Leaders try to save Haitian accord

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — U.N. envoy Dante Caputo urged international statesmen Monday to come to Haiti in 48 hours to protect lawmakers against political terror and salvage a rapidly unraveling plan for restoring democracy.

Caputo made the desperate appeal just five days before ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide is scheduled to return under the terms of a U.N. peace plan.

Premier Robert Malval canceled a trip to Washington to meet Aristide because he did not want to raise expectations that Aristide would return on time, Information Minister Herve Denis said.

Scientists cloning human embryos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cloning of human embryos by scientists at George Washington University raises ethical questions about genetic manipulation that neither science nor the government is ready to answer.

"The fact that there is a total moral vacuum in this whole area is now finally being realized," Cynthia Cohen, head of the National Advisory Board on Ethics and Reproduction, said Monday.

Cohen and other experts said there now are no clear, specific guidelines to control research on what some believe is a slippery slope on the edge of human experimentation.

The George Washington University researchers removed cells from a group of flawed human embryos and grew these cells into new embryos. Though this technique has been used in animal research, the experiment is thought to be the first using human embryos.

Hutchison battle continues

AUSTIN (AP) — In a surprise move Monday, lawyers for U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison fought to keep the ethics charges against her in place rather than having the allegations presented to a second grand jury.

Attorney Dick DeGuerin of Houston said this would allow Hutchison's trial to start as scheduled on Nov. 29.

"We want to go to trial right away. I feel certain that when we go to trial, a fair jury will find that Sen. Hutchison didn't do anything wrong," he said.

Prosecutors, however, criticized the proposal made by DeGuerin during a hearing before State District Judge Mike Lynch.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle called it "a legal trick to delay proceedings while giving the appearance of seeking a quick trial."

Prosecutors said Hutchison is continuing to attack other parts of the state's case, such as evidence secured by the jury that indicted her.

Graduate program focuses on leadership

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech students interested in post-graduate work studying leadership, entrepreneurship and development can participate in LEAD, a specialization in the management graduate program in Tech's College of Business Administration.

"This is a new program offering hands-on experience," said Michele Boone, international business machines coordinator of West Texas' Marketing Support Center.

Boone graduated from Tech in

LEAD offers classes about management

August with a master's in management and with LEAD specialization. She is enrolled in communication studies graduate courses.

Assistant business administration professor Alex Stewart said LEAD is a pragmatically oriented, skills-based concentration that focuses on preparation for general management positions.

Boone said the LEAD program offers classes in negotiation, leadership, international management and a variety of other business related courses.

"One of the opportunities in the program is a graduate student mentoring an undergraduate group of seniors in the international management class," Boone said.

She said graduate students mentoring senior undergraduates is an effective way to get realistic experience concerning international managerial situations.

"The (graduate) students are assigned a group of (undergraduate) students to practice different situations," Boone said.

In the negotiations class, students are assigned to a team or to a partner to learn effective negotiation procedures ranging from discussing the price of a car to dealing with a labor union versus a management team.

Boone said the main idea of the class is for students to gain experience and to acquire the "instinct" to be able to see what the other negotiating party wants.

The LEAD program has a student association called VentureTech, which will host informal talks by Sally Hale, president of Pedro's Tamales; Jim Miller, Miller Manufacturing president; and Gary Holmes, Caprock Data Systems president.

Hale is scheduled to speak from noon until 1 p.m. Wednesday in the business administration building, room 259.

Miller is scheduled to speak Nov. 3 and Holmes is scheduled to speak Nov. 10.

Members of Gideons International give New Testaments away to students near the University Center Monday. The group plans to give away 15,000 Bibles Monday and today at locations across campus including the free speech area and the west commuter parking lots.

Group passes out copies of New Testament at Tech

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech may not be the promised land, but there is no shortage of Bibles on campus thanks to the Gideons International.

Gideon volunteers from the South Plains area distributed free New Testament Bibles to Tech students on campus Monday.

Don Enger, Gideon co-distribution chairman for Tech, said the association believes the world needs the Bible.

"It is our responsibility to get as many Bibles passed out around the world as possible," Enger said. "We think it's important that college students receive the word of God, along with the regular curriculum."

The Gideons have not passed out Bibles on the Tech campus in several years, Enger said.

Several students organizations at Tech sponsored the Gideons and their efforts to distribute Bibles on campus.

Campus Crusade for Christ, the Wesley Foundation, the Baptist Student Union and Trinity Student Fellowship are sponsoring the Gideons and are helping distribute the Bibles, Enger said.

Dean of Students Michael Shonrock said Tech's Grounds Use Committee members met with the Gideons and with their student sponsors about a solicitation request for distributing the Bibles.

Shonrock said the Grounds Use Committee consists of representatives from the University Police Department, the Dean of Students Office, the Academic Facilities Office, Recreational Sports, the grounds maintenance department, the University Center, the athletic department and the Student Association.

