Germans sent to Israel for reform

JERUSALEM (AP) — Twenty young Germans who enjoy street brawls and attacks on foreigners have been sent by their hometown on a tour of Israel in an effort to reform them.

While they see themselves as right-wing hooligans, some Israelis see them as neo-Nazis.

Rene Flaemig, a 20-year-old roofer from Dresden, said so far the trip hasn't changed his views. Flaemig resents foreigners in his hometown, calling them "parasites."

He's never hated Jews, he said, mainly because there aren't any in Dresden. And he's never denied the Holocaust, in which Nazi Germans murdered 6 million Jews.

Cigarette tax under consideration

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will include a 75-cent-a-pack cigarette tax increase in his health-care proposal as well as a payroll tax on big companies that set up their own outside plans, an administration official said Wednesday.

The 1 percent payroll tax would apply to corporations that set up separate health plans rather than joining regional health-purchasing alliances, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The cigarette tax currently is 24 cents a pack, and tobacco interests were strongly resisting talk that it might go as high as $1 or more.

Both tax-increase proposals had been expected to be in the range Clinton has decided upon, but final details were unavailable when he unveiled his health plan a month ago.

Richards hopes to salvage collider

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards said Thursday she hopes the federal government can be convinced to salvage something of value from the wreckage of the super collider project.

In the face of U.S. House opposition to the $11 billion atom smasher under construction near Waxahachie, supporters now want the U.S. Energy Department to save some of the giant machine's technology and equipment.

"There has been an incredible amount of effort and money go into that project. It cannot be, in my mind, abandoned without salvaging the very best that we possibly can of what exists," Richards said.

However, she added, "I can't tell you that it will."

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary declined to elaborate on possible plans for the partially developed site south of Dallas. An amendment being worked out on Capitol Hill, she said, would direct her agency to completely assess all of the country's big science projects.

North campaigns for Senate in Hub City

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North was on the defensive with Congress during the Iran-Contra hearings.

Now he is on the offensive with Congress as he campaigns for the U.S. Senate.

North spoke to Lubbock supporters Thursday during a fund-raiser dinner for his U.S.

Senate campaign at the Catholic Diocese Center. North is running in the Virginia Republican primary against Jim Miller, a former aid in the Reagan administration.

North said he is constantly asked why he is running for Senate after his experience with Congress and with the Iran-Contra hearings.

"I don't think I would even be considering it, had I not read the inaugural address of our current president," he said.

President Bill Clinton's plans for the United States make up a blueprint to hurt economic growth, North said.

"A plan, if you will, to radically change the structure of our nation," he said.

Congress is placing the burden of extraordinary debt on our children, North said.

"You see, every youngster in America today under the age of 25 has a mortgage," he said. "It's called their share of the national debt. What's happened in America is (that) the politics of cowardice have been governed."

North said he is running for the Senate to stand up against issues that are being ignored by Democratic Congressmen and by the Clinton administration.

The Republican Party should encourage participation and demonstrate to people that Republicans offer the best solution to the problems in the United States, he said.

North said he does not approve of Clinton's military policies in Somalia, Haiti and Bosnia.

"I'd give it an 'A' for appalling," North said.

The attention North received because of the Iran-Contra hearings has changed his career, he said.

"If I had my way, I'd be a general in the Marines now," North said.

Local economy causes decrease in crime rates

Tech numbers also down

by JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Editor's note: This is the final story in a two-part series about crime in Lubbock.

According to local law enforcement officials, the steady increase in the local economy has caused Texas Tech and Lubbock to see a general decrease in the number of reported crime rates.

Whether, this can be backed up by affirmed reports, Tech police Capt. Eddie Huckabee and Lubbock police department Sgt. Ted Perez said they believe this is true.

Perez said this is because of the socio-economic status the city has undergone since Lubbock's economy has risen.

"Speaking in general terms, a city's crime rate has something to do with their socio-economic state," Perez said. "An economic level of a person can also raise or lower their crime status."

"Right now, it is possible to say that Lubbock's crime rates are down because our economy is up," he said.

The number of simple assaults, burglary, theft and auto theft also dropped on campus.

Auto theft was down 75 percent compared to last year.

"I think that some crimes do run in cycles, but it's hard to put your finger on (why)," Huckabee said.

Tech students diagnosed with German measles

Two Texas Tech residence hall students were diagnosed Thursday with rubella, or German measles.

Tech officials announced that, to prevent an outbreak, immunizations will be offered today for $5 to students living in Wall/Gates Residence Hall.

The immunizations will be given from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the residence hall.

Immunizations will be available by appointment Monday at the Student Health Center in Thompson Hall for all Tech students.

A 1989 outbreak of rubeola, or red measles, affected about 100 Tech students and resulted in a campuswide immunization program.

For more information, contact Student Health Services at 743-2848.

Town meeting

Health concerns aired

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A town meeting was conducted Thursday in Texas Tech's University Center Ballroom to discuss the proposed national health care reforms and the impact they may have on a local level.

Hugh Bonner, the associate dean of Tech's School of Allied Health, said he believes one of the most important changes that the proposed plan may implement is an increase in preventative health programs.

"Preventative programs need to be provided to a larger segment of the population," he said.

Bonner said he believes it is much cheaper to prevent illnesses and disease than it is to take care of individuals after they become sick.

Health care and preventative medicine also should be promoted within the community, said Nancy Ridenour, associate dean of graduate programs for the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center's School

Regents approve plans for cultural center

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech Board of Regents met during a special session Thursday and approved plans to build an International Cultural Center on the Tech campus.

Eric Williams, associate vice president for facilities planning and construction, said the center will be located southwest of the Tech museum, at Ninth Street and Indiana Avenue.

"(Construction) will probably begin in the summer," he said. "What we did today was appoint the architect and set a budget."

Joe McKay, of Joe D. McKay Architects of Lubbock, was appointed the center's architect. McKay is certified by the American Institute of Architects.

Williams said the center's purpose is "to consolidate all functions that are educational, social and research (-oriented) for international students in the community."

"Really, it's going to be a collection point to dedicate to international educational programs," he said. "Everyone will have a chance to see how other cultures celebrate their holidays."

Williams also said the center will have display cases with clothing, food and other respective cultural representations.

Williams said one of the center's goals is to try and have representation from every country in the world.

"(The center is) going to be an interactive museum," he said. "We like to think of it as a research center."

Williams said the center's employees are "already on board" and said they are from Tech's offices of international affairs, ethnic studies, women's studies, Asian studies and Latin American studies.

"Tech will not be the only one to use the center," he said.

The center is being funded by the last Texas Legislature and totals $3.6 million.

Williams said the building cost would not exceed $3.6 million and said he budgeted for that amount only.

