NATION

Economy showing hints of revival

WASHINGTON (AP)—The economy in most regions remains stuck in the slow-growth rut that contributed to President Bush's defeat Tuesday, says a Federal Reserve survey of business activity released Wednesday.

The central bank singled out manufacturing as the weakest sector in most of the nation, but a separate report Wednesday from the Commerce Department offered a hint of revival.

It said new orders to factories rebounded 1.1 percent, to $239.4 billion, during September. That only partially made up for declines during the two previous months.

A bimonthly survey of business executives by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce showed confidence in the economy in October plunged $.1 percent to the lowest level since December.

STATE

State school finance plan unveiled

AUSTIN (AP)—The state's top three leaders unveiled their public education funding proposal Wednesday. It was immediately blasted by school groups that said it would cause huge local property tax increases.

The School Finance Working Group, made up of a dozen different organizations, said the plan could result in local increases of up to $3 billion over the next two years because of insufficient state funding.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who released the proposal with Gov. Ann Richards and lame-duck House Speaker Gib Lewis, said: "Local property taxes will go up." But he added that the plan leaves tax decisions in local districts' hands.

Bullock said there's not support for a state tax increase. "Let there be no mistake, the approach advocated by the professional education bureaucracy will lead to a state income tax," he said.

1992 VOTE POLITICS

Republican Party wins in Texas

AUSTIN (AP)—Republicans may have lost the White House, but they continued to chip away at Democratic dominance in Texas.

By Wednesday, near-final election returns showed the GOP adding another statewide official, grabbing an unprecedented number of seats in the Texas Senate and cracking the Democratic lock on the state's highest criminal court bench.

"We will have more Republicans in office in Texas than ever before," said state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer. "That's encouraging and important."

President Bush carried his adopted home state to no avail. Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton will be the next president, and Texas Democrats said that signals a major change.

Pikes, Fashion Board handed punishment

BY KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and Fashion Board received suspension and probation, respectively, Wednesday following a University Discipline Committee hearing for their involvement in a racial mixer.

The organizations have until Monday to appeal the disciplinary sanctions.

Dean of Students Judith Henry said the organizations were found guilty of harassment, but neither organization has said whether it will appeal.

Unless the organizations appeal, the penalties will go into effect immediately.

The Pikes have been put on deferred suspension under specific conditions (see graphic) until the 1994 fall semester.

Fashion Board received disciplinary probation, also under specific conditions through 1993,

SANCTIONS
Pi Kappa Alpha	Deferred suspension with specified conditions commencing immediately and to last through the 1994 fall semester.
Fashion Board	Disciplinary probation commencing immediately, for an indefinite period of time, but for a minimum of the 1993 calendar year. The chapter will have the opportunity to make a presentation before the University Disciplinary Committee for review of the probationary status.
SPECIFIED CONDITIONS
	• Rush activities will not be allowed during the 1993 calendar year.
	• Social activities will be suspended during the specified period.
	• Eighty percent of the chapter members will be required to attend five officially sponsored multicultural events or activities each year.
	• The chapter is required to cosponsor one activity with a registered African-American student organization and one activity with a registered Hispanic student organization each year.
	• The chapter is required to coordinate/facilitate an educational program focusing on human dignity and mutual regard which would target all fraternities and sororities in coordination with the Student Organizations Services office.
	• Exclusively for Pi Kappa Alpha: Intramural participation in the Greek division will not be allowed during the 1993 spring semester.

at which time they will be reviewed by the discipline committee.

The Student Affairs Handbook defines deferred suspension as suspension "subject to a definite or indefinite period of observation and review. An additional violation of the Code of Student Conduct or an order of the University Discipline Committee will cause immediate suspension."

Disciplinary probation, according to the handbook, is "a specified period of time during which a registered student organization's conduct will be scrutinized. The registered organization must demonstrate the ability to comply with university rules, and any requirements stipulated for the probationary period. A violation of the code during this period may be cause for suspension."

Henry said the university feels strongly that efforts to increase cultural understanding should continue. She said many positive steps were in place before the incident, and these steps will continue.

Terrissa Kendrick, a junior Association for Hispanic Arts member, said, "I don't think it's much punishment to take their privileges away. It's like taking ice cream from a kid."

Corina Zuniga, also an Association for Hispanic Arts member, said, "It seems like they did the minimum they could. I think they could have done more."

Cheryl Taylor, a Tech law student who filed the complaint of racism against the Pikes and Fashion Board, also said the sanctions are not enough.

"It starts with people changing their hearts and passing it on to their children. Hopefully, this will serve as a deterrent to other organizations," she said.

"Forcing 100 percent to go (to the mandatory multicultural events or activities) will not change their minds," she added.

