to host citizen workshop

by JAYSON BALES THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech Dean of Students Michael Shonrock will be a guest speaker Saturday at the Lubbock United Neighborhood Association's third annual neighborhood workshop for Hub City residents.

The workshop will be from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church, 1500 14th St., and it is open to the public free of charge.

Lubbock Neighborhood Coordinator Ross Crabtree said the purpose of the workshop is to provide networking opportunities for neighborhood associations and to teach citizens how to utilize city services.

The workshop will offer various information sessions about topics such as starting a neighborhood association, neighborhood crime prevention, neighborhood communications and accessing city services.

Lemuel Thuston, pastor of Alexander Chapel Church of God in Christ, will speak at the opening general session, and Shonrock will speak at the closing session.

Shonrock said he supports local neighborhoods and was excited about the invitation to speak at the workshop.

"My wife and I are part of a neighborhood association," Shonrock said. "We believe in

He said it is important for Tech to cooperate with the community in working with Lubbock neighborhoods.

"I think it is important to recognize that Texas Tech is like a neighborhood," he said. "My sense is the neighborhood associations are very open to working with the university and working with Tech students."

Crabtree said Tech is one of Lubbock's biggest assets, and said it is important to work with the university. "We would like to build a stronger partnership between the student body and the city," he said.

Although this is his first time to coordinate a LUNA workshop, previous workshops apparently were successful, Crabtree said.

"They have grown every year, from what I understand," he said. "I believe last year they had about 175 people there. This year we have got more neighborhood associations than ever."

Gorazde attacks NATO credibility

United States and its allies have shown some courage ANTHONY and resolve in BOSTON -

At long last the

LEWIS the face of brazen Serbian aggression. The air strikes on Serbian forces attacking Gorazde are late, far too late.

But they could mark an end to the bewildering policy of weakness that followed the Sarajevo ultimatum at the end of February.

Few acts of foreign policy have been as dramatically successful as the U.S.-inspired NATO ultimatum to the besieging Serbs to stop shelling Sarajevo. The guns were silenced, and a terrorized city returned to something like normal life.

Success in Sarajevo demonstrated what critics have been saying: that the Serbian aggressors would yield to credible threats of force.

But instead of building on that lesson to stop terror elsewhere in Bosnia, the Clinton administration waffled. The Serbs, emboldened, resumed their killing.

Defense Secretary William Perry made himself the spokesman for weakness. When the Serbs shelled Maglaj in northwest Bosnia, he said that "close-combat fighting" there and elsewhere was "difficult to influence with the use of air power."

Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, echoed that by saying that conditions around Sarajevo "lent themselves to the application of air power," but they did not "in any other places in Bosnia today."

Those comments took an amazingly constricted view of air power.

A main argument for its use has been: to make the Serbs understand that if they go on killing and terrorizing people, they will feel some punishment themselves.

Perry's hand-washing gesture on Gorazde was a virtual invitation to the Serbs to intensify their attacks, and so they did.

In the face of the merciless shelling and siege of Maglaj, NATO should have said something like this to the Bosnian Serb military commander, Ratko Mladic:

"For every shell that falls on Maglaj, 10 bombs will be dropped on your military headquarters in Pale. Every time you block relief supplies, we will knock out one of your fuel or munitions dumps."

Last week, as the Serbs mounted a major artillery and ground attack on the enclave of Gorazde in eastern Bosnia, Perry was asked on NBC's "Meet the Press" what he would do to keep the city from being captured. He answered: "We will not enter the war to stop that from happening."

The attack on Gorazde was, Gorazde." and is, an especially blatant challenge to the credibility of NATO and the United Na-

For last year the U.N. Security Council designated Gorazde as one of six "safe areas" that would be protected by "all necessary means, including the use of force."

Perry's hand-washing gesture on Gorazde was a virtual invitation to the Serbs to intensify their attacks, and so they did.

