American Airlines pulls jet service out of Hub City

by LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The hole left by American Airlines in Lubbock International Airport's jet-service market may be filled by Continental Airlines. Officials from American Airlines said Wednesday they will clip their jet service from LIA Dec. 15, the day after Texas Tech's last scheduled final exams for the fall semester, to boost the company's profit margin.

Rod Payne, Lubbock's Deputy Director of Aviation, said

American's move may push Continental to take the spot.

"In order for an airline to come into a market, they have to feel like they have a niche they can fill," he said. "Continental might feel they can fill that niche."

Continental recently began jet service in Midland after American pulled out of that market.

Payne said Continental's main hub is Houston Intercontinental Airport.

If the airline returned to LIA, it would provide a direct link to the Houston market. The Houston market is Lubbock's number two feeder market after Dallas, Payne said.

John Hotard, American Airlines Fort Worth spokesman, said the company pulled out of the Lubbock market because "we weren't making any profit (in the Lubbock-Dallas market)."

American Airlines, along with other major airlines, has been losing money steadily for the past four years, Hotard said.

He said the company is trying to make up for their losses by shrinking the airline's fleet and markets.

American is leaving its space in the Lubbock market to its subsidiary, American Eagle.

"They're not leaving," Payne said. "They're just changing equipment."

"You may have your preference, but a seat is a seat is a seat," Hotard said.

American Eagle will replace the jet service with three 64-seat, super ATR propeller planes. These planes have a 20-minute longer flight time, Payne said.

Lubbock's market will lose 99 seats a day, he said.

Seats, Hotard said, that were not being filled anyway.

Lubbock officials said they plan to talk to the American management team to determine exactly why the company left Lubbock's market.

"We think their service is very valuable," City Manager Bob Cass said.

However, he does not see Lubbock offering American the $1 million subsidy Amarillo's Economic Development Committee did in February to keep additional jet service in the area.

"I would be surprised if we would go for a deal like that," Cass said.

American's departure leaves Southwest Airlines with the only jet service at LIA. Southwest already transports 50 percent of Lubbock's passengers, Payne said.

"I don't see them completely taking over the other markets," he said. "They don't fly internationally or to the eastern seaboard."

CAN offering volunteer opportunities to students

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's Community Action Network is gearing up for the fall semester with new volunteer opportunities available for students, faculty and staff.

"Our purpose is to pair up community service activities with students," said Amy Taylor, assistant project supervisor. "A lot of young people get a bad rap for being selfish, but I think many students are concerned about global issues and the affects that they have locally."

CAN was formed as a Tech program in January of 1992 to encourage students, faculty and staff to get involved in the community.

A Community Service Fair is planned for Sept. 21 in Tech's University Center Courtyard, with special presentations pending from Volunteers in Service to America, Peace Corps and Big Brothers/Sisters.

"We have invited several agencies to come and bring information about the services they provide to let students see what opportunities are available," Taylor said.

She said she believes volunteer service adds insight into roles of social service agencies and helps to introduce students to different cultures.

"Volunteering is a great way for students to get job experience," she said. "It is a way to get insight into what you might want to do."

A new service available this fall is Notebook, where volunteer opportunities will be listed with information about the agencies mission, a complete job description and time commitments.

Hazardous routes paving way to safety

by LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

County officials paved the way for a hazardous materials transportation route in Lubbock Thursday as the Lubbock County Local Emergency Planning Committee began its preliminary talks on the matter.

The LEPC is in the preliminary stages of planning a route, County Judge Don McBeath said.

At Thursday's meeting, members decided to create a task force composed of business leaders, members of the trucking industry and government officials, to help pick possible routes.

McBeath said the task force's job would be to plan a route or routes where there is the least likelihood an accident would occur. The task force also will decide where, if an accident did occur, the least amount of people would be harmed.

McBeath said Loop 289 and Interstate I-27 are likely hazardous materials routes around the Hub City.

McBeath said both of these highways statistically show fewer accidents than streets within Lubbock. The highway dividers and limited access roads to the two highways also put them in good standing for a hazardous route nomination.

McBeath said the proposed East-West Freeway also might become a possible route. However, truckers might balk at all three of these nominations, he added.

