GLBSA denied funding

By Lisa Ray
The University Daily
The Texas Tech Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Student Association lost its proposed funding from the Student Association during debate in Thursday's Student Senate meeting, and three other organizations were denied requests for increased funding.
Ken Trimble, a senator-at-large from Lubbock, introduced the amendment to slash the GLBSA funding because the organization is political, he said.
According to the yearly revised funding request requirements, any organization that advocates political actions or makes efforts aimed at influencing the operation of government, such as activities that target an issue with political ramifications, will not be funded.

A grievance filed by the GLBSA against Tech President Robert Lawless regarding his disapproval of the homosexual lifestyle and the group's plans to protest through sit-ins and a letter-writing campaign to the UD are actions that could be deemed as political, Trimble said.
During the senate meeting March 2, senators allotted the GLBSA $100. But the senate unanimously voted to eliminate the allotted funding Thursday night.
Mark Hoesterey, an architecture senator from Dallas, also proposed increasing the allotted $386 to Tau Sigma Delta, an honorary fraternity for architecture and the allied arts, to $500, but the amendment failed after debate and a roll-call vote.

Eric Sanchez, a graduate senator from Fort Worth, struck down the amendment saying the highly restrictive organization, which requires a 3.0 GPA, did not deserve the increase because the Budget and Finance Committee is trying to allocate more money to those organizations with less-restrictive membership requirements this year.
"This seriously compromises the strengths and excellence they can achieve due to some stupid restriction like requiring a 3.0 GPA," said Robb Flint, an arts and sciences senator from Lubbock. "I think that (GPA requirement) is great. It would give students something to work for."

Amy Bennett, an arts and sciences senator from Dallas, asked for $153 more for Mass Communications Week and was denied. Questions were asked where the money would come from and what other funds the organization raised.
Mitchell Allen, a graduate senator from Lubbock, said more of a burden should be put on an organization to raise money within organization itself.
Angel Flight asked for $1,027 more than its allocated $723. Flint introduced the amendment but was struck down after debate questioned why Angel Flight requested more money.

CIA informant linked to deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Guatemalan colonel who ordered the murders of an American hotel operator and a Guatemalan guerilla leader married to a U.S. citizen was on the payroll of the CIA, a member of the House Intelligence Committee said Wednesday.
But the Central Intelligence Agency, along with the State Department and the Defense Department's National Security Agency, have covered up the U.S. involvement in the two murders, Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., complained in a letter to President Clinton.
Torricelli told Clinton in the letter, a copy of which was read to The Associated Press, that he wanted a Justice Department investigation of the CIA's role in the deaths of Michael DeVine and Efrain Bamaca Velasquez and the firing of all "government employees who knew of the murders."
DeVine, an American who operated a hotel in Guatemala's rain forest, was killed in 1990 and Bamaca was killed in 1992 while being held by the Guatemalan military, Torricelli said.
In his letter to Clinton, he said the killings were ordered by Col. Julio Roberto Alpirez, a Guatemalan intelligence officer who "was under contract with the CIA and remained on the payroll at the time of the murders."
"The CIA had direct information about the deaths of both individuals at the time of the murders and there never has been any question about what occurred," Torricelli said in his letter. "That information was contained in U.S. government cables and extensive internal memoranda."

"The State Department and the National Security Agency have known the U.S. government has been complicitous in these murders and continues to mislead the American people," he said. "Almost nothing the United States has revealed about either case has been true."
State Department and CIA officials declined to comment on the letter.
Bamaca's widow, Jennifer Harbury, said in an interview Wednesday night with the AP that she felt bitter toward officials in both the State Department and on Clinton's National Security Council staff who, she said, had misled her about her husband's fate.
Harbury staged a 32-day hunger strike in Guatemala last fall and has been on a second such protest since March 12 in front of the White House — all to demand information about what happened to her husband.
All the while, she said, the U.S. government was fully aware of her husband's death and the circumstances behind it.
She said she hopes to review official documents about the case.
Based on what she learns, she said, she will decide whether to take legal action against the U.S. government.
"These people stood by knowing the truth and not telling me," Harbury said.

Tech's Brandon Station to be used for water treatment

By Shannon Murphy
The University Daily
Local water treatment will be completed at Texas Tech's co-generation plant, Brandon Station, following an agreement made between the Lubbock City Council and power and environmental specialists Thursday.
Brandon Station, which contains utilities to create electricity and other power sources, was brought on-line on the Tech campus in June 1990.

"There have been continuous problems with the raw water treatment at the plant, and in November of 1994, the city sent out a request for proposals for a water-treatment specialists to complete some tasks," Lubbock Mayor David Langston said.
Tasks environmental specialists are slated to complete include:
• an investigation and evaluation of the present Reverse Osmosis Demineralizer system, as installed by the contractor

• modification recommendations that will assure that this system will operate as needed for long-term efficient operation and at a minimal cost and maintenance Power and Environmental Specialists was the only company to respond completely to the request for proposals that were sent out to 31 engineering water treatment companies," officials said.
Brandon Station, located on the Tech campus across from the aquatic center, is owned by the city, said Gene West, Tech physical plant director.

"Brandon Station is similar to a big jet engine like in an airplane, and it burns natural gas to make electricity and steam," West said.
Brandon Station turns a generator and creates electricity, which is sent to the city and sold, he said.
Tech also uses the energy, he said.

"It has saved Tech about $1.1 million a year by furnishing us with steam," West said. "The water that is used to make steam must be extremely pure, and the water that Brandon Station has needs to be treated and purified before it can be used for steam."
It will take six to eight weeks for power and environmental specialists to complete the contract, city officials said.
The estimated cost for the contract totals $23,450, city officials said.

Veto bill looking good to Congress

By Donald Gillilan
The University Daily
Moving closer to completing the Contract With America, members of Congress are considering passage of the line-item veto bill.
The measure would give the president authority to eliminate individual projects from spending bills.
The president must pass or veto an entire bill. If the president vetoes the legislation, it is sent back to Congress with objections from the president.
If members of Congress do not agree with the president's intentions, they can override the veto by a two-thirds majority vote in both Houses.
The intent of a line-item veto is the president can review a bill and line out amendments he considers unimportant, said Keith Williams, press secretary of Larry Combest, R-Lubbock.
"It's a great idea," said Robert Beach, president of Texas Tech College Republicans. "This bill shows great courage and belief on the part of the Republicans to give a sitting Democrat president."

The measure is not as powerful as it seems, it will make Congress think twice before sending pork-filled legislation to the president, Beach said.
Michael Turner said he agrees with the measure, and it will be the only way to cut extra spending.
"I think this bill will be something that is going to come back and bite the Republicans in the butt," Turner said.
Line-item veto is something the Republicans have been discussing for 10 years, Turner said.
Now they keep saying they want it so they do not get a "pie thrown in their face." Republicans wished they would have pass the legislation earlier, he said.
"This bill doesn't show any courage among Republicans," Turner said.
Williams said one of the arguments for line-item veto is the president might use arm-twisting tactics to get members of Congress to join him.
"Essentially, the president will have more power to veto a line out of a bill," he said. "We believe this is the way to go."

Committee names editor to lead UD staff in 1995-96 school year

By Amy Osmulski
The University Daily
The Student Publications Committee named Megan Clark as 1995-96 editor of The University Daily late Thursday.
Clark, a sophomore journalism student from Katy, is the news editor of The UD.
"The UD will have a person at the helm who to all appearances is seasoned in the trenches, pretty bright and certainly wants to produce a student-oriented newspaper," said committee member Randy Reddick, a professor of journalism.
With two years of experience at The UD, a fair number of journalism courses under her belt and high recommendations, the committee felt Clark was well qualified for the position, Reddick said.

Clark

Clark said there will not be any major changes in The UD, just minor changes in design and staff.
Strengthening campus coverage and bringing the Texas Tech tower back to the newspaper masthead are some of Clark's goals for next year.
"I really want my reporters out there in the Tech community," she said. "I don't want to wait for people to come to us, because we need to find out what is happening. That's our job."
Clark said she hopes to continue doing what The UD has always done — covering issues on the Tech campus in a fair and impartial way.
Better communication in the newsroom is another one of Clark's goals for next year.
"Everything starts here in the newsroom," she said. "If things aren't working smoothly here, the stories

Cricket invasion good for Lubbock

Two-bits, four-bits, six-bits, a dollar, all for the Crickets, stand up and holler. Chirp.

Many a Lubbockite is voicing an opinion about the name for the Hub City baseball team.

Fierce mascot

This editorial board thinks the name is just peachy. Some say the mascot is not fierce enough. That's not necessarily so. Many people wouldn't kill a cricket on a dare — you know, the bad luck thing. That's another plus. The mascot is good luck. Also, what is the one bug that bugs you on camp outs (besides mosquitoes)? Crickets.

That darn chirp, chirp, chirping is enough to drive Mr. Macho to tears, if he is tired enough.