The Gideons were granted the solicitation request in most of the commuter parking lots on the west side of the campus and at the free speech area outside the University Center, Enger said.

Judi Henry, Tech's vice president for Student Affairs, said information about the distribution of literature on campus is available in the Student Affairs Handbook and said questions regarding solicitation on campus should be directed to the Dean of Students Office.

Enger said about 80 Gideons from all over the South Plains are participating in the distribution, in conjunction with the campus student organizations.

Bibles also are being distributed on University Avenue across from the Tech campus, and the distribution will continue through today, Enger said.

Response to the Bible distribution has been positive, he said.

"We've gotten virtually no negative response," Enger said. "No one is coerced. The testament is just offered."

Dan Isett, a junior history major from Canyon, said he received a Bible and said he approves of the Gideons distributing Bibles on campus.

Third case of German measles diagnosed

A third Texas Tech student was diagnosed Monday with rubella, or German measles.

Two students living in the Wall/Gates Residence Hall were diagnosed Friday with rubella. To prevent an outbreak, Student Health Services officials offered inoculations Friday for $5 at the residence hall lobby.

Dr. Cheryl Tyler, Student Health Services director, said about 70 students received the shots at the residence hall.

Shots are being offered at Thompson Hall for all Tech students.

Tyler said she encourages all students to get the shots.

Symptoms of rubella include a cough, runny nose, itchy eyes and a rash that usually begins on the face and spreads to the rest of the body.

Rubella is contagious and can be transferred through respiratory droplets, sneezing and coughing.

Tech Ranger Challenge special team captures sixth place

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A special team incorporated into the Texas Tech Army ROTC, Ranger Challenge, competed against 16 similar teams this month, receiving sixth overall.

The company went to Fort Hood in Killeen Oct. 16 for an Army version of varsity sports.

"Ranger challenge training competition was the most physically, emotionally and mentally challenging training I've ever participated in — I wouldn't trade it for the world," said Cadet Aaron Whitley, a junior business management major from Cisco.

One of the toughest events was the 6.3-mile ruck run in full gear, with a 30-pound ruck sack, said Cadet Jeremy Jeffery, a junior from Houston.

The team also competed in a rope bridge obstacle, a weapons assembly, firing and marksmanship, a grenade assault and orienteering, a timed land navigation exercise.

"We came together as a team, and did really well as a new team," said Clay Lyle, a junior finance major from Pampa.

The only female on the team, Bonnie Hall, a senior from Killeen, said, "It was hard, but the other guys supported me throughout everything."

"I think it shows the female cadets that they can do this too," she said.

"You have nine people who barely knew each other at the beginning of school, and now we are probably the closest people on campus," said Cadet Brett Bassinger, a junior from Lubbock.

Hall sponsors drive

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Dracula's blood-sucking appetite will be whet today with the help of Texas Tech students and Lubbock community members.

The Hulen/Clement Residence Hall's haunted blood drive will be from 1 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. today in the residence hall lobby, with Dracula playing host and drawing blood from volunteers.

The first 50 volunteers will receive a free T-shirt for donating blood.

Representatives from United Blood Services will be taking blood in various halloween disguises, such as Elvira.

What: Hulen/Clement Residence Hall blood drive

When: 1 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. today

Several other ghoulish goblins and phantom brides will assist in the procedure, said Tonya Fleming, a sophomore psychology major from Mexia and member of the Hulen/Clement Residence Complex Council.

A coffin, dry ice and other Halloween decorations will be set up to add to the mysterious and frightful atmosphere, she said.

"The blood drive is a really big deal," Fleming said. "I have heard a lot of positive reaction from the students about it."

She said the goal is to have more than 50 students participate as donors in the drive. Members from the community also were invited to give blood at the drive, she said.

Fleming said the residence hall has hosted blood drives in the past, but said this is the first haunted blood drive for the residence hall and for United Blood Services.

"The blood goes for a really good cause," Fleming said. "It gives students the chance to help people out and have fun doing it."

She said she believes it also is a good opportunity for students to find out their blood type.

"A lot of students don't know their blood type," Fleming said. "When giving blood, they will fill out information and, two to three weeks later, they will get a card back with their blood type on it."

According to information from United Blood Services, students will be asked to fill out a personal information sheet to determine if the student should be a blood donor.

This information is required because of health concerns about the HIV virus and because of possible contamination of the blood supply, the information stated.

Plasma donation a money's worth experience

JENNIFER GOOCH

I will do just about anything for my job. And Monday, that commitment brought me to the Alpha Therapeutics Corporation on Main Street. What began as an undercover sting operation to find out why people donate plasma, turned out to be this clever little column about my first experience as a donor. Or rather, my attempt as a plasma donor. During the process, a small mishap occurred. In all fairness, I believe I should start my story at the beginning.

I arrived at the plasma center at about 1:15 p.m. After signing my name on a list and then waiting for about 10 minutes, a technician asked me a series of what she called "routine questions."

Am I on any medication? Have I had any recent operations?

