Bombing suspects at large

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — As the rubble slowly yielded more dead, the FBI struck back swiftly Thursday and issued arrest warrants for two men suspected of renting the truck that blew apart the federal building with a half-ton of home-brewed explosives.

The death toll rose to 52, making the attack the deadliest bombing in U.S. history. About 150 people remained unaccounted for.

FBI Agent Weldon Kennedy said arrest warrants have been issued for two white men suspected of using aliases to rent the truck used in the bombing Wednesday morning at the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. The men's identities were not known, he said.

Investigators said the truck was rented April 17, packed with fuel-and-fertilizer explosives and parked outside the office building, where the blast tore away half the structure and blew a crater 8 feet deep and 30 feet across.

In London, a third man, a Jordanian-American described by U.S. officials as a possible witness in the attack, was flown back to the United States for questioning Thursday. Italian officials said his bags contained possible bomb-making tools.

However, law enforcement sources in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they did not think he had significant knowledge of the bombing.

Jon Hansen, assistant fire chief, said 40 bodies were removed from the bombed-out building, and rescue workers searching a lower level came upon another group of corpses. He said rescuers stopped counting at a dozen.

Rescue teams crawling through the nine-story hulk briefly suspended their work so that the shattered columns could be reinforced with steel and concrete.

Gov. Frank Keating reported a firefighter told him: "You find out whoever did this. All I've found in here are a baby's finger and an American flag."

An axle thought to have come from the vehicle was found about two blocks away, said a police source who spoke on condition of anonymity. Major auto parts are marked with an ID number to thwart thieves. Two years ago, the vehicle ID number on a piece of axle enabled investigators to break the World Trade Center bombing case.

A federal law enforcement official, demanding anonymity, said investigators believe the truck was rented in Kansas and are checking fertilizer dealers in that state to trace the fertilizer used in the bomb.

Dave Russell, a Ryder Truck Rental official, said the FBI had contacted his company about a truck rented from Elliott's Body Shop in Junction City, Kan., about 270 miles north of Oklahoma City. Russell said he could not comment further.

The FBI issued sketches of the two suspects after sending an artist to Junction City to talk to witnesses.

In Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno announced a $2 million reward for information leading to arrests in the case.

CNN reported that three men were arrested — two in Dallas, one in Oklahoma City — on immigration charges and were being questioned in the bombing. The men had stopped to ask an Oklahoma Highway Patrol officer for directions Wednesday, and the officer was suspicious enough to write down their car's license plate number — which turned out to be registered to a rental car and not the vehicle they were driving, the network said.

The search continues: Work crews gather early Thursday to prepare to shore up several weak sections of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. Efforts to rescue victims trapped inside the building after Wednesday's bombing continue today.

Recovery continues

Oklahoma, nation unite to piece together a city after bombing of federal building

By Donald Gillilan

The University Daily

OKLAHOMA CITY — A nation prays and mourns as firefighters work day and night to clear rubble from the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building a day after a bomb blew Oklahoma City and the country into shock.

"It's hard to work because there are so many charred bodies and personal belongings scattered around the building," said Larry Medina, an Oklahoma Air National guardsman.

A car bomb ripped a hole in the nine-story downtown federal building in Oklahoma City just before 9 a.m. Wednesday, the single most deadly act of terrorism in the United States, said Judy Sinder, Drug Recovery Inc. employee.

So far, the digging has been done by the fire department, Medina said. Every 30 minutes, emergency personnel have been pulling bodies out of the building.

A makeshift morgue is located at the YMCA across the street from the federal building.

Military vehicles lined the streets, and soldiers stood guard to keep people from entering the six-block by six-block sealed-off area.

"I'm angry more than anything," said David Willeford, resident of Moore, Okla. "I bet you they get them faster than the people from the World Trade Center."

"When I found out that children were killed in this bombing, it showed that nobody is innocent anymore," Willeford said.

Shattered glass filled the streets, and buildings from as far as six blocks away from the main explosion site were severely damaged by the blast.

Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating said the best experts in the United States were helping to investigate the incident.

"This community has come together to help each other," he said.

Local businesses near the federal building also were damaged by the massive blast.

Sinder said Drug Recovery Inc., based a block away from the explosion, was lucky nobody from the company suffered major injuries, although two people went to the hospital.

"Basically, the most damage was property damages," Sinder said. "Windows were broken, and the ceiling fell on us."

Heavy machinery was used to clear debris left over by the explosion. "It's a disaster, it looks like Beirut," said Bobby Cornell, National Forest Service firefighter. "The floors are all stacked on one another."

"Being in the building is like being in a big Dumpster, there's rubble everywhere," said Dennis Zimmerman, a 12-year veteran firefighter from Arizona.

"Where we were at, there were no bodies found. The dogs have had a couple of sniffs," he said. "But it's only what they picked up from other bodies already found."

As of press time, the death toll had reached 52 — at least 12 of them were children. More than 150 people still were missing. Area hospitals had taken care of 432 victims. FBI investigators have hundreds of leads, and plan to pursue them all, said Weldon Kennedy, chief FBI investigator.

A potential witness was stopped in London Thursday and was sent back to the United States, a U.S. Justice Department official said. Suspicious materials that could be used to create a bomb were found in the potential witness' suitcase.

Up to six search-and-rescue teams were being flown in from all over the country and should be in place Friday night, according to the FBI. Each search-and-rescue team consists of 50 people. At least 150 Oklahoma City firefighters are involved in the rescue efforts.

Search-and-rescue experts said they might need four to six days to be certain the building is clear. The federal government is offering a $2 million reward for information leading to the conviction of the perpetrators.

Walk event slated for Saturday

By Shannon Murphy

The University Daily

"Walk For Someone You Love," is the theme of this year's annual March of Dimes WalkAmerica event Saturday at Leroy Elmore Park.

Registration begins at 8 a.m., and the opening ceremonies will begin at 8:30 a.m.

This year marks the 25th anniversary of WalkAmerica, the nation's largest walking event. The event involves almost one million people in 1,479 communities during April, said Kelley Roach, director of the March of Dimes.

In Lubbock, 2,500 walkers are expected to participate, and the organization hopes to raise $125,000, Roach said.

The mission of March of Dimes is to improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects and infant mortality, she said.

Through its extensive campaign for healthier babies, the March of Dimes funds programs involving research, community services, advocacy and education, Roach said.

"March of Dimes WalkAmerica is the largest walking event both locally and nationally," she said. "It generates thousands of dollars for the March of Dimes Campaign for Healthier Babies."

"Volunteers throughout the Lubbock area solicit contributions from individual sponsors and then participate in walking 8 miles to help raise money for the prevention of birth defects," she said.

Roach said 1995 is the first year to add Baby Boulevard during WalkAmerica.

South Park Hospital is the exclusive sponsor of Baby Boulevard, a special section along the walk route.

