NATO blockade to stop ethnic war

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)-NATO agreed Wednesday to impose a naval blockade on Yugoslavia under a U.N. effort to intensify pressure on Belgrade to halt ethnic fighting in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Romania announced it had begun stopping boats on the Danube River to check for contraband cargos under a new Security Council resolution allowing the use of force to block such ship-

The new U.N. effort is designed to cut off goods and fuel that have been getting through to Yugoslavia despite 6-month-old trade sanctions. Serbia's help for Serb militants in Bosnia is widely blamed for the war that erupted after Bosnia's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence on Feb. 29.

Governor's office doubles employees

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards, who frequently calls on state agencies to tighten their belts, has nearly doubled the number of employees in her office in her first two years, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

The Houston Post reported that the gubernatorial payroll has grown from 185 employees as Republican Gov. Bill Clements stepped down to 337 workers as of Nov. 10, according to figures kept by the state comptroller's office.

In response to the report, Richards said her staff needs to be trimmed but defended her office's growth because "this has been a far more activist office than probably in a long time."

Richards also blamed some of the increase in employees to responsibilities given her by state lawmakers.

Inspector closes passport case

WASHINGTON (AP) - A State Department investigation concluded Wednesday that officials who snooped in Bill Clinton's passport files had been trying to help President Bush win re-election.

State Department inspector general Sherman M. Funk, disclosing the results of a monthlong probe, said:

"There was indeed an attempt to use the Department of State, the records and the people of the Department of State to influence the outcome of the election.

"That is a very heinous activity and shame on the Department of State that it happened."

The two most senior officials held responsible were the assistant secretary of state for consular affairs Elizabeth Tamposi, dismissed last week by Bush, and the acting assistant secretary of state for legislative affairs, Steven Berry, also disciplined.

Broadway to light up once again

BY LYDIA GUAJARDO THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock, the Committee of Churches in central Lubbock and area merchants have begun work on the second annual Lights on Broadway Holiday Festival.

The festival will follow Carol of Lights activities on Texas Tech Dec. 4, and organizers will offer Lubbock residents a sneak preview of the events the night before.

Organizers of the event are taking applications for parade entries, Broadway Street carolers and tumbleweed decorating contests.

Country and western radio station KLLL-FM will sponsor the Tumbleweed Christmas Tree Contest for the second year and will award three cash prizes to the top three winners.

The evening also will include an appearance by Santa Claus and a parade featuring church choirs and area

Parade coordinator Bob Goodwin said he encourages anyone who wants to be a part of the parade to enter with a Christmas theme. Applicants should not submit a Santa Claus exhibit because the parade already has one.

The parade will begin at University Avenue and Broadway Street and will extend to Texas Avenue.

Because of the timing of the parade, several school bands are unable to participate, but the parade will feature an appearance by the Tech band early in the evening.

Goodwin said he welcomes church bands or area organizations to volunteer for the parade.

Broadway Street merchants are being asked to take part in the festival by keeping their businesses open during the night's activities and by lighting the buildings each night until Jan.

Church choirs also will take part in the activities by singing carols up and see LIGHTS, page 3

A form of gun control

In hard times like these, people tend to take a hard line against

But sometimes solutions go too far, as is the case with proposed legislation from State Rep. Bill Carter, R-Richland Hills. Carter has introduced a bill that would allow citizens to carry concealed handguns. For $150, individuals more than 21 years old who have passed a background check and taken 15 hours of safety classes would be issued a carrying permit.

Certainly there are few who don't feel threatened by the growing wave of violent crime. In such a dangerous society, it is natural to want to carry a gun for protection.

In the long run, however, society is not made any safer by allowing people to carry guns. In fact, it only adds to the problem.

When the public is allowed to arm itself, the risk is run of innocent people being killed because of a misunderstanding of motives. What might be considered to be threatening behavior may turn out to be totally innocent. Is 15 hours of gun safety training sufficient in teaching a person not to shoot until sure that a stranger has bad intentions? Probably not.

A large percentage of homicides transpire because gun owners use their weapons in the heat of the moment. Allowing people to carry guns would increase the threat of a minor traffic accident or barroom altercation escalating into murder.

Despite contrary claims from Carter, wholesale carrying of guns only makes things worse. Citizens should work together as a community with police to fight crime, instead of isolating themselves further by hiding in fear behind guns.

If individuals are that concerned about being attacked in public, they should learn how to keep from being in a violent situation in the first place. Although some homicides are inevitable, many are the result of not taking proper precautions. Taking steps to keep out of a dangerous situation is, by far, preferable to living dangerously with a gun.

America is a scary place to live these days, but has it reached the point where we all need to carry around guns for safety? If we have, then we might as well use them on ourselves.