Regent Elizabeth "Cissy" Ward said, "It was not Texas Tech's idea for the center."

"A significant number of people from the community thought it would be good for Tech and the community," she said.

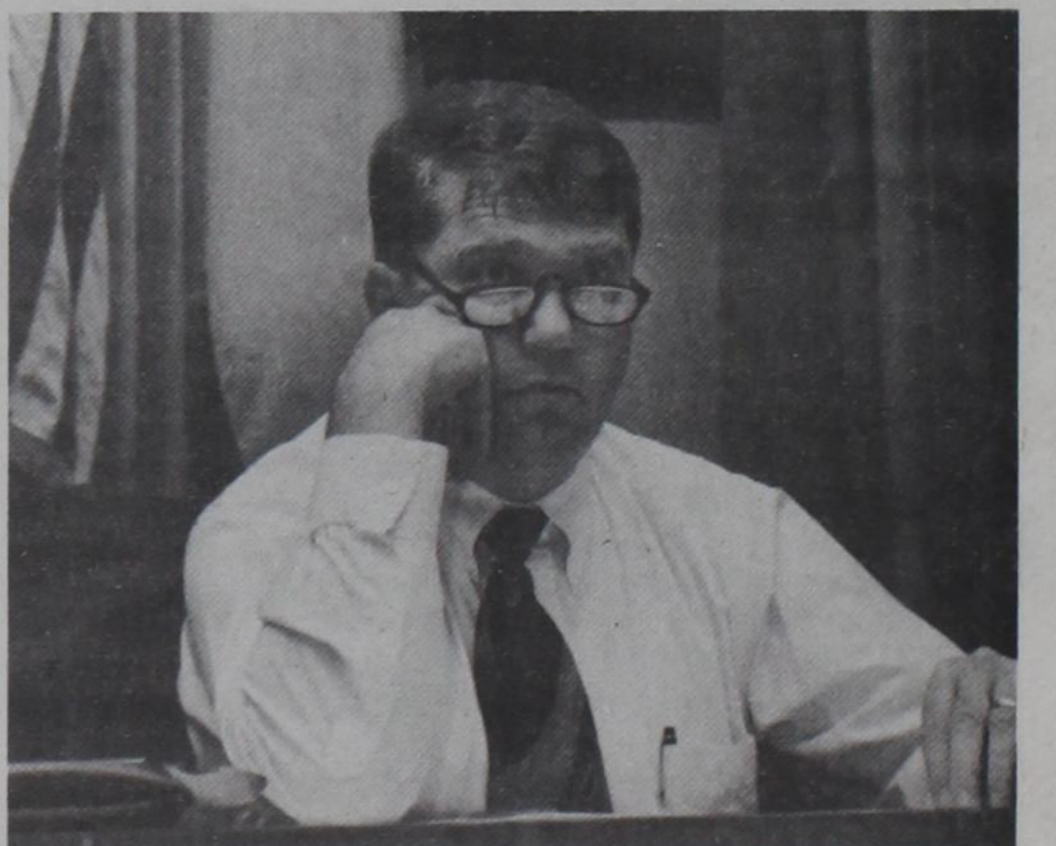

Ward said she believes the center would "certainly help Texas Tech."

During the teleconference meeting, the regents also approved refinancing Tech bonds to take advantage of lower interest rates.

"It's a revenue refinancing system for the entire Texas Tech University and the Health Sciences Center," University News and Publications Director Margaret Simon Lutherer said.

Lutherer said that, because of the current low interest rates, refinancing the bonds was necessary.

Vice President for Fiscal Affairs Don Cosby said, "We should be receiving, probably tomorrow or possibly on Monday, the ratings from the rating agencies that will be used in connection with the issuance of the bonds.

"Basically, it is the refunding of $45.2 million in outstanding revenue bonds for both the university and the Health Sciences Center on a combined basis."

Duncan honored

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

State Rep. Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock, was honored as an outstanding alumnus during Texas Tech's Student Senate meeting Thursday.

Duncan served as Tech's Student Association president during the 1975-76 academic year. He graduated in 1981 from Tech's School of Law.

A senate resolution passed Oct. 7 stated that Duncan has "represented Tech above and beyond the call of loyalty desired from any graduate."

Duncan was presented with a plaque bearing a copy of the resolution.

Duncan discussed legislation in the Texas Senate that affects Tech, one being an increase in the Higher Education Assistance Fund.

"We have convinced the Legislature to increase that fund from $100 million dollars a year to $175 million a year," Duncan said.

Duncan also spoke about a bill he introduced into the Legislature that would reallocate money from the Permanent University Fund.

The PUF designates two-thirds of its money to the University of Texas and one-third to Texas A&M University.

Duncan's bill would divide the fund equally three ways, one-third to Texas, one-third to A&M and one-third to be divided between the 26 other state universities, including Tech.

Duncan also asked the student senators to be aware of certain propositions that will appear on the Nov. 2 ballot.

He asked senators to vote in favor of Proposition 4, which will prohibit instituting a state income tax unless the tax is imposed to provide relief to property taxpayers or to help education.

After 23 years, woman admits guilt to grieving family

ANNA QUINDLEN

The smart scholarship girl from a sheltered environment whose self-image goes south in the polygot and high-pressure world of college is a staple of modern fiction and of life. I know her. I was her. And that is why I recognized Katherine Ann Power when she turned herself in and was sent to jail, understood how it was possible in four years to go from the valedictorian of a Catholic girls school to campus radical who drove the getaway car in a 1970 bank robbery.

Some of us in our 40s have to strain to remember the self we were 23 years ago — the convictions, the ideals, the sex, the drugs, even some of the rock 'n' roll. Good things grew in that environment: a healthy skepticism about foreign wars and government pronouncements, the erosion of authoritarianism in institutions and in family life as well.

But in retrospect so much of it was facile flash, posturing as politics. Onetime anti-war demonstrators acquired mortgages and slid quietly into neoconservatism. Jane Fonda's name became synonymous with aerobic exercise. Jerry Rubin went into networking and Bobby Seale into barbecue.

Katherine Power's life on the lam was almost a parody of how the fire-in-the-belly '60s transmogrified into the home-and-hearth cocooning of the '90s. She taught cooking classes, brought polenta to potluck suppers, jogged. She came in from the cold after she went to therapy.

It was a classist movement, the campus anti-war movement, and it was classist all over again as magazines and newspapers waxed poetic about the pain of Katherine Ann Power, surrendering after a lifetime on the run.

And then last week a woman stood before us in a courtroom in Boston and provided a reality check. The oldest child in a large Catholic family — I recognized her, too. I could almost see her in her uniform when they came to the school, a school probably not much different from the one Katherine Ann Power attended, to deliver the bad news. Her name was Clare Schroeder, and her father, Walter, was the cop who was shot in the back during the bank robbery, the year Clare was 17.

