Violence mars Peruvian election; no one killed

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Shining Path guerrillas blew up the congressional office building Saturday on the eve of a referendum on a new constitution.

No one was killed or injured in the bombing, which took place five blocks from the presidential palace.

But it blew out windows and ripped through interior offices, destroying desks and filing cabinets.

Colonial-era artwork inside a church across the street was damaged.

The night before, rebels blacked out the capital and a wide swath of the Peruvian coast and the central Andes by blowing up power lines. Power had not fully restored by Saturday afternoon.

Fire victims help each other

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Jack and Elaine Lund lost their home, clothing and 25 years of memories when a wildfire leveled their house near Emerald Bay.

But when they went to church Sunday in newly purchased clothes, they volunteered one of their few remaining possessions to help others left homeless in last week's firestorm. They offered the use of their pickup truck to carry victims' belongings.

At St. Catherine of Siena Roman Catholic Church in Laguna Beach, and at churches and homes around Southern California, people like the Lunds were stepping forward to help. Thirteen major fires in a 200-mile stretch from Ventura County to the Mexican border torched 167,700 acres, damaged or destroyed 787 buildings, including at least 650 homes, and injured 62.

Sex education debate heats up

RICHARDSON (AP)—When the Richardson school board has its regular meeting Monday night, sex will be the topic of conversation.

More than 400 people are expected to attend the meeting to vote on a controversial sex education curriculum.

A heated debate has raged in Richardson's school district for weeks. One side supports the administration's proposed "abstinence-based" policy. Others prefer "directive abstinence-based" sex education.

Both policies, one written by administrators and the other by trustee Jim Herblin, stress abstinence as the only safe means to prevent pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

But the administration's policy also allows discussions of "risk-reduction methods" such as contraceptives. Herblin says the administration's policy is "too loose," so he "felt it was imperative to draft a policy as an alternative to look at."

CAPITAL VICTORY

NICK DE LA TORRE: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes is carried through a throng of football players after Tech defeated the University of Texas 31-22 Saturday in Austin's Memorial Stadium. Tech's football record is 3-5 and 2-2 in conference play after the victory.

Coleman leads Tech to win

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A big play can make or break a football team.

Saturday, a big play in the form of an interception by Raider back Marcus Coleman helped the Texas Tech football team to a 31-22 victory over the Texas Longhorns in Austin.

Coleman intercepted an errant Shea Morenz pass with 9:17 left in the game to give Tech a 24-14 lead and helped to quell any hopes of a Texas comeback. "When I caught it, I thought this was going to turn the game around," Coleman said after the game. "We needed a big play, but we needed it to come from anybody."

Tech upped its record to 3-5 and 2-2 in the Southwest Conference to keep hopes alive of playing in the postseason. Texas fell to 2-4-1 and 2-1 in league play. The Longhorns must win the rest of their games to have a chance at a bowl game.

But Saturday, Texas looked as if it was going to come back from a 17-0 first quarter deficit until Coleman's interception.

Inside linebacker Zach Thomas hit Morenz, who wanted to throw to Phil Brown, on a blitz, leaving Coleman with the ball and a clear path to the end zone.

"We have had the big plays against us, but we made big plays in the right spots today," Thomas said. "We made them when we needed it."

