Senate approves funding to GLBS

By Angela Murray

The University Daily

The Texas Tech Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Students organization will receive funding from the Tech Student Association following the creation and approval of a new bill by the Student Senate Tuesday.

The new bill will allocate $100 in SA funds to the GLBS, the amount originally requested by the group in February.

The bill was accepted by a vote of 26-19. A motion was brought to the senate floor to override a veto made by SA President Zach Brady Tuesday in response to a denial of GLBS funding during the organization's appeal Friday. The motion failed by a vote of 30-18.

During a March 23 senate meeting, GLBS members were denied their original funding request and were labeled a "political organization" by the senate.

According to yearly revised SA funding requirements, any organization that advocates political actions or makes efforts aimed at influencing the operation of government, such as activities that target an issue with political ramifications, will not be funded.

A grievance filed by the GLBS against Tech President Robert Lawless regarding his disapproval of the homosexual lifestyle and the group's plans to protest through sit-ins and a letter-writing campaign to The University Daily are actions that could be deemed as political, said Ken Trimble, a senator-at-large from Lubbock, in a previous interview.

Brady said he was pleased with the new bill and said it is in accordance with the funding to be allocated to the GLBS.

April Burba, GLBS spokeswoman and a freshman exercise and sports sciences major from Austin, said GLBS members are happy that the senate is in favor of the new bill. "We will continue to be a non-political organization," Burba said.

Geoff Wayne, a College of Business Administration senator from Lubbock, said he believed too many senators' votes changed.

"The GLBS is a political group, and that is the total reason that we did not fund them before," Wayne said.

Wayne voted against the new bill and said he believes the power of the senate was taken out its hands.

Tech, TTUHSC project under way

By Linda Carriger

The University Daily

Two weeks of planning has brought a $90,000 project to the first stage of distance learning between Texas Tech and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

The project, approved by Tech President Robert Lawless a month ago, will string fiber optics from the TTUHSC to the main campus to improve distance learning capabilities.

"The Health Sciences Center has HEALTHNET, one of the most respected distance learning tools in the area, and there was no way to link that program with what is going on at the campus," said Jim Brunjes, Tech's vice president for administration.

Brunjes did not specify where workmen will begin digging tracks to lay the cable, but he expects the project to be completed in the summer, he said.

The project will link KTXT-TV and the School of Education to HEALTHNET facilities, but eventually, all schools will join the system, he said.

Chuck Hickman, deputy executive director of HEALTHNET, said the link opens classroom possibilities at Tech.

"That will allow us to run video over that fiber back to places on your campus,"

Hickman said.

It will have a dual benefit for the main campus, he said. Professors will be able to send programs from other universities across the state and nation as well as receive them.

"Programs could originate from classrooms on that side of the campus and be fed over here to our terrestrial intercampus network or linked to our satellite hook up," Hickman said.