Have I ever been in jail? (I don't know the relevancy of this question, but I played along.)

Have I ever used any illegal injected drugs? Have I ever had sex for money or drugs?

Although the questioning process was long and arduous, I was glad that they ask these questions for my safety, for the safety of the technicians who handle the blood and the plasma and for the person who will receive my donation.

After the interrogation, a technician pricked my finger and took a blood sample to test for iron deficiencies and for anything else that may be harmful. Also included in the process is a test for HIV/AIDS.

I waited for about 15 more minutes before I was sent to the back of the center for a doctor's physical. This was the part that scared me the most because I hate getting undressed in front of strangers, even if they are medical professionals.

I was diagnosed as healthy, so they sent me back to the lobby to wait some more.

Finally, I went into this large room with about 30 beds that look like those Craft-Matic adjustable beds on television. Next to the beds are machines affectionately called "automated blood processors."

These machines will take the plasma out of your blood, separate it into a collection container and then return your red blood cells back to your body.

At least that is what it is supposed to do.

Unfortunately, the tube that transferred my plasma got pinched and a small puddle of the substance accumulated on the floor.

They had to stop the donation (after I had been hooked up for about 25 minutes) and remove the needle from my arm. For my safety, they did not return the red blood cells to my body, so instead of donating plasma, I donated blood.

The technicians were very professional in explaining to me why this occurred and what precautions to take. No one was really to blame, but I cannot donate any blood or plasma for eight weeks, which is a standard procedure.

I am sure most students who have been at Tech for even a short amount of time know that if you donate plasma, you can make a quick buck.

For your first visit, you get $20. And, you can make $10 dollars every time you donate, which can be twice during a calendar week. And if you bring a friend, you can get an extra $15.

Most people donate plasma for the money, but I actually think there are a few people out there that donate for the betterment of mankind.

Kelly, one of the technicians, told me that, after the plasma is donated, part of it is sent to Memphis and processed for plasma products that help people who suffer from such problems as hemophilia.

I have to say that I did it out of curiosity and for a story. But, I also have to admit that it doesn't hurt to have an extra $20 in my pocket.

Morality lost and denied in modern America

ANNA QUINDLEN

Last spring in Texas Hillary Rodham Clinton gave a courageous speech about America's greatest crisis. We suffer "from a sleeping sickness of the soul," she told her audience, the feeling "that we lack at some core level meaning in our individual lives, and meaning collectively, that sense that our lives are part of some greater effort, that we are connected to one another." The central thesis of her speech came near its conclusion: "Let us be willing to remold society by redefining what it means to be a human being."

Mrs. Clinton's remarks were ridiculed, mainly by journalists. But over all her speech sank like a stone in a swamp, largely unremarked and unremembered, inspiring no national debate or plan of action. Yet in it she spoke of a crisis far greater than any described by her husband in his call for universal health care.

There is a yawning hole in the psyche of America and Americans where our sense of common purpose, of community and connection, of hope and a spiritual satisfaction should be. It was easy to mock Mrs. Clinton's existential gropings. But though she had no easy label, no glib diagnosis, in those gropings she spoke the truth about a vacuum at the heart of the American character.

In his exceptionally intelligent and provocative new book, "The Culture of Disbelief," Stephen L. Carter says that that vacuum has been filled for many of us over the years by religious faith.

Yet today, ironically, religion is that thing most consistently trivialized and shoved aside in the public arena, treated like an embarrassing tic or even a character failing, particularly when religious people seek to couple their beliefs with a vision of America.

"We err when we presume that religious motives are likely to be illiberal, and we compound the error when we insist that the devout should keep their religious ideas — whether good or bad — to themselves," writes Mr. Carter.

A professor at Yale Law School, Mr. Carter notes that separation of church and state "originated in an effort to protect religion from the state, not the state from religion." He reminds us of how much public good has come out of a sense of spiritual mission, from the civil rights vocation of Martin Luther King to the antiwar activities of many clergy during the Vietnam years. "What was wrong with the 1992 Republican convention was not the effort to link the name of God to secular political ends," Professor Carter writes. "What was wrong was the choice of secular ends to which the name of God was linked."

Or, as Amitai Etzioni argues in his new book, "The Spirit of Community": "Just as we should not give up on patriotism because some politicians wrap themselves with the flag when it suits their narrow purposes, so we should not give up on morality because some abuse it to skewer their fellow community members."

a movement which argues that Americans have learned to expect rights and eschew responsibilities yet yearn for a sense of order and community that strikes a balance between the two. This emphasis on "we" over "me" has been seen by civil libertarians as retro majoritarianism, a threat to the rights of the individual.

But Professor Etzioni's driving impulse — that we have done away with old forms, connections, rules, traditions, but have put nothing much in their place — cannot be denied. He writes: "Moral transitions often work this way: destruction comes quickly. A vacuum prevails. Reconstruction is slow. This is where we are now: it is time to reconstruct."

