Sharp, Myers fill McHaney position

By Darrin Cook
The University Daily

Texas Tech women's basketball coach Marsha Sharp and Assistant Athletic Director Gerald Myers were promoted to associate athletics directors for sports programs Friday.

Sharp and Myers were chosen after an intensive search to fill the vacancy of the late Jeannine McHaney. The position had been offered to former SWC assistant commissioner Kelly Krauskopf, who turned it down.

McHaney served as Tech women's athletic director from 1975 to 1985 and was promoted to associate athletic director and senior women's administrator in 1991.

McHaney died last October of cancer complications.

Sharp will oversee the soccer, softball, men's and women's tennis and the women's track programs.

Myers will oversee volleyball, men's and women's golf and handle the operations of football, men's basketball and baseball.

Sharp also will serve as senior woman administrator and will represent Tech at NCAA conferences and meetings.

"This gives me a chance to grow professionally and attack some new things that I haven't had an opportunity to work with before," Sharp said.

Myers, who was Tech's men's head basketball coach for 20 years, said he is looking forward to working with Tech's coaches and will try to help them in making the program successful.

"It seems as though something exciting is happening almost every day with the finishing up of the Southwest Conference, and I'm looking forward to Big 12 competition," Myers said.

Tech Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said loyalty and knowledge of the importance of intercollegiate athletics at this level played a major role in the selections.

"We wanted someone that could hit the ground running, had a great enthusiasm for the job and could relate well with all levels of our athletics department staff," Bockrath said.

Both Sharp and Myers are familiar with coaches' problems, which will work to their advantage, he said. Bockrath said after reviewing other candidates outside the athletic department, he felt he had not found the right combination to fit Tech's needs.

"The thought occurred to me while at NCAA meetings in San Diego that maybe we had the right people here in our own department," Bockrath said.

Bockrath met with Tech President Robert Lawless, and they agreed that Sharp and Myers would be positive program administrators.

Sharp said she is honored to work with Myers, who she said will bring class to this situation and will be a great Tech ambassador.

"There is probably no one in the world that I have more respect for than Gerald Myers," Sharp said. "He was a great help for me in trying to become a Division I basketball coach."

She also said it is an important time for Tech's athletic department, especially with the upcoming Big 12 merger.

Myers said he was more than delighted that Sharp decided to accept the position. Myers, who in the past had not ruled out the possibility of coaching again, said his new position will knock out that possibility.

Bockrath said this will not be a co-position, but, rather, a co-relationship in which the two will work together.

"What I envision happening is when Gerald is not here, Marsha will be able to make decisions on his behalf," he said. "When Marsha is not here, Gerald will be able to make decisions on her behalf."

Sharp said during the basketball season, she will not travel to any of the Big 12 meetings, and this is when the co-relationship will offer a big plus.

Daredevils light up court

By Jared Parcel
The University Daily

Flying through the air, each member of the Bud Light Daredevil team has one goal: jam the basketball with authority and get a positive response from the crowd. For basketball fans at halftime, this is entertainment, and the response is always good.

The Daredevils were started in 1979, when Jeff Hubbard, the mascot from the University of Mississippi, dared Ole Miss cheerleader Ty Cobb to do a flip off a trampoline and slam a basketball through the hoop.

Cobb completed the task, slamming the ball home to the delight of the fans in attendance. Cobb, as compared to another Ty Cobb, started a legend that grew. Cobb, Hubbard and cheerleader Sam Martin hit the road with the basketball team, traveling on their own to the teams away games, entertaining opposing Southeastern Conference crowds at halftime.

The following year, the trio turned pro, taking their high-flying act to NBA games. Hubbard left the group in 1983 to practice law, so Cobb teamed with his brother Guy and friend Steve Cliffe, to form the Dixie Daredevils.

In 1984, Cobb approached Anheuser-Busch with the concept of sponsoring their act. The Anheuser-Busch group liked the idea, and the group became the Bud Light Daredevils.

First-year member, 24-year old Dillon Ashton, said two teams of five travel the country, entertaining basketball crowds at halftime.

"We go all over the country during the basketball season, going to NBA, Continental Basketball Association and college games," Ashton said. "During the summer, we have a lot of overseas trips. Last summer, we were in Germany for six months."

Overall, the groups have combined to perform at nearly every NBA venue, 22 CBA sites and more than 280 colleges. Internationally, the groups have appeared in more than 68 cities in 17 foreign countries. Italy, France, Venezuela, Turkey, China, Japan and Mexico are some of the foreign locations where the teams have performed.

Mark Odgers, 23, has been with the team for three seasons and said the groups perform at events other than basketball games.

"The biggest part is basketball, which is 98 percent," Odgers said. "The other two percent are conventions and special events people bring us into. Our seasons run from October through March, with a few games in April. During the summer, we head overseas."

Former Texas Tech student, 23-year-old David Pendergrass, said he has had an interest in gymnastics all his life, and the Daredevils act has given him the opportunity of a lifetime.

"I quit school to join the Daredevils," Pendergrass said. "I had a friend that was doing it, and he let me in on the concept of Daredevils and how much fun it was, traveling around the world for free. I like to entertain and make people happy. When I was going to school and doing gymnastics, I knew I wanted to run a gym or do something that had to do with gymnastics, and this is it."