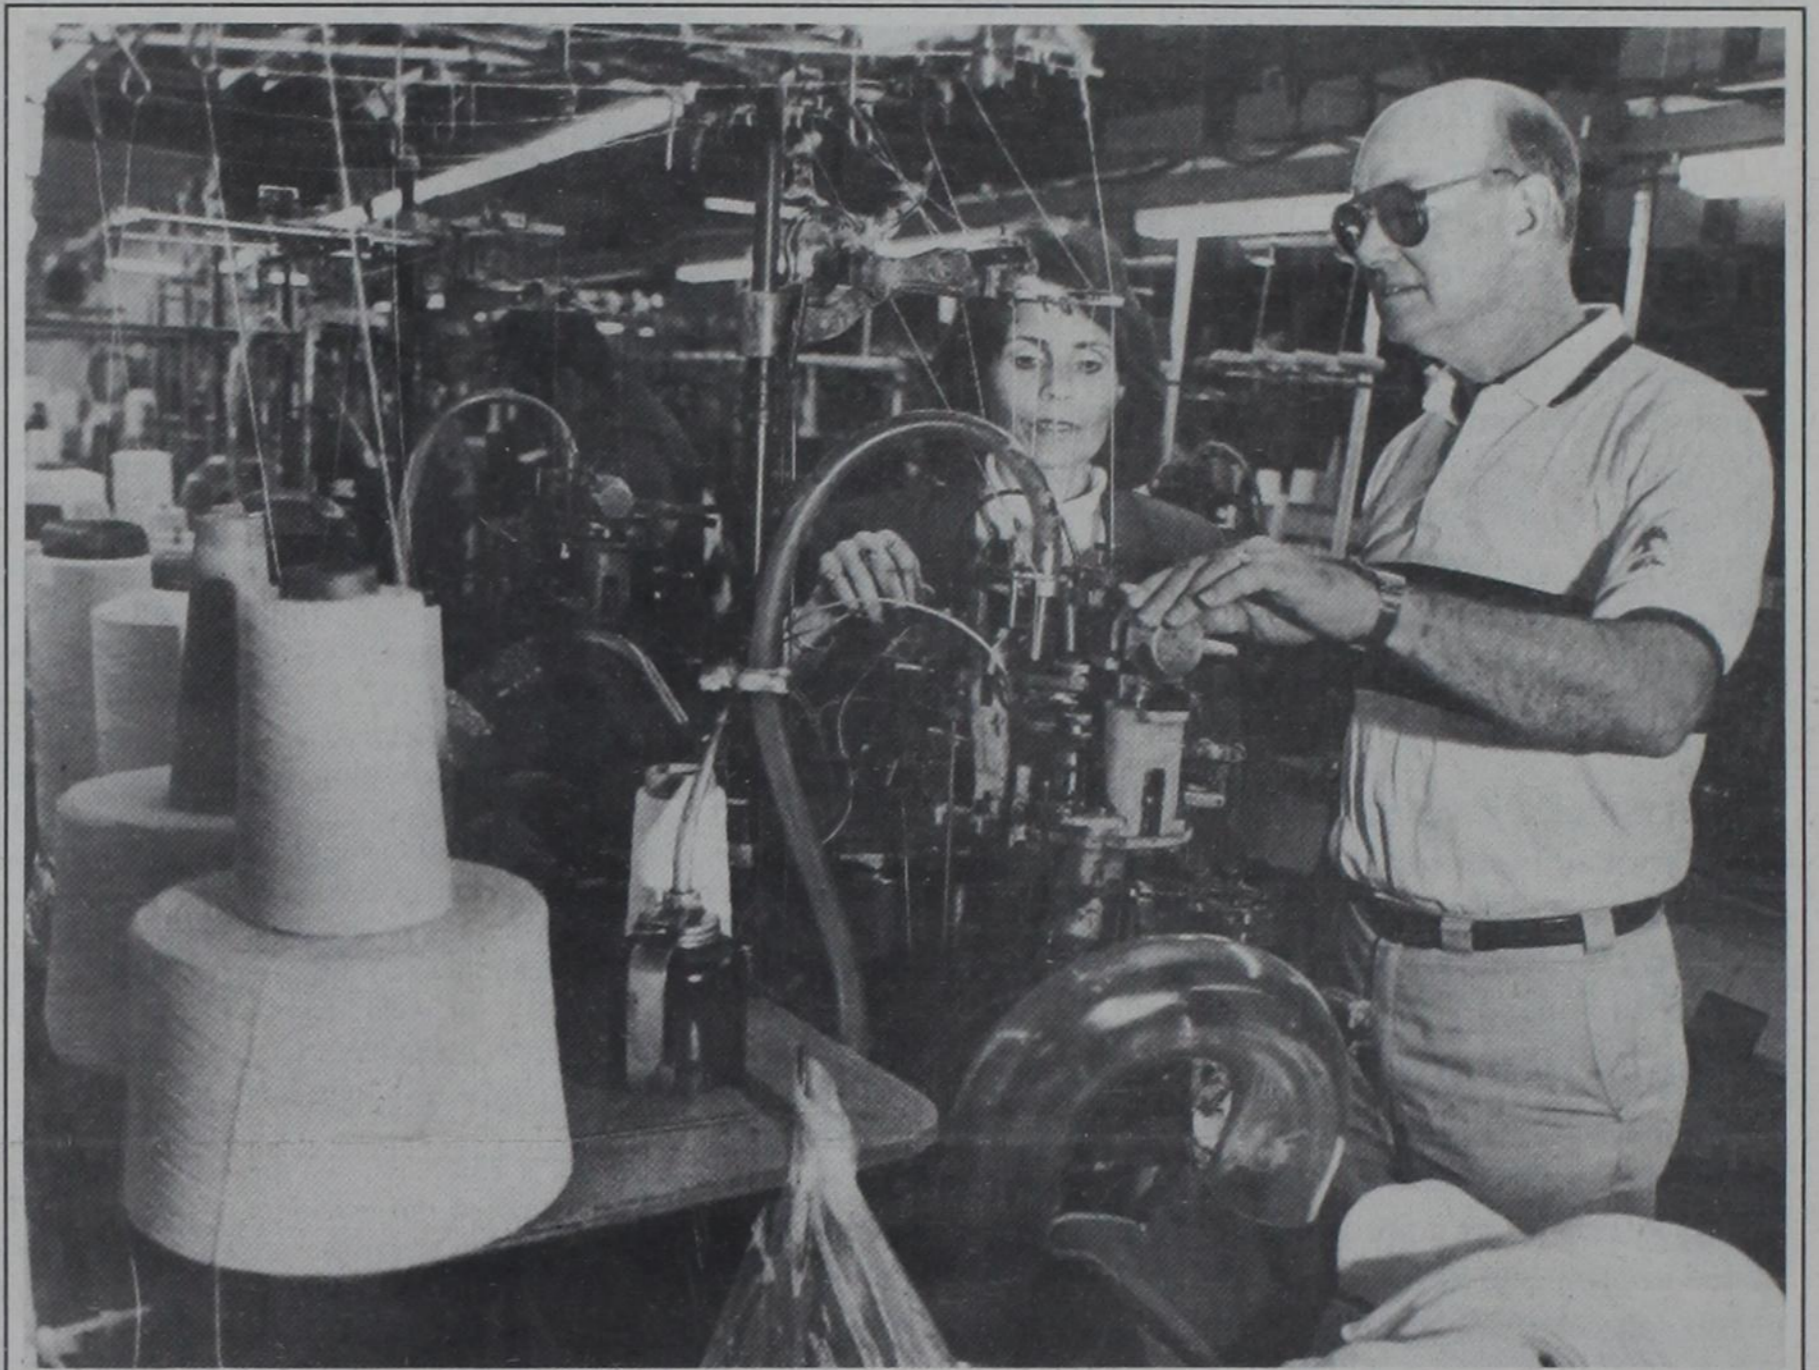

KTXT-TV Associate Director of Continuing Education John Henson said the link will provide more opportunities for students.

"Once you can get the information and move it around, you have a lot of possibilities," Henson said. "I think it would allow departments to explore different delivery methods for getting information to students."

Eventually, he said, students will be able to receive degrees through distance-learning technologies instead of traditional methods such as attending classes on a campus.

Michael Mezack, Tech's director of continuing education, said Texas lags behind neighboring states when it comes to distance learning. There is one reason that Texas is lagging behind the other states, Mezack said.

"It's just there hasn't been any advocates that have pushed it at the state level," Mezack said.

Hutchison: Reese may remain open because of advantages

By Shannon Murphy

The University Daily

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, said she is confident Reese Air Force Base will remain open because of advantages the base has over other bases also recommended for closure by the U.S. Department of Defense.

Hutchison arrived in Lubbock Tuesday to listen to a presentation concerning Reese Air Force Base by city officials.

Hutchison was unable to be in Lubbock during a visit made by the defense department's Base Realignment and Closure Commission this past Wednesday.

City officials made a presentation similar to the one given to BRAC officials to Hutchison Tuesday.

She will attend the BRAC regional hearing April 19 and will speak to the commission on behalf of Texas.

"I tried to come to Lubbock last week for the BRAC visit, but couldn't make it.

"I have been working with everyone, and I am extremely pleased with the presentation that the city gave

Sam W. Magee: The University Daily
Hutchison and Langston to BRAC," Hutchison said.

Reese has an advantage over other bases because Lubbock has a state university along with an undergraduate pilot training base, she said.

"I think that the commissioners may have overlooked some of the advantages, such as Tech being in Lubbock and the wonderful opportunities that a state university brings to the city and to the base," she said. "I fully support Reese, and since I am in a power position, I plan on using my capabilities with the commission to Texas' advantage."

Hutchison serves on the Armed Services Committee and believes this may help Reese.

"This puts me in an even more unique position to make our case to the commission," Hutchison said. "By every stretch, Reese is far superior than the other bases."

"Now is not the time to dismantle the military. With the current state of the nation the way that it is."

Hutchison said there is no question that Lubbock and Reese have an uphill battle ahead of them.

The city is to be commended for the presentation it gave to BRAC commissioners, she said.

"I was blown away by the whole presentation and the way that all of the facts were shown," she said. "I also thought that the inaccuracies and discrepancies were adequately addressed."

Hutchison said she was not surprised by the outpouring of support made by Tech students and Lubbock residents.

"I knew that West Texas would show a lot of hospitality to the commission and I personally commend the mayor, City Council, Reese officials and all who participated in the day," she said.