On Thursday of last week the administration changed its tack. President Clinton's national security adviser, Anthony Lake, made a serious speech about Bosnia.

"America cannot afford to ignore conflicts in Europe," Lake said. The Serbs had plunged Bosnia into "a dark night of terror," conducting "brutal sieges and ethnic cleansing."

Today the war there "presents a clear challenge: to NATO's credibility and to our very vision of a post-Cold-War Europe."

Lake said "we must make clear to Serbia and to the Serbs of Bosnia that the costs of continued intransigence are high." And he said neither Clinton nor his senior advisers — Perry's remarks notwithstanding — had ruled out "the use of NATO power to help stop attacks such as those against Gorazde."

Strong words. But words alone have never persuaded Mladic or the other Bosnian Serb aggressors to desist.

They went ahead with a massive assault designed, as Gen. Vlado Spremo said, to "occupy the entire region of

It was when the situation was desperate for the defenders of Gorazde that the U.N. command called for NATO air strikes.

The first were on local targets: Serbian tanks shelling the city.

If the Serbs do not withdraw at once, the next should be on strategic targets.

Now we shall see whether the American wavering is over: the wavering of the last seven weeks, of the year before that and of the year before that under President George Bush.

Clinton will have the country's support if at long last he sets us on a clear, consistent, credible course of action to stop Serbian aggression and terror.

Oh, golly. Where should I start? Well I'll start with the least explosive opinion, Carl Tepper's. Let's face it people, when you start listening to Carl Tepper's opinions, you're asking to be offended. Isn't this the same man who has written several articles designed to incite contro-

I could be wrong on this, but wasn't he the one who started a series of articles about how tortilla tossing was offensive to the Hispanic community?*

I'm telling you, when the opinions get dull, they turn to Carl Tepper to liven people up. So get used to it, people. When you see that face and the name under it, don't take the article seriously. You only look stupid when you respond to his stupidity.

Now for a little more explosive opinion. Mr. Lewis, your letter regarding Kurt Cobain's suicide was very well written and thought out. I say that because it is the exception for the letters sent to The UD.

However, I disagree with you on one point. If you were to find a 17 year old in a mental institution, one that fit all your criteria, and you were to ask him what kind of music he listened to, he would say Nirvana.

Nirvana is one of the front line of a new type of music. This music centered around depression, chaos, uncertainty, anger and resentment. There are people who recognize the message, and disagree with it. These people pity the listeners and have difficulty accepting the "artists" who make this music. When one of the artists dies by his own hand, these people use him as an example.

These are people who would do anything that tendency toward or actual exercise of strong can wake up the listeners. These people point out the drug addiction (poor Kurt - don't you know they tied him down and gave him drugs until he was addicted.), they point out his achievements (after all, the album "In Utero" was an amazing piece of art which brought people of all cultures together.)

These people, the ones who point out the truth, are called Society and they labeled us as

LOVE THE SINNER, NOT THE SIN

To the editor:

Recently, one of the editorials was an impassioned argument for our acceptance of the gay lifestyle. Because the writer is well-known and widely respected and has couched her plea in terms of love versus hate, in light of reality and inevitability, readers might find themselves hard pressed to refute her.

But just because something is inevitable does not make it right.

Yes, we have friends and loved ones who are gay. Homosexuals live among us and have for a millennia. So have liars, cheats, slanderers, adulterers, fornicators, drunks, gluttons, thieves and murderers.

Most will agree that these people, nice or nasty, likeable or not, are guilty of wrong behavior.

Most will agree that these people are us. How to explain the paradox? We are human, made in the image of God, creative, sentient, thinking beings. We discern the difference between right and wrong (ask yourself; you know), and exercise a free will. But all of us fall short of perfection. We blow it.

That is the human condition.

So should we excuse ourselves? Should we try to justify or glorify our wrong-doing in order to gain acceptance from others?