Pendergrass said the game overseas is different than the one played in the United States, and the crowds responded differently to the groups' act.

"Overseas, they really like the concept of slam dunks and gymnastics," he said, describing the crowds' response. "They don't have the high energy basketball like the NBA, so they don't see the big dunks. They really get into it, they go crazy. In Mexico and Venezuela, the fans stand on the railing and hook up horns to car batteries. It's great over there."

Pendergrass said performers need to be in peak condition when participating in the Daredevils routine.

"You have to be in shape and focused," he said. "If you're not focused, you are definitely going to get hurt. You really can't control what's going to happen once you dunk the basketball."

Ashton, who said he earned his degree in optical engineering from the University of Iowa, has been doing Daredevils since March.

"This is the only thing I've done," he said. "It's a paying job."

The oldest member of the group that performed at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum Saturday afternoon during the Tech/TCU game was 25-year old Jim Cuthbertson, while the youngest was 22-year-old Seth Botone.

"It's a pretty demanding job," Odgers said. "I'm only 23, but my body feels like it is about 107 right now. I think the oldest guy is 28, and it's his fifth year, and his back and shins are feeling the effects now. You have to be young, or at least young at heart."

City curfew on hold because of state code

By Shannon Murphy

The University Daily

Lubbock's aggressive curfew enforcement program scheduled to be put into effect today will be delayed because of a conflict with the Texas Family Code.

Lubbock had plans to open a facility for juveniles who violate the city curfew. The project was halted after state district judges on the Lubbock County Juvenile Board informed officials of the conflict with the Texas Family Code.

The Texas Family Code states that violation of a curfew is not a detainable offense, said Porter Wilson, a legislative aide to Rep. Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock.

A bill filed by Duncan in the House would allow municipalities to hold juvenile curfew violators until they can be picked up by their parents.

The bill was referred Thursday to the House Committee on Juvenile Justice and Family Issues in Austin.

"The committees are starting to get their assignments, and this is all in the organizational stages," Wilson said. "In about two weeks, committees will hear the bill, and we will request for a hearing at that time," he said.

The bill would create a holding center for the curfew violators used for curfew violation.

Under the current Lubbock curfew, juveniles younger than 17 are barred from being out after 11 p.m. on week nights and after midnight on weekends.

Curfew violation is a class C misdemeanor punishable by a fine up to $500.

Duncan's bill would allow a municipality to hold the curfew violator for up to six hours for violating the city's curfew ordinance, Wilson said.

Lubbock County Juvenile Board judges are in agreement with the legislation.

"We want to follow the rules and get the correct legislation," said Cecil Puryear, presiding judge for the Board of Judges. "We support this legislation and signed a letter saying so."

Politicians take sides on budget

WASHINGTON (AP)—The battle lines on President Clinton's $1.61 trillion budget formed Sunday with Republicans attacking Clinton for "taking a walk" on the hard choices needed to control the deficit.

The GOP's top budget officials in both the House and Senate promised to be more courageous by tackling popular entitlement programs, focusing particularly on Medicare, which provides health coverage for the elderly, and Medicaid, which does the same for the poor.

Top administration officials countered that Clinton had cut the deficit more than any president in history. They accused Republicans of hiding from the American people the painful spending cuts that will be needed to meet the Republican goal of a balanced budget by 2002.

Both sides sought to score political points as the administration prepared to release its 1996 budget Monday. While Clinton's plan may not be dead-on-arrival, the intensity of the criticism showed the Republican-controlled Congress clearly intended to pursue its own strategy as laid out in the "Contract with America."

White House Budget Director Alice Rivlin said Clinton had made hard choices by pushing a $505 billion deficit-cutting program through Congress during his first year in office without the aid of any Republican votes. She said the 1996 document will build on that success.

"We cannot be faulted for not taking the deficit seriously. When we came in, it was out of control," she said. "This budget keeps the deficit under control. We've gotten it under $200 billion."

Arctic winds cap Northeast snowstorm

(AP)—Nearly 2 feet of snow that fell across the Northeast in the region's first major winter storm froze solid Sunday as arctic winds kicked up and temperatures plummeted.

The snow that dumped half a foot to 21 inches from Kentucky to Maine on Saturday tapered off in most of the region, but was followed by numbing cold and winds gusting up to 50 mph.

In northern New York, the wind chill factor fell to 44 below in Massena and 40 below in Plattsburgh. In Maine, winds of up to 30 mph made it feel like minus 19 degrees in Portland and minus 17 in Presque Isle.

"For most people, it was just a good, old-fashioned winter storm," Jim Mansfield of the National Weather Service in Gray, Maine, said Sunday.

At least six traffic deaths — two each in Kentucky and New Jersey and one each in Massachusetts and New Hampshire — were blamed on the weather Saturday.

Power was temporarily knocked out to thousands across the Northeast region of the country.

Airports were reopened and most roads were clear Sunday, although whiteouts caused by blowing snow were reported along some sections of the New York State Thruway near Syracuse.

People were digging out.

Last year's severe winter made snow blowers a hot commodity.

But with this year's mild weather, most were gathering dust in the garage — until now.

"I was hoping I'd never have to use it," Robert Wheeler said as he cleared snow from the driveway of his home in Johnson City, N.Y.