"The section will feature street signs that say South Park Baby Boulevard, a large pink and blue balloon arch with the South Park logo and cartoon-type light posts with six-foot figures of a baby bottle, a pacifier, rattle, diaper, rubber ducky, and other baby items," said Ben Courville, director of business development at South Park Hospital.

"To give a newborn a good start in life, the best thing we can do as parents and health care professionals is prevent birth defects," Courville said.

Original 'Rainman' to present memory recall talents

By Gary Black

The University Daily

The man who was the inspiration for the movie "Rainman" will showcase his total memory recall talents at a dinner at 7:30 p.m. today at the Sheraton Hotel Ballroom.

Megasavant Kim Peek, who served as the basis for Barry Morrows' Academy Award-winning movie, is in Lubbock for a workshop sponsored by the Community in Unity Conference Association.

"UCLA neurosurgeons call him a megasavant because of his multiple use of knowledge of different subjects," said Fran Peek, Kim's father. "He has 14 to 16 areas he knows all about. Autistic savants know only a few subjects. Kim is not autistic."

Stanford neurologists had to create a different IQ test called a KQ test to test Kim's intelligence, Fran said.

"His IQ is 184," he said.

When asked about the Texas town Lufkin, Kim said it was on Highway 59, in area code 409, received television stations from Houston and Beaumont and was only a few hours away from College Station.

"Mount McKinley in Alaska is the highest point in the United States," Kim said. "It's 20,320 feet. That place Death Valley is the lowest place. It's minus 282 feet. Guadalupe Peak is the highest in Texas. It's 8,749 feet."

When Kim was asked what movie won best picture in 1939, he started humming the movie's theme.

"It was 'Gone With The Wind,'" he said. "The 1954 best picture was 'On The Waterfront.' Sorry about his daughter."

Kim was referring to the death of Marlon Brando's daughter, Cheyenne.

"Who was the 22nd president of the United States?" Fran Peek asked.

Kim said the president was Grover Cleveland.

"Born in New Jersey and buried in New Jersey. Tom Hendricks was his vice president," he said.

"Cleveland married Frances in the White House."

Fran Peek said his son's brain has a single hemisphere, as

Keep calm, run for nearest basement

Sirens alerting students to severe weather and a possible tornado sounded Wednesday around 1:47 p.m.

Instead of taking cover in one of the various basements on campus, many students, faculty and staff ran for their cars or stood outside looking up at the stormy sky.

Hello, McFly.

Standing outside isn't so bad — these students were exercising their sense of adventure while standing by to run into the nearest basement for cover if needed.

But running to your cars?

Are you a glutton or something?

Flashback

This brings a story to mind.

When one of the editors was a kid, a snake slithered out of a hole near the front door of the apartment she lived in. While she and a younger brother ran around to the back door, her youngest brother ran over to the hole, stuck his diaper-clad butt into the air and his face in the hole and yelled, "Where did it go? I don't see a snake!"

Well, it seems many 20-somethings did the same as this 18-month-old boy.

Be sensible

Getting into a car when a tornado could be heading your way is nothing short of asinine.

Not only are you driving around and looking at the sky (and not the road), other drivers are doing the same thing — quite a dangerous situation.

Take cover

Also, what good will a second-story apartment across town do you in a tornado? It won't.