"The trucking companies will tell you (that) on the (inside) streets, the speed is lower — there is less chance the tank will be ruptured," McBeath said.

If the task force decides inner streets should be marked for hazardous material, they might designate only four or five main arteries the trucks could travel on in the city limits.

"We can put into the plan anything we want," McBeath said.

Trucks carrying petroleum and chemical products would be earmarked to use the hazard route.

Lubbock Fire Chief Don Stevens said implanting a route through the city is purely a prevention measure.

"I don't think it's any major environmental danger," he said. "Just with the amount of traffic we have it became obvious it needed to be looked at."

Baseball: perfect sport for male bonding

BAKER

You want to know about baseball, I'll tell you about baseball. Hank and me, father and son. It's baseball brings us together.

Thirteen times a year we drive 160 miles for baseball. That's 80 miles to Baltimore, 80 miles back. Thirteen times 160 miles makes 2,080 miles we drive every summer. Just for baseball. Father and son. Driving to and from Baltimore. Together.

Thirteen times we park the car at $5 per park. Makes $65. Thirteen times we sit in our $14 seats way out in right field. That's $364 for seats, plus $65 to park, makes $429.

The parking is of the way-out-in-right-field type too. You can tell Hank feels...well, "ashamed" isn't quite the right word...maybe "disappointed" is closer to what Hank feels.

Feels disappointed in his dad. I don't know how you know this, because Hank is good at keeping his feelings under deep cover. Maybe Hank doesn't feel disappointed. Maybe the old man is imagining feelings his son might have, based on the feelings he — Hank's father — would have if he were a son accompanying his own father to these 13 games.

He'd feel — no, not "disappointed" in the old man, that wasn't the right word either. He'd feel "embarrassed." The old fellow was shelling out $429, and for what? Seats way out in right field. Parking spaces too. Way out in parking-lot right field.

What I'd be thinking if I were Hank would be this:

"The old man can't cut the mustard, else he wouldn't settle for way-out-in-right-field treatment."

Baseball. It brings you together. Father and son. "Isn't it great to be out at the old ball game, Dad?"

"I don't care if I never get back, Hank" cries Dad, then wishes he hadn't. Never getting back from a Baltimore Orioles game has become an alarming possibility of late. Games had become longer and longer.

The three-and-a-half-hour game had become common. Four hours was always a distinct threat, what with batters killing time by striking beautiful poses and managers bringing games to a dead halt by incessantly changing pitchers.

After one five-and-a-half-hour game Hank and I, father and son, had come perilously close to complete honesty with each other about our feelings toward baseball. Only a father could take the lead, however.

So, "Hereafter," I said, "let's make it a rule that we will leave the game, no matter what, and head home after they've played three hours."

Hank's quick agreement — "Three hours is long enough" — was jolting. Could the lad possibly dislike baseball? Had I somehow failed to imbue him with an essential American love of the game, no matter how long it lasted?

If he liked it as much as a man was supposed to like it, wouldn't he have said: "I won't hear of it. Hereafter when they hit the three-hour mark just buy us some peanuts and Cracker Jack and we won't care if we never get back?"

It crossed my mind that maybe he thought I was in deep financial trouble and that this had stifled the cry for sustenance in his throat, for the ball-park price of peanuts and Cracker Jack for two could wipe out a $10 bill.

The 80-mile drive home after the game tests our character as football is said to test character, and this is hard to take. What I've always liked about baseball is nobody ever made any silly claims about its testing character, or molding men.

Sometimes it was an ordeal, but at least you didn't have to listen to grown men talking drivel the way you did when football was going on.

Anyhow, driving 80 miles in the middle of the night is heavy going when you've been up since 5:30 a.m., Hank's getting-up hour, but he insists on doing the driving anyhow. Says he likes to drive and isn't really falling asleep at the wheel, but I know what he's thinking.

"Can't let the old man drive at this hour of the night. At this hour of the night. At his age, probably blind as a bat. Reflexes all shot, too."

I know what he's thinking. It's what I'd been thinking if I were Hank. Worse than that, he knows I know what he's thinking, but both of us have too much character to speak these thoughts. Baseball doesn't build that character. It just brings you together. Father and son.

