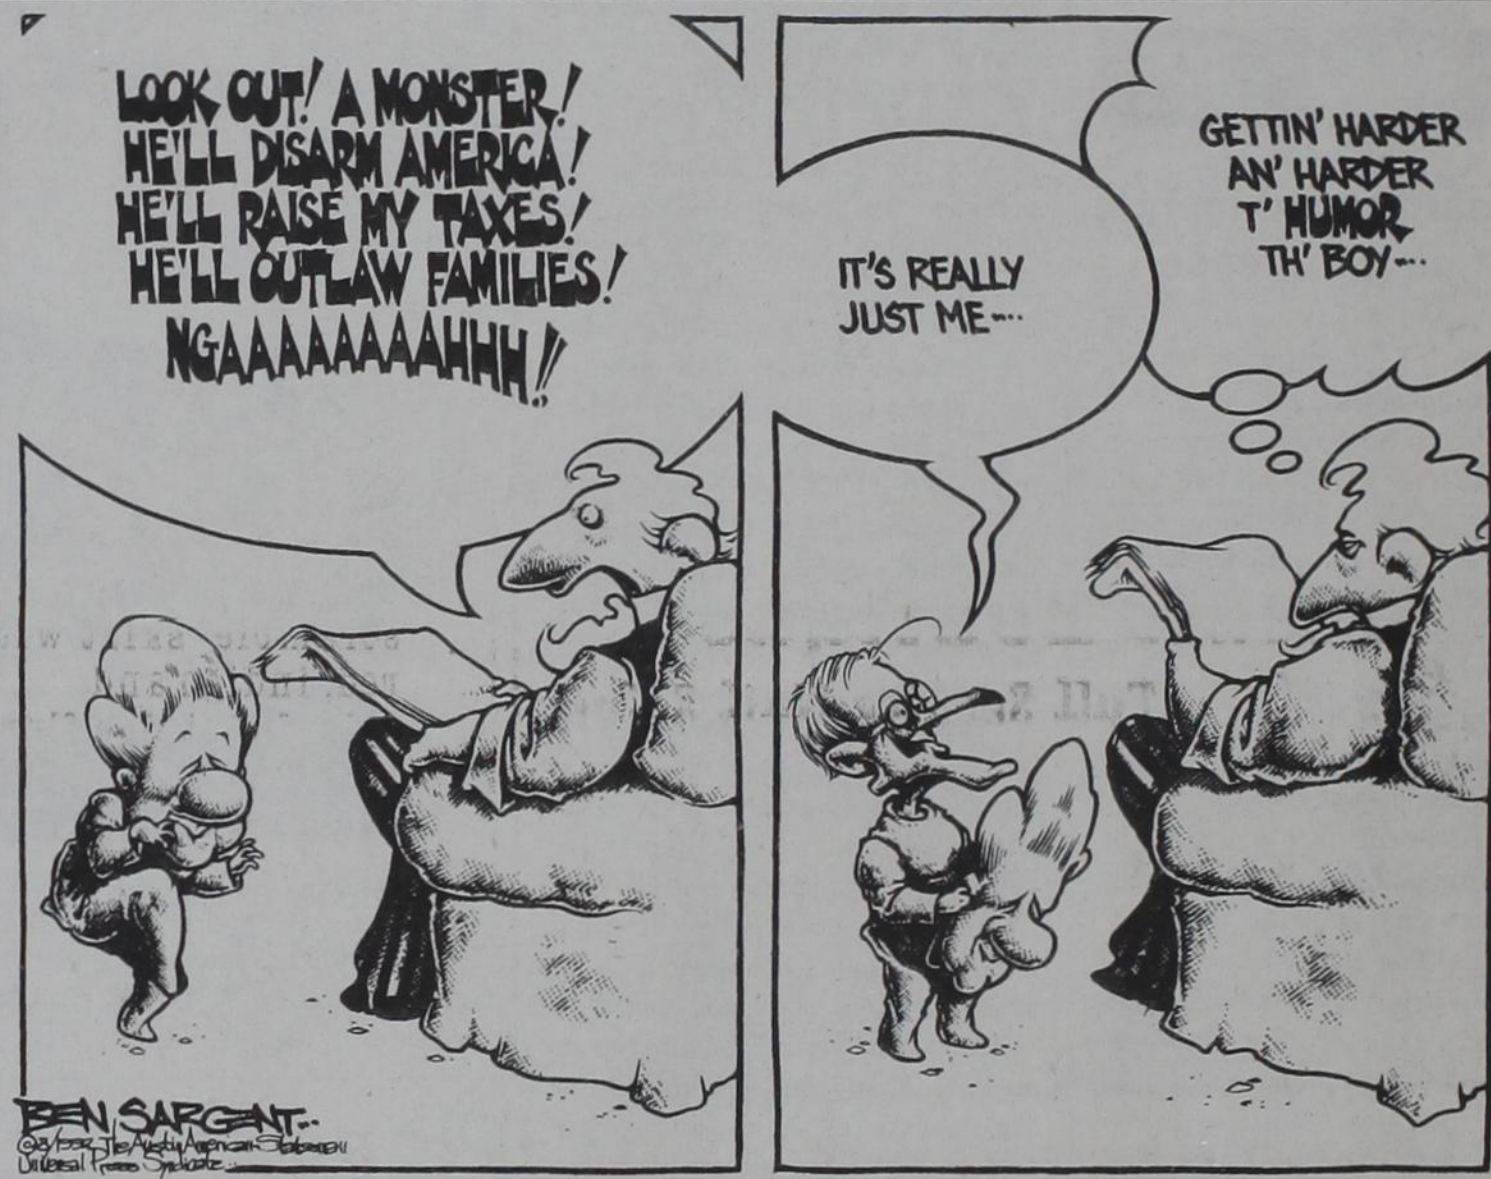

You do, however, make one valid point, "Cowboy fans are some of the most boisterous fans in the league." Yes, that is true, but along with it comes loyalty for them. My point is, the season isn't even half over yet and you are making Super Bowl predictions. Do you have insider information? Do you know on good authority that the Patriots are going to make a run for Pasadena? Or is it that you couldn't think of anything else to put down this week. (After all, the game was Monday night.)

Len, do us all a huge favor, stick to something that you are supposed to have a clue about. I don't think you were hired to pass judgement on the Cowboys. So hop on a plane to Raleigh, N.C., and cover the Tech win over N.C. State. But let the professionals cover the NFL. I'd say Chris Berman is doing a pretty decent job. But I'm sure if he needed a little more insight, he'd give you a call.

Boundaries of gay lifestyles

To the editor:
 From our days in elementary school we knew them well. On the playground at recess they were the "sissies" who didn't want to play baseball or kickball, they simply chose to watch or they would leave because of the harassing they would get. Dr. Carol Martin of Arizona State University says "sissies" were rated as likely to be less well-adjusted and more likely to be homosexual when they grow up than other children (Sex-Roles, 1990). So where does the trait of being a "sissy" come from? Most likely from the family and the absence of important family members and, trust me, this thing is NOT GENETIC. Another so-called "expert," Dr. John Mahoney (American-Psychologist, 1987) states that, "...sexual orientation is not under the direct governance of chromosomes and genes, and that, whereas it is not foreordained by prenatal brain hormonalization, it is influenced thereby, and is also strongly dependent upon, postnatal socialization." That is to say that homosexuality is something that someone is exposed to by their environment after birth, and is not originated from the womb. Put in my words, which I guess is the purpose of the editorial section, some people claim that the condition of homosexuality is genetic and inborn. But I say this is simply an attempt to escape responsibility for ones own actions.

If the homosexuals are fighting for their rights, which they often do in a hostile and violent way, if they feel discriminated against, it is because their actions are abnormal. Statistically homosexuality is "abnormal." By this I mean that most people are heterosexual, and if "normal" means "usual or most common" then it would suffice to say that "abnormal" is to be otherwise. So heterosexual acts are normal and homosexual acts are abnormal. Why did the American Psychological Association in 1978 have the act of homosexuality listed as an abnormal behavior, but in 1979 it was moved to the list of normal behaviors? Was it because that was the year where 51 percent of the normal people began practicing abnormal acts? No, it is because the APA is gutless and gave into the demands of a few hostile, "I-want-my-rights" demanding people who practice homosexuality.

