Mexican presidential candidate assassinated

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The man expected to become Mexico's next president, Luis Donaldo Colosio, was shot to death Wednesday during a campaign appearance in the border city of Tijuana.

Colosio, candidate of Mexico's governing party, was rushed to Tijuana General Hospital with gunshot wounds to the head and upper body. The attorney general's office said the gunman and an accomplice were arrested.

An unidentified surgeon, interviewed on the Televisa network, said Colosio's wife, Diana, and a Roman Catholic clergyman were summoned into the operating room Wednesday night.

Leavano Saenz, Colosio's campaign press secretary, said he died at 11:10 p.m. EST, about three hours after he was shot. A hospital spokeswoman said doctors operated on the less-serious wound in the lower body first, then had started a second operation on the head wound.

King has 'no life' attorney says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three years after his beating by police that stunned the world, Rodney King's lawyer told jurors Wednesday that he is a young man "who no longer has a life."

The multiracial seven-woman, three-man jury is hearing King's lawsuit seeking compensation for the injuries he sustained during his beating, which was captured on an infamous videotape that sparked cries of police brutality when it was televised.

In opening statements, King's attorney Milton Grimes said the beating and subsequent publicity turned his client into a fearful and humiliated man.

"You have a 28-year-old man who no longer has a life," Grimes said. "On March 3, 1991, events turned his life around and took his life away from him."

Two convicted of contract murder

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — An Aspen, Colo. developer and a Texas man were convicted Wednesday of first-degree murder in the 1983 contract killing of the developer's ex-wife.

Paul Hamwi, 47, the developer, was found guilty of hiring two hitmen to kill his ex-wife Susan in the Fort Lauderdale home they once shared.

One of the hitmen, Paul Serio, 47, of White Settlement, Texas, also was convicted, while the second was granted immunity in exchange for his testimony.

Mrs. Hamwi was beaten, stabbed with a steak knife and strangled with a phone cord in November 1983.

The couple's 18-month-old daughter, Shane, died of dehydration after being left unattended in her crib for more than a week.

Coliseum renovations put on hold in hopes of new arena

by JAYSON BALES
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Renovations to the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum were put on hold by City Council members Thursday because of discussions to build a new multipurpose arena in the Hub City.

A 10-member committee recommended to council members that an arena with the seating capacity of 13,000 be built on the Texas Tech campus.

Council members discussed having a public hearing to gather input about a new arena.

"The community is wanting to vote on this issue, whether or not we should have a multipurpose arena," Mayor David Langston said.

Council members voted to allow the bids on the coliseum renovations to expire because of the possible multipurpose arena project.

Councilman Bud Aderton was the only council member who opposed postponing the coliseum renovations.

Council members also voted to postpone the public hearing until the city staff can further study the multipurpose arena project.

No date was scheduled for the public hearing.

"April...is a little too quick to hold a public hearing," Councilman Max Ince said.

"We may be looking at May or June."

Councilman Alex "Ty" Cooke said many factors must be considered in selecting a possible arena site.

