SA candidates present platforms

By Lisa Ray

The University Daily

Texas Tech Student Association executive officer candidates discussed their platforms during a forum in the University Center at noon Wednesday.

Curt Bourne, SA presidential candidate, Homer Hensley and Deana Otts, external vice president candidates, and Yanci Yarbrough, Matt Freeman and Rob Flint, internal vice president candidates, also answered questions posed by The University Daily and 88.1 KTXT-FM representatives.

Increasing pedestrian-safety awareness, instituting the Internet system within the SA Office and improving student seating at Tech athletic games were items Bourne included in his platform.

Students can become more involved in student government issues and concerns through installing the Internet and E-mail system, Bourne said.

Hensley described his platform as one that will increase community relations and increase accountability of the external vice president position.

Student relations between senators and colleges also should be improved, Hensley said. Increasing student involvement in government could be done through a UD column that would discuss current SA issues and ask for student feedback, he said.

Increasing SA awareness, addressing campus issues, including bus transportation and legislation, and projecting a positive Tech image are issues on Otts' platform.

"We need to have a stronger voice with the administration," she said. "What we need to do is go to them and sit down with our concerns."

Planning forums for students, administrators and senators and encouraging an open-door policy in the SA Office also are two items Otts included in her platform.

Yanci Yarbrough, internal vice president candidate, said her SA knowledge and experience will help her achieve her three platform goals, including increasing senator accountability, establishing a student organization forum and educating senators on proper procedures.

Matt Freeman, internal vice president candidate, said he believes student senators are not being responsible to their colleges or to the students they represent. The senate should be the voice of the student body, and Tech students should challenge their senators, he said.

Rob Flint, internal vice president candidate, presented three of the five points of his platform, "Contract for Texas Tech."

A monthly executive officer forum should be established and a space should be allotted in the UD to print the senate journal, he said.

Tickets sell out for game

By Darrin Cook

The University Daily

Students attending today's men's basketball game need to be at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum 30 minutes before the game starts to ensure a seat.

Carol Baker, Texas Tech ticket manager and assistant athletic director, said the showdown between Tech and the University of Texas-Austin officially became a sellout Wednesday.

The game begins at 6:30 p.m. No-show tickets for the student section will be resold at 6 p.m. for $7, Baker said.

The student coupon ticket policy states that students need to be seated 30 minutes prior to the game, or their seat can be sold on a no-show basis, Baker said.

This is the first time this season the men's team has sold out a home game. Officials are expecting a capacity crowd of 8,174, which has not occurred for a men's game since 1989.

The fact that today's game will decide the front-runner for the Southwest Conference race had much to do with the sellout, Baker said.

"Our players are playing well and deserve to have a full house," she said.

The game will be televised on ESPN (Cox Cable Channel 31).

Season-ticket holder Chad Bush, a senior marketing major from Amarillo, said it should not take a game like this to sell out the coliseum, and students should support Tech by attending events such as basketball games.

"It's about time Tech students show support for the basketball team," Bush said. "It's great that Tech will have a sellout crowd in front of a national television audience."

Olympic gold winner contracts AIDS

CHICAGO (AP) — Greg Louganis, the only man to sweep diving gold medals at consecutive Olympics, is infected with the virus that causes AIDS, the Chicago Sun-Times reported Wednesday.

Louganis, who won four gold medals for springboard and platform diving at the Olympics in 1984 and 1988, will disclose that he is HIV positive in an interview on ABC's "20-20" on Friday, the newspaper said.

Louganis, 35, disclosed that he was homosexual at the Gay Games in New York last year. Since retiring from diving, he has pursued an acting career and appeared in an off-Broadway play.

The Sun-Times reported that in his forthcoming Random House book, "Breaking the Surface," Louganis revealed that he knew he was HIV positive when he struck his head during a dive at the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

The knowledge that his blood had spilled into the pool deeply troubled him, because he didn't know whether he had inadvertently exposed others to the virus, the Sun-Times quotes the book as saying.

Tom Perry, a spokesman for the publisher, said the Sun-Times report was "not entirely accurate," but he refused to elaborate and would not confirm other details of the book.

The only information Random House would reveal from the book was that Louganis talks about his homosexuality, dyslexia, racism he suffered because of his Samoan heritage, an abusive stepfather, teen-age depression and three suicide attempts.

Other major athletes who disclosed they suffered from the virus that causes AIDS were Magic Johnson and tennis champion Arthur Ashe. Johnson retired from the Los Angeles Lakers after first disclosing he had the AIDS virus in 1991, and Ashe died in February 1993, less than a year after announcing he had AIDS.

