PLO, Israel on verge of formally recognizing each other; accord may be near

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres will likely sign an agreement with the PLO on Palestinian autonomy once Israel and the PLO have formally recognized each other, a Palestinian source said Thursday.

Once mutual recognition is announced by both sides, Peres and the PLO's "foreign minister," Farouk Kaddoumi, would sign the agreement on self-rule that was reached during months of secret negotiations in Norway, said the source close to the PLO, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Mutual recognition is still several days off, said Dr. Ahmed Tibi, a Palestinian physician from Jerusalem who is close to Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"There are some formulations that should be settled and agreed upon, and I expect it may occur during the next few days," Tibi told The Associated Press.

Math problems puzzle U.S. students

WASHINGTON (AP) — Few students in the United States can solve math problems that require more than an educated guess, statistics unveiled Wednesday by the Department of Education show.

Only 16 percent of fourth-graders, eight percent of eighth-graders and nine percent of high school seniors tested could answer mathematics questions requiring problem solving skills, said the department's National Center for Education Statistics.

The results show that students are "getting few opportunities to participate in problem solving in classrooms," said John Dossey, a visiting math professor at the U.S. Military Academy and former president of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Nearly 250,000 students attending 10,000 schools in every state took the test in 1992.

Fourth graders were asked to use words and pictures to show that a boy named Jose who ate half a pizza could have eaten more pizza than a friend, Ella, who ate half of another pizza.

The answer is Jose could have eaten half of a larger pizza. But less than a fourth of the students — 23 percent — gave a satisfactory or better answer. Nearly half — 49 percent — gave an incorrect answer. Seven percent did not respond.

The tests were an extension of the National Assessment of Educational Progress exams, administered last year. Those results, released in January, showed that students were getting better at math although nearly 40 percent of those tested still failed to reach basic proficiency levels.

But the new tests didn't give students a choice of answers. Instead, they were required to draw pictures and write explanations of their answers.

Promising high school running back killed

DALLAS (AP) — A promising high school running back and captain of his football team was shot and killed during an early morning argument Thursday, police said.

Wannazell Jerome Gordon, 18, a senior at Adamson High School who was expected to sign with a major university after this season, was shot in the face while sitting in his car in Oak Cliff, police said. He was taken to Methodist Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 1:15 a.m.

A 25-year-old man was taken into custody and was expected to be charged with murder, police said.

Police said Gordon and the suspect were involved in an argument early Thursday. The suspect left and allegedly returned with a gun, shooting Gordon while he was sitting in a car, police said.

Police didn't reveal a suspected motive or any other details of their investigation.

Gordon, a 5-foot-9, 175-pound tailback, tallied 1,200 rushing yards and 260 receiving yards last season, when he was named All-District 11-4A.

The mood at Adamson High School was somber Thursday as teacher and friends mourned the star athlete's slaying.

"He was a blue chip prospect who was being heavily recruited. He had aspirations of going to Texas A&M or UCLA," Adamson High School coach James Argenti said, weeping. "He was a role model for all of his teammates... players are taking this real hard."

Argenti said that he had talked earlier with the players to inform them of the death of their teammate.

Principal Martin Riojas said that a special crisis team was called to counsel students at the school.

"Everyone is taking it very hard. Students are openly crying. The crisis team has been on campus working with teacher and students. It has not been very easy at all," Riojas said.

Texas Tech commuter parking woes causing campus jam

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Because of an apparent overcrowding of Texas Tech's commuter lots, students are resorting to parking in unauthorized areas surrounding the campus.

Some students are illegally parking on side streets and in apartment complex parking lots. "I have to leave about 45 minutes early for class to try to find a spot," said Debb Belew, a senior family studies major from Lubbock. "Even then I can't find a spot, and I have to park over on 17th Street. It's really aggravating. I really think there are just more people out there looking for spots this year."

Delton Hollard, a senior English major from Mineral Wells, said, "I've been lucky up until today. Today I had to park over in the Sierra Crossing parking lot."

Traffic and Parking Services Manager Gail Wolfe said that hard-to-find parking spaces are not unusual at this time of year.

"I think it's just crowded because everyone goes to class the first week of school," she said.

Wolfe said the worst times to try to park are from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

"There is a transition between classes, and that's usually the hardest time to find a spot," she said.

Students can expect lines and overcrowding for the next week, Wolfe said.

"After a week or two of school, we find that the overcrowding really calms down," she said. "Some students decide to leave their cars at home, some stop going to class and some even decide to leave Tech."

Despite overcrowding at the beginning of the semester, some students prefer parking in commuter lots.

"It is closer than a lot of other options and, once school gets going, it really isn't limited parking," Cindy McCurdy, a junior marketing major from Lubbock, said.

This fall, 72 commuter spaces in the lot across from Thompson Hall were changed to faculty reserved spaces.

"Thompson Hall added more clinics to their facilities so they needed more spots for patients to park in," Wolfe said. "We moved those spots up and moved the faculty spots to the commuter lot."

"That really shouldn't affect commuters because last year we added 265 spaces to the Gaston Hall parking lot," she said.

Wolfe said there are about 5,600 paved parking spaces available to commuters. The number of commuter stickers sold this semester is not yet available.

"It would be impossible to have all those numbers for at least another month," she said.

Traffic and parking officials have considered building a covered parking facility near the University Center but costs are too high, Wolfe said.

"We have looked into it for several years now but, because the costs are so out of reach, it is impossible," she said.

Commuter parking permits increased in price this year by $3.

Wolfe said money from parking permits is used to fund traffic and parking, the University Police Department, maintenance and construction of lots and the nighttime shuttle bus.

Buses may be ticket to end crowded lots at home games

Jones Stadium parking mess may be unscrambled

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Red Raider fans have something to cheer about this season with Citibus offering a shuttle service that provides an alternative to overcrowded parking in neighborhoods by Jones Stadium.

The City of Lubbock, Texas Tech University, and Citibus have come together to establish a "park-and-ride" shuttle service for Tech home football games. Lubbock Mayor David Langston said the service provides "ample parking and ample convenience for fans."

The service allows fans to park their cars in lots at 18th Street and Indiana Avenue and ride a Citibus for $1 to Gate No. 1 at Jones Stadium.

The Citibus meets fans at the west entrance of Jones Stadium to take them to their cars after the game.

The service begins one hour before the game and runs continuously until the game is over and until all fans have left the stadium. The shuttle service also should solve parking problems in North Overton and South Arnett Benson neighborhoods.

Citizens in these neighborhoods were allowing the public to pay and park in their yards for football games. Because of this, several city ordinances were being violated and other residents were unhappy with the mass of cars in their neighborhood.

The North Overton Neighborhood Association requested last year that the City of Lubbock find a solution to the parking problem. North Overton Neighborhood Association President Doris Fletcher said the cars were breaking up sidewalks and ruining yards.

"This is the first time I've seen the city and Texas Tech work together," Fletcher said.

City Codes Administrator Rob Allison said information will be provided to property owners and fans about the service before citations are issued.

"It's not the city's intent to write citations," Langston said.

Although parking in yards will no longer be allowed, parking on the street and in public lots will be available to fans.

"Most of the folks we've been talking to have been very positive," Allison said. "They want to comply (with the parking solution)."