Steer clear

Trey Wardlaw, a junior agricultural education major from Sonora, practices steer wrestling in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum Wednesday in preparation for the Texas Tech rodeo that begins today.

The rodeo will run through Saturday and begins each day at 7:30 p.m.

Newspaper denied entrance into Pike, Fashion Board hearing

BY KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The University Daily was denied access to a hearing conducted by Texas Tech's University Discipline Committee Wednesday in the University Center's Anniversary Room.

Jennifer Burrill, president of Tech's chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, also was denied access to the closed hearing concerning racial charges brought against the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and Fashion Board.

The University Daily and Burrill requested that the objections to the closed hearing be recorded on tape and in the written records, believing the hearing was in violation of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

State governmental bodies are subject to the Open Meetings Act. According to representatives from Tech's News and Publications Office, the discipline committee is an advisory committee, not a governmental committee. However, the verdict and discipline procedures are decided by the committee and the Dean of Students Office, all of whom were represented at the hearing.

According to the Student Affairs Handbook, committee members take a majority vote to determine the guilt or innocence of the organizations based on information brought forth in the hearing.

If the committee is found to be a governmental body, all tape recordings and written records will be subject to public knowledge, and all actions taken in closed hearings will be voidable, Lubbock lawyer Don Richards said.

The committee heard testimony from Kristen Gocus, a junior telecommunications major; Greg Jones, coordinator of Tech's multicultural center; Joshua Mora, assistant dean of students; and Sonya Myles, a senior chemistry major. Henry and Associate Dean of Students Michael Shonrock also were present at the hearing.

According to information from the Dean of Students Office, the documents see HEARING, page 3

NCAA bid feasible if Lubbock builds new arena, director says

BY LYDIA GUAJARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones told the Multipurpose Arena Task Force Wednesday that several people may have been misled in Tech's use of the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum during the early stages of the arena's planning development.

"What a joy it would be to go into an arena of this sort," Jones said. "But, we are not the only ones in consideration of the arena, we are only a small user of the facility."

The task force met to hear information from Jones and Tech Vice President for Fiscal Affairs Don Cosby concerning the impact of a new arena on the campus or in another location.

Jones said the athletic department favors a new arena because he would like to see Tech in a bid competition to sponsor a regional round of the annual NCAA men's basketball tournament.

According to bid standards, the NCAA will not consider any collegiate applicant if the applicant's facility does not seat at least 14,000 people.

Jones also said he is concerned about Lubbock's hotel and restaurant availability because the NCAA looks at hotel and restaurant accommodations, the size of crowd expected to be drawn to the facility and the colleges' accessibility to the city.

The task force asked Jones and Cosby if the existing coliseum would be used for athletic practice purposes and games if the arena is built.

Jones said he anticipates the teams using the arena would practice there rather than in the coliseum to familiarize themselves with the atmosphere.

The Tech representatives said the arena would not solely benefit the campus community.

However, Cosby said it would be ideal to build the arena on campus because about 6,000 students live on campus.

"I do not feel like we should build this just for Tech," Cosby said. "Our president feels that location is an important consideration and the university would look at any land possibly available."

The task force also reviewed information gathered by the city staff from various promoters.

New, old voters bombard polls

BY KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

American voters turned out in record numbers at the polls in Tuesday's election.

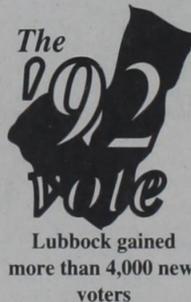

About 100 million voters cast their ballots nationwide, representing 85 percent of the country's registered voters, with Lubbock County contributing more than 83,000 of those votes.

Lubbock County Clerk Ann Davidson said 75 percent of the Hub City's 109,497 registered voters participated in this year's election compared to 73 percent in 1988 and 74 percent in 1984.

Davidson also said the number of residents who registered in Lubbock County during the 1992 election increased by about 4,000 over the past two national elections.

Mark Somma, a Texas Tech political science professor, said that while there was an overall increase in voter turnout nationwide, the numbers are dramatic only because of the low turnout in the 1988 election.

Somma attributed the increase in voter response to the Ross Perot and Bill Clinton campaigns, and said Perot energized the campaigns in all three camps.

"You also saw a higher than average young voter turnout," he said. "I think Ross Perot is responsible for that."

Clinton ran a more organized campaign than past Democratic candidates, Somma said.

The Clinton campaign was responsible for attracting Democratic voters to the polls who did not participate in the past, he said.

Daniel Isett, a member of Tech's College Republicans, said the increase in voter turnout in Lubbock County and around Texas helped the Republican Party's local candidates.

"A lot of people voted straight ticket this time around," Isett said.

