Petitioners draw closer to signature goal

BY LYDIA GUAJARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In a press conference Friday, Lubbock City Council members T.J. Patterson and Maggie Trejo and Lubbock attorney Mike Chappell announced locations to sign a petition authorizing an election to legalize beer and wine sales.

If the allotted number of signatures are collected, an election will be called in Justice of the Peace precincts 4, 5, 6 and 7.

Several hundred signatures have been collected, Chappell said.

"We have received several hundred phone calls of people wanting to sign the petition and not knowing where to sign it," he said.

The organizers announced Friday that residents of the precincts can sign petitions at neighborhood Town and Country convenience stores. Residents who wish to sign the petition must provide a voter registration card for proof of residency.

The petitions have been in the stores since Friday and will remain there until organizers have collected the necessary amount of signatures to call for an election. Thirty-five percent of registered voters must sign the petition.

"We had an employer here in Lubbock call us this week and tell us that he had 200 employees who wanted to sign the petition," Patterson said. "That is a sign that the economic train is on the track and in motion."

Petitions also can be found at other locations within the precincts. Owners of Stovall Yamaha, Hair by Diane and Montgomery Furniture have requested the petition be placed in their businesses.

Patterson said the legalization of beer and wine sales is not a moral issue, but an economic one.

"I am an instrument in this effort," he said. "I am only thinking about tomorrow and the future."

The organizers predict beer and wine sales will increase Lubbock's revenue. However, Interim City Manager Bob Cass said he is not sure how much Lubbock would benefit from the sales if the issue were to pass.

"There is no way to gauge the amount of revenue brought in by the sales of beer and wine in the city," Cass said. "I know we would not fix any of our budget around what may or may not be brought in by the sales of the beer and wine."

The legalization of beer and wine sales within Lubbock has been discussed before, but never has been brought to vote, Chappell said.

Petition organizers have turned in the allotted number of signatures from precincts 4 and 5 and expect the county clerk's office to call for an election in those precincts within 25 days.

"Law provides that the country clerks call for an election within 30 days of the time that we turn in the petitions," Chappell said.

Columbia declares state of emergency

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—President Cesar Gaviria declared a national state of emergency Sunday after more than 30 bombs exploded across Colombia overnight, killing at least nine people and wounding 60.

Police said it was not known whether guerrillas or drug traffickers were to blame. Gaviria made the announcement after calling an emergency Security Council meeting with his Cabinet to discuss measures to combat Colombia's 35-year-old rebel insurgency.

The state of emergency will be in force for 90 days and during that period the government will assume extraordinary legislative powers.

Well explodes, no injuries reported

HAWKINS (AP)—Drillers hit a natural gas pocket and an Exxon oil well exploded in a giant yellow ball early Sunday, forcing 31 families from their homes in this East Texas town.

No injuries were reported.

"It's still burning," firefighter Larry Pack said Sunday afternoon. "It'll probably be burning for three to four days."

Exxon spokeswoman Jean Cole said Gibson Drilling Co. of Kilgore, under contract, was drilling at 2,100 feet when the well ignited at about 1 a.m. Ms. Cole did not know how many workers were there.

Gibson officials did not immediately return a telephone call Sunday afternoon.

Hawkins Fire Department dispatcher Roy Robertson said the blaze was under control.

But, Robertson said: "It's got the whole sky lit up."

1992 VOTE POLITICS

Dole calls for Iran-Contra pardon

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole on Sunday called for an investigation of Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh and said President Bush should consider pardoning all defendants in the scandal.

Dole called Walsh's office "a Democratic hotbed of Democratic activist lawyers." A special prosecutor from the Justice Department should be brought in to determine "whether or not politics played any part" in a new indictment of ex-defense secretary Caspar Weinberger, Dole said on CBS's "Face the Nation."

Walsh, a Republican, was deputy attorney general in the Eisenhower administration.

Walsh denied there was any political motivation in the second indictment of Weinberger, handed up four days before the election. It disclosed Bush's role in a Jan. 7, 1986, meeting about the Reagan White House's arms-for-hostages deals with Iran.

Thompson Hall gets head start on flu season

BY JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Cold and flu seasons will arrive soon and Texas Tech's Student Health Services is offering immunizations to Tech students for a nominal fee.

The immunizations offered at Thompson Hall include influenza shots, tetanus boosters and a measles, mumps and rubella shot. The flu vaccine costs $7, the MMR shot costs $5 and the tetanus booster costs $7.