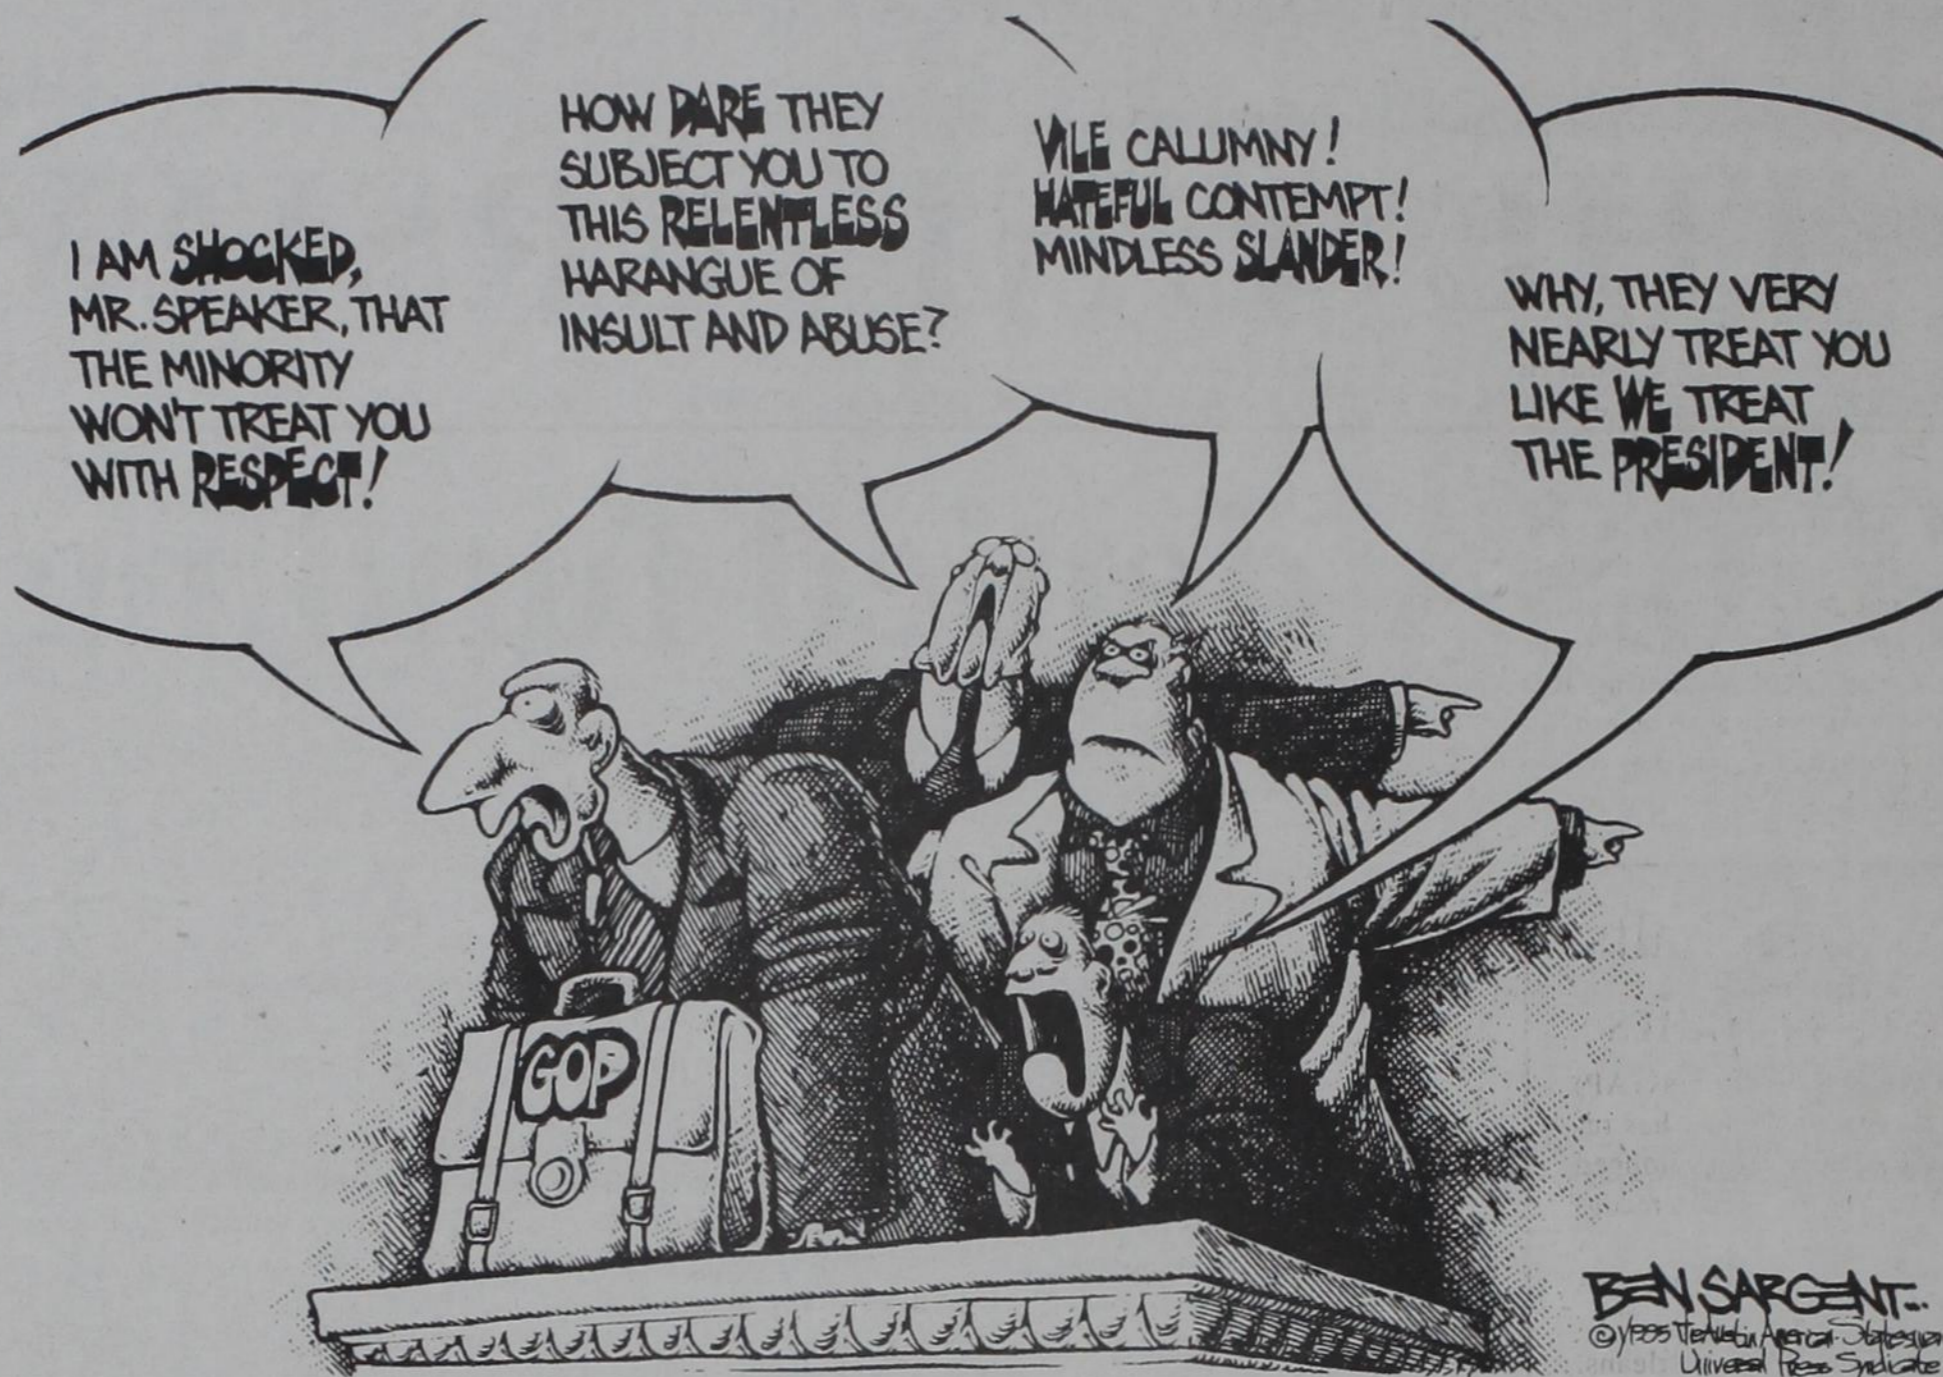

How this relates to the Crickets, we'll never know. But it has something to do with how our team will be so good, other teams will be forced to break down into tears.

Endless opportunities

And think about all the possibilities at the concession stand:

- Chocolate-covered crickets
  - Lime-green snocones
  - Green sherbet ice cream cones
  - Green lollipops
- Hey, what about all the nifty outer wear we get to buy?
- Cricket hats
  - Black-rimmed Buddy Holly glasses with flashing yellow eyes
  - Chirping-horn things fans can operate
- The name is good.
 The Jackrabbits would have been bad.
 The logo is cute.
 The name is original.
 The possibilities are great.
 Everything is sunny and bright.

The seven-member editorial board voted 6-1 on this issue.

Method for students to avoid boredom

Chris Walters

A stranger visiting Tech this week might notice the leisurely pace of the students, how we take our time to speak, how we spend the hours between classes sitting idly outside or dozing on the dead grass. A stranger might attribute this to the general pace of the South and to this unusually warm spate of weather we're experiencing. The truth, however, is that everyone's depressed. The ending of Spring Break is one of the most traumatic experiences known to students—no other single incident can so completely destroy a person's will to live. I slump down in my classes as if I've eaten a bottle of thorazine tablets. I stare at my wrists during lectures and consider gnawing them open. Twice I've thrown myself in front of Citibuses, but the drivers always stop for a break before they reach me, and after a while

I just stand up and walk away. (Ha ha, that was a joke so please don't bomb my house.)

What happened to us over the past week? Why do we suffer from the doldrums? And just what are doldrums anyway? Webster's Dictionary defines "doldrums" as "a silly word no one uses anymore." That's an outright lie, but I'm too depressed to actually look the word up. I obviously don't know the answer to these questions. But in the interest of the greater good, I spent all yesterday afternoon with my friend Debby Throckmorton coming up with a list of things to do to waste time during the final weeks of school.

Ways to Waste Time During the Final Weeks of School

- Play Traffic Control Booth Routine: Drive in a circle around the traffic control booth, making up a new excuse each time you come to the traffic control booth officer, until either you're finally allowed onto campus or the police come.

- Follow a fraternity or sorority member around, and keep jumping up and down and saying, "Can I be in your fraternity/sorority? Huh? Huh? Can I, please?"

- Drive around Memorial Circle at noon with a car full of friends. Lean out the windows and scream, "Go Lady Raiders! Woo hoo hoo! Go Lady Raiders!" (Remember to make the guns-up sign with your hands.)

- Go to that class you've been skipping regularly since the first week of school, and ask all those questions about the syllabus (like test dates, writing assignments, etc.) that you never had a chance to ask in the beginning.

- Go to the Financial Aid Office and pretend you have a severe stuttering problem. Get really angry when you start to ask your question. Try to take up a good 20 or 30 minutes of the financial aid officer's time—though you should be warned that the students behind you will not see the humor in this.

- Break up the monotony of a long lecture by asking, "Will this be on the test?" after every sentence the professor or teaching assistant utters.

- Play Taxi Your Friend Relay: Drive past the traffic control booth without stopping, take your friend as close as possible to the building of his or her choice, and leave campus via another traffic control booth route before the police catch you. This is more fun if you enter the campus from the opposite side of where you need to go.

- Play Where's My Car: Go to the commuter lots west of the Rec Center, hold your keys in your hand, and walk from car to car with a searching expression. If you're convincing enough, you can get five or six cars to follow you at a time.

- Plant a tree.
- Pre-register (not that this is fun or anything, but it's guaranteed to take up the rest of your semester).

Organization overdoes animal rights

To the editor:
 Walking through the University Center on Tuesday, March 21, I noticed a table with an overhang titled, "Animal Welfare." Suddenly, I got this stomach-crushing pain in my chest. Oh God, it's the animal activists. In fact it was the student organization, Students for Animal Welfare. As I began to inquire about the organization's background, I found out that it was based primarily on the ideas presented by a non-profit animal protection agency, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA). Now, I realized the danger was present, the radical liberal animal activists who live on the premise that animals are superior to human beings, are sweeping through Texas Tech, trying to convince us that not only do animals have rights, but now they also deserve the same rights as humans.

As I read through the pamphlets, I stumbled on a section dealing with certain rights for plants, insects and clams. Rights for plants, insects and clams. Oh come on, isn't the fallacious idea that animals have rights going far enough? I think so, and want to remind you that in order for something to have rights, it must have the ability to claim them first. Correct me if I am wrong, but I don't think anyone has seen or heard an animal (much less an insect or clam) declare their rights. But, according to these animal activists, these animals and insects do have rights. BEWARE! You may want to think again before you decide to swat that fly this summer, it has certain rights and feelings too. You will be considered a disgrace to the human race if you take that fly's rights away just because it is infecting your lunch with numerous bacteria and buzzing around your head.

Nonetheless, I continued to read, and the pamphlets presented fallacious and down right idiotic facts, trying to persuade me to donate to this charity because of abuse to animals and their alienated rights. I even stumbled on examples that compared hunting to a conservation method similar to murder as a viable relief for world hunger (ridiculous). Also, I found phrases that presented the meat industry as actually endangering people and the environment. While reading on, I began to get sick wondering how any competent human being could rationalize these statements and form them into a belief that not only do animals need help from these evil human beings, but the organization helping them needs your money to do it.

Let's take a look at where the contributions actually go. PETA takes in over $10 million a year, but only 15 percent to 20 percent of this income actually goes to animal welfare. The rest goes to payrolls, mail advertising, etc. This advertising, as tasteless as can be, has even run a full page ad that compares mass murderer Jeffrey Dahmer's behavior to that of the meat industry.