Isett also said he believes Perot was responsible for motivating people who were not active in the past to participate in the '92 election.

"There was a lot more attention paid to this race than in the past," he said.

Randy Beffrey, president of Tech's Young Democrats, said the increase in voters included a large portion of young voters.

"It seems to me that young people have responded to campaigns aimed at them," Beffrey said.

Students, faculty, staff to voice criticisms, compliments during informal hearing

BY SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech and its Health Sciences Center are conducting a two-year self-study to identify problem areas and successful programs as part of a reaccreditation process for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

"This self-study affords us an opportunity to uncover things about the university that we probably would not do unless pressure was placed on us by an outside organization," SACS Self-Study Chairman James Brink said.

SACS committees will conduct informal hearings to gather information from Tech students, faculty and staff about the advantages of and problems with university programs. The hearings will take place from 3:30-5 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday in the library's user instruction room No. 1.

"Students rarely get this opportunity to come forward with their concerns," Brink said. "Anyone can come and talk about any issue."

If students bring up problems, Brink said he hopes they also present viable solutions.

Issues the committees will look at include faculty, student development services, financial resources and undergraduate and graduate programs. Committees also will send questionnaires to target groups, including students and faculty.

Brink said about 85 percent of the recommendations from the 1984 study were implemented, and most of the recommendations which are not in place were hindered by budget constraints. Recommendations from the 1984 study included increased admissions standards, computerized registration and more efficient advising.

The committees will complete their initial self-study reports by June 1, 1993, and the reports will be edited during the summer. The reports will be sent to SACS in the fall, and three SACS representatives will visit Tech in April 1994 to verify the self-study results.

Thank you, Ross

To the editor:
 This letter is a tribute and thanks to a man of great influence. When I first heard of Ross Perot, I immediately disliked him. Like most immature high school students, I resented House Bill 72, even though our high school had already adopted a version of the "no-pass, no-play" rule. It never dawned on me that the only reason he would use his influence to pass a bill is because he cares about us and wants us to do well.

What else did he stand to gain by passing that bill, or for that matter, running for president? Why would a businessman spend an outrageous amount of time and money campaigning and trying to educate us on our economic problems? Just to get elected and raise his own taxes? He did it because he wants to repay us for his own success.

As Ross Perot announced to his supporters that Bill Clinton had just won the election, the crowd began booing and carrying on. But Ross didn't want to hear any of that. He honored the American voters' choice and told his supporters not to be discouraged, because by pulling together, we are perfectly capable of recovery under Clinton as well. I'd never seen such sportsmanship and class in any politician. We should be thanking Perot for his message to us, a message of empowering belief in ourselves.

Comparing apples and oranges

To the editor:
 I am writing this letter in response to the Oct. 29 letter written by Carla Davis regarding Casey

Westenrieder's tomahawk chop issue.
 I hope to make people realize that the purpose of Casey's article was to show his discontent for the senseless bickering and arguing of trivial issues surrounding baseball. Carla took several statements out of his article and used them totally out of context.

The most unfair thing about Carla's letter and her "racist" comments was that there are some who did not have the chance to read his baseball article (which was very well done) and, therefore, prejudiced the readers to Casey's future articles. I do not believe that Mr. Westenrieder appeared to be racist at all in his article, and we should all look a little closer at the true message of the article instead of trying to force something between the lines.

I could understand it if Casey advocated dressing up like post-Civil War soldiers and chasing American Indians out of America, but that's not even close to what he tried to do. To the contrary, he expressed what was obviously his own respect for Indians by indicating that the new chop symbolized the "power and prestige" of the American Indians — I believe those were Casey's words.

Carla said that the tomahawk chop depicted American Indians as "warriors and braves." Guess what Carla, many native Americans were warriors, and I'll even venture out on a limb to say that all of them were probably brave, a heritage of which I'm sure they are proud.

What occurred at that fraternity party was, in my opinion, a very racist incident. The disgusting and blatant display of an organization that thrives off of racism and hatred (the Ku Klux Klan) could have set Texas Tech back 30 years.

I'm sure I could go on and on about this issue, but for Carla to so casually compare this very important and sensitive (or should I say insensitive) subject to a mere mention of a senseless baseball controversy is absurd.

I love baseball, but I love my fellow Americans more, and I see little comparison between a baseball article and a painful experience full of hatred. Carla, I don't know you. I'm sure you're a very nice person, but I think that by taking a few statements out of Casey Westenrieder's article and using them out of context was a great injustice on your part.

 Mr. Westenrieder has written several very fine articles and deserves the benefit of the doubt on this one.

Finally the students at Texas Tech are going to get to hear more on baseball news. I feel that Tech baseball should get promoted more and get more support from the student body as well as the university, and who better to write and promote it than an avid baseball fan.