Telephone calls to Louganis' attorney, Pat Benson, and spokeswoman, Maggie Meyerson, were not returned.

A spokeswoman for "20-20" refused to discuss the contents of the Louganis segment on Friday night's show.

Louganis won his first medal, a silver, at the 1976 Games in Montreal when he was 16 years old.

He was a member of the 1980 Olympic squad but did not get to compete because of the U.S. boycott of the Moscow Games.

Program to benefit residents

Project makes homes available to city's low-income families

By Shannon Murphy

The University Daily

Some Lubbock residents may receive new homes through the city's Hope III housing relocation program.

The city was required to buy 16 houses along the west side of Indiana Avenue, from 34th Street to 50th Street, because of widening of the street, said Ross Crabtree, Lubbock neighborhood coordinator.

City officials are awaiting an environmental assessment to continue road construction, said Marsha Allen, Lubbock transportation planner.

Indiana Avenue construction is scheduled to be completed in eight to 10 months, Allen said.

Homes have already been placed onto trailers in preparation for relocation and to various areas around Lubbock, Crabtree said. The homes also will be renovated, he said.

The city had the option of tearing the houses down or moving them and making them available to low-income families through the Hope III housing project, he said.

"Some of the houses were taken down along the west side of Indiana to widen the road, and some were moved to vacant lots," Crabtree said.

Relocation regulations were required to be followed for families interested in applying for the housing project, Allen said.

"We had to follow all the federal laws that require us to follow relocation rules," she said. "We had to buy fair and equitable housing that was in the same type of range where they were before."

All of the houses that can be moved will be relocated, she said.

"We've demolished some, and some have been up for bid if we had any left," Allen said. "We are waiting on the approval of the draft environmental assessment, and we will be using federal funds for the project."

A contract was signed about a year and a half ago between the Lubbock City Council and the Texas Department of Transportation, she said.

Anytime federal funding is involved, the city is required to work with the DOT, she said.

Local band spilling poetry through music

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily

Stopping only for another cup of coffee, local band Spilling Poetry continues to produce an original sound with a stimulating beat.

"I think we have ended up capturing a sound that is different from anything around here," said Texas Tech student Brian Enderson, guitarist and vocalist. "It is conceptually different."

"And yeah, we drink endless pots of coffee." The band, which has been playing together for about a year, collectively writes songs and is inspired by life and personal experiences.

"Our music is existential," Enderson said. "It is almost spiritual. It is very uplifting and a great release."

Spilling Poetry

Where: Depot Warehouse

When: 9:30 p.m. Friday

Band fact: This coffee-loving band was formerly known as Boneflower Elegy and recently recorded its first compact disc.

Texas Tech student Jamie Sanders, also a guitarist and vocalist, said the group did not want to fall under the label of a local band.

"Lubbock used to be the musical mecca, but now it is Austin," Sanders said. "Lubbock produces a lot of talent, but they all move to Austin."

The band, formerly known as Boneflower Elegy, recently recorded its first compact disc, titled "Invisible."

It contains original songs and style, and was produced by Stuck Pig Productions.

"We spent two days in the warehouse where we practice, which we turned into a mini studio," said Texas Tech student Lynn Holdridge, percussionist. "We recorded 90 percent of the CD in one weekend."

Holdridge said the biggest problem in recording "Invisible," which will be released in early March, was the expenses.

"It wasn't just paying for the actual CD, it was also calling from Lubbock and dealing with people over the phone."

"They all say, 'Oh, Lubbock. Isn't that where Buddy Holly is from?'" he said.

Locally, the group has performed at On Broadway, The Depot Warehouse and the Depot Beer Garden.

They will join their friends, local group Spinning Ginny, at 9:30 p.m. Friday at the Depot Warehouse.

"We played in basements together and supported one another," Sanders said. "Their music is inspirational, and they have always pushed us when we needed it."

Bass guitarist, Ryan Muff, a member of the United States Air Force at Reese Air Force Base, said the band hopes to continue its music career for a while.

"If we had the chance, I'm sure we would leave Lubbock, too."

"Right now, we are working on a second CD and getting out of debt," Muff said.

Bill creates heated debate over affirmative action

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill offering 3.2 million self-employed people a tax deduction for their health insurance passed the House easily Tuesday night after provoking a heated debate on affirmative action.