My question remains: How far can you capitalist destroying, liberal environmentalist and animal activists go? What is the solution? Last year I nailed a rabbit on my way to Texas Tech, going about 57 MPH on Highway 84. Realizing that I hit it, I pulled over and figured that it was dead. I felt bad, but there was not anything that I could do, so I drove on. But wait, I forgot, according to animal activists, that rabbit had rights. I am a murderer on the run. I guess I should have stopped, called 911 and waited for the police and ambulance to arrive. Why? Because that rabbit had rights, a family and a future to prosper in.

Hell, I should have been taken to court and tried on rabbit slaughter charges. Or maybe my drivers license should have been taken away. Besides, if it wasn't for mans evil creation of the automobile, I would have been walking to Tech and this incident would never have happened. Well, as silly as this sounds, this is where radical liberal animal activists are taking it, and it is too far. Animals do not have fundamental rights, and though they are accorded some protection by human beings, that is all.

Organizations like PETA and the Students for Animal Welfare do nothing but obstruct human progress and destroy capitalism by elevating the importance of animal existence to human existence. As for me, and I hope the rest of competent Americans, I will continue to prosper, treating myself with the respect and dignity I have been granted under God and the Constitution, continuing to relish the fact that I have rights, not animals, and I can use those rights to succeed in any way I deem necessary (within the bounds of the law).

Faculty honored for work with wineries

By Gary Black
The University Daily

Two former Texas Tech professors who helped found the Llano Estacado Winery will be honored tonight for their contributions to the South Plains wine industry.

Clinton McPherson and Bob Reed will be recognized by the High Plains Winegrower's Research Council during an inaugural dinner at 7 p.m. at the Lubbock Plaza Hotel.

"They helped to develop the whole idea of vinifera — the best grapes that could be grown on the South Plains," said Tim Dodd, Texas Tech Wine Marketing Research Institute research associate. "They were the initiators that got top quality grapes. They got growers interested in this area."

Two Texas A&M University professors, John Lipe and William Lipe, also will be honored for their work with the South Plains wine industry.

Reed, a former horticulture professor, and McPherson, a former chemistry professor and president of Llano Estacado from 1976 to 1983, had the ideas and innovation to start the wine-growing process, Dodd said.

"The industry may have developed a lot later if they had not helped," he said.

Grapes had been planted on the campus in the 1950s, McPherson said.

"The grapes were here before they decided to put Flint Avenue where it is," he said. "Before they plowed up the grapes, we moved some plants to Bob Reed's backyard. That is when it all got started."

Wine was made from the grapes in Reed's backyard, McPherson said.

"Then we got an idea to put an experimental winery in the basement of the chemistry building," he said. "We got permission from the board, and we built our winery."

Once the wine had been tasted by many people, it was suggested that McPherson and Reed build a professional winery, McPherson said.

"We had funds donated, and we used our own money," he said.

"We had to put it in a wet county. We had to put the winery there so we could make the wine. The first grapes were crushed at Llano Estacado in 1976.

Reed and McPherson experimented with many varieties of grapes to produce different flavors.

"We did research with instructors from A&M for better production," McPherson said.

"We were always trying to find out how to get a better quality grape."

The South Plains wine industry would not have taken off without help, he said.

"If it had not been for our persistence, it never would have started," McPherson said.

Gingrich urges officials to support health reform

DALLAS (AP) — House Speaker Newt Gingrich on Thursday urged hospital industry executives to support proposed reforms of Medicare and Medicaid as they grapple with rapid change in the health care industry.

"We need you to help in particular because the largest single purchaser of health care is the government, through Medicaid, Medicare, and veteran's health. I believe we have to have dramatic improvements in all three," said Gingrich, R-Ga.

Gingrich spoke from Washington via satellite to a receptive audience of nearly 2,000 at the Federation of American Health Systems annual conference and trade show in Dallas. The Washington, D.C.-based group represents more than 1,700 investor-owned hospitals and management systems.

But Gingrich had more on his mind than health care, as he showed the audience his copy of the GOP's "Contract With America" legislative agenda. He asked them to try to drum up support for a vote on the Republican welfare reform plan expected today, as well as for term limits, tax cuts and, especially, a balanced federal budget.

"We need your help in rethinking and transforming medical care if we're going to get the balanced budget," he said.

"With your help we need to rethink how we deliver Medicaid. We need to dramatically transform Medicare to give our senior citizens better choices in a more entrepreneurial, market-oriented environment where we save money while they get improvements at a more rapid rate with less bureaucracy and less red tape."

The House is setting up a task force to study changes to Medicare, including giving senior citizens 10 or more options in choosing plans, Gingrich said. Those could include keeping the current system, managed care, medical savings accounts and fees for special services, he said.

Gingrich also advocated anti-trust exemptions for hospitals so they could work together on buying new technologies and sharing information.

Contract halts beach repairs

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A contract dispute has resulted in work being stopped on a $5.9 million beach reconstruction project.

The city has informed its primary contractor, T.L. James & Co. of New Orleans, that it reserves the right to sue, and the company has put the dredge it uses to pump sand on the beaches in a Texas City dry dock.

Meanwhile, Galveston's federal building permit expires April 30. Mayor Barbara Crews said that if the work isn't completed before the permit's expiration, T.L. James could forfeit a $5.2 million performance bond.

Grass fires consume, damage Panhandle homes

AMARILLO (AP) — Wind-fed grass fires on adjacent land owned by Texas Tech University consumed several homes, gutted a Canyon apartment complex Wednesday and forced Texas Panhandle authorities to close a highway and evacuate workers at a nuclear weapons plant. At least one firefighter was treated for burns. No other injuries were immediately reported.

Officials said the fires, which were mostly extinguished by Wednesday night, were not actually on Pantex property.

About 2,500 workers were evacuated from the Pantex plant so officials could shut down the ventilation system.

However, several hundred essential personnel and security were left at the nation's primary disassembly site for nuclear bombs, said Tom Walton, a Department of Energy spokesman at the plant.

"Basically the only thing we did was curtail our weapons work to shut down the ventilation system so we wouldn't be pumping smoke into the areas," he said.

Pantex — a 10,000-acre site about 17 miles northeast of Amarillo — also stores plutonium from dismantled warheads.

"The plant will open as normal first thing in the morning," Walton said.

"There was no fire at the plant site itself. While this is not a normal thing, it's not totally unusual either.

"We have had other fires race through grass lands that adjoin us in the past."

The cause of the blaze, which started in mid-afternoon and was fanned by strong winds, may have been a discarded cigarette, said Ricky Hamilton, chief of the Panhandle Fire Department. Panhandle is about 11 miles from the plant.

Hospital program allows children to play doctor

By Guy Priel

The University Daily

Lubbock children will have an opportunity to be a doctor for a day through a program offered at the University Medical Center Southwest Cancer Center 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

"The children will be given the opportunity to 'treat' medical personnel," said Patti Douglass, UMC community relations coordinator.

"The event will bring an exciting end to Children and Hospitals Week in Lubbock."

The hospital sponsored various activities throughout the week to focus the community's attention on health care, Douglass said.

"Each child attending the event will visit a physician and nurse team and perform various medical functions," she said.

Functions the children will perform include applying bandages and testing vision.

Children also will spend time listening to a physician's heartbeat, she said.

"Children will also be allowed to ask questions and become comfortable in talking with medical experts," Douglass said.

Sheryl Swoopes also will make a guest appearance, she said.

Swoopes was a member of the 1993 Texas Tech women's national championship basketball team.

"We hope events like this will show the community we are committed to their medical needs," said Marcia Taylor, a Tech graduate nursing student from Lubbock.

Children and Hospitals Week is an international public awareness campaign sponsored annually, said Amy Morris, UMC Children's Hospital child life specialist.

"There are large numbers of children in the Lubbock area served by these types of programs," Morris said.

Many children learn what the medical profession is all about and realize hospitals' caring atmospheres, she said.

"I attended one of these events in the past," Taylor said.

"After that, I decided I wanted to be a nurse."

"Children in health care situations have unique needs, which is the main reason we are having this event," she said.

Most children are afraid of doctors and hospitals, she said.

"Events of this nature can ease the fear of children when they are faced with a situation requiring them to visit the hospital," Taylor said.

Programs conducted this week have been successful, and this event promises to be no different, Morris said.

"When I have children, I will encourage them to attend events like this," Taylor said.

All activities are free and the public is invited, Douglass said.

Road reopens after accident

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — All lanes of Interstate 40 in West Tennessee were reopened Wednesday more than 24 hours after an overturned tanker killed the driver and spilled a dangerous chemical, authorities said. Westbound lanes of I-40 near Brownsville in Haywood County were reopened Wednesday morning and eastbound lanes in the afternoon. Workers pumped acetone left in the overturned tanker into another tanker before all lanes were reopened. The closed section of highway had resulted in thousands of motorists being rerouted onto Highway 70 through Brownsville, a community of 10,224.

Police reopen investigation of drowned woman

DALLAS (AP) — Police have reopened the investigation of the 1986 drowning of the wife of an Arlington man who is charged with killing another former wife and whose present spouse is missing.

Meanwhile, the attorney for Jack Reeves, who has been charged with the 1978 shooting death of Sharon Reeves, confirmed Thursday that his client was accused in a fatal shooting in Italy during the 1960s.

Hill County authorities said the drowning case was reopened after local authorities learned of Reeves' arrest in the 1978 shooting of his second wife.

Reeves, 54, a retired Army sergeant, was being held Thursday in Coryell County Jail on $500,000 bond on a charge of murder.

Sharon Reeves, 34, was thought to have shot herself in the chest while at home in Copperas Cove, a town of about 24,000 people located about 60 miles north of Austin.

Reeves' present wife, Emilita Reeves, hasn't been seen since Oct. 12.

Hill County Sheriff Brent Button said his office is reviewing reports made after the 1986 drowning of Myong Reeves, 29.

"But it's going to be very difficult developing anything," Button said. "There was no autopsy done at the time and the body was cremated."

Myong Reeves drowned in Lake Whitney while fishing with Reeves. He told police she fell into the water after he left to get some bait.

"From the report we had at the time, there were no marks on the body or anything to indicate foul play," Button said.

Reeves' attorney, Wes Ball of Arlington, said his client denies any wrongdoing.

"He's both frightened and angered," Ball said. "It's consistent with being accused of something of this magnitude that you didn't do."

Ball confirmed that Reeves was accused in the shooting death of a man while he was stationed in Italy in 1967. The charges were later dropped.