Citibus General Manager John Wilson said the shuttle service will be "no loss for Citibus." Wilson said the two buses cover the service route on game days and said the bus ride should take about five minutes.

The service begins Saturday for the Tech/University of the Pacific football game.

Laughter of Midsummer Night's Dream leaves classroom

Shakespearean delights park in Lubbock for outdoor Labor Day productions

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

For those who don't have anything planned for Labor Day Weekend, there is live theater entertainment to be found right here in Lubbock.

Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" will be performed at 7:30 p.m. today through Monday in the outdoor setting of Wagner Park, 28th Street and Flint.

David LeMaster directs the play.

"The play is funded through a grant from The Lubbock Alliance," he said. "This means the play is a gift from the city of Lubbock and is free to all who attend."

"We have nine of our own Tech students in the play, and the rest of the cast is made up actors from the surrounding community theaters," LeMaster said.

Actor members of Community Unity in Art, an organization of several Lubbock community theaters, are also performing in the play.

The organization wanted to select a play most audience members could recognize, and wanted something light to introduce first-time audience members to Shakespeare, he said.

"The only exposure they have had (to Shakespeare) is in school, so we picked a comedy," LeMaster said.

"Most people will find the actors appealing because they are '90s actors with a great feel for Shakespeare," he said. "Because of (actors) experience, I let them move where they feel they should, so the trees and the audience are considered the stage too," he said.

LeMaster offered advice to first-time and veteran Shakespeare audience members.

"Take a blanket and date," LeMaster said.

"And, don't be intimidated by Shakespeare."

"You will see a different and comical presentation."

Tech doesn't have a commuter parking problem?

Commuting students paid an extra $3 for a parking sticker this year, but lost 72 spaces in the commuter lot across from Thompson Hall.

Thompson Hall and Traffic and Parking officials defend this loss with the argument that students gained visitor parking in the Thompson Hall lot. Visitor spaces at Thompson Hall are not necessarily for visiting Texas Tech students. They are just for visitors to Thompson Hall, period.

What did students get for that extra $3? So far, students have gotten nothing but frustration. In every classroom this week (except maybe the freshman seminar course), students have been discussing the parking dilemma — the lack-of-parking dilemma, that is.

Every morning for the past five days, students have circled the commuter parking lots sometimes 30 minutes before class, only to walk in late panting like dogs because they had to walk from the field behind KTXT-TV, in front of a restaurant on University Avenue or in the grass along the Tech freeway.

Traditionally, it's been true that parking spaces are harder to come by during the first few days of class than they are during the rest of semester.

However, the problem in the past seemed to be more minor and of a temporary nature. Now, this parking heist has turned into an enormous problem for most commuting students.

For those who have been commuters in past semesters it is evident on any given morning that commuter parking spaces are hard to come by.

The problem is compounded when buses and vans visiting the campus take up entire lots at time, and especially when such vehicles are left in the lots for days or weeks at a time.

With that in mind, it seems somewhat ridiculous that 72 spaces were taken away from commuters.

Is it possible that more people are commuting to school than in the past? If so, shouldn't measures be taken to ensure adequate parking for those who have more than paid the price?

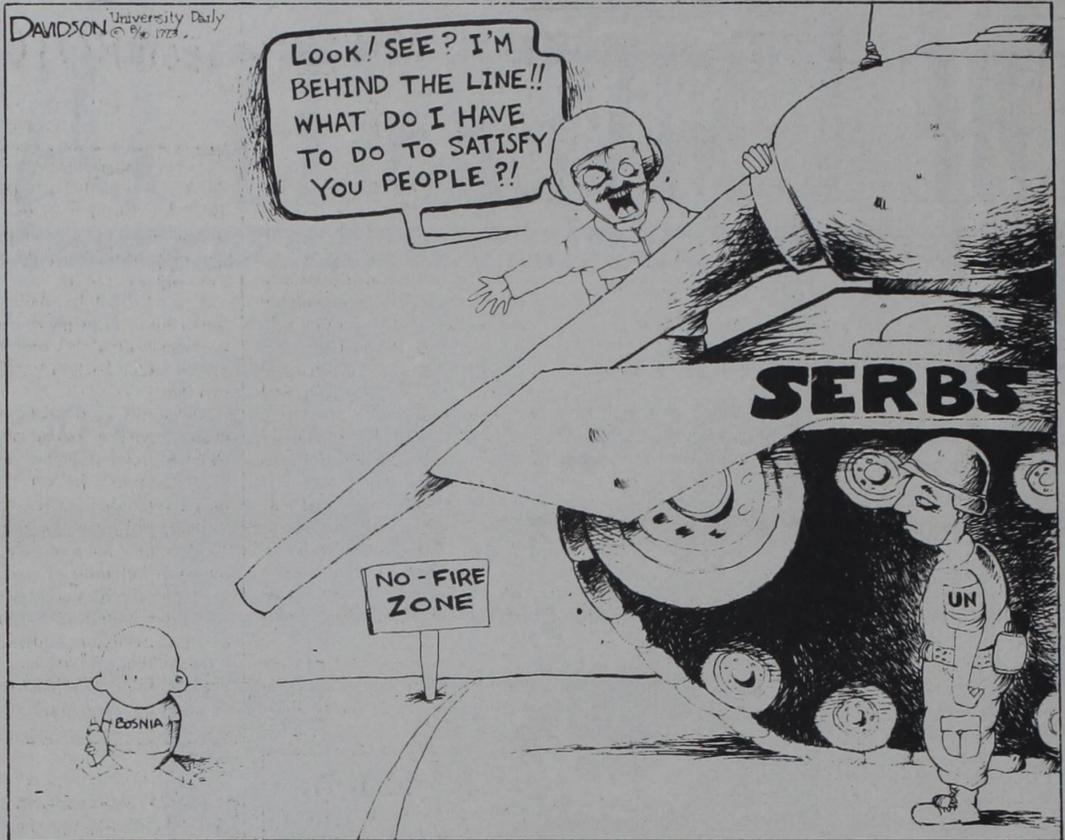

At a university where "service plus" is a staple in the administrative diet, should students be at the disservice of inadequate parking?

There are solutions — the problem is finding them. Perhaps a more adequate campus busing system or even an off-campus busing system similar to those in Austin and College Station is the answer.

The possibility of car pooling has been made more viable with transferrable commuter stickers, but how can commuters be convinced to car pool?

In the future, commuters could do like students do in other parts of the world — walk.

In Dreamsville: Grandpa died believing in the outhouse

JOE MURRAY

Edward Jerome Williams II of Charleston, S.C., spent part of his early youth on the farm of his grandfather, Thomas Jefferson Williams, in Union County, N.C.

This is his story.

"Grandpa plowed his club-footed mule, Dick, until he was 78 years old and was forced to retire when he was overcome with a heat stroke while working the field.

"It was a time of mid-morning, and the sun was nearing its zenith. The heat waves found their ways skyward from the rocky soil; both man and beast did sweat.

"Then it happened, as it must to all men in their time. Instead of the gees and haws, there came a cry for help.

"I can recall the frantic shouting as they brought Grandpa to the house. They took his old battered straw hat and used it to fan him. He was resting now.