Sergeant Schroeder, now a police officer herself, had come to Katherine Ann Power's sentencing to bear witness to the victim, the kind of working man who was as strange to campus activism as a wing-tip shoe, the kind once called a pig.

"The press and the public seem far more interested in the difficulties that Katherine Power has inflicted upon herself than in the very real and horrible suffering she inflicted upon my family," she said.

Katherine Power's social conscience was not transitory; when she sold her interest in an Oregon restaurant, she gave the money to a charity that fights world hunger, just as she had planned to give the money away after the bank robbery. She was confused and unhappy at college, her therapist has said, with a powerful yen to improve the world.

Had she been born 10 years later, the valedictorian of Marycrest High School, once transplanted to Brandeis, might have joined a cult, or become bulimic, or tutored poor kids, or worked at a soup kitchen.

But hers were more incendiary times, and instead there was Walter Schroeder, his widow, nine children without a father.

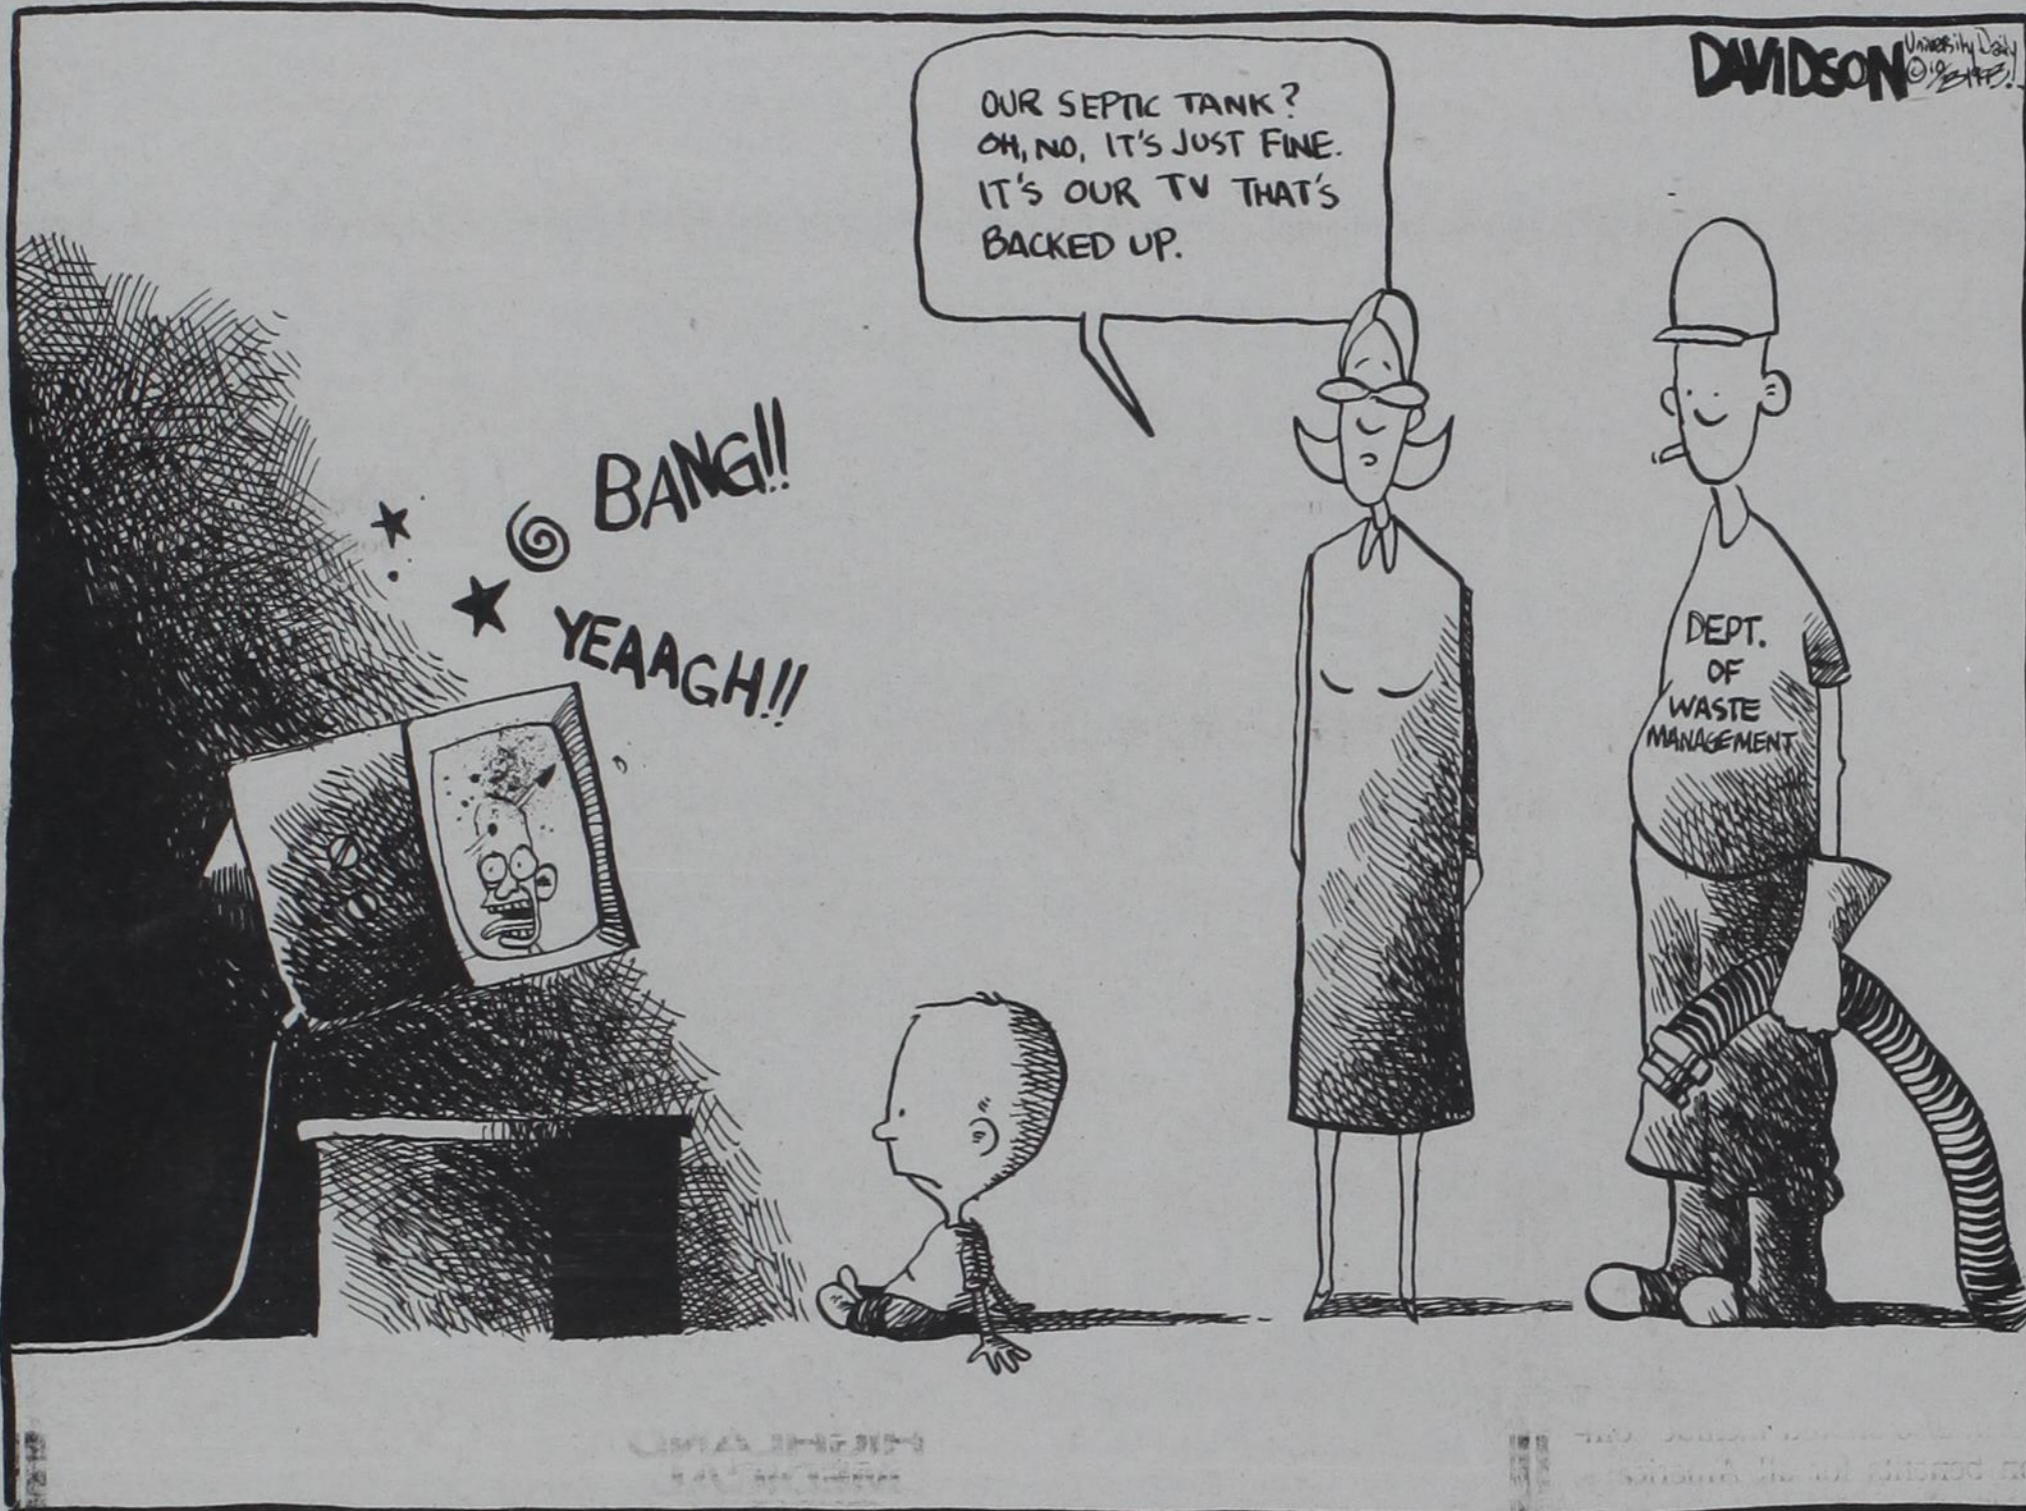

Oh, do I recognize Katherine Power. She is the embodiment of the chasm between the '60s and the '90s, like someone with a multiple personality disorder. It is almost as though a different Kathy drove three ex-cons and her roommate to the scene of the crime. The other personalities, the cook, the thief, the mother, the middle-aged woman, perhaps feel as if they scarcely know her, as we scarcely know our younger selves.

But our sympathy has to be for the family of Walter Schroeder, dead these long transformative, tumultuous years. His daughter remembered how she once saw a picture of him in the paper, giving a child CPR, and how, at her father's wake, a woman introduced herself as that child's mother.

I know the importance of that now — the child, the mother, the man. There are many things to contemplate in the odyssey of Katherine Power. But the most important is this: a man died; his wife was left alone; his children grew up without him.

If the last 23 years have given us a sense of proportion, then surely we all understand that they are the point of the story.

