Military action being considered in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—The government and ANC laid the ground work Tuesday for sending troops to the volatile Zulu-dominated Natal province if a peace summit fails to quell political violence.

Tensions showed no sign of subsiding a day after 53 people died in fierce clashes in and around Johannesburg triggered by a Zulu march protesting South Africa's first all-race election.

Unidentified gunmen fired at the African National Congress headquarters, where ANC security guards killed nine Zulu protesters Monday. No one was injured in Tuesday's shootout, but the clash underscored the volatile situation before the April 26-28 election, which is expected to bring the ANC to power.

Cowboys' Johnson resigns Tuesday

IRVING (AP) — Jimmy Johnson severed his tempestuous five-year relationship with Jerry Jones today, leaving the Dallas Cowboys and a chance to win an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl.

"After our discussions, we have mutually decided that I would no longer be the head football coach of the Dallas Cowboys," Johnson said, sitting to the right of Jones at the Cowboys' Valley Ranch headquarters after two days of meetings.

"Personally, it was a time I felt like I needed to pull back some," Johnson said. "I felt I had to be 100 percent totally focused, or I'm not going to be into it like I need to be. I felt like I was beginning to lose that focus, and because of that I'm no longer coach of the Dallas Cowboys."

The Cowboys already have lost defensive end Jimmie Jones, guard-center John Gesek and placekicker Eddie Murray. "I'm very surprised," said Larry Lacey, the team's scouting director. "I thought they had it worked out. But maybe Jimmy decided he didn't want to go another five years."

For Jones, it was a matter of coming full circle.

When he bought the team, he immediately fired Landry, the only coach the Cowboys had ever had. That earned him the wrath of fans in Dallas and across the nation who had adopted "America's Team."

It continued through the 1989 season when the Cowboys finished 1-15 as Johnson tossed out old parts and brought in new ones.

It worked. The next year, the team improved to 7-9 and might have made the playoffs had not Troy Aikman been injured in the next-to-last game.

In 1991, they were 11-5 and made the playoffs and the next year, they went all the way, finishing 13-3 in the regular season and swamping Buffalo 59-17. Then they repeated this year, again against Buffalo.

Suit filed against former staff member

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A Texas Tech student filed a lawsuit against former Associate Dean of Students Joshua Mora Tuesday, alleging sexual misconduct in the capacity of Mora's former position at Tech.

The student filed the petition under a pseudonym in the 364th District Court of Lubbock County.

"Given that no name was stated, the complaint doesn't have credibility to me," Mora said. "I can't believe that this person doesn't have the guts to say his name."

The plaintiff's lawsuit was filed by Dunn and Walker Attorneys at Law, a local law firm.

Mora said he had no knowledge of the lawsuit until he was approached by The University Daily, and said he has not made plans to contact a lawyer.

"All of this has been a surprise to me," he said.

I still to this day do not know why I was dismissed.

Mora was fired from his position as associate dean of students in February, within a year of being named an outstanding faculty member for his work as a Spanish professor.

"I still to this day do not know why I was dismissed," he said.

Mora said he was escorted out of the Dean of Students Office by University Police Department officials.

"I was watched as I gathered my things, escorted out of the office and escorted off campus," he said. "I was told I was not being charged with criminal trespassing, but (police captain) Eddie Huckabee proceeded to escort me off campus."

Attorney Charles Dunn, who is representing the plaintiff, said the state of Texas is liable for possible damages.

"It is similar to an insurance policy," he said. "It's like if you wreck your car, it is your insurance company that actually pays the money."

Dunn said the maximum amount that could be collected in damages from the state is $100,000. "We plan to seek money over

Sites, funding center of arena proposals

by NY LYNN NICHOLS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The possibility of building a multipurpose arena in Lubbock is infiltrating city discussions, and Texas Tech leaders and officials have various opinions and concerns.

The Multipurpose Arena Task Force suggested that residents vote on a half-cent sales tax to fund a new arena. But no one has agreed upon a site if a tax was approved.

"The location talk is good, but it's sort of putting the cart before the horse," said Zach Brady, Student Association external vice president. "We're going to have to pass a half-cent sales tax first."

