Bosnian conflict peacekeepers may be American

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — U.S. military planners believe that roughly 50,000 peacekeepers would be needed to implement a possible Bosnia peace accord, and about half the troops would be American, Defense Secretary Les Aspin said Sunday.

In remarks at a defense conference in Brussels, Aspin said that no final decisions had been made and he predicted it would be hard to get Congress to approve U.S. participation if the allies didn't contribute at least half the force.

Aspin's comments were the most specific to date on the size and makeup of a U.N.-sanctioned multinational force that might be asked to enforce an accord in Bosnia.

Aspin at first said it was "too sensitive" to discuss in public when asked about planning for implementing a possible peace agreement that would divide Bosnia among the warring faction of the Croats, Serbs and Muslims.

Former Vidor mayor to fight neo-Nazi parade permit

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Vidor Mayor Larry Hunter plans to ask the East Texas town's city council to deny a parade permit to a white supremacist group from Mississippi.

The Nationalists Movement, a neo-Nazi group based in Mississippi, has applied for a parade permit with the city to hold what it calls a "Victory in Vidor" rally Oct. 16.

The rally is to celebrate black residents moving from a federal housing project in this predominantly white community. City Council members could rule on the permit at its Sept. 23 meeting.

"The people of Vidor are tired of these outside groups coming in here to give our town a bad name," Hunter said.

"This group is not only from out of town, they are from out of state," he said.

Hunter, a 41-year-old lawyer, was mayor from 1989 to 1991.

Hunter says reports of housing desegregation problems and the death of Bill Simpson — the last black resident to leave the complex — make Vidor look much worse than it really is, he said.

"The majority of the people in Vidor are disgusted of the labels being put on us," Hunter said.

Vidor, population 11,000, was thrust into the spotlight earlier this month when Simpson, 37, the last black to leave the all-white public housing complex in Vidor, was gunned down on a Beaumont street just hours after moving from Vidor, where he had faced racial taunts and death threats.

Simpson was shot during a robbery attempt by suspected members of a black Beaumont street gang, police said.

Vidor is 100 miles northeast of Houston.

General, guerrilla leader sign Mideast peace accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yasser Arafat and Yitzhak Rabin, wary partners in peace after decades of enmity, stood ready to reshape the Middle East with the ceremonial signing of an agreement that will set the stateless Palestinian people on the road to independence.

"I ... am hopeful that this will lead to peace," a beaming Arafat declared Sunday after stepping off a plane at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington. It marked the PLO leader's first trip to the United States in 19 years.

And Rabin, as he left Israel for Washington, said of the accord, "I am behind it full-heartedly, knowing the chances, the prospects, at the same time the difficulties and the dangers in which we embark." For Rabin — the general who 26 years ago captured the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and Arafat — the guerrilla leader who now hopes to free them from Israeli rule, Monday's signing of an Israel-PLO accord on self-rule for Palestinians marks a moment of hope and trepidation.

South Lawn meeting

Along with President Clinton, the two men will share a stage on the South Lawn of the White House, facing 3,000 guests — former Presidents Carter and Bush, dozens of foreign ministers, and legions of Americans, Arabs and Jews who have tried to make peace in the Middle East — and millions of TV viewers around the world who will watch the ceremony live.

Broken taboos

The prospect of the encounter between Rabin and Arafat, sworn enemies until three days ago when they signed a mutual recognition pact between Israel and the PLO, generated intense speculation and disbelief Sunday amid the frenzied preparations for the signing.

"An awful lot of taboos are being broken in the last few days," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

The document will likely be signed by Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Arafat's top aide, Mahmoud Abbas. White House workers were dusting off the desk used to ink the 1979 peace agreement between Israel and Egypt — the only Arab-Israeli peace ever signed.

Handshake

On everyone's minds was whether Rabin and Arafat would shake hands.

Even before Rabin and Arafat set foot here, there was trouble. Three Israeli soldiers were killed by Muslim militants opposed to the accord, and the thorny dispute over the future of Jerusalem surfaced.

The future of the holy city is one of the issues which Israeli and PLO negotiators left to be decided at a later date.

On another track, Jordanian and Israeli officials met at the State Department Sunday on the final details of a document that could serve as a framework for a peace treaty between them. Rabin predicted a probable announcement of that agreement on Tuesday. The Israeli-Palestinian agreement foresees the election of a Palestinian council within nine months.

False IDs may be minors' key to bar scene

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Although Texas law states that a person cannot drink alcohol until they are 21, many underage drinkers use false identification cards to drink alcohol and gain entrance into bars.

Dan Cullers, captain of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, said false IDs are used mostly by college students and some high school students.