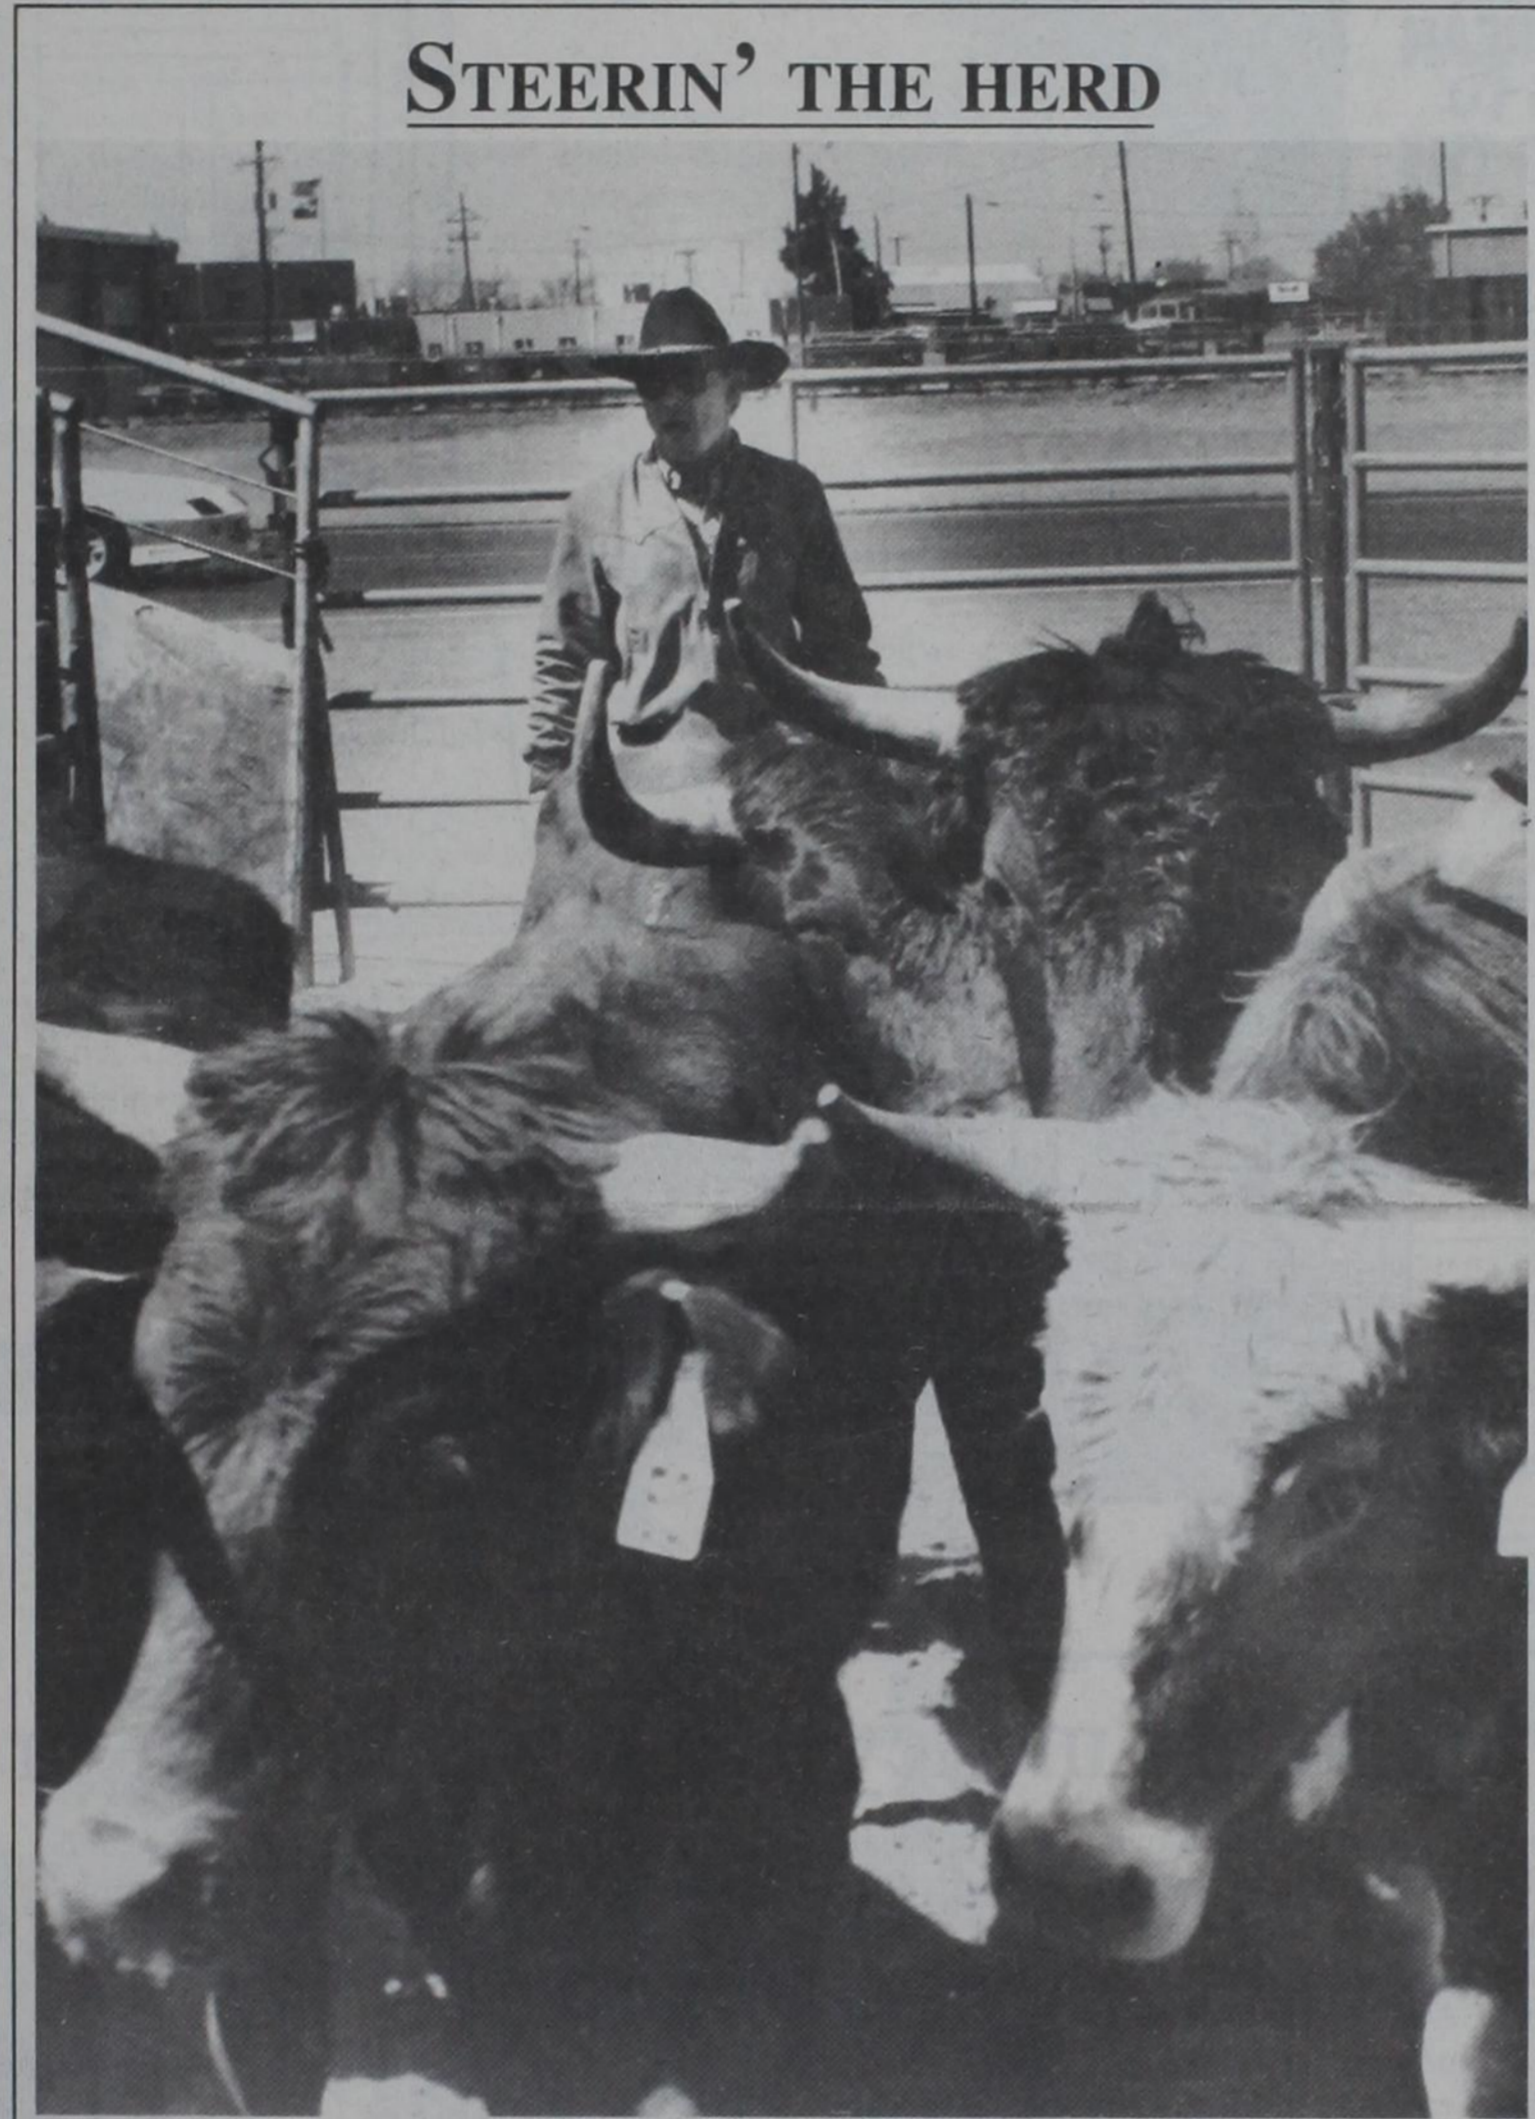

"If we consider an Overton site, we've got to have a very detailed relocation program," Cooke said.

Council members also discussed whether or not a public hearing and an election occur while Texas Tech is in session.

Langston said he supports having Tech students' input, but said students have shown poor participation in past city elections.

"Historically, the Texas Tech students do not vote," Langston said.

Tech, Lubbock seeking community improvements

by JAYSON BALES
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The City of Lubbock and Texas Tech are working together for a Community Outreach Partnership Center that could bring social services and economic development to the Hub City.

Lubbock City Council members allocated $50,000 in funds for a COPC project in Lubbock.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development is offering grant applications to universities and colleges to bring community centers and services to local neighborhoods.

Martin Harms, dean of Tech's College of Architecture, said he is trying to receive a grant for Tech.

If Tech receives the grant for a COPC, the project will be targeted toward Lubbock's Arnett Benson neighborhood, Harms said.

"We feel we are in a position at Tech to work with the city and in this particular neighborhood," he said.

Receiving the grant will require raising $200,000, and Tech is asking that the city provide $50,000 in cash for the HUD project, Harms said.

"We are asking for a letter of commitment saying that $50,000 will be available contingent on Texas Tech receiving the grant," he said.

There is no clear definition of what function the COPC project will serve in Lubbock, Harms said.

"This is a whole new thing," he said.

"Everybody is struggling to find a definition for this thing."

The basic function of the COPC project is to help with economic development, with social services and with neighborhood quality in the community, but ultimately the project will be defined by the needs of the neighborhood citizens, Harms said.