Carol White

Our stance

Editor's note: The following letter is from 10 minority organizations at Texas Tech. They are: Asian American Student Organization, Association for Hispanic Arts, Bilingual Education Student Organization, Hispanic Student Society, Kappa Delta GHI, LULAC Young Adults, Minority Law Students Association, Native American Student Association, Omega Delta Phi and Society of Hispanic Professional Engineers. The presidents for each of the organizations signed the letter.

To the editor:
 In accordance with the overall feelings of many minorities on the campus of Texas Tech University, the following statement has been compiled and recognized as the official stance of the above stated organizations pertaining to the "Party in the Projects" incident involving the Fashion Board and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity:

As representatives of the stated minority organizations, the leaders of these culturally diverse groups would like to state that we are outraged and offended that such derogatory behavior and actions have occurred at Texas Tech University.

Being part of the Texas Tech University community, we are concerned that these two groups did not see the offensive activities of the "party" as a racial issue until they were reprimanded at a later date by a group of minority organizations. The two groups involved in the allegation are unfortunately part of our campus community and portray themselves in the community as exemplary students of Texas Tech.

Ironically, this campus prides itself in its commitment to the Human Dignity policy, which we have all been made aware of recently.

We regret that groups such as the Fashion Board and the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity continue to view us in the stereotypical images of our cultures and backgrounds. As we progress into the future, we see multiculturalism as the key to education and attempting to obliterate future actions of insensitivity and ignorance at Texas Tech.

In addition, we would like to express a concern on behalf of the students about the actual delayed reaction of the administration. The prevailing views of students concerning the "Party in the Projects" was of such great significance and interest that a group of students saw the need to address this issue at an open forum without further delay. These students initiated the idea of a forum, which we felt should have been seen as equally important and therefore acted upon immediately on behalf of the administration. We do acknowledge and thank all of those who ultimately did help coordinate and aid those students who supplicated for a public open forum on Oct. 22.

Will this "derogatory" and offensive conduct on behalf of the Fashion Board and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity reflect upon the overall positive image of Texas Tech?

The issue of minority recruitment and student retention are most likely to be greatly hindered if such actions by these two groups are not penalized with strong disciplinary actions.

We anticipate and hope that basic and required actions of disciplinary procedures by the University Disciplinary Committee are immediately taken to correct this transgression against the majority of the minority student body at Texas Tech as a form of commitment to your students on campus.

America is not dead

Less than 24 hours after he was elected president and long before he will even step foot into the White House, people already are condemning Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton's role as president.

Their criticism is unfounded. The United States is not a devastated country now that Clinton has been elected president. The country is not falling apart. But, according to many anti-Clinton people, we might as well hang it up — we're in trouble and the president-elect hasn't even had a chance to prove himself or put one plan into action.

Clinton may not have been the pick of every American. Not every one of us agrees with his plans, and we may not agree with them even after he implements them, but we need to face the fact that he was elected, and we elected him.

Yes, through our longstanding tradition of democracy, the country as a whole elected Clinton. Every one of us contributed to his election, even those of us who did not vote because we thought our vote wouldn't matter or because we put off registering until it was too late. We all had a part in the process by which he was elected, and we should stand by that process and by our president.

Each one of us needs to give the president the support he needs to effectively serve our country. We don't have to like him, but we should respect him and the fact that enough of us believed he is deserving of the office to put him there.

The country's problems will not be solved tomorrow, and no one will ever know for certain whether President Bush or Ross Perot would have done a better job in serving the United States in the next four years. But we do know that the blame for our problems does not fall on one man's shoulders.

If our economic problems should worsen, Clinton, alone, cannot be blamed. If crime runs rampant in the next four years, it is not because Clinton was elected president. Like any man who has ever served in the position, he will have hundreds of people in Congress to work with, hundreds of people who may veto every bill he tries to get passed and hundreds of people who will remain blameless for the country's problems because they are not president.

Give the man a chance to serve our country before condemning him. Give him a chance to prove himself.

The fickle voting public

"Throw the rascals out!"
 From early in the 1992 campaign, that was the battle cry from millions of Americans dissatisfied with the irresponsibility and incompetence in our nation's legislative branch.

After years of partisan bickering and gridlock, the public decided that enough was enough, and the time had come for a big shake-up in Congress.

And though we elected more than 100 new representatives and senators, most of these victories resulted from the creation of districts and open seats vacated by retiring legislators.

In the end, only 24 out of 349 incumbents lost their seats. In Texas, only one representative out of 27 lost his seat.

What happened?
 Certainly part of the problem originates with the name recognition our representatives have. People are so used to hearing their congressman or senator's name on TV and seeing it in the newspapers that a tendency exists to vote for the recognizable name on the ballot.

