Jordan refuses Palestinians

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) -Jordan will not accept Palestinian refugees who leave Syria and Lebanon, a government official said Sunday, because "our land and our economy cannot take it any more."

Information Minister Maan Abu Nouwar said the United States must help find an answer to the problem of the refugees. Most were forced out of their homes in Palestine when Israel was created in 1948.

Abu Nouwar's comments came amid reports that Syria and Lebanon might expel Palestinian refugees once a settlement is reached in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Jordan already hosts 1.2 million Palestinians who fled there in the 167 Middle East war and 600,000 others who came after 1948.

At least 300,000 Palestinian refugees live in Syria and 325,000 in Lebanon, according to U.N. statistics.

It is unclear how many of them will be allowed to return to the West Bank and Gaza Strip — or how many will want to—under a Sept. 1 peace accord between Israel and the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Inmates are Girl Scout members

JESSUP, Md. (AP) — Twice a month, Rochelle Gilliam's 5year-old daughter rides a bus to Maryland's only women's prison, passing through gates topped with razor-sharp wire. It's not just any visit. It's for her Girl Scout troop meeting.

"She looks forward to coming here, and I look forward to it," said Gilliam, who is serving 10 years for robbery and a probation violation. "My mother tells me that she gets up on Saturday mornings and waits for the bus."

Gilliam, 25, and about 30 other inmates at the Maryland Correctional Institution for Women are members of Girl Scout Troops 2140, 2141 and 2142.

It's the nation's first "Girl Scouts Behind Bars" program. Established last November, the program is designed to ease the children's trauma and give their mothers a chance to establish closer bonds.

"Children on the outside say, 'I'm going with my mother,' and she always has to say, I'm going with my grandmother," Gilliam said. "Iknow I miss my own mother, so I understand the hurt she feels."

The program, which has won praise from Attorney General Janet Reno and the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, is intended to help end the cycle incarceration generations of the same families.

Some children, especially younger ones, see their mothers arrested and taken away, but they don't know what has happened to them, said Marilyn Moses, program manager for the Justice Department's National Institute of Justice.

HEAVY METAL SECURITY

by JENNIFER GOOCH THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A metal detector is available for Texas Tech student organizations wanting to add extra security to their on- or off-campus events.

The detector was purchased by Tech's University Police Department with Higher Education Assistance Funds at a cost of $3,400. The price included the standing unit and a handheld unit. "It's something they bought as another crime prevention tool," said Steve Kauffman, news manager for University News and Publications. The detector can be rented to organizations at the University Center's Main Office.

Kauffman said the organization must pay a rental fee that includes assistance by a UPD officer. "The unit is available for rent, but they don't

Mexico cut off from Texas lifeline by U.S. Border Patrol in El Paso

Two sisters were unmercifully ripped apart last weekend in a fight that involves crime, squalor and most importantly federal tax dollars.

The sister cities of Juarez and El Paso — once traders of everything from shopping centers to industrial pollution have been separated at the economic heart by the U.S. Border Patrol.

The patrol began placing guards about every 25 feet along a 20-mile stretch of the U.S.-Mexico border Sept. 19 in a multifaceted operation to cut the cords that have connected the two metropolises.

The operation has not been easy. The razor sharp incision of law enforcement into the area has caused the spurting of America's blood — the tax dollar — to the height of $300,000 in overtime for two weeks. And, plans for the indefinite continuation of the border watch still leave funding problems in their wake.

Local watchdogs also report that shopping in El Paso's southside has spiraled downward since the immigration flow has been reduced.

Despite these problems, American law enforcement has finally realized its job — to enforce the law.

If a law is important enough to keep on the legal books, then it should be enforced, and enforced well. Because of underfunding and low staffs, the patrol has often failed at this task.

The immigration statutes are laws that have always been overlooked, if not laughed at and ignored, or seen as silly little rules that do not apply in border towns.

But these immigration rules do apply.

America has finally taken a step to enforce its own laws without bending to the common belly-aching that leaves the "Tortilla Wall" open to immigration.

Since the "closing" of El Paso, the rate of car theft has plummeted. Other spinoff benefits of the mission have not been realized yet, but the operation still is in its infancy.

Until the operation is completed, the U.S. population can only sit and wait for the prognosis of some policy wonks in D.C. or a public outcry from the streets of the city to determine whether this program should continue.