One last point is the fact that some marriages are unhappy, which does not mean that the female-to-male pattern is unsuccessful. Nor does it mean that a homosexual partnership might be better. In fact, very few homosexual relationships last for more than a short time. All it means is that marriage is in a period of adjustment and work needs to be done. One could also make the obvious point that if everyone were homosexual, it would be self-destructing. No more children would be born. This is another reason that the act is abnormal and not right. You still need part of a man and part of a woman to have a new life come about!

It seems to me that all the rhetoric in The UD for the past couple of days has been one person expressing their rights to the hurt and/or dismay of another person. Sure we should accept all people, but there is a limit to the amount of influence people who are abnormal should have over those who are normal. The movement of people for (abnormal) homosexual rights, I feel, is starting to infringe upon the (normal) heterosexual rights. This is a democracy, and to the good or bad, the majority still rules, and I say the majority are practicing the normal behaviors for their lifetimes and not abnormal ones. Even if the majority were practicing homosexual acts, I personally would say that was wrong.

Jay L. Omdahl

Homosexuals are everywhere

This letter is in response to the letter written by Albert Crusco. I am appalled by his insensitivity regarding homosexuals. Unlike Mr. Crusco, I believe that most homosexuals do not choose this lifestyle. Who in their right minds would choose to be discriminated against, to be laughed at, to be physically abused, to be easily accessible to losing their jobs and to be disowned by their families? I know of not one human being that would consciously make a decision that would so affect their lives in this way.

I ask you, Mr. Crusco, who is this so-called "good old Mother Nature," and how do you know what she says or what her opinions are? Do you have a direct phone line to her?

How do you know who is and who is not homosexual? We are the people that sit next to you in class. We pat you on the back when you make a good or bad grade. We travel with you during spring break. We hold offices in many student organizations on this campus. We are on the student senate. We are some of the professors that teach you. We are doctors and nurses that treat you. So you judge us when you don't even know who we are and how we live?

I know that everyone has his own opinion and even people such as yourself deserve to be heard.

I we had the same rights as any other human being had, then we would not have to be writing letters like this back and forth. Just remember that "ALL HUMANS ARE CREATED EQUAL."

Grades

 all student senators support the proposal.
 "One of our main concerns is (whether) the policy will be retroactive for current students," she said.
 A retroactive policy also will allow undergraduates to replace unsatisfactory grades from past semesters.
 Candace Haigler, an associate professor of biological sciences and vice president of the Faculty Senate, said the faculty has mixed feelings about the proposal.
 "There are significant considerations that the efforts of consistently good students will be devalued," she said. "Students may also have a reduced incentive to do well their first time in a class."

 Haigler said some professional institutions, including medical and law schools, may not consider adjusted GPAs, but only raw GPA scores.
 She said the proposal also has positive aspects because quality students can have bad semesters.
 "Sometimes it is good to give (students) a chance to repair or recoup," she said.
 Haigler said the Academic Council and Faculty and Student senators have not approved any policies or made any recommendations.
 A statement that such a policy will exist appears in the 1993 undergraduate catalogue.

Candlelight vigil to honor AIDS victims

Texas Tech's Gay and Lesbian Student Association is sponsoring a candlelight vigil for AIDS victims tonight in Memorial Circle.
 The vigil will begin at 8 p.m. and last about three hours.
 "We're expecting about 50 to 75 people for this," said Kacie Gordon, GLSA member and co-chairwoman of the vigil.
 "We're going to have people reading poetry, names of the AIDS victims from the quilts and the things that (people) wrote on the quilt about their friends and loved ones who died,"

Gordon said.
 She said that the quilt will be displayed for the last time in Washington, D.C., this weekend.
 "It is simply getting too large to display all at once anymore," Gordon said.
 GLSA Secretary Melanie McVay said, "The whole point of doing this candlelight vigil is to honor people who have died of AIDS."
 The vigil is open to the public, and is the first in a series of events to commemorate AIDS awareness week, Oct. 11-17.

 acting because the issue is so real.
 He said the play is not directed for people who know someone who is HIV positive or has AIDS.

