Local groups give Tech students healthy advice

Those attending the second annual health fair at Texas Tech Thursday had the opportunity to receive information from several community and campus health organizations.

The Eta Lambda chapter of Delta Sigma Theta sorority hosted the health fair from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the University Center.

More than 1,000 students attended the event, which included activities from the University Police Department, Tech's School of Nursing and the South Plains Aids Resource Center.

Organizational representatives had information available to students and some free health screenings were offered.

SPARC representatives had information available about AIDS and conducted free anonymous HIV testing for students.

More than 100 students took advantage of the testing and will obtain their results in about two weeks.

Barbara Pierce, SPARC's director of education, said the purpose of their involvement in the fair was to heighten AIDS awareness and answer questions.

Free condoms also were available at SPARC's booth.

UPD officials provided information about safety and crime prevention.

Jim Oswald, a UPD crime prevention officer, engraved more than 185 key chains with drivers license numbers, so that if the key chain is lost, the keys can be returned to the owner.

He also offered assistance to individuals wanting more information or wanting to give a presentation about crime prevention.

The School of Nursing provided free blood pressure testing for students. Individuals with high blood pressure were advised to see a physician.

"Most students do not know their blood pressure," said Monica Goff, an ambassador for the School of Nursing and a sophomore nursing major from Fort Worth. "This gives students the chance to see how healthy they are."

Representatives from the University Medical Center for Preventative Medicine also were available to provide information.

SPARC gets prairie twist

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A production benefiting the South Plains Aids Resource Center will present guest speaker Alison Arngrim Saturday.

Arngrim played Nellie Oleson for seven years on the television series, "Little House on the Prairie."

Since her time on the television show, Arngrim has worked on stage and in films.

She began speaking about AIDS-related issues after being affected by the death of one of her co-stars from "Little House on the Prairie."

Steve Tracy, who played her husband on the series, died from the virus.

Following his death, Arngrim became an advocate for individuals living with the AIDS virus.

She will be speaking at the Mixed Media Production of "As Is" at 8 p.m. Saturday at 3207 34th St. The cost is $8 and reservations can be made by calling 791-1961.

Arngrim and the cast from "As Is" will be available to speak with the public during a reception after the production.

The production will be running from Oct. 8 through Oct. 10 and from Oct. 15 through Oct. 17.

The production contains insight about people living with AIDS, said Darrell Strange, development director and volunteer coordinator of SPARC.

"As Is" was written by William Hoffman and explains the journey a person goes through and how they deal with the problems associated with the virus.

"It shows how the individuals deal with the struggles on a daily basis," Strange said.

All proceeds from the production will be used by SPARC and by the center's 233 clients. Strange said individuals should attend the production to get an insight about the difficulties of AIDS.

State will not support some students

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Doctoral students who exceed 130 hours beyond the master's degree beginning in the fall of 1995 will not be permitted to pay regular graduate school tuition rates because of new Texas legislation.

"Doctoral students who exceed 130 hours after their master's will not be supported by the state subsidy," Graduate School Dean Clyde Hendrick said. "Further, the law gives universities the right to charge an out-of-state tuition rate."

Hendrick said, all things considered, Texas Tech officials are going to have to charge out-of-state tuition.

"That was on the agenda for the Board of Regents' meeting in October," he said.

Hendrick said the doctoral hours issue was resolved in October, with the regents approving "the charge of tuition at non-resident rates for all doctoral hours taken beyond the limits established by the legislature."

"This policy shall become effective with enrollments for the fall semester of 1995," Hendrick said.

"We've got a couple of years of grace," he said.

Hendrick said one recommendation for the doctoral hours legislation was a 12-hour enrollment requirement for doctoral students living on-campus and a 3-hour requirement for students living off-campus.

"It is an important set of issues," he said.

Hendrick said something has to change.

"It's clear that some of our students are generating too many doctoral hours, particularly in their dissertations," he said. "At this point, this is not an issue to roughly oversee."

Hendrick said a very large fraction of Tech's doctoral students are generating more than 130 hours.

"A lot of those (hours) are explainable," Hendrick said.

He also said the state has spoken and will not pay anymore.

"I would consider it an exploitation of us (Tech) if it (number of hours) were to be cut anymore," Hendrick said. "But, it won't be up to me."

Executive Vice President and Provost Don Haragan said Tech must follow the new law.

"Supposedly, the out-of-state rate is representative of the true cost of education," Haragan said.

He said he does not personally approve of capping the hours, but said Tech must adhere to the ruling.

"We will probably be able to work within this ruling without difficulty," Haragan said.

Walk will honor American Indians

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

American Indians of West Texas will pay tribute to their ancestors with a memorial walk Oct. 10.

The second annual two mile Native American Memorial Walk is organized by the West Texas Native American Association, and provides a chance to honor American Indian ancestors and pay tribute to them, said Lew Harmonson, president of the association and a Dakota Sioux Indian.

"It is just like visiting a grave, but this is our way to pay respects to our loved ones," Harmonson said.

The walk will begin at 8 a.m. Sunday at the Ranching Heritage parking lot and will continue north see WALK page 6

Lawless urges senators to end tortilla tossing

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech President Robert Lawless urged student senators Thursday to use their influence on campus to stop tortilla tossing during Red Raider football games.

Despite some students' attempts to make tortilla tossing the latest Tech tradition, Lawless said it is nothing else but "throwing food."

