Rushdie defended by Arabs, Muslims

PARIS (AP) — One hundred prominent Arab and Muslim intellectuals are coming to the defense of Salman Rushdie, breaking their silence on his death sentence for allegedly blaspheming Islam.

To the British novelist's delight, they take their stand in a new book, "Pour Rushdie" (For Rushdie). It is the most significant public outcry by non-Western intellectuals since Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini condemned Rushdie to death in 1989. His book offers essays by writers and scholars from 13 Arab and Muslim countries, as well as from the United States and Britain.

"The purpose of this book is to show that oppression, religious fanaticism and apathy have not triumphed over our thirst for freedom, our expression of compassion and our intellectual revolt against terror," the editors wrote in the book published in Paris by Editions La Decouverte.

SFA administration offices bugged

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Electronic listening devices have been found in administrative offices at Stephen F. Austin State University, triggering an FBI investigation.

University officials discovered the devices last week on the third floor of the school's administrative building, SFA spokesman Ken Kennemer said.

"The president and all four vice presidents have their offices there," Kennemer said. "I don't know which offices they were found in, but I know they found more than one."

Norm Middleton of the FBI's Tyler office told The Daily Sentinel that the devices were found in the offices of SFA president Dan Angel and three vice presidents.

"We intend to identify and punish the person or persons who perpetrated this federal crime," Angel said in a written statement.

Angel said he had no idea who would have planted the devices.

Floods could lead to wetlands in Midwest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of acres of land inundated during the summer floods would be converted to wetlands in eight states under a $15 million program outlined Wednesday by the government.

The Emergency Wetlands Reserve Program was part of the disaster bill passed this year by Congress, but rules were just released on how people can sell their land to the government.

"We feel we're going to barely scratch the surface of the need that's out there," said Don Butz, who manages the program for the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service. "We think there will be five or six acres offered for every one acre we can accept."

Holidays with kids difficult for students

by MEGAN CLARK
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Being in a room full of small children during the Christmas holidays can be a difficult experience for college students who usually surround themselves with their peers.

"Methods of communication are very important when relating to small children," said Jackie Driskill, child life coordinator in Texas Tech's Human Sciences Child Development Center.

"You have to get down on their level, but avoid overwhelming them."

Driskill said the SOUL method, which consists of silence, observation, understanding and listening skills, is a key factor in creating a relationship with small children.

SOUL is used during interaction in the Child Development Center and is used to understand what the child is doing and to understand the necessary reactions through non-verbal communication.

"Non-verbal children need eye contact as a means of communication," Driskill said. "While the children play, you should smile, try to imitate their actions and use a lot of verbal cues. However, the older children get, the less imitation is appropriate."

Another method for communicating with young children is an expansion of the SOUL method and consists of talking and other verbal concepts.

"Speaking to the children and repeating to them what they're doing is a meaningful way to develop vocabulary and language skills," she said. "Open-ended questions are also a good way for children to respond to you."

Driskill said children who hear color, number and action concepts learn them quickly through the SOUL and expansion communication strategies.

Discussing a child's play and artwork with them and not correcting the way they do it also is a positive way to create communication with young children.

"Talking to children about what they've done is a good way to help them respond," she said.

Research concerning mental development of children shows that the SOUL and expansions methods are a positive mode of teaching, Driskill said.

"These communication strategies develop the whole child," she said. "They promote an affirming relationship between the adult and child and provide overall development."

Commissioner switches party

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock County Commissioner James Kitten said Thursday he is running for re-election in Precinct 2 as a member of the Republican Party.

Kitten conducted a press conference in Slaton to announce his party affiliation change and his candidacy for county commissioner.

The change from the Democratic Party to the Republican Party is a change he has considered for a long time, Kitten said.

He also said he could better represent the people of the county as a member of the Republican Party.

"I'm basically a conservative person, and I align much more closely with the Republican Party," he said. "I've always been conservative."

The change in party affiliation should not affect his position as a county commissioner, Kitten said.

Helping Lubbock County get a new computer system and lowering the county tax rate by a half-cent this past year are two changes Kitten said he has made as a county commissioner.

"The county tax rate has not increased in the three years I've been there," Kitten said. "I have worked hard the last three years."