Congress should pass unfunded mandate act

The House passed the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act 360-74 Wednesday. It is now in the Senate, and a few key Republican leaders said Saturday they think the act will not make it through, according to the Associated Press.

What a travesty that would be.

The act is just what the doctor ordered.

Reforming Congress

The bill would require Congress to pay for many of the programs it imposes on states and local governments.

What a concept.

Remember when you were 16 and Mom needed you to run to the store to get corn for dinner? Did she give you a couple of dollars or make you dig into your piggy bank? That's what we thought — she gave you the money.

That's what the federal government should do. When they want us to get corn for dinner, they need to give us the money.

Not that we're children, but the federal government has seemed to think so in the not-so-distant past.

Local and state governments should have the freedom to decide what do with their money based on what the residents want. The federal government should stop treating us like children and realize that if we feel certain programs are needed in our communities, we will initiate and fund them.

Communities should decide

There is no question that some communities require more of particular programs than other communities do. And people living day in and day out in those communities know what programs are needed. So let them do their own governing in these areas.

The act is another measure promised in the "Contract With America" written by House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas — a contract the Republicans say represents the will of the American people.

According to polls conducted by news organizations, they are right.

So, let's pass the act and get onto balancing that budget.

The seven-member editorial board voted 7-0 on this issue.

Society pressures students to attend college

Christy Everett

The number of students who pack up their belongings, load up the truck and move off to college increases every year.

In a couple of years, many of those students can be found back at home, or back in the work force without the sacred college diploma.

According to an article in Sunday's Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, 25 to 28 percent of each freshman class at Texas Tech leaves school before graduation.

Although this number may seem high to some people, it really is nothing to be overly concerned about. We must realize that some people simply are not meant to attend college.

Unfortunately, society has created a stigma that anyone who does not receive a college diploma is a loser.

High school students are told from the minute they step into the building that if they do not go to college, they will be making minimum wage for the rest of their lives while trying to raise a family.

Students also are threatened by the idea that if they don't go to college, they will be flipping hamburgers and emptying grease pans for eternity.

Because of this unreasonable pressure, thousands of students trudge dutifully off to college each year to fulfill their parents', counselors' and administrators' dreams.

It should be no surprise to society that many of these students do not succeed in a college environment.

People have different habits, interests and dreams, and not everyone is meant for the life of academia.

History has shown that some of America's greatest thinkers went through life without the benefit of a college education.

Instead of pressuring high school students to go to college, we should help them understand their interests.

They should be assisted in pursuing their dreams, even if that means training at a vocational college or heading straight into the work force.

Schools should not be pressured to lower education standards to keep people in college.

It does not help students to lower the quality of education to cater to them if they cannot handle college life.

Most importantly, society should understand people have different talents and abilities.

College is not for everyone. Maybe we should quit expecting it to be that way.

Student Association positions require dedicated students

Zach Brady

If you hate your basketball seats, are sick of trying to get into that Spanish class, fed up with trying to find a parking place at 10:53 a.m. and think Chick-Fil-A sandwiches are too expensive, this is your week.

Filing begins today for 62 seats on the Student Senate and for three executive Student Association offices. The Student Association requires dedicated people for its success. I encourage students from all colleges to file for Senate and represent your peers.

The Student Association can only be as effective as its members are interested and industrious. If you're a line or two short on your resume and overbooked already, don't bother.

However, if you are looking for an opportunity to work hard and truly make a difference for Texas Tech, please participate in the process.

Filing will be held in the University Center Main Office on the second floor, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Filing will continue through Friday. Any questions about the election process should be directed to the Student Association (742-3631) or Dan Burns, election commission adviser (742-3636).

In addition to the senators, three executive officers will be chosen in March 1. The offices are president, internal vice president and external vice president. If you're giving executive office some thought, I offer this advice: run. The election code now allows cross-filing for senator-at-large and executive office, so running is no longer an all-or-nothing proposition. Besides, the Mad Hatter was absolutely right about at least one thing: it really is a nifty part-time job.

Voting is the essential expression of democracy. The voters drive the process from the ballot box; candidates are often the vehicles that carry the philosophies, ideals and hopes of the voters.

Stand for office. If you are successful, you'll have the chance to stand up for your interests and beliefs, your college, and your university.

Who knows? Maybe you'll be able to say, "We were able to get $1.25 Chick-Fil-A sandwiches in the parking garage. They're a great snack on the way to our half-court basketball seats."

Zach Brady is Student Association president.

U.S. is missing information revolution

To the editor: I read with some bemusement Eric Sanchez's complaint about the liberal media. The question I am left with is, what does Mr. Sanchez think liberalism is?

Does he identify liberalism with corporate agendas? If not, then the media can hardly be liberal, because major media relentlessly promote the interests of their corporate owners.

It is well-documented that the First Amendment gives way to advertising pressure. A newspaper, for example, will kill a story that offends an advertiser. Editors and reporters have been fired for running such stories, and the journalistic profession quickly learns the art of self-censorship. Thus, few Americans are aware of the disgraceful fact that from 1950 to 1984 the corporate contribution to federal revenue dropped from 25 percent to 8 percent, where it remains today.