HEALTH MORE IMPORTANT THAN WEIGHT

To the editor:

I would like to respond to a letter written by Christie Hodge in the July 19 issue of the UD. Along with several inaccuracies and much misinformation, Ms. Hodge's letter contains just enough truth to be dangerous.

It's true that the most effective long-term weight loss method involves lifestyle changes to include exercise and a modified diet. However, it's not that simple.

Long-term weight loss can and often does need to include many other elements, from psychological counseling to using some form of "diet pill" that Ms. Hodge has embodied with such evil.

As an exercise physiologist with a master's degree in sports medicine as well as being a personal trainer with several certifications, I deal every day with clients who want to lose weight for self-esteem reasons and who need to lose weight for medical reasons. And, as a graduate student my focus of study was in ergogenic aids, dietary supplements and weight loss.

My ultimate concern is for the welfare and well-being of my clients and secondarily to the public at large that is inundated daily with a potion of voodoo fitness and diet misinformation.

My primary concern with Ms. Hodge's letter is the fact that it left the impression that being overweight is OK, has nothing to do with your self-esteem, and it made absolutely no mention of physical, mental and social consequences that come with being overweight.

She makes it sound as if the real danger is being too thin. A few statistics on the consequences of obesity: 1. Increased blood pressure, total cholesterol, LDL cholesterol, and lowering of the HDL; 2. increasing the risk of diabetes by three fold; 3. Increasing the incidence of cancers of the breast, uterus, ovaries, gallbladder, prostate, colon, rectum, lungs and others; 4. greatly increased risk of early death; 5. greatly increasing the risk of heart disease and stroke; 6. a major contributor to depression, feelings of guilt and loneliness; 7. increasing the risk for sleep disorders and chronic fatigue; 8. overweight people on average are paid less and not promoted as quickly as normal-weight people; 9. overweight people have twice the absentee rates at work compared to the normal-weight. This is a relatively small sample of the possible consequences of being overweight. And statistically there are far greater dangers in being overweight and these dangers affect many, many times the number of people than being "too thin." This not to discount the important issues presented by eating disorders — although much of their causes come from issues deeper and more complex than simple societal pressures as you imply.

It is also quite presumptuous and arrogant to judge people on their desires and reasons to lose weight and then question a legitimate manner in which they achieve it. One would not question a person who took a pill to lower their cholesterol or blood pressure. However the public perception is that obesity is a problem of gluttony and sloth and not recognized as the medical condition that it is.

Once people were looked down upon for not losing weight and now the pendulum has moved to the point that they are condemned for trying to better themselves.

It's ludicrous to make a woman feel guilty for wanting to lose weight to feel better and look more attractive to herself.

If someone had crooked teeth would you ridicule her for getting braces?

Getting their hair colored, styled or permed? Wearing makeup and jewelry?

Wearing contacts instead of glasses?

Or, heaven forbid, getting a nose-job?

All of these are cosmetic changes that do have a very real and profound beneficial impact on one's self-esteem and self-image. But, if you don't wear makeup, it won't kill you. Being severely overweight might.

It is also extremely dishonest and disingenuous to suggest that all diet pills, creams, etc. are all gimmicks that don't work. There are certainly "gimmicks" and bogus products that don't work. But there are also some that do. One of these is the ECA 100 mentioned in the ad and letter. As I started earlier, utmost concern is for the welfare of my clients, so when one asked me to check into it, I did. And coming from an academic background laced with heavy skepticism, very aware of the many scams out there, I looked at the product and its literature. I then went to the medical library to look up the original research myself.

I must admit I was surprised to find dozens and dozens of studies in many reputable scientific and medical journals with very positive results, even in subjects who didn't alter their eating habits. After discussion with my client, he tried it. He lost nine pounds the first month and 13 the second. He reached goal and has now kept the weight off for four months. I've used his with other clients with similar results. But, just like it stated in ECA 100s literature, it's not a "miracle pill" and it's not appropriate for everybody. However, for many people it is, it works and they should not be made to feel guilty for choosing not to remain overweight and using this tool to help them achieve their goal.

From the tone of Ms. Hodge's letter, she sounds like a typical client of mine, filled with anger and frustration. Trying various unsuccessful diets and other bogus products.