"Then came the doctor's verdict: Grandpa would live but his old mule must go. They knew that as long as Dick was still around, Grandpa would return to do his life's work. So the decision was made and the deed was done, and it broke Grandpa's heart.

"Relegated to the more menial tasks of feeding the chickens, slopping the hogs, bringing in the wood and gathering eggs, Grandpa accepted his new duties with reluctance.

"As the years passed, scientific innovations were placed on Grandpa's farm by his children.

"Electricity now lighted the house and brought water from a pump instead of the wall bucket. I doubt if any of this progress represented great marvels to Grandpa, and he accepted them with resignation.

"He believed that you eat and sleep in the house, and when you had to go you went outside, like his forebears before him. And that was the way it would be with Grandpa.

"I can hear them now trying to get him to give the thing a try. 'Aw, Papa, just you sit down and try the thing out. Then you will find out how comfortable the seat is.'

"But Grandpa could not see any reason to sit on top of all that cool, clear water. He'd known times when the drought had made good water precious and scarce. No sir! He refused to sit on top of the spring!

"So his children finally resolved to let Grandpa travel that same path he had followed for over 90 years.

"It was sure to happen. Some blamed it on his stubbornness, some attributed it to his age and others believed it was just bad luck. In the early hours of the morning, as he was walking down through the backside of the barn to the outhouse, his hip broke and he fell.

"Over the hill an eight-hooter owl called to its flock the coming of the dawn. And far away the wail of a train whistle echoed its passing, then faded into the stillness of the night. On the eastern horizon, a faint light appeared, marking the spot where the sun was rising. Grandpa was still.

"He died as he had lived, to the end believing in his convictions and resisting change that was not of his understanding or to his liking. Grandpa had kept the water clean."

Football time again

Tech footballers need fan support this season

On the heels of the Lady Raiders' National Championship, it's the Tech football team's turn again.

And, the Raiders have a hard act to follow.

With the Cotton Bowl, the John Hancock Bowl and now the Alamo Bowl to look forward to as a SWC team, Tech has a viable shot at postseason play — despite what some fair-weather fans might say.

The women's basketball team certainly hasn't always been the pick of the crop, but they proved themselves and more.

And, a lot of that has to do with fan support.

That's what the football team needs too.

Tomorrow, Tech will face Pacific in the team's first game of the season. With all hopes the stands will be full, and not just this weekend but for the rest of the season — even when we're not picked to win.

Players in the past have often said they would be more appreciative if they had better fan support.

Better fan support starts with the students, because when the student section is full, the players feel better, and know they are being supported on campus.

"We are excited about playing," coach Spike Dykes said at TECH MAY WIN OR TECH MAY LOSE...EITHER WAY LET'S SHOW THAT AT LEAST THE STUDENT BODY CARES ABOUT ITS FOOTBALL TEAM.

this week's press conference. "We are looking forward to our student body being there Saturday."

Even the coach knows what makes a college football team go, and that is the students.

Students came out to see a winner when the Lady Raiders won the National Title.

That fan support should continue this season, but the season at hand is football season.

Tech may win or Tech may lose Saturday, but either way let's show that at least the student body of Tech cares about its football team.

Besides, it may be your only chance to see new Athletic Director Bob Bockrath in person.

Some freshmen earn college credit while in high school

by MIKE HALL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Some Texas Tech freshmen are beginning the 1993-94 academic year with a head start over their peers after attending Texas Tech while still in high school.

A few of the students earned as many as 24 college credit hours before high school graduation.

The dual credit program is an extension of the Lubbock Exemplary Academic Program and is exclusive to Lubbock High School, magnet specialist Sharon Mouser said.

The Lubbock Independent School District uses a magnet program that features specialty curriculum at a single school as a desegregation tool to prevent forced busing.

Mouser said the quality of the students who attend Tech while still at LHS is outstanding.

"They must be in the top 25 percent of their class," she said.

"To my knowledge, none of our students have ever had a problem in their Tech classes."

Mouser said that only students who have reached their junior year in high school can participate in LEAP.

She also said the opportunity to attend university level courses instills responsibility in students.

"That contributes to the maturity level of our students attending Tech," she said.

"I think they enjoy the freedom, but become more responsible to handle their schedules.

This also challenges students to a higher level of academic achievement."

Students are allowed to take as many as six hours a semester, but still are required to take three classes at Lubbock High School.

Students also may attend summer sessions at Tech between their junior and senior years.

Dean for Undergraduate Admissions Dale Grusing said the Lubbock High School students do very well in courses at Tech.

"They are exceptional students," he said. "Most keep well above the 3.0 level."

Grusing said 13 of the 24 Lubbock High School students who attended Tech last fall returned to Tech as freshmen this fall.

Mandy Murchison, a freshman undecided major, began this fall with 12 credit hours after participating in the dual credit program.

"I took classes at Tech to get requirements for high school and for college out of the way all at once," she said.

The University Daily printed an incorrect headline in Thursday's news section on page three.

The correct headline should have read: Tech Career Planning and Placement to start fall orientations for all students looking for a career after college.

Tech ROTC undergoes change of command

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's 1993-94 Army ROTC activated their battalion Thursday during a change of command ceremony, signifying the passing of leadership from cadre to cadet.

Cadet Lt. Col. Jim Bailey, a senior engineering major from Cleveland, Ohio, became this year's cadet battalion commander.

"I feel it's quite an honor, even though I have some tough shoes to follow," Bailey said. "It's a tough job, but they picked the right person for it."

Bailey will oversee a staff of eight senior cadets, as well as the entire battalion.

"I oversee the staff and the staff takes care of everything as far as arranging and planning training," Bailey said. "I give them things I'd like to see and they go ahead and carry it out."

"The big thing is that I'm responsible for every action that every cadet does, on and off ROTC time," he said. "Even when they are in their dorm screwing around, or what not, it comes back on them and it comes back on me."

The senior cadets were given the responsibility of leading and training junior cadets for Advance Camp 1994.

"You learn a lot, mostly about leadership and a lot about yourself, too, in Advance Camp," said Lt. Chad Parrack, an active duty lieutenant in the U.S. Army and last year's cadet battalion commander.

"Actually, (at Advance Camp)

you learn a lot about the training you received while you were here, in ROTC," he said. "While you were going through it you hated it, but when you got there you were very appreciative of the hard work and training that they put you through."

Officers for 1993-94 are: Executive Officer and Cadet Major Teresa Unger, a senior nursing major from Haskell; Alpha Company Commanding Officer and Cadet Capt. Jeff Frost, a senior marketing major from Lawton, Okla.; and Bravo Company Commanding Officer Sebastian Ross, a senior nursing major from Littlefield.

Two men get into 'cat fight;' one now faces charges

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A heated argument over a wildly hissing stray cat ended when a 68-year-old retired postal worker pulled a gun on his neighbor, according to an indictment.

Richard Reynolds was indicted by an Aransas County grand jury last Friday on a third-degree felony charge of aggravated assault.

Reynolds allegedly pulled a .22-caliber pistol on his neighbor, 40-year-old construction worker Gary Ferri.

On June 19, Ferri allegedly caged a fierce black-and-white stray that had been terrorizing his son's tabby kitten, Itty Bitty.

When he pulled his car over, Ferri said, Reynolds pulled over behind him, saying he was tired of having his cats stolen.