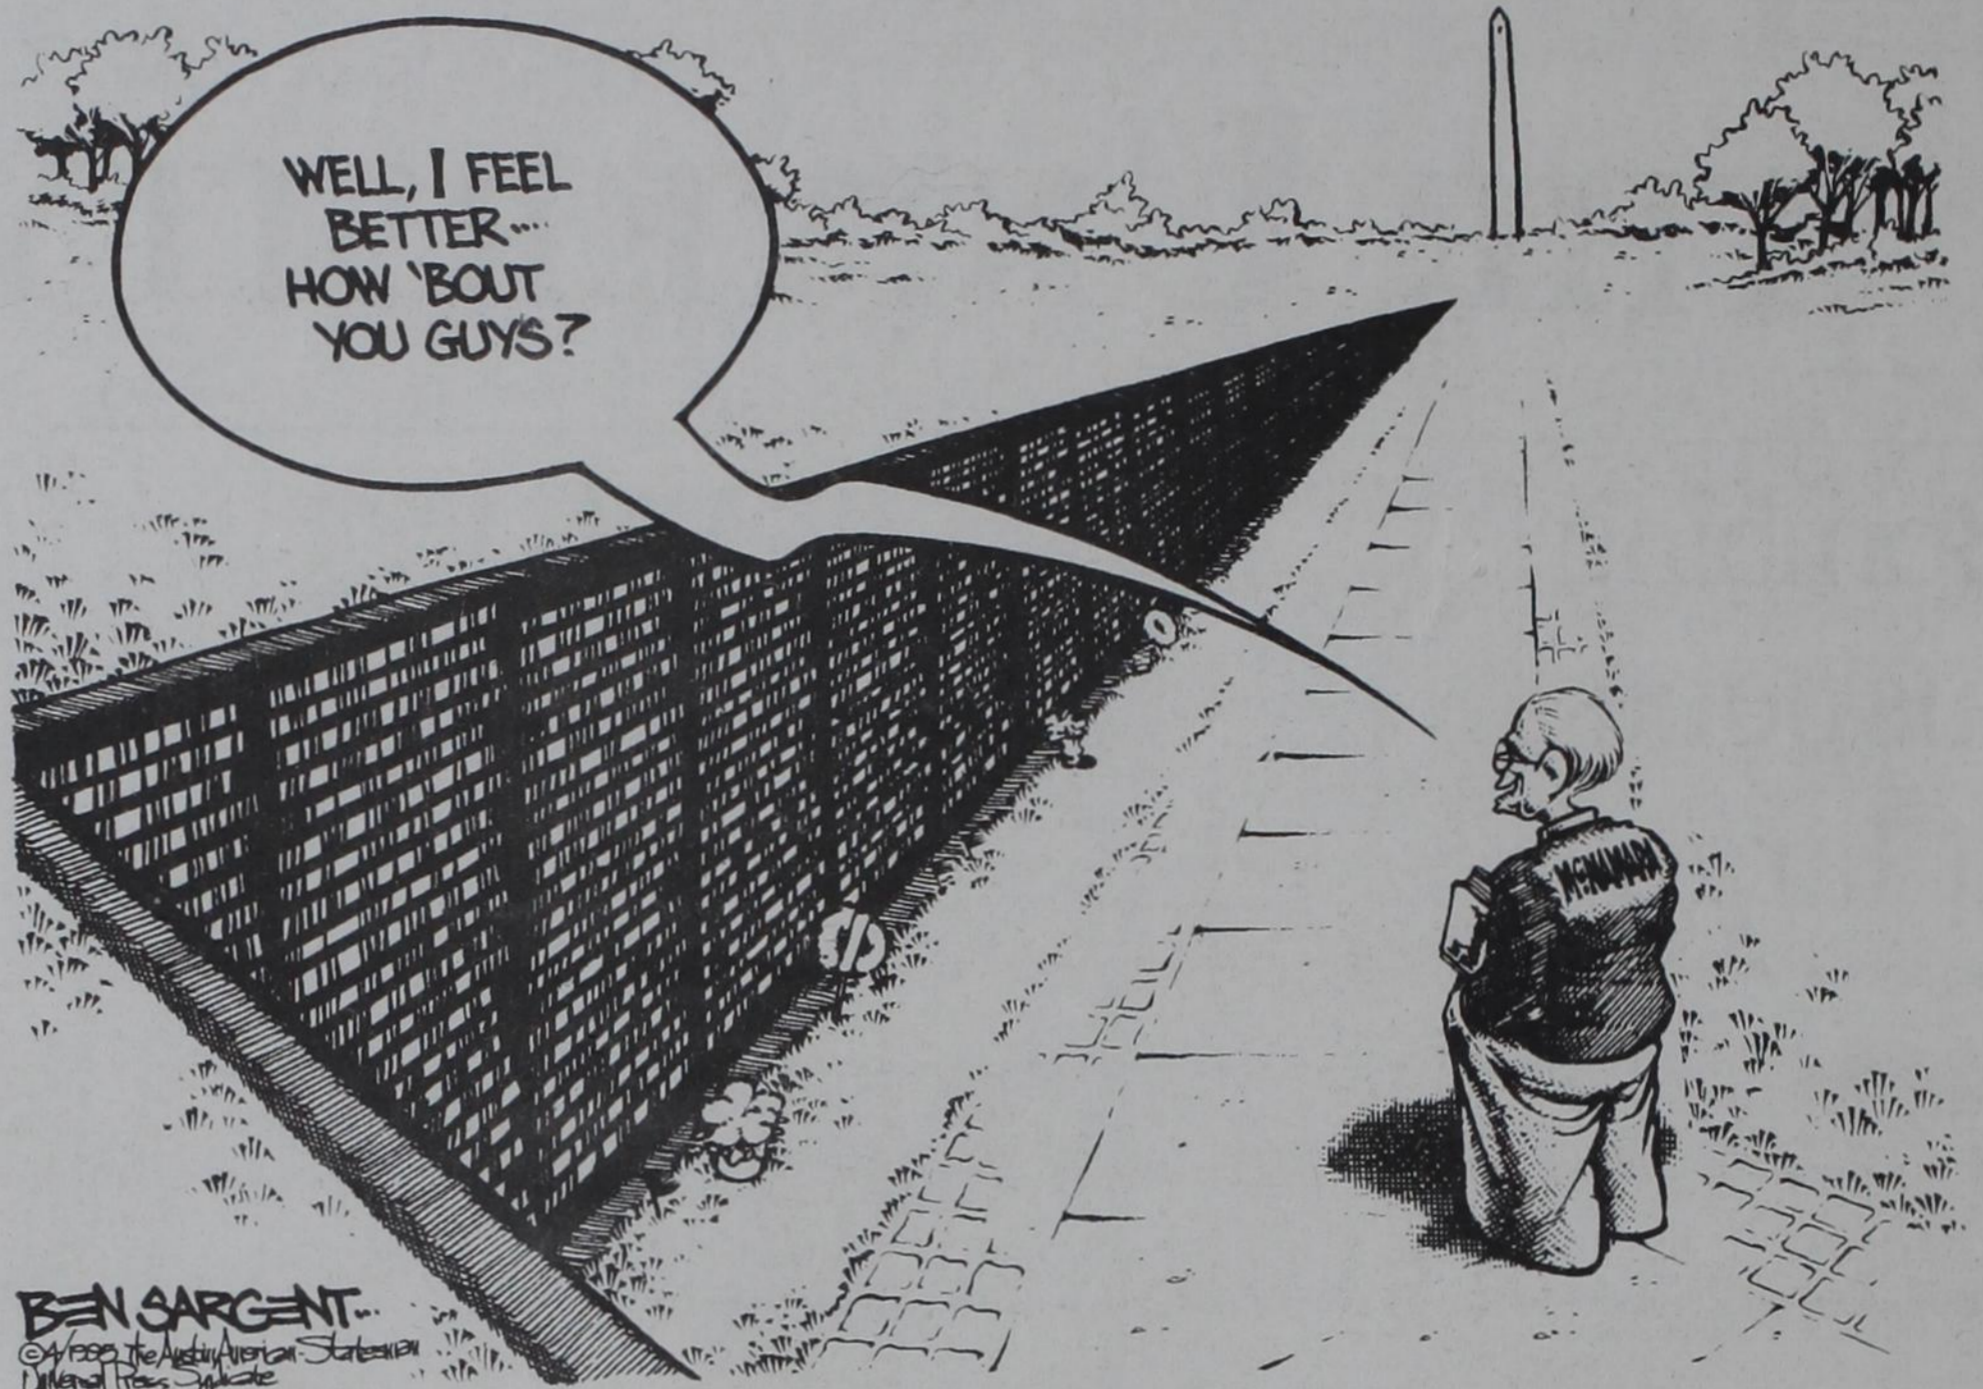

The Texas Tech campus is one of the safest places to be in this situation.

There are basements everywhere.

And what other place sounds sirens like those deafening ones we heard Wednesday?

Take advantage of the security offered here, and don't act like a chicken with your head cut off when under pressure.

The seven-member editorial board voted 6-0-1 on this issue.

Terrorism hits home

Devastation all too real for reporter

Donald Gillilan

It's around 1:30 a.m. We (myself and photographers Walter Granberry and Jeremy Chesnutt) were arriving in Oklahoma City to cover the crisis.

We had the radio station programmed to a channel I can't remember. The station was receiving phone calls from people in the community about the car bomb that blew a hole in the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building Wednesday morning.

I had never been in Oklahoma City before, so I did not know where to go.

We saw a bunch of buildings, so we just headed in that direction. Once we arrived in that area we knew we were heading in the right direction because we saw exit ramps closed.

We headed downtown and it was quiet, nobody was out. We finally saw lights, bright lights.

The sight was amazing. I could not believe I was actually two blocks away from the Federal Building.

The National Guard told us we could not be there, but I am a journalist and I was not going to give up.

Neither were my two compadres.

We parked the car, scanned the area and like everyone had predicted, the area looked like a war zone.

Soldiers in Jeeps and trucks were guarding the perimeter so no one could enter.

Lights were shining on the gutted building and cranes were in place.

I talked to some locals and they said you could actually hear people crying from the building before the city brought in equipment to clear the debris.

Firefighters were walking in and out of the building trying to reach the trapped people in the building.

The workers were tired, they had been up all night and all morning clearing the mess.

While walking around the city trying to find a better spot to shoot some pictures, all you could see were glass-filled streets and boarded windows. Oklahoma City actually looked like a scene out of the movie "Death Before Dishonor." It looked dead and cold, and you could feel the fear that some of these people must have felt.