But, there is not one answer to the problem of being overweight, but many, and everyone's is different. Ms. Hodge, I hope you have found a formula that has worked for you, but please do not foist guilt and your own set of values upon other people who are trying to find theirs.

Parenting workshop part of ADA celebration

by BRYAN ADAMS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lifetime Independence For Everyone is offering a workshop, "Foundations for Success: Issues Facing Parents and Professionals Working with Physically and/or Mentally Challenged Children," from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. today in the Mahon Library Community Room.

Ginger Eways of the LIFE Independent Living Center said the program is funded through the Texas Department of Health and will feature well known experts in family studies.

LIFE, a non-profit organization helping people with disabilities live more independently, is offering the workshop as part of the weeklong celebration of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"The American Disabilities Act is an extension of the Civil Rights Act of 1964," Eways said. "The act opened up the community and is helping with the illegal discrimination to people with disabilities." This year marks the fourth anniversary of the bill which became law under President Bush on July 26, 1990.

"The legislation helps those with disabilities get jobs and prevents discrimination when it comes to employment, accommodations or other things of that nature," Eways said.

The legislation is the world's first "comprehensive" civil rights law for more than 43 million Americans with disabilities.

LIFE also is presenting the second annual Champion Achievement Awards at 1 p.m. Friday at the Mahon Library Community Room.

Eways said the awards are presented to persons who have made exceptional efforts on behalf of people with disabilities.

"This is the second year we have had the champion awards," she said.

This year's recipients are Texas Speaker of the House Pete Laney;

Susan Hix, manager and instructor at the Ceramics Playhouse; Stephon Breedlove, regional attorney for Advocacy, Inc.; Steve Lewis, manager of the South Plains Fair and DeAnn Hyatt-Foley, advocate for children with disabilities.

Eways said there will be four speakers at the workshop.

"The speakers will include Marilyn Montgomery, speaking on how they are bringing the best out in children," she said. "Rebecca Wilson will lecture on special issues of children with disabilities. Christine Berry will speak on girls becoming women and Charles Conatser on boys becoming men."

Laney is being honored for sending members of his staff to meet personally with people who have disabilities to hear their concerns.

Hix has instructed people with severe visual, mental and mobility how to discover the joy of artistic expression. Breedlove has been especially active in advocating for improved access to public accommodations and public transportation.

Lewis has provided opportunities for people with disabilities to participate in the fair both recreationally and as paid employees.

Hyatt-Foley is active in numerous organizations advocating for the rights of children with disabilities and their parents.

"These people receiving the awards and giving the lectures, know a lot about the issues parents and professionals working with physically or mentally challenged children deal with everyday," Eways said. "Issues such as how to get special services, how to deal attitude changes, how to teach children to communicate normally and many other problem issues."

The seminar is free and open to the public. Enrollment is limited to 80 people. Interpreters and personal assistance for people with disabilities will be provided if the center is notified in advance.

CAN

Applications for volunteering will be available in the UC office and a representative from CAN will conduct a preliminary interview, Taylor said.

New positions also will be available for volunteers interested in tutoring. Volunteers are needed at the Emergency Center from 5 to 6 p.m., one or two hours a week, to tutor different levels and ages.

Tutors also are needed to volunteer at the Guadalupe/Parkway Neighborhood Centers. Volunteers opportunities also are available at the Community Health Center of Lubbock, Ronald McDonald, Big Brothers/Sisters and Lubbock Area Coalition for Literacy.

Post Office stamp commemorates Apollo 11 lunar landing

Twenty-five years and a day after Neil Armstrong's "giant leap for mankind," the Eagle landed at Lubbock's post offices in the form of commemorative stamps.

The stamps were put on sale by the U.S. Postmaster General Wednesday to tie into NASA's 25th anniversary of the Apollo 11 lunar landing. The stamp made its Lubbock debut Thursday.

The 29-cent stamp depicts an astronaut planting the United States' flag at the Sea of Tranquility and the express mail stamp shows Apollo's lunar module in the background and two astronauts romping on the moon's surface. These two stamps are the third set of moon landing stamps the post office has issued.

The first set was issued in 1969 for 10 cents. The second set was issued in 1989 for the moon landing's 20th anniversary. It was a $2.40 stamp. Philatelic specialist Albert Battistoli said both stamps have doubled in value.