Altering your ID or using someone else's ID are common ways that false IDs are used.

IDs can be altered by removing the lamination and changing pictures or birth dates on a driver's license.

Cullers said false IDs are not a big problem because most retailers can recognize the differences between a false ID and a real one.

Bobtail Caddell, bar manager at J. Patrick O'Malley's restaurant, said false IDs are not a problem at J. Pat's.

"When we first opened, we had some problems with it (false IDs)," Caddell said. "The people who last owned it (J. Pat's), would let anyone in. We don't have a problem anymore."

Anyone trying to use a false ID at J. Pat's will be required to leave the restaurant, he said.

"If you use a false ID, it's going to be a waste of time," Caddell said. "It's going to be embarrassing. You will be thrown out."

Cullers said that using a false ID is a misdemeanor offense punishable by a $25 to $200 fine.

Kevin Kerr, a recent Texas Tech graduate, said he used a false ID when he was 16 years old and said he never had trouble drinking as a minor.

"I can basically count on one hand how many times being underage stopped me from getting in a bar," Kerr said.

Tom, a junior at Tech, said he uses a false ID and does not believe he is wrong for doing so.

"Of course it is wrong to use a false ID in the sense of the law," Tom said. "However, I'm an adult and I go to school among adults. I hang out with people who are over 21 in the daytime. So, there is no reason why I should not be able to hang out with them at night in a bar."

Job hunters can get advice at forum

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech students who anticipate getting out into the "real world" are invited to attend Employer Forum '93.

The program is at 7:30 p.m. today in Holden Hall, room 150 and is co-sponsored by the Student Association and the Career Planning and Placement Center.

Employer Forum '93 is designed to give students the opportunity to get job-hunting advice directly from a panel of employers.

"We have invited representatives from several employers to discuss exactly what they are looking for when they interview college students for professional positions and to offer their expert advice to students," CPPC Director David Kraus said.

Panelists include Shane Stewart of Iowa Beef Processing in Dakota City, Neb., Angela Sample of Enterprise Rent-a-Car, Bettye Hill of HEB grocery company and Kraus.

"This can really be an excellent opportunity for our students to hear directly from recruiters," Kraus said.

"I would strongly encourage all students, but particularly those who will be entering the job market within the next year or so, to attend."

"Also, students who are looking at cooperative education opportunities or summer internships will gain some valuable insights," he said.

Each panelist will make a brief presentation about what they, as recruiters, look for when interviewing recent graduates.

Students can then ask questions directly to the employers about the job market.

"This is a good opportunity for students to find out what employers really are seeking when they are on campus,"

Kraus said.

Deposit for the future

Defaulted fees fund scholarships

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Every Texas Tech student pays a $10 enrollment fee the first time they register, and every student has the opportunity to have the deposit refunded.

Once all fees and installments have been paid, students are entitled to the $10 refund when they withdraw, transfer or graduate from Tech.

"Students have the right to claim it (the $10 deposit) back," Vice President for Fiscal Affairs Don Cosby said. "All outstanding fees and tuition installments must have been paid."

"It ($10) can be picked up in the Bursar's Office," Cosby said.

About $150,000 is in the account, he said.

"Withdrawal students and non-graduates are eligible for the refund as well," Cosby said.

State law requires that the money not retrieved by Tech students be sent to Austin after a given time period to be dispersed among state-funded schools.

"We didn't feel it was fair to pay and donate to other schools from our students' money," Cosby said.

Tech's Board of Regents voted at its Aug. 13 meeting to default the money back to Tech by forming the Student Deposit Scholarship Fund, rather than have the money go to other schools.

"We (regents and administration) felt the money should go toward Tech students' education and not to others' scholarships," Cosby said. "The board voted to default the money back to Tech and use the monies to go toward the Tech scholarship fund."

"If we went ahead and endowed this money, there would have been no requirement for transfer to Austin and the money could be used for the benefit of Tech students," he said. "Many times, different interest groups and foundations at Tech try to get students to donate their $10 to their respective causes."

Enrollment deposits can be picked up in the Bursar's Office upon proof that fees and tuition have been paid.

U.S. government on collision course with socialism

MIKE HALL

As we enter the new age of social programs, a very simple set of political and economic concepts is being ignored by the American populous.

The two concepts I refer to are direct opposites in socialism and capitalism. Moreover, the underlying motives of these systems are security and freedom, respectively.

Socialism is diametrically opposed to capitalism. Socialism is at one end of the field, providing for, above all else, the security of the people — this security being both physical such as crime prevention and economic such as food provision. The trick is that in order for a government to provide such security the individuals of that society must surrender their freedoms.