Advertising pressure also works to reduce the number of newspapers. Papers with greater circulation attract more advertising dollars and thus eventually force even marginally smaller papers out of business.

Today a tiny minority of U.S. cities have two or more dailies, and the result is constricted news and political commentary.

Washington, D.C., has two major dailies, one of which is foreign-owned (Korean).

London and Paris each have 14 major dailies, Rome has 18, Tokyo 17, and Moscow 9. Americans are information-poor, which is a kind way of saying they are ignorant. Thus the failure of the so-called "information revolution."

Thus, also, the abysmal level of our political dialogue and our national politics and leadership. Capitalism is culturally degrading, and the present resulted that many cannot distinguish between liberalism, a political doctrine, born of the Enlightenment, that informed the founding of the United States, and hidden, profit-driven corporate agendas.

Tech needs to support baseball program

To the editor: "LOOK!" Over the past few years I have attended some home baseball games. I have enjoyed every game win or lose. It appears that the Tech baseball program has improved immensely. Over the past few years the team has been nationally ranked, and moreover, has enjoyed a winning record. I see only one problem. Where are the fans? Can you support Tech baseball from the beer joints? Those interested in

Made-to-order-produce purchasing possible; consumer could pay before planting

By Jamie McDonald
The University Daily

West Texas consumers may be able to purchase their produce made to order beginning in March.

Sandra McNabb, owner of McNabb's Green Acres in Ropesville, said she hopes her Consumer Supported Agriculture system farm will be a Lubbock-area success.

The CSA system will require consumers to pay farmers prior to the planting season for 500 pounds of produce they will use for the year.

CSA began in 1985 in Barrington, Mass.

"Specific farmers grow for specific families for a fee to grow their produce," McNabb said. "The fee is based on the expenses. It is about $1.75 per pound of produce."

Five hundred pounds is equivalent to one share, and each share costs $890 per year, said Nell Whitehead, a Lubbock consumer.

The price per pound is a little high because the produce is entirely organic, Nell said.

Whitehead said the produce McNabb grows is more trustworthy.

"It is organically grown without any pesticides," she said. "The stores get so much from Mexico, there's no telling what it has on it. With Sandra, you know what it has on it."

Whitehead said the produce is organic and is of superior quality.

"The tomatoes right now are wonderful," she said. "They cost $3 per pound in the winter and $2 per pound in the summer."

Five hundred pounds of fruits and vegetables is plenty of food to feed a family, Whitehead said.

For small families, sharing the quantity of food also is a possibility, she said.

"If someone is interested, they can call Sandra and share with someone," she said. "Or you can freeze it."

McNabb said she needs 45 families, or shares, to get her growing season started.

"I need to know who is interested by the end of February," she said.

A variety of produce, including tomatoes, green beans, cantaloupe and watermelon will be offered, McNabb said.

Whitehead said consumers can purchase 500 pounds of fruits and vegetables they like.

"I think she is open to growing something for someone if she could grow it easily," she said. "I've been buying for at least three or four years."

McNabb said the new CSA system will be beneficial for both farmers and consumers.

Tech ROTC sponsors junior competition

By Terri Lowrance

The Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps Detachment 820 at Texas Tech sponsored its first Junior ROTC Drill Competition Saturday.

Fifteen teams from nine schools in Texas and New Mexico came to Tech.

The teams represented junior ROTC units from the Air Force, Army, Navy and Marines.

Capt. Bob Surprenant, assistant professor of aerospace studies, said the response was great this first year, and the Tech detachment plans to make this an annual event.

The high school cadets competed in regular drill, exhibition drill and individual knock-out drill.

Each drill was divided into the categories of armed, where the cadets carry weapons, and unarmed.

Cadet Ray Simmons, the drill meet coordinator, said the competition had been in planning for about a year and a half.

He said invitations were sent mainly to Air Force units.

Participants were maintained in the tri-state areas of Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, Simmons said.

As drill meet coordinator, Simmons established the competition rules, scheduled teams, supervised the competition and selected judges.

"We tried to make it as fair as possible," Simmons said.

Cadet Charles Donet, Simmons' assistant, said he and Simmons based the rules on their past experiences at other drill meets.

"We set the standards to what we can do," Donet said.

Since the establishment of the Tech team in 1958, much experience has been brought together, Donet said.

"This competition was for the teams to gain experience," Simmons said. "And we gave them a lot of suggestions," Simmons said.

Simmons said he chose six judges to form two judging panels.

Members of Tech's Sabre Flight Drill Team composed one judging panel, and area Marine recruiters were on the other panel.

Surprenant said because the junior ROTC teams represented the four different areas of the military, the two different judging panels were necessary.

"The Air Force and Army rules are the same," he said. "The Marine and Navy rules are the same."

Simmons said the competition also increased the visibility of Tech and the units at Tech.

Leak delays space shuttle meeting with Mir station

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The message from the Russian Space Agency to NASA was clear Sunday: No way can your leaking shuttle come near our Mir.

With time running out, NASA ordered Discovery's astronauts to temporarily shut down and repressurize a leaking jet in a long-shot effort to stop the drainage and permit a close encounter Monday with Russia's orbiting Mir station.

Russian officials insist that, unless the steering jet stops spewing fuel, Discovery must stay at least 400 feet from Mir — 365 feet farther than planned.