About 75 percent of the funds for the COPC project will go to activities benefiting individuals in the community, he said.

Councilman Randy Neugebauer said the council already allocated funds for a supercenter project similar to the COPC project.

"It appears there is maybe some duplication of funding here," Neugebauer said.

Council members allocated $50,000, but reserved the option to withdraw the money because they have not reviewed Tech's formal proposal for the HUD grant.

Harms said Tech's proposal is being prepared for the April 8 HUD grant application deadline and will be presented to the City Council at a later date.

Councilman Alex "Ty" Cooke said the COPC project was something the council has been wanting to do.

"I find the prospect of this exciting," Cooke said.

New names added to Tech's Vietnam records

by MEGAN CLARK
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Vietnam War Historian Douglas Pike and former CIA director William Colby were added to The National Council for the Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict at Texas Tech.

"Because they are nationally known figures involved with Vietnam, we hope by associating them with the center we'll raise the profile of what we are trying to do here," said James Reckner, associate professor of history and director of the Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict.

Reckner said the new members will assist with developing fund-raisers.

"These individuals will lend prestige to our center, just by attaching their names to it," he said.

Reckner said fund-raisers are being planned in the hopes of adding $120,000 worth of Vietnam-related microfiche for primary research.

Council members also plan to seek clearance for Vo Nguyen Giap, leader of the Communist forces in Vietnam during the conflict, to come to Tech for the next Vietnam symposium in April 1996.

"These types of people can provide this type of service for us with their contacts," Reckner said.

Pike plans to donate several million Vietnam-related documents to Tech.

The documents are available for research at the University of California-Berkeley. Negotiations are under way to bring the material to Tech's center.

"In a letter to (Tech) President (Robert) Lawless, Douglas Pike said he felt certain that Texas Tech would become a leading research center in the area of Vietnam studies," Reckner said.

The initial idea to create the Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict began in 1988 when Reckner polled his history class to see what military general the students associated most with the Vietnam War.

"Only one student out of 100 knew who General Westmoreland was, and he was an extremely prominent figure during the war," Reckner said.

"I realized I needed to teach a course and that students needed a larger research base for this subject area. Thus, I proposed funding for the center."

A Vietnam symposium planned every three years for the center will include a presentation of academic papers, interaction between officials and students and a panel discussion.

"Our mission is to encourage study of the Vietnam era, and this is the place to do that," Reckner said.

Tech falls in 'Sweet Sixteen'

Crimson Tide advance to Regional final with 73-68 victory

by LEN HAYWARD
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

AUSTIN (Special) — Alabama held off a late Texas Tech comeback to defeat the Lady Raiders 73-68 in the Midwest Regional semifinal game at the Frank Erwin Center Thursday night.

"We just came up a little short tonight. We just tried to end it good and we lost to a good team," Tech senior forward Janice Farris said.

Tech was down by as many as 16 points in the second half, but pulled to within eight at 71-63 with 1:05 left after a Connie Robinson jumper. Alabama forward Betsy Harris then hit two free throws, expanding the lead to 73-63, to help put the game away with 31 seconds left.

Tech senior Stephanie Scott hit a three-pointer with eight seconds left to pull the Lady Raiders to within 73-66 and after a Tech timeout, Robinson was fouled three seconds later. Robinson converted both free throws to narrow the score to 73-68, but Alabama was able to hold the ball for the final seconds.

Robinson finished the game with 21 points, while pulling down a team-high eight rebounds.

Tech finished the season with a 28-5 record and No. 9 final ranking in the Associated Press poll. No. 6-seed and 16th-ranked Alabama will move onto the Midwest final, and will face No. 1-seed Penn State which defeated Seton Hall 64-60 in the first game at the Erwin Center.

Alabama outrebounded the Lady Raiders 53-36, with Betsy Harris grabbing a game-high 10 boards.

Harris also scored 15 points, and Yolanda Watkins put in 17 in the winning effort.

"We didn't shoot it very well tonight and we didn't shoot very well in the paint," Tech assistant coach Linden Weese said. "You got to give Alabama some credit, too. Anytime our post kids got the ball they were double teamed and triple teamed."

Tech trailed by 12 points in the first half after Carla Koonce hit a jumper with 7:40 left on the clock,

We just tried to end it good and we lost to a good team.

Janice Farris

making the score 27-15. But Alabama scored one more bucket the next two minutes as the Lady Raiders went on a 12-2 run, capped by an Atkins' jump shot with 4:28 left in the half, which cut the lead to 29-27.

The Crimson Tide went back up 35-27 after Harris hit a three-pointer with three minutes remaining.

Niesa Johnson, who finished with a double-double of 12 points and 10 assists, hit a jumper at the buzzer to give Alabama a 37-31 lead at the half.

Noel Johnson was the only other Lady Raider to score in double figures with 14 points, hitting four of eight shots from behind the three-point stripe.

Michi Atkins converted 4 of 11 shots for eight points.

B.B. gun sniper was caught, but what was he thinking?

JAMES DAVID Obviously I wasn't killed, because the sniper who shot me was armed with a B.B. gun. You see, I live in the University Plaza and me and a buddy were walking across the street to grab a beer when it happened — I felt a sharp sting in my left arm and my skin was broken. At first, I thought someone hit me with a slingshot or something. After further investigation, I realized what had really happened. Friends informed me that someone has been sitting up in the U.P. shooting at passersby on Main Street with a pellet or B.B. gun.