Students help businesses, earn credit

by MEGAN CLARK
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Students in Texas Tech's College of Business will not only be studying for class this semester, but will be gaining experience by helping local businesses with their problems.

With the help of the United States Small Business Administration, students can work in a program specifically designed to give them experience in the business community.

"A company will apply to the SBA and will tell us what their problem areas are," said Jonanna Teeters, project officer at the SBA. "We then hand the case over to the Tech Small Business Institute, which is virtually an upper-level class in the College of Business, and the students work out the problems of the company they are assigned to."

Teeters said most businesses request counseling and help in their accounting, marketing, management, and consulting departments.

Students complete cases and solve problems in all operations of the business.

"We've had very good cases from the students," Teeters said. "They express real interest in the problems they are presented with and show strong initiative to get the job done."

Professor Fred Volker is the director of Tech's SBI and said students who are in the College of Business and have worked up through the basic core curriculum are eligible to participate in the SBI program.

"It's a four credit program, actually a management class, that offers students active, current experience in the business community," Volker said.

He said 66 students are enrolled in the program for the fall semester. Students are separated into teams to work on specific tasks and help businesses in a 15-county area.

"It's a very untraditional course," Volker said. "It's almost like a health care program. We assist the businesses, but they also help us with allowing the students to get first-hand experience of the business world."

Businesses in a wide variety of areas send cases to the SBI, Volker said. Small businesses in retail, manufacturing, health care and service oriented fields require assistance through the SBA and the Tech SBI program.

"Several years ago some of the students worked on a project with the Lubbock Regional Public Health and Retardation Center," Volker said. "The students did a wonderful job. They conceived the entire operation, from budget to What is the Gospel?

Gospel means good news. The good news is that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that He was buried, and that He was raised on the third day according to the Scriptures."

You see, God in His Justice could not ignore our sin, but God in His love desired a right relationship with us. So God sent His Son to die in our place, for our good.

The Bible says, "For God so loved the world, that he gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have eternal life."

Researchers attempt to reduce bacteria in meat

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Food poisoning outbreaks in restaurants such as Jack-in-the-Box have raised food safety concerns, and research by Texas Tech's College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources is a reflection of this.

"Methods to reduce bacteria on meat are limited on the industry level," graduate student Danny Bawcomb said.

"I'm working in some research that can be used at that level to reduce bacteria on the surface of meat," he said.

The research Bawcomb is conducting consists of inoculating the surface of a piece of raw meat with salmonella typhimurium, one of the most common organisms to cause food-borne illnesses.

Bawcomb then sprays the meat with sterile water, stimulates the meat with electricity and performs a microbial analysis.

"In the past I've done some research with continuous electrical stimulation of about 620 volts," Bawcomb said. "Now I'm doing research on instantaneous stimulation using about 1,200 volts in just a pulse of electricity."

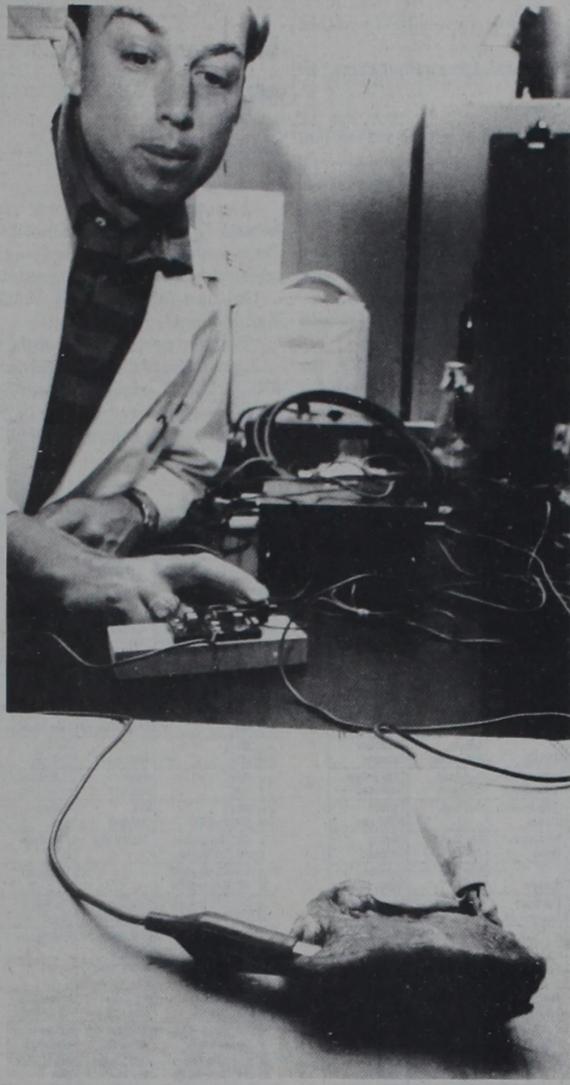

Graduate adviser Leslie Thompson said, "There are lots of pathogens on raw meat no matter where you are or how it is handled. The organisms we are worried about are the ones that cause food-borne illnesses."

Bawcomb will not have results of the instantaneous stimulation until October, but results from the continuous stimulation have shown a significant number of pathogens present.

If the final results are successful, Bawcomb will attempt to apply the process commercially.

"We can do all this research in the lab," Bawcomb said. "But, there must be some research done at meat plants — at an industry size level."

Thompson said, "If we get good results, we could implement them into industry."

SHARON M. STEINMAN: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Zap!

Danny Bawcomb, a graduate student in the department of animal science and food technology, uses electricity to kill bacteria in meat.

She said implementing the process would be easy and inexpensive because industries already use electricity to increase the eating quality and tenderness. The project could have a big impact if it is successful, Thompson said.

ADA mandates right to access, right to participate for everyone

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Until the Americans with Disabilities Act was established in 1990, a significant number of people still were being overlooked — even in this era of political correctness.

The act was fully implemented in January 1993 and mandates access for everyone, regardless of any disability. The act also states that any construction since 1992 has to meet access standards.

Landscape architecture assistant professor Jean Kavanagh said many people tend to overlook the fact that landscapes are included in the act.

"Before the ruling, access was required," Kavanagh said. "But, now the idea of access has broadened. Prior to 1988, if you could get to a site and get around through it, the landscape facility would meet administrative needs."

"Now, you have to be able to take part in the experience of the site," she said.

Any significant amount of renovation also would be subject to the same standards as new construction, Kavanagh said.

"It's not just the playground or the picnic tables," she said. "It's the bleachers (and) the ability to get to the playing fields. They (people with disabilities) need to be able to get as close to participation as possible."

Estimates have projected that 40 percent of the American public has experienced some level of disability at a given time, Kavanagh said.

"We are the people we are designing for," she said. "Not the nebulous 'them' with serious disabilities."

"We think of people who have disabilities as those with a mobility problem," Kavanagh said. "But, that's not the most common (problem) at all."

The most common disabilities involve sight and hearing loss, Kavanagh said.

"Most of the work we are seeing now are with the elderly or children," she said.

Kavanagh said the act does not necessarily create difficulties, but it does create differences.

"There is very little solid information on landscapes and how you might make them accessible," she said. "You have to do a lot of innovative thinking, including inventing what accessibility really is."