They were scared. They did not know why it had to happen to them.

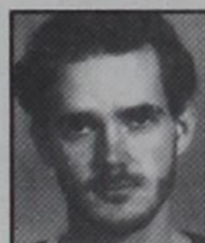

All I needed to see was the building to know the rest of the story.

Terrorism is here in America. In the Heartland.

In Oklahoma.

Students explore job market bottom

Chris Walters

When I was young my mother said to me, "No matter what happens to you, always do what you believe is right."

Then she was arrested for stealing babies from welfare mothers and selling them at enormous fees to rich, sterile couples. We'd always had great summer vacations before Momma's imprisonment.

I'm only kidding. The point I'm trying to make (I've just decided) is that money is an important issue to the modern individual.

I'm not saying money is everything, but as a goal toward personal fulfillment it sure beats self-flagellation or bathing the leprosus. Money can't buy you love, but it can buy you a sexual favor. It can't buy you good looks, but it can buy you a sexual favor. It can't buy health, but it can buy sexual favors.

You get my drift. The problem, as we all know, is that one never has enough money.

It's a law of nature.

College students suffer doubly from this lack because we are caught between two extremes: on one hand, we have too much free time and the most physical stamina we'll ever see in our lifetimes, while on the other hand we are among the least qualified for any type of job with benefits or salary incentives.

Which brings us to the main idea of today's column: while in school, one will do things that one would never in other circumstances even consider a job, because one MUST HAVE MONEY.

The idea first hit me while I stood in the plasma donation center, waiting at the cash register with a plastic bottle of my own bodily fluid.

As the nurse paid me for the plasma I thought, "I've just whored myself to the medical community." I hadn't done it out of some charitable urge—I needed the $25.

Granted, farming one's body is sort of scraping the bottom of the income barrel, but between that and the Perfect Job (which can take many forms, but basically involves having an income without doing anything at all) there is a world of choices, and just between myself and my small group of friends, I think we've covered about half of them.

I've helped with a paper route, been an unarmed security guard, worked as a long-distance telephone operator, and rented out videotapes.

I've stood in front of a giant inflated football outside Tech home games and passed out fliers. I've sold tamales.

I am not bragging about these things, though this should be obvious.

We all know people who clean houses, mow lawns, watch over kids after school or deliver pizzas. And there are more odd jobs, like collecting census data door to door or picking up trash with a spearstick around the campus.

I've no idea if Tech students make up a large percentage of Lubbock's work force, but I know we make up an important part of it.

We do the things no one else wants to do, and we do them for next to nothing. Perhaps we should form a union of some sort and demand higher wages—we could get 'em really high, like what doctors or professional baseball players earn.

And who could tell us no? I understand the concern over Reese Air Force Base's threatened closure, but if all the Tech students who work suddenly quit their jobs, Lubbock's service industry would screech to a halt. Who would wait on restaurant patrons? Who would do the gopher jobs for all the local business offices? Who would get and pay for traffic violation tickets?

Another thing my mother used to tell me was that I'd never get, much less keep, a job with my attitude.

I told her to lick me. (Ha ha, there's that old humor again.)

To her chagrin—something other generations must experience frequently—I've held more jobs in the past five years than I thought I'd ever hold in my entire life. I used to think this was because I was responsible and hard-working. Now I know it's because I'm an unskilled, destitute nobody. And I'm not alone.

"His neck muscles could not hold up his head," Fran said. "So we read to him and pointed words out. At 18 months old, he developed photographic recall of anything he had read."

Fran said at 3 years old, Kim asked what the word "confidentiality" meant.

"We told him to look it up and he did," Fran said. "Between the ages 3 and 6, he could recall any classical music."

Neurologists said Kim should have a lobotomy or enter an institution when Kim was 9 years old.

Two bomb threats reported on campus Thursday

By Ny Lynn Nichols

The University Daily

Two bomb threats were called in to two places on the Texas Tech campus Thursday, officials said.

The first threat was at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center shortly before noon, said Margaret Lutherer, director of News and Publications.

"The Health Sciences Center police looked into it immediately, and they determined that the bomb threat was a hoax," Lutherer said.

The second bomb threat was phoned in to KTXT-FM, officials said.

The journalism building was evacuated shortly after 11 p.m., including KTXT-FM, KOHM-FM and The University Daily staffs.

The staffs were allowed to reenter the building around midnight after nothing was found.

"The first time they called, they said, 'Stop saying that s--- on the air. Look out the window,'" said Bobby Pena, a KTXT-FM disc jockey. "At 10:50 (p.m.), he called back, 'This is a bomb threat.'"

Lutherer said bomb threats are not common on campus.

"You have to make the assumption," she said.

"There is a connection between the copy-cats and the thing in Oklahoma City."

Can you imagine a world without men? No crime and lots of happy fat women.

Aftermath: Volunteers help victims, officials amidst wreckage, destruction; people look for answers, find confusion

By Donald Gillilan
The University Daily

OKLAHOMA CITY — Volunteers from all over the nation converged on Oklahoma City to provide assistance and to help bring hope to a community struggling to stay together after a bomb exploded at the federal

Oklahoman considers results, evaluates bombing

(SPECIAL) — By 3:30 a.m. Thursday, Guy Navarro had been in the deli cart for 15 consecutive hours to help his "fellow Oklahomans" in their time of need.

He said he was tired, disgusted and began talking about what he thinks the country should do to prevent this situation from happening again.

The United States should tighten security at airports and have the dogs out, he said, and it should have background checks before people from other countries are allowed in.

He sat in his cart and looked around.

He glanced at the stained glass on the street that blew out of a nearby church.

He glanced at the buildings, all of which had windows blown out.

He stared into the large crater that once was one half of the federal building where citizens worked and children went to day care.

He looked baffled, confused, and he expressed what kept recurring in his mind.

"I have been sitting here for hours, and I keep on looking at the building," Navarro said.

"It's really unbelievable you know."

building Wednesday.

Volunteers have worked long hours and are ready to work for more, said Frances Jones, vice president of Feed the Children.

"Our goal is to provide food, water and other supplies to workers that are working around the clock," she said.

Feed the Children volunteers started to mobilize an hour after the explosion, Jones said.

"We had about 450 to 500 volunteers come out to help today," she said.

"Feed the Children has 100 staff members that will be here till the end," Jones said.

For workers and volunteers, there was a mobile deli providing free food and drinks.

Justin Brewton, a Salvation Army volunteer, said he heard about the explosion and volunteered.

"A bunch of us felt like we had an obligation to the community, so we volunteered," Brewton said.

"I feel the people who did this, who killed those children, should be killed slowly," he said.

"Torture them," Brewton said.

"It's really something. Just by watching TV you don't see the whole picture," Brewton said. "You won't know until you see it in person."

Guy Navarro, an entrepreneur and owner of MGV Mobil Deli, said he heard the news about the explosion while he was going to work.