Down on the other goal line is capitalism where the concept of valuing individual freedom above all else allows for no communal provision of security.

My point is this: Every day I hear somebody bragging about how wonderful the United States is because we have wiped communism (basically socialism) off the face of the planet. The comment might be "we are the best nation in the world, our system is right, the cold war is over and we won because we have the best way of life."

I agree, we do have the best way of life.

That way of life is the system that made us superior to the Soviets, one that is the concept of individual freedom advocated within capitalism. Yet, our way of life, that of capitalism, is being threatened.

Each new program considered for implementation in our country will move our society down the scale toward either socialism or capitalism.

Let's consider one of the Clinton administration's reforms.

Hillary's showboat of health care reform is a prime example. Referred to as nationalized health care, often even socialized medicine, these provisions of security in the way of health care will move our country toward socialism. Personal freedom in the manner of selection of service and consideration of individual needs are totally ignored under this health care program. Intended security from this plan will destroy U.S. citizen's freedom.

These socialist reforms are not new. The Socialist Party of 1912 advocated the most sweeping reforms and program implementations in support of the American working class and middle class. Among these was socialized medicine. In fact, the predominant planks in the Socialist Party platform were either implemented in previous administrations or are now currently being considered.

We have seen the eventual destructive outcome of socialism, as witnessed in the downfall of the Soviet Union. We have seen the socialist oppression of individual freedom in China. Yet some believe we should move our country in this direction. More than ever, individual freedom is being threatened.

The current administration's flirtation with socialism will incrementally destroy individual freedom in the United States, and eventually lead to the downfall of this country.

Clinton bullied by U.N.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

More than 10,000 U.S. troops, drawn mainly from the 1st Armored Division in Bad

Kreuznach, Germany, were on the verge of being sent as part of a NATO force to Bosnia-Herzegovina to impose the wrong peace in the wrong place at the wrong time. Had the Bosnian Muslims bowed to Western pressure to accept the latest surrender terms proposed by the U.N., the U.S. forces would have become guarantors of a Munich-style sellout that would have created a gulag of ghettos and encouraged future ethnic cleansing.

How did the Clinton administration stumble to this brink? First, by cravenly caving in to the French and British reluctance to arm the Muslims and to suppress Serbian-Croatian firepower from the air.

Second, by reacting to this allied rebuff with a foolish commitment to use our forces in NATO to support any surrender terms that the U.N. could work out.

Third, by abdicating operational authority to the U.N., thereby undermining our threats to use air power to stop the Serbian shelling of civilians — at a moment when the only incentive to negotiate came from the possibility of our air attacks.

Fourth, by limiting our involvement in the peace negotiations to occasional expressions of distaste, as if to dissociate the U.S. in advance from betrayal principle — and then, behind the scenes, to urge the Muslim Bosnians to swallow the repugnant terms because U.S. protection would not be forthcoming until they gave up.

No doubt the Bush acquiescence two years ago in the U.N. cutoff of arms to the Bosnian Muslims was a diplomatic blunder. But, this year's false starts belong on Bill Clinton's Balkan Mess. People of my strategic persuasion favored a hunkering-down of U.N. humanitarians on the scene while Western powers gave Serbian irregulars a taste of their own medicine. Such sustained bombing of artillery positions, supplies and bridges, combined with an increased blockade of Serbia and Croatia, would have set the stage for a partition that would not have left Bosnia an economic basket case, its survivors the world's wards.

Instead, what we have now is the undeniable appearance of the promise of U.S. ground troop involvement in the U.S.-led policing of a surrender that the American people had no say in and want no part of. American lives would be at risk in a protected entanglement where U.S. policy never came into play and U.S. diplomatic muscle was never applied.

No, thanks. The inept Clinton secretary of state has given a blank check to the U.N.'s Boutros Boutros-Ghali: You decide what the policy is to be and how much it will cost in lives and treasure, and the U.S. will obey. Is America to be a payer but not a player?

When Mr. Clinton finally gives a speech wrapping himself in the glories of multilateralism, he will not be able to sell the U.N.-brokered surrender as remotely honorable, especially considering the U.N.'s one-sided disarmament. If he continues tacitly to endorse the U.N. deal, he could only plead that slow strangulation in ghettos would be better than quick death in war.

Such argument would draw derision from across the spectrum because America will not defend with its lives what it cannot defend with its conscience. The problem is not the Bosnian unwillingness to submit to hopelessness like good victims; the problem is the Serbo-Croat demand for Muslim humiliation and the Western powers' lack of backbone.