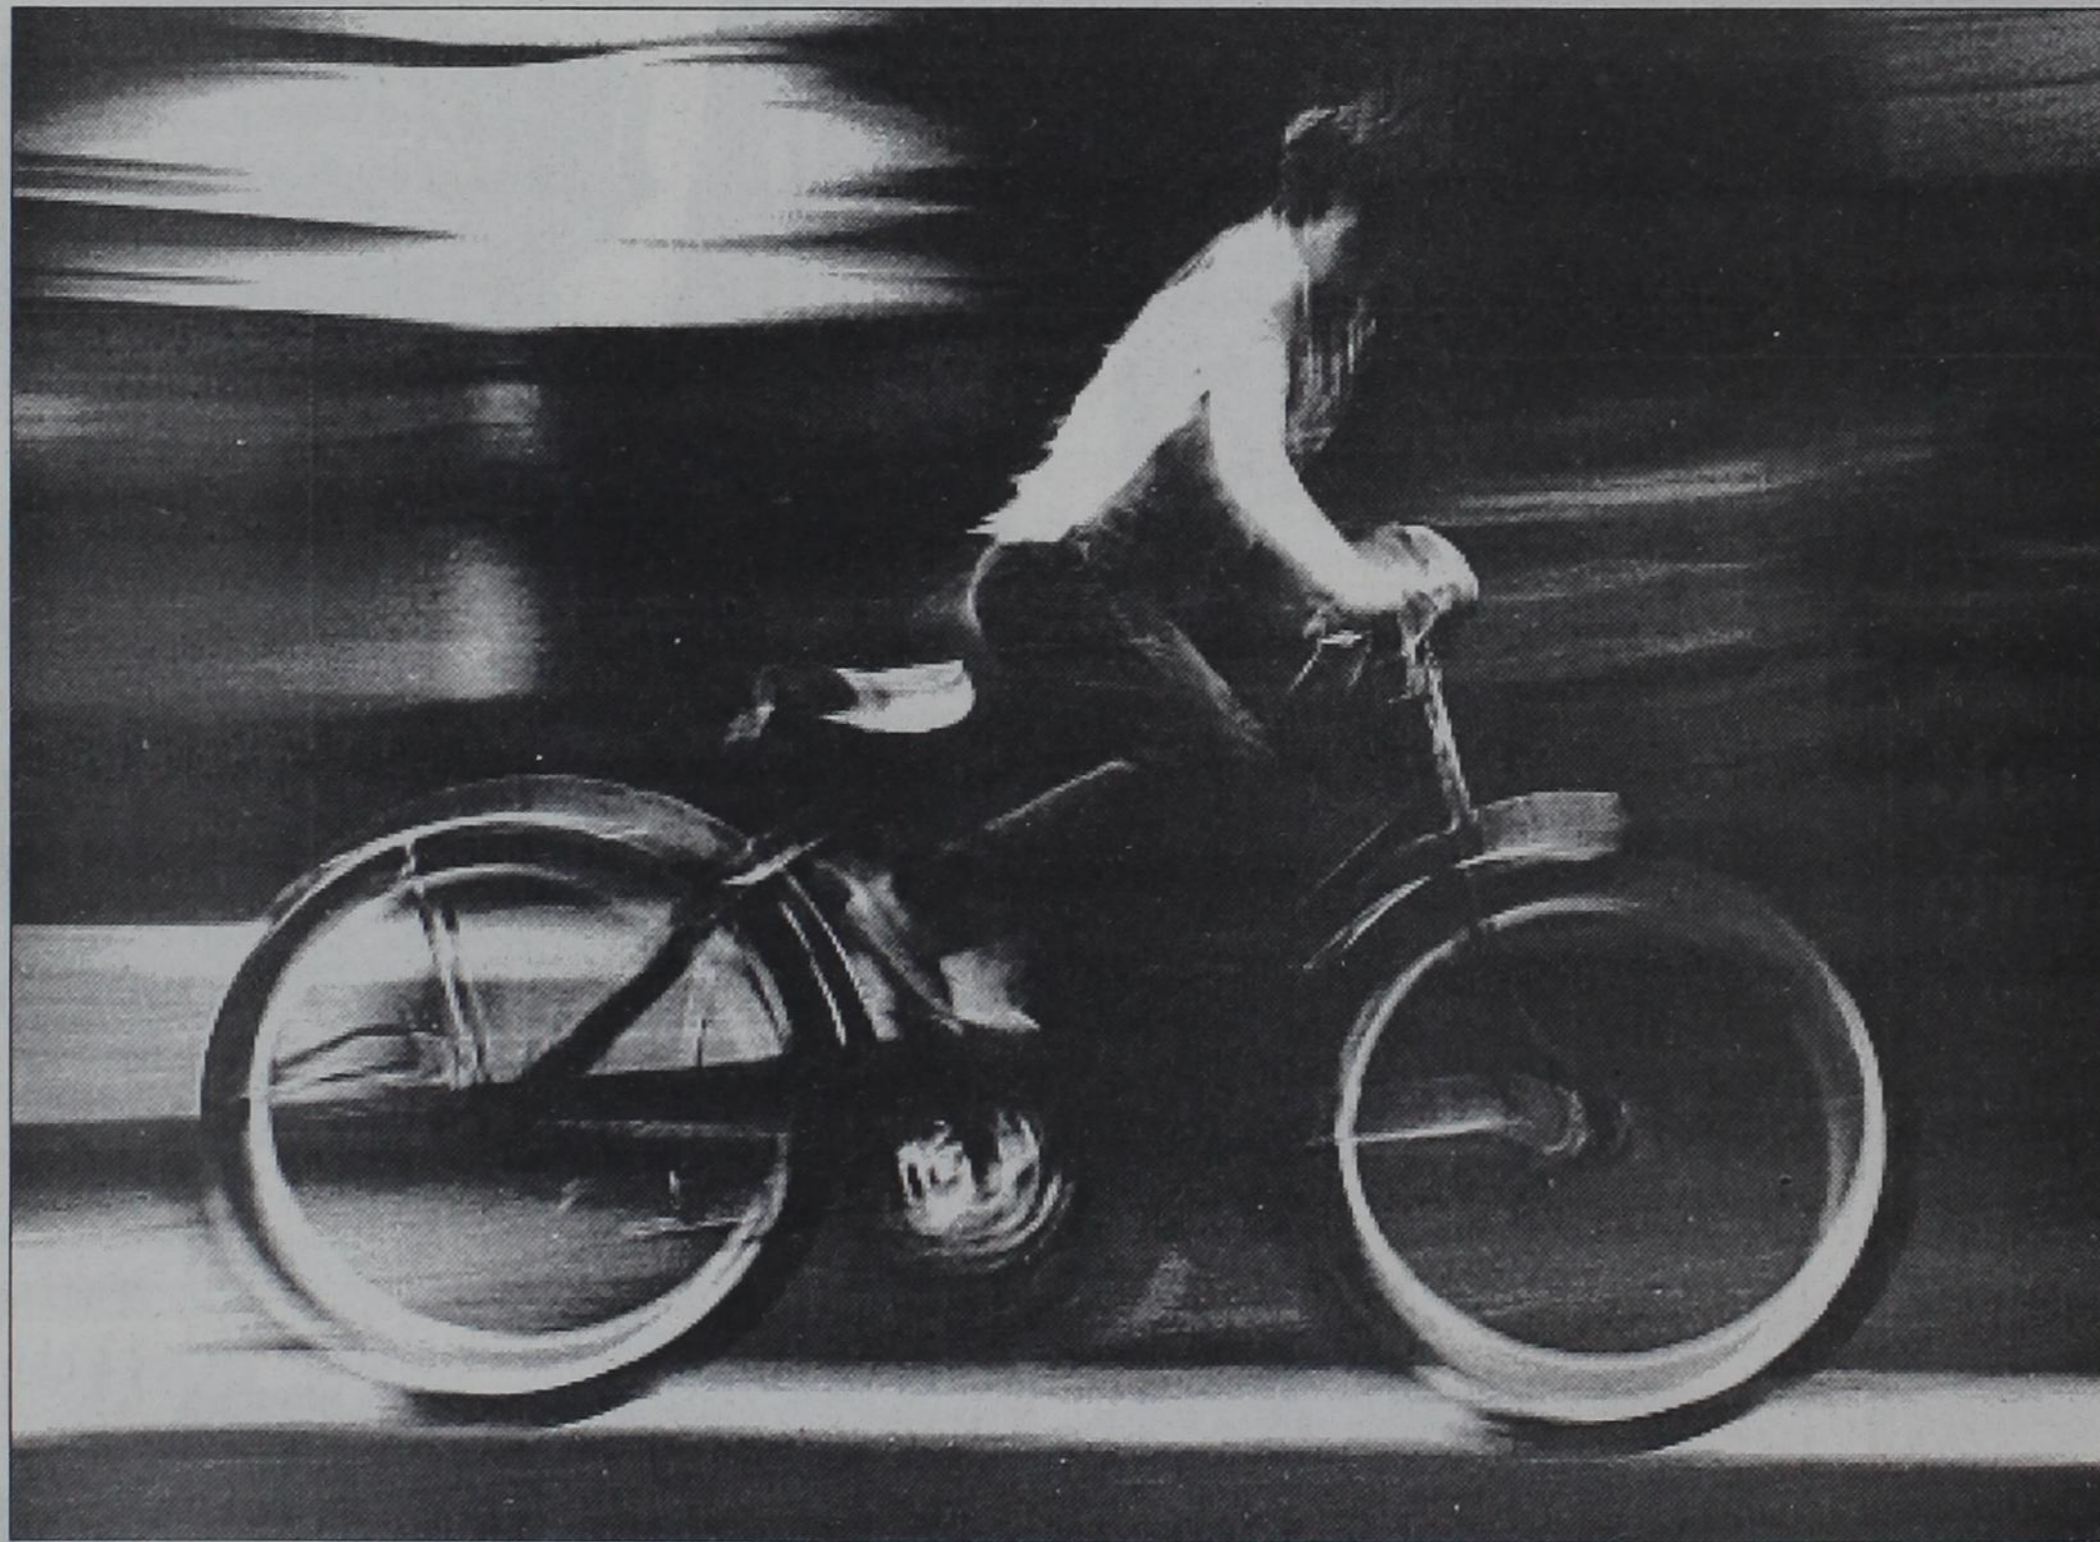

"He was involved in a situation that was an act of self-defense," Ball said. "That was the conclusion of whatever judicial system that heard that matter. The man apparently was breaking into his residence."

Ball said that Reeves has been working as a self-employed maintenance and repair man since retiring from the Army in 1985.

On Wednesday, police seized more than 40 weapons from Reeves' home.

"There were handguns, rifles, long guns and shotguns," said Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson.

He declined to say if they found the shotgun used in Sharon Reeves' fatal shooting.

Volunteers needed for EnviroSmart

By Jamie McDonald
The University Daily

EnviroSmart, a program that is dedicated to the environment, is looking for volunteers to begin training Tuesday April 4.

EnviroSmart Master Volunteer program is offered by the Texas Agriculture Extension Service office in Lubbock. The office is part of the Texas A&M University system. Volunteers are needed each year to expand the program's educational information, said Mark Brown, a Lubbock County extension agent.

Volunteers will be trained to help other consumers to reduce their production of trash, to recycle and buy recycled material and to manage waste among other lessons, Brown said.

"We provide 25 hours of training to people who are interested in helping the environment," he said. "We give them information on how to do community outreach, and in return, we ask that they pay back 50 hours of community service to the area."

Volunteers complete their community work in different ways depending on their interests. Public speaking, putting displays together, writing articles or speaking on the radio are some ways in which people have educated the community last year, Brown said.

"This is the second year of the program," he said. "We had 10 people participate last year and seven of those 10 were Texas Tech students."

Classroom training includes activities and lectures from local experts on waste reduction, Brown said.

"The registration fee varies depending on the number of students that apply, but it will be no more than $20," he said. "Students receive a training manual to help them with the presentations they will make to the public. Also, the fee covers refreshments at each meeting."

The manual gives specific instructions and pictures to help the volunteer to educate the public on waste management, Brown said.

"Our intent is to help educate the community in reducing waste in Lubbock as well as Texas," he said. "Texans generate enough waste every two weeks to fill the Astrodome. A lot of people throw things and don't think about where it will end up. It ends up in the landfill. We've got to make the landfill last longer."

The program will generate more awareness of the amount of trash thrown away, Brown said.

"We need to complete the loop of recycling," he said. "You must buy the recycled material."

Volunteers interested in learning more about the recycling loop or other means of waste management, they can contact the County Extension Office at 767-1190 for an application. The application deadline is Tuesday and classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings from April 4 to April 28.

"A maximum of 20 students will be accepted this time," he said. "The program offers volunteers the opportunity to provide a community service."

Students protest proposed funding cuts

NEW YORK (AP) — When students and police clashed in a protest over funding cuts to public schools Thursday, 60 people were arrested and about 20 people were injured, including 14 officers.