"I felt like I needed to help my fellow Oklahomans," Navarro said.

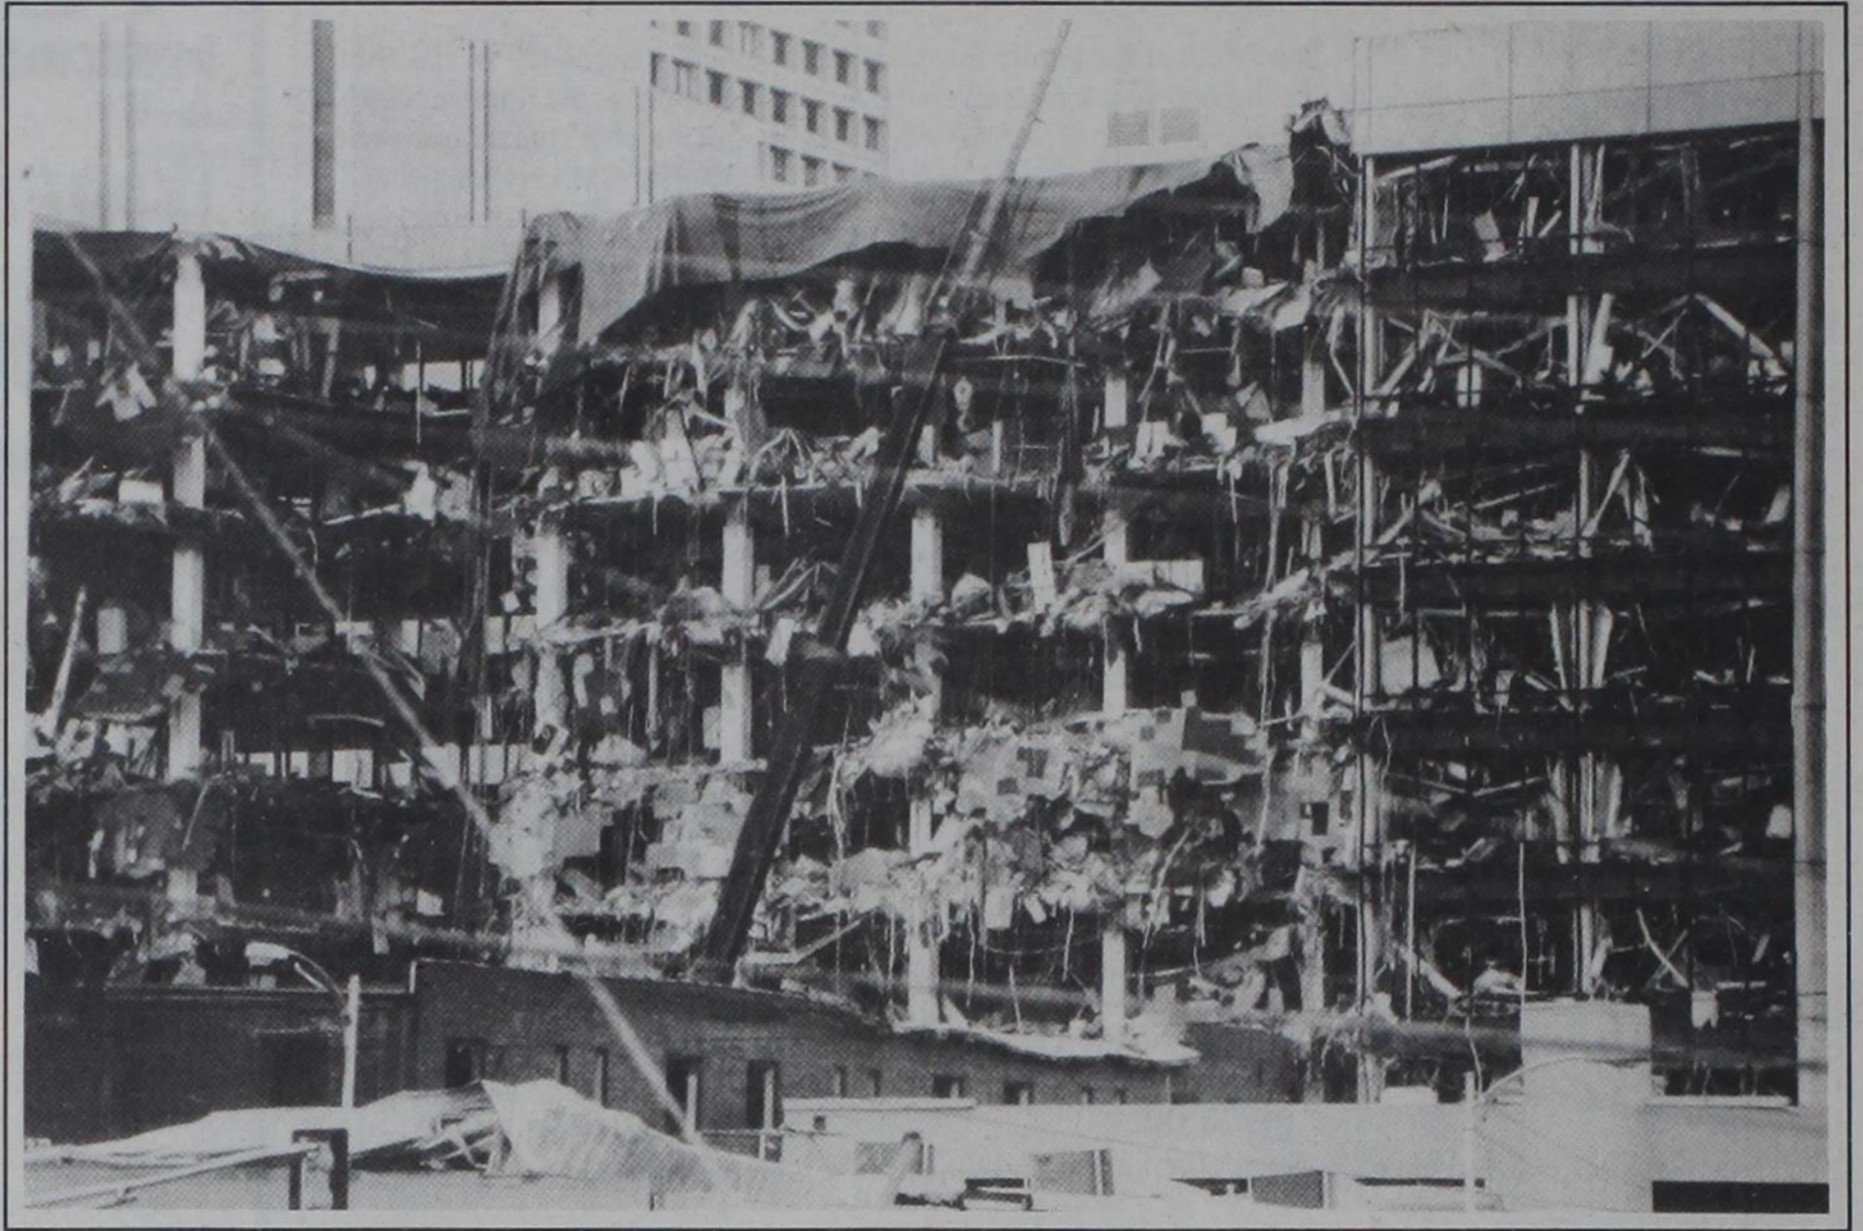

"That's what us Oklahomans do, we stick together," he said.