Hutchison has been a team member since the beginning, said Mayor Pro Tem Randy Neugebauer.

"Kay and her staff have been there for us since this all started," Neugebauer said. "She has been in constant contact with us and with the commission."

The main thing that Lubbock has to prove is that the Air Force's report was flawed, he said.

"We feel that the commission has a responsibility to residents to ensure that their decision is not made hastily and that it is made fairly," he said. "We are glad to have Hutchison and Larry Combest, (R-Texas), on our team."

Hutchison and Combest are powerful voices for Texas that definitely ring in Reese's favor, Neugebauer said.

Group ties jazz, rock, salsa to create own sound

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily

It is not jazz or rock or salsa — it is a combination of all three, and much more.

Beto and the Fairlanes will perform at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the University Center Allen Theatre.

The performance is a part of the 28th Annual Texas Tech Jazz Band Festival, which begins Friday.

"They have had tremendous popularity throughout the Southwest," said Nancy Fly, booking agent for Beto and the Fairlanes. "The group is so skilled on their instruments, and they appeal to various ages."

Beto and the Fairlanes have shared their skills with many colleges and universities by offering a number of workshops through the years, Fly said.

"The group had a really popular swing in the 1980s," she said.

"Their popularity has increased within the past few years with the release of their new album."

Two songs off their new album are featured in the movie, "Just Cause," starring Sean Connery, Fly said.

Often described as the "International Band of Texas," Beto and the Fairlanes are "on a mission to build musical bridges between the Hispanic and Anglo cultures of Texas and the Americas."

Using a combination of jazz, Latin, rock, salsa and tropical sounds, styles and influences, the sound ranges from a hard-driving dance beat to subtle ballads.

"I've heard the band live two or three times, and found them to be one of the most exciting jazz bands I have ever heard," said Alan Shinn, director of jazz studies.

Beto and the Fairlanes is the biggest budgeted group Shinn has ever brought to Tech, but feels the performance will be well worth it.

"They have a pretty good following in Lubbock," he said. "The group stops off at Stubb's (Bar-B-Q) once or twice a year on their way to Albuquerque, (N.M.)."

Shinn said the band has a very tight sound, with a combination of traditional swing jazz, Latin and salsa.

"It is extremely rhythmic and exciting, with high energy," he said. "When the band first cranks up, you just get goose bumps."

A big part of the high energy may come from the band's leader, Robert "Beto" Skiles.

"Beto adds a lot of humor to the show," Shinn said. "He is an interesting and intelligent man. He lived in Mexico four months, and mastered the writing."

DePaul article leads to sit-in at campus newspaper office

CHICAGO (AP) — M-B's That's police talk for "male blacks," and when the phrase cropped up in a story about a fight at a campus party, it led to a sit-in that has shut down the student newspaper at DePaul University.

Last week, dozens of DePaul students, most of them black, stormed the office of the weekly DePaulia, ordering staff members to leave.

About 20 students have been holed up ever since, with no resolution in sight.

Negotiations are continuing with the administration.

Last week, DePaul's president, the Rev. John Minogue, asked newspaper staffers and protesters to reach an agreement, then suspended publication of Friday's edition.

The protesters, who include some whites and Hispanics, are demanding the ouster of DePaulia's editor in chief, 21-year-old Zack Martin, who is white.

They are also demanding that the paper publish weekly articles on minority concerns and that the school do more to curtail racism and punish offenders.

The takeover came after weeks of bickering over the Feb. 17 front-page article about a brawl at a party.

The story quoted a police report describing "several M-B's throwing chairs and trash into the crowd."

Clarification

In Monday's UD, the story about Dan Law Field was unclear. Although the contract for Dan Law Field was approved in January, construction should be completed 120 days after April 3, the day the contractor received notification to begin.

Youth deserve kudos for city involvement

When the May 6 city council and school board elections roll around in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, some political candidates may seem a little wet behind the ears.

Thirteen political candidates, all between the ages of 18 and 25, are providing a hot contest against some older incumbents.

But that's OK. It's Generation X and they have a mission.

The youth involved in this year's election know exactly what they want from their city councils and school board members.

Political agenda

Candidates are pushing for legislation to deter crime, improve neighborhoods, eradicate gang problems and increase communication between lawmakers and the people they serve.

Education, child welfare and other youth-related issues are at the forefront of their campaigns.

And in spite of their age, these young candidates have a fair amount of political and personal experience under their belts.

Gaylon Harrison, 23, and Taylor Brannon, 24, are using their pasts with the Dallas gang scene as a platform for the city council election to curb crime and clean up the city's streets.

Mark Spinks, a senior at the University of North Texas and a former fraternity president, is crying out for more university support at City Hall. Spinks believes the university's 23,000 students need to have more of a hand in what's happening in city government.