A day of clear breathing

Hey you! If you smoke, get off the butt and quit, at least for today. As you all know, or may not know, today is the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout. For many, it's just the 322nd day in 1992, but for others it means trying to get through the next 24 hours without a drag off of death.

Before you nonsmokers start hurling self-righteous babble about how smoking should be outlawed and that all smokers should be forced to quit, stop and have some compassion. Granted, smokers should not have picked up the nasty habit, but if they are participating in the infamous smokeout, they deserve a round of applause. They are making an honest effort to stop a bad habit and should be encouraged.

GREAT AMERICAN TOWNS SMOKEOUT

And for you smokers (that includes you smokeless tobacco users as well) who think the smokeout is a bunch of baloney, stop and consider giving it a try. It takes a considerable amount of willpower for a die-hard nicotine addict to quit for 24 hours.

We won't bore you with lots of statistics about past successes, comparing the dollars saved to the number of participants or whatever. Nobody cares about that. People care about taking part in a national event. It's just a feel-good thing.

Methodist Hospital, St. Mary's Hospital and the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center all have self-help packets for smokers who want to kick the habit. Or at least temporarily punt it.

Nonsmokers can sign "adoption papers" to assist smokers' attempts to avoid nicotine. Signees will comfort stalled smokers in their times of

It's one more fun way to raise awareness about the risks of smoking. For some, it is a challenge to see if they are truly addicted to stogies. For others, it is the first-step in a concerted effort to drop the vice. And for even others, it is an opportunity to help those in the first two groups.

Whether you smoke or not, and whether you take part in today's Smokeout, let's remember the seriousness of the subject. Smoking is not healthy, and the American Cancer Society is doing something about it.

That should be applauded.

Threat of AIDS reason enough to keep gays out of military

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Mr. Hawkins' letter on Wednesday regarding homosexuality as not an issue for the military.

Homosexuality is very much an issue for the military, more so now since we are in the era of AIDS. Since AIDS cannot always be detected before transmission and is incurable, AIDS is a potent threat to all military personnel. Although all homosexuals do not have AIDS, the chance for their getting AIDS is far greater than the average heterosexual. Even though heterosexuals are susceptible to AIDS, the group with the largest AIDS population is homosexual males.

As males are the only persons allowed in combat, the threat of widespread AIDS dissemination is great. Blood flies on the battlefield. Shrapnel cuts through bodies and then flies into another person's body. Surgeons cut themselves and transfer blood through these wounds. Corpsmen and nurses do not always have enough time to change gloves between checking on the wounded in triage. The soldier certainly does not take time to put on gloves before helping his wounded buddy off the battlefield and to safety. What this means is that one person's blood mixes with another person's in war.

AIDS is a real threat in battle, as you can see. Where is the unity in the troops when your comrade at arms is a homosexual and is capable of having AIDS? How many soldiers will be willing to risk getting AIDS to save their homosexual friends? These questions must be answered before a ban on homosexuals in the military is lifted.

So you can see, Mr. Hawkins, homosexuals do pose a very real safety threat to America's armed talk show Tuesday, a female in the Army phoned in and told a story about her encounters with homosexuals in the military. She stated that when she first got into the Army, she was taken to the side by all of the lesbians in her unit and asked, in a round about way, if she was gay or not. When they found out that she was straight, they harassed her continually so as to keep her silent about their lifestyle. When she transferred to Germany, the same things occurred there.

This is not just one isolated incident. She observed the same events in the lesbians' encounters with the other straight women. Where is the good morale here, Mr. Hawkins? Where is the professional integrity you speak about, Mr. Hawkins?

Did you know that Gen. Schwarzkopf used to be a prosecutor for the military and that he prosecuted homosexuals? Imagine, a great American hero prosecuting homosexuals. In fact, he says that the greatest threat to the military from homosexuals is a lack of morale. How can a leader of thousands of troops be wrong about the homosexual lack of morale, Mr. Hawkins?

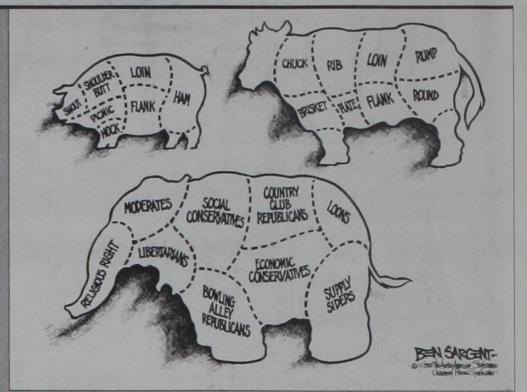

Jeffrey S. Davis

The truth from a homosexual

To the editor:

OK! I've held my peace as long as I can stand it! The debate over homosexuals in the military is merely a catalyst for a much more important discussion which has been bubbling around my soul since the whole homosexuality (damned or acceptable) discussions began, as they are wont to do, at the advent of EVERY semester. I have read the comments and the counter-comments with interest: However, it is not to these seemingly intelligent debates which I respond primarily, although they will be addressed. The main focus of this letter will be a comment upon the seemingly neverending diatribes of the uneducated and judgmental hypocrites who have taken it upon themselves to damn all homosexuals to an eternity of torment for their "chosen lifestyle."