"I know it was big in (the movie) 'Animal House,' but I don't think that's really what our institution is all about," he said.

Lawless said he believes the only way to stop the tossing is for students to realize the effects it has on the university.

Senate President Jay House said he agrees with Lawless and said that the senate may soon look into passing some legislation to combat tortilla tossing.

"We need to focus on the traditions that we already have," he said. "It is not a class act."

Russian ballerina pirouettes into Hub City

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The former Soviet Union has long been known for its talented ballet dancers. This week, Texas Tech dance students have had the opportunity to study with a woman often referred to as one of the finest dancers in the world.

Galina Mezentseva, former prima ballerina of the Kirov Ballet in St. Petersburg for twenty years, came to Lubbock this week to study with Tech dance Professor Peggy Willis-Aarnio.

"Her being here is like Pavarotti coming to teach music students," Willis-Aarnio said. Mezentseva will be in Lubbock through Sunday.

"She is the last of the Mohicans of the ballet world," Cindy Robinson, a senior dance major said. "She is the top ballerina in the world today."

Through a translator, Mezentseva said she is happy to be teaching at Tech.

She said she is thankful for the opportunity to work with Willis-Aarnio because she feels Willis-Aarnio is not only a great teacher, but a wonderful choreographer.

Mezentseva has visited Lubbock before, including her performance with several other dancers from the former Soviet Union in "Ballet Gala" in 1991.

Born in the Volga region of Russia, Mezentseva began her ballet career at the age of nine at the renowned Vaganova School of Ballet in Leningrad.

From there, she became a principal dancer in the Kirov Ballet.

Mezentseva has performed in countries worldwide, including Japan, Morocco, Tunisia and numerous countries in Europe.

She has danced the classic roles of Giselle, Odette and the Dying Swan.

Poverty a lesson in appreciation

Every month or so I lend this space to readers to tell their stories of growing up in rural America, what I've called "Dreamsville." The idea is that life back then, the way we remember it, was like a dream.

JOE MURRAY Zelma Hunke of Waco, Tx., whose father died when she was a year old, remembers life more the way it was for poor children growing up in the Depression. Her story is no Dreamsville. Her story is real.

"I was in the third grade. The school didn't have a cafeteria back then. Most everyone brought their lunch and ate under the shade trees on the school grounds.

"Some of the children went home for lunch. Everyday at lunch time, I went home."

"There was nothing to eat in our house and I'd just turn around and go back to school, but at least the kids thought I went home to eat.

"I remember Mama would send me to the Pure Milk Co. with a nickel and a gallon jug. I'd buy a gallon of skim milk. We had corn bread and skim milk for supper. For breakfast we had biscuits and gravy. Sometimes when there was no milk, Mama used water for the biscuits and gravy.

"I remember how my poor mama worried, and how she felt. I remember her saying, 'I don't know what's going to become of us. It looks like we may all end up on the Poor Farm.'

"I didn't want to go to the Poor Farm. That's where poor people went. As far as I knew, we were not poor. There were other families in the same shape, or worse. To me, it was just a normal way of life.

"We were poor, but we had each other. True, sometimes we didn't have enough to eat. Sometimes we didn't have decent clothes to wear. Looking back, I wouldn't want to go through that part again.

"But we survived the Great Depression. Through it all. I feel that it has made me a stronger and much wiser person.