What can Mr. Clinton do now? He can get on the hook to Mitterrand and Major with changes of the U.N. terms to give Muslim Bosnia some territorial contiguity and undisputed control of its capital of Sarejevo. He should arrange swift, certain NATO retaliation for any aggression during negotiations. He should set the terms for the participation of U.S. forces in NATO peacemaking, not make our troops pawns in U.N. hand wringing.

Time is running out, Mr. Clinton. Avoid the U.N. trap. Send Europe the message: Bosnia alive or NATO dead.

Four times a charm as NASA sends crew to dispatch satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — On its fourth try, Discovery roared away Sunday with five astronauts who dispatched an experimental communications satellite after overcoming last-minute trouble.

They were jubilant to be in space at last.

"Hey Houston, I gotta tell ya, you've never seen five happier guys up here," commander Frank Culbertson Jr. told Mission Control shortly after reaching orbit.

"It's been a long time coming."

The astronauts accomplished one of their chief jobs when they ejected the Advanced Communications Technology Satellite. They had to delay release by 1 1/2 hours, or one orbit, because of a temporary drop in communications from the ground to Discovery.

"Excellent work by the whole team. Good show," Mission Control's Gregory Harbaugh told the crew.

An attached rocket was to propel the satellite from the shuttle's 184-mile-high orbit to an altitude of 22,300 miles.

Discovery's flight had been delayed five times since mid-July for equipment failures, payload concerns and even a meteor shower. Two of the three earlier countdowns had been halted in the final 19 seconds.

This time—countdown No. 4 — everything worked and Discovery rose promptly at 7:45 a.m. from its seaside launch pad.

Two engine pump sensors failed on the way up, but that posed no problem since identical sensors worked fine, said launch director Bob Sieck.

If one of those sensors had failed prior to launch, however, it would have meant another aborted launch. It is NASA's 57th shuttle mission and the fifth this year.

Besides deploying the communications satellite and an ultraviolet telescope, the crew is to conduct a six-hour spacewalk.

The spacewalk is designed to test tools needed for the Hubble Space Telescope repair mission in December.

The communications satellite carried up by Discovery, called ACTS, is designed to transmit data 20 times faster than present craft.

Project managers said it could, one day, shrink the size of satellite dishes to 1 1/2 feet in diameter.

The satellite cost $363 million and the attached rocket another $100 million.

The star-scanning ultraviolet telescope, to be released Monday, is mounted on a reusable German platform along with a spectrograph to study interstellar gas.

The astronauts are to retrieve the platform before coming home.

Ware criticizes jury qualification law

by MIKE HALL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A change in the jury qualification laws by the Texas Legislature has received criticism by Lubbock County District Attorney Travis Ware.

The change, which was part of a bill sponsored by Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, expands the potential juror pool by making anyone with a Texas driver's license eligible for jury duty.

Previously, juries were drawn from voter registration role sheets.

Anya Powell, Stiles' administrative assistant, said the change is meant to improve the quality of jurors.

She said many people do not register to vote in order to avoid jury duty.

"I think the new law actually encourages people to register to vote," she said. "If you are in the pool anyway, there's no need to not register."

"The previous system was limiting the judicial system's ability to get good jurors," Powell said. "The whole point of the bill was to expand the jury pool."

Ware said the change is unnecessary and said there are too many potential problems to justify the change.

"Those of us who have seen this change come about feel that it is detrimental to the system," he said. "People who are either unqualified or have no stake in the community can end up on a jury."

Qualifications for serving on a jury are the same as for getting a voter registration card, Ware said.

"There was no better way to qualify jurors than to pick them from a list of voters," he said.

The law stated that convicted felons and persons on probation or under indictment are not qualified to serve as jurors.

"What concerns us is if we were to not find information telling us a juror was unqualified and a person who has been convicted of crimes ends up on a jury," Ware said.

A juror's lack of concern for community affairs is another problem with the change, Ware said.

"They may have lived here a very short time and may never have voted in this area, and perhaps have no ties to this community," he said. "We like to see that those selected for jury duty have ties to the community. We think that they will be more responsible as jurors because they are more dedicated to their community."

WE ARE SEEING SOME JURIES ACQUIT PEOPLE ON CASES WHERE THEY NEVER WOULD HAVE ACQUITTED IN THE PAST.

Travis Ware

"If jurors are going to make a statement about what kind of conduct in their community they feel is tolerable or intolerable, they ought to have a stake in that community," Ware said.

Cases that would have been convictions under the old system were now being acquittals, he said.

"We are seeing some juries acquit people on cases where they never would have acquitted in the past," Ware said. "In several instances, we can point to the change in the selection law as a factor in more acquittals."