Tech Assistant Athletic Director and former men's basketball coach Gerald Myers said a new arena would be in Tech's best interest because excessive activity has worn the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum down.

"One of the things that hurts the coliseum is the overall activity in it," Myers said. "When you have rodeos, tractor pulls and other things, and you have new recruits, that doesn't make a good impression."

Tech head men's basketball coach James Dickey said that, although a new facility in particular locations would be nice for Tech, the focus should be on how the citizens are affected.

"Does it meet the needs of the community—that's the first question," he said.

"It does. From a selfish standpoint, we'd like to see (the arena) close to Texas Tech, but it's up to the voters."

"I do think there is a need. It would be great, not only for Texas Tech, but for Lubbock and West Texas," Dickey said.

The Big Eight merger also has caused people to support a new arena.

"As Tech is now entering a large conference, we have to show those other schools that Texas Tech is serious," former Tech Athletic Director T. Jones said. "This could mean a lot to Texas Tech and the whole area."

Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said the community and Tech should be considering the issue now.

"The longer we wait, the more expensive it gets," he said. "We have to plan for the future. I think it is something that is important and can be done."

Myers said that because other cities and universities have improved their facilities, a new arena for Lubbock should be considered. "(The Coliseum) is outdated for its time," he said.

The Task Force recommended to city council members the site between Jones Stadium and the coliseum as the first choice for the arena, but some council members seem to favor the South Plains Fairgrounds site.

Brady said he would like to see another site chosen besides Tech's commuter parking lot.

"I would hope that (the arena) not show up on the parking lot between (the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium and Jones Stadium)," he said. "Overton is one of the most appropriate sites to me. The problem is you're talking about a lot of individual land acquisition."

Jones said another viable location is the corner of Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue.

The City Council postponed renovations to the coliseum because of the possibility of a new arena.

Navy, Air Force pilots trading places

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Although Lubbock is more than 500 miles from the nearest ocean, officers from the Navy, Coast Guard and Marines will now be training in the Hub City.

For the first time in U.S. history, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard pilots will train together.

"Joint training is something I think you're going to see a lot of as the military gets smaller," said Col. Roger A. Brady, USAF Commander.

"If we learn to train better together, we will learn to fight better together should that become necessary," he said. "Jointness is the wave of the future."

Personnel from Reese AFB and Whiting Field Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., began working together in October.

Since then, eight instructors from the sea services have completed the Air Force's Pilot Instructor Training Program at Randolph AFB in San Antonio. They have now returned to Reese to begin teaching new military students how to fly.

Although the pilots say they enjoyed working together, there are a few problems the program is having to overcome.

The main problem the pilots say they are having to face is the difference in technical jargon.

"It's like if you're from the South, you call it a Coke and if you're from the North, it's a soda," Brady said.

Capt. Joseph A. Isaac of the Marine Corps says the joint program offers professional growth as a pilot.

"We're learning a new plane and a new way of doing business," Isaac said.

"The biggest problem we're having to face is that we're saying the same thing but in a different language."

Although the terminology is different, Cmdr. John Hollyer said one thing the pilots have in common is they are trained to fly safe, fly looking out their windows and fly using their instruments.

"The opportunity to start learning how to train together is a big plus for us," Hollyer said. "It's a chance to work out problems before new planes are received."

The Air Force's T-37 and the Navy's T-34, both basic pilot training aircraft, will be replaced over the next seven years with a single replacement for both branches.

The Joint Primary Aircraft Training System (JPATS) aircraft will help reduce aircraft acquisition costs. The branches anticipate they will purchase more than 700 aircraft and operation and instrument simulator flight trainers, as well as other training equipment.

Now, the services are working toward a joint squadron with about 30 instructor pilots from the Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps and 30 from the Air Force. By 1998, those instructor pilots will be training about 100 students each year in the squadrons.

"We can only get better by working together," Hollyer said. "When two groups get together, they tend to take the best of both worlds."

Summer, fall University Daily editors selected

Sports, news editors to take helm

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Student Publications Committee chose University Daily veterans to take charge of the student newspaper during the summer and fall semesters.