The flu shot is required every year to be effective. "We advise everyone at Tech to receive the influenza vaccine," said Robin Brewton, health education coordinator for student health. "Flu season is coming up, so are finals. Students can prevent being sick from the flu at finals or being too sick to study by receiving the flu vaccine."

Brewton said the three criteria for whether students should receive the MMR shot are if they were born after 1956, if they never have had the measles and if they never have had the measles shot or the booster.

MMR's should be received at least two times in a person's lifetime. The first shot usually is given at 18 months of age. The second one is given in adulthood.

"We were really aggressive last year in attacking the measles problem at Tech," Brewton said. "As a consequence no one came up with measles at Tech, while there was a serious problem in South Texas."

Students should receive the measles vaccine at least two weeks before traveling to an area where they may be exposed to the virus.

"Measles usually pops up around spring break time or shortly thereafter," Brewton said. "Measles is a serious disease, the side effects can be severe. If you get it, you can be quarantined and be out of school for three weeks. We definitely advise all students to get the measles vaccination."

People who are allergic to eggs or egg products should not receive the flu or measles vaccines because they are made from an egg grown non-infectious virus that activates the immune system without causing infection.

The tetanus booster should be received every 10 years.

New recruitment program targets minority students, family members

BY GENE VYBIRAL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The College of Agriculture is kicking off a new recruitment program beginning this fall to educate minority families and students to the many opportunities in agriculture, said Marvin Cepica, associate dean of the college.

Rory Thomas, coordinator of recruitment and placement, said, "Up until now, when we talked about minorities in agriculture we talked about women."

She said the program is similar to other programs in the college in that it is individualized. The program focuses mainly on the Hispanic culture in San Antonio, the Rio Grande Valley, El Paso and the Lubbock area.

Thomas said the department will work with students in the selective towns to assist in the education and recruitment process.

"We address all minorities, but there is a need to focus on certain culture in certain areas," Cepica said. "We are not ignoring other minorities."

He said there always has been an interest in the department for attracting minorities to agriculture.

Thomas said DuPont granted $5,000 a year to assist the new programs during the next three years with finances and scholarships to attract interested students.

She said the program will extend the college's recruitment phone-attempts to include bilingual speakers. Thomas said the program should make people more comfortable by allowing them to speak their native language.

"It's hard getting anyone to understand how many opportunities there are in agriculture," she said.

Cepica said the college is approaching the program through a retention program.

"When they graduate, we are still obligated to serving them," he said.

Cepica said agriculture is a misunderstood industry, and it is important to educate the prospective students and their families.

Tech society remembers POWs, MIAs

BY JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech history professor James R. Reckner addressed the United States' military history Friday during Tech's 12th annual POW/MIA Vigil.

The Texas Tech Air Force ROTC's Arnold Air Society conducted the vigil Friday and Saturday to honor the prisoners of war and missing in action of wars the United States has been involved in.

"In the case of MIAs in Southeast Asia, I believe the American people have been offered, to use a phrase made popular elsewhere, an orchestrated litany of lies, whose sole function has been to hide from the uncompromising light of public scrutiny the dishonorable and infamous manner in which our men were abandoned," Reckner said.

Reckner, a Vietnam veteran and a retired U.S. Navy lieutenant commander, also suggested a method of handling any politicians who intentionally leave American servicemen behind in future conflicts.

"I believe that it should be made an impeachable offense for any future government official, at the end of a conflict, to hide through official secrecy any information concerning the existence, or possible existence of American servicemen and women not returned to full freedom after a conflict," Reckner said.

The severity of AIDS

Thank you, Magic. Let us put a qualifier on that statement: "Thank you, Magic, for stepping out of professional basketball." Why the qualifier? Because Magic, in an interview on ABC's "PrimeTime Live" Thursday, deserves no praise for his remarks regarding his sexual exploits as a member of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Too young to go to court

A lawsuit involving sexual harassment between two children is detracting from people with legitimate complaints rather than giving evidence that sexual harassment begins on the playground. The parents of a 9-year-old girl are charging that an Illinois school district was negligent in allowing a boy to sexually harass their daughter in the first and third grades.

