Germany under fire for blood crisis

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Authorities ignored reports of irregularities at a company at the center of Germany's contaminated blood scandal, a magazine says in a report released Saturday.

UB Plasma was shut down Oct. 28 after the government said the Koblenz company had sold blood products without testing them for the AIDS virus as required by law.

Reports that UB Plasma sold contaminated blood have caused panic in Germany, with tens of thousands of people calling health officials trying to get information.

The government and Health Minister Horst Seehofer have come under attack for their handling of the scandal.

Kevorkian wages jail hunger strike

DETROIT (AP) — Supporters marched in front of a Detroit jail Saturday demanding the release of Dr. Jack Kevorkian, who's staging a hunger strike to advocate doctor-assisted suicide.

Holding placards saying "Stay out of my life, and death" the crowd of more than 200 chanted "Free Jack Now!" outside the prison that has held the 65-year-old retired pathologist in a 10-by-10 isolated cell since Friday.

Kevorkian has refused all food and is staying in bed, accepting only juice and water, said his lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger.

Emerging amid cheers from the drab concrete and marble detention building, Fieger said Kevorkian could hear their chants and was so moved that he cried.

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano said Kevorkian was "stable and comfortable."

State auditor cites TSTC problems

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — An audit of the Texas State Technical College System has cited problems at several campuses around the state, particularly at the Sweetwater facility, where the report says tension is high and morale is low.

A draft of the management control audit, prepared by the State Auditor's Office, found problems with communication at several campuses in the system, which includes facilities in Amarillo, Harlingen, Waco, Marshall and Sweetwater.

But it singles out Sweetwater for apparent communication problems between management and employees, as well as for low morale.

It also notes that the Sweetwater institute does not have a faculty senate, an organization considered crucial to campus communication.

Some faculty and staff members told the Abilene Reporter-News that such problems do exist at the school.

Students flagged before registration

Computer checks for university holds

Standing in line for registration only to discover there is a hold on your record may be a nuisance of the past.

Student Association officers have made available a computer outside of the SA office in the University Center, room 230, for students to check their records before standing in line.

"All students will need is their social security number and their date of birth," SA President Mike Fietz said. "We will also need their registration card or an I.D."

The computer will be available from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. throughout the registration process.

Students will type in their personal information and the computer will acknowledge any flags on their record.

The computer will spot flags on records from any one of these offices: Admissions and Records, International Admissions, Graduate Admissions, Collections, XL Programs, the Bursar's Office, Housing and Dining Services, Financial Aid, Dean of Students, International Programs, University Police Department, Traffic and Parking, the TASP Office and the Law School.

The computer also will specify whether the flags are for registration, transcripts or for both.

Fietz said he believes the computer will help relieve some student frustrations.

"I know that a student's time is valuable," Fietz said. "It will relieve the frustration of waiting in line to find out that they have a hold and having to go wait in another line and another line and so on."

Fietz said a phone in the SA conference room will be available for students to call any offices that have flagged their records.

"It won't take but 20 seconds of your time, but it may save you two hours of waiting in line and going from office to office," he said.

Fietz said SA officers wanted to help in an area that affects all students.

"Registration is something that everyone at Texas Tech has to experience," he said. "And, waiting in line only to find a hold on your records has happened to probably about 10 percent of the students."

Fietz said there will be no way to check other students' records unless the other student's social security number and birth date is known.

Computers available from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. through registration

Red Raider Robot, a service offered by the Division of Student Affairs, also will spot flags on student records. By using a touch-tone phone, students can call 742-4325 24-hours-a-day to check the status of flags on their records.

Tech assaults continue

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Another assault against two Tau Kappa Epsilon pledges occurred in the Weymouth Residence Hall Oct. 29, at about the same time as an assault against two TKE pledges occurred in the Murdough Residence Hall.

Aaron Thomason and Chad McNutt were assaulted in their room, 726 Weymouth, by four males — an assault similar to that against Murdough residents Andy Caldwell and Bradley Lybrand.

A Texas Tech University Police Department report stated that Caldwell believes the assault was fraternity related.

According to the UPD report, assailants broke into Caldwell and Lybrand's room in Murdough at about 4:30 a.m. Oct. 29 and hit the students several times while they were asleep.

Caldwell said he could not comment on the assaults.

Thomason and McNutt were assaulted by four males Oct. 29 in their room in Weymouth.

According to a UPD report, four males knocked on Thomason and McNutt's door until Thomason opened the door.

The UPD report also stated that the assailants asked Thomason if he was a TKE and attacked him when he answered yes.

Thomason and McNutt pushed the assailants out of the room after the attack, the UPD report stated.

UPD officials said they could not release any more information about the assaults at this time.

SAE President Scott Mitchell said he could not comment, but he said the SAE's would release a statement to The University Daily in a few days.

It is unknown whether or not the assaults in Weymouth Hall and Murdough Hall are related.

Dean of Students Michael Shonrock said his office received the UPD report of the assaults Friday.

Allegation letters, which are sent to alleged violators of the Texas Tech Code of Student Conduct, will be mailed today, he said.

Upon receiving an allegation letter, a student is given about five days to contact the Dean of Students Office, Shonrock said.

"We will follow the Student Code of Conduct," he said.

The Dean of Students Office has not found a connection between the alleged assailants and any student organization, Shonrock said.