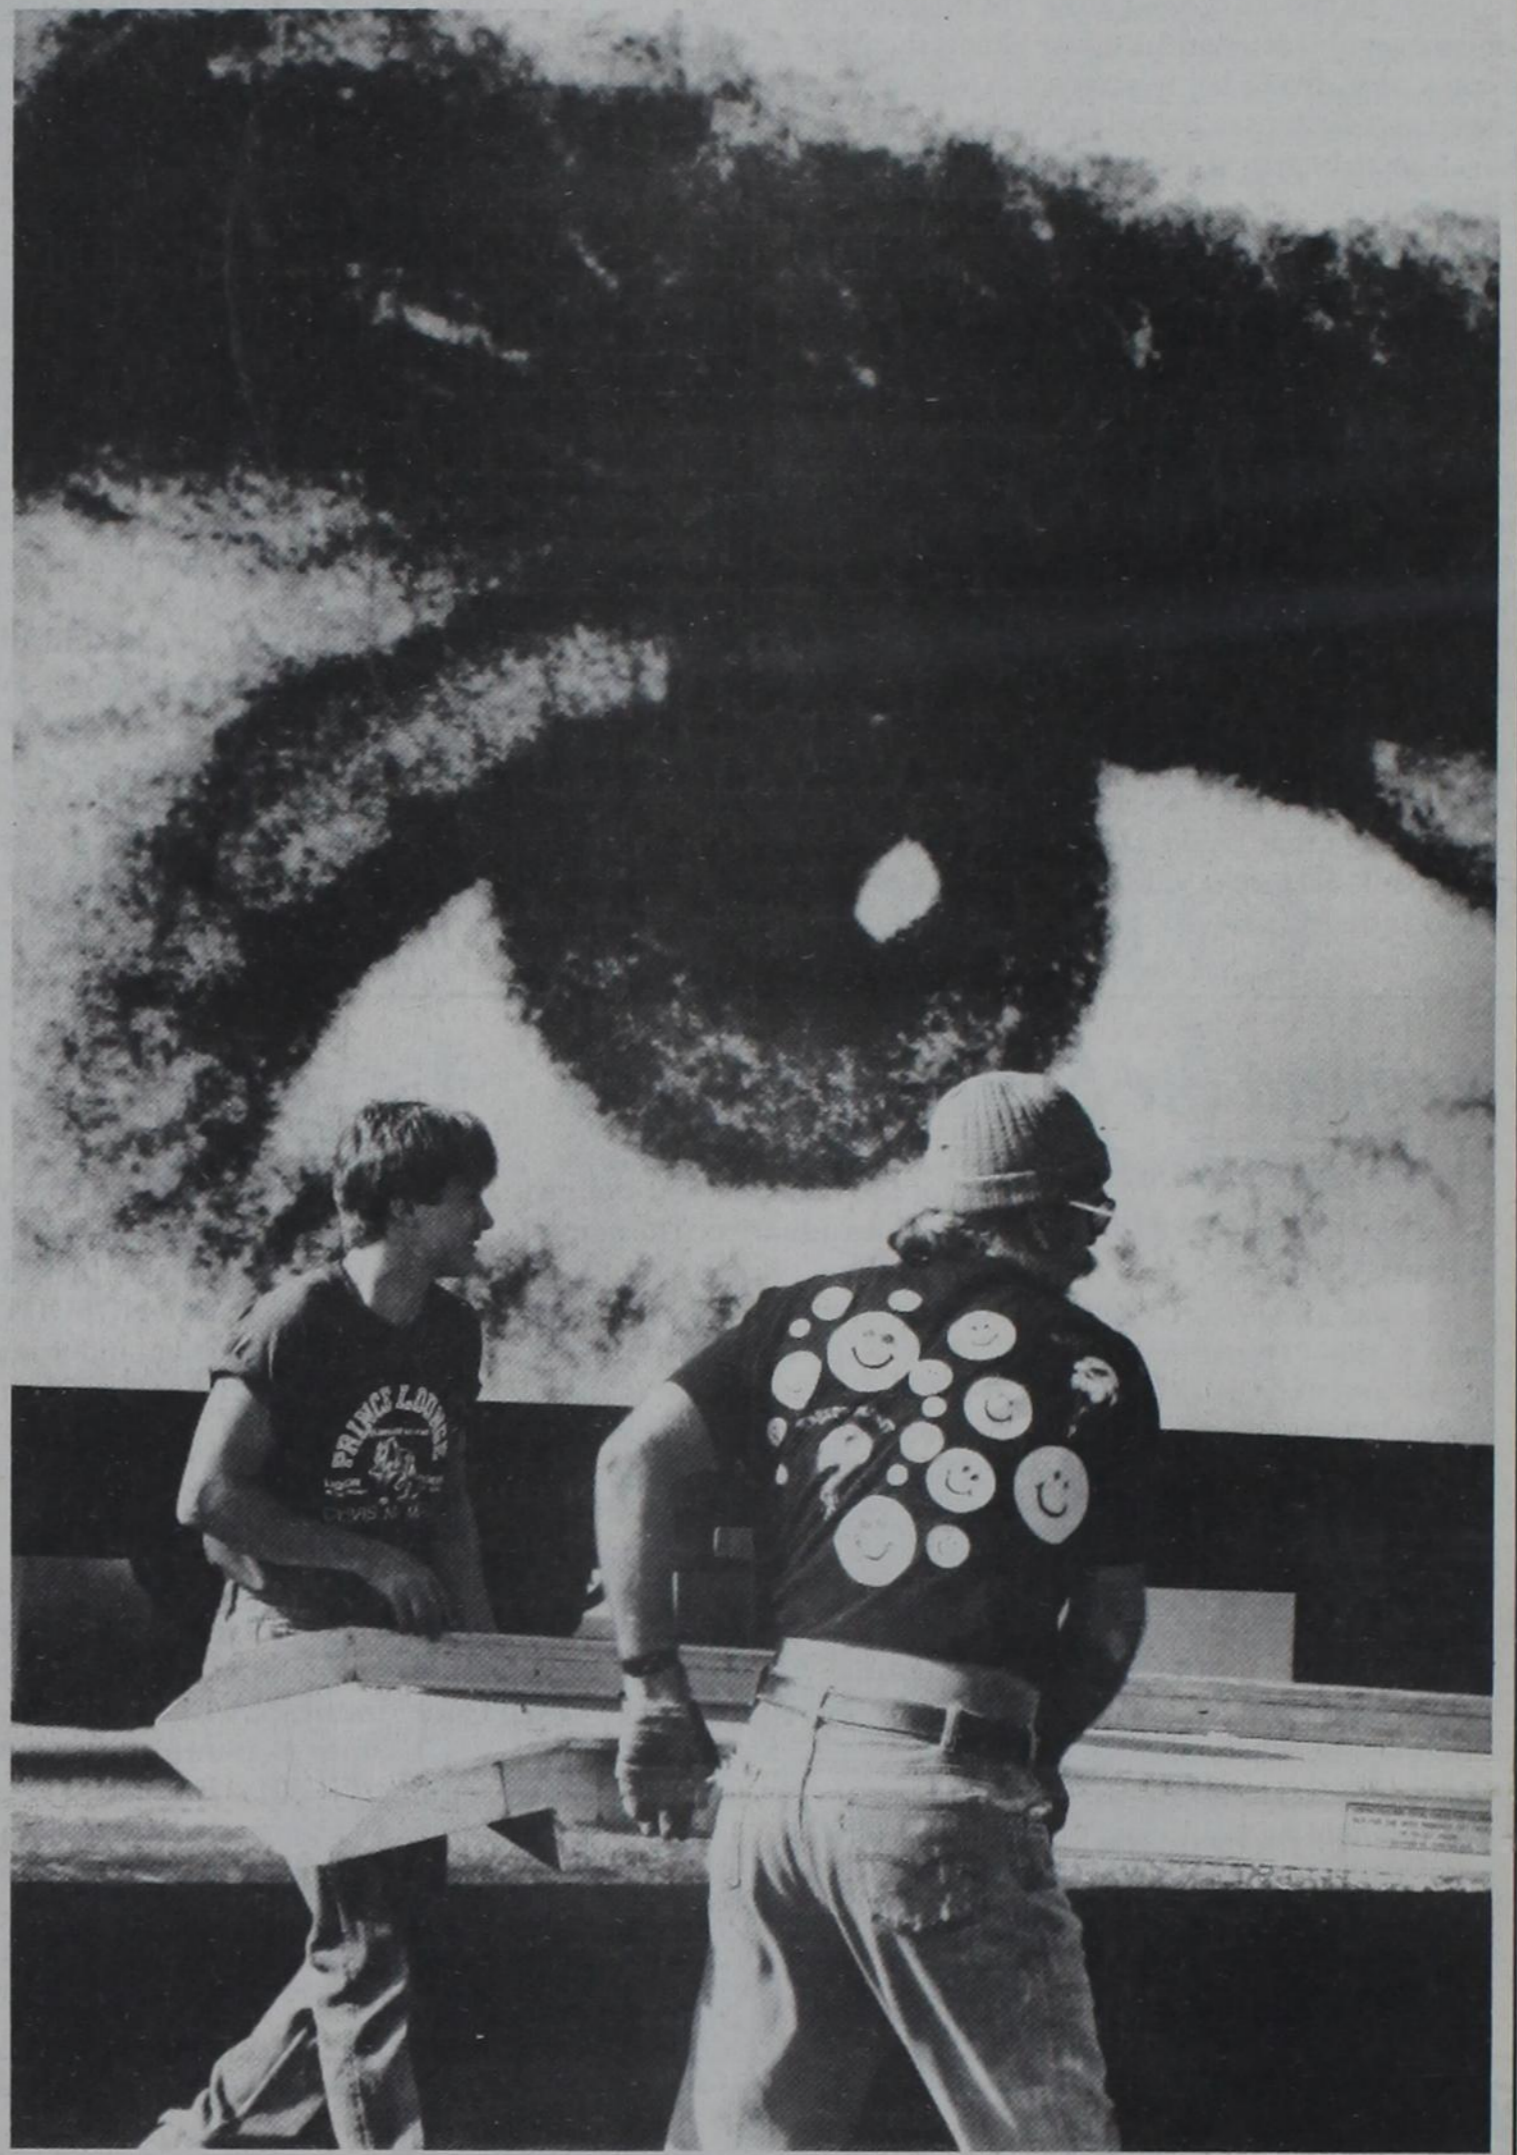

Watching the budget, seeing the county's new computer system installed and improving his precinct are some of his future goals as a county commissioner, he said.

Slaton, Ransom Canyon, Acuff and parts of south Lubbock make up Kitten's precinct.

"I think he brings a philosophy that's consistent with Republican voters," said Lubbock County Republican Chairman L. Scott MannMann.

The Republican Party offers Kitten views consistent with his own and consistent with the majority of Lubbock County residents, Mann said.

Four students resign from senate positions

THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Four Texas Tech student senators submitted resignation letters to the Student Senate Thursday, leaving vacant seats in the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources.

So far this semester, 10 Student Senate seats have become vacant because of eight senators resigning and two senators being impeached.

David Fay stated in his resignation letter that because he will graduate this month, "I must regretfully resign from the Texas Tech Student Association Student Senate. I feel that my responsibilities as a Freshman Council sponsor and senator for the College of Arts and Sciences can be filled by a qualified individual."

Engineer improves game with better racket

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

What may seem like a dream come true for most tennis fans is just another day at work for Texas Tech professor of mechanical engineering Jahan Rasty.

As part of ongoing research with Prince tennis manufacturing company, Rasty is required to test new tennis rackets both on and off the court.

"I was looking at an article in Tennis magazine and I ran across an ad that was talking about how Prince manufacturing is involved in research and development," Rasty said. "Tennis is my number one hobby and research and development is my area of specialty, so I called the manager."

Rasty said he talked to the research and development department and gave them several ideas about how he could help them.

"That's how we got started," he said. "We've been working with them for the past four years."

Rasty said the objective of the research is to develop a more advanced tennis racket.

"We are trying to develop tennis rackets that are more durable, more powerful and smarter," he said. "By smarter, I mean the racket adjusts itself to affect the shot."

Rasty said smart rackets stiffen or soften depending on the amount of force the player applies to them.

"We are also trying to develop rackets that are more streamlined," he said. "They would produce less drag, or friction force, when swung through the air."

The rackets are placed in a wind tunnel with a large fan at the end that blows air at 55 miles an hour, Rasty said.

"The racket remains stationary while the air moves through the tunnel," he said. "This simulates the movement of the racket swinging through the air."

Using this technique, Rasty said researchers measure the friction the racket experiences with the air.

Rasty said researchers also study different stringing patterns and their relationships with ball and racket interaction.

"We do this through high speed photography," he said. "We are trying to develop a racket that compensates for lack of player skill."

The perfect player would hit the ball right at the center of the racket 100 percent of the time, Rasty said. However, a less than perfect player would be hitting a lot of balls off center, near the frame.

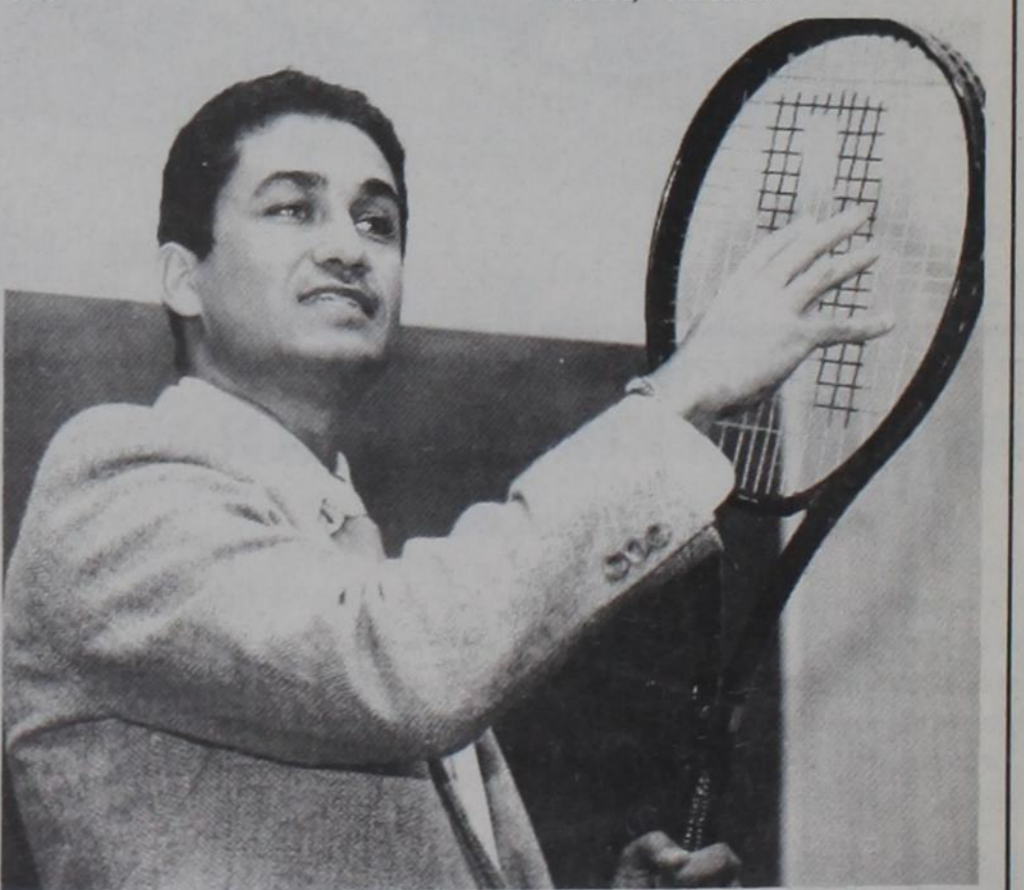

"Through innovative string pattern design we are trying to develop rackets that would compensate for shots that are hit off center," he said.