We liberals must acknowledge this: that while the rights of the individual are precious, at some deep level individualism alone does not suffice. And the ability of the radical right to seize and exploit the terrain of the soul has been helped immeasurably by the failure of so many of the rest of us to even acknowledge the soul's existence.

Mrs. Clinton made a good beginning in April. And the discussion must continue, of what morality and community mean, of what we will build to replace the old outmoded forms, of how we will fill the vacuum.

How uncomfortable it will make some of us to talk about such things. And how impossible it has become to avoid doing so.

DYKES SUPPORTED

To the editor:

It was with great regret and disbelief that I read in the Houston Post last weekend that you have recently called for the resignation of Spike Dykes as your head football coach. I understand that things have not gone very well as of late, but I believe that this action was the height of immaturity on the part of the student newspaper.

First and foremost, Spike has had a wonderful overall record, and no one is going to have a winning season each and every year. Hopefully the alumni and administration, as opposed to the students, will have a more expanded vision in evaluating Spike's performance, instead of the microscopic approach — one in which the apparent requirement for "immediate needs gratification" superseded reason, not to mention sensitivity.

As Spike's cousin, I was incredulous at his demonstrated level of commitment to your university as he attended the game that was played immediately following his mother's death. I do not believe that many persons would have chosen to lay aside their grief, as Spike obviously did, in order to further prove the value and dedication he has for his position at Texas Tech. Can you honestly expect more?

Our grandparents lived on Broadway, and I am sure Spike, as my other cousins and I, used to wander to the Tech campus as a child, in awe. I lose some of that awe knowing that the character of Tech is one of greed, and that an individual that has gone above and beyond in serving Tech is honored with insensitivity as his reward.

Janna Dykes Harris

JONES WRONG NOT SPIKE

To the editor:

I am a Tech fan, and I want to see them win football games too — but don't blame Spike! He didn't set the schedule.