SMOKERS OUTSIDE BOTHERSOME To the editor:

Has anyone else noticed that we've ceded the entire outdoor portion of the Tech campus to smokers? Like many others who are allergic to cigarette smoke, I was ecstatic when Tech changed policies to make smoking illegal inside any building. The unintended costs of the policy are finally becoming clear; non-smokers cannot use the outdoor facilities on campus.

When I look around now I see building entrances surrounded by butts. The same is true of most of the benches and short walls around the campus. You run a gauntlet of smoke each time you go into a building, and there are no places to sit outside that are not downwind of a smoker.

The campus is rapidly becoming a giant ashtray.

Though we've moved smoking outside, it's still common to see smokers ringing a doorway, grabbing that last, deep puff... and then exhaling it all after they go back inside. Perhaps we should try to amend the rules still further to make smoking right outside of doors illegal. We might also extend the ban on smoking to include all the outside areas in the central campus area, the mall between the University Center and the library and the benches and tables just north of the library. I would certainly like to have the same access to these facilities that smokers have.

SHAMEFUL UC BATHROOMS

To the editor:

Several letters have appeared in The UD about things which embarrass Texas Tech. My two cents worth follow.

In 1965 I visited Tech with an ag judging team, I was a sophomore in high school at the time. I remember the impression of the many buildings with their ornate trim and the expanse of the campus. At the time, the UC was only about 14 or 15 years old and in great condition. I want to discuss the UC.

Of course, one of the things people naturally have to use after being on campus for any period of time is the restroom. Well, in 1965 the restrooms were in great condition. But, when I returned in 1988 one urinal was missing from the wall in the men's west restroom. It had been replaced by duct tape.

About a year later another urinal was removed from the wall and replaced with duct tape over the pipe openings. The condition still exists today.