Rasty said Prince sends the researchers tennis rackets they are considering producing.

"We have probably worked with about 30 or 40 different rackets," he said. "However, a lot of those rackets don't necessarily make it to the markets."

Rasty said he finds the research interesting because he is able to work on something that also satisfies him in a non-technical manner.

"When you get paid to work on something that you would have liked to work on anyway — that's the best of both worlds," he said.

Incomplete clichés to bash the rich

RUSSELL BAKER

An angry letter writer who says he is rich accuses me of "rich-bashing" in a recent column. Not content with that, he insinuates that I am probably rich myself.

I deny this last charge and do so vehemently and categorically, just in case any deadbeat relatives, alumni associations or encyclopedia salesman happen to be reading this newspaper.

If I were rich, would I be wearing an off-the-rack suit that fits as if it had been tailored for Dr. Frankenstein's deformed assistant Igor?

On the other hand I confess gladly to being a basher of the rich. A good bashing keeps the rich from becoming insufferable. Not only that, giving them a sturdy bashing makes you feel tip-top if you don't happen to be rich yourself.

I don't know about you, but after I've engaged in a brisk bout of rich-bashing it comforts me no end to realize that, thanks to my fragile bank balance, I will never have to suffer that kind of abuse.

Of course, the only bashing I can dish out is verbal, and as Averell Harriman said many a time, "Sticks and stones et cetera, but words et cetera."

Yes, those were Harriman's precise words. He had had an excellent education and loved to use his Latin whenever opportunity arose. Moreover, he hated to utter clichés in their entirety. Since everybody knew them already, speaking them at full length used up valuable time that could be better used for expanding his fortune.

Or as he once told me, "A stitch in time et cetera."

Harriman was probably the richest man I ever went to the movies with. In those days Jack Valenti, the head of the movie lobby, used to invite me to screenings and Harriman was usually there since he loved movies, especially when he could get in free.

Like all truly rich people, he was terrified that somebody might discover he was rich enough to buy a movie ticket. Valenti later told me that I'd become a regular on the guest list after Harriman said he'd like to know what it was like to go to the movies with the unwashed masses.

At intermissions, whenever he was not on the phone telling the president how to deal with the Soviets or the Vietnamese, Harriman would ask me to bash him a little.

I hated to do it because not only was he a genuinely patriotic and hard-working rich man, but also because both of us always liked the same movies. Bashing Harriman was nothing like the fun you got out of bashing, say, Michael Milken when the yuppie rich were hogging all the money in the 1980s.

But Harriman let me know he would feel let down if I didn't, saying, "A friend in need et cetera."

One night the film broke and while the rest of us were stamping our feet and whistling to wake up the projectionist, I noticed that Harriman was not participating in the uproar. Later he told me that such riotous scenes left him petrified with terror.

They reminded him, he said, of Ronald Coleman's great movie, "A Tale of Two Cities," in which the entire rich population of 18th-century France was thrown into tumbrils, hauled through the streets and bashed with guillotine blades while the crowd roared with delight. Harriman was authentically rich. The angry letter writer who taxes me for journalistic "rich-bashing" is obviously not truly rich and, indeed, may not be rich at all, as he claims to be, but just another fellow with a top-of-the-line German car.

The truly rich can never be offended by a stiff verbal bashing. To the contrary, they are delighted to submit to it, for they know that a great deal of malice can be worked off in steamy words.

Or as Harriman, in an uncharacteristically long-winded observation, explained when I asked why he would never allow me to let up in applying the verbal bash to the rich, and especially against him.

"Once malcontents have emitted the worst of their bile in schmooze, they will be too tired to do a lot of ax swinging."

Could he state the principle in plainer English? He could and did. "With your help," he said, "I will never have to say, 'It is a far, far better et cetera.'"

TICKETED OFF

To the editor:

This letter goes out to all of you Tech students out there who have ever been cited for a parking violation (for the ten of you who haven't, you may stop reading now). I was ticketed and towed on Aug. 30, the first day of classes. I promptly sent my appeal to the committee the next day, and that is where my problems began. After two months and two weeks, I finally received a response. Lord only knows why it took so long. During that period, I played five rounds of phone tag with the appeals office (who were rude I might add), but no one could seem to tell me the status of my appeal. Among the best I heard were: "the head of the committee isn't here, the head of the committee is on vacation, oh, we're working on that one right now, and my personal favorite, 'we're just a little behind.'" Well, no kidding! So I decided the only thing I could do was be patient. My patience paid off on Nov. 12 when I received a letter from the appeals committee stating that my appeal was upheld. That was great news to me since I already knew I had been unjustly ticketed and towed. Now, the finale. With this long overdue response was no refund check. There was also no mention of how I was going to be reimbursed, if at all. So, I played two more rounds of phone tag and was told I'd be called right back with an answer. Well, I'm still waiting, and it looks like I'm never going to get a response. What should have taken maybe two weeks has taken the entire semester (and it's looking like more. It's a good thing I'll be back this Spring). The issue here isn't money, but the lack of concern and consideration I have received. I'm wondering, has anyone else who's successfully appealed a ticket actually gotten money back? And if so, why haven't I? I certainly have waited long enough. In closing, I'd like to say to all those directly associated with the appeals process, "thanks for nothing."

One more question: Since it was agreed I was wrongfully ticketed, I'm assuming it's agreed I was also wrongfully towed. So why am I only entitled to a refund for the ticket but not the tow?

Should the athletic director position be open in the near future, we don't need another charade of a search. All we need is for Dr. Lawless to take the stroll across the circle and offer the position to Sweazy. That's what should have happened last summer, and that's what should happen now, if the opportunity arises. I don't want to have to say "I told you so" again.

omission from that list; Bob Sweazy, the overwhelming favorite of faithful Tech alumni and supporters. The committee, headed by Sam Curl, had blatantly refused to nominate Sweazy, one of the most obviously qualified candidates in the country, evidently because of his ties to Texas Tech.

Then, on Sunday, Aug. 15, the (Lubbock) Avalanche-Journal published a letter to the editor which suggested in essence, that Dr. Lawless should factor in Sweazy's proven loyalty to the university and select him for the position.

I wrote that letter, and it gives me great pleasure to once again say, Dr. Lawless, I told you so.

I've been associated with this university long enough, considerably longer than Dr. Lawless I might add, to be able to recite a mile long list of people who have used this school as nothing more than a stepping stone to bigger and better things, and frankly, I'm sick and tired of it. But what really gets me hot under the collar is the discriminatory attitude continually displayed by administrative personnel toward individuals with ties to Texas Tech.

Let me make it personally clear that Bob Bockrath is not the subject of this indictment. He was recruited for the position by Dr. Lawless, and only accepted the offer after making it known to Dr. Lawless that he would be interested in the Arizona position, should it come available. He was up front about his intentions, and for that, he certainly deserves credit.

What this indictment is about is the deplorable manner in which the search and resulting offer were handled last summer. If the offer had been extended to the right person (Dr. Sweazy) in the first place, we wouldn't have this egg-in-the-face problem now. Indeed, I'll venture to say that, if Bob Sweazy was our athletic director and was offered a juicy position with another university of the NCAA, I bet he wouldn't hesitate a moment to politely decline.

Why? Loyalty. Loyalty to Texas Tech. That's something that is rather difficult to come by. Always has been, and always will be. But that's why I like Spike, and Marsha and Bob Sweazy.

Around the State...

The Houston Chronicle on death of blues great Albert Collins:

He was known as "The Ice-man," the "Houston Razorblade" and "Master of the Telecaster," but mostly he was known as one of the world's foremost blues guitarists, one to be studied, emulated and praised. He was Albert Collins. Collins, 61, died on Wednesday (Nov. 24) after a three-month bout with cancer.

He was born in Leona, Texas, but reared in Houston's Third Ward where he sharpened his razorblade style of playing in area nightclubs. His was not music for the weak of heart or the meek of spirit. Collins was part of the tradition that defined Texas blues guitarists. The names, like Collins', are memorable: Lightnin' Hopkins, T-Bone Walker, Clarence (Gatemouth) Brown, Freddie King, Johnny (Guitar) Watson and Johnny Copeland.