"From the beginning you have to start with the premise that certain things, such as stairs, are obstacles," Kavanagh said. "You really have to have a very strong relationship with the basic land-form."

Custody to be decided by private judge

STUART, Fla. (AP) — Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson don't agree on much these days, but they have an understanding on two things: The custody battle over their son will be settled in California and their divorce in Florida.

Reynolds filed for divorce June 10 in Martin County, asking Circuit Judge Marc Cianca to decide the case in Florida.

Anderson said California is her home state and filed for divorce more than a month later in Los Angeles.

A private California judge hired by Anderson and Reynolds will determine who gets custody of the couple's adopted son.

Ex-Students Association plans game day FANdango festivities

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

FANdango, a pre-game party sponsored by the Ex-Student's Association, will begin two hours before kickoff at Texas Tech's first home football game against the University of Pacific Saturday.

FANdango, much like a tailgate party, is designed to increase spirit among fans and offers music and food as well as an opportunity to meet and visit with other Tech fans, according to Jim Douglass, assistant director of the association.

"It's a great way to get an early parking space, a great meal at a fantastic price and a chance to get acquainted with other Red Raiders," he said.

The event became a tradition last year when the association decided to extend its homecoming pre-game barbecue to a pre-game party before every home game.

"We saw that they were doing it at the University of Wyoming and the University of Oregon, and that it really garnered up spirit," Douglass said. "They would set up at about 5 a.m. and wouldn't go home until midnight." Douglass said the event consistently drew large crowds last season.

"Some people would come even if they didn't have game tickets," he said.

"They would come just for the fun of it all."

Tastebuds Catering of Lubbock will cater each event this season. Full course menus include chicken spaghetti, Italian beef casserole, chicken fajitas, a deli buffet and barbecue brisket. For adults the cost is $6. Children's plates will consist of hamburgers and hot dogs and cost $3. The prices include a beverage.

The events are sponsored by the Texas Tech University Foundation, Red Raider Club, KJTV Channel 34, Mass Mutual Insurance, Whisperwood National Bank and WestMark Realtors.

"The sponsors underwrite the costs and make it cheaper for everyone to come and eat cheap and have a good time," Douglass said.

"They pay for the signs, tents, music, table and chair rentals, so the price is as little as it can be for everyone. We only charge the fans what the caterers charge us."

Douglass said he thought of the name FANdango without actually

WE WANT PEOPLE TO GET INTO THE WHOLE AMBIANCE OF THE DAY.

Jim Douglass

knowing what it meant.

"I just thought of the word 'fan' and said 'let's call it a fandango,'" he said. "I found out later that a fandango was when our early West Texas settlers, who lived far away from each other, would get together on Sundays and have a covered dish dinner and dance all night."

Douglass said anyone is welcome to the pre-game event, not just Tech students.

"We want people to get into the whole ambiance of the day," he said.

A pre-game barbecue will kick off Tech's homecoming game against Rice, Oct. 16. "Last year's was a huge success," Douglass said. "We have plans for a band and we also have plans to speed up serving lines to allow for a more enjoyable event."

Director pays tribute to pioneer women

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Rob Shive, director of admissions and student affairs for the School of Allied Health, not only recruits and oversees student services, but is a poet and admirer of the past and present woman.

"I think this town and university, as well as the prairie, wouldn't be here if it weren't for the spirit of the pioneer woman," Shive said.

"These women were out in the fields with their husbands and there is an unspoken glory to be seen.

"I wrote a poem about pioneer women's' wedding rings wearing thin because of fighting rattlers in the field, making soap with their bare hands, and in the end, all they had to show for their work was probably a summer dress and a winter dress."

'Sunbonnets' was written in August of 1989 and refers to the hardships of the woman and the 'certain unsigned equality' attained through their temporary victories of tenacity and 'giving more than menfolk somehow.'

"I never write with the intent to publish. I write with the intent to be read," Shive said.

"(Writing) is a means of therapy for me and I believe that talent is a gift," he said.

"My faith is stronger as a result of my writing, and I do not think my talent belongs to me."

Shive has also written about swamp coolers, small-town women, scents, plates and anything that has meaning and purpose to him.

Shive said, "I wrote a poem once about a set of plates collected over a period of years. This included college years, different roommates in college, grandma's plates, mom's plates, etc. The plates were representative of trials and tribulations of this person's life and showed the history thereof.

"This person remembered how all the cracks and stains were made and how it all took an order in his life.

He was able to remember things because of these plates."

Shive also said he admired the poems of Carl Sandburg about the openness and emptiness of the West Texas prairie.

"Sandburg was a prairie poet. I am too.

"Edgar Allen Poe was a very dark writer and tended to concentrate on a certain feeling or atmosphere. He was melancholy and sometimes focused on growing older and realizing that one's goals in life weren't ever accomplished," Shive said.

Shive graduated from Tech with a degree in public relations and has been working with the School of Allied Health for 10 years.

I NEVER WRITE WITH THE INTENT TO PUBLISH. I WRITE WITH THE INTENT TO BE READ.

Rob Shive

His job includes student services, providing immunizations for students, liability insurance plans and recruiting for Texas Tech, the Health Sciences Center and more specifically, the School of Allied Health.

"Our classes are usually on a one-to-one basis with a hands-on and have an application intent.

"Most of our students have jobs before they graduate, which is good for our university and the student," he said.

Shive said the School of Allied Health was an umbrella term for several majors, including physical therapy, occupational therapy, clinical lab sciences, communication disorders and EMT and paramedical certifications.

"In physical therapy alone, we have an 80 percent rate of available jobs for our graduates," he said.

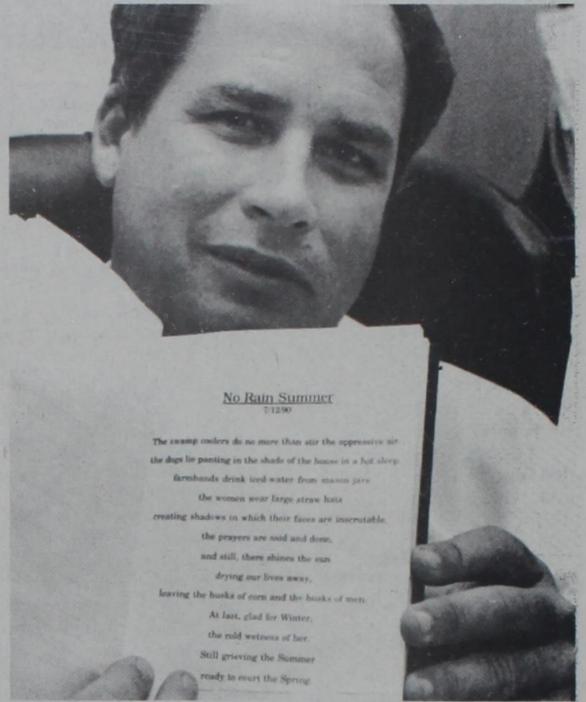

Shive said working with the students was fulfilling and being at Tech for ten years had some rewarding experiences.

"I was involved in our University Diversity program that consisted of our minority students creating ways to recruit and hold retention for other potential minority students. It was rewarding to witness the ideas and plans come into effect."