Up to 10,000 people gathered in a park across from City Hall and Mayor Rudolph Giuliani to shun budget cuts that demonstrators said would hobble education.

But scuffles broke out when the group, which did not have a permit to march, tried to move beyond the barricades.

Hundreds of police in riot gear stood shoulder to shoulder behind wooden and steel barricades, attempting to keep the protesters from blocking traffic.

Scores more maneuvered on horses and motorcycles, forming a barrier between the students and the street.

The arrests were primarily for disorderly conduct, and the injuries were minor.

The governor and the mayor have proposed budgets that require higher tuition at city and state universities.

Group sells land, maintains conservation policy

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The Nature Conservancy is trying a new way to conserve a key parcel of spectacular mountain front scenery.

It has purchased a 4,000-acre ranch and is now trying to sell it for $5.6 million. The hitch is that the buyer has to agree never to develop the property.

It's the first time in Wyoming, and one of the few times nationwide, that the nonprofit organization has purchased land for the purpose of selling it to a private buyer who shares its concerns about the landscape. It occasionally buys critical parcels and holds them until government agencies can purchase them.

"We just hope, no matter what, that a conservation-minded person is going to buy it," said Juanita Thigpen, spokeswoman in the conservancy's headquarters in Arlington, Va.

The group's action is the cornerstone of a larger effort to protect roughly 70 square miles of prime development property along the Big Horn Mountains and Bighorn National Forest in north-central Wyoming.

P.A.B. Widener III decided to sell his ranch to the conservancy last fall to protect the land, its elk range and several rare plant and animal species from the growing development pressures in northern Wyoming, according to Ben Pierce, director of the conservancy's Wyoming chapter.

"This was a way that my Dad could get his equity out of the land and do something for the good of the land at the same time and not cave in and sell to subdivisions and such," said Pete Widener Jr. "You can't go wrong with a lot of green space."

The conservancy borrowed $4 million to buy the land with the idea of selling it right away, with Widener donating most of the balance of the sale price. Interest on the loan is accruing at a rate of $5,000 a week.

"We are still anxious to sell the property to a conservation buyer," Pierce said.

"But we purchased it with an understanding that it would be up to a two-year marketing frame. The summer season is certainly more productive than the winter season in selling ranches."

The purchase must be to someone willing to donate a conservation easement on the land to the conservancy.

A conservation easement restricts nonagricultural development on the land and, in exchange, the landowner receives property tax deductions.

Pierce said the deal is a critical part of an effort to protect nearly 45,000 acres of scenic mountain front property from development.

The group already had 8,000 nearby acres covered by easements. The Widener deal helped persuade 10 neighbors to donate another 9,200 acres of easements by this month and the group is working with nine others for easements covering 23,500 acres.

"The 4,000 (acres) was the catalyst for the majority of the rest of the properties," Pierce said. "I think there's a little bit of the 'not me first' fear associated with some of these conservation easements."

"One of the Nature Conservancy's primary goals is to use leverage in conservation of the landscape," he said. "We can commit to a highly threatened piece of property and use the leverage as incentive (for) neighbors to take part."

If neighboring state land is taken into account, success in the project would mean a protected landscape similar in size to a three-mile coastline strip one-third the length of Long Island, N.Y.

Long Island, which is about 120 miles long, is populated with millions of people, while northern Wyoming has only thousands. Nonetheless, the area is growing in popularity and major developments are cropping up.

"These are a lot of the buffer lands to what's protected by the national forest," Pierce said. "They are the single-most threatened component to the landscape, the most susceptible to development. It kind of in perpetuity protects the most biologically significant lands."

The conservancy has purchased and protected 8 million acres in North America, including 180,000 acres in Wyoming. The 790,000-member organization typically acquires sensitive land and holds onto it or gives it to a federal agency.

"We're always looking at new approaches to conservation and if this works for us, I don't see why wouldn't try it again," Thigpen said.

Clark said the UD offers excellent training ground and provides for a positive future for all involved, from the apprentice to the reporter to the photographer to the editor.

Since the fourth grade, Clark said her dream has been to be a journalist. She has worked in student publications since the seventh grade.

"I can't put my finger on why I wanted to become a journalist, it was just something I always wanted to do," she said. "I'm glad I found a career I'm interested in and excited about."

After graduation from Tech, Clark said she hopes to work for a mid-sized daily newspaper and ultimately work as a police reporter.

Teacher challenges students to donate

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas professor emeritus John McKetta feels he owes the school for a long and successful career. So he wants to pay back the salary he accumulated over 49 years.

McKetta, 79, estimates that's about $1 million, and he's challenging his former students to match the donation.

"I owe the department an awful lot," said McKetta, professor emeritus of chemical engineering and dean of the College of Engineering from 1962 to 1970. "My wife and I thought we'd try to challenge students to match the amount."

So far the alumni have come up with $800,000, and that figure is expected to increase following a fund-raising reception Saturday. Contributions have poured in from all over the country, and some have been sent from as far away as Saudi Arabia.

Gunmen open fire in Dallas restaurant

DALLAS (AP) — Two gunmen entered a Mexican restaurant Thursday night and opened fire, killing two men, then pursued a third man outside and wounded him before fleeing, authorities said.

Witnesses said about six shots were fired inside The Mexican American Amigo about 7:30 p.m. Police-spokesman Ed Spencer said two men were dead and a third victim "was shot and made it across the street to a video store and collapsed." The wounded man was taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital, where he was in fair condition, a hospital supervisor said Thursday night. Witnesses said at least one of the gunmen got into a vehicle nearby.

related to rural health care.

Quality improvement of rural medicine and physician recruiting issues will be discussed. The conference begins at 8:30 a.m. today and will end following a luncheon Saturday at the TTUHSC. The cost to attend the conference is $195.

Fire Marshal finds out source of leak that set off fire alarms today

Tech Fire Marshal Richard Kopytkiewicz said he will know by 10 a.m. today the source of the water leak that set off fire alarms in the foreign language building Wednesday.

Water from the first floor leaked into a power box in an equipment room in the southwest corner of the basement and caused the electrical device to short circuit and smoke, Kopytkiewicz said.

There was not an actual fire, he said.

The incident stranded about 300 people outside the foreign language building for about 20 minutes Wednesday.

Ninety percent of the building was evacuated after the alarms went off, Kopytkiewicz said.

Phade Vader, safety officer for the foreign language department, told The UD Wednesday that he wants to implement a fire safety seminar for faculty and staff in the department.

He also wants students to realize that they must evacuate the building when the fire alarms sound, he said.

City Council joins American Red Cross in learn-to-swim programs for area youth

By Shannon Murphy
The University Daily

The Lubbock City Council will join the South Plains regional chapter of the American Red Cross to continue providing the city with learn-to-swim programs.

The Lubbock sports and leisure department has provided a learn to swim program at various city swimming pools. The program is designed to offer safe instructions in swimming, and about 300 children participate in the program each year, city officials said.

"The Red Cross would like to enter into an agreement with the city for the delivery of all services associated with the learn-to-swim program," said Doug Bingman, Red Cross healthy and safety services director. "We really want to get our name out and have people more aware of us in the community. We are experts in the field of lifeguard training, and we want to hire the best instructors to teach the lessons."

The Red Cross will assume total control of the lessons and of the program itself, he said.

The agreement will last a year with two one-year renewal options, and the city's compensation plan will include 30 percent net profits, city officials said.

In other matters, the City Council approved a resolution that will allow the city to enter into a tax abatement agreement with Red River Commodities Inc.

The company plans to open a plant to process confection sunflowers and has purchased a building at 212 N.E. Loop 289. The plant will create about 12 new jobs, and the abatement plan will last five years.

The City Council also confirmed board appointments to the board of health, the drainage criteria advisory committee, the municipal arts committee, the neighborhood redevelopment commission, the park and recreation board and the zoning board of adjustment.

U.S. government offers record $4 million reward for Libyans in Pan Am bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Libyan intelligence officers, charged in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, were put on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list Thursday and a $4 million reward was posted — the largest ever offered by the U.S.

"They've got to know that just because this crime happened in 1989, the United States, the FBI, the Department of Justice and the people of Scotland and England have not forgotten," Robert "Bear" Bryant, assistant FBI director for national security, told a news conference at FBI headquarters.

"We'll follow them to the ends of the world to bring them to court. We'll never quit on this case."

Bryant said a variety of innovative methods, in addition to the traditional wanted posters, would be used "to elicit the cooperation of the people of Libya and North Africa."

For the first time, the information was posted on the worldwide computer Internet. It also will be printed in Arabic on matchbook covers circulated in the region and sent into Libya by radio and facsimile machine. English and Arabic posters showing a suitcase full of cash and the two will be circulated.

"We believe they are in Libya," Bryant said. He added that there are periodic reports that they travel outside that radical Arab nation, but he wouldn't say where.

Abdel Basset Ali Al-Megrahi and Lamien Khalifa Fhimah were charged here and in Scotland in 1991 with planting a suitcase bomb aboard the flight, killing all 259 passengers and crew and 11 people on the ground. There were 189 U.S. citizens among the dead.

The $4 million reward — the maximum total for information leading to the capture and conviction of both men — includes $2 million from the State Department and $1 million apiece from the Air Line Pilots Association and the Air Transport Association. There was a $1 million reward for information.

Hospital rocked by columnist's overdose death

BOSTON (AP) — When an award-winning health columnist for one of the biggest newspapers in the country got breast cancer, she went to one of the best hospitals in the world.

The Boston Globe's Betsy Lehman, of all people, wound up dead because of a huge mistake at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, of all places.

The fatal mistake, disclosed Thursday by the Globe, was the latest in a series of blatant medical errors that have hurt the reputation of some of America's best hospitals and alarmed patients.

Lehman's heart failed after she was given four times the maximum safe dosage of a highly toxic drug during chemotherapy. She was nearing the end of three months of treatment.

At least a dozen doctors, nurses and pharmacists overlooked the error for four days while Lehman continued to receive an overdose of cyclophosphamide, and a four-fold overdose of another drug meant to shield her from side effects.

"She was dealing with horrendous symptoms," Lehman's husband, Robert Distel, a scientist at Dana-Farber, told the Globe. "I guess it was called mucositis. The whole lining of her gut from one end to the other was shedding. She was vomiting sheets of tissue. They said this was the worst they'd ever seen. But the doctors said this was all normal."

An autopsy found no visible signs of cancer in her body, indicating that the treatment had worked, the Globe reported.

Dow, Nasdaq buoyed by technology issues

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks pulled out modest gains near the close Thursday, with the Dow Jones industrials and the Nasdaq composite setting new highs, as bonds and the dollar recovered from earlier weakness.

The Dow Jones industrial average traded in a narrow 26-point band all day, finishing up 4.84 at 4,087.83. The blue chip index broke its record close of 4,083.68 set last Monday.

Advancing issues led decliners by 1,046 to 1,012 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 883 unchanged. Big Board volume was heavy at 318.5 million shares as of 4 p.m., compared with 313.11 million on Wednesday.

Broad market indexes also moved higher. The Nasdaq composite index climbed 2.29 to 811.39, topping its record closing high of 810.49 set Monday.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.12 to 267.92. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index added 0.28 to 495.95. The American Stock Exchange's market value index advanced 2.37 to 458.52.

Stocks were held back for most of the session by the dollar and bonds.

The dollar ended mixed after falling for much of the day in reaction to Wednesday's report of a record high U.S. trade deficit. Bonds retreated early in the day but reversed their losses, with the 30-year bond up 3-32 point at the close.

"The declining dollar is going to hurt the long-bond market sooner or later, and that ultimately will affect stocks," said Rao Chalasani, chief investment strategist at Kemper Securities.