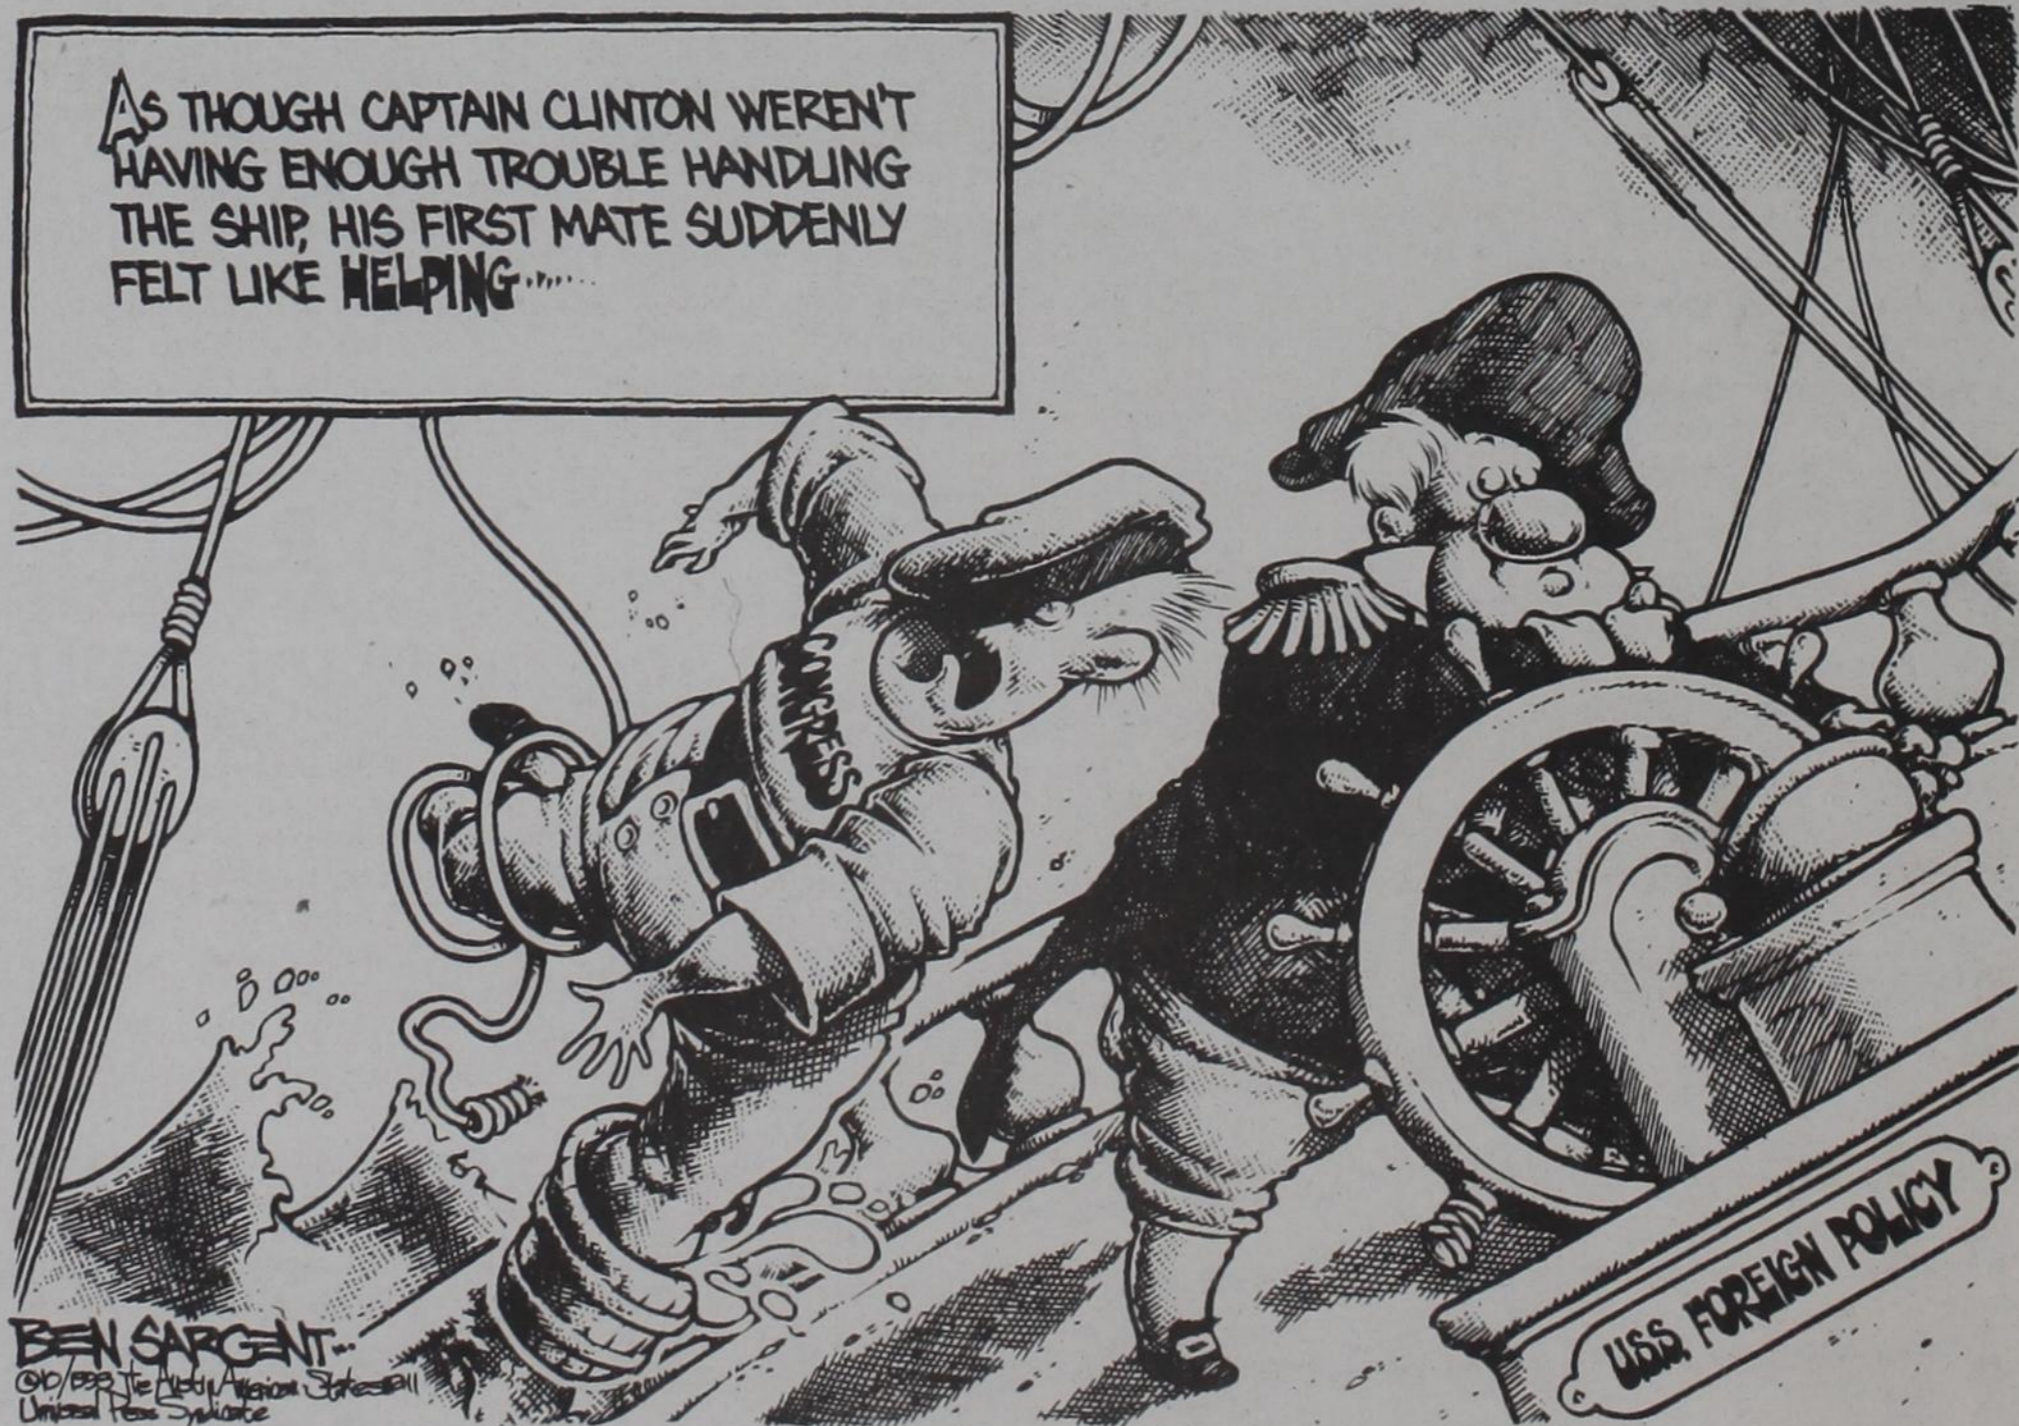

You need to vent your anger at Mr. T. Jones who did an injustice to the university, the football team, the coaches and the Tech fans.

When Tech reaches the point where they can win all of their Southwest Conference games — then and only then — will it help them to schedule more top 25 teams. T. Jones made a mistake and then resigned and left Spike to take the heat from the fans.

Summit unites gangsters

CHICAGO (AP)—Gang members ended their fourth truce summit with a push for unity with the civil rights movement, as some national activists who rushed to support gang peace missed a chance to patch up their own differences.

Members of gangs from 28 cities, including some long-standing rivals, gathered in Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan's Mosque Maryam after making a pledge to civil rights leader Jesse Jackson to abandon violence.

NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Chavis and Farrakhan followed through Sunday with a private meeting to reinforce their September pledge to bury their differences.

But Jackson and Rep. Kweisi

Mfume, D-Md., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, did not attend that meeting, although they had joined in the September pledge.

Jackson addressed summit participants Sunday morning and immediately left to campaign for New York Mayor David Dinkins' re-election.

"We're in a critical election cycle right now," Jackson said. He said he came to Chicago Sunday because the peace effort fits into his own initiative aimed at stopping kids from assaulting each other in schools.

About 2,500 people heard Chavis speak as part of what the Muslim minister billed as "the sealing of a pledge of unity" made Sept. 16 in Washington.

Rice University ranks in top 10 of 'Best Colleges Ever'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—In this survey of the "Best Colleges Ever," Yale, Johns Hopkins and Chicago did not make the top 10—they barely made the top 300.

That is because, as the young editors of an irreverent publication for college-age men put it, those schools may excel in academics, but they "rot" when it comes to having fun.

The pollsters emphasize that the best party schools are not necessarily scholastic zeroes; their survey simply focuses on "the fun factor."