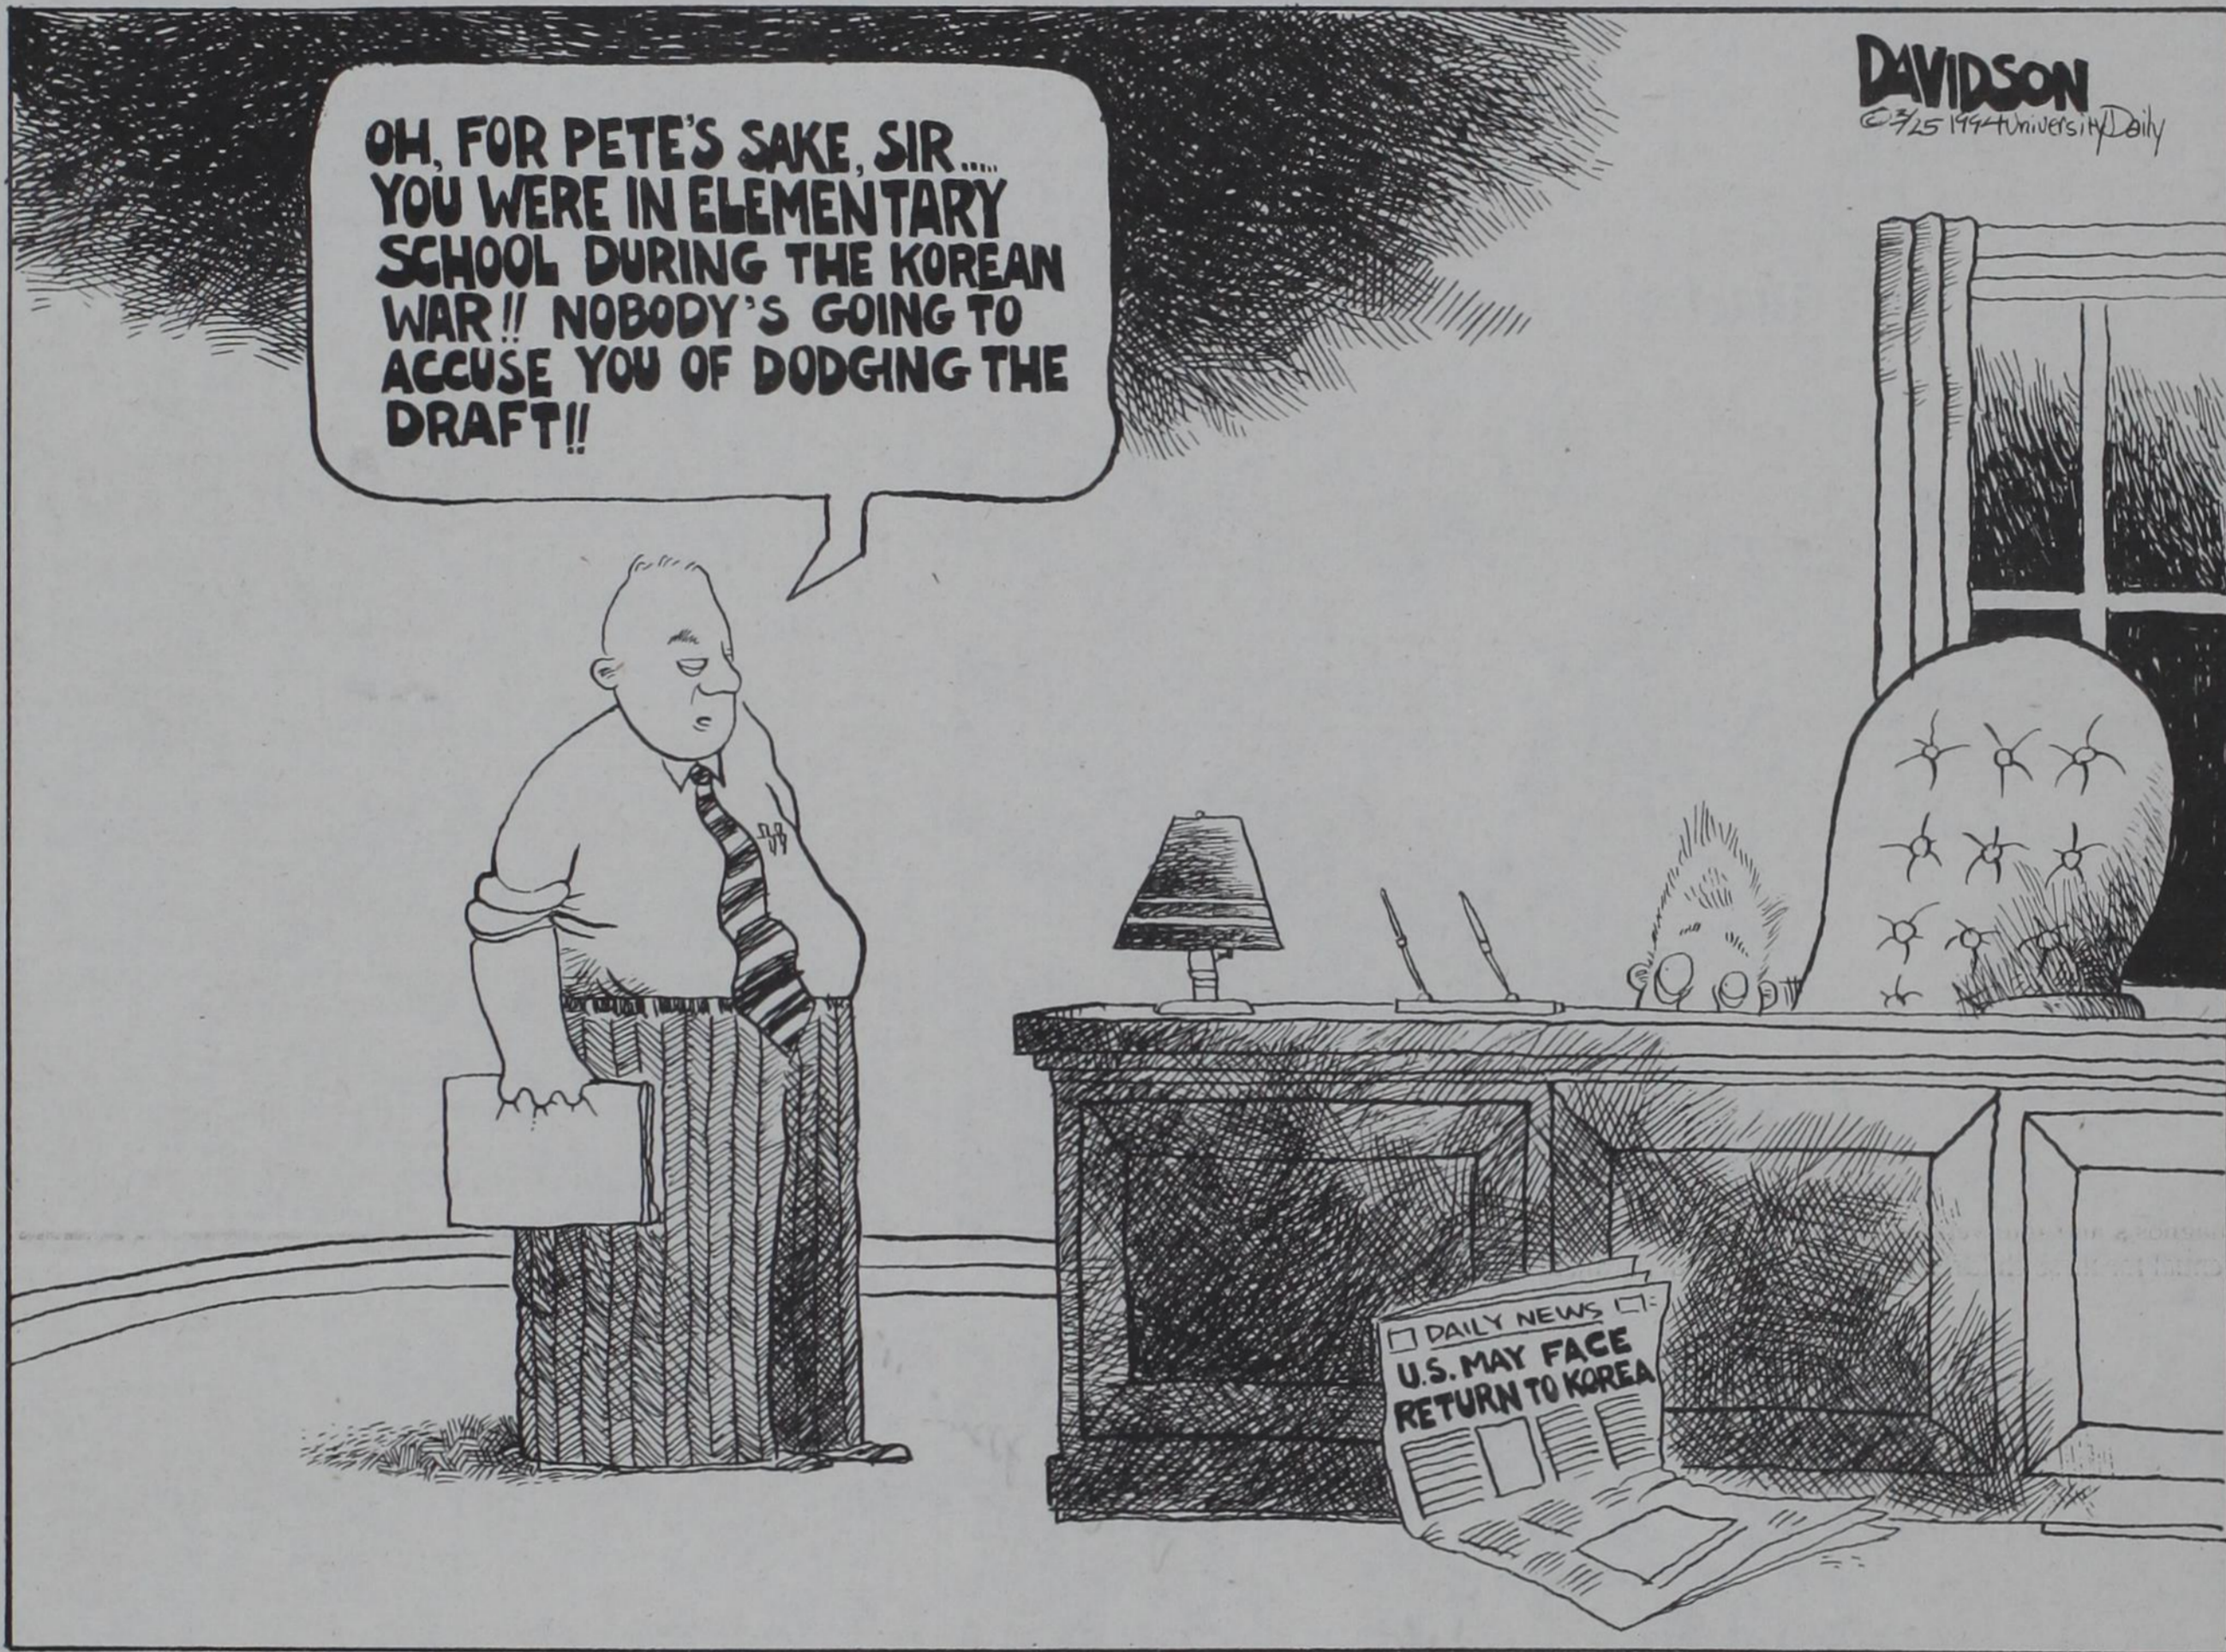

I also found out that the individual who shot me was a member of Texas Tech's finest — no, not the police department — the football team. It was kind of ironic because the buddy who was with me also is a football player. I'm not quite sure if I should mention his name here, or if I should press charges. He was probably just bored and needed some cheap entertainment.

Anyway, the U.P. has been receiving complaints about the rogue sniper for some time. Shortly after I was shot they found out who the culprit was. Kudos to the U.P. management for decisive, quick action on the matter. According to the head resident assistant, the sniper is being evicted. I don't know the guy personally, but isn't it sort of ironic that he decided to shoot a University Daily sports-writer? Since I've decided not to name him (he knows who he is) I will now commence to openly chastise him for his actions. What the hell do you think you were doing mister? I know. You're a big man on the football team so you think you're above the law or any repercussions, right? If you hit someone in the eye or the head you could shoot someone's eye out and maybe seriously hurt them — or did that occur to you? After all, aren't you supposed to be a college student armed with a little common sense? I quote from the movie "A Christmas Story" — "You'll shoot your eye out!" After a phone call to the University Police Department, they informed me that it was a serious offense-assault. It happened last year, remember the "Sneed sniper?" (You didn't live there last year did you?)

Since it happened off campus, the UPD tried to convince me to contact the Lubbock Police Department or the district attorney's office to file charges. I should, but part of me says maybe the kid will learn his lesson. Why wreck his career here at Tech, right? So I'm sitting here pondering the alternative and I made a phone call to Spike Dykes, not as a reporter, but as a concerned citizen. I informed him of the situation and wanted to see what disciplinary action (if any) they plan on taking on the young man in question. I told him I didn't really want to file charges and he assured me he would look into the matter and give the appropriate punishment. This isn't an indictment of the football team at all. They have 165 guys on the team so it's like anything else, all it takes is one bad apple to give the whole group a bad rap. I rather doubt that anyone else on the team gets their kicks out of shooting at folks with a B.B. gun, just that one immature individual in question. You know, I really don't want to have to sprint to avoid sniper fire every time I leave the building. After all, I'm not in Sarajevo, OK?

The Eagles reunion may bring in big money, but lawsuits are sure to follow