The regular postage moon landing stamp may only be purchased in full sheets, Battistoli said. Express mail stamps may be purchased individually.

Throughout the years, the postal service has printed 21 stamps with space designs.

St. Mary's Neonatal ICU to hold eighth anniversary

by BRYAN ADAMS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

St. Mary of the Plains Hospital is holding its eighth annual Neonatal Intensive Care Unit reunion from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Maxey Park.

Graduates of the NICU over the past eight years and their families will be reunited to celebrate with the doctors and staff who helped their children.

The care unit has a 98.5 percent survival rate for infants cared for in the unit.

Katherin Abbey of the Women and Children's Center said there are probably about 250 babies a year that require the NICU.

"Some are there a few days and some are there much longer," Abbey said. "The unit we have now can hold only 10 at a time."

The majority of NICU patients are born prematurely, while others suffer from severe breathing problems, infection or other constrictive problems.

According to Abbey, Dr. Doanh Phan and Dr. Thelma Sutter, the two neonatologists on staff, along with about 40 percent of the staff, have been at St. Mary's for the last eight years.

NICU also has a highly-skilled and experienced staff of registered nurses and respiratory therapists, Abbey said.

Administration staff also will be at the reunion.

"When the babies go into the unit, it is a very stressful time for parents and family," Abbey said. "Parents develop a relationship with the staff and frequently stay in contact even years after."

More than 100 graduates and their families are expected to participate.

"The reunion will give former NICU graduates a chance to visit with the doctors and nurses who have made an important impact on their lives," Abbey said.

The reunion will include many activities for adults and children including face painting, clowns, balloons and St. Mary Hospital Kid's Club dinosaur mascot, Kristen.

A complimentary picnic lunch will be provided and reservations are requested.

For more information or to make reservations, call 796-6667.

Old 'Star Trek' character criticizes Roddenberry

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — When "Star Trek" was revived as a TV series in 1987, it appeared to be going where its predecessor had gone before. And Scotty, for one, wasn't pleased.

James Doohan, who played chief engineer Montgomery Scott in the original 1966-69 "Star Trek," took his complaint about "Star Trek: The Next Generation" to series creator Gene Roddenberry.

"They were doing shows we had done," Doohan said. "I said, 'What's the matter, Gene? Are you running out of writers?'"

But Doohan now believes Roddenberry was trying to use "Next Generation" to perfect things he didn't get right in the original series. "I don't think Gene was happy with some of the characters on the original. In a way, he was a perfectionist," he said.

Student looking to complete goal

Jimenez plans to raise $3,000 for multiple sclerosis

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech student Oralia Jimenez, a senior recreation and leisure services major from Lubbock, will be cycling in the Cactus and Crude Bike Tour this weekend to help raise money for multiple sclerosis.

"It is a personal goal for me to complete this ride," she said. "I want to go the distance."

Jimenez, who suffers from diabetes, said her goal is to raise $3,000 in pledges for the 150-mile bike tour. To train for the event, she works out 10 to 30 minutes a day on an exercise machine and walks more than two miles a day.

She plans to raise the money from friends, family and businesses. Jimenez will visit her hometown of Plainview to raise additional funds.

Multiple sclerosis is a disease that randomly attacks the nervous system, affecting control of the body. The tour begins Saturday in Midland and will pass through Greenwood and Stanton. The bike tour will end at the National Guard Armory in Snyder.

Jimenez raised $1,000 for the American Diabetes Association in May of 1988 by bicycling 50 miles in the Great Texas Bike Ride.

Jimenez was diagnosed as a Type I, insulin dependent, diabetic 23 years ago. She was diagnosed with diabetes retinopathy in April 1988 and then with diabetes nephropathy two years later.

produce or properly use insulin, a hormone secreted by the pancreas to convert sugar into energy.

This causes the blood sugar level to rise and can often lead to complications including heart disease, kidney failure and blindness, according to information from the American Diabetes Association.

She said she spent a lot of time talking about things that she used to do.

"My pastor once said that there's nothing more boring than a person talking about what they used to do," she said. "Coming out of a five-year depression, I can see that I was living a life like that."

"Now, I'm finally ready to get out from the rock that I had crawled under," she said. "I'm definitely looking forward to this bike ride."