Sports editor Len Hayward will serve as editor during the summer, and news editor Kristie Davis will serve during the fall.

Hayward, a senior journalism major from Hillsboro, began working for The UD during the 1991 spring semester and became sports editor during the 1992 spring semester. Hayward also served as managing editor of last summer's UD.

He said he does not plan any major changes for the newspaper, and said the summer paper is printed twice a week in a tabloid format.

"It's important to keep up and try to put out a good paper because stuff is still going on in the summer," he said. "And our job is to inform the students about what's going on."

Davis is a senior journalism and English major from Pasadena. She began working for The UD during the 1991 fall semester as a librarian. She was a news reporter during the 1992-93 year, and has served as news editor since the 1993 fall semester.

"It's our job to give Tech students timely and fair coverage about events that affect or influence Tech students," she said.

Davis said that, as fall editor, she would like to make some changes to content on the opinion page.

"I want to have a paid staff of column writers so that I'm guaranteed local copy on the opinion page several times a week," she said. "I'd also like to have more full pages of in-depth, enterprising news features."

Davis said she hopes to hire a staff for next year that is as talented as this year's staff.

"I think we had a quality staff this year, probably the strongest overall staff that we've had in a long time," she said. "I hope to do just as good a job hiring reporters as (editor) Kendra Casey did."

Tech Talks

What do you think about the new multipurpose arena?

Jennifer Spencer
a junior nursing major from El Paso.

"I think it should be built to bring more events to Lubbock. It shouldn't be built on campus because it will take away from what is already going on."

Jenny Moss
a sophomore interior design major from Leveland.

"I think it is a good idea and that they should reconsider where they build it because of parking. It should be built on Fourth and Indiana."

Stella Vidlak
a senior biology major from Big Spring.

"I think Lubbock needs more entertainment locations. It should be built on campus where people already spend a lot of time."

Kerry Hansen
a junior pre-occupational therapy major from Midland.

"I think it is a great idea. It should be built on campus close to the stadium because there is already parking."

Doug Shepherd
a senior communications major from Dallas.

"I think it is high time we had something around here people can enjoy going to. It is needed and we might as well keep in step with other schools. They should make it close to campus."

THE BEEF ON THE FIVE-DAY WAITING PERIOD

To the editor:

This is in response to the question raised by Jason Austin in his letter to the editor. Jason asked "Why the fuss over a five-day waiting period?" Jason, like many other Americans, can't see what this bit of legislative action really means to all of us.

The best way to convey this conception is to look at it from a different perspective. Take the first amendment for example. What if the government required a five-day waiting period and a background check before you went to church or spoke before a crowd or wrote a letter to the editor of The UD.

This may be a little ridiculous but it would be no more an infringement on your rights than the Brady Bill is to law abiding citizens. The facts are that I and every other law-abiding citizen have the right to have a gun as this or any other paper has to be printed. If it were not for our rights, what kind of country would this be?

Another thing wrong with the entire concept of an action like the Brady Bill is something that you have heard time and time again.

A waiting period will not keep guns out of the hands of criminals. Believe it or not, no matter how many laws or taxes passed, criminals will always have guns.

This so-called great legislative way to reduce violence is in another aspect helping crime in all forms out by having an adverse affect on our own law enforcement officers. Anyone who has turned on the news lately knows what I'm talking about. Police departments around the state and country are being bogged down in the paperwork required for the Brady Bill.

Officers that should be out protecting our families are instead sitting behind mounds of paperwork that will supposedly save us all from violence. Another downfall of this particular aspect is that with so much paperwork, some criminals are sure to slip through the system and be able to buy a handgun.

The final and most terrifying aspect of this whole business is that the anti-gunners see the Brady Bill as only the first step to taking our Second Amendment rights.

A list of bills too numerous to even begin to name are up before Congress right now. If the anti-gunners get their way, the United States will be made up of defenseless peasants subjected to a government that will take your rights at the drop of a hat.