At this point you are probably wondering if this guy just runs around checking out restrooms. No, but my point is that I want the duct tape changed every few months because the edges are starting to curl, or maybe I feel the last $5 increase on UC fees should go toward repairing the building in a prioritized manner best suited to the needs of the university?

The ceiling in the restroom has had a patch of fallen plaster for several years, if it can't be repaired then $2 of paint would at least cover the area. The stall doors keep mysteriously disappearing, and I presume the doors are going to the women's restroom to replace equipment there. The sinks and faucets must be the same ones installed in 1951. Even the entrance doors to the building have 40 coats of peeling paint and don't close properly. A new set of modern doors would save enough in heating and cooling energy to pay them off quickly. And, the walkway into the front door has worn through from traffic over the years.

Someone is going to say how they have spent the money on remodeling rooms upstairs in the UC. That's great.

But, I would say your priorities are a little off center since those rooms have limited use by those we need to impress most. Tech invites representatives to the UC for career days.

Students and parents from other colleges visit the campus. Numerous events are held at the UC which draws people from all over West Texas.

Most of these visitors stay on the ground floor at the UC. The facilities at the UC should be modern and clean in appearance.

It is an appearance. It is an embarrassment to the campus which is trying to bill itself as one of excellence. It is certainly an embarrassment to me, because I have visited roadside park toilets in better condition.

Around the State

The Monitor (McAllen) on Somalia:

Why March 31? Why not Jan. 1? Or even better Nov. 1? Somehow President Clinton apparently thinks the good guys can beat the bad guys in Somalia before March 31, allowing U.S. troops to hold their heads high when they end their "humanitarian" mission. U.S. troops haven't made much headway in trying to bring peace and stability to this African nation since they arrived last December. ...

Missing from all the recent discussion over the timetable for withdrawal has been any official pronouncements about what compelling national interest might be served by keeping U.S. troops in Somalia. Our armed forces exist to protect our national interests, not to serve as a global social services agency. ...

Too bad the Senate wouldn't bite the bullet and force the president to bring the troops home more rapidly. No more Americans should have to give their lives to carry out a mission that lacks any clear objective.

Roe v. Wade attorney speaks about women's rights

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In 1965 those using birth control in Connecticut were classified as criminals, the University of Texas' health center would only prescribe birth control if a woman were to be married within six weeks and abortion, under all circumstances, was illegal.

Because of these and many other reasons, Sarah Weddington became involved in the case that has become a landmark in the area of women's rights.

Weddington, who argued the winning side of Roe v. Wade before the United States Supreme Court in 1973, was the guest speaker Thursday during a luncheon at the McInturff Conference Center and at Lubbock's Planned Parenthood center.

What some people may not have realized is that Weddington experienced an abortion.

A graduate student who became pregnant during her third year of law school, Weddington was forced to travel to Piedras Negras, a town in Mexico across from Eagle Pass, because of laws prohibiting abortion.

Weddington

"There was no dignity there for women," she said. "I did not want other women to go through what I went through."

Weddington said she had a flashback of the experience before she argued Roe v. Wade.

"The motivation was partly from personal experience," she said. "However, the arguments were purely intellectual."

Weddington said she now has her sights set on the future.

"The real challenge (of abortion) is not if it will be legal, but if it will be available," Weddington said. "Last year, I thought Roe v. Wade might be struck down. But, Bill Clinton is a wonderful person for pro-choice people."

Weddington said Clinton is going to approve a series of executive orders allowing RU486 (the French abortion pill) into the United States and said he is assisting other countries with education about different methods of contraception.

"I believe that the election last year turned on this issue (abortion), and that Bill Clinton won because people sensed a crisis," Weddington said.

Weddington also said she believes more legal tools are needed to handle abortion clinic violence.

"In Oregon, it is a felony to interfere with someone having access to a medical facility," she said. "There is a bill in Congress for a freedom of access to clinics law. It would be a federal offense for someone to prevent entry to a clinic."

Weddington said violence has turned public opinion toward the pro-choice movement.

"They see faces full of hatred and judgment," she said. "They don't want these people in charge."

However, Weddington said it also has hurt the movement in terms of clinic employees.

"It affects doctors and people in clinics," she said. "There are lots of other jobs that don't require bullet-proof vests and shatterproof glass."

Weddington has documented the Supreme Court case and her work following the Roe v. Wade decision in a book titled, "A Question of Choice."

Weddington discussed a post-graduation ceremony that took place at a university where she previously taught.

Students placed candles symbolizing their hopes and dreams in styrofoam cups and set the cups afloat on a lake.

"This book is my candle," Weddington said. "(It is) my story, sent out for others to have."

Letter writing campaign designed to voice local health issue opinions

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Current health issues and a letter writing campaign was discussed during a health reform party Thursday at the Texas Tech University Speech-Hearing Clinic.

Assistant Clinic Director Judith Keller said the party was designed for people "to stand up and be counted" if they are concerned about basic communication disorder services being included in the health reform package.

The party was a segment of a nationwide effort by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association to inform people about the methods available to pressure congressmen into including communication disorders in the health care package.

The party's purpose was to get basic speech pathology and audiology services included in the package, Keller said.

Frances Costilla, a senior communication disorders major from Idalou, said she believes the main purpose of the party was to help educate the public about the need for speech pathologists.

"We just want to get people out here to make them aware that these services are available," she said. "Some speech pathology will be included, but we just want to get as much of it on the health care plan as possible."

Keller said that, what she is trying to achieve personally, is to have services available to all individuals who need assistance.

"I would like to make sure that every child who is born and at risk for speech and language disorders will be able to have their services paid for," she said. "That demand may be a little unrealistic, but I would like to at least make sure that some of the services are covered."

Keller said she believes every individual born with a communications disorder should have the opportunity to receive treatment.

Crime

Officials say economy could affect crime rates

Perez also said the crime rate might actually fluctuate year to year, rising in some years and dropping in others.

"I don't know the exact intangibles of that (the crime cycle), but I would say that is probably true. Right now we are in a cycle of decreasing crime rates," Perez said.

Huckabee said Tech students also are making a concerted effort to keep crime on the decline.

"I would have to say that crime does continually rise," Huckabee said. "A lot of the crime here on campus isn't always involved with the students here. With more cooperation, the better off we are."

"Students are just taking better care of their property," he said.

Perez also said businesses owners, homeowners and citizens are taking further steps to educate the young.

"That's part of where everything starts, with our young," Perez said.

The police department is also investigating different things we can do to keep (the crime rate) down. We are stressing education more and starting more programs stressing safety," he said.

of Nursing, James Courtney, president and CEO of the University Medical Center, said he believes health care reform should focus on group efforts, as opposed to each hospital attempting to acquire the most technology. Another factor of health care reform is the idea that all Americans will be covered by a basic insurance policy, said Darryl Williams, dean of the School of Medicine.