Another explanation might be that everyone loves their own representative or senator, but hates the one in the next district or state. Legislators generally know how to please their constituents, and nobody complains about the government spending won on Capitol Hill for their own districts.

These factors understandably work together to create a situation where, barring any great scandals or stupid moves, a congressman or senator, once elected, is there for life.

Remedies have been proposed to put an end to this problem, such as strict limits on campaign financing and outright term limitations. Both have their advantages, but neither will solve the problems completely that come with an entrenched Congress. We can limit campaign spending, but other advantages would still work to ensure victory for the incumbent, and term limitations would not make for a legislative body of Mr. Smiths.

No matter how much we blame the system, we must ultimately blame ourselves, for we are the ones who make the system what it is. Living in a democracy means having the opportunity to decide who gets to serve.

Much was said about electing a new Congress, and if we want to place blame on the failure to do so, we should look in the mirror.

Criticism prejudices president-elect

LYDIA GUAJARDO

I am not sure why I am sitting at this computer terminal, but this is my attempt to open eyes and minds of those who voted against President-elect Bill Clinton. What a nice ring that has to it. Anyway, I cannot believe the gibberish I heard all day Tuesday from Republicans both old and new about what a sad day it is for America. Today is not a sad day, it is another day in the history of America. The country has just elected the 42nd president of the United States of America. He was elected, not appointed. The way our system is set up, it only takes a majority of the electoral vote to elect a person to office.

That is not Clinton's fault; he just followed the system and won the presidency. This is not a dictatorship; it is a democracy. He has been chosen by the people.

It is a refreshing thought that the voter turnout was higher Tuesday than in past elections. More people realize the importance of the right to vote that was given to us by our founding fathers.

Once more, it is also important to realize the fact that we have choice. Americans made their choice, and now there is a winner.

Tuesday night, Bush and Perot said they would rally behind Clinton and help in any way they saw fit. My question to the public is: Why can't those who did not vote for Clinton accept defeat and unite as a nation to pull our country out of the deficit we have found ourselves in?

With the 1992 presidential campaign behind us, it is time to stop pointing fingers about whose fault it is and get to work and rectify the situation.

During the campaign, we have heard about what a great nation we live in. Well, if we sit and whine about our problems, they are only going to get bigger and no longer will we be that great nation.

It has been brought to my attention that if President Bush had been re-elected, then I would be griping about his re-election today. That may very well be so, but there is a difference. I have lived through 12 years of the Republican era, and I just cannot do it anymore. I have not lived through a Clinton administration, and I will not pass judgement on assumptions of what he might or might not do.

Throughout the day I heard comments of how disgusted people are that Clinton was elected and how the country is going to hell in a handbasket.

It is not.

WITH THE 1992 PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN BEHIND US, IT IS TIME TO STOP POINTING FINGERS ABOUT WHOSE FAULT IT IS AND GET TO WORK AND RECTIFY THE SITUATION.

We have survived two world wars, several small incidents and 12 consecutive years of Republicans. It is time to let someone else have a chance and just wait and see what happens.

Tuesday I had a conversation with an older man who told me that he did his job as a citizen by voting and voted for change. He continued by saying that if in four years America was still in the same position or worse, then he would confess to his mistake. But, until then, he would support the president-elect and the country.

That to me is a true American with an intelligent opinion and the stamina to take a chance. We should all be like that man.

Tech staff members play foreigners for a day

BY KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech staff members will become Acirema citizens Thursday to put themselves in the shoes of international students who are furthering their education at Tech.

Tech's Student Affairs Staff Development Committee and Office of International Affairs is sponsoring two sessions of Acirema, America spelled backwards, Thursday in the University Center's Lubbock Room.

The first session will be from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and the second will be from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Representatives from the 16 student service departments are invited, and 55 staff members will participate. Staff members were invited based on the amount of time they spend interacting with students.

Jo Hutcherson, assistant to the Dean of Students, said, "I think it (Acirema) teaches you about cultural barriers. And it makes you more sensitive to students."

Staff members will play the role of international students from the fictional country, Acirema, and will follow the same process an international student follows when trying to attend a U.S. higher education institution.

The development committee and international affairs staff will play the role of Tech staff members.

"We will try to make their life pretty difficult," Hutcherson said. "We're letting them know what it's like to be an international student."

The exercise was originated and created by Tech's international affairs staff in 1986.

Student Affairs Vice President Robert Ewalt suggested in 1986 that each student affairs department sponsor a program, said Jacque Behrens, deputy director of international affairs.

She said international affairs staff members thought personnel would gain more from participating in an exercise than listening to a lecture.

Behrens said Acirema offers staff members a learning experience, introduces them to the services provided by the international affairs office and helps them understand why international students are so persistent.