They fear the small chunks of frozen propellant might damage critical optical sensors on a Soyuz capsule attached to the station and needed by the three Mir cosmonauts to return to Earth next month.

Mission operations director Randy Stone said National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers believe the leaking nitrogen tetroxide would not attach to anything and poses no danger.

But the Russians aren't convinced, "and it's their call," he said.

"They don't fully understand all of the capabilities of our vehicle. It's mostly just the very methodical and conservative engineering approach that they take to things when they don't have a full knowledge of the system," Stone said. "And by the way, it's probably the same approach that I would take if I were on the other side."

The original plan called for Discovery and its crew of six to fly within 35 feet of the station as a dress rehearsal for the first shuttle-Mir docking in June. NASA wanted to see how well the shuttle handled next to a 100-ton station and test navigation and communication systems.

"Obviously, the closer we can get the better it will be," said Discovery pilot Eileen Collins. "If we only go to 100 feet on this flight, we will still be getting a lot of good information."

Texas colleges, universities lobby officials to increase financial aid

HOUSTON (AP) — Independent Texas colleges and universities are lobbying state officials for at least a $10 million boost in college aid for needy students, particularly ethnic-minority members.

The Legislature created the Tuition Equalization Grant program in 1971 to provide financial aid to needy students wanting to attend private universities.

College administrators and lobbyists say program funding should be increased by $10 million, to about $35.2 million a year.

However, some administrators would prefer an increase of about $50 million in the fund, which was created, in part, to help ease overcrowding at state schools.

Either way, it will fall short of the $143 million a Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board survey says is needed to fully meet the needs of a growing number of lower-income and middle-class families.

Texas' 40 independent colleges and universities have an enrollment of more than 91,000 students.

Texas is expecting dramatic increases in the number of students seeking a college education in the next 15 years, said Carol L. McDonald, president of Independent Colleges and Universities of Texas Inc., a non-profit association based in Austin. In 1984-85, the program's state funding allowed it to provide about 85 percent of the money needed for tuition assistance. Today, that percentage has fallen to about 35 percent.

"We are talking to the Legislature about closing the gap," McDonald said.

Rubber chickens, fish featured in competition

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily
It was a night of excessive laughter, rubber chickens and flying, talking fish.

Comeback Jack's Comedy Club hosted its annual Amateur Comedy Competition Thursday night, where four brave souls tried their hand at stand-up comedy.

First place went to Jimmy Brady, a sophomore theater major from Austin, who tied for first in last year's competition.

"I watch a lot of television," Brady said about his inspiration. "I make fun of people who are doing really stupid things."

Brady said a group of friends convinced him to participate in last year's competition.

He said he believes anyone who wants to try comedy should just do it.

"It's really scary, but you have to just get up and do it," he said.

"You'll probably be surprised at what you can do."

Brady said he would like to make comedy his future, but is undecided about whether to do musical comedy or something like "Saturday Night Live."

Brady, who said his prize of $50 will go toward his spring break trip to Cancun, will be opening for Second City Touring Company in March.

"Jimmy definitely has a future as a comedian," said Sam Washington, project leader for Comeback Jack's Comedy Club. "His acts are hilarious and always please the crowd."

Chris Godfrey, a senior communication studies major from Missouri City, placed second in the competition with his "Boomerang Trout" act.

"Flying trout is something you just don't see every day," Godfrey said. "I like trout and thought it would be funny to do something with them."

Godfrey has appeared at Froggy Bottoms and said he hopes to continue his stand-up comedy.

He encourages those who want to do comedy to follow their hearts and not let criticism get to them.

"Don't let anyone keep you down, or tell you you're not funny," Godfrey said. "They don't decide your future."

"Keep doing what makes you

Washington said participation in the competition has been slipping, and he is hoping more people will get involved.

"This competition is for the students, whether they participate or not," Washington said.

"It is great to come out and watch, but it's better if there are more people participating."

Tech hosts leadership seminar

By Tara McQueen

The University Daily
Texas Tech students have the opportunity to learn leadership skills in their own backyard this weekend.

Tech will host the statewide Tech Leadership Academy: Steps to Success beginning at 4 p.m. Friday at the University Center and lasting through Saturday.

The conference costs $25 and includes all keynote speeches, more than 30 educational sessions, three meals and a conference souvenir.

"Tech students are fortunate to have the conference right here on campus," said Charlotte Strickland, keynote speaker for Tech Leadership Academy.

"I go on retreats where I am the only budgeted speaker for the entire year."

"This conference includes four keynote speakers."

Strickland, who has worked with students for 12 years, said she hopes Tech students will take advantage of the many quality speakers and low cost of the event.

Strickland said she will be sharing the eight steps to success.

"With each step, I will share a personal example of a student I have worked with who has excelled with that step," Strickland said.

"Some of my experiences are humorous."

Strickland said at one conference in Michigan, there was no heat, so the delegates huddled together with sleeping bags over their heads.

"All I could see was their eyes," she said. "I was so impressed with their perseverance."

"Regardless of the circumstances they were willing, with a 'just teach me' attitude."

Bradley Richardson, 28, a Lubbock native, is another keynote speaker.