Bonds had a delayed but positive reaction to a Labor Department report that first-time unemployment claims rose by 3,000 last week. Analysts had expected them to fall slightly.

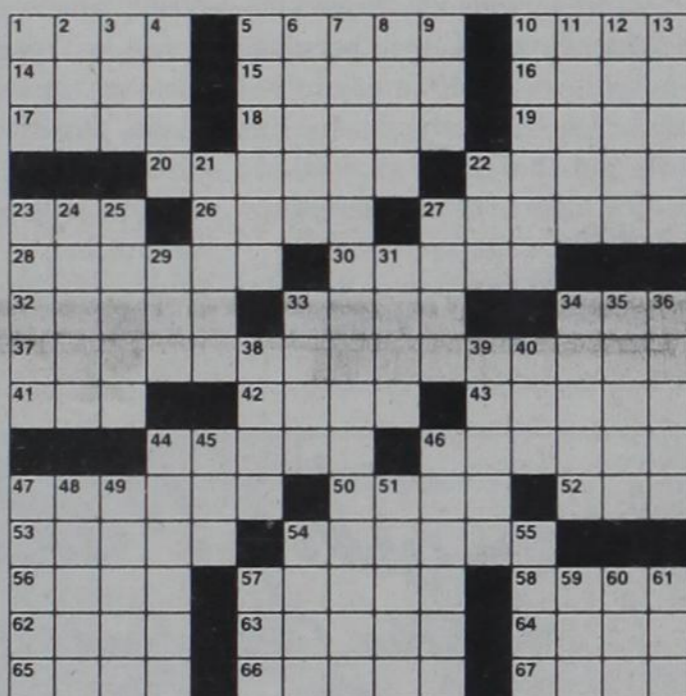

The mood in the stock market was still relatively upbeat. Alfred E. Goldman, vice president at A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis, said stocks were taking a well-deserved rest.

"The market, as measured by the S&P 500, has been up seven out of the last nine days. It's more than a little entitled to a little time out to catch its breath."

Others pointed to some underlying strengths.

Prospective dates get closer with pick-up lines

By Amy Osmulski

Their eyes meet from across a crowded, smoke-filled club, as a sultry song plays on through the night. She crosses her legs and winks, so he starts moving in. The mood is set. "Hey baby, what say you jump on me, and we take a ride into the night," he says. The mood is broken. The perfect pick-up line may never be invented, but that does not stop Texas Tech students from trying. "A really bad one I always remember is 'Wow, that's a nice shirt on, but it would look better on the floor next to my bed,'" said Mitzi Weige, a sophomore advertising major from San Antonio. Weige said although pick-up lines give her a good laugh, she prefers people to be themselves. "I can't stand when guys come off all sweet and innocent," said Tamora Jackson, a junior journalism major from Dallas. "They say they aren't trying to play you, when you know they are." It is not so much what guys say, but how they say it, Jackson said. Honest flattery is their best way to go, she said.

"I once heard this guy say, 'You know good and well, if we were the only two people left in the world, we would be having sex right now,'" said Patrick Gainey, a freshman exercise sciences major from Lubbock. Gainey said although he has never been picked up by someone using a real pick-up line, if the girl impressed him, he would give her a chance. "Even if it was a really creative pick-up line, I wouldn't give the girl a chance," said John Perrin, a sophomore music education major from Conn. Perrin said he is a pretty good flirt. Girls who can flirt better than him kind of scare him, he said. "I'd have to say my best pick-up line is, 'I can get you into rated R movies,'" Perrin said with a laugh. Guys who come across honestly, and make conversation instead of trying to be macho are more likely to get the girl, said Tracy Carr, a senior psychology/English major from El Paso. "I feel sorry for girls who are still falling for pick-up lines," Carr said. "I think pick-up lines are going out of style. "Women want straight-forward honesty."

Common Pick Up Lines

- Hi, I'm imagining you naked right now.
- Would you come help me practice safe sex?
- Why don't you buy me a beer?
- We could have beautiful children together.
- Excuse me sir, could you tell me your name so I can stop calling you fine a— all night.
- Have you ever been to paradise? Now you're here.
- Excuse me, would you complete my life?
- Can I whisper sweet nothings in your mouth?

Play focuses on friends, love

Tara McQueen

Bitter-sweet is the perfect description of the original comedy play by Texas Tech student Ruby Quinn. Her first full-length play, "Love Ya', See Ya' Later, Bye," explores whether the bonds of friendship are stronger than the ties of romantic love. In the play, Jenny, a junior high teacher on the rebound, finds comfort and laughs in the weekly "girls' night in." Her best friends include Charlie, who begins to question her live-in boyfriend's excuses; Cynthia, a graduate student who is searching for meaning and love in her life; and Karen, a single mother struggling to make ends meet without a college education. The play is directed by Ginny Davis, who made sure the characters evoked consistent laughs with their comical moves and embarrassing antics. The play was cast perfectly with the sensible one, the girl who is incomplete without a man, the rebel and the prude — characters everyone can relate to. The production flowed smoothly, pulling the audience into the struggles and giggles of each character. Tech students will relate to the close bonds of friendship the women share, while the men serve as a necessary evil. The variety of music between scenes provides fun foreshadowing, and the elaborate set is an apartment filled with all the really important things in life like a VCR, a bean bag chair and pictures of best friends.

The apartment provides the perfect backdrop for the friends to play truth or dare and laugh at themselves. Quinn did a fabulous job of writing a play that has universal appeal and relates to anyone who has ever had a best friend. Students who miss this play will regret not seeing the original version at Tech. "Love Ya', See Ya' Later, Bye," will run at 8 p.m. today and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Texas Tech Lab Theatre. Tickets cost $3 for Tech students and $6 for others. Tickets can be reserved by calling 742-3601. Students can see the play free if there are any seats available before the show.

Tara McQueen is the features at The University Daily.

Reviewer chooses winners

Juan-Daniel Coronado

"Oscar, Oscar! Where for art thou, Oscar? Refuse they 'Red,' deny 'Hoop Dreams,' and I shall forever live in Gump's head." The following covers the Best Actress, Best Actor, Best Director and Best Picture categories. The exceptions are: Miranda Richardson in "Tom & Viv" and Jessica Lange in "Blue Sky." Both movies did not play in Lubbock theaters. Thus, I based my predictions on the three other nominees and on being an Oscar-watcher over the years. Furthermore, I was unable to attend Krzysztof Kieslowski's "Red" during its one-week run in town. Kieslowski was nominated in the best director category. Lights, camera and the envelope please.

In the Best Actress category, my choice: Winona Ryder in "Little Women." Ryder's work during the past four years has displayed the coming of age of a promising actress with qualities of the best. Jodie Foster (my second choice), who is nominated for her strong, spiritual performance in "Nell," deserves another Oscar. She's won twice before for "The Accused" and "Silence of the Lambs."

But who will win? Jessica Lange. I know — I didn't see the movie. But Lange did win the Golden Globe Award for best actress with Foster in the competition. Oscar past says, "Foster has been awarded twice. Let's give it to next-best veteran, Lange. Besides, Ryder has future nominations to come."

The Best Actor category consists of three nominees in the forefront: Paul Newman ("Nobody's Fool"), Tom Hanks ("Forrest Gump") and John Travolta ("Pulp Fiction.") My choice: John Travolta. Remember "Saturday Night Fever?" Travolta garnered an Oscar nomination then and has redeemed himself from movies, such as "Perfect," and

Oscar nominees
Best Actress	Best Director
Susan Sarandon — "The Client"	Woody Allen — "Bullets Over Broadway"
Jodie Foster — "Nell"	Robert Zemeckis — "Forrest Gump"
Winona Ryder — "Little Women"	Krzysztof Kieslowski — "Red"
Jessica Lange — "Blue Sky"	Robert Redford — "Quiz Show"
Miranda Richardson — "Tom and Viv"	Quentin Tarantino — "Pulp Fiction"
Best Actor	Best Picture
Nigel Hawthorne — "The Madness of King George"	"The Shawshank Redemption"
Paul Newman — "Nobody's Fool"	"Forrest Gump"
Morgan Freeman — "The Shawshank Redemption"	"Quiz Show"
Tom Hanks — "Forrest Gump"	"Pulp Fiction"
John Travolta — "Pulp Fiction"	"Four Weddings and a Funeral" provoking, intelligent film. I knew talent existed in those disconcerting, "Grease" lightning shoes. Popular vote will choose Hanks (my second choice), but the prediction sways toward Newman. Newman won what's known as a "sentimental Oscar" for his work in "The Color of Money." Now that Newman has delivered an Oscar-quality performance, how could the Academy NOT hand him the award. Oscar past says, "Let's give it to the old guy. He may never receive another nomination."

Robert Zemeckis, Quentin Tarantino and Robert Redford are leading in the Best Director category. Why? Their films also are nominated for best picture. My choice: Tarantino for "Pulp Fiction." His comedy takes on different shades of darkness through unconventional angles in the picture frames. Fresh and "bloody." Prediction: Robert Zemeckis. Simply stated: "Forrest Gump" is an Oscar genre film. It was inspiring, moving and fed the masses. Finally, for Best Picture, my choice is "Pulp Fiction." As previously mentioned, Tarantino delivers a fresh film. It may not be easy for the weak-stomached to swallow, but it is truly an entertaining, thought-provoking, intelligent film. "The Shawshank Redemption" was a surprisingly pleasing film, which needed better promotion. On the other hand, "Four Weddings and a Funeral" and "Quiz Show" were well-made films that fell under the "Gump" and "Pulp" shadow. Prediction: "And the Oscar goes to...Forrest Gump!" I loved "Gump," as well as millions of others. However, I believe that films that opt to feed the few instead of pleasing the masses need their 15 minutes in Oscar history.

Kieslowski's "Red" was viewed as not Swiss enough to qualify in the Best Foreign Film category. Furthermore, the most critically acclaimed documentary, "Hoop Dreams," did not even receive a Best Documentary nomination. What was in those "chocolates?" I, too, hold the Gumpism, "...you never know what you're gonna get." On Monday, Oscar may knock on the door of my choices; or, like in previous years, Oscar may call on at least 80 to 95 percent of my predictions. Watch when the STARZ search for Oscar — Monday on ABC.

Miller fans 11 men in Tech's 10-1 win over Grand Canyon

By Jared Parcell

The University Daily

The No. 8 ranked Texas Tech baseball team started off the second half of its season much the same way it played in the first — by winning.

The Red Raiders improved to 25-4 overall on the season, as they downed the Grand Canyon Antelopes (11-20) 10-1 Thursday.

Left-hander Matt Miller (6-1) picked up the win, pitching his third complete game in as many starts. Miller surrendered seven hits, walking two and striking out 11.

Since losing to Oklahoma Feb. 26, Miller has put together a personal three-game winning streak.

"These guys (Grand Canyon) can hit the ball," Miller said following the game. "I thought I had a pretty good fastball, better than I probably had all year. My curve ball was flat — the wind kept pushing it outside. It's nice to get a couple of wins in a row and get that Oklahoma thing way behind us. More importantly, we start a new winning streak as a team."

Tech got out in front first, taking a 3-0 lead in the bottom of third inning when right fielder Brandon Welch hit his fourth home run of the year, driving in Jason Totman who had walked. For the night, Welch went 2-for-3 with three RBI and three runs scored to lead the offensive attack.

Welch's blast came off losing pitcher Matt Gies (1-6) who gave up five runs on seven hits. He walked four and struck out one.

"I got a split-finger fastball, I think, and he left it up in the zone," Welch said about his home run. "I swung and hit it pretty hard."