If following the law is important, it should continue. And what about the fate of these two sister cities — who have been forever joined by their culture and economy?

They will continue to exist, as they should, in separate nations with separate populations.

The sisters have been wrenched apart in a brave effort by the border patrol.

Hopefully, no family reunions are being planned.

Clinton striving for excellence among mediocrity except that RUSSELL it's good? That's why BAKER

President Clinton wants a government made up of people as diverse as America. A government as diverse as all America would be good: so runs the season's wisdom.

talks about

diversity, but what do we

Yet how many know that one of the early advocates of diversity in government was mocked and ridiculed, especially by progressive people, for speaking out in favor of this principle now so widely admired, especially by progressive people?

I refer to Sen. Roman L. Hruska, a Nebraska Republican during the Nixon administration. When President Nixon nominated Judge G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court, liberal Democrats objected that, among other things, Carswell was too "mediocre" to deserve a seat on the highest court.

Hruska titillated all humanity by asking why mediocrity should be a disqualification for high government position. In a nation that cherished the "average man" — another Everybody way of saying "human mediocrity" — mediocre people were entitled to have one of know about it their own on the Court, he argued

> Poor Hruska. The hoots and jeers of all good people as good as people were defined in that blighted America of a generation ago — were deafening. Such is the fate of all those who are right too soon. (Carswell's nomination, incidentally, was defeated, and the Supreme Court seat finally went to Harry Blackmun.)

Why doesn't President Clinton try to enrich the diversity of his government by choosing a few mediocre people for high office? It's hard to say. He may assume that many among the diverse variety he has appointed will, without much fuss, just naturally contribute mediocrity galore.

That's what usually happens among presidents' appointees, so maybe Clinton thinks, "Why waste energy making a house-to-house search for appointees mediocre enough to be role models for every C student between Hawaii and West Musquash, Maine?"

Still, by making no showoff effort to install a single mediocrity in his official family, the president leaves himself open to the suspicion that he still clings to the discredited belief in "excellence."

The worship of "excellence" began even before Hruska was humiliated for urging diversity in government. It was an idea sold by Adm. Hyman Rickover after Soviet science put a satellite in faintly false ring of another Earth orbit ahead of the United States. Rickover, famous for promoting the nuclear submarine, poured it on American education for graduating a lot of ninnies and goaded everyone to pursue "excellence." That's why it's been practically impossible ever since to survive the day without hearing somebody talk about "excellence."

In the three decades since Rickover quite sensibly urged our educators to march under the same banner of "Excellence!" public education has ...

Well, never mind, we're not Rickover wasn't wrong talking calamity today, just diversity. About education, simply note that it reached its present condition while being inspired by three decades of public oratory about the nation's solemn devotion to "excellence."

Had Clinton made a conscious effort to include mediocrity in his diverse government, civilized people would surely sleep a little better. It might have been a signal that somebody in power finally recognized that we were deceiving ourselves all those years by paying lip service to "excellence" while the kids were buying pistols for the schoolroom.

"Diversity," alas, has the fashionable cant word. Can it be just another, more upto-date way of saying "excellence"?

"Diversity" — the word invites us to suppose that by searching the full American spectrum for government talent, the president has picked from a richer pool than his predecessors. In short, that there will be more "excellence" than ever.

Here in the ruins of several institutions that once worked at least passably well, maybe we are justified in wondering if from the outset about excellence.

Excellence can be brutally hard to achieve for all but the blessed few.

Maybe it wasn't excellence the country needed. Maybe it was just competence.

Idol shares gum with fan

LOS ANGELES (AP) -Joey Lawrence of "Blossom" knows he's the latest heartthrob of the bubblegum set, but he doesn't know why.

"I can't explain it," Lawrence said. "I still can't get over girls screaming and chanting and fainting."

The 17-year-old launched his career at age 5. He went on to do TV commercials and was a "Gimme a Break" co-star for four years.

He now plays dim-witted Joey Russo on "Blossom."

His fans are so crazy about him one girl recently begged him for the wad of gum he was chewing. He handed it

Five years ago he was the Country Music Association's newcomer of the year. Today, the vocalist from Grit, Va., is a talented and respected artist, according to CMA.

Van Shelton says he dislikes being on the road because the bus rides are long and lonely. Even though he hates traveling, he said he loves performing and said the two seem to balance out.