Navarro said he was shocked that such an explosion could happen in Oklahoma.

He said he would expect this in the coastal regions like New York, Florida and California.

"I feel Oklahoma is the last of the frontiers," Navarro said.

"This is the kind of place where you want to raise your kids."

Combest talks about investigation, reassurances

By Gary Black
The University Daily

Calling the Oklahoma City bombing an American tragedy, Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said it is important for Americans to know that the United States is not defenseless from terrorism. Combest's comments came during a press conference Thursday afternoon at the George H. Mahon Federal Building.

"Terrorism is certainly something that can be committed in this country," Combest said. "Hopefully, there are some reassurances we can give to the American people. I think the American people should feel comfortable in that there is no asset not being used to find who did this."

Oklahoma City's downtown, nine-story federal building was gouged by a car bomb Wednesday.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing.

Combest said Thursday afternoon that he was not aware of any potential suspects in the bombing, although there is some speculation as to why the building was bombed.

"It may or may not have been the intent of a foreign body," he said. "One of the best theories I have heard is that it probably captivates the fact that it can happen at home and not just in New York City."

U.S. intelligence agencies are the key elements in finding the terrorists, he said.

"In order for you to have the best possible defense in terrorism, you have to have intelligence (agencies)," he said. "We are not immune to the possibility of terrorism.

The whole concept of terrorism is to create chaos because this country has never been the subject of mass terrorism. I want the absolute best intelligence we can gather."

U.S. intelligence agencies are very apt at combatting terrorism, he said. "I think there is a very robust counter-terrorism effort going on."

A tremendous investigative effort into the bombing will begin as soon as the building debris is cleared, Combest said.

"Every lead, aspect and phone call will have to be checked out," he said. "Something of this magnitude cannot be carried in a briefcase. What we will see is the public pulling together. We will see it in the near future."

Security at other federal institutions has now increased to include searches of buildings and cars, he said.

"One does not know how an earlier increase in security would have affected us," he said.

The American people are aggravated with the situation, Combest said.

"It brings home the reality that terrorism can strike this community," he said. "The outcry of help from this community has been phenomenal. We see the best in the American people come out in a situation like this. Just as sure as we did it in Desert Storm, the American people stick together."

Support for the people of Oklahoma City has been exceptional, Combest said.

"We have received calls from all over the world with countries wanting to help," he said.

Dennis Cleveland, Lubbock United Blood Services executive director, said UBS wants to help any way it can.

"We are encouraging the donors in the area to come in," he said. "The Oklahoma blood bank is communicating with our clearinghouse."

"Oklahoma has had a tremendous outpouring of donors in that area. Donors who want to help the Oklahoma City situation can come in and leave their name and number with UBS."

University Medical Center also has volunteered to be a transfer center for bombing victims, said Nancy Smith, UMC nursing supervisor.

"But we have not received any at this time," Smith said.

Lubbock's Salvation Army's disaster response team has been put on standby by Dallas headquarters, Salvation Army Capt. Dan Proctor said.

"The best thing we recommend in a disaster is monetary contributions to get supplies to the area," Proctor said. "We will be sent in as a relief for troops who have been working around the clock."

All goods and supplies sent to The Salvation Army must be clearly marked "Oklahoma Disaster," Proctor said.

Supplies should be sent to The Salvation Army, P.O. Box 2785, Lubbock, Texas 79468.

Unidentified baby in dramatic photo dies

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Unidentified in death even by sex, the baby who was carried from the smoking ruins of the federal building in a photograph displayed on front pages around the world ended up as just another of the bombing's victims.

The child was pronounced dead by emergency medical technicians, said fire fighter Chris Fields, whose attempt to rescue the baby was captured by an amateur photographer and transmitted worldwide by The Associated Press.

The photographer, bank clerk Charles H. Porter IV, figured when he first heard the explosion that demolition crews were tearing down a building and he'd have a chance to snap some neat amateur photos with his camera.

Instead, five minutes later, he came upon a policeman carrying a baby up from the smoking ruins of a federal building ravaged by a car bomb explosion.

The policeman, Sgt. John Avera, handed the limp, bleeding baby to Fields as Porter snapped away.

It's unclear exactly when the youngster died. Fields said emergency medical workers pronounced the child dead on arrival.

The child was believed to have been in a government day care center on the second floor of the building. Neither the center's operator nor a worker could identify the child from the photos.

Fields estimated the child was 6 months to 9 months old, but said he couldn't tell if the baby was a boy or a girl.

"Its little face was covered in insulation and dust," Fields said. "I couldn't tell if the skull was cracked — the head was cut open."

He said all he could think about was his own 2-year-old son.

Avera said officers had pulled three people from the rubble when he returned to a hallway and heard the cries of a baby.

"We could hear several people back in there crying and hollering," Avera told CNN. "I heard a baby crying, and we started moving bricks and rocks back across of them, and we found two babies. The officer I was with took one down one hallway, and I took my baby out the other way."