The unscientific poll appears in Inside Edge, a national magazine produced by students from Boston-area colleges, including Harvard, which was No. 122 on the list.

Using reports from 50 student correspondents nationwide, Inside Edge graded America's 300 largest coed universities on nine criteria ranging from the bar and club scene to sports.

The magazine's November issue lists the top 20 and worst 10. "The things we rate are the things that make the schools fun to go to," said Inside Edge publisher and Harvard senior Aaron Shapiro, 21.

While researchers considered "ease of classes" and "ease of graduation," Shapiro insisted they do not view the top schools as filled with brain-dead party animals.

The top 10, in order, were: Florida State, the University of California at Santa Barbara, Vermont, Rice, Georgetown, Syracuse, Alabama, Penn State, Connecticut and Tulane.

Glen Torbert, 21, a Florida State senior, agreed with his school's No. 1 ranking and touted fraternity parties that attract as many as 700 students.

Harbinger allows students to get creative

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The opportunity to be creative, achieve recognition and get paid is as simple for Texas Tech students as submitting an entry to the annual Harbinger magazine.

"The Harbinger has been published every spring for the past three years and, off and on, for the past 25 years," English associate professor James Morey said. "It's a publication of the English honorary society, Sigma Tau Delta."

Harbinger staff members are accepting submissions of poetry, short stories, essays, photography and other works of art.

"It gives students a forum to display their more creative work," Harbinger editor Jessica Smartt said. "A lot of times, you don't get a chance to express yourself creatively. This is a creative outlet."

Smartt said Harbinger staff members are not looking for anything in particular.

"We accept all kinds of styles or diversity," she said. "Last year, we were flooded with entries."

Morey said, "We have outside judges. We are simply looking for the best type (of submission), whatever its type."

After submission, the works are considered by the Harbinger's editors.

"We will mark them based on creativity, how they express themselves and grammar," Smartt said. "Then, they (the submissions) will go to a faculty judge."