SCOTT SPARKS Was anybody really surprised by the news that The Eagles got back together? I for one sure wasn't. In this day and age of "big bucks paid for big tours," it is very conceivable that Don Henley, Joe Walsh, Glenn Frey, Don Felder and Timothy B. Schmidt could rake in more than $50 million after you add T-shirts, tour books, hats, a live video and album of the tour. The summer tour will have the reformed band playing all the old classics, a few solo numbers from the respective artists, and maybe a few new numbers. Dates for the tour are being put together, but already there are lawsuits being filed to try to slow down this grand reunion. MCA Records has sued Glenn Frey for not fulfilling his contractual obligations to the label. He has four more albums owed to MCA. Don Henley still has his on-going legal entanglements with his old label Geffen Records. Henley either wants out of his contract or demands more money. What's new? Above all of this, there is the band itself. It has been no secret that Frey and Henley have had a strained relationship over the years, but if they can put it together for a couple of hours on stage and if you can bear to hear "Hotel California" one more time, then I'll see you in the audience when the show rolls through town! Miscellaneous: The Farm's new album will be called "Hullabaloo"...Batman 3 will be out in the summer of '95 and yes, Michael Keaton will return as the caped crusader...And speaking of movies, be sure to look for

Restless Heart in their movie debut, "Maverick." They will also be releasing their new CD at the end of April...Another big tour for this summer is B.B. King, Little Feat and Dr. John. They are calling it Blues Music Festival 1994...Sonic Youth's 10th CD, "Experimental Jet-Set, Trash and No Star," is expected to be in the stores May 10...There are strong hints that after Rush tours the outdoor stages this summer, they will call it a day on the band's 20-year history...The band US3 has become Blue Note Records' biggest selling act of all time. Blue Note has a long history in the world of jazz, but US3 is their first venture into pop/dance...Members of the Black Crows, Jellyfish and the Lenny Kravitz Band have laid down tracks for an album that will usher in a sound that mixes folk and early Pink Floyd. What?...OK, if you're keeping count, "The Bodyguard" soundtrack has sold more than 11 million copies in the United States alone... and if you are wondering, Toni Braxton's self-titled debut has sold more than 3 million to date. Scott Sparks is a radio personality at 104 KRBE in Houston © Scott Sparks 1994

Time for spring cleaning

City preparing to rid Lubbockites of trash

by NY LYNN NICHOLS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbockites need to start gathering up their large unwanted items for the city's annual Spring Cleanup in April.

The Spring Cleanup/GLAD Bag-A-Thon will be April 9-16, and registration for the Cleanup is now until April 8.

"The Spring Cleanup provides everyone an opportunity to get rid of large items," said Efrén Villanueva, Keep Lubbock Beautiful coordinator.

He said the city works with private vendors such as BFI, Fabit and Triple C.

"(They) provide us with Dumpster drop-off containers," Villanueva said. "We will have 15 drop-off containers placed strategically throughout the city between April 9 through April 16."