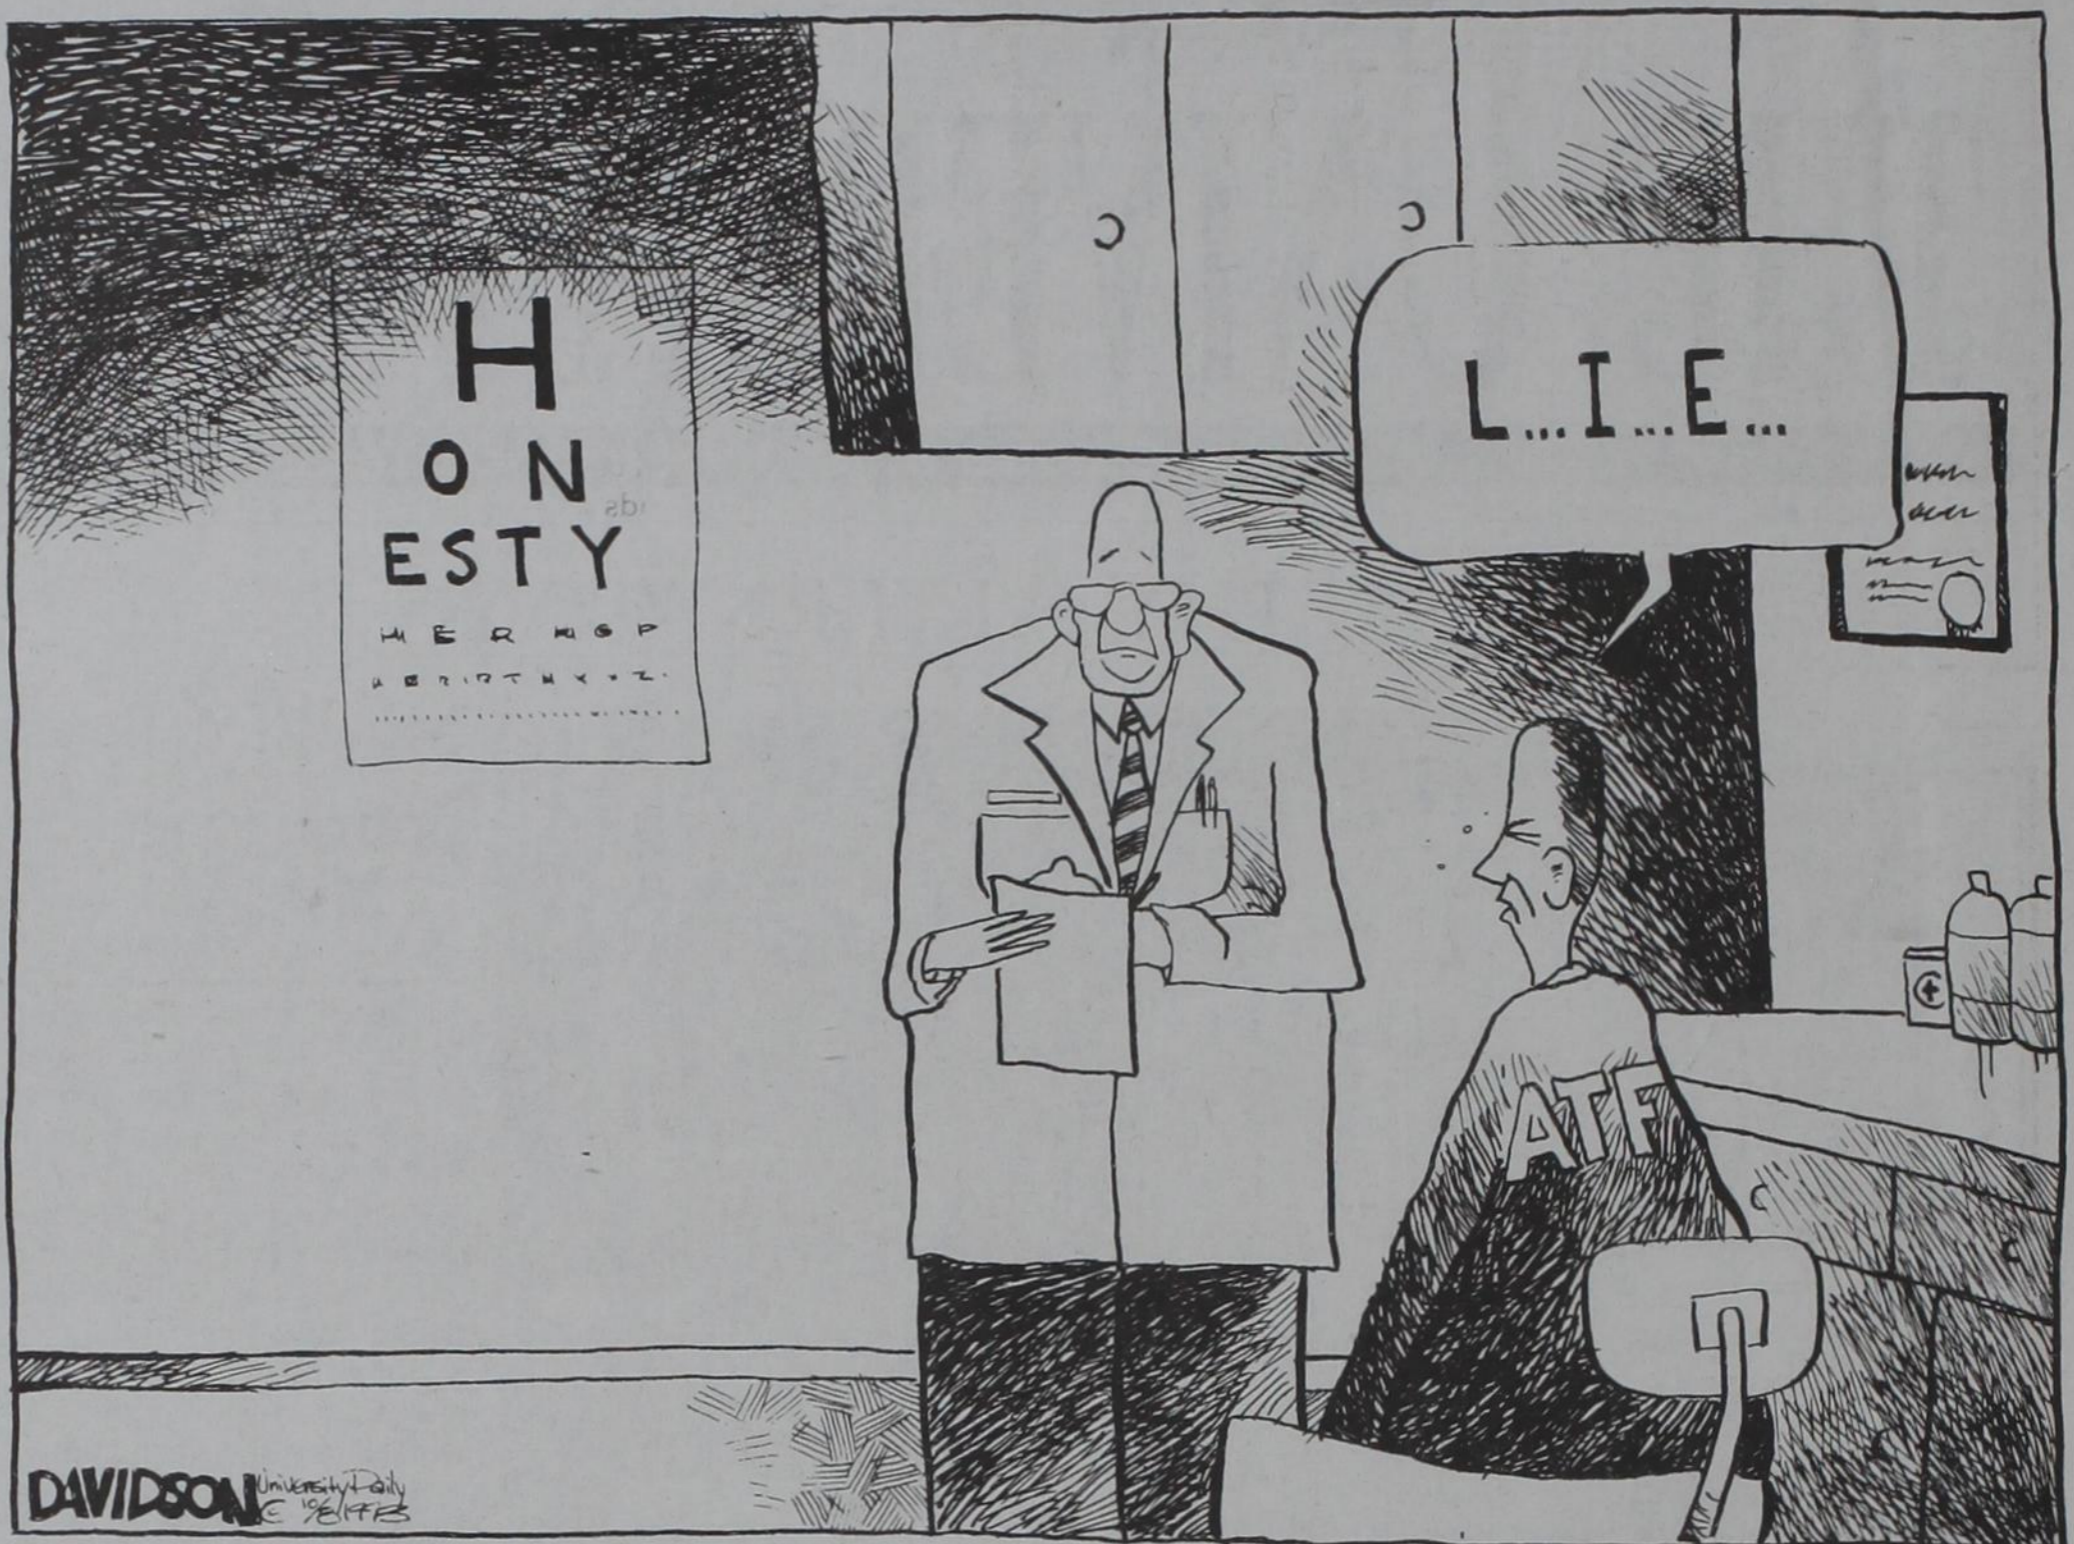

"I understand and have compassion for those today who have little. I appreciate what I have. I have learned to respect the value of a dollar. I remember when we moved because the rent was a dollar cheaper.

"People tend to take better care of things when they've had to work hard for what they buy, instead of having it handed to them on a silver platter.

"No, I wouldn't want my children or grandchildren to go through a depression to learn the value of life's material things. I want them to have it better than I did.

"But the next time you sit down to eat and there's something on the table you don't like, remember this story."

TORTILLAS OK

To the editor:
 I think the students at Texas Tech have underestimated the importance of traditions at a major university. Florida State has the Tomahawk chop, Texas A&M has the Twelfth Man. And, a couple of years ago, Texas Tech put all of its imaginative brain power together and developed its response to kissing your date every time your team scores — flying food.

But, not just any food. It had to be a food that was unique to Lubbock. Why just the other day I was in the Big Bend area when someone said to me, "You're from Lubbock, the tortilla capital of the world?" At first I thought he was mistaken. That was until I remembered I had indeed seen tortillas in Lubbock. I believe they were flying through the air in Jones Stadium toward some unsuspecting tuba player.

Which gave me an idea for a new tradition! This tradition will strike fear into the heart of any football team who would dare challenge the hegemony of the Texas Tech football program. We can call it the Texas Tech Tunnel of the Tanked Tortilla Tossers. We can man the opposing team's tunnel entrance with students armed to the teeth (so to speak) with tortillas. That's how you win football games, through sheer fan-oriented intimidation. One look at a tortilla flying at you and you forget you were ever wearing a football helmet and duck for cover.

You know, when this tradition first began, someone had the audacity to suggest that I, being Hispanic and having a Mexican father (that is, from Matamoros, Mexico), should be offended by tortilla tossing. Well, I might, if I could keep a straight face long enough to think about it.

Robert Soto

MOCKING CRITICISM

To the editor:
 How could I have been so mean? When I supported the idea of throwing the old "flour Frisbee," I must have just been having a bad day. Why, when the folks from N.C. State show up, we all should just line up and give them a big ol' wet kiss...SMACK! Not only that, when A&M comes back for their next football game we should throw money in the stands to make up for all of those nasty tortillas. They should have a great impression of the ol' Red and Black then. But, why stop there, we could throw greenbacks to the Aggie players on the sidelines (Oops! Seems someone already did that; my mistake).