"I am especially excited to come back to Lubbock," Richardson said. "I will take any opportunity I can get to speak to students, but I am even more excited because it is in Lubbock."

Richardson, the president of his own training and consulting company, stressed that he wants students to know his age.

"I am someone who is still going through the struggles," Richardson said. "As a fairly recent graduate, I have recently gone through everything. I will speak on how to become the best professional and leader you can be."

He said he is like an older brother who is going to tell students how it really is in the corporate world.

Richardson also will release his first book, "Job Smarts for the Twenty-Somethings: How to Find Your First Job and Get a Quick Start in Today's Economy."

"My book is Generation X meets swim with the sharks," he said. "This is the first practical book written by someone their age."

Richardson said he will share information from his book as well as 20 things people need to do to get a job.

Patty Hendrickson, another keynote speaker, said she paid for a large part of college by doing what she believes in.

She will share information on diversity as well as team-building activities.

"Dump your brain and stresses at the door and open up to the experience," Hendrickson said. "The biggest benefits from the conference will come from other participants."

Hendrickson said all of her sessions will involve action, not sitting and listening.

"I will include some talks about diversity and how diversity benefits us," Hendrickson said. "Every single person has to work at being inclusive."

"If you are going down for coffee, invite two or three people," she said. "Individuals need to build community to connect themselves."

James Parker also will serve as a keynote speaker for the conference.

POW survivors mark anniversary

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Margaret Sams remembers Japanese soldiers knocking on her door in the Philippines and ordering her to prepare three days' worth of food and clothing for herself and her 3-year-old son.

Three days stretched into three years and two months in a World War II prison camp where the young American mother gave birth to a daughter and nearly lost her own life.

Sams and her husband celebrated her 79th birthday on Saturday, and the 50th anniversary of the American liberation of prison camps run by occupying Japanese forces in the Philippines. They were among more than 560 survivors and rescuers who gathered for their fourth reunion this weekend at the Gold Coast Hotel & Casino. The liberators were members of the U.S. Army's 44th Tank Battalion and 1st Cavalry Division, the first to liberate a Japanese camp, on Feb. 3, 1945.

"February third is a significant day for those of us in Santa Tomas, and February fourth is the first time we were able to see the (American) flag in three years," said Terri Johnson, one of the reunion organizers who was interned during much of her teen-age years.

Santo Tomas was one of several camps in the Philippines.

"We have people from all over the world here ... Australia, England, Wales, the Philippines, Canada and all over the United States," Johnson said. "It's a time to relish. There were many, many hard times."

Sams and Johnson said the Japanese imprisoned them without making preparations for housing or food, so many prisoners starved to death.

"A Red Cross official persuaded someone to let us have a shipload of cracked wheat ... which was filled with little pink worms," Sams said.

Sams had left Oklahoma City for the Philippine capital of Manila to join her first husband, an American engineer who later died when his ship sunk on its way to Japan.

She met her current husband, American Jerry Sams, shortly after returning to the prison camp from a nearby hospital, which had treated her ailing son, David.

"Even though there were 4,000 faces, you could still spot a new one, and I liked that one," Jerry Sams said.

Years later, Mrs. Sams' book, "Forbidden Family: A Wartime Memoir of the Philippines," recounts her experiences in the prison.

Lorrie Morgan denies husband drank at home

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Lorrie Morgan says that even though husband Keith Whitley died of alcohol poisoning, she never saw him drink.

"I knew things were wrong when I didn't hear from him or if he was late coming home."

"He would show up at the house, not like falling down drunk, but I would know that he had been drinking," Morgan says in an interview to be broadcast Wednesday on cable TV's The Nashville Network.

"We didn't have liquor in the house."

"He would keep it somewhere I didn't know where it was."

Whitley, also a singer, died of an accidental overdose of alcohol in 1989 at age 33.

Thieves bag auto owners' air bags

NEW YORK (AP) — OK, New Car Driver: You've pulled out your detachable radio, packed up any valuables and installed The Club. Now is it safe to leave your car on the street?

Not quite, police say — the most attractive item to thieves is still there on the steering wheel, ripe for the plucking: your air bag.

"It's the fastest growing scheme in stolen parts," said Jack Dever, who oversees fraud control programs for USAA auto insurance. "You can get a brand-new Mercedes or other high-priced car, they'll forget everything else and go to the air bags."

Auto companies spent years figuring out how to make air bags safe, reliable and easy to replace after an accident. This also makes them easy to steal.

"It takes three minutes," said Kim Hazelbaker, senior vice president of the Highway Loss Data Institute, an insurance industry research agency in Virginia.

"You unfasten four bolts, there's a clip connector that you unplug, you walk away from the vehicle and you now have a part that retails for $1,000."

Insurers aren't reporting such a problem with passenger-side air bags because they tend to be built into the dashboard and are harder to reach.

Thefts of unexploded air bags are still fairly rare in many places, but insurance companies and police say it has become a serious problem in urban, high-theft areas such as New York City and parts of New Jersey, Florida and California.

Car-theft rings are creating their own market for unexploded bags in some areas by stealing them from cars and selling them back to body shops.

One such ring stocked up in December at a dealership in San Gabriel, Calif. They cut through a fence, broke windows and removed 17 air bags from new Camrys in less than 30 minutes, said Mike McGuigan, general sales manager at Puente Hills Toyota.

