Deportees will be allowed to return to Israel

MARJ AL-ZOHOUR, Lebanon (AP) — Before he goes home under a peace pact he opposes, Nizar Ramadan is toiling day and night to finish a book on the ordeal of the Palestinian deportees stranded in south Lebanon.

He wants to publish in Lebanon because he fears the Israelis will never allow his work to be printed. The manuscript would have to be submitted to Israeli censors.

Ramadan, a 32-year-old Jerusalem journalist, is one of 217 Palestinians still stuck on a barren hillside 10 months after Israel deported them in one of the more bizarre episodes of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The Israelis expelled 415 men on Dec. 17 in retaliation for the slaying of six Israeli troopers. As a gesture to the Palestine Liberation Organization, 181 were allowed to go home four days before the signing of the landmark peace accord on Sept. 13.

Seventeen others were evacuated because of illness or repatriated in January.

Now Israel says the rest will be allowed to go home before the end of the year.

Unlike Ramadan, most of the deportees have fallen into a state of lethargy, abandoning projects that had sustained them and kept the camp vibrant and their morale high.

When the exiles arrived in the no-man's land between Israeli and Lebanese army lines, they turned the snow-bound hillside into a tent town complete with generators, telephones, fax and photocopy machines and a satellite dish that beams Iranian television to nearby villages.

Safety work begins after vessel explosion

GALVESTON (AP) — Marine investigators assembled Monday as salvage crews studied damage on the OMI Charger and considered how to safely transfer thousands of barrels of fuel from the fire-ravaged tanker.

Maritime traffic, meanwhile, was back to its usual clip through the Houston Ship Channel, where the 660-foot vessel exploded twice, burned and partially sank Saturday night less than a mile off Galveston Island.

Lt. Emile Benard, a spokesman for the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office, said the tanker remained stable where it came to rest, leaning slightly to its port side with its stern on the bottom of the ship channel in about 38 feet of water.

At the same time, a joint investigation board made up of the Coast Guard and the National Transportation Safety Board gathered in Galveston to begin looking into the accident, Coast Guard Petty Officer Brandon Brewer said.

Homecoming week brings remembrances

Polls open today

Texas Tech students can vote for a Homecoming queen and a Student Senate referendum from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today at the business administration building, Holden Hall, the Student Recreation Center, the University Center and the Health Sciences Center.

The 22 Homecoming nominees were nominated by various campus organizations, Election Commission Adviser Dan Burns said.

After the elections, the top 10 finalists will take part in an interview process before a final selection is made.

"The popular vote counts for 60 percent, while the interview counts for 40 percent," Burns said.

He said the finalists will be revealed at the Homecoming bonfire Friday. The queen will be announced Saturday before the football game against Rice University.

An amendment to the Student Association Constitution concerning adjusted grade point averages for student senators also will appear on today's ballot. With Tech's new grade replacement policy, a student can adjust a grade to raise the student's GPA.

Students must meet a 2.0-GPA requirement to become and remain student senators.

Students can vote for or against allowing students with adjusted GPAs to run for Student Senate.

SA president attempts to quash tossing Tortillas can be donated to charity

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech Student Association President Mike Fietz announced Monday his solution to tortilla tossing during Red Raider football games.

The South Plains Food Bank will have barrels located at all of the entrances to Jones Stadium so people can donate their tortillas to families needing food.

Fietz said he wants people to bring bags of tortillas and donate them to the food bank, rather than toss the tortillas during the game.

The food bank services more than 16,000 people a day, and Tech could tremendously help the efforts of the food bank by collecting tortillas, he said.

Personnel will not be stationed at the barrels forcing people to give their tortillas away, Fietz said.

"There is no policing," he said. "People are old enough to decide what they want to do. I hope that the students support it. I hope they don't see it as an effort to stop school spirit."

Tortilla tossing became an evident problem at the Tech/Texas A&M football game, Fietz said.

Tortillas were thrown at Aggie players and fans during the game, and one fan was hit in the eye with a flying tortilla.

"That is poor sportsmanship," Fietz said. "Something needed to be done. It was basically up to me to try and do something."

Encouraging people to donate tortillas to the food bank is not an attempt to regulate students, he said.

"By doing this, it's not taking matters into my own hands," Fietz said. "I'm here for the students."

Although many students approve of tortilla tossing, other students strongly disapprove of it, he said.