 "This reading is for everyone to learn more about AIDS," he said.
 "Anyone who has ever had a friend die because of AIDS or has been affected by AIDS in any way should identify with this play," he said.

 recognize those that had an impact of such size on the music of that time.
 "This just points out how special he was not only to the area, but to the music," Combest said. "You cannot talk about rock 'n' roll without talking about him."

 Holly's brothers said the stamp is a realistic portrayal of their younger brother.
 "He was a very shy person off-stage, but two different people on and off the stage," Travis Holley said. "I think he would have just eaten it all up if he were here."

ARE WE IN THE LAST TIMES?

There are many indications that the Lord Jesus may return soon. The formation of the State of Israel, the ecumenical movement and a Christendom that is increasingly apostate, the worldwide increase in Spiritism, the drastic decline of moral standards, and changes in the Middle East—all these events are foreseen as occurring before Christ returns to the earth to reign. Christ's return for believers could occur any day!
 The Bible says, "For the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and thus we shall always be with the Lord."
 Presented by South Plains Bible Chapel, located at 5402 Quaker Avenue. You are invited to visit us during our Family Bible Hour, Sundays at 11:00 A.M.

BEAT 'EM IN THE HOLE!!!

Weekend warriors battle it out medieval style

BY STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

From opposite ends of the field come the cries of "Lay on!" as the swords are raised and the melee begins.

The captains lead their teams across the field, taking them into battle, as others look on cheering.

And so begins Amtgard, a live medieval/fantasy recreation game, which was formed in El Paso in 1983 by six people who had become disheartened with the Society for Creative Anachronism, a group similar to Amtgard.

"They began meeting separately, fighting with the harder weapons," said Mande Hastings, a freshman English and history major from El Paso.

"As time passed and the group grew, the padded weapons came into use and the game was developed."

Mark Willis, a senior anthropology major from Amarillo, who has been involved in the group for eight years, said Amtgard began as a rebellion against SCA.