Clinton stands for hope

To the editor: On Tuesday, the people of the United States voted for hope, not fear... people, not big business... and a positive change, not a stagnant status quo. George Bush ran out of ideas long ago about how to run this country, but he did come up with a way to pass the blame: Congress, the media, bad timing... shall I go on? Bill Clinton, however, came up with solutions, fresh ideas, a clear direction.

George Bush talked about tabloid sensationalism like Vietnam, the draft and family values, even dreaming up a few lies about his opponents. Bill Clinton talked about jobs, health care, education... George Bush figured that his ability to get us into a war was enough to assure his re-election, so why bother with this pesty little economy? At his convention, we saw Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell say that homosexuals did not deserve equal rights, that anyone who was not on the far right was basically opposed to all that is American and Christian.

During the debates we saw Bush look at his watch, criticize, badger and avoid the real issues. We saw Clinton look right in the eye of the person asking the question, responding personally and directly. Clinton foresaw the way George Bush would try to categorize America into "us" vs. "them," the "conservatives" vs. the "liberals," the "good" vs. the "evil," which is a shame when there are people living in cardboard boxes.

America is in good hands. Bill Clinton is young, vigorous, full of energy and has one thing over Bush that no one can argue about: he has desire, a fire in his belly to do something about this country, not sit on his hands and read his wife's book about the White House dog. Dan Quayle hit the nail on the head when he said that "if Clinton runs America like he ran his campaign, then we will be all right." After all, George Bush ran 1988-1992 like he ran his 1988 campaign — nasty and belligerent or indifferent. So, Dan, I'll give you this one. So does Al Gore, according to his speech on election night. Clinton stood strong against negative attacks, several of which were outright lies and stayed focused on the issues. He won because he was willing to lose, not lowering himself to his opponent's level, and, as Gore says, "Where I come from we have a name for that: character."

But enough about George Bush; the election is over. He still is the president, however, and even Clinton supporters must respect that, just like Bush supporters should respect our president-elect. Bill Clinton is not perfect, I realize, but he has been voted as the best man for the job. So, I say put aside stereotypical images of the old Democratic party and open your mind to all the possibilities of the next four years.

Give females a chance

To the editor: This letter is in response to the article written by Jake Rigdon regarding girls in football. Based on the opinions expressed in his article, I felt it should have been titled "Do women belong in a man's world?" and this article really made me angry. I spent four years of my life fighting society's "past faux pas" because this "Jane" was ALLOWED to take apart and put together bikes as a kid while the dolls were left for bedtime.

I was the only female firefighter at a station at Homestead Air Force Base in Florida where people were always giving me the "this is a traditionally male-dominated career" routine. I wonder why it has always been male-dominated, especially when I was able to haul a two-and-a-half inch-hose up eight flights of stairs when at least two of my male counterparts were unable to successfully accomplish this feat the first two times they made the attempt. If women aren't quite the "man's" equal in football or basketball, it is because we haven't been "allowed" to play quite as long. I think Mr. Rigdon needs to open his eyes and his mind and realize that MOST women, when given that same time and opportunity as their male counterparts, can be equally successful in their endeavors whether their physiological makeup is different or not. I agree that there were times, in the fire department, where things were harder for me because I was not as physically strong as some of the guys, but that's where mind over matter came into play. Because women don't always have the necessary brawn, they often rely on their brain to accomplish tasks like raising a three fly ladder by themselves. If all people followed the tradition of male-dominated careers, we wouldn't have the many brilliant female surgeons or scientists or even college professors that we now have. So, Mr. Rigdon, I'm not much of a basketball player, but I'll meet you on the fire ground any day!

President Bush not to blame for every ill

To the editor: Is our beloved UD trying to pull a "Clinton" (flip-flop) on its readers? To swallow the general perceptions of both my party (the Democrats) and liberal media mavens over the past campaign cycle, one would conclude that our supposedly decrepit economy, big city crime, the lack of AIDS cure, and a host of other socioeconomic ills were the sole fault of these nasty Republicans and their evil leaders, Reagan and Bush... especially the latter. So, Bush had to compromise on the 1991 tax deal (put together by the Democrats) in order to secure Congressional support for his Persian Gulf actions? Sorry, George, you can't split the rap. Our check-bouncing representatives were unwitting pawns. You alone are culpable for that dastardly deed. Yet, an editorial in the Nov. 5 UD attempts to convince us that "if our economic problems should worsen" with the next administration, "Clinton, alone, cannot be blamed." After all, "like any man," (except, of course, for Bush) "who has ever served in the position, he will have hundreds of people in Congress... who may veto every bill he tries to get passed..." What's going on here? If the economy doesn't improve fast enough with a moderate-conservative Republican president, "the buck" rests in the Oval Office, and it's time for a change. If the economy staggers under Clinton, everybody gets a thimble of blame, and it's time to fix the system or fault political opposition. Now that's prime, double standard "waffle" making.