Oddly enough, the majority of the letters relevant (or otherwise) to the issue of homosexuality have been from heterosexual males, who are all, whether pro or con, very quick to make their heterosexuality evident to all the world; insecurity? I On the issue of morale, on a radio think so! My point here is, basically: Who the hell do they think they are? What do they know about the burden of homosexuality? How can they relate? When have they suffered as we (homosexuals) have suffered? Where do they get off? It is not surprising though, really, that they feel qualified to dictate to us, they have done it for years to women and any other minority group. Yet again, another pitiful display of misplaced machismo.

Although I am weary of all the insipid, Bible-thumping, Moral Majority, backwash buffoonery, these are things which cannot and will not change for a long time. People who are so brainwashed and miseducated will not be changed

The most important problem to be addressed is an area in which I see improvement which I would like to encourage. Get educated! Relate before you judge! We are not asking for your approval, so don't flatter yourself, heterosexual America!

Ask any homosexual and she or he will tell you that there is no choice in being homosexual. People choose to experiment. People choose to participate in sexual activities, whether they participate in homosexual, heterosexual or bisexual behavior is determined within memserves — without a choice. Like the color of the skin or the texture of the hair, no one is given a choice as to whether he or she would prefer a penis or a vagina or how they will be motivated to use these organs. This is true, unless there is some heterosexuality aptitude test (taken on a sexuality Scantron) which I missed in the third grade, which is when, by the way, I began discovering the meaning behind my feelings of being different from some.

Question: Do you like asparagus? If you do, do you go around condemning people who don't? If you do, then you should re-evaluate your priorities! Question: Do you consider yourself heterosexual?

Think about it! So just ask anyone to really think realistically about the validity of saying that homosexuality is a choice. Any questions?

Now, something that is a "choice" is "lifestyle." But first the misconception: Homosexuality is not an all-pervasive lifestyle by default, just as not all heterosexuals are solely motivated by sex. These terms are meant only to define the SEXUALITY of an individual, not his or her whole existence. Homosexuals live the same lives as heterosexuals, with some of the same choices and others different. Occasionally, we choose to do things which could be considered gay: bars, clubs, bookstores, parties, etc. But wait, straight people do all of that stuff, too! Amazing! The important point here is this: I am not just homosexual, I am a successful student and a member of the job market, a family guy, a friend. But wait, that description could be applied to a heterosexual male, too! There is only one difference: He has a girlfriend, and I have a boyfriend! Surely that fact is not all-consuming enough to define either of us! Finally, regarding choices: yes, I choose to live the lifestyle to some extent and other times it has no relevance. This is a choice faced by all. My friends say I "flame": but this is a choice, not a requirement, an aspect of my personality which I choose to accentuate. It has no bearing on the fact that I am homosexual, all it means is that I am flamboyant. So don't damn me to hell for something about which I had no choice. Damn me for my choice to say to HETEROSEXUALS: "Pity they can breed!" But realize that if you do damn me, you are the pity!

> Porter competed on beam, floor and vault exercises. She was unable to compete on the uneven bars, but her scores on the other three events were averaged to give her an all-around score. She said her favorite event is the floor exercise.

She won several local titles, but one of the highlights of her career was qualifying for the level-6 state meet in the 15-and-over age division in 1991. Porter was honored by the Gymnastics Association of Texas in early October and was presented an award by the United States Gymnastics Federation. # Foster grandparent shares love at school

Retiree volunteers time with mentally retarded

When Ruby Joiner comes home at the end of the day, she takes home feeling of her life.

She gets this feeling just by making the same thing." children happy

Joiner is a volunteer foster grandparent at Lubbock State School. She has been with the program since 1989 and has kept the same two clients, who are mentally retarded, since then.

She said the reason she decided to become a foster grandparent was to continue her desire to help people, and as well.

"My mother was a foster grandparent at the same place," she said. "I didn't know how old you had to be to qualify to be a grandparent, so I went there and checked into it, and I was old enough."

TV moderator reflects on different appearance

WASHINGTON (AP) - You wouldn't say the camera exactly loves "Meet the Press" moderator Tim Russert. But they've become pals.

"The fact that I don't look like a typical TV person probably underscores my credibility. I hope so."