He said the partners also provide drivers and dump trucks so citizens do not have to worry about running out of room for garbage.

"It doesn't matter how many times a neighborhood wants to fill up a drop-off because they will be emptied continuously," Villanueva said.

Three drop-off containers will be placed near the Tech campus for the utilization of Tech students.

"Central Lubbock is well-covered," Villanueva said.

He also said there will be organized cleanups.

"This is where the Tech community can get really involved," Villanueva said.

There are 23 neighborhood associations in Lubbock, and all are involved in the Cleanup, he said.

"In one particular case, the Tech Terrace UNIT Neighborhood Association has had an ongoing partnership with the TKEs (Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity) and Delta Chi for about the last eight or nine years," Villanueva said.

Tech Terrace UNIT Neighborhood Association Co-Chairwoman

Marjorie Manning said student involvement helps tremendously.

"They've helped from the very organization of the effort until the end," Manning said. "There are 16 miles of alleys in the neighborhood, and they've helped refine the process where we clean the alleys in a matter of hours."

"(Tech Terrace) is by far the most impressive Cleanup that I've ever seen," Villanueva said. "I would like to see other student organizations follow suit. There's another 22 neighborhoods out there that would require that support."

Interested organizations and individuals can sign up from 8 a.m. to noon until April 8 at the Parks and Recreation Offices in Municipal Square at 916 Texas Avenue, suite 202.

Science activities scheduled for Saturday

The Texas Tech University/Howard Hughes Medical Institute Undergraduate Biological Sciences Education program will sponsor Science Day from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday in the biology building.

The program, a series of lectures and workshops by local educators and scientists, is open to the public for a registration fee of $10. Registration will be from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. in rooms 102 and 103.

Events will include a demonstration of scanning and electron transmission microscopes, a plant taxonomy scavenger hunt, a workshop in concept mapping, educational information about rain forests and a demonstration about what can be learned from an owl pellet.

The lunch speaker will be Ron Chesser, head of Wildlife Ecology and Toxicology Division of the Savannah River Ecology Lab at the University of Georgia. Chesser will discuss the ecological and sociological impact of the Chernobyl disaster by showing preliminary data of the ecological and genetic effects of radiation.

For more information, contact Meredith Hamilton at 742-2883.

Free growth screenings available

Children experiencing problems with normal growth can receive a free growth screening Saturday.

The Human Growth Foundation Screening will be offered from 8 a.m. to noon at the Pediatric Clinic of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Tech pediatricians estimate that about 1,500 children in Lubbock County have some type of growth disorder, and doctors said early diagnosis and intervention is essential for these children to reach optimum growth potential.

Human Growth Foundation representatives advise that children who grow less than two inches per year after age two should see a physician who can assess the possibility of a growth disorder.

The foundation is a non-profit organization that educates and supports families with children who have growth problems.

To make an appointment for a free screening, contact Tech's pediatrics department at 743-2301.

Barrymore marries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There are enough actors already in Drew Barrymore's family. She wanted a husband who was different.

Barrymore, 19, married Jeremy Thomas, a 31-year-old British bar owner she met only a few months ago. It was the first marriage for each.

"Thank God he's not an actor. He's a working man," Barrymore said.

Fulbright scholarships offer students chance to study overseas

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech graduate students and faculty members who display outstanding academic achievement and an appreciation for international relations may have an opportunity to study and travel abroad.

Applications for Fulbright scholarships, created in 1946 to foster understanding among nations, are available in the International Affairs Office, West Hall, room 242.

The purpose of the Fulbright program is "to enable the government of the United States to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries," according to the administration of the program.

Eligibility includes being a U.S. citizen, being in good health and having an undergraduate degree. Foreign language requirements vary according to the country and to requirements for the proposed project.

Sandy Crosier, International Affairs' overseas opportunities counselor, said Fulbright scholarships are for students who have been abroad in the past and who want to further their work in foreign countries.

"It's a prestigious scholarship because it's a national search and you're competing with people all over the country," she said.

Crosier said there are a limited number of spots available, which makes the scholarship competitive.

According to the Fulbright mission, "each year the program allows more than 600 Americans to study or conduct research in more than 100 nations."

Crosier said at least four Tech professors are former Fulbright recipients.

Harley Oberhelman, a former Fulbright recipient and a classical and modern languages and literature professor, said Fulbright funding is allocated from the federal government.

Geography professor and former Fulbright recipient Gary Elbow is a member of the National Selection Committee, and he said applicants need to be somewhat familiar with the language of the desired country.

"We look at their knowledge of the language and culture," he said. "It is also helpful if they have spent a little time in that country."

"It is also good to have an institutional tie with a foreign university," he said. "We want to make sure they'll be a good ambassador for the United States."

English department Chairman Wendall Aycock said there are several different kinds of Fulbright scholarships, and said the amount of available scholarships depends on the appointment and the applicant's current salary.

"You have to find your own housing, but they're pretty generous," Aycock said.

Interested students should go to the International Affairs Office to get an application.

Deadline for interested applicants is mid-October 1994.

Library forms link with area network

by MEGAN CLARK
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's library system entered into a borrowing agreement with other schools and universities in the New Mexico and West Texas area.

"Basically, this program allows students to use libraries at a different institution, as if they were a student there," said Pamela Cooper, director of library development and external relations. "When students are going home on vacation, they are able to work in a local institution's library and have material accessible to them."

Tech entered into the Llano Estacado Information Access Network last year to promote interaction between college and university libraries and to create programs similar to the borrowing agreement, Cooper said.

Schools that participate in LEIAN include Abilene Christian University, Amarillo College, Eastern New Mexico University, Hardin-Simmons University, McMurry University, New Mexico Highlands University, the University of Texas-Permian Basin, West Texas A&M University, Tech and the Texas Tech School of Law.

Students who plan to use libraries at different campuses in the LEIAN must obtain a passport from their home campus to be able to access information as if they were a regular student. Students must give their passport to the lending library at the end of their visit and must obtain a new one for each subsequent visit.

Passports can be obtained at the main library's Circulation Office.

"The good thing about this program is that students will be able to check out books and return them at their discretion," she said.

Students are required to observe all regulations of the lending library and must return materials in the appropriate loan period.

"Our primary concern is to benefit students and other patrons of the library," Cooper said. "Some students may come to see us more often than others because they have more access to materials here at the Texas Tech libraries."

LEIAN participants also entered into a joint grant with the federal government last year to receive funding for a electronic information access system.

"You seem to accomplish more in a team," she said. "Instead of all of us trying to be against each other, we're working together to benefit each other."

Gates living life away from CIA

BIG LAKE, Wash. (AP) — Former CIA Director Robert Gates plans to spend his days catching fish instead of spies.

Gates says he'll move with his family to a waterfront home on Big Lake, about 50 miles north of Seattle. He plans to write a book, go fishing and, in general, just live quietly.

"We've gone out to Washington (state) for vacation for many years," Gates said Tuesday. "We knew that when I left government service we would eventually move out there."

Special security arrangements are being made at the residence. Gates, 50, left the CIA at the beginning of 1993 after a nearly 30-year career.

Health reform debated at Tech

by NY LYNN NICHOLS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Local health care professionals attended the Health Care Reform Forum '94 Thursday and discussed the government's role in the nation's health care.

The event was hosted by the Phi Theta Kappa International Honor Society on the Texas Tech campus, and panel members included six health care professionals who represented administrative, physician, insurance, academic, policy and business community viewpoints.