There is one organization (though criticized by the politically correct) that is standing up for your rights. You can do something about the massive political machine that chews up and spits out your rights by supporting the National Rifle Association (1-800-672-3888). This topic should not only concern sportsmen and gun owners but every American that cares about rights.

After all, what kind of country would this be without rights?

Public and private: Victim and Valkyrie

ANNA QUINDLEN
When the elevator door was finally opened it looked as though a bottle of cranberry juice had broken, on the walls, the floor, a scream of red. But it was blood. Blood where he slit her throat, blood where he broke her jaw, blood where he knocked out her front teeth.

It was only after he had done all that that he told her to take off her clothes.

He's still out there somewhere, the man who brutally beat a 23-year-old woman visiting New York from Eastern Europe, a woman who had come to live for a year with her sister, an actress, to study English.

He is tall, perhaps 6 feet 2 inches, a black man with high cheekbones, a widow's peak and almond eyes. He was very smooth when he entered the building in upper Manhattan not far from the field where the Columbia team plays football. He made small talk in the lobby, pleasant and unthreatening, so she got into the elevator with him.

And then.

A neighbor caught a glimpse of the man as he was fleeing; from that and from the woman's description, he believes he saw the same man in the apartment building some weeks after the January assault, in the laundry room with a solitary woman.

Early this month a paroled rapist was charged with the sexual assaults of four young girls in public housing projects in East Harlem and the Lower East Side. The serial rapist, who has been working the Stuyvesant Town area in Manhattan, hasn't been caught yet.

Last week Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala gave a speech in which she said domestic violence was the leading cause of injury to women in America. Four women serving in the military testified before a House committee that reporting sexual harassment more often hurt their careers than those of the men who'd harassed them.

There has begun a backlash against feminism, a backlash that teaches that there has been too much emphasis on the belief, bad for women and men alike, that to be a woman is to be beleaguered and under attack.

Those who deride what has been labeled victim feminism insist that the point of the women's movement is to make women feel powerful, strong, in control of their own lives, and not to cast men as the enemy.

With this goal no one can disagree. But such Valkyrie feminism coexists uneasily with the facts of our lives, lives in which their scars are the price some women pay for being female.

Rape was the only serious type of violent crime that went up in New York City last year. Roughly one in four women seen in America's hospital emergency rooms has been injured by a husband or boyfriend.

In Runner's World magazine this month a woman wrote an essay about her new-found ability to run after dark. She'd taken back the night by taking in a large dog and taking him with her when she ran.

"I finally know what it's like to be 6-2 with a voice like John Wayne and the bravado to match," Victoria Brehm writes exultantly. What she requires to feel that is not inner strength, but the gender equivalent of a guide dog, as though being a woman is a physical handicap.

The challenge lies somewhere between victim and Valkyrie, in growing in strength and sureness despite the dangers, of not living with paranoia even though someone may be out to get you. But no one should ever discount the reason women can so easily see themselves as victims. It is because, by any statistical measure, they so often are.

The sister of the assault victim is greatly shaken by the aftermath of the crime. In the beginning the police were conscientious about investigating the assault, which might also have been a rape had the attacker not been interrupted. But as time went by the victim's sister said she felt that that was changing.

The man who chatted up, then beat and cut her sister did his considerable damage in under 10 minutes. Who knows what he may accomplish if next time he has a little more leisure? Who wonders at the woman in that neighborhood who thinks of herself, day and night, as a potential victim? Or any woman hearing her story? Or any woman?