The judges are the only (form of) faculty participation, Morey said.

"It is strictly student work," he said. "Students write it, students publish it, and students sell it."

Morey said, depending on the amount of money Sigma Tau Delta has, prizes of $20, $15 and $10 will be offered for first, second and third place.

Students may enter the contest as many times as they wish, as long as they follow the contest guidelines.

All written submissions must be typed, and short stories are limited to 12 double-spaced pages.

All art must be black and white and half tones.

No identifying marks may be on the work. A cover sheet with the student's name, address, phone number, major and classification must be included.

Submissions may be taken to the English building, room 216 and placed in the Sigma Tau Delta mailbox.

Entry deadline is Nov. 20.

Bates, Campisi star in new movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's a Hollywood story as old as "A Star Is Born," but the tragic overtones are missing in the case of Kathy Bates and Tony Campisi.

In the 1937, 1954 and 1976 versions of "A Star Is Born," the theme was the same: wife becomes more famous than husband, and he can't deal with it.

The pattern seemed ready to fit.

Bates and Campisi lovers were struggling actors in New York until 1990 when Rob Reiner cast her as the psycho fan in "Misery." The result was an Academy Award as best actress and a flood of offers.

"I hope when people see him in this film, they will recognize his real talent, and that wall he has been butting his head against all these years will give way a little bit."

She was referring to the Gramercy Pictures release, "A Home of Our Own," in which she stars as a single mother of six who pursues her dream of building a house for the family in rugged Idaho.

Her boss at the bowling alley snack shop is a tall charmer played by Campisi. After a brief courtship, he proposes a one-night stand. When she balks, he beats her.

By Campisi's calculation, he and Bates have been married 2 1/2 years and have been "together" 15 1/2 years.

Five cities await NFL expansion word

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — St. Louis and Charlotte are the favorites as five cities await the NFL's verdict on which two are in as expansion franchises. The owners begin meeting on Tuesday, according to league spokesman Greg Aiello.

Baltimore, Jacksonville and Memphis are the other cities in contention. The league's first expansion since 1976 will give the NFL 30 teams when the new clubs begin play in 1995.

On Tuesday morning, the league's combined expansion and finance committees are scheduled to recommend its choices. Then the 28 owners will vote, with a city needing 21 votes to be approved.

"I'm not sure we'll be able to get anything done quickly unless we amend the rules for the vote," said Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell. He suggested a procedure similar to that used in voting on Super Bowl sites, where the city getting the fewest votes on each ballot is eliminated.

One ranking league official noted that expansion franchises, for which the groups will pay the league $140 million, are a far more important long-term venture than Super Bowl sites. Last time the NFL expanded, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Seattle Seahawks franchises paid $16 million each.

The St. Louis group on Monday ended its search for a lead investor when shopping mall magnate Stan Kroenke took control of the partnership.

St. Louis and Charlotte appeared to be the front-runners, with Baltimore third if St. Louis is rejected. Most owners seem inclined to give one franchise to a city that lost one — St. Louis lost the Cardinals to Phoenix in 1988 and Baltimore lost the Colts to Indianapolis in 1984.

St. Louis also has a $258 million domed stadium under construction and is the largest television market in the nation without an NFL franchise.

Charlotte would represent a new NFL market, the Atlantic south. It would fill a gap between Washington and Atlanta geographically in an area considered football territory where the NBA has had success with an expansion franchise.

In Charlotte, where the team will play at a stadium at which permanent seat licenses have been sold for from $600 to $5,500, a new and unique concept in sports. Until its new stadium is ready, it will play at Clemson, in South Carolina.

The prospective owner is former Colts wide receiver Jerry Richardson and the prospective general manager Mike McCormack, who used to run the Seattle Seahawks.

St. Louis' problem may still be with its ownership.

James B. Orthwein, who took on temporary ownership of the New England Patriots, recently dropped out of a group headed by Jerry Clinton, a beer distributor, butting the financing jeopardy. Clinton dropped out Monday morning and Kroenke's group stepped in.