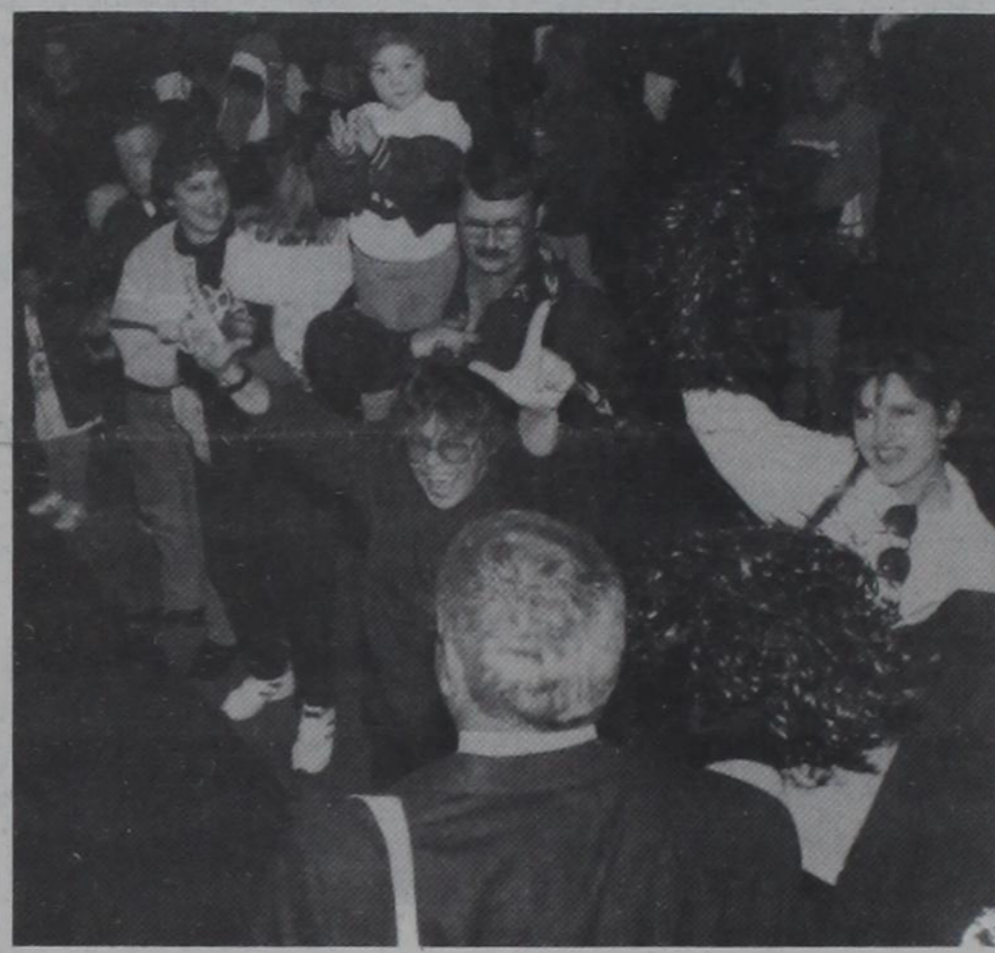

Two plays later, Tech cornerback Cat Adams intercepted another Morenz pass, setting up the Raiders' final score of the game.

Morenz completed 27 of 47 passes for 280 yards to go along with the two interceptions. "We could play a lot better, but our defensive plan was great," Thomas said.

"We took Morenz out of his game and that is what we wanted to do."

The defense held the Longhorn receiver duo of Lovell Pinkney and Adams to 10 catches for 141 yards combined.

"They have a good offense. When their receivers know they are not going to get the ball, they lag off a little bit. We just tried to contain them," Coleman said.

Guns up

Texas Tech fans greet football coach Spike Dykes at the Lubbock International Airport after the football team's victory over Texas.

The Raiders gave up 422 total yards, but no Texas rusher gained more than 100 yards.

The win was Tech's second in Memorial Stadium since 1989 and only the second time the Raiders have defeated the Longhorns in Austin since 1967.

"The men had a great win," coach Spike Dykes said after his team picked up its second consecutive victory. "Our guys hung in there, they prepared well

Ag alumni recognized for professional excellence

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Three outstanding alumni were recognized Friday by officials from Texas Tech's College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources during the 14th annual Distinguished Alumni Awards luncheon.

"They are nominated by the faculty members, fellow alumni and the chairmen of various departments in the college," Director of Development W.F. Bennett said. "Then they are chosen by the faculty and the chairmen."

The outstanding alumni this year are Robert Schmidt, Carl Menzies and Delbert Hess.

Bennett said the alumni were chosen because of excellence in their professions.

"They are distinguished in their professions and are recognized as leaders in their fields," he said. "Schmidt has developed, owned and operated Caprock Growers since 1960. He has served as president of his state professional association of nurserymen."

Schmidt served as president of the Professional Plant Growers Association and Bedding Plants International, for which he was awarded their Distinguished Service Award.

"Menzies is research director of the Texas A&M Research Center (at San Angelo)," Bennett said. "He received the Honorary Fellow in the American Society of Animal Science, which is the highest award."

Menzies supervises the research center's activities that involve improving ranching in West Central Texas. He also received the American Sheep Producers Council Silver Ram Award.