Powell said the change was primarily to benefit rural areas where jury pools are inadequate in size.

"We were seeing a great deal of duplication in several rural areas," Powell said. "There just weren't enough jurors. This seemed to be the most successful approach to widening jury pools."

Ware said rural communities would suffer the most from the change.

"They don't have the computer systems we have," he said. "The chances for them to get an unqualified juror are just too great."

Hutchison defends campaign

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison reloaded and fired back at a weekend luncheon that Democrats are behind the criminal investigation against her.

At the Dallas luncheon on Saturday, designed to prime party workers for the senator's 1994 re-election, Hutchison again denied any wrong doing during her tenure as state treasurer, a post she resigned in June of this year.

Hutchison has repeatedly said that Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, a Democrat, is bent on a "character assassination" of her.

"There is no question that this is being done to me because I won 239 counties out of 254 counties in this state," she said.

Earle has defended his handling of the investigation and called the personal attacks directed at him by Hutchison and other Republicans "the most bizarre thing I have ever seen in any investigation my office has conducted."

Hutchison testified Thursday but declined to say whether she followed her lawyer's advice.

Grand jurors on Friday continued their probe into claims state workers and equipment were used for political purposes at the Texas Treasury under Hutchison's leadership.

Also under investigation are whether Treasury records were tampered with or destroyed during Hutchison's tenure at the department.

The May 12 subpoena ordered former Hutchison aide David Criss to produce records concerning Hutchison, the Treasury and Hutchison's political campaigns.

BA students learn by more than lectures with new, multimedia classrooms

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

What do MTV, Nintendo games and accounting classes have in common? Much more than usual since the implementation of four multimedia classrooms in the College of Business Administration.

"Students are so used to the highly technological video world we live in," finance associate professor Scott MacDonald said. "The only way we can educate them is to get their attention."

"We now have four (multimedia classrooms) that are 90 percent functional," he said. "The full video and sound equipment is not quite available, but it should be by next week."

The installation was a race against technology, MacDonald said.

"It (technology) has moved so fast in a short period of time," he said. "We waited until we could get the new projector so we can use more light in the classroom."

Accounting professor Jim Lampe said, "The projector is like a big screen TV unit. Except, it (the projector) takes images from the television and computer and projects it on the screen."

The classrooms also are equipped with a multimedia conversion box and a full-motion video adaptor.

The conversion box takes input from the computer, video cassette recorder and projector and places it on the same screen, MacDonald said.

The full-motion adaptor card allows professors to implement sections of videos into their presentations.

"One example is, if I have a 30-minute film on the stock market and I want to talk about one common stock, I could go to the video, cut out two or three minutes and put it right in the middle of the lecture," MacDonald said.

Grant Savage, associate professor of management and health organization management, said the multimedia system enhances the delivery and retention of the program.

"You are manipulating text, visual images, audio tracts and still-graphic images," Savage said.

"And, (you are) merging them together to create a collage," he said.

Students who miss a class or who do not understand a lecture can review the presentations, Lampe said.

"They can go see what screens were projected during the entire semester," he said. "The screen presentations are available to students at any time."

Savage said the multimedia system makes it easier to modify lectures.

"We can just call them (lectures) up on the computer," he said. "It's similar to the difference between re-typing an entire page report and having it on a word processor."

Lampe said that, although the multimedia system has not made teaching easier, he believes it will make teaching more effective.

"Hopefully, students will see a more sophisticated and more interesting presentation of the material," he said.

The College of Business Administration previously had two classrooms with computer projection equipment, but now four multimedia classrooms are fully operational.

The classrooms became operational Aug. 30.

Student teachers receive support from area schools

by MEGAN CLARKE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Working around the clock and behind the scenes, Texas Tech's new director of field experiences donates time and effort to her students.

"As the director, I do field-based placement for student teachers," Lynn Elms said. "I make sure students who are pursuing a career in teaching are placed in schools with teachers that are qualified mentors."

About 390 students in Tech's College of Education are seeking experience in a student teacher capacity.

Elms said she places Tech students in the Lubbock, Frenship, Roosevelt, Tahoka, Denver City and Levelland independent school districts.

"Sometimes I visit schools to make sure students fulfill their end of the student teacher and mentor teacher contract," Elms said. "I usually attend classes at Coronado High School and Bowie Elementary School to check up on my students."

Elms said she is fond of the Lubbock community and its support of Tech's student teachers.

"We are so fortunate to have such an area to work with," she said. "Since the removal of the Career Ladder program, teachers no longer get paid for having student teachers. They believe having a student teacher will benefit their own profession. I am really grateful to have so much qualified professionalism."