"When you understand why a person does something, your tolerance level as a front line person is higher," she said.

The National Association for Foreign Student Affairs is concerned with sensitizing personnel who work with foreign students, Behrens said.

Hearing

introduced in the hearing included an allegation letter from the office to the Fashion Board president; a grievance filed with the office from Myles and Black Law Students Association President Cheryl Taylor; 53 photocopies of pictures taken at the "Party in the Projects" mixer Oct. 9 at the PKA house; a news release from the office regarding the mixer; documentations provided by Jones and Mora; statements from a fashion board parent, Gocus and campus minority organizations; and a letter from Thomas J. Turner, national Pike president.

Associate General Counsel to Texas Tech Glenda Robinson represented the university at the hearing.

Jim Bob Jones, Pike faculty adviser, said the Pikes were represented by four officers. Fashion Board had five representatives present. Security from the University Police Department was stationed at the three entrances to the Anniversary Room and in various spots around the UC. No disturbances were reported, according to a UPD official.

If the organizations are found guilty of the charges, they have three days to notify the Dean of Students Office of an intent to appeal.

All information then will be given to the University Appeals Committee.

Richards said if students are given a right to appeal, the hearing should fall under the Open Meetings Act.

Committee members are Chairwoman Nina Ronshausen, an associate professor of curriculum and instruction; Jan Childress, director of student publications; M.A.K. Lodhi, a physics professor; John Winters, an assistant director of recreational sports; and Tech students Brent Hamilton and Carlos Longoria.

Archaeologist to discuss excavations, ancient Central American societies

BY STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Recent excavations at a site in southern Costa Rica will be the subject of a lecture at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the chemistry building, room 107.

Jeffrey Quilter, an anthropology professor from the anthropology and sociology department at Ripon College in Ripon, Wis., will present a lecture titled "Chiefdoms in the Realms of Gold: New Views of the Ancient Societies of Central America."

The lecture will include a slide presentation and a discussion of his work in Costa Rica earlier this year.

Philip Dennis, a Texas Tech anthropology professor, said Quilter recently returned from five months of excavation in Rivas, a site in southern Costa Rica.

"Rivas was occupied for several hundred years before the Spanish Conquest by people of the Chiriqui culture, which was famous for its beautiful gold work," he said. "The purpose of archaeology and anthropology is to understand the culture of earlier people from what they leave behind. (Quilter) will tell us about the work he did on the excavation and the Chiriqui culture."

Dennis said Rivas apparently was occupied by several high-status people. He said the cemetery overlooking the site contained a large number of gold ornaments, which were worn only by these people.

"The cemetery was looted early in the 20th century, but the living areas and buildings remain," he said.

"It is a terrible thing to loot prehistoric sites because it destroys the information available to archaeologists. The gold ornaments themselves are not traceable."

Quilter's excavations were the first scientific work at this site, Dennis said.

Anthropologists are not interested in the Rivas site in terms of the gold ornaments, but rather in terms of the chiefdoms, which were intermediate societies between the simple agricultural villages and centralized states, he said.

"They (chiefdoms) are a really crucial thing to study and understand," he said. "They did not last very long in Costa Rica."

Cowntipping: a rude, yet fun way to have a few laughs

BY MIGUEL BONILLA
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Late at night, as the crickets sing their last songs and the roosters warm up their larynxes for the morning wake-up call, a West Texas pastime begins: cow tipping.

Cows on farms throughout the area are rudely awakened from their sleep to the rustling sounds of beer-filled young adults. Several of the participants of this pastime are Tech students who find the sport amusing.

J.J. Lindstrom, a junior theater arts and journalism major from Clyde, said there is process a person must take before tipping the cow over.

"We know where the fields are where the cows are at," he said. "You can't be loud or else they get real mad.

You put the lights on bright and then you tip them over when they're asleep and their legs are locked. But if they see you coming you better run."

Cindy Merrick, a senior elementary education major from Ralls, said she thought it was a funny when she did it a few years ago.

"If you do it occasionally, it's OK. It just disrupts their sleep," she said. "I mainly just watched. The cows would chase after the guys and the girls just watched. It was a cheap thrill."

Although some people find cowntipping amusing, there are some people who feel it is improper conduct.

John McGlone, a professor in animal science specializing in animal behavior and physiology, said he found it rude to awake the animal.

John McGlone

"It's rude behavior shown by impolite students. Any unnecessary handling of an animal is unnecessary," he said.

McGlone also said that it is unlikely that a cow will sleep standing up with their legs locked. He said they also usually sleep for short periods of time lasting five or ten minutes because they are regurgitating their food all the time.