"Hess is recognized primarily for his contribution to the breeding of many new varieties of cotton, corn and grain sorghum," Bennett said. "Many of the cotton varieties he developed are now produced in the South Plains."

Hess, director of the Maize Program with the International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center in Mexico City, is a member of the American Society of Agronomy and the International Committee of the American Seed Trade Association.

"The alumni have each made significant contributions to society that stand out and are easily recognized," Bennett said. "These accomplishments throughout their careers have brought credit to the college."

UD, La Ventana win three national awards

by KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech student publications staff members brought home three national awards Sunday after participating in the Fall National Media Convention in Dallas.

The convention was sponsored by College Media Advisers and the Associated Collegiate Press.

Kent Best, editorial adviser for The University Daily and La Ventana, was named recipient of the CMA Four-Year Yearbook Honor Roll Adviser Award for 1993. Best has served as editorial adviser at Tech for two and one-half years.

He graduated from Tech in 1987 with a bachelor's in journalism. Best is scheduled to receive a master's in mass communications in May.

This is the third year Granberry has received a photography award in the ACP competition. Last year he was awarded third in news photography and, in 1991, he received second place for a news photo.

Sharon Steinman, a senior photo communications major from Amarillo and a photographer for The UD, received a third-place award for a news photo of an AIDS candlelight vigil at Tech's Memorial Circle.

Last year, Steinman was awarded second place in sports photography.

UPD officers get gun training

Weapons course must be finished for certification

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech University Police Department officials have hit the mark in firearms training for the department's officers.

UPD officers are participating this week in a certification course at the Slaton Police Department Shooting Range to get licensed for carrying weapons.

The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education requires all gun-carrying officers to complete a standardized course with a minimum score of 70 percent.

UPD officials require their officers to score a minimum of 80 percent in the state course.

In addition to the standard state course, UPD officials use several independent training exercises to improve the officers' skills and confidence.

The UPD course covers more than just the structured training of the state course, UPD Chief Jay Parchman said.

"There's no excuse for a police officer not to be competent with the tools he's given," he said.

Parchman said the additional training exercises have helped the UPD officers.

"It (the standard course) is not practical shooting," he said. "By shooting in the (UPD) course, our scores have gone way up."

The additional training exercises consist of shooting steel plates, shooting a steel-plated tree called the "dueling tree" and participating in an obstacle course.

The obstacle course requires officers to exit a police car and go through several shooting exercises while under pressure.

The obstacle course gives officers an adrenaline rush, Parchman said.

UPD officers also have to demonstrate efficiency with the baton stick, he said.

Although state regulations require officers to participate in the training course once a year, UPD officers attend the course twice a year.

"We do it once every six months," Parchman said. "To my knowledge, we've never had anyone who did not shoot the minimum score."

Educating the community about police training and procedures is important, he said.

"We want to educate the people in the Tech community (about) why we use guns the way we do," Parchman said.

Police officers are not authorized to shoot their guns with the intent to kill, he said.

Air Force ROTC offering incentives

Juniors and seniors enrolled in the Air Force ROTC's Professional Officer Course can receive a $2,000 annual scholarship.

Cadets will receive $1,000 per semester to cover the costs of tuition, books and fees, as well as a $100 per month stipend. Scholarship recipients will be commissioned as Air Force officers after graduation and must serve four years.

For more information contact Lt. Bob Surprenant at the Tech AFROTC detachment (742-2143).

Why hold cars hostage — issue tickets instead

CARL TEPPER

My car was towed last Tuesday. It was parked in front of West Hall, along the entrance lane within the parking stripes. I thought that I had parked within the 30-minute spaces, but that was a costly sin. I, instead, had parked in the 30-minute "service vehicle" parking space. For about five minutes, I stared stupidly at the empty asphalt where I was sure I'd left my car. I figured that my car was stolen, or even worse, towed. After finally checking the signs, I came to the realization that it was the latter, and thus, worst. Worst, because instead of being robbed by a stranger, I knew that I was being robbed by a friend; my alma mater, Texas Tech. When I got tired of waiting for the commuter bus, which probably didn't exist at 3:30 p.m., I decided to hike down to the automobile penitentiary. Besides being angry, I was worried. I was certain that my poor little Pontiac would be subjected to unmentionable acts by the long-term convicts of the motor vehicle slammer. Something, like maybe a Dodge pickup truck, was probably making lewd gestures toward the defenseless, bike-rack clad Firebird. It was only a matter of time until the other felons would join into the perverted fun. I picked up the pace and crossed the 1.5 mile campus at a personal record time. When I arrived at the fenced blight to our campus, I was relieved that my car was safe. I stepped into the hut of the Parking Gestapo with intentions of accessing the system. That means a fight. After informing the warden that I wanted my automobile back she politely and cautiously proceeded to begin the procedures of parole.