To be successful, health care reform also should include common benefits for all Americans, said Anthony Way, chairman of Tech's department of preventative medicine and community health.

IS SPECIAL CREATION CREDIBLE?
 Is special creation credible? Yes! There is a vast amount of evidence that supports special creation. The Second Law of Thermodynamics, the fossil record, and evidence for a young earth are just a few of the areas that support special creation and refute evolution.
 Dr. Arthur Compton, Nobel prize winner in physics, once said: "For myself, faith begins with a realization that a supreme intelligence brought the universe into being and created man. It is not difficult for me to have this faith, for it is incontrovertible that where there is a plan there is intelligence--an orderly, unfolding universe testifies to the truth of the most majestic statement ever uttered--"In the beginning God."

Olympic all-star gymnasts tumble into Lubbock

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The talents of some of America's greatest gymnasts will be displayed tonight in Lubbock.

Gymnasts Bart Conner, Nadia Comaneci, Kim Zmeskal and Betty Okino, along with Rumanian coach Bela Karolyi, will make an appearance at 8 p.m. today at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

"What signifies our show is that we have Olympic medalists from 1976 all the way up to 1992," said Conner, an Olympic gold medalist.

The company recently acquired Olympic medalist Valeri Luikin and has put together a new show.

"He is the first man in the history of the sport to do the triple back somersault in the floor exercise," Conner said of Luikin. "So he is really exciting to watch."

Conner said the show is a fun evening of gymnastics because it is not focused on competition, and there are no judges. The performers' objective is to take gymnastics, dress it up and add some entertainment to the show.

"Gymnastics is a sport that you can do that with. You can take gymnastics and use it as a foundation for entertainment," Conner said.

The opening number is performed to the music of "Grease," choreographed together to introduce all the characters in the show, Conner said.

The show will also incorporate local gymnasts.

"Hopefully it will give them a little boost, because it is a nice way to showcase their talents among some of the greats in the sport."

The company came from Oklahoma City Wednesday, and was in London last week.

Conner said the performers usually get together for the weekends and then go their separate ways, because half of the cast is still in school.

"We are home Sunday night and everyone goes back to school," he said.

"Everyone realizes they cannot do gymnastics all their lives and that there are other priorities — that is why school is stressed so much," he said.

The biggest challenge about touring constantly is the training and staying in shape, he said.

"Both Nadia and I have made a deal to work out every day, whether we are on the road or not," Conner said. "If we were to quit now and take a year off, I don't think we could ever (go on the road) again."

Conner grew up in Illinois and started his career at a young age. He has worked in gymnastics for 25 years, and says he has learned many things.

"I learned what I like to call 'the mechanics of achievement,' which are setting goals, handling adversity, being a good team player and paying attention to detail — all of these things I have used in anything I do," he said.

He is now the only American gymnast, male or female, to win gold medals at every level of national and international competition.

He currently calls Oklahoma home, where he has set up a gymnastics school.

Conner received a journalism degree from the University of Oklahoma and says he has enjoyed working in television for the past five years.

He began college as a mechanical engineer major, but started doing commentary during his junior year.

"I liked the TV better so I switched to journalism, which put me back to a sophomore," he said. "But that was a good move for me because I like writing, doing public relations and dealing with the media."

"My journalism background helps me when I do television commentating," Conner said. "It is easy for me to do the PR side of it because I realize the value of it, and I am a talker."

Conner plans to handle gymnastics commentary during the 1996 Olympics.

He says in the future he wants to stay in television, but he also continues to have an incredible interest in fitness.

"The country has a need for the right kinds of educational programs to teach kids the benefits of being fit, or the disadvantages of not being fit," he said. "If we make it fun, it will work."

Conner said he is excited about today's show, and jokingly said he hoped nobody would throw tortillas.

LIGHTS, CAMERA, ACTION FOR TALENT SHOW SIGNUPS

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Family Day Talent Show sign-ups begin today and will continue through Monday in the University Center's Student Association Office.

The talent show is an annual event presented by the SA and the Texas Tech Dads and Moms Association. The show is for parents and relatives of Tech students attending Family Day festivities Nov. 6.

SA External Vice President Zach

Brady said interested students must register today or Monday to audition Oct. 26-27.

"We're looking for any acts that you'd show to your parents — things like singing, dancing, rope tricks or magic tricks," Brady said.

He said the acts can consist of individuals or groups, but said all auditioners must be Tech students.

"We would just like people to come out and participate and have a good time," Brady said.

First prize is a trip to Las Vegas, including airfare and hotel accommodations, he said.

"We also will give some other prizes," Brady said.

Acts selected to be in the show will rehearse Nov. 3-7.

The show is at 8:15 p.m. Nov. 6 in the UC's Allen Theatre. Tickets cost $3 and can be purchased at the SA Office or at the Dads and Moms Association Office.

Talent show judges are Barbara Ewalt, wife of Vice President of Student Affairs Robert Ewalt; Maj. Gen. Dudley Faver, executive director of the Dads and Moms Association; and Dean of Students Michael Shonrock.

Tech tries to rebound from SWC loss

by TARA HEARLIHY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech women's volleyball team will attempt to break its five-match losing streak against Rice at 7 p.m. Saturday at Autry Court in Houston.

The Raiders lost to Texas A&M Wednesday, falling to 1-5 in the Southwest Conference and a 9-10 overall record.

Rice (10-11, 0-6) is Tech's only conference win this season. The Raiders beat the Owls in four games on Sept. 29.

"Rice has improved over last year," coach Mike Jones said. "They have a new coach and have worked hard. They have one of the best players in Sammy Waldron (sophomore outside hitter). We did decent against her. We hope we can contain her."

Waldron had 14 kills and a .219 hitting percentage against Tech.

Jones said he is altering the lineup for the match against the Owls.

"I am going to make some changes," Jones said.

"We are going to do some mixing. What we are doing now is obviously not working well enough so we are going to see if we can shake it up and move it around and maybe get some different results. We'll move people to different places and next to different people and maybe that will help."

Jones said a win could help give Tech its poise back.

"We just have to keep plugging away and get our confidence back up. You win a couple of matches and you get your confidence back real quick," Jones said.

During the match against A&M, Jones said he saw an improvement in Tech's defensive play.

"Defense is just intensity. It is wanting to do it and being in tune to it," Jones said. "I thought for a big part of the match they were. We did dig a lot of balls. I thought we did a good job against (A&M senior outside hitter) Shelia Morgan. She had only 10 kills. I don't think she was that big of a factor."