The measure, adopted 381-44 and sent to the Senate, would retroactively and permanently make 25 percent of the cost of health insurance premiums deductible for farmers, small-business owners and others who work for themselves. It would restore a benefit, begun in 1986, that lapsed at the end of 1993 amid the larger debate over health care reform.

The legislation partially pays for the deduction — estimated to cost the Treasury $2.9 billion in lost revenues through 2000 — by eliminating a tax break for companies that sell broadcast stations to minorities.

That provision, retroactive to Jan. 17, would scuttle the pending $2.3 billion sale of Viacom Inc.'s cable systems to TeleCommunications Inc. and a firm headed by black broadcaster Frank Washington, a former general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission.

The bill would end the program, which Washington helped create in 1978. It allows companies selling radio and television stations and cable systems to minority-owned firms to defer taxes on their gain. The Viacom deal would cost taxpayers an estimated $400 million.

Democrats argued the program should be reformed, not eliminated. And Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said the measure was the "opening volley" of a campaign by Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and other Republicans to dismantle affirmative action programs.

Plano indoor smoking ban positive ordinance

Bingo night and a local smoking ordinance are the talk of the town at a local Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Plano.

According to the Dallas Morning News, a state district court judge in Austin issued a temporary restraining order barring the city from enforcing an ordinance which bans smoking in most indoor places open to the general public. The restraining order occurred after the VFW requested an injunction.

Since the VFW is a private organization, it is exempt from the smoking law. However, the VFW has been hosting weekly bingo games which are open to the public, which waives the exemption.

Needless to say, VFW leaders are hot. They say the smoking ban, which became effective Feb. 17, will ruin the operation.

The bingo hall owner, Ed Branom of San Angelo, said the ordinance would drive his Plano hall out of business.

"Bingo and smoking go hand in hand," he said in the Dallas Morning News. "It's too convenient for players to go to Richardson or Dallas."

Well, smoking and bingo aren't the only things that go hand in hand. So do smoking and lung cancer, smoking and emphysema, smoking and throat cancer ... the list goes on and on. VFW members stand to lose a lot more than funding if they continue to host weekly smoke-filled bingo sessions.

When smokers light up in enclosed areas, they don't just affect themselves, they affect everyone. Second-hand smoke has been proven a dangerous hazard time and time again.

Just because puffing away at a cigarette and marking B-14 on your bingo card may be nice, doesn't mean it's necessary. As in other indoor places open to the public throughout Plano, smokers can take a quick break, ask Aunt Gertie to mark their cards, and step outside for a smoke.

The VFW itself may be exempt because it is a private organization, but once the general public enters the picture (or the bingo hall), the ordinance is applicable.

VFW post Commander Dave Ayers said bingo games raise from $80,000 to $100,00 a year.

"Bingo's about 75 percent of our revenues," he said. "Losing that would be quite a loss and means we could not fund many of our programs."

However, the ordinance will not force the bingo hall to close. The weekly bingo meetings will continue, but they'll continue without the telltale smoky haze of cigarette smoke.

What may be an unwelcome ordinance for bingo players will be a healthy choice for the general public.

Readers Ask

Question: I live in a duplex off campus in what is known as the rape and robbery district. Two of my neighbors have been burglarized and I don't want it to happen to me. What can I do, since I rent and don't own, to make my place safe?

Answer: There are six things I can suggest to make your place safer.

- 1) Make burglars think you are home, even when you are not.
  - Purchase a timer (they are pretty cheap) and put it on a light.
  - Leave a radio on when you are out of the house and put it on an all talk station.
  - Get a friend or neighbor you trust to pick up your paper/mail if you are going out of town.

- Never leave a friend a note on your door saying you are gone.
  - Don't leave anything in your yard that might attract a thief.
- 2) Look at your duplex from the burglar's standpoint.
    - Make sure bushes are not so overgrown as to offer a place for a burglar to hide.
    - Ask your landlord to install a motion detector light on your front and back porch.
  - 3) Get a dog.
    - If you can't have a pet, then record an hour or two long tape of a dog barking intermittently and play it when you are gone.

- 4) Know what to hide and what not to hide.
  - Don't hide a spare key outside.
  - Hide your valuables (jewelry) in a plain box in the back of a seldom used kitchen cupboard or in a closet full of shoe boxes.
- 5) Engrave your belongings.
  - University Police services can engrave a driver's license number on items to assist with recovery in case of theft.
- 6) Secure your windows and doors
  - As of Jan. 1 new laws require landlords to:
    - Equip each exterior window with a window latch

- Equip each exterior door with a doorknob lock or keyed deadbolt
- Rekey the security divide operated by a key, card or combination no later than the seventh day after each tenant turnover date.
- If you have any questions about the security requirements for the place you are renting, contact the Attorney for Students on campus at 742-3289. There are many more rules and requirements that might affect your safety and we encourage you to educate yourself about your rights and responsibilities.