These officials have obviously been instructed to be cordial while extorting our money. Anyhow, I then requested information for the appeals process. She gave me a form that required the usual information: name, Social Security number, violation number and reasons for the appeal. I drew a blank at first, after all, I did park in the wrong space, so how am I going to appeal? I gathered the few, still sensible thoughts I had left, and wrote about the poorly marked and misleading signs, especially if you drive in from the east side. A parking trap. I also remembered that at least some of the signs were bent, but I couldn't remember which ones. That didn't matter. I whined about them anyway. I then explained that, even though I "may" have been at fault by parking in the wrong space, a ticket would have sufficed, and towing was unnecessary. I cannot understand why the parking and traffic overdoers, oops... I mean officers, do not just ticket the car. The motor vehicle was not blocking traffic, not in a reserved space and was not a hazard. After speaking with the residents of the area, the spaces are also deemed to be underutilized. Why do we give "service vehicles" four spaces in a desperate commuter campus anyhow? Is there going to be a mass delivery of tortillas or something? Maybe the campus police are expecting a Branch Davidian sect to barricade West Hall, and the parking is saved for the siege. Or just maybe, Texas Tech is trying to get more money out of the rich little ol' me.

I wonder if our caring and thoughtful administration would understand my predicament if I told them that the $50 cost of this incident ($10 for the fine and $40 for the tow) is a half-week's pay? They've made it common knowledge that they're underpaid too, so I'm sure they'd sympathize. Heck, they might even have to miss a lunch out at the County Line if this ever happened to them.

This conservative never despised profit motive so much as when I filled out that $50 check, except maybe the time Joey Bonnagora beat me up for my field trip money in the third grade. But that's another story.

Tabloid news making headlines

Revival of Lincoln not responsible, believable art of science

RUSSELL BAKER

Not since "Famed Psychic's Head Explodes" has a news headline seized my attention so insistently as "Abraham Lincoln's Corpse Revived" in The Weekly World News of Oct. 5. Doctors using the Emancipator's remains to test the experimental drug Revivitol brought him around for 95 seconds. This was long enough for Lincoln to get his eyes open and ask, "Gentlemen, where am I?" before re-expiring. I was disappointed in Lincoln's failure to say anything more stirring than "Where am I?" You expect something as insipid as that from a maiden coming out of a swoon, but not from the author of the Gettysburg Address. I would have expected him to talk like one of those movie Lincolns, like Henry Ford or Raymond Massey. Slain six score and eight years ago, I am constrained to ask, "Gentlemen, whither the Union?" would have been about right. Afterward, however, realizing how awful it might have been, I was glad Lincoln hadn't said, "Do you have the capability, gentlemen, to orientate me with particular reference to my precise location at this point in time?"