Playing the guitar with his fingers instead of a pick, Collins mixed a gumbo of music genres to create his own unique sound. He played with the proficiency of a skilled surgeon. It mattered little if his operating room was a rowdy, smoke-filled nightclub in the backwoods of Texas, or the stately Carnegie Hall. ...

One music critic said of Collins: "The tone Collins coaxed from his ever-present Fender Telecaster was a straight-razor up the spine, a cold chill, a sharp talking-to from an angry woman and a howl of torture. Other bluesmen played faster or louder, but NOBODY played funkier, nastier, and with more of a jaggedly brutal tone than Collins." ...

El Paso Times on seeking U.S. citizenship:

More than 10 million legal residents have been living in this country for years without becoming U.S. citizens. That has helped inflame anti-immigrant feelings now so rampant in this country.

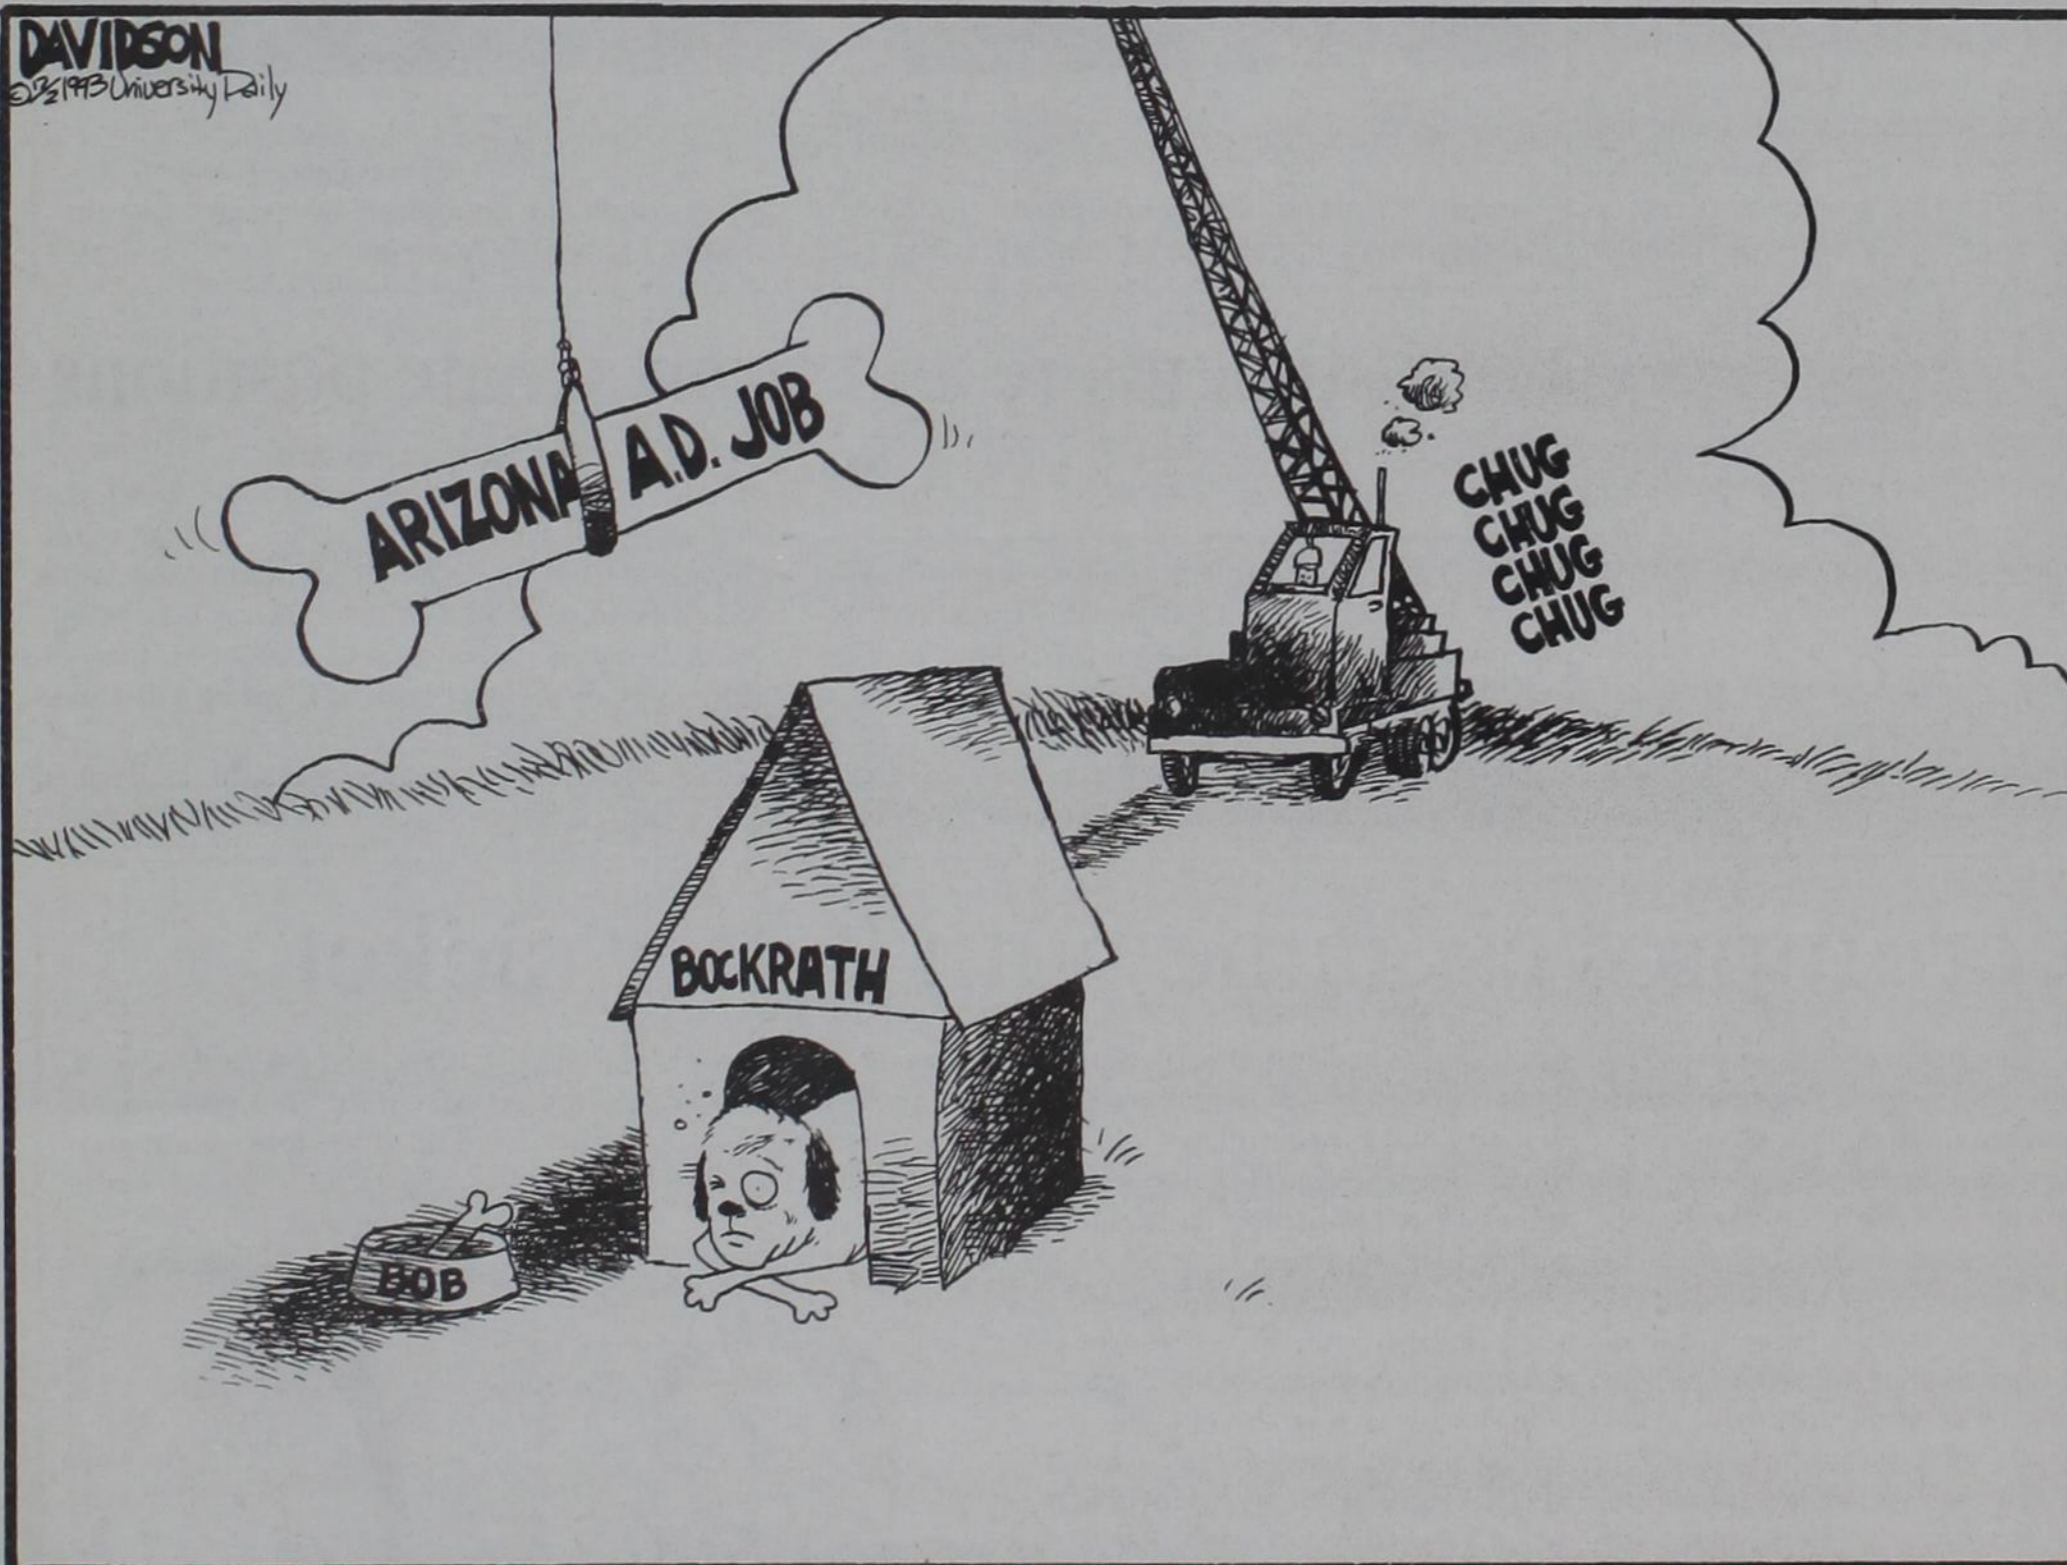

The INS has started a campaign to get many of these immigrants to apply for U.S. citizenship. Becoming a citizen would be the best decision these immigrants can make. ... As citizens, immigrants will be able to get better jobs, have a voice in government and gain a new sense of belonging. ...

But it is not easy becoming an American citizen for many of them. They may not know the language and fear not being wanted.

Becoming an American also means renouncing the citizenship of their native land. Many immigrants may be afraid of doing that without first being assured of their acceptance in this country.

The new campaign by INS will go a long way toward giving immigrants that assurance. ...

Other cities vying for Apple plant

AUSTIN (AP) — As Apple Computer Inc. sought another chance to get tax breaks from Williamson County, other areas Thursday were trying to woo the computer giant.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Jerry Mehevec, who voted with the majority to reject Apple's request for tax abatements, met with Apple officials to discuss a possible resubmission of the tax abatement plan.

On Tuesday, the commissioners voted 3-2 against $750,000 in tax breaks because of Apple's policy of providing health benefits to unmarried partners of their employees, whether heterosexual or homosexual.

The company wanted the tax abatements to build an $80 million, 700-employee service center in southern Williamson County.

The site is just north of Austin, which is in Travis County. Now Apple's plans have been put on hold. The company has stated it probably won't locate in Williamson County without the tax abatements.

Mehevec voted against the tax breaks saying he was opposed to same-sex relationships.

But on Wednesday Mehevec told the Taylor Daily Press that he wanted to see details of the resolution for the tax abatement plan.

"We were asked to agree to something we had not seen," he told the newspaper.

The other two commissioners opposing the tax abatements, Greg Boatright and David Hays, maintained their opposition. Speaking on a Christian radio station, Boatright said, "The person who takes a stand against homosexuals is looked upon as unenlightened. That is not the case."

Meanwhile, Apple officials said they have received numerous telephone calls from people supporting their policy, and from officials making sales pitches for the company to build in their areas.

Meanwhile, the Texas Department of Commerce reassured companies they were welcome in the state despite Williamson County's action.

Political and business leaders feared the vote could alarm expansion-minded companies because it may be construed as government meddling in a business's internal affairs.

NASA tries to save face with Endeavour flight

SPACECENTER, Houston (AP) — A repair team of astronauts chased the Hubble Space Telescope through trackless space Thursday to restore it to health and bind NASA's wounds at the same time.

The space agency says that never before has a shuttle crew been as experienced and trained as the six men and one woman who rode the Endeavour into orbit before dawn Thursday.

Seldom, too, has NASA's reputation been so tied to a flight.

Endeavour's 11-day mission is the most ambitious since shuttles began flying in 1981. It seeks no less than to fit the Hubble's instrument with corrective lenses, replace the wide field planetary camera, and to substitute a new design of solar arrays for the old ones that shook the telescope 28 times each day.

"This is not a trip to grandma's house to fix the faucet," said mission scientist Ed Weiler.

For NASA, a successful mission will be an upbeat finale to a year that featured disclosures of massive cost overruns, close calls on congressional space station votes, a $1.4 billion probe going to Jupiter with a jammed antenna, and a $1 billion probe that disappeared near Mars without a trace.

And only hours before liftoff the director of the Johnson Space Center confirmed that the FBI is investigating allegations of fraud at NASA's hub for manned space flight.

The Hubble repair was the most anticipated mission since the first flight of a shuttle after the 1986 Challenger disaster. The Endeavour is the newest ship in the fleet and the one able to stay aloft the longest.

The $1.6 billion Hubble was launched with great fanfare in April 1990 as the first of the nation's great space observatories — the first designed to overcome the blurring of images caused by the atmosphere and the first to look backward in time and distance to the very birth of the universe.