Elms said her job is untraditional it provides her with something new each day.

"I really love everything about my job," Elms said. "The people I work with are both kind and supportive. My experience working with the students has also been wonderful. They have so many great, fresh ideas to bring to the teaching profession."

Elms graduated from Tech in 1976 with a master's degree in theater arts education.

She has been employed at Tech for more than 10 years and has served as a student teacher supervisor in the College of Education.

Tech's SPJ plans speaker series for all majors

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's Society of Professional Journalists will begin its fall meeting series at noon today in the mass communications building, room 223.

The series' theme is, "Professionalism is in the bag with SPJ," and today's theme is, "So you want to be a journalist? Career outlook for the '90s."

Speakers include Diane Dotson, KCBD-TV's news producer; Randy Sanders, Lubbock Avalanche-Journal managing editor; and David Kraus, Tech's Career Planning and Placement director.

"We want everyone to bring a brown bag lunch and listen to the short speeches from our speakers," SPJ President Debra Graves said. "We're going to open the floor for questions and answers after the presentations."

Graves said SPJ is trying to change its agenda this year to be more practical and relevant to the group's causes.

"The meeting is open to all majors that show an interest in journalism and careers in the media," Graves said. "Our goal is to mix people from the professional world with our students to cover issues (that) we, as journalists, might be overlooking."

"We need to pay more attention to these issues and, in turn, improve our professionalism," she said.

Two more meetings will be conducted later this semester with the same format.

Information about SPJ membership will be available at today's meeting.

COWBOYS AND INDIANS

Germans model European Lubbock City after West Texas town

Flat, empty spaces. Cattle and cowboy hats. Funny accents. Nothingness.

These are the stereotypes often used to describe Lubbock and the surrounding region, known as the Llano Estacado. But these are also the characteristics that Germans capitalized on as they recreated the Hub City in their native land.

Yes, Lubbock, with all of its West Texas charm, has a counterpart overseas in a small town called Lubbock City, Germany. The German version is complete with a chuckwagon, church, and of course, a saloon, all modeled after the American West read about in books and glorified by the adventures of John Wayne and other television legends.

On the weekends, members of the Friends of the Western Indian, a German club for cowboy enthusiasts live in this little village outside Cologne, Germany. They dress in hand-sewn western wear and grill their dinners, which vary from barbecue to bratwurst.

And they read books about the culture of the Old West.

This weekend, 13 members of the club traveled to Lubbock to participate in the National Cowboy Symposium and to gain honorary citizenship from the town which they have tried to emulate, Lubbock, Texas.

"I did not know very much about Lubbock when I came here," said Sabine Nazarech, a 31-year-old member of the group. "I knew that the first pioneer in the region was German, but I did not know how friendly the people were."

This partnership between Germans and Americans began in 1973 when members of the club traveled from Germany to ask Lubbock officials if they could name their chapter after the Hub City. The German visitors were granted honorary citizenship certificates, which they now display in their replica town. Interest in the club has grown since this initial contact, she said.

Meredith McClain, a Texas Tech associate professor in German who has visited Lubbock City, Germany, said the town presents an interesting mix of the two cultures. Some of the houses in the German city are decorated with American flags and steer heads against a background of German cabinets and curtains, she said.

This mixing of cultures also provides a good opportunity for people from both cultures to understand each other, McClain said. "They want to see our nothingness," she said. "They want to see a rattlesnake at a distance, and meet the people here."

Rapping with KTXT's Sunday Jam

by LARA CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Every Sunday night, a different kind of music is broadcast in Lubbock.

Jazz, rhythm and blues, rap, reggae and urban contemporary music are blaring over 88.1 KTXT-FM from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. on the Sunday Jam, the station's longest-running specialty show.

"We're the only outlet for urban music on the South Plains," said Cory Powell, "Professor P" on the show.

The show has received a great deal of support from the people of Lubbock.

"We get a lot of feedback from the community," said Jason Wright, known as "T-Nice" on the show. "We get a hands-on look at what people want."

Three years ago, a petition with 1,500 signatures was presented to KTXT programmers asking that the show be expanded from three to six hours.

"More people listen from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Sunday than the whole rest of the week," Powell said.

Creating a positive image for the show is one of the goals of the volunteer students who are disc jockeys on the Jam. One way they do this is to stay away from negative music.

"The show is very up," Powell said. "We try to avoid songs with violence and drugs."

The shows programmers said they want to keep Lubbock listeners up to date on urban music.

"People say Lubbock is out of touch (with urban music)," said Telea Johnson, "Precious" on the show. "So, when I go home to Dallas, I try to listen to what the stations there are playing, and bring that sound back."