According to the UPD police report four students were referred to the Dean of Students Office for the assault in Weymouth Hall.

School honors former Tech president

Cavazos Junior High naming commemorated

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Officials from Lubbock and from Lauro Cavazos Junior High School paid homage to former Texas Tech president Lauro Cavazos Sunday during a ceremony to commemorate naming the junior high school in his honor.

"It is wonderful, indeed, for the city of Lubbock and for our entire West Texas region to have such a first-class educational facility in our community," Mayor David Langston said.

"It is not only a tribute to the city," he said. "It is a tribute to the neighborhood who worked so hard to make it a reality."

Langston also said the dedication "acknowledges the importance of education to this community, to our city, to our state and to our nation."

Cavazos and his wife, Peggy, have made a donation of $5,000 to Texas Tech University to be placed in an account to support scholarships for graduates of the Lauro Cavazos Junior High School.

Cavazos said the junior high school is representative of the commitment of Lubbock to educational excellence.

"For so long I have maintained, the most important building in the town is the schoolhouse," Cavazos said.

"The most important job is teaching," he said.

He also said parents and educators can transform the school into a caring and excellent school.

"Peggy and I certainly are grateful and profoundly honored for Lubbock to choose to name this school after me," he said.

"I am honored that this building will bear my name," he said. "But most of all, the honor to me is the fact that children will be educated here."

Cavazos said he wants every child in Lubbock to be educated to their fullest potential.

Cavazos was the Tech and the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center's president from April 1980 until September 1988 when he was named as U.S. Secretary of Education by President Ronald Reagan. He extended his position under President George Bush and resigned Dec. 15, 1990.

A commemoration ceremony to honor Cavazos will begin at 11:30 a.m. today in the AT&T Learning Center located between Pods A and B in the TTUHSC.

At 2 p.m. in the sally port of the administration building, there will be another ceremony commemorating Cavazos' presidency at Tech. Also, the Cavazos papers officially will be accepted into the Southwest Collection at 2:30 p.m.

A night of memories

Cadets bear cold for vigil

Texas Tech students and faculty members joined the Tech Air Force ROTC Sabre Flight Drill Team Friday at Memorial Circle to honor prisoners of war and missing in action.

Lt. Gen. Dr. Bernhard T. Mitemeyer, executive vice president and provost of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, delivered a speech paying homage to veterans, POWs and MIAs.

"For them, there is no burial ground in the hallowed cemeteries of American recognition," he said.

"They have become little more than a small element of the grim statistics."

Mitemeyer said all veterans, especially POWs, should be honored because without them "we would not be the distinguished nation of free people that we are today."

Four F-111s from Cannon Air Force Base flew over Memorial Circle during the half-staff reveille ceremony, and the Reese Honor Guard conducted a 21-gun salute.

The Sabre Flight Drill Team conducted a 24-hour vigil that ended at noon Saturday.

There was a changing of the guard every 30 minutes throughout the night, said Sandra Sandoval, cadet lieutenant colonel of the Air Force ROTC.

The event was sponsored by the Lewis C. Ellis Jr. Squadron of Arnold Air Society and by Angel Flight.

Chris Kachuna (right), an engineering and physics major, and Chris Evans, an atmospheric science major, run laps around Memorial Circle at 2:30 a.m. Saturday. The two were participating in the Air Force ROTC's POW, MIA vigil.

Senate making mockery of Packwood

SANDRA
PULLEY

The Senate is playing show and tell with their friend from Oregon — Bob Packwood.

Not content to tackle the substantial issues of health care, the North American Free Trade Agreement and the growing threat of AIDS, our so-called legislators have chosen to return to kindergarten antics.

"Bobby got caught doing a very naughty thing. Let's tell on him," the senators giggle in their dignified speeches aired to the American public through the eyes of C-Span — some of them hoping that their own misguided endeavors do not come to light.

What worsens the situation is that the Senate also is bringing the right to privacy into its little game by subpoenaing Packwood's diary for an investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee.

In the past few weeks the Senate has been fighting harder for the Packwood diary than pork barrel projects for its constituents.

And at the same time they violate Packwood's right to keep his private thoughts quietly locked in the white paper recesses of his diary.

The right to keep a diary does not end once the ballot box results have been tallied. They do not end when a person enters the Senate chamber.

They also do not end when a man is castigated by his colleagues for a crime he has not been convicted of through the court system. By demanding full disclosure of the Packwood diaries in a 94-6 vote, the Senate is making up its own kind of vigilante justice.

Despite the public uproar, Packwood said Wednesday he would serve out his fifth term in the Senate in the midst of calls for his resignation.

The Senate can choose to fight its hateful battle against privacy rights in the public eye and degrade itself further in the face of those it is supposed to serve.

Or, it can choose the honorable path and try Bob Packwood with the evidence it already has, which does not include the diary.

In the end, Packwood will have to face the greatest tribunal in the free world anyway — the American voters.

Let them decide what to do with a fallen man.

VEGGIE PET DIETS RESPONSIBLE

To the editor:

I am disturbed by the increasingly irresponsible and self-indulgent editorials that appear in The UD. Many of them strike me as the journalistic equivalent to throwing tortillas, and like that activity, reflect poorly on the university.