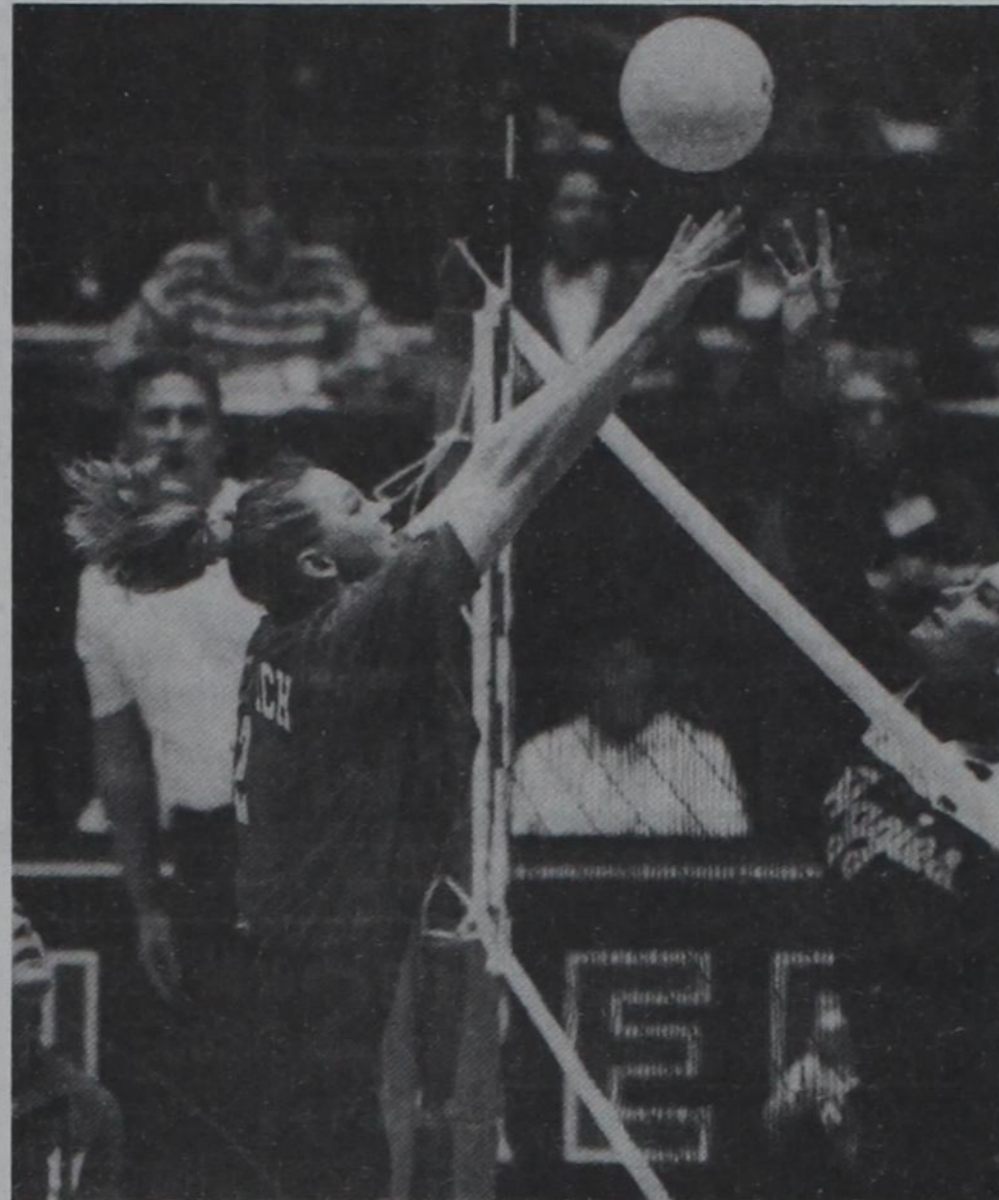

Jones said he is concerned with the way the team finishes matches.

"I thought they competed a little bit for a longer period of time (against the Aggies) than they did against Texas (Saturday)," he said.

"Against Texas, we played one good game, and then didn't play at all. Unfortunately, it is the same old results when it becomes crunch time. We haven't been able to put it away when we have a good match."

Freshman outside hitter Christine Martin may play in the match against the Owls.

practice with the team Thursday after a knee injury that kept her from playing for almost a month.

Martin had muscle added to her knee earlier this season.

"I hope she can play Saturday," Jones said. "If we can use her we will. It all depends on how confident we feel about her and how confident she feels about herself."

If Tech wins again against the Owls, it will be the school's 500th volleyball win.

Kolb, Raiders ready for Stanford tourney

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

This weekend Stacey Kolb will probably face one of the toughest golf challenges of her life.

Kolb and the Texas Tech women's golf team will compete at the Stanford Women's Intercollegiate in Palo Alto, Calif., starting today and running through Sunday.

The Sioux Falls, S.D., native has finished in the top 10 in two out of three tournaments this fall after transferring from the University of Minnesota in the spring. Kolb's best finish was a victory at the Wichita State Fall Shocker two weeks ago, where Tech also won the tourney.

"Wichita was a good tournament for us," Kolb said. "Stanford will have some teams that are ranked in the top 15. It will be a huge step towards regionals if we can play well."

Teams competing at the Stanford tourney include No. 1 UCLA, No. 2 Arizona State, No. 7 Arizona and No. 9 Oregon and Southern Cal, just to name a few.

Tech is ranked No. 16 in the latest Golfweek/Taylor Made Women's Golf National Rankings.

"This is probably the strongest tournament of the entire fall in the nation," coach Jeff Mitchell said earlier this week. "I feel like if we can finish in the top 10, then that is a strong showing for us."

Mitchell said his team has probably the best chance to finish well at the tourney, and that he hopes the Raiders can build on that for the regional tournament and the national tournament in the spring. He also is looking to finish ahead of New Mexico and New Mexico State, which, like Tech, are District VI competitors.

Kolb

Kolb holds the highest scoring average on the team at 76.1, but says there is one area she can improve upon — putting.

"I have hit the ball as well as I ever have off the tee," Kolb said. "But I would like to get better at my putting. I am shooting for 30 putts a round, and right now it is at about 36."

Kolb said she transferred from Minnesota after complications with her major (elementary education), and was eligible to play right away. In two years for the Golden Gophers she earned All-Big 10 honors and finished as high as fifth in the Big 10 conference tournament.

Also competing for Tech this weekend will be junior Tracy Thomson, who is second on the team in scoring average with a 77.7. Also playing well for Tech has been true freshman Tamara Parker, who has shot the only two under-par rounds at Tech under Mitchell. Parker's scoring average is 78.1, with her best finish a fifth at the Fall Shocker.