In the Wall Street Journal on Oct. 21, Alan Reynolds, director of economic research at the Hudson Institute, documents how Clinton and Gore lied about the history and present status of our economy. Now that Clinton and Al are safely elected, they can do themselves and the country a favor by boosting consumer confidence with the truth. Bush is leaving with the fifth lowest MI "misery index" (inflation plus unemployment) since the Great Depression. Reagan had the lowest MI; the worst (twice Bush's 10.5 rating) occurred during the Carter years, the last time liberal Democrats held the White House. Bill and Al may want to omit the last bit of history. In the most "authoritative study to date," the McKinsey Global Institute found that we are, and have been since the 1970s, No. 1 in worker productivity... the "ultimate yardstick of international competitiveness," according to the New York Times on Oct. 13. By the way, the study's authors are all long-time Democrats whose expertise is economics, not mass communications. G.S. Chong

Sacrifice won't help rebuild America

RUSSELL BAKER

I have reconsidered my position on sacrifice. Last week I was all for it. My policy was: plenty of sacrifice for all hands. That was what the nation needed, I thought. How wrong I was. My new policy is toleration. Let those who want to sacrifice go to it. Let's be tolerant. Let's not deny the individual right to sacrifice. Just leave me out of it, please, and you, too, if you like. My original passion for sacrifice was the result of thinking in slogans instead of in dollars and cents. One of the catchier slogans now in circulation is: "What this country needs is a good bout of sacrifice." Doesn't that sound wonderful? Heroic? Romantic? Kennedyesque? ("Ask not what your country..." Makes you want to take to your rocking chair, wrap up in your shawl and tell the young 'uns how it was in World War II, having your gasoline ration held to three gallons a week. Ross Perot's first campaign exploited this patriotic yen for pain. Its economic program called for wringing money out of one and all, including the struggling classes. Whether Perot remained devoted to Draconian economics in Campaign II was unclear, but his big show in Dallas the other day didn't dispel my suspicion that he is still foursquare for heroism. Perot was a big reason for my change of policy. The poet Virgil said, "Beware the Greeks bearing gifts," which has no bearing here except to introduce my Uncle Charlie, who said, "Beware the millionaire calling for sacrifice." Uncle Charlie flourished back in the Depression before the billionaire was invented. Uncle Charlie was no cynical left-winger either. He was a Republican free enterpriser who detested Franklin Roosevelt and admired the natural rapacity that enables a luckily endowed few to corner the bulk of life's money. He had none of their talent, alas. He was a philosopher. The philosophical mind enabled him to enjoy life without bitterness despite a decade of Depression unemployment, which he survived by hunkering down like the rest of us with the only family member who had a job. He earned his keep by preaching the good old Republican wisdom to a foolishly New Deal household. He believed that fools brought misfortune on themselves and so deserved it. Anyone heeding a millionaire's call for sacrifice was such a high-test fool that he deserved to have his wallet rifled by the ruthless. In addition to the wisdom of Uncle Charlie, a couple of economists lent academic authority to support my policy reversal. They assured me that a policy of sacrifice during hard times is bad economic policy because it will probably deepen a recession by further reducing consumption. Not only that, it may also be a cunning device for redistributing wealth from the pinched classes to the bloated. I suspected these economists of harboring Keynesian economic views loathsome to Republican true believers. They may even be outright Democrats, but the heart of their message — beware the rich preaching sacrifice — was too close to Uncle Charlie's sound Republican wisdom to be ignored. Moreover I needed some scholarly justification for abandoning a policy as noble as sacrifice, and having some economists with me was comforting. Whenever you're opposing something that sounds morally unassailable, arm yourself with a respectable academic argument to lean on. As triumphant Republican conservatives have repeatedly illustrated these past 12 years, an arsenal of academic mumbo-jumbo equips you to dismiss any inconvenient moralizers as intellectually shallow sentimentalists, if not downright boobs. Everything I hear from the recession front suggests there is already a great deal of sacrifice going on: bankrupts being taken in by relatives, grown children coming back to live with parents, sometimes bringing families with them. In short, the ghost of Uncle Charlie is abroad. Families, friends and lovers are already doing the sacrificing, as is proper. The sensible thing is for government to encourage them not scourge them with a Federal Sacrifice Act. Politicians preaching sacrifice right now are just grandstanding, as I was. It's generosity we need, not posturing. Russell Baker is a columnist for the New York Times News Service. © 1992 NYTNS.