It's not only Tech, have you ever noticed how those heartless thugs in New York City throw all of that confetti out of their windows when a hero passes by in a parade? Those animals! How could they be so cruel? Why someone should just go right on out and repress them, they're a menace to society.

Are people actually so shallow that they judge a school or city by what some people do on weekends at a sporting event? You know, I do have a Monopoly set lying around if they've got that much time on their hands. I bet they wouldn't offer you that at the University of Nebraska.

Another thing, if it's a choice between supporting Tech's obnoxious fans and some other teams, I'll choose the former. And, as for criticizing Tech's Board of Regents because their support of free speech is "strained" due to what someone else says, you bet I will. You'll notice I didn't say that the Board didn't have the right to complain. Some of us do not cast aside the First Amendment when it becomes inconvenient.

Kenneth Peek

TRADITION OK

To the editor:
 It's time for a little perspective. I understand that throwing objects (including bread) at an opponent lacks class or respect. But, so what? At every Tech football game I have attended nearly a quarter or half of the student section was falling down drunk.

Strange, I have yet to see the Athletic Director condemn this illegal practice.

Throwing tortillas is fun and relatively harmless. So, what makes our prestigious school look more asinine, the fact that we throw tortillas or the fact that we can't sober for three hours? Get sober...get a grip...get a life.

History repeats — Somalia no place for U.S. troops

CARL TEPPER

The total American fatalities from our actions in Somalia now equal 25. Many more have been wounded and several have been taken prisoner. Monday night on the news I watched the limp body of one of our flyers being dragged half-naked through Mogadishu. The grizzly procession stopped occasionally so that the crowd could kick, stomp and spit upon the corpse.

During the Arab and Israeli conflicts of the 1970s, anti-Israeli forces would do this to downed Israeli flyers. Never did I imagine that this would happen to be one of ours.

When I flew airplanes for the Air Force, I remember that the most frightful scenario was not the threat of being shot down and killed, but the threat of being captured. If captured, torture would be imminent. Military aviators will often have pacts between them. If your friend is captured, or close to capture, you promise to kill him, and he promises the same for you. An even worse scenario than becoming a prisoner of war, is the chance that your mother, while watching the evening news, recognizes your dead body, as it is dragged through the streets of some foreign city. There's nothing your buddies can do about that.

Now for my point: This nation's involvement in Somalia is a mistake and the United States should withdraw. This is not a retreat, not a surrender, and not a sign of weakness, but merely a show of respect for the lessons of history, most notably, the fiasco in Vietnam. At least in Vietnam, there was a certain amount of American interest involved. Communism was a genuine threat back then and the battle lines were drawn in the far east. Somalia has no such distinctions, and frankly, they at this time, have nothing to offer us. The brutal and sad realities of a cruel world. Around campus, I still hear the ignorant say that they are glad we're in Africa, helping to feed the world. What's ironic, is that these are almost always the same people that despised our involvement in the Persian Gulf War, because, God forbid, it benefitted us. I seem to remember writing about this last year. Members of Congress, conservative syndicated columnists, and even University Daily writers and myself, wrote furiously about our suspicions of a Somali involvement. Those pleas for a sense of history fell on deaf ears, and unfortunately, because of the following five conditions, we went and are there:

- Bleeding heart news correspondents.
- College professors and other blind liberals who think that America's actions during the Cold War (not a severe drought and tyrants) are to blame for the fate of Somalia.

If we had listened to them in the 1970s we'd need passports to travel to Muleshoe, and last weekend, Boris Yeltsin would have been bored playing chess in the gulag.

- Civil rights leaders that want to see American troops die for an African people. Just something else they will use to divide us and empower themselves.

- A lame duck president who knows nothing about military history or the military except how to avoid serving in it.

- A desultory president who knows nothing about military history or the military except how to avoid serving in it.

On Monday, President Clinton (Hillary's husband) expressed his concern about the situation in Somalia and stated, "If he (Aidid) does not care for our captured troops accordingly, then the United States, not the United Nations, will treat the violations severely." Pretty tough talk from the man who fought Vietnam from London and protested the very kind of warfare he is now recreating. I only hope that the President displays just a little respect for history in a situation where hindsight has yet to be considered. Wishful thinking?

Books available at reduced price; long lines expected

Lubbock-area book lovers will find satisfaction at the Friends of the Lubbock City-County Libraries' annual book sale Oct. 8, 9 and 10. "We have science fiction, mystery, romance, detective and best selling novels, as well as cookbooks, old textbooks, and childrens' books," said Eileen Goggin, director of public relations for the Friends of the Lubbock City-County Libraries. "We have thousands of books of a variety of different subjects." Paperback books will be on sale for 50 cents and hardback books can be purchased for $1. Rare books also will be on sale and all books will be half price during Sunday's sale. Volunteers have been collecting the books for the past year and have priced the books according to quality and value, Goggin said. "We will also be holding a silent auction of some rare books that will be on display starting Friday," she said. "People can come by and write in the price they are willing to pay for the book." Friday's book sale will be open for members of the Friends of the Lubbock City-County Libraries only, but the general public is invited to attend Saturday and Sunday. The sale will be located in the basement of Lubbock's Mahon Library. "We're expecting a large amount of people to attend the sale this weekend," Goggin said. "I don't know the exact number of people who attended last year, but there was long line when we opened the sale up in the morning," she said.