Sandra Pulley's recent editorial, "Veggie pet debate" (Nov. 3), is a case in point. Ms. Pulley apparently cannot conceive why some vegetarians who are also pet owners might wish to impose a meatless diet upon poor Fido or Kitty. The reason is simple; assuming that one's decision to follow a vegetarian diet is motivated by ethical and ecological reasons and not simply by personal taste, the vegetarian in today's society is, in effect, boycotting the production, processing and distribution of meat products. With any kind of conscience he or she should find it hypocritical to advocate such a boycott while at the same time catering to the (real or imagined) carnivorous preferences of a pet.

Some vegetarians (myself included) find this to be sufficient reason not to own a pet; but why criticize vegetarian pet owners who, willing neither to compromise their principles nor to sacrifice their pet, seek an alternative solution to the problem of how to have a pet and feed it too? Indeed, to search for a solution both ethical and practical seems reasonable and responsible; it should merit our respect, not contempt.

Had I been interested only in presenting the vegetarian's perspective on this comparatively trivial issue, I would probably not have bothered writing. But Ms. Pulley's foolish question about what else to do with all the low-quality meat that goes into pet food belies a thorough ignorance of the central issues of contemporary vegetarianism, which leads her to trivialize the vegetarian diet as a personal fancy motivated by little more than the whims of "politically-correct" faddishness.

On the contrary, it has been well established that the resources required to raise, process and distribute a pound of meat far exceed those required to produce an equivalent amount of food energy from non-meat sources.

At a time in which we are reminded daily about the limits of the earth's natural resources, it makes good sense to consider simpler, less expensive and more ecologically responsible alternatives to the morass of environmentally unfriendly products, services, habits and traditions upon which our affluent society has become so dependent (and of which the meat industry is but one purveyor). What will become of the D-quality meat? With any luck, decreasing demand will cause the resources currently involved in its production to be redirected toward the production of foods that exact a lower environmental and societal cost. Perhaps then we will be able to feed the world's hungry millions.

The peculiar combination of ignorance and arrogance which characterizes Ms. Pulley's editorial is becoming all too familiar to readers of the Viewpoints page. Since the editorial board seems not to realize how embarrassed it ought to be to publish such mindless chatter, I wish to go on record saying that I for one am embarrassed on your behalf.

DON'T HASSLE THE BILLS

To the editor:

OK, now it's my turn. I am a graduating senior, and I have always enjoyed reading articles in The University Daily written by students at Texas Tech who disagree with something someone else wrote. I've never felt the need to submit an article to argue with someone because someone else usually does, and says exactly what I am thinking. Until now.

I have lived in Plano for the past 11 years and really love it. I also really like the Dallas Cowboys, but my heart is still with my home team, the Buffalo Bills. I was furious when I read the article by Len Hayward crying out for AFC fans to unite and "do everything...to keep the Buffalo Bills from going to the Super Bowl for the fourth consecutive time." Len says that the Bills will embarrass the conference, well if the Bills are so embarrassing why can't any other AFC team beat them?

Alright, I'll admit, the Bills do screw up when it comes to the big game, but obviously they still want the title or they wouldn't strive as hard as they do during the regular season and throughout the playoffs, three years in a row.

Len also said that "offense wins games and defense wins championships."