"If all the students believed in it, then I would be for it," Fietz said.

He said he was unsure if his idea would stop tortilla tossing, but said he was hopeful that it would make people think.

Tech officials have not put pressure on him to come up with a solution to tortilla tossing, Fietz said.

Academics key to bonus

Bockrath's contract stipulates $125,000 base salary

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech Athletic Director Bob Bockrath's employment contract encompasses academic stipulations along with his $125,000 annual base salary.

If more than 85 percent of Texas Tech's scholarship athletes receive a 2.0 GPA or higher for the academic year, Bockrath will receive a 4 percent annual salary increase.

If more than 95 percent of the scholarship athletes earn a 2.0 GPA or better, Bockrath will receive a 9 percent salary increase.

Bockrath said the GPA bonus feature is a unique approach to his employment contract.

"I don't know of any other contract for an athletic director or a coach with that approach," Bockrath said.

Bockrath said the GPA bonus had not been a condition of his, but he said he believes student athletes' academic performances are important.

"It shows that we are concerned with the academic performance of our student athletes," he said. "I think, in truth, the concept of helping students academically and trying to help them graduate is a part of our job."

"It demonstrates that people and (Tech) President (Robert) Lawless are committed to this concept," Bockrath said.

According to Bockrath's employment contract, "...the primary purpose of the university is educating its students. Consequently, the duties of Bockrath include giving priority to the educational goals of the university."

His contract states that "a major objective of our program of intercollegiate athletics is the academic success of our student athletes."

Assistant Athletic Director Jess Stiles said academics and athletics go "hand in hand."

"I think it's a significant and important thing that we're here for," Stiles said.

"In order to establish an outstanding athletic program, academics and athletics go hand in hand."

Futurama provides career, college help

by COLLEEN MCENDREE LOGAN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Futurama '93, a college/career day for disadvantaged high school seniors, will take place from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. today at Wayland Baptist University-Lubbock Center, 4601 83rd St.

Texas Tech will be represented at the second annual event by Judy Stocking, administrative secretary for New Student Relations, and Trudy Putteet, associate dean of students.

"We're going to take viewbooks, stickers and pencils for the kids to pick up," Stocking said.

"A lot aren't looking for colleges, but it's more of a public relations thing for Tech."

Putteet said she would bring brochures about Tech's disabled student services and samples of publications and newsletters.

"The reason I'm going is for the opportunity to be able to talk about the services we have available for students who might need them," Putteet said.

Futurama '93 is sponsored by the Education Service Center and the Regional Transition Steering Committee.

Letters of invitation were sent to area superintendents and principals from 61 school districts, said Debbie Weeks, secretary to the director of special education at the ESC.

"We will have reps from many businesses, colleges, universities and other organizations that will hire special-needs kids," Weeks said.

According to a press release from the ESC, only students who are disabled, educationally or economically disadvantaged, foster children, limited in their knowledge of English, enrolled in programs designed to eliminate sex bias or are in a correctional institution are invited to participate in Futurama '93.

Time at Tech for new coaching staff

The corners of the Texas Tech end zone are getting a little dusty. Some of the plays are gathering cobwebs. Even the sidelines are a little disheveled.

It is time to clean house in the Red Raider football program. Tech's football coaching staff has done more than fail to capitalize on a team full of individual talent. They have lost team discipline and morale.

There is a feeling that when this team takes the field, it just doesn't seem ready to play. One of the most potent offenses in the country was held to no touchdowns against Texas A&M. Even worse, the defensive players probably played the best game of the year against the Aggies.

Where is the team concept for Tech?

"Up the Hill, Down the Hill, Bam that's Tech Football" is the slogan for the Red Raiders in 1993. But the team has gone down the hill, fallen down the hall and "bam" it has plummeted into mediocrity. But where should team morale, discipline and character start?

It all starts with the coaching staff.

A player arrested and charged on a weapons violation was suspended prior to the A&M game for violating team rules. That same player was practicing with the squad before the N.C. State game last week.

What does that show the rest of the team and the campus?

It looks like the players do whatever they want and are not punished for it.

The Tech community is quickly waking up to the possibility of a losing season.

Ticket sales are dropping, community support is waning and players are voicing their doubts.

But what makes losing worse is the fact that this team can do much better than its record.

It's hard for Tech students and Lubbockites to support mediocrity. This campus and city are hungry for a football winner.