ARE WE IN THE LAST TIMES?
 There are many indications that the Lord Jesus may return soon. The formation of the State of Israel, the ecumenical movement and a Christendom that is increasingly apostate, the worldwide increase in Spiritism, the drastic decline of moral standards, and changes in the Middle East--all these events are foreseen as occurring before Christ returns to the earth to reign. Christ's return for believers could occur any day!
 The Bible says, "For the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and thus we shall always be with the Lord."

WHO'S AT FIRST

Texas Tech students are always at First National Bank, because we offer more student services than any other local bank.

- We have a full-service branch located in the University Center for convenient campus banking. As an added bonus, this branch has extended hours M-F from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. to accommodate busy students.
- Students can bank 24 hours a day at our MPACT location in the UC or at our many other locations throughout Lubbock.
- Account information may also be obtained at any time with Call First, our 24-hour customer service line at 765-9999.
- First National Bank can even help finance your education with a student loan. To learn more, call 765-8861.

With these services, it's easy to see why Tech students can be found at First National Bank, the leader in student banking.

Cultural education, passing of traditions goal of participants

to Lubbock Lake Landmark. The West Texas Native American Association was developed a year and a half ago to make people aware of American Indians in this area, said Jimmy Kafenay, a Navajo and a member of the association. "We are here to educate people about our culture and heritage and have a fellowship among our Native American brothers and sisters and those interested, also," Kafenay said. "We feel it is very important to honor our ancestors who have passed our traditions and given a legacy to pass on to our children," said Sheila Kafenay, member of the association. Not only is there an annual walk, but American Indians, through the association, educate each other on the different backgrounds each American Indian comes from, said Ms. Kafenay. Danny Mannin, a Chickasaw

Indian and an association member, said the Native American Association represents American Indians of all nations. "We educate our children to keep our heritage alive, because the kids are the future," he said. "We teach our children and other members different styles of dances and games taught and played many years ago." "We are also trying to change the way people perceive some Native Americans as an oppressed minority," he said. That would be far from the truth, Mannin added, as there are 4,000 government-registered American Indians within a 100-mile radius, and at least 40-60 thousand registered in Texas alone. The walk is open to those who have an interest in the American Indian culture, or who are American Indians themselves and do not know about the association.

Raiders' Bryant enjoys change from L.A. to Lubbock

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

It's a long way from the streets of South Central Los Angeles to Lubbock, Texas.

Just ask junior starting free safety Dewayne Bryant. "I like Texas Tech because it's a change of environment," Bryant said. "There's a lot of gang violence back where I used to live. Most of the guys back home are selling drugs and not doing anything with their lives."

Bryant and the Red Raiders will face the North Carolina State Wolfpack (2-2) at 7 p.m. Saturday, a team which is coming off two disappointing losses themselves.

"They're not exactly on cloud nine right now," remarked coach Spike Dykes Tuesday.

Tech dropped a one-sided contest to the Wolfpack last season in Raleigh, N.C. 48-13, a game Bryant did not compete in.

Bryant said he enjoys the quiet atmosphere in Lubbock and was most impressed with Tech's emphasis on academics compared to some of the other schools that actively recruited him, Arizona and Washington specifically.

Bryant injured his shoulder last season during the season opener against Oklahoma and ended up receiving a medical redshirt after the Baylor game.

"I really wanted to play even though I was hurt," Bryant said.

Bryant sat out the spring semester and went home to California to regroup.

"I kept in touch with coach Dykes during the spring, and between him and my mother, they convinced me to come back to Tech," he said.

Bryant earned the starting free safety position this season and has been a key playmaker for the Raiders thus far.

Last week against Texas A&M, Bryant had 10 tackles and forced two fumbles.

"The coaches said I played a good game, but I was mad at myself for missing a tackle which cost us that touchdown before the half."

Bryant

Bryant thinks the past four games are not indicative of Tech's talent.

"We're looking forward to showing people we're not a 1-4 team," Bryant said.

Bryant said Tech has to stay focused and execute if they are going to have chance at a win Saturday.

"They've (N.C. State) got a good receiver and a couple of good backs," Bryant said.

Bryant said it's time for a Tech win to get the team back on track for the remaining conference games.

"We have to win five conference games to go to a bowl game," Bryant said.

Bryant said the Tech defense strives to be one of the best they can possibly be and he wants to help them improve to be one of the great defenses in the nation that opposing teams fear.

"Last week we faced a team with a great defense that's always ranked in the top five in the country," Bryant said.

"I want us to be at that level."

Bryant, who is known to his teammates as "The Weasel," earned his nickname in high school.

"I was only 5-5 and 140 pounds when I played

HAYWARD

The beating up on each other continues this week in the Southwest Conference.

Texas Tech and Texas venture out of the conference, with Texas taking on Oklahoma in the Cotton Bowl. Remember, we all know what can happen when SWC teams play teams from the Big Eight Conference.

Think of this. Only Texas A&M, Baylor and Rice have winning records in the conference, which causes some concern for Alamo Bowl officials.

But there is always something they can do, pit the Big 5A state champion against the fourth place Pac-10 team.

It may sound pretty funny right now, but if a third team doesn't have a winning record then this may be the bowl's only choice.