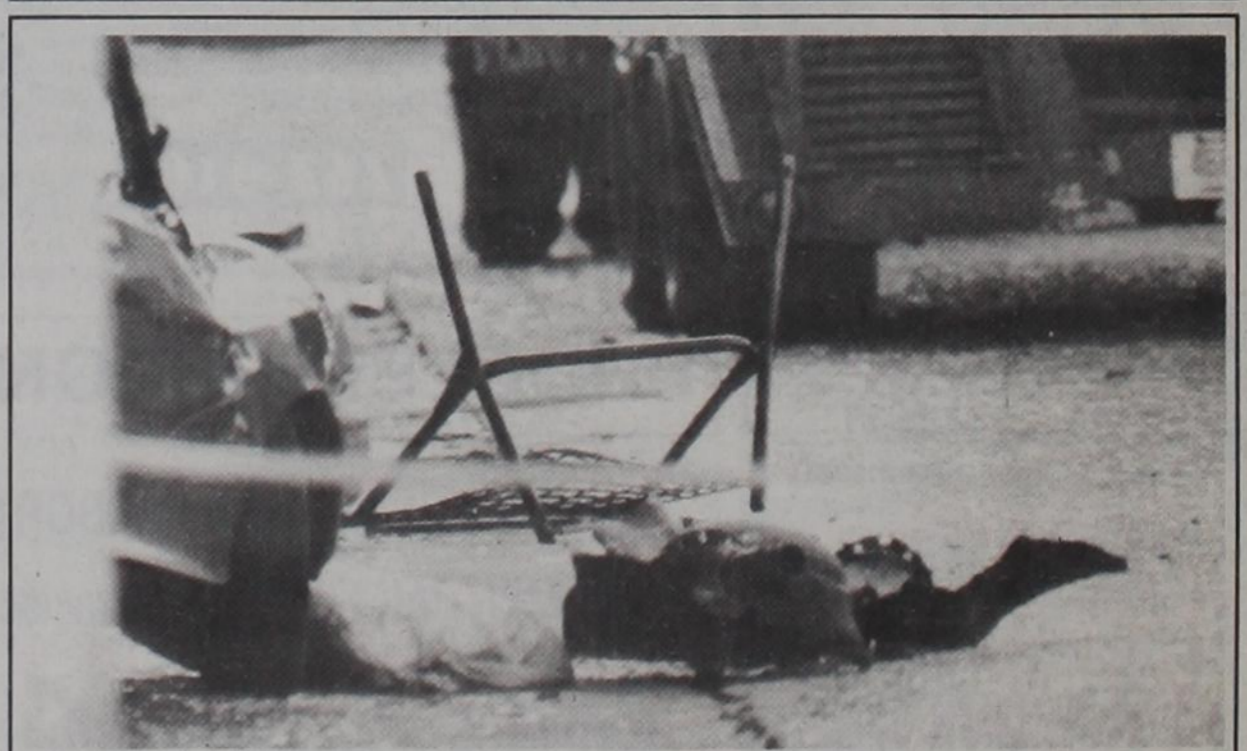

Fields and his unit worked 13 straight hours pulling people from the rubble. Each time he stopped to catch his breath, Fields said, "the first thing that would come into my mind was that baby."

The bomb blast hurled pieces of vehicles up to three blocks from the federal building. The FBI is trying to determine which pieces may have come from the terrorist vehicle.

Descriptions of bombing suspects

• White, medium build, 5-foot-10-inch or 5-foot-11-inch, 180 to 185 pounds, light-brown crewcut, right-handed. Identity unknown.

• White, medium build, 5-foot-9-inch or 5-foot-10-inch, 175 to 180 pounds, brown hair, tattoo visible beneath T-shirt sleeve on left arm; possibly a smoker. Identity unknown.

Un'Explain'able exhibit goes on display today at Godbold Cultural Center

By Tara McQueen

The University Daily

What do chimps, a fictitious character and two friends who do not talk about their work will have in common? Audiences will have a chance to see at the exhibit, "It's Not Easy to Explain," at the Godbold Cultural Center today through May 5. The center also will host a reception highlighting the exhibit from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today.

The exhibit is the work of two artists, Jeff Franklin Wheeler and James Ackerley Porter, and one imaginary friend.

While in graduate school at Central Washington University, Wheeler and Porter began looking at each other's papers.

Wheeler, who graduated from the Tech art department two years ago, felt his work needed Porter's images to make them complete.

"I started noticing he worked a lot like I work," Wheeler said. "We both collect images. It just so happens he collects silhouettes of ladies from the '50s."

"The two artists began combining their work, and together they created fictitious artist Franklin Ackerley.

"On the first drawing, I put my middle name and he put his middle name," Wheeler said. "Franklin Ackerley is not a Jeff Wheeler drawing or a James Porter drawing but a combination of the two."

"When I reach a point where I feel

James can do something with a drawing, I sneak down and hang it in his studio, and he does the same for me," Wheeler said. "I really like walking into the studio and seeing a new drawing for me to finish."

Wheeler said he and Porter work across the street from the Central Washington University Chimpanzee and Human Communication Institute. The location eventually sparked an idea in Wheeler's mind.

"I started seeing prints done by the chimpanzees around campus," he said. "They were just scribbles, but they were chimp scribbles."

Wheeler said he and Porter approached the directors of CHCI about having the chimps draw on some of Ackerley's works. The directors agreed.

"The fun part is the chimps react to what we draw," Wheeler said. "I put a very small frame on a huge piece of paper and I just hoped they would draw within the frame, and they did."

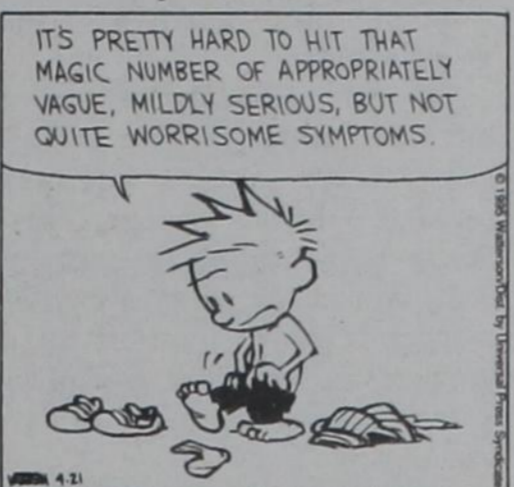

He said he also gave the chimps drawings of a heart and a banana, and they stayed within the lines.

Wheeler and Porter said they react to each other's drawings in a similar way, with each expressing his own style.

Porter, of Seattle, said he and Wheeler have two completely different styles of drawing which makes their combination successful.

"His drawing is very line-related, light and airy," Porter said. "I draw very bold, black shapes. It is a weird juxtaposition."

Tennis teams face challenge at A&M

The Texas Tech tennis teams opens play today at the Southwest Conference Championships in College Station. The men face No. 22 Texas A&M, while the women face No. 3 Texas.

Tech hopes for successful SWC meet

By Bryan Adams

The University Daily
The Texas Tech men's and women's track teams are in Austin this weekend for the Southwest Conference outdoor championships.

Events begin today with the women's heptathlon at 3 p.m. The men kick off at 3:45 p.m. Events will continue through 5:45 p.m. Sunday ending with the men's 1,600-meter relay.

"Going into the conference, I think we've got a couple kids that can compete with what we have to go up against," assistant men's track coach Brad Pursley said. "It seems the Southwest Conference this year is as strong as it's ever been in the past. We have some kids who are going to have to step up this weekend, or they are not going to finish very well."

On the women's side, coach Liz Parke said the women are picking up momentum going into Austin.

"Every year, we look forward to the SWC meet a little more because we're just a little bit better," Parke said. "We are still not where we need to be to match up with some of the other conference schools. We are going to be a lot more capable in some areas than we've been in the past."

Tech women are coming off a meet in San Angelo where Parke said the team did well and showed a lot of improvement with the younger athletes.

"Our kids probably had one of the best outings they've had all year," Parke said. "I was very pleased with our younger kids. We've been waiting for them to come around. We got great performances from our hurdlers, high jumpers and throwers. Our older kids are continuing to do an outstanding job."

Sophomore Tabitha Polk will try to improve on her NCAA provisional qualifying discuss throw of 166-feet 5-inches last week in San Angelo.