Consul generals to discuss North American Free Trade Agreement

Texas Tech Latin American students will sponsor a panel discussion at 7 p.m. today in the University Center's Lubbock Room to discuss the pending North America Free Trade Agreement and the effect it could have on the American labor force.

Panelists for "North America Free Trade Agreement: Accomplishments and Prospects" include consul generals John Hammill of Canada and Jose Navarro of Mexico. Also on the panel are Tech economics professors James Jonish and Roger Troub.

Isaias Rivera, secretary of AELA, the Latin American students' organization, said the panel discussion's purpose is to educate people about the effects the free trade agreement could have.

"It's time for the American youth to get educated," he said.

Rivera said he believes the trade agreement will decrease the number of jobs in the United States while boosting those in Mexico and possibly Canada.

Rivera, a native of Mexico, said the trade agreement will decrease the number of American blue collar jobs, but could increase the number of high-technological jobs.

Rivera said Hammill also will discuss the trade agreement Canada currently has with the United States.

Purveyor of blue-brown eye experiment addresses racial issues

BY JENNIFER SANDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Racism and discrimination can be determined by the color of a person's eyes. This observation was made about 20 years ago by Jane Elliott, adapter of the "blue eyes, brown eyes" discrimination experiment.

Elliott spoke about her experiment and the effects of racism and discrimination Saturday as a part of the diversity conference this weekend.

Elliott, who spoke Saturday at Texas Tech's Allen Theatre, was a third-grade teacher in Iowa when Martin Luther King Jr. was killed. She said that only after his death did she realize how strong racism and discrimination were in America, even at the third-grade level.

This is when she decided to try her experiment by letting blue-eyed children in her all-white classroom be the 'inferior race' by treating them as minorities are often treated by whites, who were the brown-eyed children. She said the children immediately picked up on the differences and acted as expected. The end result was that even the smartest blue-eyed children eventually had less self-confidence and no longer felt smart or acted productively because of the way brown-eyed people treated them, which is comparable to how minorities have felt through the years, she said.

Her experiment became famous throughout the United States and used as an example for many future discrimination experiments and discussions. She has repeated her experiment many times with children and adults.

"I learned that I did not know how I looked to other people of color," she said.

"I was an arrogant, condescending, vicious white bitch. Most females behave this way and don't even realize it."

Elliott said she even changed her teaching patterns by not glorifying Davey Crockett, Daniel Boone, Abraham Lincoln and George Washington in the classroom because they were all racists in some form or another. She added that scientific studies have proven that the first known modern person was a black female and the first male was a result of mutation of genes.

"If the first modern person is a black female and the Bible is correct, then we are praying to a black female," she said. "If we go by what we've been taught in Sunday school, then black people are praying to a white male and females are praying to a male."

Elliott, who addressed the recent controversy over the Pikes and Fashion Board's "Party in the Projects," said she was angry over the incident, not only at the participants, but also at the administration.

"During the week of orientation, new students should have been told that parties like these will not be permitted, and if they couldn't handle it, then go to another university," she said. "If you allow this kind of thing to happen, then pretty soon, it's going to happen to you. This game was done in ignorance.

"If you send these people into the black and Hispanic neighborhoods, then the punishment really goes to them. You are asking the victims to repair the damage. They won't go in with open minds and you're forcing people to put up with it again. These people are not responsible to train the white folks about racism," she said.

Elliott said comments, such as, "I just see people as people," "We're all alike under the skin" and "We should talk about people like we're all the same" do not make a person a non-racist. Instead it makes them more of a racist because the comments are not always sincere, and they are not true.

Procrastinators should not put off overcoming vice, instructor advises

BY MIGUEL BONILLA
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

When Jacky Dumas, a senior psychology major from Monahans, has papers due or exams to study for the next day, he does what almost every college student does when the going gets tough.

He procrastinates.