Scientific advances like this one create trouble. Until now, when contemplating the end I have worried mostly about having some memorable last words ready for historians. I am still undecided whether to make these last words romantic with "Put out the light," magisterial with "Let there be light," ironic with "Hark, is that light at the end of the tunnel?" or rakish with "Light my fire, baby." Now with this Revivitol thing on the horizon last words won't be enough. There will also have to be memorable first words for speaking as you re-enter the living condition. Maybe not, though. Maybe I am too optimistic here. Normally when you return from a great journey full of eagerness to talk about it, stay-at-home friends and relatives shut you off by talking about what happened to them while you were gone. Come to think of it, I'll bet that once Revivitol becomes as common as Prozac a returning cadaver won't be able to work the stiffness out of his larynx before dozens of his progeny are shouting about all the wonders he missed by going unrevived so long. The more I think of these doctors reviving Lincoln, the less I like it. Reading the paper more closely, I have my doubts about their being doctors, even though the paper calls them "doctors." Doctors of what? It doesn't say. There is a kind of doctor who fools around with this kind of medicine. Dr. Frankenstein was one. Vincent Price was another. So was John Carradine. I recall Carradine once putting on his white doctor's smock to turn a beautiful woman into a gorilla, strictly in the interest of science of course. They all toiled in the interest of science, just as these "doctors" experimenting on Lincoln with Revivitol are said to be working with for science. They even had a video camera to record the scene. For the medical journals, I suppose. No wonder Lincoln was at a loss for beautiful language. When you've been dead 128 years, and the light bulb hadn't even been invented yet when you died, much less the information superhighway, and you find yourself coming out of it and staring into a television camera — That's carrying science a little far. Remember, Lincoln doesn't know we've been to the Moon and got tired of it, yet here are these "doctors" welcoming him with a TV camera. Not that I mean to denounce science. Far from it. Science is the great ornament of our age. One of these days it will solve the riddle of the age, which of course is, "People can't really believe a thing they read in a grocery tabloid, can they? So why do they?" It isn't clear from the story in The Weekly World News why the drug industry is experimenting on ways to bring back the dead. You wouldn't think there could be big profits in it, since rich heirs who can pay big drug prices surely don't want their forebears back nagging them as spoiled, incompetent young wastrels. It looks suspiciously to me like a sinister plot by the drug industry to extort billions from an already overcrowded planet by threatening to create a new back-from-the-grave-population explosion. Now, about that famed psychic's exploded head. Russell Baker is a columnist for the New York Times News Service. ©1993 NYTNS.

Psychic fair interesting weekend alternative

JENNIFER GOOCH

I have always been skeptical. Ask any of my friends. And it was because of my skepticism that I attended (or rather, experienced) my first psychic fair.

Since I consider myself a little old to be trick-or-treating, I decided to do something different this Halloween besides the usual haunted houses and carnivals.

What better way to celebrate the holiday most associated with ghosts and witches than by visiting a room full of psychics, palm readers and tarot card specialists? After all, I had left my Ouija in Dallas.

I decided to go to the fair after I saw an ad in The University Daily. Although I'll admit I am skeptical, I do not consider myself close-minded.

This particular fair — there are several that travel around the state — was at the Lubbock Plaza Hotel.

After I paid a $5 admission charge, I circled the room looking for my first "experience." The first booth I encountered was a large, camera-type machine that took your picture so that you can see your aura. Because I am a student and I'm on a limited budget, I decided to move on.

At the next booth, I had my biorhythms charted by a woman named Barbara. The theory is that from birth to death, each of us is influenced by three internal cycles — the physical, the emotional and the intellectual.

These cycles are charted as high, low or critical. And all this is determined by birthdays.

Barbara said that, by charting these emotions, we can schedule our daily activities better. On physically critical days, we are most likely to have accidents, catch colds, and suffer all types of bodily harm.

On emotionally critical days, we are most likely to suffer from quarrels, fights, depression and senseless frustration.

And on intellectually critical days, we can expect bad judgment, difficulty in expressing things clearly, and a general resistance to learning anything new or remembering what we already know.

I just hope I'm not critical during finals.

Probably the most memorable experience was having my palm read. Victoria, a spiritual counselor and ordained minister, told me many things about myself that were right on target.

Without getting too personal, Victoria told me about my fears about what I will do after graduation (this is certainly true) and said she saw teaching in my future.

This really hit home because I have been considering for some time now getting a teaching certificate after graduation.

Victoria also was correct about many of my personal traits and characteristics.

By looking at my palm, she could tell that I am very motivated but, at the same time, I am very hard on myself. She also said there are many more years of school left ahead of me.

Oh boy.

Despite Victoria being right about a few things, I am still skeptical about the supernatural and the metaphysical.

But maybe that's just because I'm a journalist.

Tech, local musicians continue celebration of Britain with concert series

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Whether it be soft candlelight music or royal coronation marches, this month offers a diversity of British music as the Texas Tech School of Music continues its "Britain: A Celebration on the High Plains" concert series. The series will continue through Nov. 21. "We have had a very good audience response so far," said Bradley Cope, information specialist at the School of Music. November events begin today with world class British clarinetist David Campbell, an internationally known concerto soloist, recitalist and chamber musician, Cope said. Thursday's Candlelight Chamber Music III Concert, featuring an orchestra composed of Texas Tech faculty, alumni and students, will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Hemmle Recital Hall. On Nov. 8, the festival will display the talents of the Tech Symphonic Band, directed by James Sudduth.