Oddly enough, Texas A&M and Houston have the same league record, but the Aggies are hot right now after trouncing Tech last week.

The Cougars may have found their stride after a tough non-conference schedule, but they don't have enough to beat A&M.

Look for the Aggies to win big at home and put the conference race out of reach.

The Mustangs have been playing good all season, but just have not gotten over the hump.

This game may be SMU's chance.

If the Mustangs' offense can exploit the Bears vulnerable defense, then one of the biggest upsets of the season could happen.

Baylor has to get out front to have a chance, look for this game as the best game nobody sees.

The Horned Frogs had a chance to win last week, but couldn't "ring the bell" as coach Spike Dykes would say. Rice now has to save some face, but if they win they are in the thick of the conference race. They have to win to make next week's game against Tech a little more interesting.

Texas is reeling and John Mackovic is under a lot of pressure, but this is Oklahoma. The Sooners are better than they have been in the past, but they have always had trouble with Texas.

Shea Morenz has to take over where Peter Gardere left off and keep some respect for the conference.

Oklahoma is led by Cale Gundy, who is probably the most underrated quarterback in the country. Look for him to have a big game against the porous Longhorn defense.

National television cameras will be there, and this one should go down to the wire.

Balloon to take flight at N.C. State game

by COLLEEN McENDREE LOGAN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A hot air balloon christened "Bubble One" will be tethered on Texas Tech's practice field during Saturday's football game.

The balloon was purchased by Plains National Bank and is the brainchild of Alan White, chairman of the board at PNB and a member of Texas Tech's Board of Regents.

"I just decided I wanted to buy a balloon," White said. "I've been talking about it for a long time, and finally I just did it."

White said the balloon is red and black with a big red double "T" on one side and "PNB" on the other side. Barry Ballinger, senior vice president of PNB's lending division, will pilot the balloon.

Ballinger said he is a fixed-wing pilot and will begin a 10-day training course to learn to fly the balloon Oct. 15.

"Ron Bush is another pilot not affiliated with the bank," Ballinger said. "He's been ballooning for 18 years and is a commercial pilot."

Bush will pilot the balloon until Ballinger completes his training.

There will be a ground crew of about 20 bank employees, Ballinger said.

He said the balloon was scheduled to fly over the Tech/Texas A&M football game, but said it was too windy.

"One of the problems is that if the wind blows too much, you can't use the balloon," White said.

"Unfortunately, the wind blows a lot in Lubbock."

White said the wind must be less than 15 miles per hour to use the balloon.

"Hot air balloons add to the festiveness," Tech Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said. "It will be at night, so you'll be able to see the glow."

Bockrath said that, when he was at the University of Arizona, they had an activity called Balloon Glow in which a hundred balloons were tethered at night.

"It was very beautiful," Bockrath said.

Tech spikers try to get back on track in Waco

The Texas Tech women's volleyball team will try to get back on the winning track in the Southwest Conference at 7:30 p.m. Saturday against Baylor in the Ferrell Center in Waco.

The Red Raiders (1-2 in SWC and 9-6 overall) lost Wednesday to Houston in three games for its second conference loss.

Tech had 19 service errors, but a higher hitting average than the Cougars.

"There are no easy wins in the conference," coach Mike Jones said. "Every time we play a conference match it is very important because you want to position yourself for a good tournament position."

Tech leads the series against the Bears 28-2 with nine consecutive wins.

The Raiders defeated Baylor twice last year one match in three games and the second match in four. The Bears have not defeated Tech since 1988

Baylor has a 1-2 SWC record and a 15-5 overall standing. The Bears are also ranked No. 6 in the South Region which is ahead of Tech who is No. 14.

The Bears are coming off of a three-game loss to Texas Wednesday.

Baylor began its season winning their first five matches, and won the tournament the American Airlines Classic. But they lost to Texas A&M in their first conference match of the season.

Baylor has four starters returning from last year's squad.

The Bears lost last year's leading SWC hitter Cory Siverston. The Baylor setter hit .357 in SWC play, but broke her right big toe in two places.

Freshman Sharon Pratt has filled the setting hole for Baylor.

Senior outside hitter Jenny DeLue leads the Bears with 172 kills this season and a .572 hitting percentage.

Saturday's game will be Tech's fourth match on the road. The next home game for the team is Oct. 16 against Texas.

"We need to win on the road so we can come back and play at home," coach Mike Jones said. "That way we will be ready for Texas."

Women's tennis team to host Tech Quadrangular

After a week off the Texas Tech women's tennis team host the Tech Quadrangular tournament today and Saturday at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Courts.

Tulsa, Texas-Pan American, and North Texas travel to Lubbock for the event.

The three teams have competed in Lubbock in similar tournaments and will go against each other in a dual match format during the two-day competition.

"This is a good experience for us," coach Kathy Vick said.

"We see these teams every year and it provides some good experience for us."

Tech takes on Texas-Pan American at noon today. At 3:30 p.m., Tech's singles will go against Tulsa.

Tech's doubles squads play Tulsa at 9 a.m. on Saturday and then Tech plays North Texas at 10:30 a.m.

The Raiders opened its season two weeks ago in Nebraska with Jennifer Brennan finishing fourth in the first flight and Lynne Jackson taking the runner-up spot in the second flight. Sheri Gilreath won the fourth flight.