Shive also said that he wrote about anything that appealed to his emotions and his position with Allied Health contributed to his topics.

"I've always liked the quote attributed to Confucius: Small men never think they're small and great men never think they're great."

The swamp coolers do no more than stir the oppressive air the dogs lie panting in the shade of the house in a hot sleep farmhands drink cool water from wooden jars the women wear large straw hats creating shadows in which their faces are inscrutable the prayers are cold and done, and still, there shines the sun
drying our lives away, leaving the husks of corn and the husks of men.
At last, glad for Winter,
the cold wetness of her Still grieving the Summer ready to court the Spring

High school dropouts earning rewards from government, trip to military camp

It was 6:59 a.m... and Arthur Cole, 17, was due in formation in front of his National Guard barracks at 0700 hours. The prospects were not good. Arthur couldn't find his regulation shoes (he was wearing sandals) and he couldn't find his Guard-issued pants (his bermudas were hanging so low his underwear was identifiable).

"Let's go!" barked his platoon leader, Vincent Lafontan, a former marine who was inspecting his bunks. Arthur, a former drug dealer from New Haven, was not accustomed to his new hours. Until recently, he would go to sleep at 6 a.m.

In front of the barracks, at attention, stood 120 teen-agers from all over the state. They have one thing in common: All are high school dropouts who have signed up for a new national program, financed by the federal government and run by state National Guard units on military bases, that is aimed at getting troubled civilian youths high school equivalency diplomas. If these dropouts succeed in the five-month program, they will get a $2,200 stipend from the government as a financial reward.

What is beginning here may soon become widespread because its appeal cuts across the political spectrum while addressing two of the nation's most pressing domestic questions: What to do with the military in the post-Cold War era? And how to expand social service programs in a time of budget constraints?

The National Guard's Youth Corps Challenge program, which will operate in 10 states this year, is a case of guns as well as butter. It relies heavily on current and former military personnel to tutor, counsel and discipline the dropouts in preparation for their taking the test for a general equivalency diploma, or GED.

It also signals the new president's priorities. Congress approved the program in 1992 but President George Bush did not propose any financing for it; Clinton signed a $44 million appropriation on June 11. Youth corps camps will train a total of 2,500 dropouts the first year in Arizona, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, New York (Camp Smith at Peekskill), Oklahoma and West Virginia.

The 10 pilot projects are being watched closely by military officials worried about budget cuts and ways to ease the transition of soldiers into a civilian economy.

"To put it indelicately, this is a way for the National Guard to create a role for itself in the 21st century," said Beth Soloman, an aide to Nunn. "It's a post-Cold War response."

There are seven hours of classes a day, covering the academic areas tested for the GED, drug and alcohol counseling, and job-readiness skills.

The dropouts are outfitted from head (red baseball caps) to toe (Adidas sneakers), get a $15 weekly allowance, books and briefcases. While they march in cadence and usually call superiors "sir," they would never be mistaken for regular military.

Lamonte Brockenberry's corn rows pop out of from the sides of his cap; Ramonita Arroyo's pony-tail hangs out of a hole in the back of hers. Donald Bunn, a squad leader who barks orders at his fellow dropouts, wears a hoop earring in his left ear and a red stud in his right.

To qualify for the stipend, the dropouts need to do more than simply get a the GED, which has come under criticism nationally as not carrying the weight of a high school diploma. They must also find a job or enroll in a college or training course.

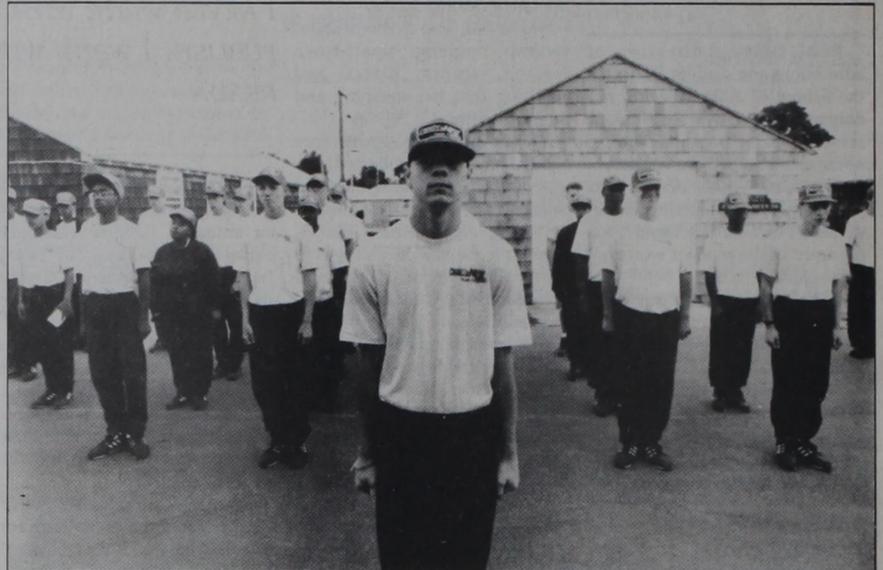

If they are too young to take the GED, they can earn the stipend by returning to high school. (There is no military obligation for the participants.) After completing the five-month session, they will be assigned a Guard member from their community, who will serve as their mentor for the year.

Applicants are supposed to be free of drugs and not currently involved with the criminal justice system (including not being on probation or parole). The challenge at hand is clear. Of the 172 accepted, 50 have already left. Most could not take the paramilitary atmosphere and asked to go home; about a dozen were expelled.

Earlier this week, four were arrested on the base by police for third-degree assault.

And yet, to spend time with the three-quarters who remain is to find considerable hope. They are motivated. They have not been ordered here by a judge; they have all decided, for their own reasons, it is time to change.

Non-conference slate full for SWC

The first full week of college football should be a good one, but all eight Southwest Conference teams have tough games ahead of them. From here, an SWC victory in some of these games appears unlikely.

The non-conference schedule reads like a who's who in college football, with teams such as Oklahoma, Ohio State and Southern Cal heading the list.

If the SWC does well, then respect for the league may return. But the worst may happen and only one or two teams might win a game this weekend.

Rice (0-0) at No. 17 Ohio State (0-0)
11:30 p.m. CDT
Ohio Stadium (90,470/natural grass)
Columbus, Ohio
ESPN (Cox Cable Channel 31)

The one thing that Ohio State possesses this season is a very good defense, because the team has been playing together for a long time. But don't expect this one to be a laugh, because the Owls are pumped and ready for this game.

This is the Owls big chance to show they belong in the upper level of college football. The big matchup centers on a tough Owls offense versus a strong Ohio State defense, but the key is Rice's defense — the most experienced part of the club. And, Ohio State is rebuilding on offense.

Houston (0-0) at Southern California (0-1)
3:30 p.m. CDT
Los Angeles Coliseum (92,516/natural grass)
Los Angeles, Calif.
Prime Network (Cox Cable Channel 20)

Kim Helton, now has the job of regrouping a very talented team that finished 4-7 last season. But what a way to start off the season, against an angry Southern Cal team.

The Trojans are without the services of their starting tailback, but they are still USC. Lets just hope the Cougars don't flounder as badly as they did last year against Michigan.