The New York Police Department recovered 2,100 stolen air bags and engine computers in a sting last August that netted 14 arrests.

"The majority of places were more than willing to take the stuff," said an undercover officer who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"I sold the air bags for $25 to $50, then we bought them back posing as car owners for $250 to $300."

With factory-made replacements costing from $360 to $1,800, there's a big money in stolen bags. And once they're put back in, it's very difficult to tell what's inside.

"The crooked auto body shops are pulling one over on you when they say it's new, and they're pulling one over on the insurance company when they bill them," said John Hoch, a spokesman for the National Insurance Crime Bureau, an agency financed by insurance companies to combat fraud.

Insurers say the traffic in air bags would disappear if car makers cut prices and gave their serial numbers to the National Insurance Crime Bureau, which already stores vehicle identification numbers in a database used by police.

Tech drops pair of games to Arizona State

By Jared Parcell

The University Daily
Senior designated hitter Damon Lembi's three-run double in the bottom of the seventh inning lifted Arizona State to a 5-2 victory over Texas Tech Sunday afternoon at Packard Field in Tempe, Ariz.

With the loss, Tech fell to 1-2 on the young season, winning the middle game of the three-game series Saturday.

In Sunday's game, Tech got off to a quick start as junior shortstop Dion Ruecker hit his second home run of the series, a two-run shot to center, in the second.

Head coach Larry Hays said, following the loss Sunday, he would like to keep Ruecker in the No. 8 spot instead of the No. 7 spot in the lineup, where he has batted the last two games.

"I really didn't like moving him up to seven," Hays said. "I'd like to leave him at eight and get him some fastballs. He's a really good fastball hitter. Our plan is to put him down there, and hopefully people will challenge him. He's got good bat speed."

Junior transfer left fielder Travis Flowers cut the lead in half in the bottom half of the inning with a solo shot. The game remained that way, until the seventh, when Tech starter, right-hander Brandon Kolb (0-1), ran into trouble.

Afterward, Sun Devil shortstop Steve Goodell popped out, and senior right fielder John Fulford singled. Freshman center fielder Dan McKinley singled him to third, with McKinley taking second on the throw in. Senior second baseman Randy Betten reached on an infield single, scoring Fulford and moving McKinley to third.

Kolb was replaced by sophomore right-hander Jimmy Frush, who in-tionally walked the first man he faced, sophomore third baseman Cody McKay to load the bases. That is when Lembi cleared the bases, propelling the Sun Devils to the victory.

Kolb took the loss for the Red Raiders, pitching 6 1/3 innings, allowing four runs on five hits, walking four and fanning eight. Hays said he was not surprised by the strong outing by Kolb.

"You've got to feel good about the way Kolb pitched and the way he overloaded on them," Hays said. "We were hoping he could go six or seven innings. He did a really good job, and he was a big plus."

Sophomore right-hander Kaipo Spencer (2-0) picked up the win for ASU, going the distance. He allowed five hits, issued four walks and struck out two.

Tech picked up its first win over ASU Saturday, winning 10-2.

Ruecker led the offensive attack, going 2-5, including a three-run homer in the sixth, to put Tech up 10-1.

Friday, junior Travis Flowers' two-run triple in eighth inning, sending the Sun Devils to a 6-3 win. Senior right-hander Travis Smith (0-1) took the loss, going 4 2/3 innings, giving up two runs on four hits, walking three and sitting down three. Right-handed junior transfer Josh Belovsky took the hardest hit, throwing for 2 2/3 innings, giving up four runs on five hits.

Tech plays Grand Canyon at 4 p.m. today and Tuesday in Phoenix, Ariz.

Tech hits stride as hoops race heats up

Arni Sribhen

The last time the SWC saw a race this up in the air was, well, this past football season, and everyone knows how that turned out.

For those who missed it, Texas Tech, Texas, Baylor, TCU and Rice shared the football title. Tech earned its first berth in the Cotton Bowl as a member of the SWC and all was well in the Hub City.

Now the conference is preparing for an encore performance in its other premier sport, men's basketball.

This past week was critical for the conference leaders. Wednesday night, the conference front runner, Texas, was upended by Houston. Then, Tech knocked off second-place Rice. Saturday, Texas ran past the Owls, and the Raiders upset the new SWC leader TCU.

As a result, three teams are tied for the conference lead, Texas, TCU and Tech. Texas A&M and Rice are tied for second just a game back. It wouldn't be a surprise to see these five teams battling for the SWC regular-season crown, but don't be shocked to see a repeat of football, with Tech on top.

The Raiders received a wake-up call when Texas beat them by 14 points in Austin. It seems the Red Raiders have shook off that loss, and it appears that they have finally hit their stride. It couldn't have come at a better time.

At the midway point of the conference schedule, Tech has gone a respectable 5-2 without playing its best basketball. However, the last two performances have been key for the Raiders.

After going cold in the Summit against Rice, the Raiders could have easily had a repeat performance of their game at Temple. The Raiders escaped with a 66-63 win.

Saturday, in a game that resembled a NASCAR race more than a basketball game, Tech put up its best performance to date. The Raiders beat the Horned Frogs and Kurt Thomas 107-88, running the Tech home winning streak to 12.