He said one is more likely to find horses, rather than cows, asleep while standing. Cows usually sleep laying down or on their chest.

"They're not going to let you come up to them and let them be pushed over," he said.

"They all wouldn't be asleep at the same time. They are like a herd. If some are sleeping, the others wake up and move away."

Lindstrom said that even though it's wrong, it still is a lot of fun for him.

"It's like putting shaving cream in someone's face," he said.

'Of Mice and Men' provides refreshing look at classic Steinbeck novel

BY SANDRA PULLEY
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

"Of Mice and Men" strays from the modern formula of movie making and delivers a welcome surprise for fall movie audiences with its tale of togetherness and loss in the wake of tragic circumstances.

Lacking the gory pictures of unnecessary violence and the graphic sex scenes that have found their way into recent movie releases, "Of Mice and Men" relies on the strength of its characters and an involving plot to rise above its movie competitors.

The film depicts the life of two migrant farmworkers as they look for work, deal with the son of a tyrannical boss and avoid the temptations of the son's wife.

Lenny, played by John Malkovich, is plagued by mental retardation as he tries to function as a farmhand in the barley and wheat fields of the Midwest. Lenny is good natured, but cannot comprehend the power of his physical strength.

MOVIE REVIEW

Of Mice and Men

John Malkovich, Gary Sinise
 Showing at: South Plains 4
 MPAA rating: PG-13
 The UD rating: 9 out of 10

Lenny is aided in his quest for work by George, played by Gary Sinise. George could follow his dream and work to buy a piece of land where he could raise crops and breed rabbits, but he continually loses his job because of Lenny's antics. The tie which links George with Lenny never is explained fully.

A prize performance by Ray Walston, who played in the TV series

"My Favorite Martian" also adds to the movie's list of superb acting talent.

Director of photography Kenneth MacMillan created the mood of the American Midwest with dramatic portrayals of the vast tracts of harvest fields and shady woods. MacMillan's tact in handling death scenes adds to the quality of the photography.

The movie also explores the depths of racial discrimination in the early 1900s by showing the loneliness and mistreatment of a black stable boy. The short, but endearing, conversation between Lenny and the stable boy shows the powerful effect of discrimination on people of all races during this era.

This is one of the few novels adapted for the screen that does not make a mockery of the author's intentions and literary work. "Of Mice and Men" combines quality drama and breathtaking photography to deliver a sure hit for the fall season's movie roster.

Theatre. Admission is $4 for Texas Tech students and $6 for the general public. Tickets are available at the UC Ticket Booth.

McDonnell, who has performed at colleges across the nation, appeared on the television show "Star Search" in 1988. He also has performed on shows such as "Into the Night," "Comic Strip Live," "Showtime Comedy Club Network," and "Evening at the Improv."

McDonnell's humor has been described as an everyman's approach to the world around us. His show includes newsworthy items, such as censorship, the media, politics and racism, and he presents them in a way that helps people see the issues in a humorous way, according to a press release distributed by the UC. The featured performer for Saturday night's show is Joey Bennich, a comedian from Houston, who also has performed at many colleges. Brian Krylowicz, a Tech student, will open the show. He placed third in last year's comedy competition.

The Fourth Annual Comedy Competition will be Feb. 5. The contest allows Tech students to gain exposure and to win prizes.

Ceci Lou of UC Programs said the first show in September sold out three days in advance and added that only one more show will be offered this year.

Non-alcoholic beverages and snacks will be available at the show which is open to all ages.

Production tells story of Dadist

"The Mysteries and What's So Funny!" is a dance-music-theater production that presents the life of French Dadaist, Marcel Duchamp. The play will be presented at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Texas Tech University Center.

Vicki Williamson, cultural events program assistant, said the show promises to entertain several people because of the diverse combination of unique stage settings and profound subject matter.

"Duchamp was the creator of Dadaism, which is very ground-breaking work," she said.

Tickets cost $8 for Tech students and $14 for the public.

Do girls belong on the football field?

JAKE RIGDON

I thoroughly enjoy all sports - men's and women's. In fact, here at Tech, the volleyball team is ranked 15th in the Volleyball Monthly poll and 17th in the coaches poll. To me, any ranked team deserves a great deal of excitement and attention.

Also, preseason polls rank the women's basketball team as the 16th best team in the nation, despite the losses of several key members from last year's squad. I think it is about time that a Tech team received some national recognition.

But quite frankly, I don't think that women's sports are quite up to par with men's sports — yet.

Let's take away sports like track and field and various aquatic competitions. Men, for whatever reason, are simply built differently than women. The average man is built naturally bigger than the average woman.

However, sports like football, basketball, baseball and hockey have been traditionally male-dominated sports. Why is this? I think the main reason is only because women's sports are a bit behind male sports.