Of course not. Wrong is still wrong. We should renounce it in ourselves and in others. Anna Quindlen seems to be a likeable person, but she is confused and has gotten only a part of her story straight. Yes, we are to reject hatred. Yes, we are to love one another, to "love the sinner," so to speak.

But love the sin?

No.

We cannot be expected to embrace wrong actions as right, no matter how common those actions become in our society. To do so would be to cast ourselves adrift in a sea of moral irrelevance that is already teeming with such detritus as bicycle thieves that shoot their pursuers in the head and mayoral candidates that run prostitution rings.

We, as individuals, must learn to govern our personal passions, to master our short-term desires, to live right and to uphold righteousness as a standard for others to aspire to. We are to exercise our self control if we harbor any hope of our government and our society doing the same.

Debbie Walkup

Hypocritical bigotry

To the editor:

Recently, Michael Wilson Young wrote a letter to the editor complaining about the lack of real controversy in The UD.

I am taking the bait.

I believe Mr. Young's letter smacks of what I call "hippie-fascism."

One of the definitions of fascism offered in the Webster's Ninth Collegiate Dictionary is: a autocratic or dictatorial control. At first glance, my accusation may seem quite a stretch because we are so accustomed to "hippie-fascism," which has become the bigotry of the '90s, e.g. "political correctness."

Mr. Young wrote that he probably would not be allowed to burn a Bible in the free speech area because "the zealot-right of this campus have warped if not completely destroyed the first amendment." Is that so wrong, Mr. Young?

What do you think the "zealot-left" would do if I were to burn 2 Live Crew tapes in the free speech area?

Would not the MTV establishment characterize such a person as a contemporary version of Hitler's book burners as we have all seen them

Mr. Young mentions the High Riders as an example of "Christian oppression." I would remind the readers that the High Riders were responding to a member who was disqualified from publicly representing the organization.

I have to wonder what Mr. Young's reaction would have been if Ms. Arbuckle had been censured by the organization for harassing a homosexual.

Harassing anybody is just as much a sin as premarital sex, Mr. Young, if you can still read your Bible when you get done burning it.

Examples of "hippie-fascism" abound and become more threatening every day. Sen. Rockefeller of West Virginia told a group of AP reporters that the Clinton health care plan is going to be pushed through Congress no matter what the American people think.

Is it any wonder that Congress wants to disarm the American public, just as the U.S.S.R. attempted to confiscate Lithuanian hunting rifles? Most of the "hippie-fascists" have stopped reading at this point. One cannot reason with a bigot.

I can recall discussing the equality of African-Americans with relatives from my grandmother's generation.

It was a lot like discussing public policy with "zealot-leftists" of today. The facts do not matter to a bigot. Perhaps, that is the most threatening aspect of bigotry.

Schott caught smoking at Reds game violating city ordinance

CINCINNATI (AP) -Marge Schott the chain-smoker things to focus on to help this will do her puffing in private when she watches her Cincinnati Reds play.

Schott was photographed violating a city ordinance by smoking in her box seat behind the team's dugout. First, she said she didn't care if anyone complained, then she said she would stop.

"I've never broken the rules in my life," she told the Dayton Daily News in a story Wednesday. "This country has turned into wimps. I think a lot of people see more important country."

City officials said Schott would be cited for violating the law if she smoked in her usual front-row seat at Riverfront Stadium. On Tuesday, she stayed in her skybox, where she is permitted to smoke, during a game against Pittsburgh.

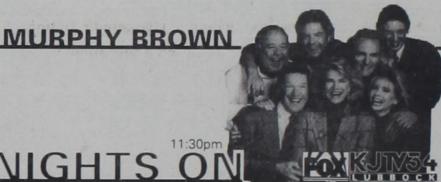

The law that went into effect this season prohibits smoking in all but the concourse areas and private boxes. Violators can be fined $100.

"I think we have a good chance at scoring in the shot, discus, javelin, 1,500, 5,000 and possibly the half Parke said.