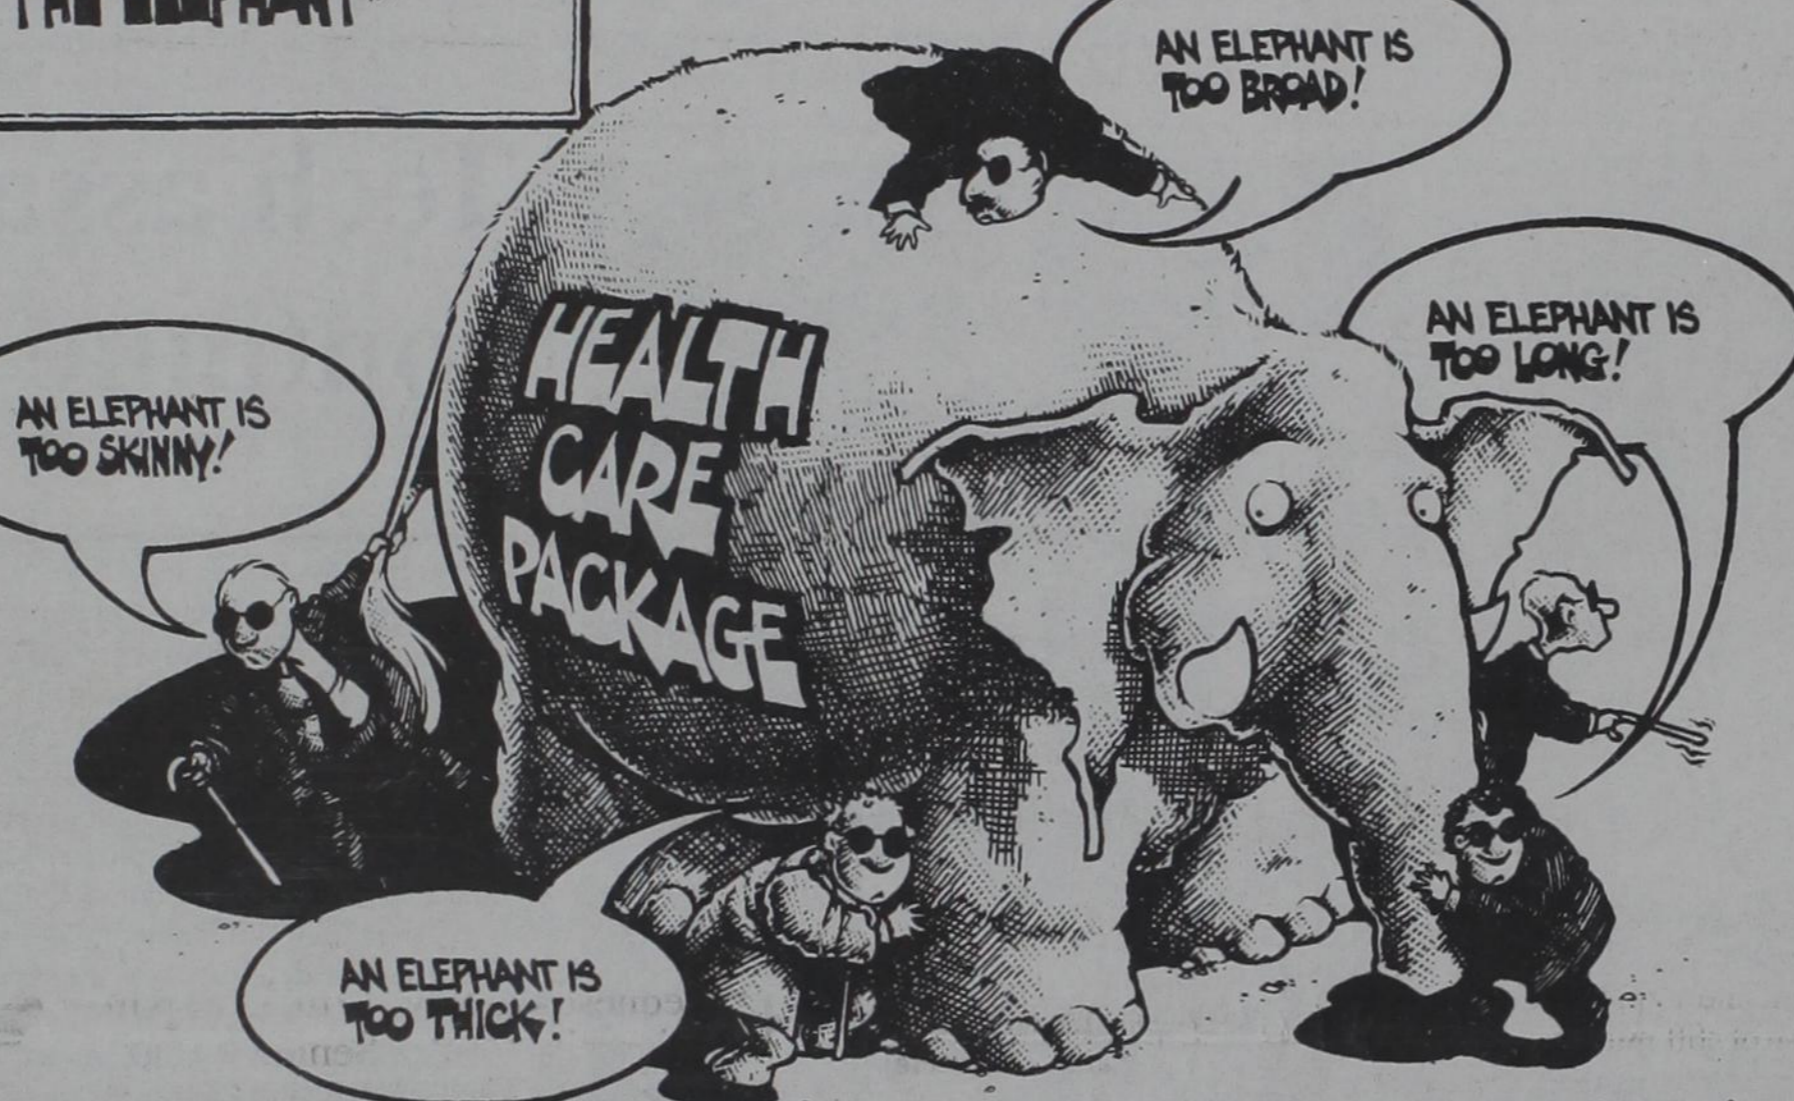

You name ONE quarterback that doesn't pray that his offensive line will hold back Bruce Smith and Cornelius Bennett on EVERY PLAY.

And what about Jeff Wright, Daryl Talley and Mr. Interception himself, Nate Odomes? If the Bills don't have some of the best defensive players in the league, then I don't know who does.

Well Len you're right. All you have to do to keep this "embarrassing" team out of the Super Bowl is to beat them, but isn't it funny that no one can seem to do that? ANY QUESTIONS?

Justice absent in potential alien deportation law

You are an immigrant from Ireland, five years in the United States. You and your wife are expecting to become citizens soon.

Then one day you get a notice from the government. It says a judge has found probable cause to believe you are an "alien terrorist" and must be deported. It is the first you have heard of the charge or the proceeding, whatever it was, before the judge.

The notice says you are entitled to a hearing before you are deported. But you discover, when you ask, that you cannot find out who accused you of being a "terrorist" or what the accuser said you have done.

Unknown to you, the accuser is an old girlfriend. She told the authorities that years ago, when you were 17, you were a member of an IRA bomb squad. She invented that story, but there is no way to show it is false because it is kept secret from you.