If the Raiders can build upon this performance, things will only get better as four of Tech's final seven SWC games will be in Lubbock.

If they start the second half as they finished the first, the Raiders will send a message to the rest of the conference, "Be afraid, be very afraid."

Tech women come in second

The Texas Tech women's tennis team finished second in its first competition of the semester, an indoor quadrangular meet over the weekend.

Tech hosted Texas-Arlington, Oklahoma City University and Texas-El Paso.

Tech faced UTEP Friday and was defeated 5-2. Tech head coach Kathy Vick said she was disappointed with the loss to UTEP because her team typically beats the Miners.

Tech defeated Texas-Arlington Saturday 5-4. Tech's Nicole Smith and Kelly Hay beat Jana Turkova and Ana Damjonovic 6-2, 6-3.

Tech also beat Oklahoma City University 6-1 on Saturday. Hay, Tracey Hopkins, Erika Fisher and Carmen Clark were all victorious in singles competition.

Smith and Hay and Fisher and Carrie Helbing were victorious in doubles action.

Tech sweeps basketball games from Horned Frogs

Lady Raiders remain unbeaten in conference play

FORT WORTH (Special) — Texas Tech began Saturday night's game against Texas Christian with a 15-0 run and never looked back until the final horn sounded and the scoreboard displayed 99-56.

For the first five minutes of the game, the Lady Raiders might have thought they were playing alone because it was not until the 15:02 mark the Lady Frogs scored their first points.

No. 6 Tech, 21-2 overall and 7-0 in Southwest Conference play, continued its all-time unbeaten streak against TCU and rounded out the first round of conference play unbeaten.

TCU (1-18, 0-7) failed to win its second game of the season.

"I thought we played well," assistant coach Roger Reding said. "It's a tough game to play. You can't afford to look ahead to the Aggies on Wednesday. It was a tough game for our kids to stay focused. You need to take care of all the little ones, or those little ones make the big ones even bigger."

Junior post Michi Atkins was Tech's leading scorer with 19 points and leading rebounder with nine. Senior forward Connie Robinson added 17 points and seven rebounds. Freshman post Alicia Thompson had a career-high 12 points.

"She's (Thompson) a great offensive player," Reding said. "We've known that and talked to her about that. We need to get her to understand the defensive end a little bit better. She's coming around."

Tech uncharacteristically spread the minutes pretty evenly among the entire roster. Freshman Elesha Walker saw the least time with 10 minutes of court time and senior Tabitha Truesdale played the most with 21 minutes.

Tech's defense held TCU to 31.9 percent shooting from the field while converting 47 percent on the offensive end. Tech outrebounded TCU 58-37.

"They were trying to slow us down and trying to get us to play their game, which is a lot slower than our game," senior guard Nikki Heath said. "Coach Sharp just told us to go out there and keep the intensity up and keep playing our game."

"We told each other right from the start that we were going to go out, attack them and be aggressive. We went out to get rebounds, make the shots and just play our game and do what we had to do to win it."

Tech continues its road trip when it opens the second round of SWC play at Texas A&M at 7 p.m. at G. Rollie White Coliseum in College Station.

Red Raiders earn share of first place

By Jonathan Harris
The University Daily

Texas Tech forwards Mark Davis and Jason Sasser proved to be double trouble for TCU as the Red Raiders beat the TCU Horned Frogs 107-88 on Saturday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Davis recorded Tech's second triple-double in school history, with 16 points, 11 rebounds and 13 assists. The 13 assists set a school record for assists in a game.

"I give all the credit to my teammates for catching the ball and scoring," Davis said. "Without them making the baskets, you can't get an assist." Sasser put together a double-double of his own with a career-high 36 points and 11 rebounds.

Defensively, Tech was able to control TCU's senior center Kurt Thomas who entered the game as the nation's leading scorer and rebounder. Tech coach James Dickey said he was impressed with the way his inside players handled Thomas.

"I cannot say enough good things about Darvin Ham, Gionet (Cooper), Tony (Battie) and Bernard Lloyd," Dickey said. "We told them in practice we would have to utilize all the players, and I thought they did a wonderful job against Thomas."

TCU, 13-6 overall and 5-2 in Southwest Conference play, took the early lead 16-9 at the 14:21 mark in the first half.

Tech (11-7, 5-2) fought back and scored seven unanswered points sparked by a guard Lance Hughes' dunk to tie the game at 16-16 with 12:44 left in the first half.

Tech continued its offensive explosion as the Raiders went on a 40-24 run to lead by as many as 15 and end the first half leading 49-40.

Tech shot 56 percent from the floor in the first half, hitting 19-of-34 and 40 percent from the perimeter sinking 4-of-10. Sasser led all first half scorers with 20 points.

In the second half, TCU attempted to come back but was not able to get any closer than five points. Tech extended its lead to as many as 17 points, 102-85, on a dunk by Davis at the 1:09 mark.

Tech ended the scoring with a layup by junior guard Koy Smith to give the Raiders their biggest lead of 19 and the win. Dickey said he was proud of his team because of its competitiveness.

"I'm extremely proud of this basketball team because they performed at a high level today," Dickey said. "They competed extremely hard today and played good defensively overall."

Tech will host Texas A&M at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the coliseum.