It's hard enough to lose to Texas A&M and Baylor, but having players "suspended" because they are charged with crimes is too much to handle.

It is time for a changing of the guard.

Two bowl appearances since 1977 — Tech fans deserve more. Tech supporters are not expecting a national championship, but a bowl game every now and then would be pleasant. Better yet, a winning season would actually be nice for a change, too.

It has become apparent that the coaches and the players have lost respect for each other. Spike Dykes even went as far as to say that Tech could play teams like Nebraska and Texas A&M 50 times and still never win. Thanks for the support, coach.

When things get this far, something needs to be done.

If Athletic Director Bob Bockrath has any respect for Tech football, school finances and an overall athletic image, he needs to get out his broom.

Sorry, Spike, your chance has come and gone — time to clean house.

President reports on Senate actions

by Jay House

With today's homecoming elections, I would like to remind the student body of several things.

First, the referendum on the ballot deals with qualifications to run for senate. This amendment to the constitution only broadens the base of students eligible to run for senate, but keeps the same standards once they are elected.

Eric Sanchez deserves credit for his work on this referendum.

Secondly, as you vote today, keep in mind that the organizations running the voting stations do this as a service to the campus and devote a tremendous amount of time in the three general elections Texas Tech has each year. As you vote, give your thanks and support to the members of Alpha Phi Omega, Chi Rho, High Riders and the Women's Service Organization for all of their hard work.

After nearly a month and a half into the 1993-94 academic year, the senate has some items of interest to report:

• On September 28, the 1993-94 Freshman Council was elected.

Congratulations go to the following members: Blythe Hulett, Yanci Yarbrough, Kristin Ketchum, Brandon Bingham, Allison Heinrich, Laura Locke, Emily Ellison, Brian Reece, Michelle Chastain, Kevin Spivey, Ryan

Blackburn, Clint Snead, Kristen Swenson, Todd Horner, Russell Thomasson, Laura Wood, Amy J. Ogden, Bubba Marrow, Sunny Strauss, Blaine Baker, Melissa Fonner, Landry Lockett, Mendy Schaffner, Shelly Mix, Karen Dodge, Jill Robinson.

• The Senate Committee on Academics is researching the withdrawal policies of other schools in the Southwest Conference while examining the possibility of extending Tech's withdrawal date.

• The Budget and Finance Committee has made several positive changes to the budget process early this year, either in late October or early November, for those student groups who would like to complete their budgets before the Christmas break.

Also, in an effort to ease the work on organizations as well as the committee, at least one member from each organization will be required to attend one of several budget workshops. If anyone has suggestions or concerns regarding the budget process, please get in touch with me at the Student Association office.

• Members from the Student Service Committee will be meeting with members of the Faculty Senate to discuss their proposal of adding a library fee to the tuition.

• The Senate's University Life Committee is looking into ways to deal with, or even possibly change, Lubbock's housing ordinance that is restrictive to Tech students who live off campus. Lubbock's code, which forbids more than two unrelated people living in one (single family) dwelling in most areas of Lubbock, is not supportive of the economic needs of the 19,000 students who live off campus.

Further, such an ordinance does not support an otherwise healthy "town and gown" relationship.

• The Committee on External Relations has recently completed legislation congratulating State Representative Robert Duncan for his hard work and recent award as Outstanding Freshman of the Texas State House of Representatives.

The senate is fortunate in that Representative Duncan will be at its next meeting to accept the Student Senate resolution honoring him as well as addressing the senate on important issues concerning Tech.

The members of the senate are looking forward to a productive term this year and have some good ideas for improving Tech.

If anyone has a concern or a suggestion that the senate needs to address, please call the Student Association office at 742-3631, or come by room 230 University Center.

Jay House is president of the Student Senate.

Vote "yes" today by Eric Sanchez

From time to time, students on the Tech campus complain that they have no knowledge of what their elected representatives in the Student Association do. Even though Student Senate meetings are open to the general public every first and third Thursday of each month at 8 p.m. in the University Center's Senate Room, there is a lack of communication between elected student leaders and their constituents. Excuses for this lack of communication range from apathy to ignorance (not knowing).

But today is different. While I encourage you to vote for your favorite homecoming queen candidate, I also ask that you vote on a special referendum passed unanimously by the senate last week. This referendum will allow students who are interested in representing their college in the Student Senate to use their adjusted GPA as a qualification to run for office. Before, only students who have a cumulative GPA of 2.00 or better could be elected.