Could such a travesty of justice occur in this country? It could if some Republican members of Congress have their way. In their draft of a crime bill they have a section that would set up just such a secret process to deport people without ever telling them what they are supposed to have done or who made the charge.

The bill would set up a special court of seven judges. Whenever the attorney general wanted to deport someone as an "alien terrorist," she could go to one of the seven judges and say that the usual fair hearing would be a risk to national security because classified information would be disclosed.

The judge would consider the government documents in secret, without telling the alien. In that one-sided proceeding the judge would decide whether there was probable cause to believe that the alien could appeal a decision to deport him — but not the decision to allow secret evidence.

That process sounds like a totalitarian invention to give the appearance but none of the substance of justice. Once a judge has found reason to consider someone an alien terrorist without even hearing from him, the chance of upsetting that one-sided judgment would be near zero.

The limitation of secret proceedings to cases where classified information would be disclosed is really no limitation at all. Millions of harmless documents are routinely classified every year.

Concealing names of accusers and their evidence is a sure way to injustice. Americans learned that long ago, in the time of the Red scare, when government employees were often fired with no real chance to defend themselves.

There is a dramatic historic example in the immigration field of how secret proceedings may go wrong. It involved a German woman, Ellen Knauff, who was brought back by an American soldier after World War II as a war bride.

When Ms. Knauff reached the United States, she was excluded as a security risk without being told the reason. Her case went to the Supreme Court, which by a divided vote upheld the government's right to act against her in secret because entering aliens do not have the same rights as people inside the United States.

Justice Robert Jackson, a former attorney general, wrote a memorable dissent in the Knauff case beginning: "Security is like liberty in that many are the crimes committed in its name." The case caused such outrage that Ms. Knauff was finally given a hearing. It turned out the secret evidence came from a jilted former lover and was worthless. She was admitted.

The Bush administration proposed a similar bill two years ago for secret deportation proceedings. But Republican senators dropped their support of it when its unjust character aroused criticism.

Why revive such a dangerous idea now? The reason is obvious: growing public animosity toward immigrants and fear of terrorism after the bombing of the World Trade Center.

There have been periodic rages against aliens in this country, from the Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798 and the anti-Catholic Know Nothings in the 19th century to the Palmer raids of 1920.

They have always left Americans feeling ashamed of hysteria. On reflection, Republicans might think it wise not to try to ride the back of today's hysteria.

Bear sculpture typifies Hub City, West Texas spirit

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A new predator arrived on the plains of West Texas Saturday.

A bronze replica of a giant short-faced bear, an extinct creature from the Clovis Period (about 11,500 to 11,000 years ago), was unveiled during a ceremony Saturday at the Lubbock Lake Landmark State Historic Park.

"It typifies the lingering West Texas spirit," Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said. "I think we are a tough people, a determined people in West Texas. We have a great legacy to preserve."

The bronze sculpture stands six feet tall, is 10 feet long and weighs about 1,500 pounds.

Sculptor Lisa Perry of Fort Worth was chosen to create the bear from among a nationwide search for artists.

"This has been a project that presented a lot of challenges because there was no particular animal that I could look at," she said. "I couldn't just use my imagination."

Perry said the sculpture was constructed by determining the muscle structure from skeletal remains of the bear.

"You can tell a lot of what an animal looks like from its skeleton," she said.

"It was hard to judge what he was going to look like in the final process without building him from the inside out."

Perry said she conducted research and talked to many experts about the bear.

"It (the sculpture) had to please the scientific community for accuracy," she said. "However, it also had to be a piece of art."

Gary Edson, executive director of the Texas Tech University Museum, said, "This is an opportunity to see archeological research in action."

Tech President Robert Lawless said he believes the event is very significant.

"For almost 60 years, community volunteers have been restoring and caring for this location," he said.

Dwight Williford, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department director of master planning said, "We have been working with the city of Lubbock and Texas Tech since 1986 on this project (the park)."

"We are back today taking another step, and there are a few more to come."

The sculpture is the first in a series of sculptures to be created for the landmark.

Future plans for the park include the construction of a dormitory for visiting international archaeologists and sculptures of a bison, a great giant armadillo and a giant mammoth, Montford said.

West Texas Museum Association President Joe Horkey named Montford an Honorary Trustee of the West Texas Museum Foundation.

Horkey said few people have received the award during the past 60 years.

"I remember when we walked down through here and it was just a swamp," Montford said.

"We have done a good thing for Texas, the South Plains and our area."

Tech doctor advises athletes to take precautions during winter

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Cold weather athletes may need to take extra precautions in order to stay healthy while keeping in shape.

Dr. Robert Yost, an orthopedics professor and sports medicine director at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, said he believes winter athletes need to remember the importance of keeping their muscles warm when working out in cold weather.

"You need to move around to keep loose and limber," he said. "When resting on the sideline, it is important to keep walking."

For warm-up exercises, Yost said he advises individuals to keep doing regular warm-up activities such as stretching and flexibility exercises.

Individuals also need to keep extra clothing available to keep the muscles flexible when warming up and when starting activities in the cold.

"They need to keep the right clothing on hand to maintain heat," he said.

Yost said people sometimes forget it is important to keep fluids in the body during the winter months, as well as the summer months.

"We need to replace fluids in winter just as much as we do during the hot summer," he said.