Grand Canyon had a chance to do damage in the third, after three consecutive one-out singles, but Miller was able to get out of the inning, striking out Andrew McCormick and getting Rod Bair to ground out.

"The best thing was that he stayed out there a long time and finished," Tech coach Larry Hays said. "Early in the game, he wasn't Matt Miller. He was lucky he got to stay in the game. The good thing about it, he hung in there and came back. I'm glad to see him hang in there and get a complete game."

With the absence of Randy DuRoss at first base, Raul Padron will take over the duties at first for the weekend. He started off the three-game series with Grand Canyon, going 2-for-5 with two RBI and two runs scored.

He also had 12 putouts at first, including a diving putout of a ground ball by Antelope third baseman David Webb, who hit a ground ball to the right side of the infield. Padron fielded the grounder, but Miller was not covering the bag.

"I'm going to try and give the best I can every time I come out," Padron said. "I was uncomfortable at first, but after I got a hit and caught a ball, I got back to what I needed to do. Where I come from, there are a lot of bad fields, but here you have a chance to play good defense."

Cory Ash ruined the shutout for Miller, hitting a solo home run in the seventh inning, cutting the Tech lead to 5-1. Ash went 2-for-4 on the night and took over the catching duties after starter Mike Irving left after one-half inning.

"I'm sure the pitchers and Frank (Anderson) the pitching coach are upset about it," Hays said. "I'd rather see him give up a home run than walk two guys like he did in the first."

Tech added a total of five runs in the seventh and eighth innings to provide the final margin of 10-1. Padron's RBI single in the eighth scored Clint Bryant to close out the scoring for the Red Raiders.

"He (Padron) played good defense and moved the ball on offense," Hays said. "When you lose a player like DuRoss, it takes a pretty good performance to take his place. I thought Padron did well."

Tech resumes its three-game series with Grand Canyon at 7 p.m. today.

Lady Raiders oust Washington

Jim Cawthon: Student Publications

Driving Tab: Senior forward Tabitha Truesdale, who led all scorers with 18 points, drives for a basket as she is guarded by Washington's Laure Savasta. The Lady Raiders beat the Huskies 67-52 Thursday in the Mideast Regional Semifinals in Knoxville, Tenn. Tech will face Tennessee Saturday in the Mideast Regional Final.

By Jonathan Harris

The University Daily

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The first time Texas Tech and Washington met earlier this season the Lady Raiders had not adapted the matchup zone defense. But the zone turned out to be the deciding factor Thursday as the Lady Raiders beat Washington 72-54 at Thompson-Boling Arena.

Tech coach Marsha Sharp said she was happy to get the win despite lackluster play in the first half.

"It wasn't always pretty, but we got it done," Sharp said. "When you play against a pressure defense like Washington, they make you do things you don't always want to do."

Tech started the game with a 9-0 run and never looked back as it extended its first half lead to as many as 13 points on a Tabitha Truesdale six-foot jumper at the 1:46 mark of the first half.

The Lady Raiders continued their dominance in the second half by adding to their 31-22 halftime.

Alicia Thompson's layup with 2:22 left in the game put the Lady Raiders up by 20 points.

Sharp said Tech calmed down in the second half and was able to get the shots they were looking for.

"In the second half our guards did a better job finding the post players," she said. "We also slowed down in the second half and scored much better then."

Tech's defense held the Huskies' Rhonda Smith to six points. Smith scored 38 points in the meeting earlier in the season and was averaging 18 points a game entering the contest.

Tech's Tabitha Truesdale led all scorers with 18 points, while Melinda White added 12 points.

Sharp said Truesdale's performance at point guard has become a very positive part of the team.

"Tabitha has become one of our strengths because she breaks down defenses well," she said. "She's a strong guard, and she has become a big part of our attack."

Tech shot 47 percent for the night and 33 percent from the three-point arc.

Washington ended the night shooting 32 percent with Michelle Perkins scoring 11 points.

Tech will now face the Tennessee Lady Volunteers at 6:30 p.m. Saturday and try to end the Lady Vols' 63-game home winning streak at Thompson-Boling Arena.

Tech's Nikki Heath said the win will be good to savor for a short time.

"We'll enjoy this win tonight and tomorrow begin working on Tennessee," Heath said. "We are a part of the Elite Eight now, and we have a chance to play Tennessee and maybe make it to Minneapolis."

Track teams host only home outdoor meet of spring

By Bryan Adams

The University Daily

The Texas Tech men's and women's track teams will host a Texas Tech Outdoor Invitational starting at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at R.P. Fuller Track.

Other schools attending the meet will be New Mexico State, West Texas A&M, Lubbock Christian, South Plains, New Mexico Military and Western New Mexico. The meet will be the only home outdoor meet for Tech this season. The first event (discus) begins at 10:30 a.m., and the last event (4X400 relay) starts at 4:25 p.m.

"We hope we get some people out there to see it," Tech men's coach Corky Oglesby said. "We are looking forward to a good day."

For the men, it is the third meet of the outdoor season, and for the women, it will be their second competition outdoors. The men competed in the Baylor Invitational March 4, and both the men and women ran at the Arizona State Invitational last weekend.

"We went to Arizona this last weekend, and senior Brent Schott is two for two now in the intermediate hurdles," Oglesby said. "He is running very well. He had two knee operations last year. The Baylor meet was the first meet he had ran since the national when he was a sophomore."

Schott missed qualifying for nationals by two-tenths of a second in Arizona. Senior Jason Price won the pole vault at Arizona.

"Jason looks like he is going to start going over 17 feet consistently," Oglesby said. "We're hoping he'll have a good day this Saturday."

Tech women's coach Liz Parke said she was pleased with their performance at Tech as well.

"We felt like some of our kids were outstanding," Parke said. "Michele Tobola had a seven foot PR in the javelin, which is an outstanding way to start the outdoor season. Tabitha Polk had a good start in the discus. She threw one 44-10. Mandy Malouf, like always, was very steady and competitive in the 5,000."

The women will have a dual meet with New Mexico State. Also competing with the women will be Wayland Baptist, Odessa College and Western New Mexico.

"It's not a very large meet," Parke said. "It is that way intentionally. We felt like after the competition in Arizona, we needed a little bit lower key meet and give some our kids a chance to get their feet back on the ground. We'll use this meet to get ready for the meet El Paso the following weekend."

Other than a minor back problem with Polk, Parke said the women are about as healthy as they have ever been going into the meet Saturday.

Dion Miller, who injured himself in the outdoor after an NCAA provisional qualifying time, is day-to-day.

A couple of football players, triple jumper Marcus Coleman and sprinters Stacey Mitchell, Corey Turner and Verone McKinley, will compete in the meet after a 10 a.m. football scrimmage at Jones Stadium. Turner (100m), Coleman, McKinley (200m) and Mitchell (100m) are the 4X400 sprint relay team. Coleman will miss the triple jump Saturday because it conflicts with the scrimmage.

Imagine if striking baseball players had real jobs...

Jared Parcell

Back when Abbott and Costello created their famous "Who's on first?" skit, no one really knew how successful the routine would be.

Want to start a business? Fire up the printing presses because one only knows the kind of money entrepreneurs could make this baseball season.

If the strike continues deep into the dog days of summer and players keep walking out of camp, scorecards and programs are going to need to be filled with ink and the presses ready to roll.

But what about the major leaguers (money-hungry pigs) who are out of a job?

I have an idea. But before you read on, remember, this is all in fun and games, and I doubt it will come true.

However, Robert Redford found his dream in "The Natural" and Kevin Costner finally played catch with his father in "Field of Dreams." And somehow the Cleveland Indians won a pennant in "Major League" and the sequel.

But back to my point, what kind of work can the current strikers do?

Roger Clemens, pitcher Boston Red Sox a.k.a.

Peanut Vendor

I can see it now. Clemens, who is known as "The Rocket," cruising the stands tossing — no hurling — bags of peanuts at replacement fans.

This is a three-time Cy Young award winner, who throws baseballs to opposing hitters in the mid to upper 90s throwing peanuts at Joe Fan at the same lightning speed.

Maybe this is not such a good idea. Think of the lawsuits that would arise from fans suing from head injuries.

Philadelphia Phillies a.k.a. Beer Salesmen
This is especially true for Lenny "Nails" Dykstra, John "I'm a ball player, not an athlete" Kruk and Darren Daulton.

These guys, along with the rest of their teammates, could have knocked off the Toronto Blue Jays in the 1993 World Series, except for that Mitch "Wild Thing" Williams pitch to Joe Carter.

If you have ever seen these guys play baseball, you would understand why their blue-collar style of play would suit them for the beer-vending business.

But they would be selling replacement beer. No Miller Lite or Budweiser. These owners, who really don't have a clue, would put in Busch and Milwaukee's Best.

Will Clark, first baseman Texas Rangers a.k.a. Undercover Cop

If you have been following baseball in any way, you would know that the few Rangers who are thinking of crossing the picket line, are scared of "the Thrill."

Many are frightened of the grudge Clark may hold if the strike ends and their locker ends up next to his. Clark, as all fans should know, plays with so much intensity, that he hardly ever smiles on the field.

Now put him in a bar, filled with a bunch of under-age drinkers, and imagine the fear they would have, just trying to sneak a drink.

Frank "The Big Hurt" Thomas, first baseman Chicago White Sox a.k.a. Wrestler

Lawrence Taylor will finally meet his match, as Thomas enters the ring under a new name. He will be known as the Big Sandwich, turning the whole world of wrestling into a shamble.

Thomas, who was on his way to a Triple Crown in 1994, certainly could cause some damage in the ring.

Tennessee next up for Lady Raiders

By Jonathan Harris

The University Daily

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A 12-0 run to open the second half propelled the Tennessee Lady Volunteers to a 87-65 win over the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers Thursday at Thompson-Boling Arena. The Lady Vols advanced to the Mideast Regional Final.

After only leading by 34-30 at halftime, the Lady Vols came out in the second half to score the first 12 points giving the Vols a 42-33 lead.

Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said she was upset over the first half performance by her team.