Louisiana State (0-0) at No. 4 Texas A&M
2:30 p.m. CDT
Kyle Field (70,210/artificial turf)
College Station
ABC (Channel 28, Cox Cable Channel 8)

If this game is close, somebody please tell me. The coach at LSU is on the ropes, and the Aggies are out to prove they belong in the top five. If this is the year A&M is going to do it, it has to start Saturday against the Tigers.

The Tigers are coming off a 2-9 season in the Southeastern Conference, but Bayou Bengal fans are not used to seeing teams lose this much.

Texas (0-0) at No. 11 Colorado (0-0)
6:36 p.m. CDT
Folsom Field (51,748/artificial turf)
Boulder, Colo.
ESPN (Cox Cable Channel 31)

If there is a legitimate chance for an upset Saturday, it would have to be this game. Colorado is loaded to the hilt, but so is Texas. Texas has the strong offense, and a strong defense, but the one question mark is at quarterback. The whole weight of Austin is on the back of young Shea Morenz, who has recovered from an off-season ankle injury.

The Longhorns have a great chance to win, but give the Buffalos the edge because they are playing at home.

Fresno State (0-0) at Baylor (0-0)
7 p.m. CDT
Baylor Stadium (48,500/artificial turf)
Waco

This matchup is not likely to feature much defense. Baylor always has tough season openers, and Fresno State is still high off its Freedom Bowl win over Southern Cal.

The Bears have a slight edge because they are playing at home, but the defense is the key to this game. If Baylor can keep the Bulldogs in check, then Baylor should score a minor upset.

Arkansas (0-0) at Southern Methodist (0-0)
7 p.m. CDT
Cotton Bowl (71,615/natural grass)
Dallas

The Mustangs have the slight edge primarily because they are coming off their best season since the death penalty, but there is one problem — Arkansas coach Danny Ford. Ford has taken over the reins of the Arkansas program and he may be the man who can bring Arkansas back to prominence.

Oklahoma (0-0) at Texas Christian (0-0)
7 p.m. CDT
Amon Carter Stadium (46,000/natural grass)
Fort Worth

Strange things have happened at Amon Carter Stadium, most notably last year when the Horned Frogs beat Texas. But this year Oklahoma comes to town and it remains to be seen whether TCU can do better than Tech against the Sooners at home.

The defense is pretty much intact for the Frogs, while the Sooners once again are led by gritty quarterback Cale Gundy.

Raiders prepare for West Coast invaders

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

If there is one thing Spike Dykes knows about Saturday's game against Pacific, it is that Texas Tech must play well to win the game.

The Red Raiders come into the season opener not knowing much about the Tigers, but according to Dykes, Pacific's 3-8 record could be deceiving.

"We are all hale, hearty and ready to go," Dykes said earlier this week. "(Pacific) has good football players and it is sort of one of those deals where your game plan takes place after the first down."

Saturday's game will begin at 7 p.m. in Jones Stadium, with a crowd of more than 38,000 expected for the contest.

The Tigers have nine returning starters on defense, while Tech returns eight starters on offense from last year's 5-6 team.

Pacific's defense held opponents to 21 or fewer points in six of eight games last season, while finishing second in the Big West in scoring and passing defense.

"They are a solid team," freshman I-back Matt Dubuc said. "They have some real good athletes."

The Tech offense is led by senior quarterback Robert Hall, while the Red Raider offensive line is probably the most experienced since 1989.

Hall and second-string quarterback Jason Clemmons led one of the nation's most prolific offenses to 423 yards per game last season, ranking Tech No. 17 in the country. That yardage also established a Tech school record.

"Robert has got great awareness and is an exciting thing about this football team," Dykes said.

Hall missed three and 1/2 games in 1992, while averaging more than 219 total yards during those games.

Lloyd Hill is a strong candidate to be a consensus All-American, coming off a season in which he led the nation in receiving with 114.64 yards per game.

For Pacific, the Tigers have changed their offense to more of a pro-style offense, one that resembles that of the San Francisco 49ers.

Dave Hennigan is the left-handed quarterback leading an offense that has changed from the run-and-shoot.

The Tiger offense lost three key starters, quarterback Troy Kopp, running back Ryan Benjamin and wide receiver Aaron Turner.

Benjamin gained 1,533 yards last year, while Jessie Campbell will get the call at the tailback position this season. Campbell played in all 11 games last year but only ran for 77 yards.

Dykes said the game will be a good test for his defense, which boasts only four senior starters.

"When you get your team going success breeds success and confidence breeds success," Dykes said. "Every team has a chemistry and you would like to think your football team has poise. I think poise is the one ingredient we all fear the most for lack of."

Tech's defense gave up an average of 332 total yards to opponents last season.

Tiger LB leads experienced defense

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

When the Pacific Tigers take the field Saturday night in Jones stadium, it will be the first time senior outside linebacker Grant Carter has played in the state of Texas.

"I'm really excited to be playing in Texas," Carter said. "I grew up hearing about the caliber of football in Texas and the whole team is looking forward to it."

Carter is in his fifth year playing at Pacific and has led the team in tackles and sacks the past two seasons.

Pacific's strong suit is expected to be its defense, as the Tigers are returning nine starters. Carter is defensive captain of the squad and is ready for the challenges he will face against Texas Tech.

"We've heard all about the multitalented Tech offense," he said. "Tech has Lloyd Hill, 'Bam' Morris and Robert Hall. It's definitely a big-play offense."

Carter said the Tigers are coming off of an outstanding preseason practice and are "pumped up" about the upcoming season.

"No question we've got a tough schedule," he said. "We play Arizona right after Texas Tech. It will help tune us up for our conference play in the Big West which opens in about six weeks."

Carter is confident the Tigers' 5-2 alignment will be able to contain the Raiders Saturday.

"Tech has so many different types of offensive attacks, we'll have to be really flexible in order

Building on last season, depth goals for men's tennis team, Siegel says

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Buoyed by an impressive recruiting season, Texas Tech men's tennis coach Tim Siegel is expecting his squad to be national contenders this season.

Siegel recruited seven players in the off season from all parts of the globe.

The seven new signees are freshman Gerard Orriols from Spain, Tal Roma from Israel, Clay Evans from Dallas Highland, Brandon Hall from Houston and junior transfers Rogelio Guerrero from Tyler Junior College, Ash Ayers from McLennan Community College in Waco and sophomore Robert Barry, a transfer from Texas A&M.

"I'm really happy about our new players," Siegel said. "I've said all along that my goal here is to turn this program around and make it one of the most competitive tennis programs in the country."

Siegel is entering his second year at the helm of the program. Last year the Raiders posted a winning record of 13-10 in the Southwest Conference Standings to give them a fourth place finish overall, an improvement over 1992's fifth-place finish.

The team is young this season, and Siegel says he is looking forward to nothing but steady improvement from everyone on the squad.

"We've only got one senior on the team," he said. "Juan Gutierrez is coming into his last season. He was our most consistent player last year and I believe he has the potential to be an All-American this season."

Other returning starters for the Raiders include juniors Erick Guzman, Klint Graf and sophomore Jason White.

"We've got a lot of good things happening in Tech athletics," Siegel said. "I'm most proud of the new outdoor tennis facility that will be built by next summer," he said.

The new tennis complex will be located just west of the Ronald McDonald House.