Brennan leads women netters into SWC tourney

The Southwest Conference tournament could be the last time seven Texas Tech women's tennis team members compete in their sport on the collegiate

The Raiders will take on Texas A&M at 1:30 p.m. today in Houston in the first round of the tournament. Tech has a 14-10 season record and a 1-6 mark in regular season league play. Tech's No. 1 seed, Jennifer Brennan, is included in the group of seven, whose eligibility will run out after this season.

Brennan is tied for second place in the SWC in the No. 1 spot with a 4-3 record in league play.

The senior from Houston Cypress Creek transferred from Southern Methodist two years ago to join the Raiders. Tech head coach Kathy Vick said Brennan has become an important part of the team.

"Jennifer has done a lot for our program," she said. "Every time she steps on the court, she gives us 100 percent and never gives up on a match. She has played the best this year including how she did at SMU. She is a good leader and is mature on the (800 meters)," Parke said.

Parke said she also has a couple of sprinters who are coming along well and that Tech might have a few more opportunities to score than it appears.

Parke's first recruiting class is competing for the first time in the SWC Championship, and Parke says Tech head coach Liz Parke said the squad is hoping the potential is there for some good performances.

Parke said freshman sprinters Erika Hazelwood "Every athlete we have is improving and looking and Kaneshia Bell also are coming on strong of late." Senior sprinter Dana Morris and sophomore Highlighting the women's team going into the middle distance runner Jill Williams have both been unavailable this season due to injuries.

Sophomore sprinter Karis Moseley is questionable this week with a hamstring injury so the sprint relay

Another area that may produce a surprise for the Tech thinclads is the long jump. Junior Ginger Parke said she is optimistic about her team's Gilchrist is having a consistent season, and Parke said she is looking for Gilchrist to step up and perform.

"If she jumps mid 18's she'll have a decent chance,"

Men's golf team tries to burst into NCAA Regional

The Texas Tech men's golf team enters this weekend's Southwest Conference Tournament on the bubble of the NCAA Regional Tournament.

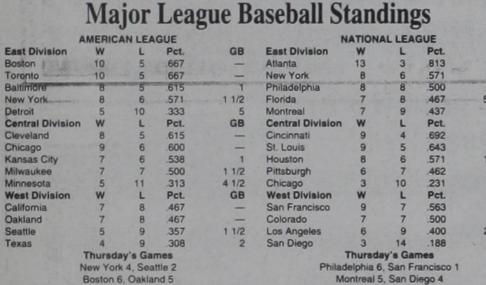

"Houston really hurt us a lot in being able to go to the regionals," Tech head coach Tommy Wilson said earlier this week. "We have to have a good showing at conference."

This year's tournament will be at the Ridgewood Country Club in Waco, and is hosted by Baylor. The course is a par-70 and is 6,665 yards.

The best finish for Tech this season was a fifth at the Border Olympics March 26-27. Bryan Novoa won this tournament, which included a 69.

Novoa has competed in all nine tournaments for the Raiders this year, while he's tied for first in stroke average with a 74.5. Senior Michael Ashy has the same stroke average, with his best finish a second at The Woodlands Intercollegiate in the fall. The first round of the tournament is today, with the second and third rounds on Saturday and Sunday, respectively.

Men netters open SWC with Rice After finishing the season at 11-

10 and 1-5 in the Southwest Conference, the Texas Tech men's tennis team will get a second chance in the SWC tournament.

The Raiders are the No. 5 seed and will face Rice (10-8, 3-3) at 3:30 p.m. today in Houston at the Jake Hess Tennis Stadium.

Rice defeated Tech 4-3 earlier this month. The winner of the match plays No. 1 seed Texas A&M which is No. 25 in the nation.

"We got the draw we wanted in the tournament," Tech head coach Tim Siegel said. "Our players are fired up about playing Rice again and we will turn things around this weekend. The first part of the season we really played well and were able to win the close matches."