"It's a very good provisional mark, and I think it will be good enough to get her to Knoxville," Parke said. "Our throwers are obviously going to be a strong point for us. Alicia Thompson is continuing to progress very well in the shot. Between her and Tabitha, we'd like to see a conference champion come out of there."

The men are coming out of Norman, Okla., where they competed in the Oklahoma Invitational. Highlighting the meet for the Tech men was Marcus Coleman, who placed third in the triple jump; the mile-relay team, who finished third; and intermediate hurdler Brent Schott, who ran a another 51.4 in the 400-meter hurdles.

"We ventured to Oklahoma this past weekend and got to compete against a few teams that we normally don't get to see," Pursley said. "We had some decent success. Overall, we weren't as happy as we could have been. I think we're capable, it is just a matter if we can push the right buttons to get them going."

Former Tech star indicted

By Jonathan Harris

The University Daily
Former Texas Tech running back James Gray was indicted in Lubbock County Wednesday for felony theft.

The Lubbock County grand jury's indictment alleges that Gray, who played running back for Tech from 1986-1989, stole between $750-$20,000 from his employer, Airborne Express.

Trey Hill, of the Lubbock District Attorney's office, said he was not sure how much money allegedly was stolen.

Gray, 28, was a truck driver for the air express company and had a route in Portales, N.M., and Clovis, N.M. The indictment alleges that the thefts occurred between July 1994 and January when the thefts were discovered.

"We got the complaint about two or three weeks ago, and we just now were able to act on them because of the paperwork," Hill said.

Hill said Gray was booked Thursday and released later in the day on a $1,000 bond. The third-degree felony is punishable by a two- to 10-year prison sentence and a fine of up to $10,000.

Hill said the case is set for arraignment in two weeks and a trial date will be set at that time.

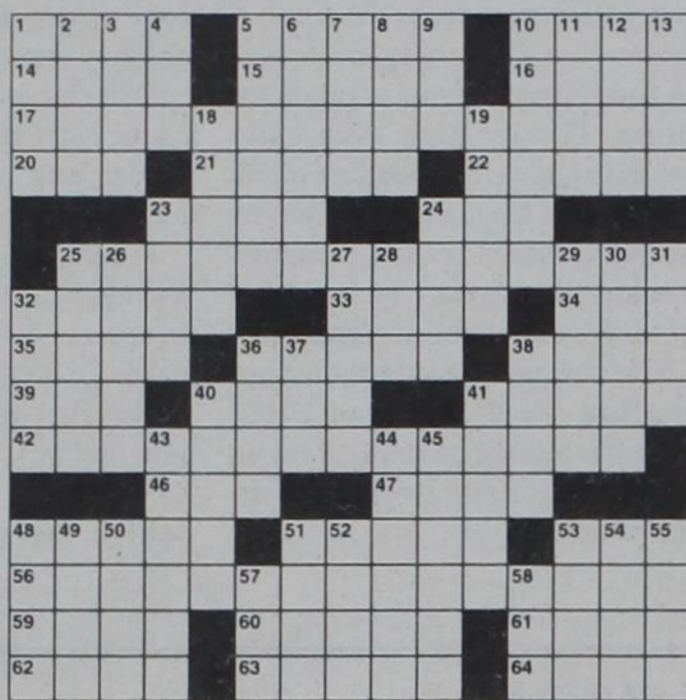

Gray was a four-year football letterman at Tech and was a consensus All-Southwest Conference pick and a second-team All-American in 1989 when he helped Texas Tech to a 9-3 record and a victory over Duke in the All-American Bowl.

Texas places Fajardo on restricted list

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — The Texas Rangers placed pitcher Hector Fajardo on the team's restricted list after the Mexican citizen failed to pick up an entry visa Thursday. Fajardo told club officials earlier in the week he would delay coming to Florida.

Raiders, Aggies battle for first in SWC

By Jared Parcell

The University Daily

Texas A&M is full of traditions, but the Texas Tech baseball team hopes to break a tradition this weekend. The Red Raiders have lost the last 27 regular-season games at Olsen Field in College Station.

The Red Raiders, 37-8 overall and 8-5 in Southwest Conference action, will take on the Aggies (31-13-1 and 10-4) in a four-game series starting at 4 p.m. today.

"They are at home with a big crowd, and they have everything on their side," pitcher Travis Smith said. "It's a big series, and we can't underestimate them. We are going to go in and play the best we can, and hopefully, we can come out on top. We need to keep swinging the bats like we have been and try and get quality starts from the starters."

Tech, which is ranked as high as fifth in the country, is on a three-

Last Meeting: Tech won 6-5 April 16, 1994, in Lubbock.

Series record: Texas A&M leads 62-26

Player to watch: Freshman pitcher Justin Atchley (7-2, 4.08) leads the Aggie pitchers with 57 strikeouts and eight walks in 79 1/3 innings.

swinging good," Tech assistant coach Greg Evans said. "Lindstrom can swing the bat if he gets his pitch. He's been working on going the other way, and it's paid off for him. He works hard at it, and he's a good hitter."

Because of the weather conditions in Lubbock, pitching is always important for the Red Raiders, but Hays said the conditions at Olsen Field should be better suited for the Tech staff.

The probable starters for Tech are Matt Miller (8-1, 4.66), Jeff Peck (7-2, 3.33 ERA), Smith (5-3, 3.55) and Brandon Kolb (4-1, 5.44). The four starters for the Red Raiders have combined for 224 of the staff's 337 strikeouts.

A&M is scheduled to start Justin Atchley (7-2, 4.08), John Sneed (4-2, 5.77 ERA), Ryan Rupe (4-1, 3.64 ERA) and Dean Mitchell (6-0, 3.15). Atchley has the best control on the team, with 57 strikeouts and only eight walks in 79 1/3 innings pitched.

"Tech is one of the top hitting, pitching and fielding teams in the conference," A&M coach Mark Johnson said. "To win, we have to pitch well this series. Their potency to score runs is incredible because they can score eight runs in the blink of an eye. Our pitchers need to make an impact."

game winning streak, having defeated Texas in the second game of Saturday's doubleheader and Texas-Arlington twice this week.

The 17th-ranked Aggies enter on a 14-game winning streak, downing Lamar 6-1 Tuesday.

"It's going to be a war this weekend," Tech coach Larry Hays said.

"They are probably the hottest team in the league right now. They have made progress all year."

Offensively, Tech is ranked in the top five nationally in hitting with a team batting average of .345. Texas A&M has an offense that can almost match the bats of Tech, hitting .322 as a team.

Clint Bryant, a candidate for national player of the year, is hitting .423 with 10 home runs and 66 RBI to lead the Red Raider attack. Catcher David Lindstrom has a total of four home runs in his last three games to increase his total to eight, with 31 RBI and a .368 average.

"The way we have been playing defense and the way the pitching has been going we have to be