Voter registration

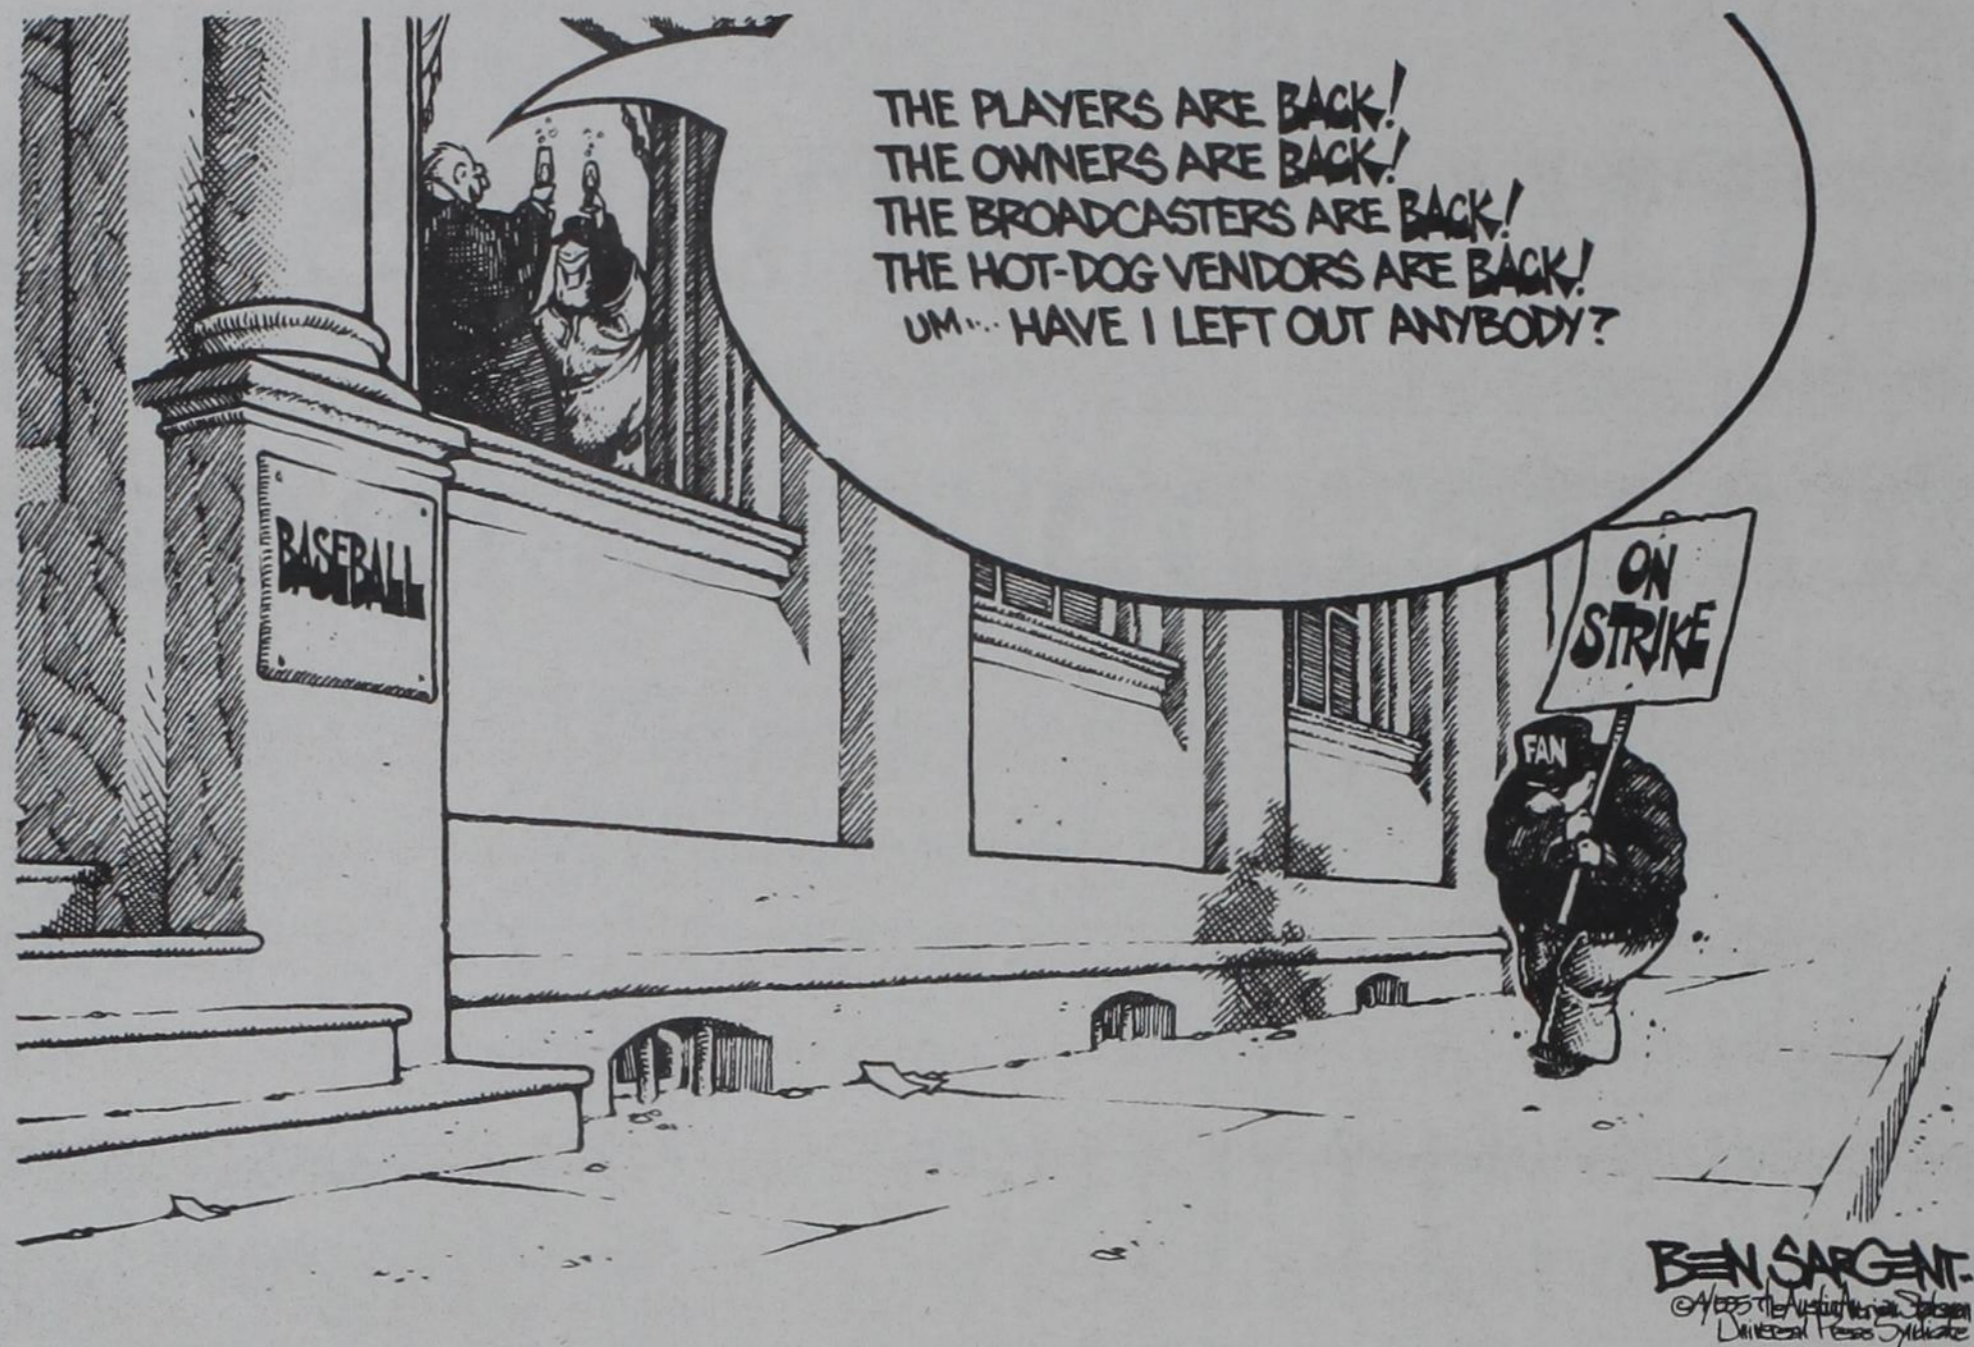

And he's helping himself by registering 80 of his fellow students to vote in next month's election.