Injuries during the winter months are not an added problem, unless the ground conditions are worse than necessary, Yost said.

However, exposed areas of the body can be affected if left uncovered in cold winter weather.

"Frostbite and freezing can occur," he said. "If you are warmed up, these types of injuries will not happen."

Yost advises using a heating device when competing in outdoor sports such as soccer and football.

Heating devices can be used to keep the muscles and the body warm and to prevent injuries because of stiff muscles.

Priest beaten to death in church rectory

DALLAS (AP) — Members of a small Dallas church spent Sunday trying to cope with the loss of their priest, who was beaten to death following a violent struggle at the church rectory.

The body of the Rev. Anthony Boake, 50, was discovered early Saturday by a cousin who lived with him in the one-story brick building.

Boake was the only priest at Saints Constantine and Helen Antiochian Orthodox Church, which sits surrounded by liquor stores and discount shops near a noisy north Dallas intersection.

He was apparently killed by blows to the head after a fierce struggle in the small building across the parking lot from the church, Dallas Police Lt. Ron Waldrop said.

Baptist minister leads charge against gay benefits

AUSTIN (AP) — A Baptist minister is leading a challenge to an Austin policy that provides benefits for gay partners of city employees.

The Rev. Charles Bullock organized Concerned Texans Inc. shortly after the City Council voted 5-2 in September to revise the city's leave and medical benefits plan to include gay partners.

Volunteers with Concerned Texans began last week collecting signatures to place an amendment on the May ballot that would allow voters to decide whether gays and lesbians should be included as a class eligible for employee benefits.

Bullock said the new city policy is fiscally irresponsible, condones illegal behavior and sends a negative message to youths.

Theater production meets high expectations

Student, faculty cast members make 'Amadeus' a success

MICHELLE ELIZARDO

The Texas Tech University Theatre's debut of "Amadeus" was all that I had expected it to be. I watched the play in awe. Of course, Ed Simone was marvelous as Salieri. His on-stage changes of age from an old decrepit man to a young one were memorable. The way he changed from scene to scene was incredible, and I, for one, believe he killed Amadeus at the end. He carried the cast through a demanding play. Jason Hillhouse's Amadeus reminded me of the movie's portrayal of Amadeus. Hillhouse is a talented actor who had his part down pat. His presence and range of emotions on stage — from a talented genius to a sick, disillusioned man — proved him worthy of the part. My favorite portrayal from an actor was the part of Joseph II, played by David LeMaster. He was very funny and brought much needed humor to the play. Director Richard Weaver's decision to include older actors to play the more mature roles was a casting decision that worked well. I was impressed with Dennis Cogan's cool presence on the stage; he made me believe he was stuck-up royalty. Cogan is a professor in the psychology department and LeMaster is an instructor in the civil engineering department. Shane Ferrell got stronger as the play progressed, though I would have liked her hair to be more the style of the rest of the women in the cast. The wardrobe crew did a marvelous job with the costume changes and the costumes were beautiful. The stage was set up in a way that made the play even better. Salieri's chair was an important part of the play and worked well. It would have been fine with me if the projection had only one slide. Though when it depicted the man Mozart talked about in his dream, it was used well. Everyone that I have spoken to about the play could not say enough about it. I recommend that everyone watch "Amadeus" — which runs at 8 p.m. Thursday-Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday — and see a cast full of talented actors.

Theater production meets high expectations

Student, faculty cast members make 'Amadeus' a success

MICHELLE ELIZARDO

The Texas Tech University Theatre's debut of "Amadeus" was all that I had expected it to be. I watched the play in awe. Of course, Ed Simone was marvelous as Salieri. His on-stage changes of age from an old decrepit man to a young one were memorable. The way he changed from scene to scene was incredible, and I, for one, believe he killed Amadeus at the end. He carried the cast through a demanding play. Jason Hillhouse's Amadeus reminded me of the movie's portrayal of Amadeus. Hillhouse is a talented actor who had his part down pat. His presence and range of emotions on stage — from a talented genius to a sick, disillusioned man — proved him worthy of the part.

My favorite portrayal from an actor was the part of Joseph II, played by David LeMaster. He was very funny and brought much needed humor to the play.

Director Richard Weaver's decision to include older actors to play the more mature roles was a casting decision that worked well.

I was impressed with Dennis Cogan's cool presence on the stage; he made me believe he was stuck-up royalty. Cogan is a professor in the psychology department and LeMaster is an instructor in the civil engineering department.

Shaney Ferrell got stronger as the play progressed, though I would have liked her hair to be more the style of the rest of the women in the cast.

The wardrobe crew did a marvelous job with the costume changes and the costumes were beautiful. The stage was set up in a way that made the play even better. Salieri's chair was an important part of the play and worked well.

It would have been fine with me if the projection had only one slide. Though when it depicted the man Mozart talked about in his dream, it was used well.

Everyone that I have spoken to about the play could not say enough about it. I recommend that everyone watch "Amadeus" — which runs at 8 p.m. Thursday-Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday — and see a cast full of talented actors.

Raiders score 36 unanswered points in 49-21 victory

Tech ups record to 3-2 in conference play

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

For Byron "Bam" Morris and Texas Tech, victory was never so sweet.

Morris rushed for a career-high 233 yards and three touchdowns to pace the Red Raiders to a 49-21 shellacking of Texas Christian in front of a crowd of 31,922 Saturday at Jones Stadium.