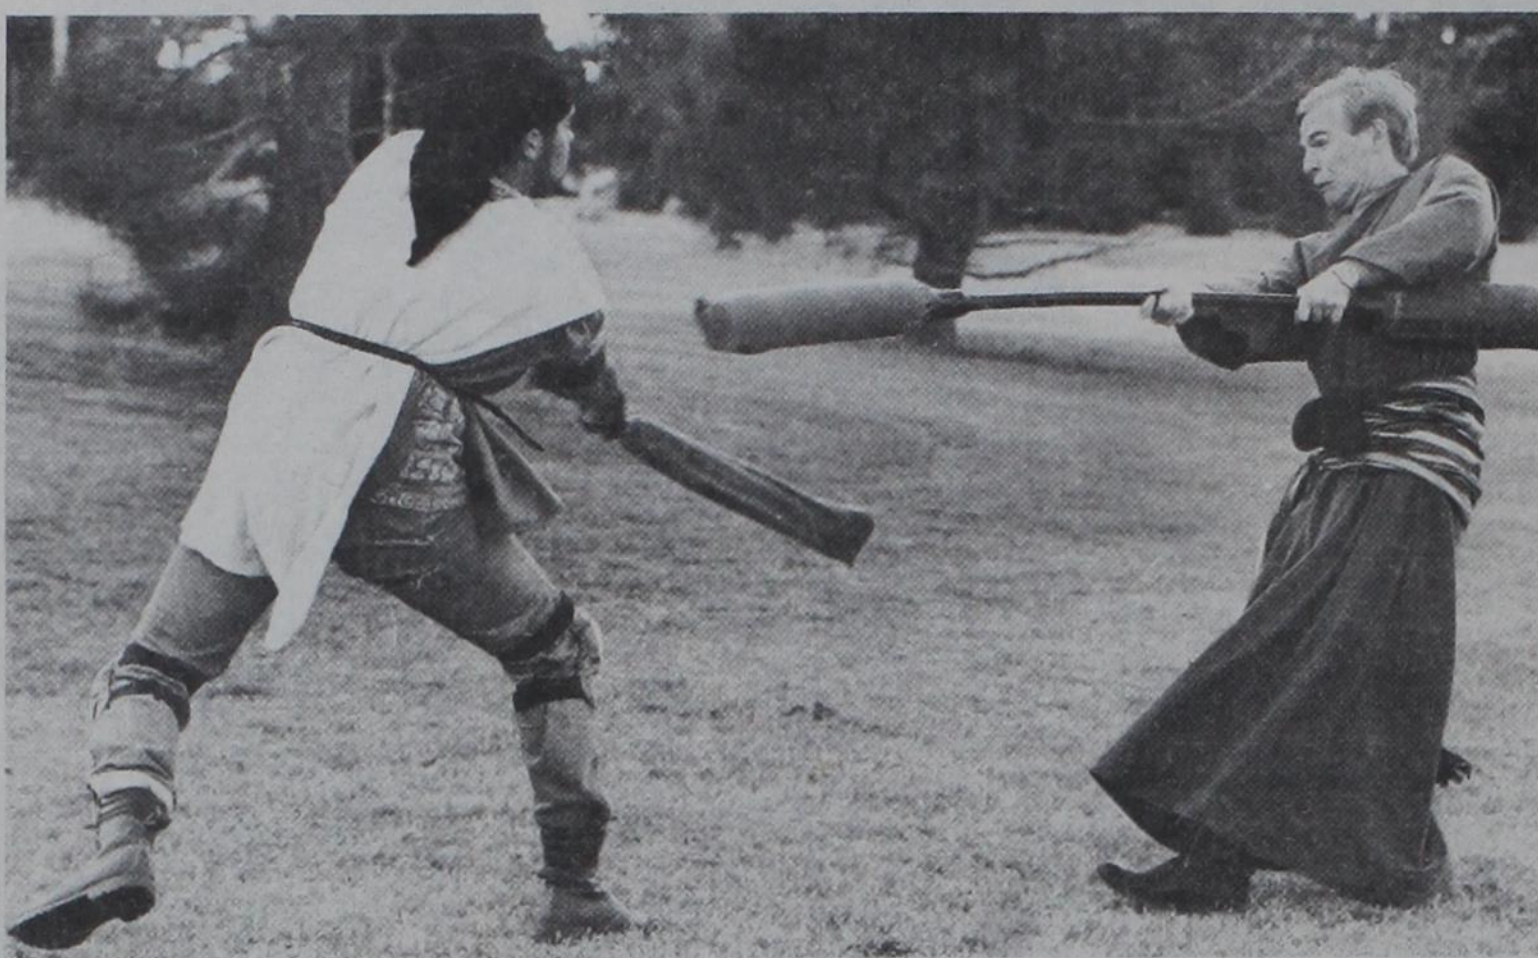

"The game is pretty simple," he said. "If you're hit in the leg, you have to go to your knees and fight. If you're hit in your arm, then you can no longer use that arm, and if you're hit in the chest, you're dead. There is no hitting in the head."

Willis said he is known as Duke Sir Ivar in the organization.

"I looked through history books and found a period of time I was interested in," he said. "I picked a name that fit into that time period."

"Many people left SCA because they were using harder weapons like sticks of rattan," Willis said. "Amtgard is a safer way to fight."

"It is a kind of escapism because you get to be a character from sometime in history that may or may not have actually existed."

SAM MARTINEZ: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Only a flesh wound

Barry Pape engages in armed conflict with Ron Konstantin. Both are members of Amtgard, an organization that battles every Tuesday and Sunday at Clapp Park.

Hastings said she became involved with Amtgard about a year ago when a friend took her out to see the game played.

"I liked the clothing and watching the battle games," she said. "I think the people you find in Amtgard are the nicest you'll find around."

Hastings, who is known as Artemis in the organization, said she chose the name because of her interest in Greek mythology.

"I liked the name and thought she was an interesting character," she said.

Hastings said she likes the diversity of the people who play the game.

"We attract a wide variety of people, and we do our best to recreate the medieval atmosphere, but we don't take it so seriously that we lose the fun."

Each chapter is ruled by a monarch and consort, generally a baron, baroness, king or queen, who serve as the president and vice president of the group.

A prime minister serves as the secretary/treasurer. Every six months, monarchs and their consorts are popularly elected after qualifying in both a tournament and cultural competitions.