But the telescope quickly became a butt of jokes when it was discovered that its 94-inch primary mirror was ground too flat at the edges.

If the dime-to-quarter size corrective lenses work, the telescope should have almost all its planned capabilities.

Windy weather foiled the first launch attempt on Wednesday but Thursday's countdown was flawless. The Endeavour lighted up the Florida skies for hundreds of miles at 4:27 a.m. EST.

A few minutes later, Commander Richard Covey marveled at the sunrise. "It's a beautiful way to get to orbit and a beautiful way to start the mission," he said.

At that point, the distance between hunter and quarry was 6,800 miles. It was narrowed somewhat later with a one-minute firing of the shuttle's two main engines, the first of a series of maneuvers until the two spacecraft meet on Saturday, 360 miles above Earth.

Beginning early Sunday, pairs of astronauts will leave the relative safety of the shuttle cabin daily for five- to six-hour trips into the harsh environment of open space.

"I am sorry that I must resign, but the work-a-day world is calling me," he stated in his resignation letter.

also submitted a resignation letter. "I feel in my heart and in my mind that I have not lived up to my responsibility and duties of being a senator," Sartwelle stated in her letter.

She said her membership on Tech's Meats Judging Team caused a conflict with the Student Senate meetings.

"I took part in something I strongly believe in and have no regrets regarding any of my decisions," she said.

Paul Resch, a senator in the College of Arts and Sciences, said he resigned because he recently accepted a spring internship at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

Student Senate President Jay House said the seats will be filled by candidates from last spring's election.

Kevorkian judge refuses to step down from case

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — The judge who jailed suicide Dr. Jack Kevorkian rejected a request Wednesday to step down from the case because his first wife committed suicide.

"What happened 20 years ago has no bearing in this case," District Judge Daniel Sawicki said after Kevorkian's attorney, Michael Schwartz, argued that the judge might have a bias against Kevorkian stemming from his wife's death.

"I have dealt with my problems in a very adequate fashion. Whatever my first wife did, she did because she had problems," said Sawicki, whose ruling later was upheld by District Chief Judge Terrence Brennan.

Kevorkian, who has been present at 20 deaths since 1990, was jailed Tuesday when he didn't post a $50,000 cash bond.

The 65-year-old retired pathologist is charged with violating Michigan's law banning assisted suicide in the Oct. 22 death of Merian Frederick at his Royal Oak apartment in Oakland County.

Kevorkian refused food during his second day in a private cell in Oakland County Jail. He drank orange and apple juice, and took vitamins.

He was jailed after refusing to pay a higher bond set by a judge who determined he was violating conditions of his release. Kevorkian was then bailed out by a lawyer who thought the doctor was getting too much publicity.

Kevorkian has repeatedly threatened to starve himself if jailed because he believes the assisted suicide law he's accused of violating is unconstitutional.

Americans are spending more because of improved incomes, job market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just in time for holiday shopping, Americans' incomes are increasing in response to a gradually improving job market.

Consumers spent liberally in October, especially for big-ticket items such as automobiles and appliances.

New homes also sold briskly, although more slowly than the month before when sales soared to a four-year high.

"People are certainly willing to spend whatever increase in pay they get and more," said economist Sandra Shaber of The WEFA Group of Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "It's starting to feel like a real recovery."

Personal income rose 0.6 percent, the third increase in a row, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $5.47 trillion, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

Consumer spending, meanwhile, advanced for the seventh consecutive month, rising 0.8 percent to a $4.47 trillion annual rate.

In a separate report, the department said new home sales fell 6.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 679,000.

But sales remained well above last year's pace and the decline followed a 14.9 percent surge in September.

And the Labor Department said the number of Americans applying for unemployment benefits unexpectedly dived by 17,000 last week, to 321,000, the lowest level in two months.

Consumer spending — which depends on job and income growth — accounts for roughly two-thirds of the economy. The big October advance supports analysts' predictions of a fourth-quarter economic growth rate of more than 4 percent.

That would more than double the average growth of 1.8 percent during the first nine months of the year.

However, economists warned that consumers are borrowing and dipping into savings for a portion of their spending power and probably will need to retrench somewhat after the holidays.