Combest meets with farmers, discusses insurance

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

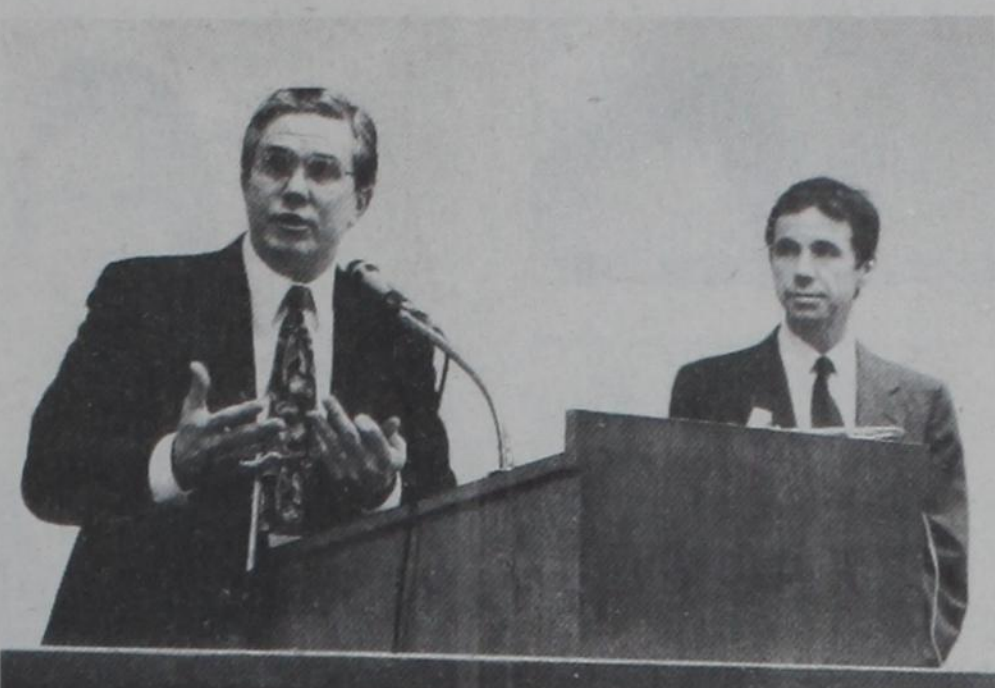

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, was in Lubbock Tuesday for a public hearing with South Plains farmers to discuss changes to the federal crop insurance program.

Combest and Federal Crop Insurance Corporation National Manager Ken Ackerman discussed the Federal Crop Insurance Reform Act of 1994, and asked for opinions and input from local farmers.

The Federal Crop Insurance Reform Act of 1994 will combine disaster aid and crop insurance into one program, and will provide farmers more reliable coverage on their crops, Ackerman said.

"It's a very serious program," he said. "We feel it's responsible, it's competitive."

Combest said, "Our part of the country has the biggest stake in these proposed changes providing catastrophic crop insurance coverage for all producers at a minimal fee. This meeting gives all of us the chance to comment on these new plans directly to the top manager of the Federal Crop Insurance program."

The program provides farmers with a catastrophic coverage level available to farmers for a processing fee of $50 per crop per county, up to $100 per farmer per county.

The crop insurance program would provide basic coverage for losses greater than 50 percent of the expected market price.

Farmers can purchase higher coverage levels of crop insurance from private companies as part of the new program, Ackerman said.

Several of the farmers at the public hearing questioned whether the $50 per crop per county processing fee would go toward the premium costs of crop insurance.

"The $50 per crop per county is a processing fee," Ackerman said. "It is not a premium payment. Yes, it is a cost. But, it is a certain cost."

Combest said the processing fee is a part of catastrophic crop insurance coverage that provides more security for farmers.

"In a good year when you don't have losses, the money is going to be there," Combest said. "It also says if you are the only farmer who loses his crop, you are still going to receive assistance."

Ackerman said he has to work to understand crop insurance coverage from a farmer's point of view because he is from New York.

"I don't have a farm background," Ackerman said. "I don't have a rural background. Basically, I have an East Coast/Washington background."

Architect shares insight about style

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

"Superman, Sex and the Architect's Ego" are the subjects of a lecture by architecture instructor Matthew Gallegos at 4:30 p.m. today in the Architecture Gallery of the Texas Tech architecture building.

"Before the 20th century, there were two styles of architecture — gothic and classical," Gallegos said. "Now for the first time, people have been willing to recognize individual architects for doing what they want to do."

"An architect can come up with his own vision of reality and people build it," he said.

Gallegos said that as a result of the individual architecture, there often is no connection or consistency between each architect's work.

His lecture will concern how these architectural differences came about, and he will discuss three theorists, John Ruskin, Antonia Sant'Elia and Friedrich Nietzsche, and their influence on modern architects such as Frank Lloyd Wright, Mies Van der Rohe and Le Corbusier.