Affirmative action provides opportunity

To the editor:

The concept of potential employers using racial and sexual quotas is frightening to the majority of college students. After completing the four or more years it requires to just receive a bachelor's degree, we are ready to enter the working world. When debt concerns and fatigue from living consistently short of funds are added to the equation, the potential of not having a job when parental or federal aid ends is terrifying. As a white male, I am particularly vulnerable to this fear. This was only compounded when I was informed that although all the spring '94 students who graduated from my program found a job, the individual who took the longest to place was a white male.

This does not, however, justify eliminating affirmative action programs. In Eric Sanchez's article "Minorities should not receive benefits" he states that he and many Americans feel the government has leveled the "playing field." This conclusion is interesting considering that in the following paragraph he quotes one of the standard anti-affirmative action statistics that only one in 280 black applicants had high enough scores to be accepted into the UT law school in 1992. If the playing field were truly level shouldn't the percentage of applicants with high enough scores be constant through the ethnic groups and the sexes. Since it is not, we can assume the playing field is not level.

Eric Sanchez represents everything wrong with affirmative action. He admits using his Hispanic heritage to get him into college despite mediocre test scores. He also admits that his ethnicity is as diverse as the "General Assembly of the United Nations." Although benefiting greatly from an affirmative action program, he now advocates the elimination of these programs. This is very hypocritical. Mr. Sanchez has a completely different perspective on life and politics as I do. Even though I've disagreed with most of what he has said, he has given me cause to think. I believe he is a valuable part of the Tech community. Had it not been for affirmative action programs he might not have been in school and we may not have been able to enjoy his perspective on life, whether we love it or hate it.

This is the aim of affirmative action, to include the diversity that can be found among the ethnic groups in this country. The ability to see issues from a different perspective is going to be imperative during the "information age," and needs to be considered as a qualification for employment. The difficulty is quantifying this ability. The present system is, I will admit, flawed. Because a person can prove a genetic tie to an ethnic group does not mean he has the perspective of that culture. Mr. Sanchez seems to be a good example of this. What is needed is reform of these programs, not elimination.

Many people, myself included, hope that one day affirmative action will not be necessary. This day, however, does not seem as if it will be anytime soon. The playing field will be truly leveled when we stop hearing such phrases "first African American to walk in space," or "First Hispanic mayor." The playing field does not become level once you personally have benefited and are ready to enjoy the fruits of those benefits. Mr. Sanchez if you are truly troubled by being a recipient of preferential treatment, I'm sure there is a scholarship on campus that would gladly accept any financial aid that you think was extra due to your Hispanic heritage. Until that day, do not try and take away the opportunities for other ethnic students and please make sure that you don't get a job after graduation due to a company quota. I would hate for you to have to compromise your principles, and the company would do better to employ someone with the sensibilities they desire.

Column fails in making Oscar choices

To the editor:

It is important to back opinions with facts or knowledge of the material. I am writing in regards to the editorial in the paper Feb. 13. It is a good idea to write a witty and intelligent opinion about the picks for Academy Awards, yet this article is a poor attempt at wit and is backed with nothing but pure ignorance.

I am amazed that this article, written by the editor, would attempt to write about films that were not even seen by her. To call anything "whiney, weepy, and stupid" by watching the two-minute trailer, displays the attention span of a bucket of hair. Foster has been nominated for "The Accused" and "Silence of the Lambs" yet the incorrect grammar in this editorial leads the reader to believe that she has been nominated for "Nell" in the past. Movies made for the big screen are best seen and judged on the big screen, not in a manner that has been formatted to fit your television screen.

Christy Everett states that she didn't see "Pulp Fiction" because it was only at the theater several weeks. Several implies to me a minimum of three weeks, which means that there were no less than 84 (four shows a day for three weeks) screenings of this film. It seems to be a lack of effort on the part of the writer to attend this film. The local movie theaters certainly made an effort to make it available. How could Ms. Everett quote the line "bacon tastes good," if she hasn't seen it and doesn't know the context in which the quote was delivered?