City officials are approving of what Generation X has added to proposed voting numbers for the coming election.

But others are wary of what youth and enthusiasm may bring on May 6.

Lack of experience and ageism may not act in the candidates' favor, but they have the drive, ambition and fresh ideas to provide incumbents and their older counterparts with a real race.

The seven-member editorial board voted 7-0 on this issue.

Tax cut will not just benefit upperclass

Eric Sanchez

Seven days ago the Republicans in Congress passed one of the last items of their "Contract With America" — the American Dream Revitalization Act. This legislation allows a family to receive a $500 per-child tax credit, for families earning up to $200,000. Democrats blasted the policy, stating that the Republicans were giving tax breaks to the wealthiest of Americans. Given a situation, let's see if this tax break will help just the rich.

Last week a columnist for the Boston Globe posed this scenario. He made his point so well that even Rush Limbaugh picked up the argument and began to dictate it over the airwaves.

Let's say that there are two American families, the Smith's and the Blackwell's. If you want to be politically correct, you can name the families with any ethnic name you choose or establish any kind of racial background. But keep in mind that they are all Americans. Both of these families have four children. The Smith's have a total taxable income of $96,000 dollars, putting them in the category that the Democrats consider "rich." The Blackwell's have a total taxable income of $24,000 dollars, placing them in the category of lower-income status.

The Smith's current tax bracket in 1994 is 29 percent, thus they must pay $27,840 dollars in taxes. If they were able to use the GOP's $500 dollar-per-child tax credit, they would see a reduction in their taxes by $2,000 and would pay the IRS $25,840. The net reduction of their taxes owed to the government would be close to 8 percent.

The Blackwell's current tax bracket in 1994 is 16.5 percent, thus they must pay $3,770 dollars in taxes. If they were able to use the $500 dollar-per-child tax credit, they would also see a reduction in their taxes by $2,000 and would pay the IRS $1,770. The net reduction of their taxes owed to the government would be over 50 percent!

How can some Democrats see this tax policy as a break for the wealthiest of Americans? How is a 8 percent reduction in taxes a better tax break than 50 percent? One would assume logically that the Blackwell's are better off than the Smith's when it comes time to pay income taxes. It seems that when some Democrats criticize the GOP's tax credit plan, they lack a keen sense of logic.

I have an idea that would end this dilemma some Democrats are facing. Maybe Leonard Nimoy should attend a meeting at DNC headquarters and assume the role of Spock. He could tell all the Democratic faithful that their arguments against the $500 dollar-per-child tax credit are not logical. Then again, I don't want to confuse political discussion about tax policy with a Star Trek episode. Just call it a hunch.

Reporter faces midnight callers, mad Catch 22 fans

Amy Osmulski

Beginning about 10:30 Monday night and stretching into the wee hours of Tuesday morning, my telephone rang almost constantly. It seems disgruntled fans of Catch 22 decided to call me at home in the middle of the night, and express their unhappiness at my review of the band's latest compact disc.

Allow me to repeat something — they called me at home in the middle of the night.

They did not wait until I came to work the next day, write letters to the editor or even call at a decent hour. They woke me up numerous times out of a dead sleep to tell me I did a bad thing.

Some were very nice about it, others were not. Some asked what they could do to get their view expressed, others told me I had no right to say such things about a local band.

Wrong, I do have the right. It is called the First Amendment, and I do not think anyone could argue with me on that one.

No one is stopping my midnight callers from expressing their views on the editorial page of this paper.

I am not sorry for my review of a CD which the band brought to me to be reviewed. They did not ask my credentials and they did not ask my tastes.

One of my callers told me I had really hurt the band and the sale of their new CDs.

If everybody who read that review believes I am a music goddess and does everything I do, then I guess the band will suffer.

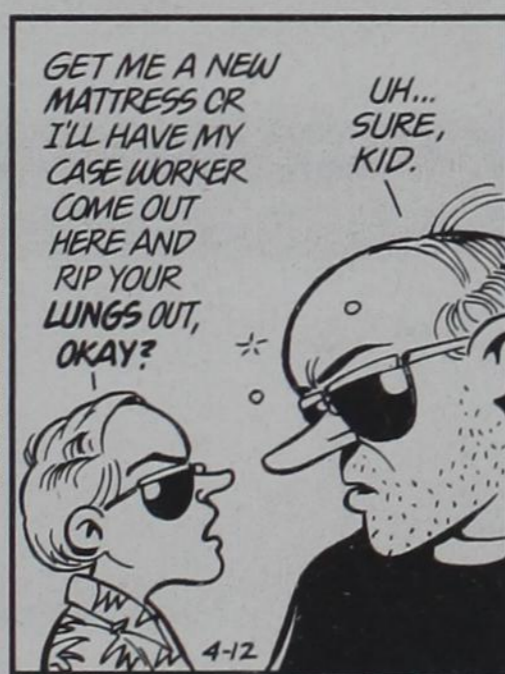

I doubt, however, that is the case.

Feedback about an article or review is great, but do not call me at my home in the middle of the night to tell me you are unhappy with what I wrote.

Right to bear arms given in Constitution

To the editor: One letter writer can be added to the list of "great Americans" who want to disarm the law abiding citizens of the United States like Bill Clinton, Janet Reno and Teddy Kennedy. We will point out Thomas Jefferson who said, "No free man shall ever be debarred the use of arms." Are we to believe you know more about the maintenance of our freedom and liberty than a man like Jefferson who lived in the time when our freedoms were won through blood, sweat and tears? The letter writer has come to the defense of socialism, US sovereignty — sacrificing treaties to world bureaucracies (like GATT), gun control, multiculturalism and gay rights. These are not American ideals. They are Karl Marx's utopian values. If you don't like America and what it stands for, you are free to leave.

The Declaration of Independence states, "All men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain Inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness." This means people have God-given Rights that cannot be taken away by the government. These rights include Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness. The right to bear arms is necessary to protect our right to Life and Liberty. Our God-given rights to assembly and to the press are not found in the Bible word for word. Does it mean these rights no longer exist?