Visiting political science professor Robert Stubbings said, "From a policy standpoint, there is a health care crisis."

Dr. Eugene Dabezies, professor and chairman of orthopedic surgery at the Tech School of Medicine, said the issue is not health care, but how care is distributed.

"Polls show that 95 percent of the people are happy with health care," he said. "The issue of health care is resolved. In the last national election, we decided we should have universal health care coverage."

"The issue now is how to implement it," Dabezies said.

Stubbings said the only viable plan still alive in Congress is the single-payer plan.

According to the plan, "the government takes over insurance," he said.

Elizabeth Ashmore, a representative from a local insurance agency, said she cannot honestly say how health care in five years will look, but said the future of medium-sized and large insurance companies is questionable.

She said the key in today's health care system is getting a choice about a doctor or other provider.

"The bottom line is the individual has the choice," Ashmore said.

Money also was a key issue in the forum.

"The premium rates have gone up substantially higher than incomes have in the last few years," Ashmore said.

"Insurance is a financing mechanism," she said. "When you don't practice good actuarial principles, things are going to fall apart."

Dabezies said, "Health care rates are up, and that's not bad because you get higher quality."

Most of the panel members said they believe the Clinton plan is legislatively dead because it is a management competition plan, but they said they believe there are still plans alive in Congress.

Diversity topic of roundtable

Task Force solicits input about Tech's admissions standards

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Admission guidelines for rural and non-traditional students was one of the topics addressed Thursday at the Human Relations Task Force roundtable discussion.

Members of the task force and student leaders met to exchange ideas about ways to improve the university and increase interaction between student organizations.

Students discussed the possibility that admission guidelines for rural and non-traditional students may be unfair.

Individuals from rural communities tend to have smaller class sizes, which may mean that a student has a good grade point average, but can still be in the bottom of the class percentage.

"The admission standards for most schools nationwide is decreasing and that is something that Tech needs to consider," said David Childree, a representative of the Sneed/Bledsoe Complex Counsel. "Using a broader outlook of the student's record would increase diversity."

Task force members decided to find more information about admission standards and the possibility of increasing flexibility of the guidelines to include work experience, and to have further discussions about possible action.

The roundtable discussion also included information about the lack of information for new students about what organizations and services are available on campus.

Donna Anderson, a member of the human relations task force, said that in the past there have been open houses and activity fairs at Texas Tech's University Center. Because of a lack of student interest and loss of funding, the events were canceled.

Possible changes in freshman and new student orientation activities and a new combined effort between student organizations on campus to expand University Day will be discussed at the next meeting.

Anderson said she believes the Human Relations Task Force will be able to initiate more changes

This gives students the opportunity to talk to each other about the problems they have. Maybe together we can solve those problems.

Jesus Sanchez
Task Force member

this semester.

"This semester I am pleased with what we are doing," she said. "We are trying to be outcome oriented and not just talk, but act."

Jesus Sanchez, a task force member, said he believes it is important for student leaders to come together to interact and learn about different organizations and problems that exist on campus.

"This gives students the opportunity to talk to each other about the problems they have," he said. "Maybe together we can solve those problems."

Tod Grice, a task force member, said the meetings allow students direct input into problems at Tech.

"This is an avenue for students to express how they feel," he said. "If they want to help make change, they can join the task force meetings to have direct input."

Engineers discuss professional ethics

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A panel of Texas Tech faculty members met Thursday night to convince engineering students that ethical questions are not solely reserved for political science or philosophy departments.

"In engineering almost everything we do is going to have some risks and some benefits," said Jimmy Smith, director of the Murdough Center for Engineering Professionalism. "The choice between good and evil is easy, it's the competing goods that are difficult."

Ethics are rarely taught and when they are, they are taught from an academic and philosophical basis, said Patrick Day, coordinator of Tech's Multicultural Services Center.

"As you move along things begin to get grayer and grayer, the best decisions to make are often unclear," Day said. "It becomes an issue of looking inside your guts."

"It almost has to be on the job training," he said.

Assistant professor of electrical engineering Mary Baker said many of these ethics were developed in childhood and will be constantly revised.

"We have to value test a lot of things we learned in childhood," she said. "My sense of ethics has changed and continues to change with new experiences."

Day said students will have to consider the kind of work setting they are planning to enter.

"Understand the nature of the industry or corporation where you plan on spending most of your time," he said. "Look into the history of the corporation and understand what kind of things nationally and politically affect the business."

"Then you can better understand what kinds of things you may be called on to make decisions about," he said. "Think quite seriously whether that is a situation you want to be part of."

Smith said that in workshops for industry personnel and for faculty members, he asks what they want as far as ethics are concerned.

He said the most common answer is that they would like future engineers to be comfortable in discussing ethical matters.

"No company worth its salt should intrude on your personal right to make your own decision on an ethical issue," he said.

Gwen Sorell, associate professor and coordinator of Women's Studies, spoke about a specific ethical issue — sexual harassment.

"It is a matter of legality, personal ethics and what you are expected to do within a job," she said. "Sex doesn't have any business in the classroom or in the work place."

Sorell said 52 to 85 percent of American women will experience some sort of sexual harassment during their academic or professional lives.

The most common age group of sexually harassed women is between 18 and 24 years old, she said.

"It's not just a case of sex, it's a case of power," she said. "Women engineers run a relatively high risk of being sexually harassed because they are women in a traditionally male-dominated field."

Mark Tanner, a graduate electrical engineering student, said some of the people associated with ethical issues are inappropriate.

"The people that are bestowing all these ethical issues with lawsuits and legislation are often not very good spokespeople," Tanner said. "Have you looked at our government or law in general?"

"If you watch TV, you don't see ethical behavior being presented as a standard," he said. "If somebody is not killing somebody, it's a boring afternoon on the television."

Jackson to pursue country music career

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - LaToya Jackson sang pop in Paris at the Moulin Rouge. Now she's turning her attention to American country music.

"She will be the new country western heartthrob," her husband and manager Jack Gordon predicted Thursday.

Jackson is not signed to a recording contract, but she is recording a country album this week. It will include a duet with Lee Greenwood titled "It's What You Don't Say That Says It All."

Gordon described the album material as "very up, very country, very Garth Brooks-like." Jackson previously released two pop albums in Europe.

Raiders-Bears to start series Saturday

Tech tries to stay on roll in second SWC tilt

by TARA HEARLIHY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech baseball team will travel to Waco to take on its second Southwest Conference team, but the series against Baylor will begin one day late.

Because of rain, today's game, scheduled for 7 p.m. at Ferrell Field in Waco, was canceled and the series will begin Saturday.

The Raiders will test their second-place standing in the SWC in a doubleheader beginning at 4 p.m. Saturday. Sunday's single game time has not been determined. Tech is 25-8 on the season and has a 2-1 SWC mark.

The Bears have not played a SWC game yet and have a 16-12 record.

"The key to Baylor is their ball club fits their ball park," Tech head coach Larry Hays said. "They are an offensive team that uses the hit and run. They do a good job hitting the other way. They have power pitchers who use the fastball and slider."

"Hopefully, the homefield advantage will not be a problem for us," shortstop Saul Bustos said. "They have a grass field and are used to it. Hopefully it will not be a problem. We had quite a few games over spring break in the dirt. They will be tough, close games. We will have to battle until the finish."

One concern the Raiders have is if Bustos will be fully healthy after being hit by a pitch in the elbow Wednesday.