"If we have first class facilities, we will attract the quality players that we need to be really competitive," Siegel said.

The top two finishers in the SWC last season, Texas and TCU, are both expected to be in the top 10 in the NCAA this season, Siegel said.

"I'm really looking forward to this season," Siegel said. "We've got great depth." The Tech men will start their fall schedule with a tournament Sept. 24-26 at Texas A&M.

RED RAIDER VOLLEYBALL

Carter adjusting to role as leader on young Tech spiker squad

by TARA HEARLIHY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Volleyball was the only reason junior setter Ginger Carter came to Texas Tech, and volleyball is what she has seen.

As a freshman in 1991, she started five matches and played in all 32. Last year as a sophomore, Carter started in 19 matches, including all 10 Southwest Conference matches.

"I thought about going to Texas A & M because my brother and sister went there," Carter admitted, "but their volleyball team wasn't as good. I came to Tech only to play."

Carter said she is glad she came to Tech and enjoys Lubbock.

"The people are very friendly here. Lubbock is not too far away from home, but it is not too close either."

Carter is a sports medicine/physical therapy major hoping to go into physical therapy.

"If I have to coach, I would want to coach at the college level," Carter said as the Raiders prepare to play Louisiana Tech tonight at 7 in the Student Recreation Center and Saturday at 2 p.m. "At the camps I have worked at, I get very frustrated because the kids don't do what I teach them as fast as I want them to.

This season, Carter has found herself in the leadership role for the Red Raiders, as the No. 1 setter for the team.

"Being the setter it is my job to call the plays," she said. "I kind of enjoy that. I like it better when the team looks to me instead of them telling me what to do. "I really don't feel any pressure. I am more relaxed than in the past. In the past seasons I wasn't as relaxed because if I messed up I was afraid the older players would look down on me. Now I don't feel like if I mess up the team will gripe at me."

Volleyball coach Mike Jones has seen changes in Carter over the past two years.

"Her leadership skills have really improved," Jones said. "She runs the team. She makes sure everything is right. She is the first person to compliment her teammates."

Jones said he also has seen an improvement in Carter's confidence.

"She is not afraid to make a big set. In Wednesday's game, she set to Jill (Slapper) who wasn't having a good game and Jill came through for the kill."

Carter said she also has seen a change in her game since she has been at Tech.

"My defense is better now. When I was a freshman I couldn't play too well. My overall game has improved, but mainly defense," she said.

"One thing about me is I am really dedicated. If there is a task that needs to be done, I do it. I don't like to have to do things."

Pacific

Carter says Tigers' talent underrated by preseason polls

to do well," Carter said.
Carter's brother Clint, a redshirt freshman, joins him on the squad this year.
"It's the first time we're both playing on the same team,"

Carter said. "As I was leaving high school he was going in."
The younger Carter will see some action on the special teams this week and is expected to be Grant's successor some day.
"He's only 18 and he weighs about what I did when I was a freshman," Carter said. "He's going to be a really solid starter for us in the future."

Pacific's offense is minus the 2,500-plus yards of offense provided the tandem of running back

Ryan Benjamin and wide receiver Aaron Turner this season, but Carter thinks the Tigers will be competitive.
"All the preseason polls are underrating us," he said. "We're not getting much respect and I think that's a mistake, we're definitely going to surprise some people."

Carter took a vacation to the Lone Star State for the first time last month and was impressed.
"I went to San Antonio and Austin," he said. "I was really impressed with Austin. I'm from a small town in Oregon so I can really relate to the people in Texas." Carter said the Tigers will show up in Lubbock with their "game faces on."

doesn't have to be complicated.

Right now, we're helping thousands of people retire comfortably. Needless to say, very few are Nobel laureates. Or microbiologists. Or astrophysicists. We make retirement planning easy for anybody to understand. You see, when our customers retire with a variable annuity, they're often better prepared financially. Whether they're geniuses or not. Call us for information about Retirement Made Easy.SM

Denton native prepares for first game against hometown team

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Aaron Graham, sophomore center for ninth-ranked Nebraska, left home in Denton to play football and his first real action as a Cornhusker will be against the school from his hometown.

North Texas comes to Lincoln Saturday for a 1 p.m. CDT meeting with the Huskers, who hold NCAA records of 31 consecutive winning seasons, 24 straight with nine victories or more and 188 home sellout crowds in row. It will be a big day for Graham, a 6-foot-3, 285-pounder.

"I'm looking forward to it. This will be the first time I'm getting in there in a starter role, if you will. It's kind of ironic I came up here to Nebraska and now I'm playing my hometown team," Graham said. Graham said it wasn't tough to leave home.

"As far as Nebraska goes, their offensive line history is superb," Graham said. "My coach is just excellent. So the reason I came here is totally for the great center history they have."

Fearless Forecasters

Welcome to another season of college football, and yes, in our infinite wisdom, we have decided to pick the games again. This week we asked our leader Kendra Casey to be our guest forecaster. Here's hoping we can do better than last season.

Washington players, coaches prepare for season opener with Stanford amid controversy

SEATTLE (AP) — Twenty months ago, the Washington Huskies capped a 12-0 season by beating Michigan in the Rose Bowl and winning a share of their first national championship. Now the team is making headlines of a different sort.

In the past 10 days, the Huskies have been hit with a two-year bowl ban and other severe sanctions by the Pac-10, lost the winningest coach in school history, and had two key players ruled ineligible for Saturday's season opener against Stanford.

These are tumultuous times for a team that has won three straight Pac-10 championships and gone to bowl games 13 of the last 14 years.

"It's been crazy around here," receiver Joe Kralik said. "Nothing would surprise me anymore."

Kralik and running back Beno Bryant must sit out the Stanford game because the NCAA said they received improper benefits from summer jobs. But the biggest name missing from the sideline will be Don James, who coached the Huskies for 18 years before resigning Aug. 22 to protest the Pac-10 penalties.

James will watch the game from a guest box high atop Husky Stadium, but his presence will be felt by his former players down on the field, who plan to wear "DJ" stickers on their helmets.

"We're dedicating the season to him," said star running back Napoleon Kaufman. "He's a great coach, and he got a raw deal."

The Huskies feel they got a raw deal from the Pac-10, which forced the school to give up 20 scholarships, 65 recruiting visits and $1.4 million in television revenue over the next two years because of NCAA violations that included boosters giving players loans, free meals and inflated wages for summer jobs.

The Huskies also think they got a bum rap from Stanford coach Bill Walsh, who called Washington's players "mercenaries" and portrayed the school as a football factory in an offseason speech. Although Walsh has apologized for the comments and claims he was misinterpreted, the Huskies aren't in a forgiving mood.

"I was disappointed and hurt," said defensive end Jamal

Fountaine, a San Francisco native who rooted for the 49ers when Walsh led them to three Super Bowl victories.

Jim Lambright, a longtime Washington assistant who was promoted to head coach after James quit, admits that he has been using Walsh's remarks to motivate the Huskies.

"I'm going to milk it for everything I can," he said. "When somebody opens the door like that, you have to take advantage of it."

Walsh knows he'll be a target of the 72,500 fans at Husky Stadium.

"I was thinking about going up there dressed as Abe Lincoln," he said.

"Nobody would recognize me in tall hat and tails."