The letter writer claims firearms in the hands of ordinary citizens will prove useless against an oppressive government. He must be ignorant of the American Revolution. The colonists in America won their independence from the oppressive British Empire. The very first thing Britain attempted to do was confiscate the arms which the colonists stored at Concord. The colonists organized and defended their arsenal. Had the British seized the colonist's weapons, the War for Independence would have ended abruptly and we would still be under British rule today. The Washington Times editorialized later, "Whatever you think of guns, without them there would never have been any liberty in the United States." Today in 1995, the lightly armed Chechens are giving the powerful Soviet military fits. The Associated Press reported, "Chechen rebels have stung the Kremlin with these bitter truths: big is not always better, the desire for independence is a powerful weapon, and Moscow's military machine can be made to bleed — profusely. Outmanned and outgunned, the Chechen's fierce resistance has stunned and humiliated the Russian army." One Chechen was quoted as saying, "The mountains are our advantage. Here even a simple hunter can take out an entire Russian battalion." There are well over 200 million firearms in the U.S. Less than .02 percent of the total firearms are involved in criminal use. This means 99.98 percent of U.S. guns are not involved in criminal use. Yet, the gun control advocates who fear the law-abiding citizens want to disarm 99.98 percent of the American people. Richard Henry Lee, the father of the great Robert E. Lee, explained, "To preserve liberty, it is essential that the whole body of the people always possess arms, and be taught alike, especially when young, how to use them."

German cowboy enthusiasts tour Lubbock area

By Gary Black

The University Daily
Forty-four German visitors toured Lubbock and Texas Tech Monday and Tuesday as part of a tour celebrating the Llano Estacado, an area widely known by German author Karl May.

The tourists are members of the Karl May literary society, the largest literary society in Germany.

"Karl May wrote about the Llano Estacado without ever coming to America," said Meredith McClain, Tech associate professor of German. "He died in 1912, but he is the best-selling fiction author in Germany today. He wrote in the 1880s and 1890s, and one of his stories is placed around what is now Lubbock."

May wrote about Old Shatterhand and Winnetou, the German equivalent of the Lone Ranger and Tonto, McClain said.

"His editors put maps of Texas in his books for the readers," she said.

The wide open range May wrote about is what attracts readers, McClain said.

"Europe has been crowded for generations," she said. "The idea of wild, open West with room to move about and roam around is what interested readers."

Johannes Wolfrann, a teacher from Brunswick, Germany, said this trip is his fourth time to visit Texas.

"Texas, on one side, is known in Germany as 'Country of the Cowboys,'" Wolfrann said. "On the other side, I just like it."

Wolfrann came to Texas to see the location of May's stories.

"I want to see what he described right in his writings and what he described wrong," Wolfrann said. "A little wrong was his description of the Llano Estacado. An American author of the 1850s described the Llano Estacado like the Sahara in Africa."

May wrote about the area as being surrounded by cactus, Wolfrann said.

"But I did not see much cactus in this region," he said.

"Texas," written by James Michener, is popular in Germany, Wolfrann said.

"I read it to prepare for Texas history," he said.

John Steinbeck, Zane Grey and Tony Hillerman also are popular authors in Germany, Wolfrann said.

"Hillerman describes the original background of the Navajo and Pueblo Indians," he said. "I think one day the Karl May society should meet Hillerman."

Thomas Grafenberg, an engineer from Berlin, said May's books are so popular throughout Germany, they inspired him to become an antique book dealer.

"In Germany, a lot of children play Winnetou," he said. "They like to play it because it is a very popular character."

Grafenberg has read a lot about

Texas and seen many programs about the state.

"I have been to America before, but this is my first time to come to Texas," he said.

McClain got involved with the society after she presented a paper in Dresden in 1993.

"I gave a paper on Karl May and the Llano Estacado," she said.

"They wanted to know about the area, but I knew the reality of today. The cotton fields, oil pumps and weather has been amazing to them."

The group was very impressed with the Tech campus, McClain said.

"They were very positively impressed with the size and the fact that it is so well-kept," she said.

The group will tour Ransom Canyon, Yellowhouse Canyon and Blanco Canyon today.

The group also will travel to Amarillo; Ruidoso, N.M.; Santa Fe, N.M.; Taos, N.M.; and Albuquerque, N.M.

Family settles with city jail

HOUSTON (AP) — The family of a McAllen man who died of meningitis after being jailed as a drunk has reached a $500,000 settlement with the city of Houston.

Maximilian's family claimed the Houston Police Department violated Perez's civil rights adequate health care.

Pending city council approval, the Perez family will receive the compensation, said family attorney Joel Androphy on Monday.

In December 1993, Perez, 19, was jailed because of his belligerent behavior during an Amtrak train trip passing through Houston from San Antonio.

During the trip, he became ill and began defecating on himself.

Androphy also said Perez also urinated in the seat and removed his clothing. Perez was removed from the train about 12:40 p.m. and taken to the city jail.

Androphy claims the jail's health staff failed to check Perez's vital signs as required by policy.

Perez was listed as being drunk on intake forms.

Videotape shows Perez being brought into the jail on a stretcher, clad only in his underwear.

Professor says tax-cut program will not aid all

By Donald Gillilan

The University Daily
A tax-cut plan proposed by Republicans in conjunction with the Contract with American may not reduce the national deficit, but it may affect college-student financial-aid programs, according to a Texas Tech professor.

Clark Cochran, Tech political science professor, said the tax-cut plan the Republicans are sponsoring will not help America as a whole. "Will the tax cuts work to reduce the deficit?" Cochran said. "No. Is it going to work to help families? Maybe a little bit, but not a whole lot."

The Republican bill will primarily benefit corporations, and people who have capital gains, Cochran said.

The bill will help the upper-class sector and, to some extent, help the middle class, but at the cost of increasing the deficit, he said.

"In reality, the only way you can pay for tax cuts at a magnitude that Republicans are speaking about is to cut spending substantially," Cochran said. "And so far, they haven't really confronted the cut-spending issue except for a few minor cuts."

Jenny Ritter, College Democrats of America president, said she cannot believe Republicans will cut money from student aid to finance tax cuts for the wealthy.

"College loans help to educate the work force of tomorrow. I know I wouldn't have been able to get through school without my loans," Ritter said. "Middle-class families

TAX-CUT BILL AT A GLANCE

- A $500 tax credit for each child under 18 in families with annual incomes below $200,000
- A credit of up to $145 for married couples who pay more taxes if they file jointly rather than singly
- A repeal of the 1993 tax increase on Social Security benefits
- A reduction of the tax paid by individual on capital gains, from 28 percent to 19.8 percent
- A repeal of the alternative minimum tax for corporations
- An expansion of individual retirement accounts to permit more tax-free, penalty-free withdrawals
- A $500 tax credit for taxpayers who care for a disabled relative at home
- A change in Social Security rules to allow recipients to keep more of their benefits if they work
- A $5,000 tax credit for adoption-related expenses incurred by families earning less than $60,000 are seeing their services cut while the wealthiest Americans are having their taxes cut."

Young people think cutting taxes is good, but not for the sake of the future, Ritter said.