Hays said he did not expect the injury to be serious.

"Having the lineup stay healthy is a key for us," Hays said. "We have to be able to play well."

The Raiders have a couple of players who have been productive at the plate.

Second baseman Jason Totman leads the Raiders with a .450 batting average and is in third on the team with 36 hits despite missing 11 games due to injury.

Designated hitter Brandon Welch is in second place with a .442 batting average and leads the team with 33 RBI and has six home runs. He also has one grand slam.

First baseman Randy DuRoss has hit three home runs in the past two games and has six for the season. In the past two years, DuRoss had a total of three home runs. He is hitting .321 on the season.

Tech's starting pitching squad has become set with Ryan Nye in the lead spot, with Jason Whittle and Travis Smith following.

Nye has a 1.25 ERA and a 7-1 season record. He is leading the pitching staff with 67 strikeouts. Whittle (6-2) follows with 63 strikeouts and a 1.60 ERA while Smith is 5-0 with a 2.03 ERA.

"We have three solid starters," Hays said. "Eric Newman is knocking on the door and that is a good feeling. We need good pitching. We will need four starters next week when we play Oklahoma and Wichita State."

Men's tennis team to host Mustangs in second conference match

After spending spring break in Boise, Idaho, the Texas Tech men's tennis team plays host to Southern Methodist at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the Athletic Training Center.

The Raiders have a 9-6 season record after defeating Idaho State and Cal-Santa Barbara over the break, with the only loss coming to Boise State.

Tech is 0-2 in the Southwest Conference after losing to Texas Christian and Texas.

"We had a great road trip," Tech head coach Tim Siegel said. "We beat two top 50 schools and we are now ranked 46th in the nation ourselves."

SMU is 11-6 for the season and 0-1 in the SWC. The Mustangs lost to Baylor 4-3 Tuesday.

"The SMU match is the start of our goal to finish third in the conference," Siegel said. "That is my intention for us as well as we are playing."

Tracksters set for home appearance at Fuller Track

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech track teams will host the Whisperwood Bank/Dr Pepper Classic Saturday at Tech's R.P. Fuller Track.

The meet will mark the only home appearance for the Runnin' Raiders in their outdoor season.

The Red Raiders will run against New Mexico State in Division I competition in a dual meet. Other teams competing in the college division include Lubbock Christian, Wayland Baptist, South Plains College, West Texas A&M, New Mexico Military Institute, Odessa Junior College, Ranger and Sul Ross State.

Field events will start at 10 a.m., while the running events will start at 11:35 a.m.

"New Mexico State has a strong team," said women's coach Liz Parke. "It's not a really big field, but it will be competitive."

All-Americans Tim James and Tabitha Polk will highlight the two Raider squads in the pole vault and shot put, respectively, this week.

"Tim's going to try for the NCAA qualifying standard of 18-1 1/2 this week," said men's coach "Corky" Oglesby. "It's going to be tough, but I think he has the potential to do it."

According to Oglesby, the loss of Brent Schott and Keith Black due to knee injuries decimates his mile relay team. The Raiders are looking to their 400-meter relay team to make a solid contribution.

"We're going to concentrate on that the rest of the season," he said. "We just don't have the guys to run a good mile relay now."

The 400-meter relay team will consist of Dion Miller, Jeff Johnson, Gerrod Bergen and Derrell "Mookie" Mitchell.

The distance crop on both squads is solid, with Ralph Ayyad, Don Koontz, Gabe Ruiz and Bill Bush expected to run well.

On the women's side, Mandy Malouf and Luisa Tam head up the distance group.

Also expected to do well is long jumper Ginger Gilchrist, who has shown steady improvement this season.

"When it comes to crunch time, Ginger will produce for us," Parke said.

Two SWC opponents await women netters

The Texas Tech women's tennis team will put its 1-2 Southwest Conference record on the line against Baylor at 1:30 p.m. today.

The Red Raiders will also face Texas at noon Saturday in Austin.

The Raiders have a 14-6 overall record and plan on using the same lineup they have used this season with Jennifer Brennan leading Tech in the No. 1 seed in singles with Lynne Jackson, Christy Davis, Sheri Gilreath, Debbie Biswell and Erika Fisher following.

In doubles, Brennan and Jackson pair up for No. 1 competition. Davis and Renna Rhodes are in the second spot with Gilreath and Fisher in third.

"Baylor is a good team," Tech head coach Kathy Vick said. "They are solid down the lineup. They have not played many conference matches so we don't know a lot of results. We are looking forward to the challenge."

Texas is one of the better teams in the country, Vick said, and could give Tech problems.

"Talk about a challenge," Vick said. "I hope we can compete well. We'll see what happens, but we have to be tough. They are awesome."

The last time the Raiders won two conference matches in women's tennis was in 1988.

Houston's Maxwell avoids long-term jail sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets guard Vernon Maxwell went one-on-one with a Barkley on Thursday and came out $1,500 lighter.

This Barkley is no NBA superstar, but rather Harris County Criminal Court-at-Law Judge Jim Barkley, who slapped Maxwell with the fine after the player pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of illegally carrying a gun in his car.

Maxwell, a starting guard for Midwest Division-leading Houston, also was sentenced to four days in jail but Barkley gave him credit for two days of jail time served earlier this month when Maxwell was arrested and held for about six hours.

As part of a plea bargain, the remaining two days were waived and Maxwell was required to publicly state that he was wrong to have a gun in his 1993 purple Porsche.

"I'm a role model and it was wrong of me to be carrying a gun," he told reporters later. "But like I said, and I still stand by it, I was trying to protect myself if anything happened."

"But for kids sake, you shouldn't carry guns. It's not right. It's against the law."

Maxwell, 28, was arrested March 15 following an incident that led to the discovery of the handgun in his car. He could have received up to $3,000 in fines and a year in jail.

"I think it's fair and reasonable," Maxwell's attorney, Jeffrey Newport, said.

Assistant District Attorney Lyn McClellan said he had no comment on Thursday's actions.

Maxwell appeared in court with Newport and a woman the attorney identified as the player's business manager, Traci Decrosta.

Maxwell, wearing a dark suit, multi-colored vest and a white T-shirt, chatted and laughed with Decrosta while waiting for the judge to call him to the bench. Once before the judge, his demeanor was much more contrite than his appearance following his arrest, when he glared and grumbled at the police officer who arrested him.

The incident occurred in traffic outside a cafeteria near The Summit, where the Rockets play. A motorist complained to police that someone driving a car matching the description of Maxwell's Porsche waved a gun at him after he honked his horn at the car. Houston police said they confiscated a .380 semiautomatic pistol from the front seat of his car.

It was Maxwell's third run-in with the law in the past 20 months. He was arrested last summer for arguing with an off-duty police officer who was working as a security guard at a Houston nightclub. Patrons said he tried to enter the nightclub ahead of them as they stood in line.

Border Olympics next event for men's golf team

The Texas Tech men's golf team will take on five Southwest Conference teams at the Border Olympics in Laredo this weekend.

The Red Raiders are coming off a ninth-place finish at the Louisiana Classic. The Olympics will be 54 holes beginning with two rounds Saturday. The third and final round will be played Sunday.

Tech will take on Texas A&M, Houston, Baylor, Rice and Southern Methodist. The Raiders are ranked No. 9 in the latest District VI rankings.

"I personally feel, and the team feels, that we are as good as any team in the event and we are better than a lot of them," coach Tommy Wilson said.