"Consumers are in better spirits and that will keep the spending good through the important holiday season. But afterward I think there will be a bit of a breather," said economist Stuart G. Hoffman of PNC Bank Corp. in Pittsburgh. "The economy won't go into neutral but it will throttle back a bit."

Nevertheless, Thursday's positive economic news flustered financial markets.

It supported the growing belief that the Federal Reserve will nudge short-term interest rates higher early next year to quell any chance of inflation reigniting.

Mental illness costs billions in lost work hours

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mental depression costs $43.7 billion a year in treatment and lost productivity, a toll slightly larger than heart disease and one borne mostly by corporate America, researchers said Thursday.

The study proves mental health insurance is not "a luxury, a frill, an unnecessary expense," Tipper Gore told the National Mental Health Association, which reviewed the study Thursday.

"It makes good business sense to invest in an employee's mental health," said Gore, the vice president's wife who advises President Clinton on the subject.

The study, by the Massachusetts

Tipper Gore defends investing in mental health

sets Institute of Technology and The Analysis Group, a consulting firm, found clinical depression generates $12.4 billion in medical bills a year. Depression-induced suicides cost $7.5 billion in lost earnings.

But the biggest bill — $23.8 billion — came from absenteeism and lost productivity, the study said. Workers lost 88 million working days in 1990 because of depression, mostly among employees ages 30 to 44, it said.

The toll is slightly more than heart disease, which costs $43 billion a year.

But the study underestimates the cost because it didn't count depression that aggravates alcohol or drug abuse or other illnesses, said Dr. Frederick Goodwin, director of the National Institute on Mental Health.

"A fourth of all people who have a heart attack follow it with depression, and those who do are three times as likely to be dead in six months," Goodwin said.

About 15 million Americans suffer clinical depression at some point in their lives.

The potentially disabling illness causes fatigue, loss of memory and concentration, weight loss and, in severe cases, suicide.

Medication and psychotherapy can cure 80 percent of depression, yet fewer than a third of depressed people seek help.

Clinton's health reform package includes mental health benefits, emphasizing outpatient treatment.

But the plan generated furious debate, and the National Association of Manufacturers asked the White House not to include mental health benefits in the initial package because it was too expensive.

Gore criticized the association, saying, "Maybe they think it's fine to operate without the brain, but I disagree."

New commander appointed to Tech's Air Force ROTC

Peace chosen based on service, academics

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech Air Force Cadet Corps of Detachment 820 presented a "Pass in Review" parade Thursday for the newly appointed cadet commander, James Peace.

Cadet Raymond Simmons released his command to Peace for the 1994 spring semester during a change of command ceremony conducted in Memorial Circle.

"(The Cadet Commander) oversees all functions and activities within our cadet group," Peace said.

Cadet commander appointments are based on previous ROTC service, on academics and on an interview process.

Detachment Commander Col. Danny Rouse and Commandant of Cadets Maj. Regina Harris interviewed the candidates and made the final decision.

"I'm really excited about this semester," Peace said. "We have an excellent staff, and I couldn't ask for better people to work with."

"We're here for one purpose," he said. "Besides to get an education...we are here to support the corps."

Simmons said, "I'd like to say this has been a great semester, but I don't think it has. I think it has been a tough semester."

"Somehow we made it through, but more importantly, we made it through together," he said.

Simmons also said he hopes the cadet group will give the new commander support and respect.

Christmas tree profits to help UMC's younger patients

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Individuals who enjoy the spirit of Christmas but do not have the time or patience to decorate a Christmas Tree may have an alternative.

University Medical Center is hosting the Festival of Trees in conjunction with Lights on Broadway.

The event will begin today and will continue through Sunday at the Baker Building, 1211 13th St. Admission costs $2 for adults and $1 for children ages 4 to 14.

Christmas trees and decorations will be on sale at the event. Personnel from UMC's health information management department also will provide a sweet shop for customers.

"Groups, individuals and businesses have donated fully decorated trees to be sold," said Susan Alston, volunteer chairman for the event.

She said the price range for the trees will be from $100 to $500, and said the trees will be delivered to the buyer's home.

Theme trees such as Dallas Cowboys, teddy bears, Texas, Disney and outer space will be on sale. All lights and decorations on the trees are included in the price.

Table and desk-top trees also will be sold at the event. The cost of the smaller Christmas trees will begin at $20.

Holiday decorations such as Christmas wreaths, centerpieces and hand-crafted Santa Clause's also will be available.

The money from the event will benefit the Children's Hospital at UMC and will be used for equipment.

"The money will be used to purchase state-of-the-art medical equipment," Alston said. "The event has been designed to raise money to improve the technology used in the Children's Hospital."

This is the first year of the event and is open to the general public, she said.

"This is the newest holiday tradition for Lubbock," Alston said.

Skinhead allegedly being mistreated by prison inmates

FORT WORTH (AP) — A former skinhead who has been convicted twice in connection with the slaying of a black man is being harassed by other Tarrant County inmates, his lawyers contend.

Christopher Brosky, 19, should be moved to another county jail because he has been pelted with containers of urine, hot water and other liquids, said his defense lawyer, Ward Casey.

Brosky "is being subjected to constant threats, harassment and assaultive conduct by his fellow inmates because of the notoriety connected with his trial," Casey said.

Brosky was convicted at Galveston last month on charges of organized crime and conspiracy in connection with the fatal shooting of Donald Thomas of Arlington. He was sentenced to 40 years in prison following the Galveston trial.

Earlier, he had been convicted in Tarrant County on a murder charge, but was given probation. The probated sentence prompted peaceful demonstrations by thousands in Fort Worth.

Jurors later said their sentence was a mistake. They said they misunderstood the judge's orders and recommended a sentence of both prison time and parole. Under state law, Brosky was given only parole. The allegations of Brosky's harassment came in a motion filed with state District Judge Bill Burdock.

"The prisoners fill small containers with urine and other unidentified substances and throw them through the bars," Casey said.

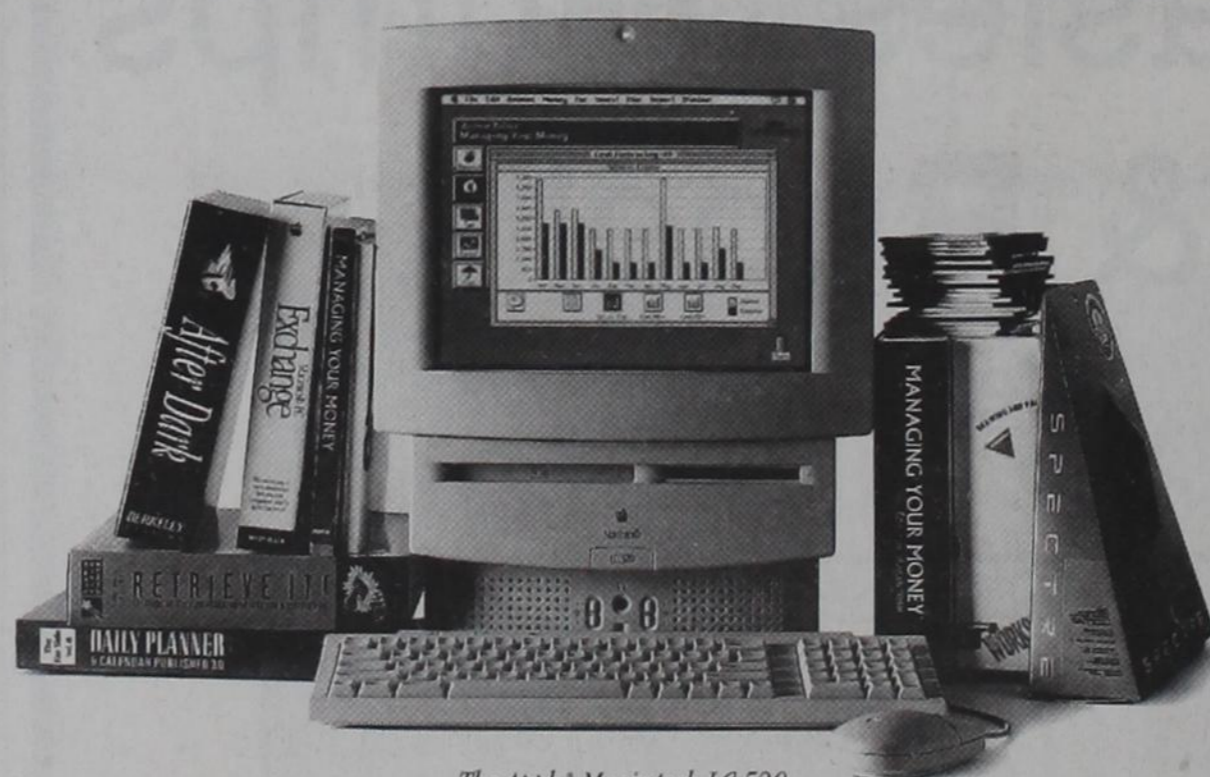

Burdock said that his court coordinator had contacted the Tarrant County Sheriff's Office to ask for a transfer and was told that Brosky would be transferred only to the Texas prison system, a process that typically takes months.

A hearing was scheduled for Friday on the transfer request.

Both of these cost about $30 a month, but ours comes with programs you can actually use.

KTXT-TV asking for donations

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Many college students remember growing up with Public Broadcasting Service television shows like "Sesame Street," "Electric Company" and "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood."

Now, Lubbock's 30-year-old PBS affiliate is asking for a little help from those who have enjoyed their programming.