"One thing is clear: the Republicans have a targeted agenda aimed at crippling hard-working, middle-class American families," she said. "I think it's hypocritical, because a lot of people from Congress took out loans to get through school, and now they are trying to cut the programs."

According to a report by the College Democrats of America, student-aid programs being cut by the Republican budget include:

- Subsidized Stafford Loans
 - Work-Study Programs
 - Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants and Perkins Loans
- Susan Blad, College Democrats of America executive director, said the budget-cut information came directly from Congressman John Kasich, R-Ohio, budget committee chairman.

Dan Issett, Tech College Republicans president, said the tax cuts provision is the crowning jewel of the Contract With America.

"If we lower taxes, it raises revenue for the federal government as we found out in the '80s," he said. "But now we are also trying to cut spending and cut taxes."

Global focus brought to Tech college program

By Jamie McDonald

The University Daily

Global expansion will be the focus of a lecture this morning sponsored by the Chief Executives' Roundtable of the College of Business Administration.

Alfred Lynch will present "Thinking Globally, Acting Locally" at 10 a.m. in the College of Business Administration rotunda.

Lynch is vice president and director of international development at the JCPenney Company, and president and chief executive officer of the JCPenney Subsidiary, JCPenney International Inc., said Jennifer Cox, Chief Executives' Roundtable director.

"He was chosen to speak because of his involvement and knowledge of international expansion of a business," Cox said.

The North American Free Trade Agreement has made global education and local activities important, she said.

"I think the topic is important in Lubbock because of the development of NAFTA," she said. "There are more opportunities to Texas' businesses for international expansion."

International expansion also needs to include action in the local area, said Carlton Whitehead, College of Business Administration associate dean.

"The title of the lecture means that you need a broad international perspective, but you also need to do the right things where you are operating from," Whitehead said.

Business students, other Tech students and the public are invited to attend the lecture to learn more about international business, Cox said.

"They can get a better idea of what's involved in developing and expanding a business internationally," she said. "They can learn both the opportunities and the difficulties."

The lecture is important for business students to attend because it is a source of firsthand knowledge, Cox said.

"It is firsthand information from someone who is directly involved in international business today," she said.

Being around a successful person will have an impact on people who attend the lecture, Whitehead said.

"Anytime you are around somebody who represents excellence, it has a positive impact on you," he said. "He is quite an impressive person."

The Chief Executives' Roundtable is an organization of local business leaders in cooperation with the College of Business Administration that bring speakers to Tech students, Cox said.

HSC students garner research awards

Ten Texas Tech students received awards Friday for research completed in conjunction with Student Research Day at the Tech Health Sciences Center.

Graduate student winners included Steven King, cell biology and biochemistry, first place; Jane Colmer, microbiology and immunology, second; and Amanda Hayward-Lester, cell biology and biochemistry, third. Jeffrey Selby, took first in the medical division; Jerry San Diego, won second; and Cary Anderson, won third. In the post-doctoral/resident division, Barbara Clark placed first. In the Howard Hughes/undergraduate category, Thomas Kerr took first in biological sciences, Sundus Lodhi was second in biological sciences and Iviane'e Martinez was third in cell and molecular biology.

Five men convicted of attempting to ship $40 billion of cocaine

HOUSTON (AP) — Five men have been convicted in federal court for shipping more than 40 metric tons of cocaine worth about $40 billion through Houston, Los Angeles and Chicago for the Cali drug cartel.

An eight-week trial ended Monday with the jury returning conspiracy to distribute convictions against Jose Guillermo Chavez-Quezada, 38, a prominent Juarez, Mexico, businessman; and Ernesto Uribe, 28; Hugo A. Mora, 28; and Carlos A. Lujan, 56, all of El Paso.

Uribe, Mora and Lujan also were found guilty of possession with intent to distribute cocaine. Those three and Chavez-Quezada also were found guilty of possession of cocaine.

Uribe also was convicted of three counts of distribution of cocaine, and Eugenio Arevalo Jr. was convicted of possession with intent to distribute.

All five face 10 years to life in prison and fines of up to $4 million.

The transportation arm of the Cali drug cartel has since been dismantled, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jesse Rodriguez.

The Cali cartel is a loose-confederation of Colombian cocaine producers who pool their resources to ship huge amounts of cocaine out of Cali, Colombia, to the rest of the world. The transportation network started falling apart March 26, 1994, when Pasadena police arrested a man driving a van that had run a stop sign.

Band transforms hits, plays polka

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily

They never have rehearsed their polka renditions of popular hits and have been known to chase audience members into the parking lot.

Studebaker Pick-up, which band members lovingly refer to as "The Pick-up," only plays together three times a year and is best known for its crazy foolishness.

"The main purpose of Studebaker Pick-up is to cut-up and have a good time," guitarist John Sprott said. "We get up there and pretty much fly by the seat of our pants."

Lubbockites will have the chance to experience Studebaker Pick-up Thursday at the Texas Cafe at 10 p.m.

There is a $4 cover charge, and band members recommend those attending come ready to "polka 'till they puke."

"This is the first time we have played at the Texas Cafe and almost certainly the last," Sprott said.

"I don't know if they'll invite us back."

The group, which was formed by accident one night at the Main Street

Sam Magee: The University Daily

Polka party: Studebaker Pick-up band members John Sprott, guitar; a stand-in onion for Denzil "The Onion" Smith, bass; Johnny Ray, drums; and Bob McLane, saxophone; celebrate parties, polka and life in general.

Saloon, takes popular songs of today and yesterday, and puts them to polka.

"We take songs that were or are very popular and play them in extremely unpopular ways," said Bob McLane, saxophone.

"We'll turn anything into a waltz or a polka."

During a gig at the Conference Cafe, drummer Johnny Ray recalled an audience member who threatened the band because of its disrespect of the music.

"Before we even started playing, this guy came up and threatened us while we were setting up," Ray said. "He turned out to be one of the biggest fans of the evening."

Ray warns audience members not to try to leave during the show, or they will become the star of the show.

"We've stopped in the middle of songs and asked people where they were going, and we've chased them out into the parking lot," he said. "We just try to urge people not to leave."

The fact that the group plays so infrequently together keeps things interesting and spontaneous, Sprott said.

"We all have other projects going and our fourth band member lives in Austin, so it's hard to get together," he said. "But it gives us a chance to try a lot of new ideas — anything goes."

The group flies bassist Denzil "The Onion" Smith in a few times a year to keep Studebaker Pick-Up alive.

"The Pick-up will never die, despite personal efforts to kill it," Sprott said. "It is a power bigger than any of us can stop."

School, organization create programs honoring deceased Tejano musician

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A school Selena attended while growing up may change its name in honor of the slain Tejano singer and a national Hispanic organization is setting up a fine arts program in her memory.