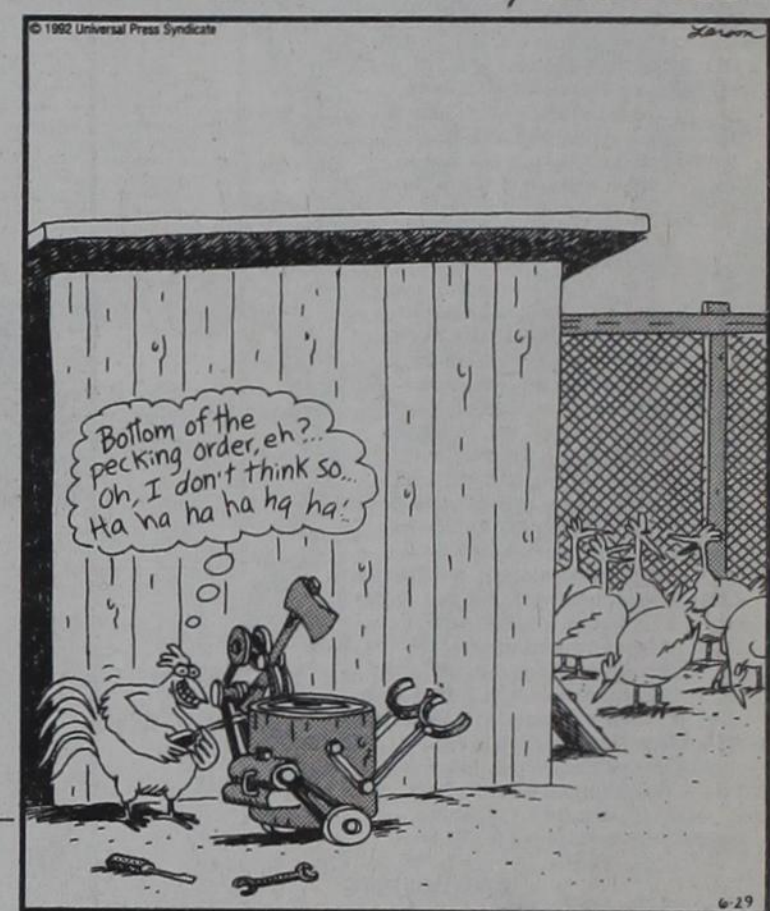

The group meets in Clapp Park at 3 p.m. Sundays and 6:30 p.m. Tuesdays.

Dues are $1 a month or $5 for six months.

'The Heist' opens at Lab Theatre

BY JENNIFER SANDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A Texas Tech tradition of staging new plays by Tech playwrights continues with this weekend's Lab Theatre production of "The Heist," a play written by graduate student, John Hardy.

Performance dates for the show are Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Lab Theatre.

"The Heist" is Hardy's first production at the University Theatre.

Fine arts doctoral student, Dagne Olsberg, is director of the play.

The plot of "The Heist" revolves around a small-time gang of thieves which successfully cracks a security vault and makes off with a large sum of money.

The characters range from a Frank Sinatra worshipper to a hoodlum who dreams of becoming a prosecuting attorney.

The comedy turns to a more serious, dark plot when the robbers fight for their rightful share of the money.

Celebrations planned for Columbus Day

Local groups and organizations will celebrate the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' discovery of the Americas at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Texas Tech University Center Ballroom.

The evening's theme of festivities will emphasize unity among various local culture groups. Performances by the West Texas Native American Association, the Ballet Folklórico de San Patricio, the Acten Theater and the Ford Memorial Church Choir will all be part of the celebration. The multi-cultural event is open to the public with no admission charge.

Texas' Mackovic gets first glimpse of rivalry

LEN HAYWARD

The Southwest Conference is in full swing with a few exceptions.

Texas Tech plays North Carolina State in Raleigh, while the annual showdown in the Cotton Bowl is this weekend with Texas against Oklahoma.

This should be the best game of the day, and look for Oklahoma to break the string and the Longhorns' hearts. Also this week, I will give my views on a few other games going on in the rest of college football.