Tech's lineup for the weekend in singles starts with Brennan followed by Jackson, Christy Davis, Gilreath, Debbie Biswell, and Erika Fisher.

Tech's double teams are Brennan/Jackson, Gilreath/Biswell, and Rhenna Rhodes/Davis.

The Raiders returned everyone last year and added two new players to the this season's team.

"Our players are very even and competition among the team is real good," Vick said, "which allows us to field a solid six players every week."

Men's tennis team prepares for UNM Invitational Tournament

The Texas Tech men's tennis team takes to the road for the third consecutive week as the Red Raiders travel to Albuquerque, N.M. to play in the New Mexico Invitational today through Sunday.

In an open draw tournament, the Raiders will take on host New Mexico, Air Force and New Mexico State. This tournament is important to the team because on Oct. 22-25 the Raiders compete in the ITCA Rolex Tournament which has a major impact on spring rankings, coach Tim Siegal said.

"We must compete well this weekend," Siegal said.

"They know what to expect and we have to be gearing towards the Rolex Tournament." The Raiders competed at the Colorado Invitational in Boulder, Colo. last weekend.

The doubles team of Erick Guzman and Juan Gutierrez defeated team members Rogelio Guerrero and Clint Graf for the victory in the "A" flight.

Siegal said the team's mental toughness and intensity picked up in the tournament. Tech's singles squad is led by Robert Barry followed by Clay Evans, Guerrero, Clint Graf, Gutierrez, Brandon Hall, Gerard Orriols, and Tal Roma.

The Raider's double teams consist of Graf/Guerrero, Gutierrez/Orriols, Roma/Barry, and Hall/Evans.

Sports reporter stays on Tech campus to present weekly trophy; Marshall picks up honor

TARA HEARLIHY

It is a little late, but it is time for Tara's Trophy.

This week's trophy goes to Texas Tech football player Donald Marshall.

On Sept. 29, Marshall was charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon by the Criminal District Attorney's Office.

He was arrested in the early morning of Sept. 19, which was the Sunday after the Georgia game.

I guess Marshall hasn't seen the kids that run out onto the field begging for a wrist band from their favorite player or itching for a chance to touch the huge guy in the Tech uniform.

No, Marshall should not "raise these children," as basketball player Charles Barkley has stated, but everyone has someone they want to be like.

I can remember being a child and going to a sporting event. Every move my favorite player made, I wanted to imitate.

This country is having enough problems with gangs and guns without 21-year-old college students shooting off weapons. Marshall not only made himself and the Tech football team look bad, but he also made the school look bad.

What parent of a high school senior wants to send their kid away to college where football players are shooting guns? I would guess not many.

It is hard enough to get good high school players to travel out to Lubbock for school, now it will just be harder. There are some things I don't quite understand about the whole situation.

If Marshall was arrested on Sept. 19, why did it take so long for him to be suspended and why is he still practicing with the team?

My thoughts drift to the Tech men's basketball team last season. Damon Ashley stole items like soap, powder and toilet paper from a convenience store. He was immediately dismissed from the team by coach James Dickey.

It was almost two weeks after Marshall was arrested before he was suspended. He also was able to play against Baylor after he was arrested.

Did the football administration not know of the incident or did they try to ignore it before it was leaked?

Whatever the excuse, Tech seems to have a problem with player control or should I say gun control.

Last season, Harry Dyas was suspended indefinitely after he was shot at a party. Byron Baker was also suspended after being charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon. Just to add another player, Jamie Gibbs did not play because he was caught carrying a gun. It seems strange that so many Tech players are having problems with the law.

For some reason I don't see Lou Holtz standing for a player unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Cross country teams try to use home course advantage in meet

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

host the Texas Tech Invitational at Mae Simmons Park.

The Texas Tech cross country teams will host their first races of the season Saturday when they

The men are scheduled to run at 10 a.m. and the women will run at 11:40 a.m.

The men will run a five mile, while the women will race a 5000 meter course. Men's coach Kyle Cranford said he is expecting another solid performance from his team, which is coming off of a win last week at New Mexico State.

"We run on the same course everyday, so I think we have a good chance of winning again this week," Cranford said.

Other teams entering the men's competition will include South Plains Junior College, Abilene Christian, Angelo State and Wayland Baptist.

The women are at full strength this week for the first time this season with the return of sophomore standout Jill Williams, who has been injured all season with a heel injury. Mandy Malouf sat out the race last week with a pulled calf muscle and will also return to the lineup this week.

"I had (Jill) Williams working out on the bike since she was injured," Elias said.

Williams returned to running out with the team just last week. Admission is free.

Moon says he has to step up for success

HOUSTON (AP) — Warren Moon is ready to take matters into his own hands with the Houston Oilers' run-and-shoot offense.

"I'm going to have to turn it up a notch just to get back to the level where I normally am," Moon said.

"I've got to get us out of this slump. I've got to feel comfortable in the pocket and be relaxed."

Moon has slumped since the season started and the Oilers have slumped with him to a 1-3 record going into Monday night's game against the Buffalo Bills in Rich Stadium.

"This is a chance for us to make our mark," Moon said. "There's a lot working against us. We're playing a good team in a tough stadium, and who knows what the elements are going to be?"

Moon's quarterback rating has dropped to 61.8, 24th in the NFL. He leads the AFC with eight interceptions and he's thrown only four touchdown passes.