KTXT-TV Channel 5, Texas Tech's educational station and PBS affiliate, will conduct a 10-day pledge drive starting today to increase its membership.

Any monetary donation will make a person a member.

A $15 donation from seniors and students, and a $25 donation from others is necessary to receive a membership program guide, said Helen Otken, director of development at KTXT.

During the drive there will be special programming. The programs included specials from several of the nation's most famous stars, such as "The Judds: The Final Concert," "Frank Sinatra, Liza Minnelli and Sammy Davis Jr.: The Ultimate Event," "A Peter, Paul and Mary Holiday Concert" and "The Andy Williams Christmas Show."

In addition to these special programs, KTXT will continue to air some of its most popular programs, such as the "Washington Week in Review," "McNeil-Lehrer News Hour" and children's favorites like "Barney" and "Reading Rainbow."

Otken said PBS statistics show individual members are public television's largest source of funding and most members join as a result of on-air appeals. In fact, PBS programming is cited as the primary reason viewers pledge or renew their memberships, and many contributors also note the station's role as a community educational institution.

"Public television depends on a partnership of viewers, as well as corporations, local and federal governments, foundations and other groups," Otken said.

Conference to brief bankers on economic, legislative issues

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The 21st annual Bankers Agricultural Credit Conference will be today and Saturday at the Lubbock Plaza Hotel.

The conference, sponsored by Texas Tech's department of agricultural economics and the Texas Bankers Association, briefs regional and area bankers about economic and legislative issues affecting agriculture.

"It is an annual conference that we organize for bankers in West Texas," said Kary Mathis, chairman of the department of agricultural economics. "It is a conference that provides current information on important topics for agricultural bankers."

Friday's session begins with registration at 1 p.m., with opening remarks and sessions beginning at 1:30 p.m. A social hour and dinner registration begins at 6:30 p.m.

During the dinner, two scholarship recipients will be recognized and the Distinguished Banker Service Award, which acknowledges members of the banking industry who have made important contributions and achievements, will be announced.

Registration for Saturday's session begins at 8 a.m. and is followed by sessions at 8:15 a.m.

U.S. Congressman Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, will address the bankers during a noon luncheon.

Other speakers include Laura Hale Smreker, general counsel of the Texas Bankers Association; George Ellis, state director of Farmers Home Administration; and Joe Hodges, president of Stanton National Bank.

Tickets for Friday's banquet cost $20 per person. Registration for both sessions is $75 and the cost of Saturday's session is $55. A portion of the registration fee will go toward a scholarship endowment for Tech students studying agricultural finance.

More than 100 drug dealers rounded up in undercover sting

AUSTIN (AP)—More than 100 street-level drug dealers have been rounded up by law enforcement agencies that conducted a three-month undercover investigation in the Austin area, authorities say.

Ken Williams, Austin deputy police chief, said 102 suspects, all charged with delivery of a controlled substance, had been rounded up by 1 p.m. Thursday.

The sting resulted in arrest warrants for 142 people, said Williams, adding that the roundup would likely continue through Friday.

Austin Police Chief Elizabeth Watson called the sting operation the single largest criminal investigation and arrest effort in Austin and Travis County history.

Williams said the sting operation, which included assistance from federal authorities, targeted dealers who were selling small amounts of drugs — namely crack cocaine — on the streets.

"We did not try to get big quantities," Williams said. "We wanted to get the people who were selling to the ordinary folks on the street and who are selling to our children."

Williams said 133 officers participated in "Operation Rock Crusher."

Tech Carol of Lights tradition celebrates 35th year

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

One of Texas Tech's oldest traditions, the Carol of Lights, will celebrate its 35th year at 7 p.m. today in Memorial Circle with the theme, "The Light of Tomorrow."

"The lights have gone on for so long that it is a tradition the university likes, and it is an event that will continue," said Richard DeShields, organizer and a senior education major from Borger. "Everyone thinks of the holiday season at the Carol of Lights."

Thirteen buildings surrounding Memorial Circle and the engineering key will be lit with 20,000 lights, and will remain lit every night from dusk until midnight through Jan. 1, said Kathleen Graw, organizer and a senior public relations and political science major from Dallas.

The festivities will begin at 6:30 p.m. at the administration building with a carillon concert.

The Saddle Tramps will then begin their traditional torch light procession at 7 p.m. with a walk from Broadway around Memorial Circle to the physics building.

A Saddle Tramp will dress up as Santa Claus. "He usually gets kids in the mood for the season," Graw said.

A 30-foot Christmas tree will be set up and decorated by the Carol of Lights Committee, which has been working on the event since June.

The fraternities will also place 2,000 luminaries around Memorial Circle, DeShields said.

"The main source of entertainment comes from the music department," Graw said.

A brass ensemble, under the direction of Tech Band Director Keith Bearden, will accompany the Saddle Tramp procession.

The University Choir and Singers will be conducting and leading most of the carols for the night.

Pre-lighting comments will begin with a speech from Tech President Robert Lawless, who has given one since he has been at Tech, Graw said.

The crowd will be led singing "Silent Night," and the lights will be turned on.

The residence hall dining halls will have "Carol of Lights" buffets for residence hall students, DeShields said.

The University Police Department will close off vehicle access to Memorial Circle so spectators can walk the campus.

"We try to emphasize that this is not a Christmas celebration, but more like a holiday season celebration for everyone — not just those who celebrate Christmas," Graw said.

Graw and DeShields were careful in the selection of the carols; they wanted to keep the event lighthearted and upbeat so people will leave happy, Graw said.

No other university has an event like this, and the words, "Carol of Lights," have been copyrighted.

"It is a Texas Tech tradition, and we would like to Light my fire

Saddle Tramps march to the science key carrying torches before more than 20,000 lights were lighted for last year's Carol of Lights. Organizers hope to attract record crowds to this year's event.

keep it within our school. It makes Tech stand out," Graw said.

As many as 25,000 have shown up for the Carol of Lights in the past, and with good weather, organizers hope to increase attendance.

"Lots of people put a lot of work into this," Graw said. "It is a tradition, and people will miss out if they don't come."

Celebration brings fond memories for Tech couple Wedding plans in the making after public proposal

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Ever since Tippi Geron was a child, she's been coming to the Texas Tech Carol of Lights. Last year her boyfriend, Kevin Ham, made sure it was one she will never forget.

As temperatures dropped below freezing and hundreds waited for the campus to be illuminated, a young man in a naval uniform stood at the microphone underneath the giant wreath and asked a simple question, "Tippi Suzanne Geron, will you marry me?"

The crowd cheered and waited for the answer. It came back positive.

One year later, Geron is preparing to graduate with a degree in family studies and plans to move home to Sweetwater in order to save money for their wedding.

Ham graduated from Tech last

May with a degree in physics and is now serving as an ensign in the navy.

Ham was a cadet in the Tech ROTC program and is now training to work on submarines.

Geron was co-chairperson of the Carol of Lights last year and when Ham proposed, no one on the stage knew he was going to do it. Geron said he just stood up and went to the podium.

"I thought he was going to preach to everyone and tell them they needed to be saved," Geron said.

Instead, Ham started talking about the peace, joy and happiness that the Christmas season brings. Then he told the crowd that everything they were feeling during the season, he felt every time he thought about his girlfriend.

Then he proposed. "The other co-chair was mad when Kevin first went up there, but after he proposed, she started crying," Geron said.

Although the couple had been dating for more than two years, they had only "thrown the idea (of marriage) around." Geron said they had casually looked at rings in the mall, but no concrete plans had been made.

"I was excited (when he proposed) and glad," Geron said.

"I didn't expect it."

Both of her parents were in the crowd when Ham proposed — Geron said they both cried.

"They were happy for me, they like Kevin a lot," she said.

The wedding, set for spring, will be at Reese Air Force Base and the reception will be at the Officer's Club.

Celebrating Christmas

Theatre students, local children present annual Christmas Card with play

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

As the Texas Tech University Theatre performs the traditional "A Christmas Carol," they will be celebrating more than the holidays.

This year marks the 150th anniversary of the writing of the Dickens classic.

"The performance is suitable for the whole family, and it is our Christmas card to our theater patrons," said Janet Cooper, director and assistant professor of theater and dance.

The play will run today and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. It will also run Dec. 9 through Dec. 11 at 8 p.m. and Dec. 12 at 2 p.m.

Tickets cost $10 for adults for Friday and Saturday shows and $8 for Thursday and Sunday shows. Group rates are available by contacting the box office at 742-3601.

Because of the anniversary, Cooper decided to forego the tendency to modernize the book, and instead took the play from the original script.

"We are developing a script straight from the novel — everyone has worked as an ensemble to develop the script," said Rudy Alvarado, a graduate student from Lubbock and assistant director of the play.

Through Cooper's research of the book, she began to discover the interest in spiritualism and the influence of ghosts in that time period.

"It became clear to me visually that the influence of the spirits had to be a strong element because they were much more influential on Scrooge than some of the adaptations we lead you to believe," Cooper said.

To add a new twist to the play, the company does not portray the same parts during the play's two week run.

"It has been different in the fact that our casts are split," said Chad Miller, a sophomore psychology major from Lubbock. "We develop a character, and it is interesting to watch someone else develop their own character, and see how we can play off each other."

Cooper casts a company of actors who are talented enough to go back to the text and find their own relationships to the writings.

The actors are challenged to determine how to express physically and emotionally the various roles of the play. They are playing up to five or six different roles; in turn, each character has to have a different physical and vocal reality, she said.