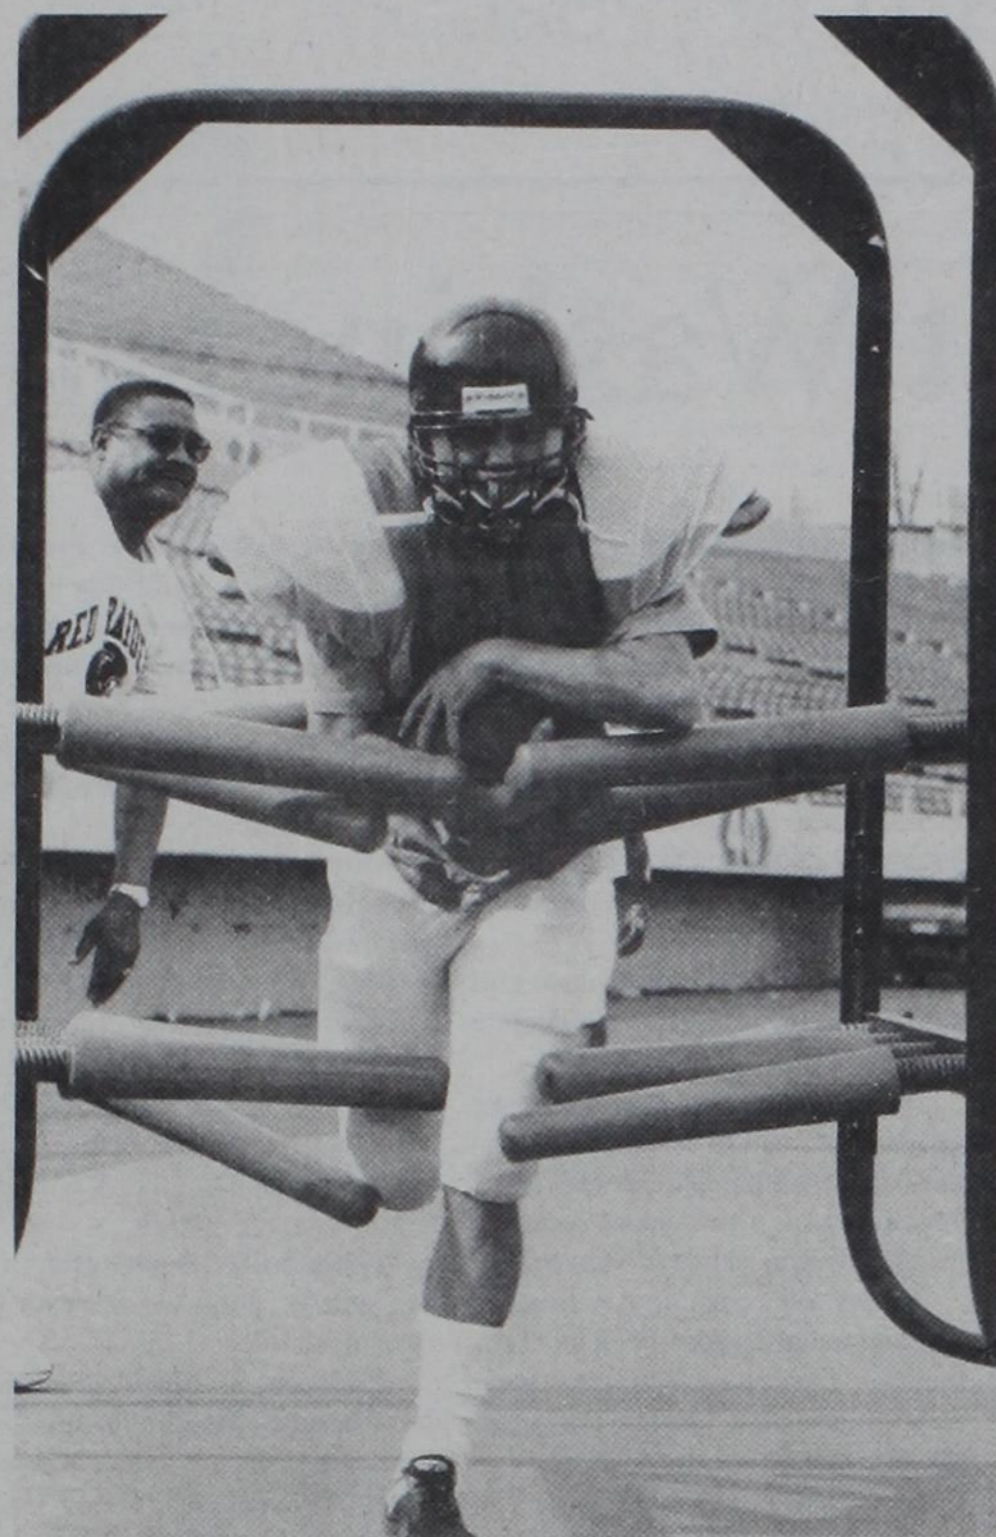

"I told the team at halftime that I was extremely disappointed that we spent the last four days preparing to play Western Kentucky," Summitt said. "I thought we played hard but not really smart."

"In the first half, we were playing to play and not playing our game. We came back in the second half and played our game and was able to get the win."

Tennessee was led by Dana Johnson who put in 25 points while the Lady Vols shot 50 percent in the game. The Hilltoppers shot 42 percent and were led by Gwen Doyle with 23 points for the night.

Tennessee will play Texas Tech, a 67-52 winner over Washington in the second semifinal.

Raiders tune up with second scrimmage

Jeremy Chesnut: The University Daily

Workout: Tech receiver's coach David Moody watches as a receiver runs through a training machine during spring practice Thursday. The Red Raiders will hold a scrimmage at 10 a.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium.

By Bryan Adams

The Texas Tech football team will have its second scrimmage of the spring at 10 a.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium.

Tech coach Spike Dykes said earlier in the spring season the scrimmages will not follow the typical game format. He also said the early part of spring practice is pretty much a trial period and an experimental stage for the football team.

Many players will be tried out at different positions and will be shifted around to get several different looks at the team.

Tech is returning 12 starters, six on offense and five on defense, from the 1994 Southwest Conference championship team. Tech lost 12 starters to graduation. Twenty lettermen were lost from last year's team, and 41 lettermen are returning. Tech will collect 17 players who were redshirted last season, including junior linebacker Anthony Armour who was third on the team in tackles in 1993. Armour is recovering from the knee surgery he had in the fall.

Defensive tackle David Guy, linebacker Eric Butler and linebacker Oscar Smallwood are sitting out spring practice because of academic ineligibility but are expected to return in the fall. The only junior college transfer at spring practice is cornerback Kenny Haywood from San Jose, Calif.

Tech's annual Red-Black game is scheduled for 2 p.m. April 1. Spring practice will end April 4. All events in the spring are open to the public.

Men's golf team to take road trip

By Bryan Adams

The Texas Tech men's golf team goes down South Saturday for the Annual Border Olympics in Laredo.

Tech has finished fifth out of 15 teams in each of the past five Border Olympics. Several national top-25 teams are set to make an appearance in Laredo, including Southwest Conference rivals Texas A&M, Texas and Texas Christian. A&M has finished ahead of Tech in three tournaments this year and Texas Christian's only loss against a SWC foe came from Tech. Tech coach Tommy Wilson said the competition is always tough in Laredo.

"There is a really good field down there again," Wilson said. "A&M will be there, and they've beaten us three times this year. I certainly didn't like that. I still think we're a better team than them. An always tough Arkansas team will be down there, too." The tournament will take place at the Laredo Country Club. Tech's top player, junior Bryan Novoa, will be making sort of a homecoming. Novoa, a Laredo Nixon High product, won the Border Olympics last year as a sophomore. Novoa has finished no lower than fourth in six tournaments in the 1994-95 season. With a good finish at the Border Olympics Tech is almost assured a qualifying spot in regionals.

"We're looking to peak right now as a team," he said. "We're looking at nationals. I don't think regionals will be a problem. Fifth place would be good at all in Laredo."

Tech will send six guys to compete in the three-round tournament. The team will include senior Michael Schrade, junior Chris Mathis, sophomore Chris Hill, sophomore Greg Wetter, freshman Patrick Barley and Novoa.

"Of course, Bryan is looking to repeat in Laredo," Wilson said. "We don't talk about that. He proved a lot to me last year as a sophomore. Chris (Mathis) has done really well for us his last three outings. In Laredo, we need to get a tighter grasp on regionals. I don't want to go into the conference tournament having to place second or third just to make regionals."

Tech slipped out of the NCAA top 25 after finishing fifth at the International Intercollegiate in Monterrey, Mexico. Tech remains sixth in the district. Coach Wilson said the next poll will include four more tournaments.

"If we can do better than our last outing it will give us momentum going into the All-American," Wilson said about the April 10 tournament in Montgomery, Ala. "Everybody will have four more events under their belt when the next poll comes out. If we continue to play well like I know we can, we'll fare fine. The next two tournaments will pretty much say what happens to us."

Mavericks beat Pistons 102-94

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Popeye Jones scored 21 points and added 18 rebounds to lead the Dallas Mavericks to a 102-94 victory over the Detroit Pistons on Thursday night.

Detroit rookie Grant Hill scored a season-high 32 points, but missed all six of his shots in the fourth.

Dallas has now won three straight and six of seven as the Mavericks held the Pistons scoreless in the final four minutes.

The Pistons played without Terry Mills, who had a sore heel, and Joe Dumars, out with a groin pull, and lost for the seventh time in eight games.

Meeks leads Canisius to 89-80 victory over Washington State

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Michael Meeks scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half to lead Canisius to a 89-80 victory over Washington State in an NIT quarterfinal Thursday night. Canisius used a 13-0 run to come back from an early deficit and held the lead for the final 28 minutes of the game.

Canisius (21-12) reached the NIT Final Four for the first time since 1963. Washington State (18-12) pulled to 72-68 before Canisius made 16 straight free throws.

Final Four according to The UD Sports desk

It's late March and that means the NCAA's Sweet 16 in both the men's and women's tournaments.

The University Daily sports staff, like sports fans across the country, is picking the Final Four in both.

Hope you enjoy our picks.

MEN'S TOURNAMENT
Bryan Adams (University Daily Sports Editor): In the East, Wake Forest is the only team in the region with two established weapons. Guard Randolph Childress is unstoppable.

Out West, UCLA is due to lose, and Mississippi State is the perfect underdog. Connecticut is overrated, and Maryland just has Joe Smith, period.

In the Southeast, North Carolina's Jerry Stackhouse will stack bodies.

The North Carolina-Kentucky game will be a good game. The other two (Georgetown and Arizona State) can't hang.

Kansas all the way in the Midwest.

Every team that people have picked to win it all, Kansas has beaten with the exception of UCLA, but they won't be there.

BRYAN'S FINAL FOUR: Wake Forest, Mississippi State, North Carolina and Kansas

Jared Parcell (University Daily Sports Editor): In the East, Massachusetts, with coach John Callipari and center Marcus Camby are too tough. Camby is a Player of the Year candidate and a potential all-American.

In the West, I like UCLA because of the O'Bannon brothers. Tyus Edney, the Bruins' point guard is great. Anytime you have a guy like that, you have a shot at the Final Four.

How could I pick against Rick Pitino's Kentucky Wildcats in the Southeast.

North Carolina is not as good as people think they are when they are not healthy, but the game with Kentucky will be a classic.

The Midwest is the hardest region to pick. I hate Arkansas, and Kansas isn't that good. Pick an upset with Memphis.

JARED'S FINAL FOUR: Massachusetts, UCLA, Kentucky and Memphis

WOMEN'S TOURNAMENT

Kent Best (University Daily editorial adviser, Ex-UD sports editor): In the East, Connecticut. The home-court advantage for UConn is too much to overcome for the others in the region (Alabama, Virginia and Louisiana Tech.)

Stanford is my choice in the West. The coaching of Tara VanDerveer and Stanford's experience will be the difference.

In the Midwest Region, take Colorado. Guard Shelly Sheetz will shoot the Buffaloes to the final four.

Finally the Mideast, take the Lady Raiders. Tennessee's Lady Vols have been proven mortal by Vandy. The memory of Jeannine McHaney could be a deciding factor.

KENT'S FINAL FOUR: Connecticut, Stanford, Colorado, Texas Tech

Arni Sribhen (University Daily Sports Editor): In the East region, Louisiana Tech will end Connecticut's dream of an undefeated season.

The Lady Techsters were punished for losing to Western Kentucky in the finals of their tournament and will make the Lady Huskies pay in Storrs, Conn.

Stanford is the class of the West Region despite being a No. 2 seed. Vanderbilt was given a top seed because it beat Tennessee in the SEC tourney, but the Cardinal's tougher road to the regional final will pay off in the end.

If Colorado doesn't make it to the Final Four, it will be a shocker. The Midwest region was left wide open for Shelly Sheetz and company, and with Penn State gone, it should be easy.

That pressure combined with the pressure of playing at home might be too much for them.

ARNI'S FINAL FOUR: Louisiana Tech, Stanford, Colorado and Texas Tech

NOTE: Picks were made before games were played Thursday night. Jonathan Harris did not participate in the poll because he is in Knoxville, Tenn.