Texas (2-2, 1-0)
vs. No. 16 Oklahoma (3-1)
Cotton Bowl (75,587)
Dallas
2:30 p.m. CDT
ABC (channel 28 locally)

Look for the Sooners to get revenge with a team that is basically angry, and wants to win this game. Gary Gibbs also wants to get this monkey off his back.

The Longhorns, however, always seem to rise to the occasion. Oklahoma has the definite advantage, but this will be a heated battle as usual. The "Yankee" John Mackovic may start feeling the heat from alumni if he doesn't win this one.

Southern Methodist (3-2, 1-1)
at Rice (1-3, 0-1)
Rice Stadium (70,000)
Houston
12:10 p.m. CDT
Raycom (channel 34 locally)

The Mustangs lost starting line-backer Bill Kiely during the first quarter of the Baylor game last week, which should hamper the SMU defense in trying to stop Trevor Cobb.

Rice was close but not close enough in beating Texas last week, but look for the Owls to "hoot" after they even their record in the SWC.

A few of key Mustang players are still suspended which will also hamper the Mustangs effort to win their second conference game.

Baylor (2-3, 1-1)
at Texas Christian (1-2-1, 0-1)
Amon G. Carter Stadium (46,000)
Fort Worth
7:05 p.m. CDT

Baylor regained some momentum after crushing SMU last week, but these two teams always seem to have tough games.

This is Baylor's first game on grass, but look for that to make little difference. I think Texas Tech caught Baylor on a bad day and the Raiders just played extremely well, because could be the sleeper in this conference and cause some problems for some teams.

If quarterback J.J. Joe can even remotely come close to the performance he had last week, then look for another blowout win for the Bears.

No. 2 Miami (4-0)
at No. 7 Penn State (4-0)
Beaver Stadium (83,370)
University Park, Pa.
11:00 a.m. CDT
ABC (channel 28 locally)

What a matchup, speed versus speed.

This should be another close one for the Hurricanes, as the Nittany Lions have played well this season.

Penn State is possibly one of the most underrated teams in the nation. This one should go down to the wire, and may give the Hurricanes their first loss in two years.

The Hurricanes will have to play tough defense, and Gino Torretta must continue to come through in the clutch. O.J. McDuffie and John Sacca have helped the Lions remain undefeated this season.

This one should be a nailbiter, but Penn State might just be No. 1 after this game.

Len Hayward is the sports editor of The University Daily.

Raiders, Wolfpack set for battle after emotional conference losses

BY JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech and North Carolina State will find out this weekend which team is ready to play after both teams suffered close losses to conference opponents last weekend.

Kickoff for the game is set for noon (CDT) Saturday at Carter Finley Stadium in Raleigh, N.C.

Last Saturday, the No. 25-ranked N.C. State Wolfpack lost to the Georgia Tech Yellowjackets, 16-13, on a last-second field goal.

The Raiders lost similarly to Texas A&M when Terry Venetoulis kicked a field goal in the final seconds of the game to win the contest for the Aggies.

"North Carolina State has a great football team," coach Spike Dykes said earlier this week. "We have to respond favorably. Playing a great program like theirs might help shake us out of the doldrums."

The unquestioned leader of the Wolfpack offense, quarterback Terry Jordan, will miss the game because of an injury he suffered against Georgia Tech last Saturday.

Jordan, out with a leg injury, has completed 41 of his last 49 pass attempts, accounting for 525 yards, one touchdown, and no interceptions. Geoff Bender, a 6-4, 201-pound sophomore from Pittsburgh, is Jordan's backup.

Last season, Bender stepped in for the injured Jordan and led the Wolfpack to victories against North Carolina, Georgia Tech and South Carolina.

"The guy that they've got backing up Jordan (Bender) took them to a bowl game last year," junior defensive end Shawn Jackson said. "He's a pretty good quarterback. But with N.C. State, they're a little like A&M because they run a lot."

To stop the Wolfpack, Tech is looking for a carryover on defense from last weekend's game against the Aggies. According to Dykes, N.C. State has one of the quicker offenses in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"North Carolina has got a good team," Dykes said. "They've got a great homefield track record and it's an extremely hard place to play. But I think all that will be good for us."