Jimenez lacks nine hours to complete her degree. She works at Reese Air Force Base and is completing a radio practicum class at KJAK-FM.

Her goal is to graduate in May 1995 and to become a recreation director for a cruise liner.

She said she believes her faith has helped her complete her goals.

"My faith in God has kept me going," she said. "Events in your life make you realize that you are on God's time, not your own."

Davis, Sasser to play on SWC All-Star team

Two members of the Texas Tech men's basketball team are among 10 Southwest Conference players selected for an all-star team that will tour Mexico in August.

Junior forward Jason Sasser, a first-team All-SWC selection and senior swingman Mark Davis, a second team All-SWC selection, highlight the team that will play seven games against Mexican professional and amateur teams.

"We tried to put together a team that would be well-balanced both offensively and defensively with an emphasis on size," said SWC Associate Commissioner Bill Foster, the tour's director.

Joining Sasser and Davis on the team will be Doug Brandt of Baylor, Jesse Drain of Houston, Troy Matthews of SMU, Thomas McGhee of Rice, Byron Waits of TCU, Tremaine Wingfield of Texas, and Roy Wills and Joe Wilbert of Texas A&M.

The team will be coached by 1994 SWC Coach of the Year, Tony Barone of Texas A&M. He will be assisted by Aggie assistant coach Porter Moser.

The team assembles in Dallas on Aug. 14 with the first game Aug. 17 against the Queretaro Pro Team in Acapulco. The team will also play in Mexico City, Chiapas and Guadalajara, before returning to Dallas Aug. 25.

Oilers' Munchak retires after 12 seasons

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Guard Mike Munchak, who earned nine Pro Bowl selections and anchored the Houston Oilers line for 12 seasons, announced Thursday that chronic knee problems have forced his retirement.

Munchak, 34, will remain with the Oilers as assistant to football operations, working with the offensive line on a day-to-day basis.

"What I'll miss the most is the camaraderie of the offensive line," Munchak said. "When you walk away from football, you never have that again. Offensive linemen have to stick together."

The Oilers will retire Munchak's No. 63 jersey on Nov. 6 during halftime of the Oilers game in the Astrodome against Pittsburgh. Munchak is the fourth Oiler to have his jersey retired following Elvin Bethea (65), Earl Campbell (34) and Jim Norton (43).

Cowboys' Peete happy with role as backup to Aikman

AUSTIN (AP) — Rodney Peete is second-string and happy.

Peete is a backup to Troy Aikman and without prospect of starting unless injuries knock the Dallas Cowboys All-Pro quarterback out of the lineup.

"It's a different role, but there comes a time when you have to face reality and I had to do that," Peete said.

"Reality" to Peete was Detroit.

He was the starting quarterback for the Lions last year before he was injured in the third game and his performance suffered.

In the last four games of the season, Peete was the designated third starter for the Lions.

Peete started 47 games for the Lions and passed for over 1,000 yards in each of his five seasons. He is a 57 percent passer in the NFL with 38 touchdown passes to 57 interceptions.

"Obviously I'd like to start somewhere but I think this could eventually be a good situation for me," said Peete, who signed a one-year free agent contract for $500,000.

The last two backups to Aikman, Steve Beuerlein and Bernie Kosar, have been snapped up by other NFL teams.

Can a quarterback from the run-and-shoot adjust to a more structured offense?

"I think Rodney Peete will be an excellent player for us," said coach Barry Switzer. "He is someone we can depend on if Troy gets hurt. We feel comfortable with him back there. He struggled a little at times but that's to be expected in a new offense."

Peete said he can see how the Cowboys won back-to-back Super Bowls.

"The big difference between Dallas and Detroit is how the whole organization is run," Peete said. "This is totally first class from top to bottom which is something I'm not used to."

"It's very refreshing to come to a place like this. I can understand how they've won the last two Super Bowls. Everybody comes to practice knowing what they are supposed to do and they work hard. They are all treated well."

Peete is from an athletic family. His father, Willie, is a Tampa Bay assistant coach. His brother, Skip, is an assistant at Michigan State, and his second cousin is golfer Calvin Peete. Rodney has had his problems with the Dallas offense in early training camp. He suffered an interception in the Blue-White scrimmage. The timing hasn't been there.