Furthermore, if the only message that is received in "Forrest Gump" is the life is like a box of chocolates line, than I agree, it shouldn't be nominated. Thank goodness there are also people that will walk away from this movie with an intelligent analysis of the story structure, not a cute line to quote at parties, restaurants and insipid articles. I have no problems with the opinions of the best actor and best actress. Ms. Everett actually saw them and can back them up with her reasons. An audience will see a film for many reasons, whether it be for a "British accent" or because the actor is "attractive." Yet, I hope a journalist can give reasons and examples rather than sweeping generalizations such as "courageous" and "excellent."

I do congratulate you for writing something that motivated me to actually write the school newspaper, but it's disappointing that it had to be on the premise of a poorly written article.

Student spends semester abroad in Manchester

By Gary Black

The University Daily

Jason Wright's dream of traveling to a foreign country came true when he spent four months studying in Manchester, England, last semester.

"I've always been interested in going abroad, but I had never thought about England," Wright said. "When a friend of mine got back from South Africa and she was telling me about it, that sparked my interest in going again."

Wright, a junior family studies major from Fort Worth, took part in a reciprocal exchange program organized by the Office of International Affairs. He studied at Manchester Metropolitan University from Sept. 20 to Dec. 20. "I always knew about the Office of International Affairs, so I was aware of their help," Wright said. "I did a reciprocal exchange program."

Wright said he pays his tuition and is registered at Texas Tech, but he studies in Manchester. In turn, a student from Manchester pays his or her tuition, but studies at Tech, he said.

In Manchester, Wright said he studied psychology, his minor, because the university did not offer a family studies major.

"Classes met once a week," Wright said. "In class, you got a lot of theory, but you did lots of research on your own."

Wright said classes in Manchester are aimed more at personal interpretation, while classes in the United States are more structured.

"We buy books here to use," he said. "There you get a book list of 20 to 30 books on the subject, and you get to read what you want."

Wright said at the university level, students study only course work in their majors.

"You are given a curriculum to follow, and it usually lasts about three years," he said.

Wright said he received a lot of attention for being an American student, but he said he received special attention for being from Texas.

"I was asked if I had ever been to South Fork," Wright said, referring to the ranch from the television series "Dallas."

"I was also asked if I had a 10-gallon hat."

"The weirdest thing I noticed were the cars coming on the wrong side of the road," Wright said.

Campaign slated to create awareness

By Guy Priel

The University Daily

Making young adults aware of the dangers of smoking is the focus of a joint campaign between the Texas Department of Health and the American Cancer Society.

The campaign is designed to counteract advertising from the tobacco industry which presents tobacco use as glamorous, said Sharon Kohout, assistant director of the TDH's office of smoking and health.

"The posters and billboards which will be used in the campaign combine three pictures of the back-sides of animals, with a fourth picture of a snuffed-out cigarette," she said.

The caption at the bottom of the advertisement is the slogan of the campaign, "Butts Are Gross," she said.

Kohout said the campaign received funding through a grant from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Smoking

- 45 states and the District of Columbia limit or restrict smoking in public places.
- Smoking is restricted in all government buildings.
- Hotels, motels and car rental agencies continue to set aside more rooms and vehicles for non-smokers.
- Smoking is banned on all domestic flights in the continental U.S.
- Exposure to second-hand smoke increases risks of lung cancer in non-smokers.

SOURCE: THE AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

In Texas, it is illegal to sell tobacco products to minors, but they still have access to the products and are smoking at younger ages than ever before, said David Smith, Texas Commissioner of Health.

"Besides the legal deterrent against the onset of smoking and chewing tobacco among teens and young adults, we also need to break the social climate which makes smoking look 'cool,'" he said.

The new campaign makes the point to even the most unlearned person that smoking is not glamorous, Smith said. The campaign was originally developed by the Minnesota Health Department and used suggestions from young people on how they could prevent their friends from smoking, she said.

"The state of Pennsylvania has also used the concept in a multi-media campaign to prevent or stop smoking among America's youth," she said.

The statewide campaign includes more than 90 billboards, 86 radio stations, 53 television stations and 79 newspapers, said Margaret Wilson, director of public information at the TDH.

"In addition, posters have been distributed to 45,000 work sites, schools, health care providers and community organizations," she said.

The designers of the campaign hope the mass advertising will counteract the advertisements used to induce people to try tobacco products, Kohout said.

"Despite all previous efforts, the number of young people using tobacco products continues to increase," said Tony Lloyd, executive director of the Lubbock Chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Health care, welfare reforms coincide, officials say

By Guy Priel
The University Daily

Debate over welfare reform cannot be solved without addressing welfare programs and the health care issue, said medical officials.