So says this newsman whose pleasant, beefy appearance is less that of an emerging star than a big cartoon pooch who lives to chase the neighbor's cat. Aptly, Russert goes after Washington's power elite with his own brand of zesty doggedness every week.

If Russert thinks like a pol, good reason. An attorney, the Buffalo native served as counselor to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and as chief of staff for U.S. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Then, in 1984, Russert came to NBC News as the executive in charge of the "Today" show. Three years ago, he moved to Washington as NBC's bureau chief and a senior vice president.

After coaching from the sidelines a few months, Russert went into the game when a slot on the "MTP" panel needed filling.

Morris reaches 1,000-yard rushing plateau

BY CASEY WESTENRIEDER THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech football team has always claimed that if it can establish the running game, it can win.

Sophomore I-back Byron Morris is the Red Raider running game and he was well established during the game against Texas Christian.

At Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth Saturday, the Raiders gained 287 yards on the ground, with 210 yards belonging to Morris.

The career-high performance by Morris put the running back at more than 1,000 yards this season with 1,057, making him only the sixth player in school history to accomplish the feat.

The last player to rush for 1,000plus yards in a season was James Gray in 1989.

Running for more than 200 yards is not something that happens every week but offensive guard Stance Labaj said it was something Morris did with little help from his friends.

"We blocked pretty well," Labaj said. "But it was taking five or six people to bring him down. It was just his running. He really did get a lot of that on his own."

A flu-ridden Morris came out on Wednesday for interviews where he said he planned to recover for Saturday's game against Houston.

"We've always said we want to get the running game established first,' Morris said. "We got the running game established in the second half (against TCU) and we went in there late in the game and came out with a big win."

Morris had only 49 yards going in Morris the first half Saturday.

"I came out determined that I can play offensive line get all the credit for to run when you've got holes."

College football's great rivalries renewed Saturday

While the Southwest Conference beats up on each other this weekend, the rest of the nation will be paying close attention to some of the most heated and storied rivalries in college football.

> Ohio State (8-2) vs. Michigan (8-0-2) 11 p.m. ABC (Channel 28 locally) Ohio Stadium Columbus, Ohio

HAYWARD This rivalry holds a special place in my heart. With the exception of last year's game, this one always is one of the best in the nation. This year it looks just the same, but this time it's on the Buckeyes home turf and they are hungry for a victory over the hated Wolverines.

Look for this one to go to the wire and Michigan may just pick up its first loss of the season and end its national title hopes. Pittsburgh (3-7) vs. Penn State (6-4)

3 p.m. ESPN (Cox Cable Channel 20) Beaver Stadium College Park, Penn.

Penn State needs to win this just to get some respect and make the Blockbuster Bowl organizers look smarter than they appear right now. Also this is the last time the teams will play until the 1996 season. Why? Because Penn State is joining the Big Ten for the 1993 season.

> USC (6-2-1) vs. UCLA (5-5) 6:30 p.m. ESPN (Cox Cable Channel 20)

> > Rose Bowl

Pasadena, Calif.

Even though UCLA has had a rough season, this rivalry always produces one of the best games in college football. The Trojans come in as the big favorite, but UCLA always plays well in this game. The Rose Bowl will be close to full which is tough because it has over 100,000 seats, but the fans in Los Angeles take this rivalry serious and whoever wins can claim the city for one more year.

Harvard (2-7) vs. Yale (4-5) Harvard Stadium Cambridge, Mass.

The longest rivalry in college football resumes this weekend, and this one should be as good as ever. Neither team is that good, but they hate each other. Look for the Bulldogs to win this one and take the trophy back to New Haven.

Washington State (7-3) vs. Washington (9-1) 2:30 p.m. ABC (Pay per view) Husky Stadium

Seattle, Washington This may be the first time the Apple Bowl will have two teams with winning records. The Cougars are guaranteed a winning season, but are looking to upset the Huskies and better their bowl chances. But on Saturday look for the Huskies to dominate this one and go on to the Rose Bowl with a 10-1 record.

Stanford (8-3) vs. California (4-6) Memorial Stadium

Berkeley, Calif. This game is simply called "The Big Game." This year may not be as good, but this Saturday also marks the 10th anniversary of the vaunted kickoff return that gave the Golden Bears the win in 1982. This year, Stanford coach Bill Walsh will coach in his first "Big Game" since the mid 1970s. Look for the Cardinal to continue where it left off last year. The Bears are not the same team they were last year, and may just show that on their home field. It looks like the hatchet will stay in Palo Alto.

These are just a few of the rivalries going on this weekend, but as usual anything can happen in college football. Most of these teams that are playing this weekend hate each other which makes the rivalries more fun. Len Hayward is the sports editor of The University Daily.