The victory elevated Tech's record to 4-5 and 3-2 in the South-west Conference, and helped to keep the Raiders' hopes alive for a bowl berth. TCU fell to 4-5 and 2-3 in SWC play.

"The offensive line did a great job," Morris said after he became the nation's second-leading rusher. "They gave me some big holes so I could run north and south. I was determined to win this game in the second half for us."

Morris ran for 104 yards in the first half, but scored all three touchdowns in the second half.

"This was one nice win," coach Spike Dykes said. "This was a team victory. The first half we didn't play very well, then the touchdown right before the first half just jump-started us."

The Raiders trailed 21-13 late in the second quarter, but TCU's Richard Woodley fumbled a Robert King punt with 39 seconds remaining in the first half.

This gave Tech a second chance and the ball.

Tech quarterback Robert Hall engineered a four-play, 49-yard drive, capped with a scrambling, across the body, 27-yard touchdown pass to Lloyd Hill with three ticks left on the clock.

Suddenly, the Raiders had new life.

"I guess you could say it was a big play," Dykes said. "He gave us a shot of adrenaline. Of course, the guy throwing the ball made a big play too."

Hall connected with fullback Bruce Hill on the ensuing two-point conversion to tie the score at 21-21.

It was to be but one of Lloyd Hill's grabs on this day, as he finished with nine catches for 91 yards. Hall completed 24 of 37 passes for 233 yards and two touchdowns.

While the offense scored 36 unanswered points, the defense held the Frogs to no points, and forced four fumbles. One of those fumbles was a third-quarter fumble forced by Zach Thomas and Tyrone Brooks on TCU quarterback Max Knake, setting up a mid-air recovery by Shawn Jackson.

The Frogs could not recover from the onslaught of the Tech defense, which showed absolutely no mercy in the second half.

The Tech defense only allowed 103 total yards in the second half, as opposed to 190 in the first half.

Another bright spot for the Raiders was the kicking game. Jon Davis booted two field goals, from 32 and 30 yards, respectively, and punter Robert King punted four times for a 63.7 yard average with one 74-yarder.

"King did a great job, and Davis did a great job kicking off," Dykes said. "The kicking is one part of the game that often goes unrecognized."

Tech linebacker Zach Thomas said the team has fully regained confidence in its ability to compete with anyone.

"We pulled together in the second half," Thomas said. "The first half was the worst game we've ever played. We were just out of sync in the first half."

TCU coach Pat Sullivan was at a loss to describe his team's second half demise.

"The second half was the most humiliating half of football I've ever been associated with," Sullivan said. "I question our team's effort, and that's my responsibility."

Texas Tech's 28 second-half points scored on the Frogs was the most this season in a half allowed by TCU.

"I really don't know why there was a change in the second half," Sullivan remarked.

"I don't have a psychology degree."