"When you talk about welfare reform, you must inevitably talk about health care reform because welfare is at the very heart of the issue," said Bill Poteet, Methodist Hospital president and chief executive officer.

Issues being ignored in health care and welfare debates include Medicare and Medicaid, which are included in welfare programs, Poteet said.

"Should money for health care services be given to all needy people who qualify or be put into a pot to distribute to needy people as they see fit?" said Doug Goodman, director for the Lubbock City/County Health Department.

Any time the government discusses the budget and where budget cuts need to be made, Medicare will ultimately suffer, he said.

"That (Medicare) is where the link between welfare and health reform comes from," he said. "Cutting Medicare means needy people lose out on medical benefits which they need."

The U.S. citizens have a right to a secure peace of mind when it comes to health care issues and affordable medicine, Poteet said.

"We need health care leadership in Washington, and it is not going to come from this administration," he said.

Everything about health care reform depends on the welfare reform issue because of the new focus in medicine which is the trend of the 1990s, Poteet said.

"In a health management organization, everyone pays for medical services while only a few take advantage," he said.

Welfare is the same, Poteet said. Americans pay taxes to support welfare for the needy few who need it, he said.

"The government looks at the issue as cutting the budget and saving money, but overall we are hurting the nation and ignoring the needy," Poteet said.

The nation should not cut people off because they are poor, young or unmarried, but it also should require work and responsibility, President Clinton said during a radio address in January.

"If we are going to reform welfare and health care, let's do it right," Clinton said. "Let's not punish those who really need government benefits."

Detective acknowledges Simpson investigation flawed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the detectives in charge of the O.J. Simpson case conceded Wednesday that the investigation was flawed by failures to collect blood from a gate, preserve the contents of Nicole Brown Simpson's stomach and test blood splattered on her back.

Detective Tom Lange, on the stand for a third day, said some of the holes in the case were the fault of evidence technicians and the coroner. Some decisions the defense pressed him on, were his own.

Meanwhile, in a setback for the defense, the only witness Simpson's lawyers can use to portray Detective Mark Fuhrman as a racist doesn't want to testify because of the heavy publicity surrounding the case, prosecutors said in court papers.

The defense has suggested Fuhrman planted a bloody glove on Simpson's property. The development involving the witness, Kathleen Bell, raises doubts as to whether the defense will ever be allowed to question Fuhrman about allegations of racism.

According to the defense, the Los Angeles-area woman contends

Fuhrman expressed hatred of mixed-race couples and used the word "nigger." Judge Lance Ito has disallowed other allegations of racism on Fuhrman's part.

Tech professor writes book with evidence about wages

By Darrin Cook
The University Daily

A Texas Tech economics professor has co-written a book offering new evidence that wages are the principal deterrents that keep workers from changing jobs.

Thomas Steinmeier, a Tech economics professor and co-author of the book "Pension Incentives and Job Mobility," said his book may cause firms to rethink their personnel policies.

The policies utilize pensions as a means of controlling mobility when trying to decrease labor costs or increase production.

"People separate from pension jobs a whole lot less than jobs that don't have pension," Steinmeier said. "People that have pension jobs seem to have jobs that are desirable in a lot of directions."

Steinmeier said pension jobs seem to be better in myriads of dimensions including paying better by a considerable amount, offering better vacation time and receiving superior health coverage.

"What we are arguing is that the reason people are staying more at pension jobs isn't necessarily because they are going to lose a whole lot of pension value if they quit, it's that those jobs are likely to be better all around," Steinmeier said.

He said this study contradicts earlier research that suggested workers are less likely to change jobs because they are afraid of losing their pensions.

The co-author of the book is Alan Gustman, a professor of economics at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H.

The book is published by the Upjohn Institute in Kalamazoo, Mich.

"We have been working together for close to 15 years and visit at meetings often," Steinmeier said. "We sent copies of drafts back and forth on the Internet, and it has been a fairly long-term collaboration."

Steinmeier said they finished the final page proofs in January, and the book should be released in a couple of months.

Lewis Hill, professor and chairman of the economics department at Tech, said Steinmeier is the best resource economist in the department.

"Thomas is published in more prestigious literary journals than any other professor in our department," Hill said.

Steinmeier earned a bachelor's degree in economics in 1969 from Northwestern University and a doctorate in economics from Yale University in 1965.

He has been an economics professor at Tech since 1982.