"It is really an exercise for the actors in using all their techniques to stretch what they can do," Cooper said.

What Cooper is trying to accomplish is to stretch the boundaries of each character.

Some audience members might come in with the expectation, for instance, that Scrooge should be bald. She wanted to increase the experience for the actors and vary what the audience sees.

Eleven adult actors and nine children were cast to perform up to 40 roles.

A tight bond has been formed between the adults and children, as each adult is assigned to a child.

"Sometimes it drives you crazy because they love you so much, but they are my buddies," said Amy Nichols, a senior theater major from Lubbock.

The hardest thing about the children in the play is the adults have to make sure they make their entrances, Nichols said.

Scrooged

The Ghost of Christmas Present (Amy Nichols) makes her presence known to Scrooge (Jon Dale Possey) in the upcoming University Theatre production of A Christmas Carol.

Cooper is going to surprise a few of her patience with the actors and children in allowing them to bring to the stage the kind of energy they bring, Alvarado said.

Lady Raiders to host Alcorn State

Tech puts win streak on line in first round of own tourney

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Now that the Texas Tech women's basketball team is sitting at No. 3 in two polls, the focus turns to defending its Lady Raider Classic title this weekend.

Tech enters the 3 p.m. Saturday contest against Alcorn State with a 2-0 record, which includes victories over then No. 2-ranked Vanderbilt and a 72-68 win over then No. 5 Stanford this past weekend.

"You have to be concerned about the next game coming up and not dwell on a win in the past," sophomore post Michi Atkins said before Thursday's workout. "We are showing that we can play."

The first game of the tournament will feature Louisville against Florida International starting at 1 p.m. Tickets are still available for all games during the tournament. The Tech game will also be broadcast on KJAK-FM 92.7.

Atkins led the Lady Raiders in scoring and rebounding against the Cardinal with 29 points and 12 rebounds.

"Michi took control of the paint," coach Marsha Sharp said earlier this week. "She did a good job against the good players that Stanford had."

Atkins is leading the team in scoring with 21.5 points per game, and averaging nine rebounds in the two games.

The Loraine native also was voted Southwest Conference Player of the Week Monday, the first such award given out this season.

"I think we are where we need to be with chemistry," she said. "We have all gotten along since the beginning of the season."

The Braves are 1-2, with losses to Houston and Auburn.

Alcorn State took the Tigers into overtime but lost 71-66 in the Houston tournament last weekend.

"They (Alcorn State) obviously have upset on their minds," Sharp said. "The fact that we can point to the Auburn game will help us."

Another large crowd is expected for the tournament opener for Tech, after 7,911 fans saw the Lady Raiders win their second straight game against Stanford.

"They are such a big part of the win for us," Sharp said. "That was a big part of what happened."

The consolation game for the tournament will be at 1 p.m. Sunday, with the championship game scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday.

Texas Tech notes
• The jersey worn by Krista Kirkland-Gerlich the past four years will be officially retired in ceremonies between games Sunday. Kirkland-Gerlich's No. 21 will join Carolyn Thompson's No. 44 as the only Lady Raider jerseys retired.

When Texas comes to town on Feb. 19, Sheryl Swoopes' No. 22 will be officially added to the retired list.

• When the Lady Raiders failed to connect on their seven attempts from three-point range Saturday against Stanford, it ended a streak of 66 straight games of Tech making at least one shot from behind the arc. The last time Tech failed to make a three-pointer was against Memphis State in the 1990-91 season opener in the Oklahoma State Tournament.

Tech hunting for first win at tournament

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech men's basketball team is looking for redemption today against Central Michigan in the first round of the Pizza Hut Classic at Springfield, Mo.

Coach James Dickey isn't looking for a repeat of Monday night's last-second loss to Arkansas State.

"I tried to warn our players that Arkansas State would be formidable," he said. "We just stunk it up."

Dickey said the Raiders (0-1) will have to focus on overcoming adversity and concentrate on the basics this weekend.

"We made a lot of bad errors," Dickey said. "That's my area of responsibility. I can assure our fans and our student body that we will correct the errors that we need to work on."

The Raiders practiced for the last time in Lubbock on Wednesday under Dickey's watchful eye.

Dickey said Central Michigan (0-2) probably isn't as tough as Arkansas State, but that the Raiders can't afford to take the Chippewas lightly.

"We have to get mentally focused now," Dickey said. "In the situation we're in, anyone

If the Raiders win today, they will face the winner of the Southwest Missouri State-Cal State Northridge (0-3) matchup in the winners game Saturday. Dickey isn't looking ahead to the possibility of a matchup with the highly touted SW Missouri Bears, who are off to a 2-0 start.

"Looking ahead to the tournament final would be the worst mistake we could make," Dickey said.

Central Michigan is under first-year coach Leonard Drake and looks to improve on last year's 8-18 mark.

The Chippewas are off to a slow start, dropping their first two contests to Iona and Lake Superior State.

Raiders' punter honored by CFA

Texas Tech punter Robert King was honored by College Football Association this week as he was named to the Hitachi/CFA Scholar-Athlete Team.

King averaged 42.7 yards per punt this season for the Red Raiders, along with a 3.9 GPA in Chemical Engineering.

The Iraan native also received second-team All-Southwest Conference honors this week for his punting efforts.

Baylor quarterback J.J. Joe was the only other SWC player on the team.

South Plains Spokers to host tournament

by TARA HEARLIHY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech men's and women's basketball teams are not the only teams participating in tournaments this weekend.

The South Plains Spokers host the Fourth Annual Lubbock Invitational Wheelchair Basketball tournament Saturday and Sunday at the Student Recreation Center.

Teams from Colorado Springs, San Angelo, Waco, Dallas and Abilene will travel to Lubbock for the two-day event.

"We should start at 9:30 a.m. Saturday and go to 5 p.m.," said Larry White, president of the Spokers. "It will be organized in brackets. We play at 9:30 a.m."

The Dallas team consists of all females, White said.

"Most teams are male and female. I don't know of any other teams that are just girls. Two or three of the girls on the Dallas team played on the Olympic basketball team," he said.

The games are played by NCAA basketball rules with few exceptions.

"There really is not any difference," White said. "There is no double dribble. We have one dribble to every two pushes on the chair."

At times the basketball games can become dangerous.

"Things can get pretty rough," White said. "I have flown out of my chair before. We don't take any special precautions. You just learn how to take it."

THINGS CAN GET PRETTY ROUGH. I HAVE FLOWN OUT OF MY CHAIR BEFORE. YOU JUST LEARN HOW TO TAKE IT.

Larry White

The Spokers consist of 10 members who play consistently.

"We try to play everybody as much as possible," Whitesaid. "We want everybody to be involved."

The team is considered a club sport associated with Tech's Recreational Sports organization and consist of Tech undergraduates and former students.

The group provides both recreational and competitive athletic opportunities to people with physical disabilities.

"We basically do it for fun and it is good exercise," White said. "It is important to get plenty of exercise when you sit in a chair all of the time. You can get lazy."

The team practices once a week at the Rec Center. They are a sub-chapter of the Southwest Wheelchair Athletic Association and the National Wheelchair Athletic Association.

"Ross Davis raced for the Olympics and I have been on international teams," White said.

The championship and consolation games will be played on Sunday starting at 9 a.m. and going to noon.

Promotion to center around campus organizations

The Texas Tech athletic department has announced a special promotion for student organizations to get better involved in the men's basketball games.

Athletic department officials are looking for the "most supportive group on campus" at Texas Tech men's basketball games.

Each group will have a chance to have a representative in the halftime shootout and they also have a chance to have a representative be a "Guest Coach."

This all culminates in the "most supportive organization on campus" being chosen during the final home contest on March 2 against Texas Christian. The winner will be presented with a trophy during the game. If any organization wishing to participate does not have student coupon books and needs tickets, the tickets cost $4 at the door for individual games or $28 for the rest of the season, which includes 11 home games.

For more information contact Jennifer Ortega or Kelly Robinson at the Tech Sports Information Office at 742-2770.

School children send Lett letters

MESQUITE (AP) — Not all the letters sent to Leon Lett these days are in the form of hate mail.

An elementary school has penned 886 encouraging letters to the Dallas lineman, letting him know they've forgiven him for his Thanksgiving Day blunder that cost the Cowboys a victory.

"I told him what our teachers tell us, that tomorrow's a new beginning," fifth-grader K.C. Ramsey said.

On Wednesday, the 886 students at John L. Hanby Elementary School in the Dallas suburb of Mesquite wrote letters trying to console Lett, who inexplicably touched the football after a blocked field goal against Miami.

The Dolphins recovered at the Dallas one with three seconds left and Pete Stoyanovich was good on his second-chance field goal for a 16-14 victory over Dallas.

Hanby principal Cathy Rideout said the letter-writing idea came from a student who told his teacher that it was wrong for people to criticize Lett.

The student was told to send a note of encouragement to the defensive lineman.

The effort soon snowballed into the letter-writing campaign involving all Hanby students.

"It's exactly what we need to do with our kids," Rideout said. "We're teaching them writing skills, and we're also teaching them that it's OK to make mistakes and that you can learn from your mistakes."

Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said Lett received the letters, but still wasn't talking about the blunder Thursday, one week after the episode.

The outside of each card reads: "Dear Mr. Lett, Everybody makes mistakes... that's why pencils have erasers! We believe in ourselves... We want you to believe in yourself, too!"