"I'm usually talking to somebody, sleeping, watching TV or doing things that don't have to be done," he said. "I'll do something else instead of doing whatever I have to do."

Marilee Merithew, a graduate assistant in college education psychology and instructor in overcoming procrastination for the Programs for Academic Support Services center, said there are steps students can take to overcome the procrastination.

"The first thing you've got to realize is that you are not alone," she said. "The sooner you realize you have it, the sooner you can overcome it."

Merithew said several students do not realize that they are not the only ones who procrastinate. The next thing students can do is reanalyze their study skills and time management skills.

She said that in reanalyzing their skills, they will realize where they are falling short.

Then students should make a schedule that emphasizes the study and time management habits that are unique to the student.

A third important step in overcoming procrastination is using extra help to improve study habits. Students can receive individual advising with graduate students or even hire a private tutor at the PASS center.

Raiders split in weekend matches at Cornhusker Challenge

The No. 17 Texas Tech women's volleyball team split its matches this weekend at the Cornhusker Challenge in Lincoln, Neb.

The Red Raiders triumphed in three games over Wichita State, 15-13, 15-12 and 15-9 Saturday.

With the win the Raiders upped their record to 19-6 overall, while remaining 6-3 in Southwest Conference play.

Junior middle blocker Erica Ruegg led the team with 17 kills, hitting .406, while she had two solo blocks and seven block assists.

Freshman middle blocker Jennifer Cohn had 12 kills, while amassing a .409 hitting percentage.

Cohn was named to the all-tournament team, while Nebraska's Eliene Shannon was named the tourney's most valuable player.

On Friday, the Raiders lost to the No. 5 Nebraska Cornhuskers in three games.

Tech will conclude SWC action Wednesday, facing the Rice Owls in Houston.

The Raiders last home game of the season will benext Tuesday against Southwest Texas State.

U.S. defeats Sweden in World Cup of Golf

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Fred Couples and Davis Love III both sank birdie putts on the 18th hole Sunday, giving the United States team a one-shot victory over defending champion Sweden in the World Cup of Golf.

It was a heartbreaking setback for the Swedes, who had taken a two-shot lead to the 17th tee after Per-Ulrik Johansson, who shot a 65, knocked in a 45-foot putt for an eagle on the par-5 16th hole.

The putt offset a bogey by teammate Anders Forsbrand, who finished with a 70, and a birdie by Couples, who matched Johansson's 65.

Cobb, Owls top Raiders 34-3; Tech falls to 3-6, 2-4 in SWC

BY CHARLES POLLET
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After records had been broken and the dust began to settle, the scoreboard read: Rice 34, Texas Tech 3.

And Trevor Cobb was directing the cleaning brigade, replacing old standards of greatness with new, improved numbers.

The Owls senior running back ran roughshod over the Red Raiders, collecting 155 yards and one touchdown on 33 carries.

Those numbers translate into one Rice record, two Southwest Conference records, and several personal records.

Cobb became the first Owl to ever rush for more than 1,000 yards in three straight seasons with 1,037. He joins Texas' Chris Gilbert, SMU's Reggie Dupard and Houston's Chuck Weatherspoon for the same honor in SWC history. Cobb extended his conference record for career carries to 1,011 and his SWC all-purpose yardage record to 6,013.

"Trevor Cobb is Trevor Cobb," said Tech senior linebacker Mike Liscio. "He's up for the Heisman. He's a great athlete."

The Pasadena native also moved ahead of Eric Dickerson into second place on the SWC career rushing list at 4,599. Darren Lewis of Texas A&M holds the record with 5,012.

Raider receiver Lloyd Hill joined Cobb atop a school record book when he became the first Tech player ever to break the 1,000 yards receiving plateau in a season. His six catches for 111 yards vaulted him ahead of Donny Anderson for catches in a season. Hill has 65 receptions this year, and Anderson had 60 catches in 1965.

While Cobb and Hill spent most of the afternoon surpassing old marks, one statistic was determined early — the winner and the loser.

With little more than a minute ticked off the clock, Rice's Larry Izzo blocked the Raiders' opening drive punt. One play and three seconds later, Cobb powered in from one yard out. That was all the scoring the Owls needed.

"It kind of gets you down early," said Tech defensive end Shawn Jackson, referring to the blocked punt. "It makes you wonder if today is going to be one of those days where we can't get anything going. It was."