Graham says Global Mission on cutting edge of evangelism

NEW YORK (AP) — At age 76, Billy Graham is no longer the dominant, physically imposing figure who could command a stadium's attention with his presence. Technology is giving the century's most famous evangelist the opportunity to preach to the world from the site of a single crusade.

It's called Global Mission, and it will be coming March 16-18 from the Greater Puerto Rico Billy Graham Crusade in San Juan.

Satellite uplinks will transmit Graham's services to local sites in 175 countries, reaching up to 8 million people nightly in what representatives of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association call the greatest Gospel outreach in history.

"We're not going to reach the whole world," he said. "But we're going to be the early forerunners of how it can be done technologically."

Actress says character 'constipated'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — To actress Jennifer Elise Cox, TV character Jan Brady always seemed a bit, well, constipated.

And that was the challenge in recreating on the big screen the role of the middle daughter on television's "The Brady Bunch."

"She was my favorite character growing up and watching the show," Cox told reporters in an interview before the movie opened last week-end.

"The first step is working on the voice.

"She just has this really breathy voice, and she has this look about her. ...

"It's almost like, you know, I hate to say constipated, but it's almost like, you know, very intense expressions!"

Doorman now leading man in series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nicholas Turturro is on the other side of the door these days.

The New York doorman-turned-leading man is still adjusting to his success as Detective James Martinez on ABC's "NYPD Blue."

"I used to be this crazy little charismatic doorman. I'd see the world go by me," Turturro says in Wednesday's editions of the Daily News of Los Angeles. "But all of a sudden, it's 'Mr. Turturro, can I have your autograph?'"

Turturro also stars in the movie "Federal Hall," which opened this month in limited release.

Acting runs in the family. Brother John recently played "Quiz Show" contestant Herbert Stempel.

Dykes promotes Goodner

Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes promoted assistant coach John Goodner to defensive coordinator Wednesday.

Goodner, who coached inside linebackers last season, was a key element in the building of a Texas Tech defense that finished No. 22 nationally and helped the Red Raiders last season to their first Cotton Bowl since 1939.

"John is a tremendous football coach who has done an outstanding job in his two years here," Dykes said. "I'm proud he is a part of our coaching staff."

Dykes had personally overseen the defense the past two seasons after defensive coordinator Carlos Mainord left after the 1992 season for the Chicago Bears.

Dykes also announced that the Red Raiders had added 6-foot, 4-inch, 300-pound offensive lineman Jayson Hansen.

Red Raiders and Longhorns battle for first in SWC

By Jonathan Harris

The University Daily

It's not the OK Corral, but at sundown Thursday there's bound to be a shoot-out between the two top guns in the Southwest Conference.

The Texas Tech Red Raiders will play host to Texas at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday with a conference championship in the balance and the loser having to start circling the wagons to hold on to its chances at the Southwest Conference crown.

The game will be nationally televised on ESPN (Cox Cable channel 31).

Texas, 17-5 overall, 8-2 in conference play, is coming off a 70-54 win over Temple Sunday.

In the earlier matchup between the two teams, Texas beat the Raiders 82-68.

Tech committed 29 turnovers, and the 'Horns defense held Tech's big-three scorers Lance Hughes, points a game, scored a game-high 28 points in the earlier meeting. In his three prior games in Lubbock, Rencher has averaged 23.5 points, 7.0 rebounds and 4.0 assists.

Anderson, who is tied for the nation's lead in steals, added 18 points and five steals for the Longhorns in the first meeting with Tech.

Senior guard Lance Hughes said the outcome of the Texas game could depend on the play of the Tech perimeter players.

"We really need to quit dribbling so much," Hughes said.

"We dribble into their press, and their trapping men are so quick, and before you know it, you have to pass through two people, and that gets hard."

Davis said Tech has changed dramatically since the first meeting.

"The whole team knows we didn't play well in Austin," Davis said.

"We have a home-winning streak, and we've had good fan support lately, and we'd like to get this big win against Texas and keep on the roll we have been on."

Dickey said he thinks Tech needs to work on many things to get a win against the Longhorns.

"For us to win, there are some things we need to work on," Dickey said.

"We need to take care of the basketball, attack their press, play better defensively against their guards and get better board play."

The Texas guard combo of Terrence Rencher and Roderick Anderson will be a key for the Raiders' defense.

Rencher, who is averaging 18.5

Mark Davis and Jason Sasser to a combined 33 points. Since the loss in Austin, the Raiders (15-7, 9-2) have put together a six-game winning streak.

Tech coach James Dickey said in the previous game between the two teams, both squads failed to play to their potential.