The Wolfpack will be led on offense by senior running back Anthony Barbour. Last season, Barbour led the team in rushing with 769 yards and 6.2 yards per carry. To stop Barbour, sophomore defensive end Stephen Gaines said Tech needs to play harder than in the past.

"This weekend we need to come out and play four quarters of football," Gaines said. "In my opinion, I don't think that we've really played four quarters of football yet."

Blocking for Barbour is senior full-back Greg Mainor. Mainor led the team in rushing in 1990 with 406 yards.

In the air, the Wolfpack will be throwing to senior split end Reggie Lawrence, junior Ray Griffis and sophomore Eddie Goines. Last year, Lawrence qualified for the NCAA championships in the 55-yard dash. He will be playing against Tech senior cornerback Chris Kenney, a back-up to the injured Anthony Wiley. Goines has 16 catches for 234 yards in the last two games.

"N.C. State has great team speed on offense. They've got a lot of weapons, and it really scares me. They spread the field out — they are just a real tough team to stop on offense," Dykes said.

On defense for N.C. State, Sebastian Savage is an All-American candidate at cornerback. Savage will be assigned to stop the Raiders' Lloyd Hill. Hill has 36 receptions for 617 yards this season.

The Raiders will attempt to test the Wolfpack's defensive line this weekend with the injury to starter John Akins at defensive tackle.

Akins strained the rotator cuff in

One of the Raiders' main concerns going into the game is slowing down N.C. State's running attack and making fewer mistakes on defense. Dykes says the Wolfpack can be beaten if the Raiders play "smart football."

"If you don't go in there and play extremely well, then you don't stand a chance," Dykes said.

Tech spikers continue roadtrip at Lamar

The No. 14 Texas Tech women's volleyball team will return to action at 7 p.m. today as the Red Raiders face the Lamar Lady Cardinals at McDonald Gym in Beaumont.

The Raiders are coming off a Southwest Conference loss to the Houston Cougars Wednesday night. The loss marked the first time a Tech volleyball team has been under .500 in coach Mike Jones' tenure.

Tech is looking to improve after hitting .060 in the match against the Cougars. Kim Gosselin was the lone bright spot for the Raiders in the 3-0 loss to the Cougars, leading the way with eight kills.

The Raiders are looking to improve on their 10-3 overall record, while they fell to 1-2 in the SWC. Tech will finish the five-day road trip Saturday against Sam Houston State in Huntsville.

Soccer clubs to see action this weekend

Both the Texas Tech men's and women's soccer clubs will be in action this weekend.

The men will play at 2 p.m. at R.P. Fuller Stadium on Saturday against Abilene Christian.

The women's club will compete at the College of the Southwest Challenge in Hobbs on Saturday and Sunday. Teams competing in the tournament are St. Mary's College in San Antonio, along with College of the Southwest and Tech.

Young Mavericks begin practice today

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks will be as green as their uniforms this season.

They open practice Friday coming off a 12th place overall finish in the NBA, second worst in franchise history.

Coach Richie Adubato went to a youth movement late in the season and the Mavs paid the price in victories for experience.

"When injuries once again hit our veterans, we decided it was time to begin emphasizing youth while planning for the future," said Adubato. "We feel we added more quality youth in the 1992 draft with guard Jim Jackson of Ohio State (first round pick) and center Sean Rooks of Arizona (second round selection)."

Adubato plans to use Jackson at shooting guard, point guard and small forward once the Mavs get him signed.

Dallas needs help. Shooting guard Rolando Blackman was traded to the New York Knicks in the off-season.

Dallas is looking for a big improvement in forward Doug Smith, a first round pick out of Missouri in 1991.

Such youngsters as power forward Terry Davis, guard Mike Juzzolino and center Donald Hodge should be better. They started the final 21 games for the Mavs.

Free agent forward Dexter Cambridge, who played at the University of Texas, had a good summer camp and will be given a chance to make the team.

Derek Harper, one of the best point guards in the league, has been mentioned in trade talks but the Mavericks need him to be a threat this season.

Dallas hopes for better luck from the injury gods.

The Mavs lost a club-record 240 man-games to injury and illness last season. Seventeen different players saw action during the course of the season.