Superman, sex and egos refer to three aspects of the lecture.

"Nietzsche defines an architect as someone who guides society," Gallegos said. "That is the superman — each one of these architects is a superman, defining society."

Gallegos said the sex portion of the title refers to architect Hermann

Finsterlin and the work he does. "He uses the human viscera as the basis for developing architecture," he said. "The human model is the ultimate model for a building."

The architect's ego is the relationship between the architect and society, Gallegos said.

"He is directing society based on his own personal vision," he said. "Most architects today do that."

Gallegos said the lecture is open to anyone interested in artistic theory or in cultural history.

Fraternity loses charter

WACO (AP) — Alpha Tau Omega, which was booted off campus earlier in the year by Baylor University, was stripped of its charter by the fraternity's national office.

Wynn Smiley, a spokesman for the national office in Champaign, Ill., said the Baylor chapter subjected pledges to being yelled at, ridiculed and intimidated while they were standing in a "line-up."

Also, pledges were forced into "servitude," which included the cleaning of fraternity members' rooms, said Smiley.

He said fraternity members were placed on alumni status and would never again be active members of the fraternity.

Former pledges will be allowed to join other fraternities, Smiley said.

The national chapter closed the fraternity after Baylor decided to revoke its recognition of the group earlier this year, Smiley said.

Baylor senior Spencer Edwards, president of the local chapter, said the fraternity's problems were "blown completely out of proportion."

"We broke some minor rules. ... We don't feel like we should have lost our charter," Edwards said.

The band's latest album,

"siamese dream," went multi-platinum making the band a success overnight.

Band member Billy Corgan explains, "siamese dream's" unearthly spectrum of guitar tones: "I was trying to get the sound of things like coughing angels, the king and queen of the prom setting themselves on fire, high hopes being ripped down and fizzing out."

The Smashing Pumpkins' music is often described as alternative — layered, using a lot of heavy guitar.

"Their music is harmonious, using hard and soft dynamics, and they have smooth voices," said Rob Meadows, music director at KTX-T-FM 88.1.

Band members include: Billy Corgan (vocals and guitar), D'Arcy (bass and vocals), Jimmy Chamberlin (drums) and James Iha (guitar).

The band's debut album, "Gish," released in 1991 on the Caroline Records label, began the foundation for the group's commitment to the music realm.

"I came to terms with the fact that I could never be completely happy with the actual music," says Corgan. "So that's not what I was focusing on. I made the emotional commitment that I wanted to on this record, which is all I cared about."

Women's BSU Blue, Men's Rec All-Stars and Campus Community's Bad Assets were crowned All University Champions last Thursday in activities completed at the Student Recreation Center.

On the way to the finals, the women's semi-final games had Panhandle Clique losing to the Spurs, 54-32; and BSU Blue winning over Chi Omega, 50-45. Spurs' Carmen Brockman led all scorers with 16 points while Jill Mayfield of Panhandle Clique had 12 points. BSU Blues Melanie Ferguson was unstoppable as she scored 27 points while Elise Prather tossed in 17 points for Chi Omega.

The men's semi-final games saw Bomb Squad defeat Pike "B" 67-40; and Rec All-Stars turn around a first half nine-point deficit to get by a determined TSF Arsenal teams by a score of 64-56. Jabbar Thomas scored 14 points to pace Bomb Squad, while Ryan had 16 points for Pike "B." Brian Christiansen led TSF Arsenal with 12 points, while Sean Gravel propelled the Rec All-Stars to the win with 16 of his 18 points being scored in the second half.

The Campus Community Championship went down to the wire. Mike Jones' 26 points led Bad Assets to a win over Eat Your Lunch 71-69.

It was Carman Campagna's 15-foot jumper at the buzzer that sealed the win for Bad Assets. Larry Howard was high scorer for Eat Your Lunch with 30 points.

The women's final proved to be a low scoring affair. Melanie Ferguson scored 13 points for BSU Blue defeating The Spurs 41-22. Donna Grotegut led The Spurs with