Since Texas Tech now officially recognizes the use of an adjusted GPA for academic purposes, the senators of the Student Association feel that the use of an adjusted GPA should be used to "open the door of opportunity" for students who wish to be involved in their government. While voter turnout for any election on the Tech campus is low (10 to 20 percent), please vote on this important issue.

anything that requires any real effort, so they have to legislate something in order to justify their existence. Why don't you guys get with the program and do something real instead of trying to deprive us of something so relatively harmless as tossing a few tortillas?

To conclude, I wish to say that it's sad to attend a school where some dirtbag can get away with burning the American flag in the name of freedom of speech, but we can potentially be admonished for doing something so harmless (and morale building) as tossing a tortilla.

I guess the next time our team gets squashed like a bug on a windshield we won't be tossing our tortillas — just our cookies.

AGGIE LOSES TOWEL

To the editor:

I would like to relate an incident that occurred in the student section during the halftime of the A&M/Tech football game. I am an Aggie, and as I stood to watch the Aggie Band perform, my 12th Man towel was suddenly and unwillingly removed from my back pocket by a person or persons unknown. I asked several Tech students behind me for the return of my towel, or at least information on its whereabouts, but instead was met by a chorus of "I didn't take it," and "sit down, I can't see," as well as several angry stares and a few outbursts of laughter. With little else left to do, I turned around to watch the rest of the halftime show and silently vent my rage at my anonymous assailant and his or her many accomplices.

I have several friends attending Tech, and they are quite proud of the university and its many accomplishments. I too am proud to have graduated from Texas A&M, with its many accomplishments and traditions, and to have been a member of the Aggie Band for four years. I enjoy the strong rivalry between our two schools, but when this rivalry is used as an excuse to steal from and degrade the students and alumni of a visiting school it shows to me a definite lack of pride.

This incident has left a very negative impression on me regarding the Tech student body, but I am thankful for the concern shown by a few students, who later apologized for the theft on behalf of someone else and directed me to the campus lost and found. Needless to say, I have not since seen the towel and probably never will. I only hope that whoever now has it will keep it as a reminder that school pride is not only expressed by cheering for your football team more loudly than your opponent cheers for his.

Joel Coker

BETTER THAN GRENADES

To the editor:

I know that the "tortilla scandal" has probably been run into the ground by now, but of course I've got to get a word in edgewise. I attended Texas Tech back in 1984 and '85, and was a member of the band. I can remember many times how we would march off the field while being pelted with rocks, glass bottles and other painful objects after our beloved teams had been stomped into oblivion. It was so discouraging to support week after week a team whose only tradition seemed to be losing. Just once, I wanted to chuck something at them for a change. You see, it's really very simple — we the supporters of our team and university are exacting nothing more than a good laugh. Hey — at least we picked tortillas instead of say... hand grenades or ninja throwing stars. I'm sure if our team wasn't being consistently gang-raped by the rest of the Southwest Conference every weekend, everybody would just be saying things like,

"well, that's just the fans' way of supporting our winning team."

Instead, the powers that be are so embarrassed of our team that they want to avoid as much negative attention as possible. Well, perhaps they should address the problem instead of the symptom, that being a football team which has never been much of a threat. And besides, we need some (mostly) harmless but fun tradition. Our school is about as bland as, well... a tortilla.

And now about Mr. Lawless (Clueless). Don't these guys have anything better to do than to try to legislate the flight plans of a few (thousand) flying tortillas? What's next — tortilla police? Why don't they concentrate on something a little more meaningful, like the poor state of commuter parking.

It seems as though these people are powerless to do

TEXAS TECH HOMECOMING

Looking forward,
Looking back...

Tortilla tossing may be the latest in Texas Tech football crazes but many would argue it does not yet fit into the category of a "Tech tradition."

Although Tech is fairly young in its age, traditions still are a part of this university.

Homecoming is a time when many of those traditions are practiced.

From the annual homecoming parade to the election of a homecoming queen, Tech homecoming has a history of memorable events and activities.

The incorporated theme for the 1993 Tech Homecoming Parade is "Memories and Hometown," said McArthur Stidom, homecoming activities specialist.

"The theme is expected to bring unity — for the past alumni to gather with the present and focus on the past and things to come," Stidom said.