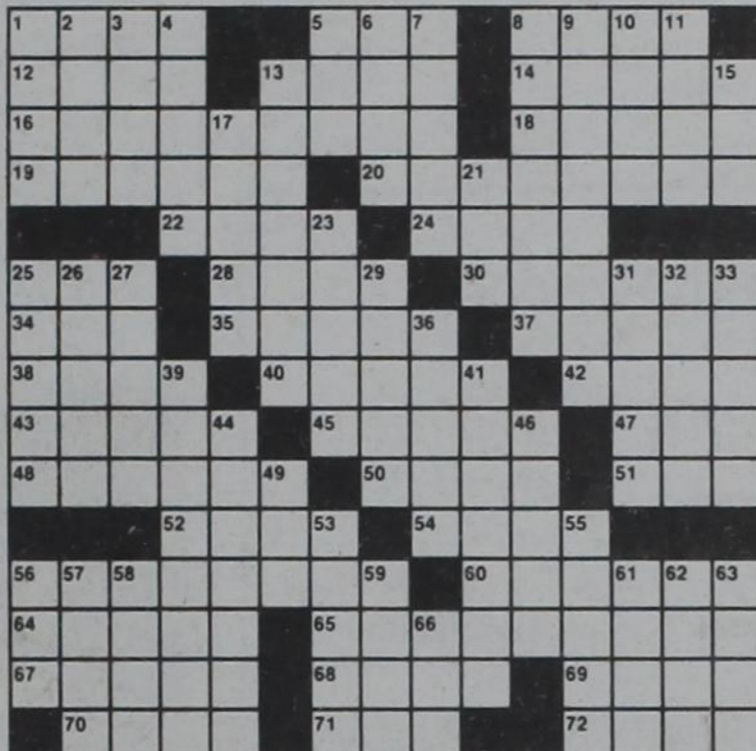

The Memphis group has been in place the longest and is headed by William Dunavant, a cotton merchant. The most intriguing part of the ownership is the estate of the late Elvis Presley and the new team would be called the "Hound Dogs."

Baltimore has two groups bidding for the franchise and a stadium planned near Camden Yards, home of baseball's Orioles. One argument being used against it: it's in a football saturated area between Washington and Philadelphia.

Jacksonville had dropped out at one point, then came back in at the urging of Tagliabue. It will play in a renovated Gator Bowl, but is considered the longest of the long shots.

Toronto deserves second World Championship

TARA HEARLIHY
World Series.

After a year of waiting, October finally rolled around again.

October is the month where the dead wake up to watch the game of the gods. The World Series.

the Series was quite boring.

Game six saved the series and for that reason the winner of this week's Tara's Trophy is the Toronto Blue Jays.

I'll admit that I wanted the Chicago White Sox to advance, but the Birds amazed me.

The games lasted way into the night with not much excitement, but Game 6 made up for everything.

This is the season ending every baseball fan dreams of.

Imagine it's the sixth game, ninth inning, and your team is losing. You're up to bat with one out (two would have been better, but I have to go with what I've got) and you hit the game winning home run.

One man knows this feeling very distinctly. Jays' right fielder Joe Carter could explain the sensation, he accomplished the feat.

Thanks to him and Phillies pitcher Mitch Williams, Toronto managed to become the first team to repeat as champions in 15 years. The last team was the New York Yankees in 1978.

The Blue Jays had power in Most Valuable Player Paul Molitor.

The utility player, he went from third base to first in a last minute change, and was outstanding in every game.

He hit .500 in the series, had 12 hits, and tied the record for extra-base hits in a six-game series.

Molitor is 37 years old and the oldest MVP since 1979.

The "experts" say baseball won't last, the game is too long, and has too many problems.

I have no doubt baseball will continue until man ceases to exist.

The game represents life. Sometimes it lasts too long, sometimes the games are short.

The game has exciting moments, but also the boring pitching duels. Somebody is in trouble, but heroes are made in the sport.

No other sport out of the big three has been around as long as baseball.

No other game is as special as baseball, and this weekend proved it. It might be in a slump, but all slumps come to an end.

Raiders head for Abilene for make up of tournament

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech women's tennis team will journey to Abilene today to make up the Abilene Christian dual tournament.

The original tournament was scheduled for Oct. 19, but was postponed because of rain.

The team is experiencing improvement from week to week, according to coach Kathy Vick, a development she attributes to her talented crop of returning seniors.

Tech is expected to win the match, which will give the Raiders good practice for this weekend's Texas Tech Quadrangular which will feature competition from Northeast Louisiana, Colorado and Texas-El Paso.

"I feel pretty good about this weekend's tournament," Vick said.

"If we play up to our potential we can beat the top teams like Colorado."

The Raiders will have the same lineup they had at the quadrangular with Jennifer Brennan, Lynne Jackson, Christy Davis, Sheri Gilreath, Erika Fisher and Renna Rhodes playing singles.

The doubles teams today will consist of Brennan/Jackson, Fisher/Gilreath, and Rhodes/Davis.

This weekend's quadrangular will be held Friday and Saturday at Lubbock's Hillcrest Country Club.

The Tech netters will play NE Louisiana at noon, and play UTEP at 3:30 p.m.

Saturday's action will kick off with doubles play at 9 a.m. and singles action against Colorado at 10:30 a.m.

"These fall tournaments don't have any implication on the conference standings but they do as far as regional rankings go," Vick explained.

"All of our matches count towards our overall year's record."

Lamont receives AL Manager of the Year honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Lamont, who led the Chicago White Sox to their first division title in 10 years, was voted American League Manager of the Year on Monday.

Buck Showalter of the New York Yankees was second with 63 points. Showalter got seven first-place votes, eight seconds and four thirds. Cito Gaston, who hasn't won the award despite leading the Toronto Blue Jays to consecutive World Series titles, was third with 49 points.

Kevin Kennedy of the Texas Rangers was fourth with 28 points.