The reason for this is simple.

As a youth, "Dick" was told to go out and throw the football with his dad, while "Jane" was told to play with her dolls. This might be an obsolete point nowadays, but this once happened on a regular basis. When a girl wanted to play ball, she was called a "tom-boy." She wasn't encouraged to play with the boys.

What does this do to women sports for those who do go on? Because of what society dictates to us, this puts women's sports at a disadvantage.

And as far as a new ruling that allows women to participate in junior high and high school football in Texas, I don't think the ruling was a smart move. In a recent Dallas Morning News, Cathy Harasta talked to several doctors who spoke out about the new ruling.

"Puberty is when the physical disparity becomes significant," Dr. Tarek Souryal told the Morning News. "Puberty is the turning point because the testosterone starts circulating in the males. When you're talking about contact sports, physical differences are a major difference. As a general rule, high school girls playing would be the equivalent of junior high school kids against high school boys."

There is probably nothing that the average female can do athletically that the average male cannot do. But as far as the physical differences and society's past faux pas in not allowing women to participate in sports, I don't think allowing women to compete in male dominated sports is very wise.

I think basketball, golf, volleyball and other various sports have the right idea. They have women competing against other women. If women want to play football or baseball or whatever, I think they should be competing against other women.

Rugby players trying to overcome 'crazy' stereotype

BY CASEY WESTENRIEDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

To most people, rugby is synonymous with crazy — a delusion the Texas Tech rugby club would like to steer clear of.

Rugby team captain Bobby Medigovich said playing rugby requires a clear head.

"Rugby is really a thinking game more than just a physical game," Medigovich said. "You have to be very fit and you have to understand the rules of the game. (A rugby player) has to be well rounded and he has to understand the game of rugby."

Rugby was invented in 1868 when the founder of the game, William Webb Ellis, was playing soccer and broke the rules.

"(Ellis) was playing soccer one day when he picked up the ball and ran with it. The other players said, 'you can't do that playing soccer' so he said, 'OK, I'll make my own game,'" Medigovich explained.

The first rugby game was played in Rugby, England in the same year.

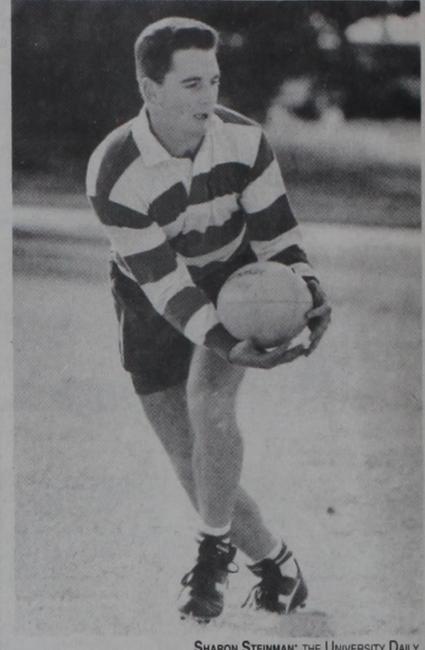

"Rugby is the fore-founder of football," Medigovich said. "A lot of the offensive line comes from the idea of the scrum (a rugby formation). Also the modern day fair catch in football is originally from the mark in rugby and the touchdown comes from rugby where you actually have to touch the ball down. In rugby it's called a try."

A recent change in rugby rules has changed the amount of points on a try from four to five points.

"Injuries are pretty high," Medigovich said.

"It's higher at (the college level) because most of the people who play rugby out here have played football before so we're playing rugby with a football background. Most of us try to play a little like Lawrence Taylor and sometimes we forget we don't have pads on."

The Tech rugby team is comprised of students and Medigovich said anyone interested can meet with the # Raiders return to win column with 'enthusiastic' victory over Baylor

WACO (Special) — The Texas Tech women's volleyball team returned to the winning track Wednesday with a four-game win over the Baylor Bears 15-6, 15-12, 13-15 and 15-4.

With the win the Red Raiders upped their record to 18-5 and 6-3 in the Southwest Conference, while Baylor fell to 19-11 and 2-7 in league play.

"We played hard all night," Tech coach Mike Jones said after the match. "We had a lot of enthusiasm and that was good especially the way Baylor played the whole match especially in the middle two games."

Senior outside hitter Kim Gosselin led the team in kills with 17 as she hit .333 with one block assist. Erica Ruegg returned to the lineup and garnered 13 kills and a .250 hitting percentage. Ruegg led the team with four solo blocks.

Junior outside hitter Chris Fehrle also had 13 kills, while sophomore setter Ginger Carter had 43 assists and 18 digs.

Tech hit .203 as a team, while holding the Bears to a .119 hitting percentage.