"Tamara has been really great and it is an added bonus to have her," Kolb said. "I haven't seen a freshman that plays as consistently as that."

Sophomores Candy Merrill and J.J. Rorie will fill out the field for the Raiders this weekend.

SMU has chance to upset struggling Longhorns

LEN HAYWARD

Texas Tech, along with Houston, is off this week, which does not help a poor Southwest Conference slate.

Texas A&M is ready to put itself out of reach of the rest of the competition and look for SMU to give Texas some trouble. If this happens then be ready for a tough Raider-Longhorn game.

Texas (1-3-1, 1-0)

Noon CDT Raycom (Channel 34, Cox Cable channel 10)
Alamodome (65,000/artificial turf)
San Antonio
Texas by 11 1/2

This is a strange contest because both teams have just about the same record, but Texas has the most to lose in the game. The Mustangs still have a shot at going to a bowl if they can beat the Longhorns.

Mackovic is up against the wall and his team has to perform this week, or there will be an "Austin Lynching."

Alumni and other Texas supporters are not happy with the record, but the Longhorns have played a tough schedule.

Look for this one to be close and don't be surprised if the Ponies pull an upset.

Baylor by 14

This game should not be a contest because the Bears are mad after last week's loss to Texas A&M. Get ready for a Baylor romp.

TCU has the offensive firepower to give Baylor trouble, but the Bears' defense just seems to be getting better and better each week.

No. 11 Texas A&M (5-1, 3-0) at Rice (4-3, 1-2)

Rice is coming off a big loss and the Aggies are coming off a big win, so who has the advantage in this one? A&M is ready to play and the only way the Owls can win is if they can find a way to knock Greg Hill, Rodney Thomas and Leland McElroy out of the game during the first quarter.

If this happens, Rice has a chance. A&M is living by the philosophy "offense wins games, defense wins championships." Look for the Aggies to win big.

Cavazos leads Raider JV against Air Force

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

It's been nine years since Texas Tech has fielded a junior varsity team, but today a Red Raider JV team will take on the Air Force JV at 1 p.m. in Jones Stadium.

The team will be comprised of players who are not redshirting and with redshirt freshman Sone Cavazos starting at quarterback.

"(The game) is going to be good," Cavazos said before Thursday's workout. "We are hoping that everybody goes out and plays hard. In a way it is a chance for me. It will be my first game with this offense."

The last junior varsity game was in 1984, and Cavazos said the squad did not have its first practice together as a team until Wednesday.

"We heard about it two weeks ago, but we didn't do anything," he said. "(Wednesday) was our first time to meet as a team."

Other players that will play in the game include fullback LaShon Earnest, linebackers Jabbar Thomas, Ryan Donahue and Jerome Lang.

The varsity team has the week off as they prepare for Texas next week in Austin.

Coach Spike Dykes said this is a good opportunity for the players to get some game experience.

"It's a real good chance to play against someone else," he said. "Most of these guys have played a little this year and I feel like it is a plus for them."

Dykes said the game came about because Air Force needed a game this weekend since the Colorado Springs-based service academy has a regular JV squad.

"They said they needed a game and they have an interest because of the (Reese Air Force) base here in town," he said.

Cavazos said he and his JV teammates are not sure what to expect from the Falcons, but he said Tech is ready to play.

"We have no idea about them or who they have played," the Weslaco native said. "I think we are at a little disadvantage. It's our offense either way you look at it." Admission to the game is free.

Red Raider Notes

• Dykes said practices during the off week have been going well, as the Raiders prepare for Texas. The Longhorns play Southern Methodist Saturday in the Alamodome.

• Injury report: Raider back Robert Johnson is back after missing the last two games with a thigh bruise. Defensive tackle Stephen Gaines left the Rice game with a sprained ankle but should be able to play against Texas next week.

Cornerback Donny Brooks who was having back problems and sat out the Rice game, should compete against Texas. The only questionable player is linebacker Donnie Taylor, who is suffering from a knee sprain that has kept him out of the past two games.

All-American wide receiver Lloyd Hill did not suit up for Thursday's practice, but is likely to play against Texas next week in Austin.

Aikman leery of long-term contract

IRVING (AP) — Troy Aikman says he isn't certain he wants to sign a long-term deal like the one Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones indicated he was willing to provide: six years for $27 million.

Aikman said he's leery of a six-year deal because he outperformed his current six-year contract in just three years.

Jones said this week that a six-year deal was attractive and that $4.5 million per season is franchise-player money for quarterbacks.

Aikman's agent, Leigh Steinberg, said the Cowboys should be prepared to make Aikman the highest-paid player in the NFL. San Francisco's Steve Young, another Steinberg client, holds that position with a five-year, $26.5 million contract.

Aikman, the Super Bowl MVP, ranks 31st in salary this season among NFL quarterbacks.

Men netters ready for ITCA Rolex

The Texas Tech men's tennis team is back in action this weekend in what could be its most important tournament of the fall.

Leading the Raider netters this week at the Rolex Invitational in Fort Worth is junior Klint Graf, who is coming off a second-place finish in the New Mexico Invitational.

"The Rolex tournament is our most important of the fall because it has an implication on our spring rankings," coach Tim Siegel said.

The tournament will run from Thursday until Monday with the qualifying round Thursday and the finals on Monday.

All of the schools in Region VI are competing in the tournament. Region VI includes all of the schools in the Southwest Conference plus some schools in Louisiana and Arkansas. The Raiders have had some success this season in their doubles play, as the three tandems have compiled an 11-5 record.

"We need to have one of our best efforts this week to prove we are one of the best teams in the region," Siegel said.

The starting lineup for this weekend will be Juan Gutierrez, Rogelio Guerrero, Erick Guzman, Gerard Orriols and Graf.

The doubles teams are Graf/Guerrero, Guzman/Gutierrez, and Tal Roma and Robert Barry.

Siegel said he is hoping the team will find its mental edge this week.

"We definitely have the ability to win, we just have to mentally compete in every match," Siegel said.

Rodman says new 'hairdo' coming soon

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis Rodman's blond "do" won't do much longer. The free-spirited San Antonio Spurs forward has been sporting an eye-catching bleached flattop during the preseason, looking like Wesley Snipes in the hit film "Demolition Man."

If you haven't seen the hairdo yet, better do so soon. "I'm going to another color real soon," Rodman said after the Spurs lost to the New York Knicks 95-75 in an exhibition game Wednesday night. Rodman, already one of the NBA's more eccentric-looking players with tattoos on his arms and leg, gave himself the coiffure.

The bleach "ate my scalp up," he said. Rodman didn't eat up the Knicks in the loss, scoring only six points. But he did have 14 rebounds, giving him a 14.7 average in three exhibition games.