A former national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens says he's helping launch the Selena Quintanilla Foundation for the Fine Arts.

The foundation will provide tuition, awards, grants and scholarships for gifted and talented students pursuing a career in the arts and entertainment field, said Corpus Christi attorney Ruben Bonilla.

"This is not going to be a Hispanic program. It's not a LULAC program," Bonilla said. "It's a community and statewide thrust to memorialize and recognize Selena's contribution to this community and the nation."

Bonilla said he hopes some donations will come from advertise of Howard Stern's nationally syndicated radio program.

Last week, LULAC began a boycott of the talk show's sponsors because of comments Stern made about Selena's music. He has since apologized.

"Instead of advertising on Howard Stern, they should work to develop the energies and talents of young people across this country," Bonilla said.

Florida thieves deactivate burglar alarms, knock out electricity

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Thieves apparently trying to knock out store burglar alarms accomplished that and a lot more, cutting electricity to tens of thousands of customers in the Florida Keys. Someone broke into a substation on Saturday and flipped a switch, blowing out a transformer. A hardware store was burglarized later in the day. Then, on Monday, someone broke into another substation and knocked out power. A couple more break-ins occurred before power was restored.

Hays nears 1,000 as Tech wins 4-1

ARLINGTON (Special) — Two Texas Tech pitchers who have seen limited action this season provided a lift to the team Tuesday, as the eighth-ranked Red Raiders downed the Texas-Arlington Mavericks 4-1 at Allen Saxe Stadium.

Brandon Kolb and Mike McCreary limited UTA, 17-21 overall, to five hits and only one run, as Tech (32-7) moved coach Larry Hays to within career win 1,000.

Kolb (4-1), making his sixth start of the season, went 5 1/3 innings, striking out six and surrendering the five Maverick hits.

McCreary, in his fifth appearance, picked up his first save of the year, going the final 3 2/3 innings, striking out three and walking one.

With Tech ahead 4-1 in the sixth inning and the bases loaded with one out, Kolb went to a 2-0 count to Billy Martin. McCreary came in and got Martin to ground into a 6-4-3 double play, one of a season-high four twin-killings for Tech.

"He needed something because everything else was stacked against him," Hays said of the situation McCreary came into. "He came into a situation where you don't have any room for a mistake. A lot of pitchers won't throw it over the plate because they're afraid of getting hit. He did that, and we got a double play out of that."

"(Kolb) is a guy that needs a lot of work to keep his rhythm going. His stuff was outstanding. His slider was good for two or three innings."

Tech jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning, when Clint Bryant extended his school-record hitting streak to 26 games with his ninth home run, a solo shot with two outs.

Randy DuRoss put Tech ahead 2-0 in the third, when he hit his third home run of the year.

"In our team meeting, I said, 'Don't anybody go for home runs. Get on top of the ball and hit line drives,'" Hays said. "As usual, they listened to me. We hit two home runs early, and it shows what I know. It was a big hit that Clint got."

Hays gave credit to the Mavericks starter, Bryan Tambone (0-1), who went 8 2/3 innings, giving up nine hits, walking four and striking out two.

Dion Ruecker picked up an RBI one inning later when he bunted home Andy Gonzales who led off the inning with a single.

The Mavericks cut into the Tech lead, scoring a run in the fourth inning, when Martin hit a sacrifice fly to score Jason Garrett.

UTA had several opportunities to score, leaving seven men stranded, but four Tech double plays ended many threats.

"The double plays turned the momentum for us," Ruecker said. "We are more focused now. Since TCU (a doubleheader loss on April 1), we have been playing our kind of baseball. The loss brought us back to reality."

Tech closed out the scoring in the fifth inning when Matt Kastelic hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Jason Totman.

"This is the first time I want to talk about 1,000," Hays said after the game. "We need to win 1,000. This is a key deal. I'll be happy to get 1,000 tomorrow because that means we've won another game. We need another win for this team."

Tech closes out the two-game series with UTA today, with a scheduled start of 2 p.m. at Allen Saxe Stadium.

Where are the umpires?

Bryan Adams

OK. We got the real players back. Whew! The owners didn't lock out. Thank you!

The fans are here, we got the beer vendors and the hot dog vendors. Wait a minute. Where are the damn umpires?

Come on guys, get it together! Just when we thought everything was set and ready to go, the umpires are standing over in the corner shouting "Look at us, look at us, we can go on strike, too."

The last time the umpires went on strike was in 1979. The league brought up many minor league umpires to fill in that year, and that is exactly what they did this year.

For those of you who remember the '79 strike, you could probably tell they were replacement umpires. I remember a game that was held up for an hour because the umpires were discussing the proper call to make. Or maybe they were just deciding on which nude bar to go to after the game. I wasn't on the field.

I do remember a time when a third-base umpire ran down the left field line to call a ball fair only to be out of position to make a crucial call at third in the playoffs. It meant the game for one team.

But hey, these incidents are no more unusual than the bonehead calls the regular umpires consistently make. I say let the over-the-hill, egotistical, blind-as-bat, 12-sandwich-eating umpires sit and rot out the season.

Enjoy the season from your recliners guys.

It will be hard for the umpires to entertain player favorites this year because nobody knows what team anybody is playing on.

The free-agent market has seen more action in one week than Wilt Chamberlain's bedroom sees in a year.

The Rangers are having their minor league blue-light special — buy one get one free. The Expos and Royals are having a liquidation sale until they can get something for the bat boys.

I think it is safe to say the only teams competing for the crown this year are the clubs with money (Chicago, New York, Toronto, Atlanta).

All in all, I'm just glad to be talking baseball again. It's a good thing the owners and the players have reassured me they will finish the season.

If for some reason they don't, please hide all sharp objects from me.

Texas, Rice players earn weekly conference award

DALLAS (AP) — Texas outfielder Shea Morenz and Mark Quinn, a pitching and hitting star for Rice, have been named the Southwest Conference players of the week.

Morenz and Quinn were honored

Tuesday for the week ending April 9. They are the third set of players to share the award this season.

Morenz hit .529 with three doubles and five RBIs as Texas went 5-0, including a four-game sweep of then-No. 13 Texas Christian.

Cricketers sign fifth player

The Lubbock Cricketers added their fifth player Tuesday as Manager Greg Minton signed free agent outfielder-first baseman Jason Dailey.

The 6-foot-4-inch Dailey is a former prospect in the Atlanta organization. He hit .250 for Idaho Falls, the rookie-level Pioneer League affiliate of the Braves last season. Dailey joins catchers Nunez Dimerson and William Rowland and pitchers Chris Law and Dennis Ferraro on the expanding Cricket roster.

Minton will scout potential members of the Cricketers at a Texas League tryout in Mesa, Ariz.