"Unless you have B.E.T. (the Black Entertainment Channel) and watch it, you're out of touch," Powell said.

The show's popularity is demonstrated each week when the phones start ringing at 7 p.m. and do not stop until 1 a.m.

"There is non-stop ringing," Johnson said. "We have three people to pull music and answer the phones."

"When you're answering phones, you have to learn patience," Powell said. "If you're alone, you don't go on the mike because the phones are always ringing."

Powell said the closeness of the crew helps make the Jam work as well as it does.

"The show would not be as successful as it is without the support system," Powell said. "We just try to have fun." Other members of the crew include Tiffany Berry as "T-Bear," Lynn Taylor as "Black Pearl," and Teddy Henson as "Teddy."

The crew said they hope to reach more college students.

"A lot of people don't even know we're here," Johnson said.

Although KTXT is a non-commercial learning station, the members of the Jam try to take their show beyond the learning stage.

"For us, it's more than just something to do," Wright said.

Jammin'
Telea Johnson, Jason Wright and Cory Powell make up part of the KTXT's Sunday Jam crew.

Nebraska fans class act all the way

LEN HAYWARD
Cornhusker fan.

You are a fan of a team that has won at least nine games in each of the last 10 seasons, and went to a bowl game all of those years.

You face a team like Texas Tech, and you think, "I don't know much about this team. Who are these guys?"

You learn some names from the program, and watch your Huskers go down 21-20 in the third quarter and realize these guys from Texas are a good football team.

But your Huskers use their power and homefield advantage to take the big 50-27 win.

You should be happy and partying, right, but what do you do, when the gun sounds and Texas Tech goes off the field, you give the visitors from Lubbock a standing ovation.

This is what a stadium full of fans did at Memorial Stadium Saturday after their beloved Cornhuskers had just beaten a team by 23 points.

And to top it all off, Nebraska fans lined the walkway to Tech's locker room while giving the Red Raiders an ovation there also.

This is the type of thing that puts Nebraska in a league all of its own. Its fans make you feel appreciated for coming to their stadium and getting beat.

Nebraska fans do this for any team that plays in Memorial Stadium, not just teams that play them well. The fans even did this for North Texas last week.

Nebraska fans don't just like to watch their favorite team play, they like to watch the game. Sometimes the game is lost in rooting for your team. If Texas were to do something like this you know what would freeze over.

Class is the only word to describe the Cornhusker fans.

They enjoy the competition, and that's what they got Saturday.

These people know they have a great football team and probably always will, but they like to see their Cornhuskers challenged.

The local newspapers, the Omaha World-Herald and the Lincoln Journal, wrote good things, and did not revel in the home team's victory.

Nebraska is a top 10 team, but their fans are No. 1 in my book.

Len Hayward is the sports editor for The University Daily.

Cornhuskers take advantage of Raider mistakes for 50-27 win

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

LINCOLN, Neb. — It may be characterized as a game of missed opportunities or costly mistakes, but whatever you want to call it Texas Tech put a scare in 75,771 Nebraska fans here Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

For a brief moment in the third quarter Tech seemed to be on its way to possibly the biggest upset of the young season.

But two turnovers at the end of the third quarter gave the No. 9 Cornhuskers enough momentum for a 50-27 win Saturday.

"We proved we could play with a top 10 team," coach Spike Dykes said after the game. "But we found out that we are not where we need to be with poise. We can learn from this."

After junior defensive end Damon Wickware hit Cornhusker quarterback

Tommie Frazier and causing a fumble with 9:01 left in the third quarter, Tech took some momentum and the sold-out crowd out of the game for a moment.

It only took the Red Raiders one play to strike as quarterback Robert Hall hit fullback Bruce Hill in the flat. Hill then finished off the screen pass with a gritty 26-yard run striking paydirt. Jon Davis made the ensuing extra point, and after playing catch up in the first half Tech had the lead for the first time in the game at 21-20.

"We gave up too many big plays defensively, but of course they had a fine receiver, a great quarterback and a good running back," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said after the game.

Nebraska responded by driving 68 yards, capped by a 29-yard field goal by Byron Bennett with 4:00 left in the third quarter.

Tech took the ball on the ensuing kickoff at its own 26-yard line, when on third down Robert Hall was sacked by 'Husker defensive end Trev Alberts causing a fumble at Tech's 23.

Five plays later, Nebraska capitalized by scoring on a five-yard pass from Frazier to tight end Gerald Armstrong giving the Cornhuskers a nine-point lead of 30-21 with 1:24 left in the quarter.

Then things began to fall apart for the Raiders.