"Our goal is to have 200 floats in the parade," he said.

The parade will kick off Saturday's homecoming celebration at 9:45 a.m. at the Civic Center, and will travel down Broadway west to the campus. The parade will air on KAMC-TV channel 28.

The homecoming bonfire is a tradition that Tech's spirit organization, the Saddle Tramps, head.

"Bonfire gets the ex-students out and helps promote Tech spirit," said Steve Kohring, Saddle Tramps president.

Kohring said the Tramps began preparing for bonfire last semester.

"It starts in the spring," Kohring said. "We have to get permits from the city and we begin getting donations for pallets."

While the planning of bonfire begins months before, the actual structure is not built until a few weeks prior to homecoming for safety reasons.

Todd Burns, co-chairman of the bonfire committee, said about 7,000 wooden pallets are used to build the structure.

"It (the bonfire) used to be in the Southwest Conference circle before the ATC (the Athletic Training Center) was built," Burns said.

After the ATC was built, the location of the bonfire was moved to its current site in the south field of University Medical Center.

"The bonfire wasn't as big when it was in the Southwest Conference Circle," Burns said.

The Tramps put in about 1,400 man hours working on the project, Burns said.

Another tradition the Saddle Tramps practice is the Snakedance.

Before bonfire starts (around dusk Friday), the Tramps go to each of the dorms on campus and form a bell circle in the lobby.

"It's to raise morale and support, and to let the freshmen hear about all the Tech traditions

1941: Texas Tech vs. Hardin-Simmons University

1954: Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity was winner of the most descriptive float award in the homecoming parade.

they may not know about," Burns said.

At bonfire, the homecoming queen nominees are introduced and the Tramps, cheerleaders, High Riders and pom pon squad try to get the crowd fired up for the game.

But, perhaps one of the most important things that happens at Tech's bonfire is that traditions are kept alive.

Designing better student relations

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech began its 16th annual International Olympics Saturday to foster better understanding among Tech's international and American students.

The event is co-sponsored by the Student Recreation Center and the Department of International Affairs and will run until Oct. 17.

"The purpose of these olympics is to foster better understanding among international students and American students on campus through athletic competition," said Denise Kopriva, assistant director of recreational sports.

The events are much like the Olympic Games, with teams made up of students representing different international areas, she said.

Denise Kopriva, assistant director of recreational sports, said worldly conflicts and politics do not affect the competitions.

"It amazes me that they can all get together and compete all week long, and they mesh well together," she said. "But when they are back in their own countries, they can't get along and they are constantly at war with each other."

The 13 areas represented are Bangladesh, Taiwan, Hong Kong, India, Japan, Korea, Latin America, Malaysia, North America, the People's Republic of China, Thailand, Turkey and Vietnam.

"A lot of the international students become better friends through these activities," Kopriva said. "They share a bond."

Kopriva said the olympics also are a good way to introduce international students to Tech's recreation center.

"These students have come here and they are dedicated to study, but they usually end up getting involved in our intramural events and have a lot of fun," she said.

The olympics started in 1978 with six teams consisting only of men, Kopriva said.

"At that time, only men were allowed to travel to the U.S. to study, so the olympics were dominated by men," she said. "Now, the number of women equals the men in terms of events."

The olympic events include track and field, tennis singles and doubles, three-on-three basketball, eight-ball pool, table tennis singles and doubles, racquetball, badminton, bowling, volleyball and soccer.

Ribbons will be awarded to first, second and third place teams.

"The teams will compete for points and the team with the most points, after the men and women are combined, wins a plaque to be put up in the International Affairs Office," Kopriva said.

Two outstanding males and one outstanding female also will receive awards.

"These men and women do not have to be on winning teams to get these awards," Kopriva said. "I look more at their sportsmanship and teamwork."

•State and local women officials and campaign leaders from Oklahoma attended a campaign training program for female students at Oklahoma University.

U.S. Interstate Commerce Commission Chairperson Gail McDonald, National Women's Party President Helen Arnold and various Oklahoma senators and mayors attended the program, titled "Some Women are Born Leaders."

•University of Texas-Arlington officials have proposed implementing a stronger student recruitment program, creating an information center and financing higher scholarships.

School officials began work on the proposals in June. About $392,800 is necessary for complete implementation of the re-

Tennis teams fare well at weekend tournaments

The Texas Tech tennis teams were back in action this weekend at two separate tournaments. The Tech women were victorious at home in the Texas Tech Quadrangular Saturday, winning 3-0. North Texas finished second at 2-1.