"It's a tough thing getting used to the terminology and running a new offense," Peete said. "I have to get to the point where the offense becomes a reaction instead of a thought. And I am slowly, but surely, getting to that point."

Aikman was asked what he thought about Peete as his backup.

"Peete's a good player but to tell the truth if I get hurt, I don't care who's back there," Aikman said.

Aikman has a history of injuries so the Cowboys have to have quarterback insurance.

"If and when I get the call, I don't want to let anyone down," Peete said.

Cowboys notes

AUSTIN — The Cowboys called a press conference for 2 p.m., Friday at St. Edward's University "to make an important announcement."

It's no big surprise.

The Cowboys will announce Tony Dorsett and Randy White are going into the Ring of Honor this year.

White and Dorsett will be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, on July 30.

• Barry Switzer has coached a great running back in Billy Sims, who won a Heisman Trophy at Oklahoma.

How does Emmitt Smith compare to Sims?

Switzer said, "Emmitt Smith reminds me a lot of Billy Sims. Billy might have been a little faster."

• The Cowboys have been operating on the same daily schedule at St. Edward's University as in past years.

"It's a college sked," said Switzer. "That's the way we do things in college."

NEW YORK — When the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers play in the "American Bowl" exhibition game in Mexico City on Aug. 15, the crowd could approach 100,000, says NFL vice president Roger Goodell.

Goodell says 37,000 tickets have already been sold. The rest go on sale next week. compiled by the Associated Press

COLLEGE DILEMMAS: Where to Live Next Year?

HASSLE #1: CLEANING

My Gosh! How can you live like this? There's something green growing in your sink!

Me neither! But my room is cleaned once a week!

I get weekly maid service at the U.P.! I don't have to worry about growing unwanted foliage!

Hey, lay off! Between classes and work, I don't have time to clean!

How do you manage that?

That maid service thing sounds great! Uh... could you step on that brown thing by your foot! I think it just moved!

HASSLE #2: RESTRICTIONS

Omigosh! Look what time it is! Visitation hours are almost over!

Yeah, we're going to have to study someplace else!

You mean I won't get kicked out later?

You have visitation hours?

Oh great! Well, lets go to my room at the U.P.! We won't have to worry about any dumb ol' restrictions!

Of course not! The U.P. treats me like an adult! I've outgrown the need for babysitters, haven't you?

HASSLE #3: RACING THE CLOCK

I told you not to move so far away from campus! Now you have to fight traffic AND find a parking spot!

Well, no... but it sure makes it easier living right across the street from campus! If I oversleep, I'm only 5 minutes from class!

Uh-huh! You definitely need to get more sleep!

I can't believe I was late for my 8 o'clock class again!

I guess living at the U.P. means you're always on time for your classes huh?

What? And give up that 15-minute search for a spot in commuter? It's so enjoyable!

HASSLE #4: CAR SAFETY

I can't believe my brand new car has hail damage!

Well, I live in an apartment, and there's no place to park!

Yeah, that would be really cool, but who in Lubbock offers that?

Wow, what a bummer! How'd that happen?

Yuk! Why don't you and that awesome car live somewhere with covered parking?

The U.P., dummy! I can't predict this West Texas weather, but I know my car is safe from it!

Listen up! It's time for you guys to make a decision! You gripe about the dorm because of the restrictions and because your car is weather-damaged...

...and you complain about living in an apartment because of the long drive and because you can't afford to eat!

Well, I've been trying to tell you guys about the conveniences of the U.P.! It's time you checked it out for yourselves! Go over and ask for a tour and a free t-shirt! Who knows? You just might like it!

"Tour The  Today"
FREE T-SHIRT WITH TOUR!

HASSLE #5: MY OWN BATHROOM!

Look at you! You look like you just got out of the shower!

Uh-oh!

I'm glad I don't have to worry about that! I have a bathroom in my room at the U.P., which I only share with my suitemate!

Well, guess what? I did! I accidentally left my keys in my dorm room when I went down the hall to shower this morning!

Yeah, then I had to go all the way downstairs to the lobby desk in nothing but a towel and a smile to get another key! I barely had time to throw on some clothes to get to class on time!

Sounds like you've got it made, and me, I'm all wet!