After Derrell Mitchell fumbled the ensuing kickoff, Nebraska recovered on the five-yard line, scoring once again this time on a two-yard run by Damon Benning. In less than three minutes Tech went from being down by two points to trailing by 15 points.

"We had a mental breakdown and we just have to come out and play four quarters," splitend Lloyd Hill said after the game. "Eliminate some mistakes and we would come in (the locker room) happy and cheering."

Nebraska opened up the scoring in the first quarter, driving 80 yards in 3:58, capped by a 45-yard TD run by Benning.

Tech had trouble getting its offense going early in the period, until the end of the first quarter when Nebraska was penalized three times in the same series.

Tech took advantage of the mistakes when the Raiders got the ball on their own 19-yard line.

The Raider offense for the first time in the game began to click, as they drove down the field on the Cornhusker defense.

The drive was capped by a 34-yard touchdown pass from Hall to Mitchell, cutting the 10-0 Nebraska lead to 10-7.

Nebraska responded at the first of the quarter on a one-yard touchdown run by Tommie Frazier, but Tech did not die.

The Raiders were stopped on third down, but a roughing the kicker penalty against the Cornhuskers gave Tech new life.

Tech scored on a 51-yard pass from Hall to Lloyd Hill, who grabbed the ball in between two defenders and carried one player into the end zone. Tech cut the lead to three points at 17-14.

Tech spikers fall to Gonzaga in tourney final

The Texas Tech women's volleyball team lost its first match of the season this weekend at the Gonzaga Spikeoff in Spokane, Wash.

Gonzaga beat the Red Raiders 16-14, 15-13, 10-15, and 15-12 in Saturday's championship game of the two-day tourney.

Tech (6-1) also played Oregon and Weber State.

On Friday, the Raiders beat the Ducks 15-4, 11-15, 15-12, and 15-11 and on Saturday afternoon, the Raiders defeated the Wildcats in four games, 15-6, 10-15, 15-13, and 16-14.

In the match against the Bulldogs, the Raiders were out hit and out set.

Gonzaga's Nancy Miller recorded 23 kills against Tech and setter Tracy McKinney had 49 assists.

Tech had 12 service aces in the match, but 11 service errors. Gonzaga had 12 aces and 14 errors.

In the third game against the Bulldogs, Tech won 15-10 and had a .417 hitting percentage. Gonzaga had a higher percentage in the three other games.

Carter had 60 sets and 18 digs in the match against Weber State. Sophomore middle blocker Jennifer Cohn had the team-high of 16 kills with Erica Ruegg following with 14.

Against Oregon, Ginger Carter had 58 sets. Chris Fehrle-Zelaya had 15 kills while Ruegg had 14. Ruegg had a .290 hitting percentage in the match.

Senior middle blocker Ruegg and Carter were named to the 1993 Spikeoff All-Tournament Team.

Women's golf team takes third at tournament

The Texas Tech women's golf team finished in third place during its first tournament of the season, the 10th Annual Diet Coke-Roadrunner Invitational in Las Cruces, N.M.

Tech's three-round total was 929, only six strokes from a second-place finish. Oklahoma and Arizona finished ahead of Tech at the weekend tourney.

Junior Tracy Thomson led the way for Tech with a three-round total of 229, placing in sixth.

The other finishers for Tech included: Stacy Kolb in a ninth-place tie; Tamara Parker at 13th; and J.J. Rorie tied for 15th.

Cross country teams fare well at weekend meets

The Texas Tech men's and women's cross country teams each took second-place finishes in separate season-opening meets this weekend.

The men competed in Arlington at the Texas-Arlington Invitational and the women traveled to Abilene to compete in the Abilene Christian Invitational.

Ralph Ayaad spearheaded the men, with a third-place finish of 19:56 in the four-mile run.

Other Tech runners in the meet included Gabe Ruiz, with a fifth-place finish of 20:06, Bill Bush 20:41, Don Koontz 20:45, Joe Perez 20:47, Ben Friedman 21:34 and Quent Bearden ran a 24:04 to round out the Tech men.

On the women's side, Mandy Malouf finished sixth overall with a 19:48, while Luisa Tam ran 20:15 to finish eighth.

"I was really pleased by the way our team did overall," coach Kirk Elias said. "We had a race plan and they stuck by it."

The women ran this week without the services of sophomore Jill Williams who is out with a heel injury, and senior Gunilla Andersson, who is coming off of racing in Europe.

"No question, we ran without some of our big horses this week," Elias said. "I viewed this as primarily a workout so I'm not concerned about the team standings yet."

This week the team goes to San Diego State for the Aztec Invitational.

"That's going to be a big step up in competition," Elias said.