Rounding out the competition was Tulsa at 1-2 and Texas-Pan American, which finished at 0-3.

In the singles finals against UNT, Jennifer Brennan, Lynne Jackson, Sheri Gilreath, Debbie Biswell and Erika Fisher each took victories. In doubles action, the tandems of Brennan-Jackson and Davis-Renna Rhodes won their final matches.

The men competed in the New Mexico Tennis Fall Classic in Albuquerque, N.M.

Klint Graf led the Raiders with a second-place singles finish after he fell to Tad Berkowitz in the final round 6-3 and 6-1.

Graf won four matches before losing the final match.

Juan Gutierrez, Rogelio Guerrero and Gerard Orriols all came away victorious in the first round but were squelched in the second round of singles play.

In doubles, Tal Roma and Robert Barry made it to the semifinals before being defeated 6-2 and 6-0.

The Tech men are off this week and will compete at the ITCA Rolex Tournament Oct. 22-25 in Fort Worth. The Tech women netters will travel to Abilene Oct. 19 for the ACU Invitational.

Men's cross country team dominates weekend meet

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Ralph Ayyad won the Texas Tech Invitational's university men's division to pace the Tech harriers to the first of two team victories on a cool Saturday morning at Lubbock's Mae Simmons Park.

The Tech men defeated New Mexico State in the Division I category, winning by a score of 17-43. The Tech women also defeated NMSU 26-31.

Ayyad led overall in the stretch, but was clipped at the tape by South Plains' runner Denes Balazs of Hungary who ran in the Division II category.

"My best race is still to come," said Ayyad, who finished with a time of 26:04, the best of the university division. "The cold really didn't bother me when I finally got warmed up."

For the rest of the Tech men, Ben Friedman took second, Bill Bush finished third, Don Koontz was fourth, Joe Perez finished seventh, Gabe Ruiz took eighth and Alfred Hinojos ended up in 10th.

"I thought our guys really ran well," track coach Corky Oglesby said. "They're improving every week."

The Tech runners finished last in the Southwest Conference cross country meet last season, but Oglesby said, "They definitely won't finish last this year."

It was the second straight victory in as many weeks for the Tech men, and assistant coach Kyle Cranford said the team will continue to improve especially when Ruiz (who is still recovering from an illness) is healthy again.

"He's still not 100 percent," Cranford said. "Ayyad had a beautiful race today, one of his best of the season."

On the women's side, Mandy Malouf finished third for the Raiders and Luisa Tam took fourth.

Malouf was back in form after sitting out last week's race in New Mexico with a calf injury.

This week the Tech runners will square off again in Lubbock at a dual race against Texas Christian at Mae Simmons Park.

Tech rugby club continuing to drub opponents

TARA HEARLIHY

teams are close, but they don't fall

This week's trophy goes to a team that is undefeated.

That rules out the football team and the volleyball team.

The women's tennis team or the golf into this category. The trophy goes to the Texas Tech rugby club.

The club has smeared every team it has played, winning every game by at least 40 points.

Against Texas A&M, the club shellacked the Aggies 70-5. Before that Tech trounced SMU 43-3.

The team has just begun its season, but it's clearly on the right track. The squad's schedule stretches into the spring semester, but it is very sporadic.

The club plays in the Texas Rugby Union, which consists mainly of Texas college teams. The TRU tournament comes at the end of the season with the four teams with the best records competing in a round-robin competition.

The toughest teams Tech will take on this season are Houston, Sam Houston State and Air Force.

According to player Richard Matteucci, this year's squad has played together since last season.

There are 30 members on the team and unlike football, 15 people play at a time. In rugby, a score or try (which is the proper term) has five points and a point after is worth two points.

The club practices twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Most of the home games are played on the Student Recreation field, south of the Rec Center. Matteucci said about 25 people show up to watch the team's games.

The club is not considered on the same level as Tech's intercollegiate teams, but it is more competitive than an intramural team.

But because it is not an NCAA-sanctioned team, Tech's rugby team receives little money from the school and must come up with most of its own traveling money.

This weekend, the squad will journey to Albuquerque for a tournament against teams from Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. Matteucci said the Air Force Academy may also be there.

Tara Hearlihy is a sports reporter for The University Daily.