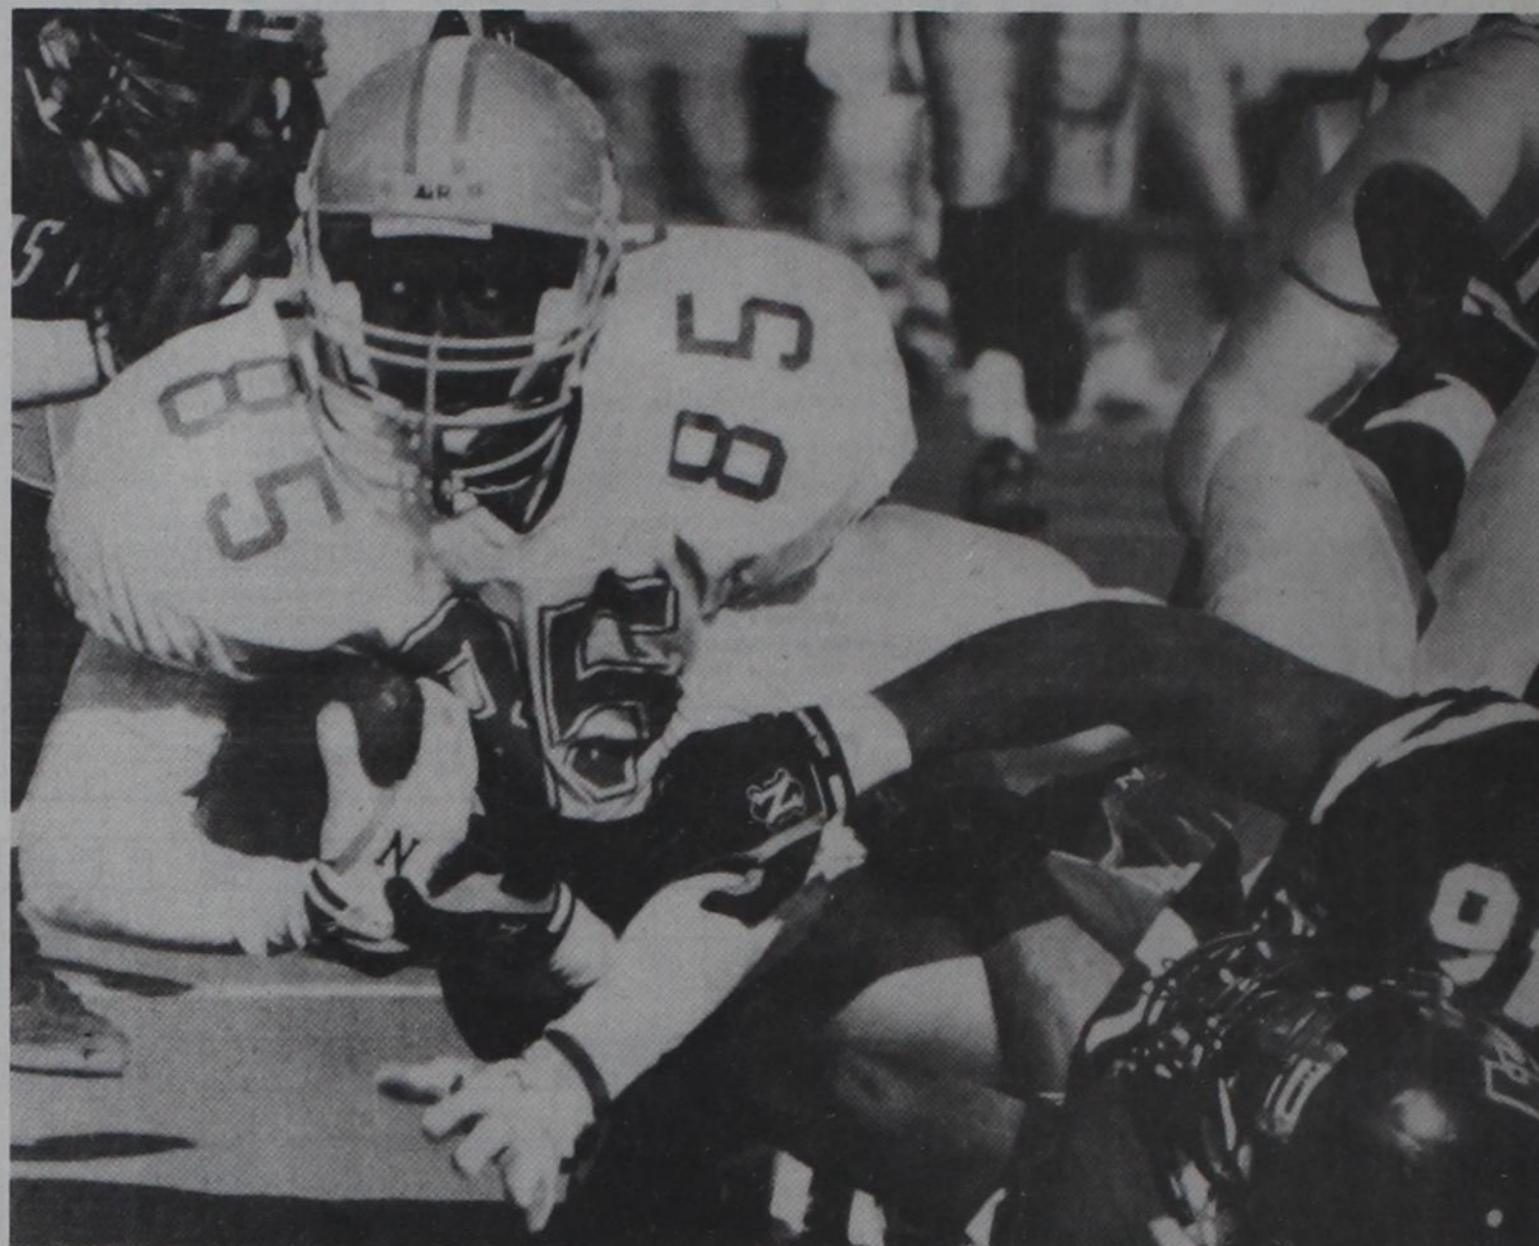

The Raiders now start to prepare for next week's contest against Southern Methodist.

"I said a few weeks ago that we had five steps to accomplish our goal," Dykes said. "Right now there's three down, and two to go."

Texas Christian tight end Brian Collins tries to get out of the hold of Texas Tech linebacker Shawn Banks in the Red Raiders' 49-21 victory over the Horned Frogs Saturday.

Aikman injured in 31-9 victory over Giants

IRVING (AP) — Troy Aikman got the Dallas Cowboys back into first place the hard way.

Aikman put on an impressive display of marksmanship Sunday that included 10 consecutive completions and two touchdown passes to Alvin Harper before leaving with a slight hamstring strain in a 31-9 victory over the New York Giants.

The defending Super Bowl champions earned their sixth consecutive victory after starting the season 0-2. The Giants dropped to 5-3 and fell a game behind the Cowboys in the NFC East.

Aikman went down while being chased by defensive end Keith Hamilton with 9:30 left in the third period and Dallas leading 17-6.

Aikman's left shoe stuck to the artificial turf and he collapsed with a grimace.

Dr. Robert Vandermeer, team physician, diagnosed the problem as a "strained left hamstring. It will be reevaluated tomorrow. We hope it's not too bad. We're treating it with ice."

Aikman returned to the sidelines in street clothes as Jason Garrett quarterbacked the team.

Smith scored on runs of 1 and 2 yards in the fourth period to end two 51-yard drives that put the game away. Smith rushed 24 times for 117 yards and left with the game well in hand late in the fourth period.

Aikman hit 11 of 12 passes for 161 yards. He took advantage of single coverage on Harper to throw 28- and 50-yard touchdown passes in the first half, which ended with Dallas ahead 17-6.