"The Tech Symphonic Band is well-known after performing at Carnegie Hall last year," Cope said.

All of the candlelight chamber music concerts are performed in a candlelight atmosphere, Cope said. Tickets cost $5 for the public and $3 for Tech students.

The festival's finale, a vesper concert series at the Lubbock First United Methodist Church, will focus on the Victorian choral tradition.

The finale is free to the public and will be performed at 5 p.m. Nov. 21.

"It is a long festival with many things to do," Cope said. "All the concerts are worthwhile with first-rate performances."

1994 La Ventana YEARBOOK

Raiders take five-game win over UTA

It took five games, but the Texas Tech women's volleyball team defeated Texas-Arlington Saturday.

The Red Raiders (11-11, 2-6) fell behind the Lady Mavericks (7-14, 3-2) after the first two games, but Tech came back to win 13-15, 6-15, 15-3, 15-12 and 15-9 in Arlington.

"The first game went well," coach Mike Jones said. "In the second game, we weren't there, which is typical of how we have played. In the last three games I thought we did a nice job."

Tech had a .232 hitting percentage in .232 hitting percentage to UTA's .070 hitting percentage.

The Raiders were led by sophomore outside hitter Diane Owens, who hit .308 with 11 kills. Junior setter Ginger Carter had nine kills and a .600 hitting average.

"Things happened in games that we would see and try to tell them," Jones said. "Before, they would not understand and they are learning now. Diane Owens did things that she was physically unable to do six to eight weeks ago. She has learned to place the ball and hit it where things need to go."

Jones said after losing the first two games, Tech altered its lineup.

"We changed people around," he said, "and everybody still played on the same page. The bench was rooting for everybody. They were very supportive and focused."

Sophomore middle blocker Jackie Bode entered the game for senior middle blocker Erica Ruegg. Senior outside hitter Chris Fehrl-Zelaya moved to the right side of

"I think it went very well," Jones said. "In the third and fourth game, Erica came back in and played really well. I was very happy. Everyone contributed."

Jones said Nye did not have a chance to become adjusted playing on the left side before the game.

"With everyone being sick, we couldn't work on it in practice," he said.

Tech showed more confidence in the match against UTA, Jones said.

"They played like we used to. They were playing together with enthusiasm," he said. "It was nice to see that attitude again. Our mental game was much stronger."

Victory

Tech jumps out to 17-0 lead to take first win over 'Horns since 1989

they prepared well and they worked hard. I'm really proud of them."

Byron "Bam" Morris scored from one-yard out to ice the win with 7:37 left in the fourth quarter.