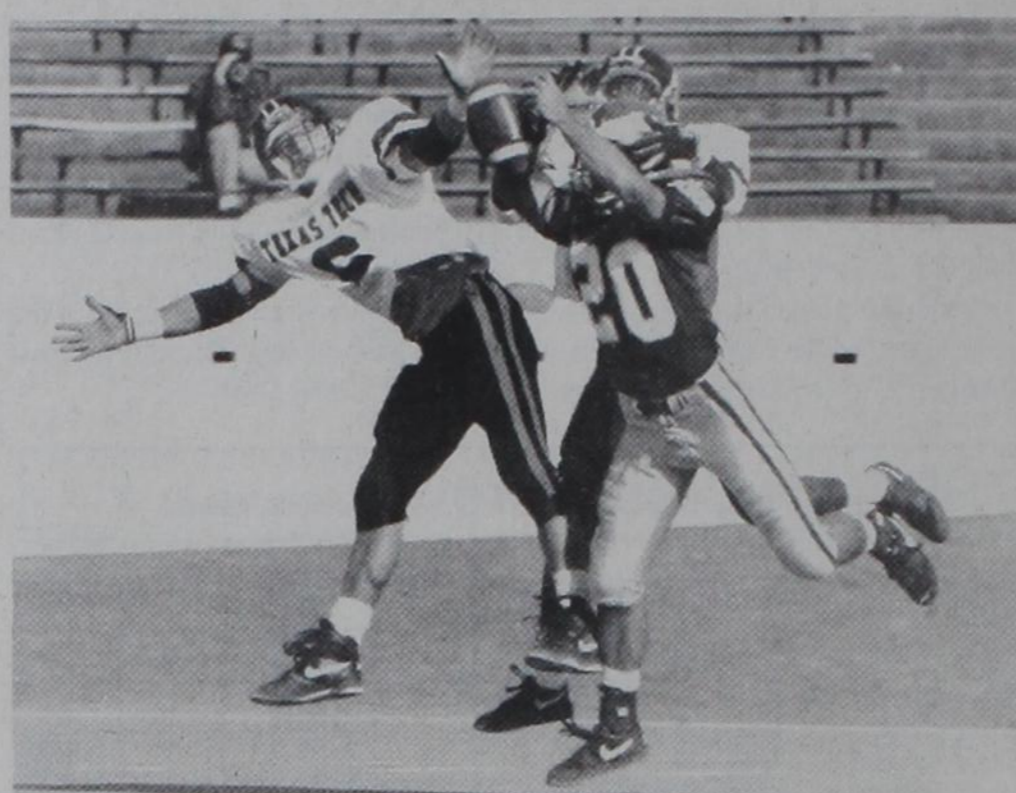

The Raiders' offense, under the direction of backup quarterback Jason Clemmons for the third week, never produced.

Tech outgained Rice 403 to 360 in total offense and 19 to 16 in first downs, but failed to convert on third and fourth downs. The Raiders were 4 of 18 on third down conversions and 1 of 4 on fourth down.

"I think our intensity was there. We were never in sync," head coach Spike Dykes said. "Teams that aren't in very good sync have a really hard time winning football games."

After kicking a field goal in the third quarter to cut the Owls' lead to 20-3, the Raiders lost what little sync they had mustered.

Rice played three downs and punted on the ensuing series, and the Raiders began on their own 30-yard line. Clemmons completed four straight passes to position Tech at the Owls' 48. Clemmons hit Hill for a 21-yard gain on the next play, but an offensive holding call brought the ball back to the Raider 34—a 39-yard turnaround.

With 6:10 left to play in the game, the Raiders were again at the Rice 48 and moving the ball. Clemmons completed a 23-yard pass to receiver Mookie Mitchell only to have it wiped out by an illegal motion penalty—a 28-yard difference.

"We just didn't play," said Clemmons, who finished the day 27 of 45 with three interceptions—two returned for touchdowns by Rice's Sean Washington.

"We didn't prepare to play, we didn't come to play, things went bad, and we folded," he said.

Tech, preseason favorites to challenge A&M for the conference title, fell to 3-6 with the loss, 2-3 in the SWC. Rice improved to 4-4, 3-2, keeping its outside chances of a bowl bid alive.

Liscio said despite not being able to have a winning record, there is incentive to win the final two games.

"It's better to finish with five wins than three," he said. "For the seniors, I don't want to be known as the worst team Tech ever had."