"In the first ballgame, I didn't think either team played exceptionally well," Dickey said. "They obviously played better than we did. We played tentative and committed too many turnovers."

The University Daily

The latest standout for the Texas Tech men's golf team is sophomore Chris Hill.

The Red Raider linksters ended the fall season ranked 25th in the nation and Hill began the spring season by finishing fourth at the 23rd Annual International Intercollegiate Club Campestre in Monterrey, Mexico.

Hill's three-round total of 220 helped Tech earn a fifth-place finish in the tournament.

Hill joined the team his freshman year during walk-on tryouts in the fall of 1992.

"It's pretty uncommon for someone to walk on here at Tech," Hill said. "I didn't play very well my last year in high school. I came out here and thought I had a chance to play right away. I learned a lot my freshman year."

At Lufkin High School, Hill was a three-year letterman and made the all-district team three years.

Hill was redshirted last season, his second year at Tech but has stormed back to be one of the top five on the team.

"There's always a little competition on the team during qualifying," Hill said. "It could cause problems but I have a good relationship with all the players, and we know we're a team."

Hill said his favorite golfer is Fred Couples, but Hill said his dad, David, has had the biggest influence on his life.

"My dad got me into golf as well as skiing and hunting," Hill said. "Other than golf I guess I just do what other people my age do with their free time. I starting playing golf at a young age. We lived on a golf course, so I had plenty of time to practice."

Tech's next tournament is the Crown Colony Tournament in Hill's hometown of Lufkin.

"It's a great course," Hill said. "I'll have a lot of friends and family there, but I don't think there will be any extra pressure."

Tech broke the top 25 in the fall to place three Southwest conference teams among the best in the nation. Hill said Texas, Houston and even TCU will be the teams to beat.

"It is definitely one of the strongest conferences," Hill said. "The ranking is a good position to be in to go to regionals. I don't think there is anybody on the team that doesn't think we'll make regionals. Our goal is to make nationals. This year we have more depth to do it."

The team going to Lufkin will include junior Bryan Novoa, junior Chris Mathis and senior Mike Schrade, according to Hill. The fifth player will be determined during next week's qualifying.

Women's golf team ties for 14th at Arizona tourney

The Texas Tech women's golf team opened its spring schedule in unconvincing fashion, finishing tied for 14th with New Mexico at the Chris Johnson Arizona Invitational in Tucson, Ariz.

The two teams tied with a three-day total of 942, with the Red Raiders shooting 315-313-314.

Arizona State took home the team trophy, with final score of 872.

Heather Bowie (214) and Wendy Ward (216) of ASU finished one-two in the individual portion of the tournament.

Junior J.J. Rorie, was the highest Red Raider finisher, as she finished tied for 15th, with Jennifer Choi of UCLA. She completed the event with a score of 228 (75-77-76).

Senior Stacey Kolb, who had a three-day total of 237, along with three other competitors, came in the 46th spot. Sophomore Tamara Parker finished tied with four others for 62nd, with a score of 241.

Freshman Amy Marsh tied with Meg Maedo of Washington for 87th.

Both golfers ended with a total of 250.

Freshman Leanne Jones rounded out the team, ending in a two-way tie with Tracy May of New Mexico. They totaled 254 for the three rounds of play.

WAC suspends Hawaii starter

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — The Western Athletic Conference has suspended University of Hawaii junior starting forward Justice Sueing for the school's next two regular season games, including Thursday's game at New Mexico.

Conference Commissioner Karl Benson said the suspension was levied Wednesday because of "an intentional and flagrant act of unsportsmanlike conduct" by Sueing during last Saturday's 63-57 loss to Utah.

The Albuquerque Journal reported Wednesday that a game videotape showed Sueing throwing elbows at Utah players three times Saturday — twice at Alex Jensen and once at Brandon Jessie. Utah coach Rick Majerus said Jessie suffered a mild concussion.

"It was vicious, and I thought it looked intentional," Majerus said Tuesday.

Although the action went undetected by game officials, Benson reviewed videotape and determined a violation had occurred.

"Whether it was provoked or not, it has absolutely no place in intercollegiate athletics," Benson said. "The WAC will not condone this type of conduct under any circumstance."

The two-game suspension is consistent with NCAA basketball fighting rules.

Benat inks with Tech soccer team

The Texas Tech women's soccer team received more good news Wednesday when Jennifer Benat of Richardson Berkner signed a national letter of intent.

Benat was named to the all-district and all-area teams as a junior last year.

She is a member of the National Honor Society.