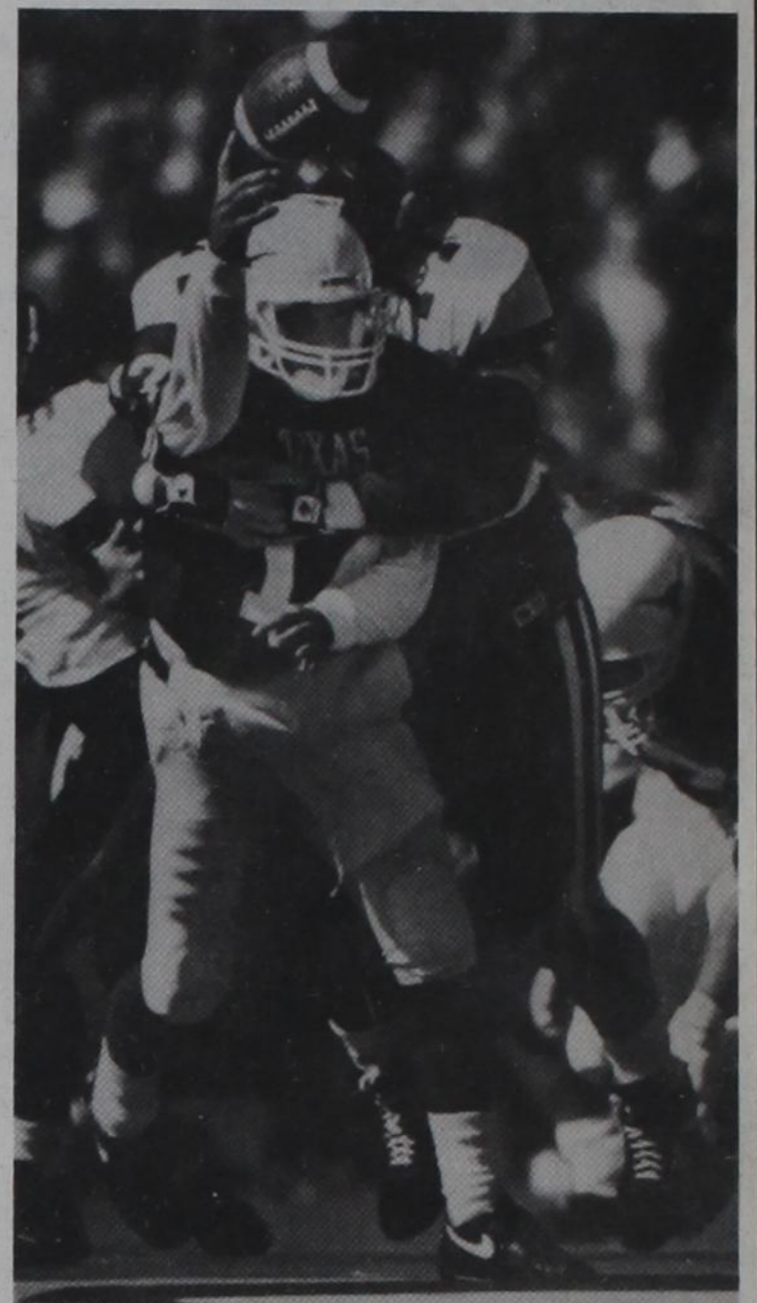

Morris finished the game with 169 yards on 33 carries, while going over the 1,000-yard mark for the second straight year. He also had two rushing touchdowns in the win.

The defensive performance was countered by a fast start that saw the Raiders score on their first three possessions en route to a quick 17-0 lead in the first quarter.

The Robert Hall-Lloyd Hill combination capped the scoring barrage after Hill caught a 10-yard Hall pass with 3:04 left in the quarter.

"We made plays. That is simply said, we made some big plays in some areas today," Hall said after he completed 15 of 28 passes for 189 yards. "Every week we win takes a little more pressure off us."

Hill's score marked his first touchdown reception since he had two against Georgia on Sept. 18. The Odessa Permian product caught five passes for 67 yards Saturday.

Netters fall to Colorado

The Texas Tech women's tennis team defeated Texas-El Paso 9-1, and Northeast Louisiana 7-1 on Friday but dropped a close match Saturday to Colorado at the Texas Tech Athletic Training Center, by a score of 5-4.

In singles play, Tech's top seed Jennifer Brennan lost a three-set match to Colorado's Chris Bowers and Lynne Jackson lost to Natalie Dickson. Tech's Christy Davis and Erika Fisher came up victorious against Sara Willens and Erika Stenstrom in straight sets, respectively.

In doubles action, Tech's tandem of Brennan and Jackson defeated the Buffalos' team of Dickson and McIntosh in straight sets to emerge with the top seed victory.

Davis and Renna Rhodes combined to defeat Branvall and Willens in three sets.

Cross country team takes fifth

The Texas Tech men's cross country team took fifth in the Southwest Conference men's cross country championship meet Sunday in Dallas' Norbuck Park.

Ralph Ayyad and Gabe Ruiz finished eighth and ninth, overall, earning them All-SWC honors (which go to the top 10 finishers) and spearheading the team to its best finish in years.

The team had a final score of 90, just one point behind fourth-place Rice, and six points behind third-place Southern Methodist. Texas won the team totals with 62 points, followed by Baylor with 69 points.

Brian Keim of Baylor won the men's individual race with a time of 24:44 over the five-mile course.

Rounding out the Tech finishers were Ben Friedman (24th), Bill Bush (25th), Joe Perez (29th), Don Koontz (39th) and Alfred Hinojosa, who ran a 27:57.
