Clinton denounces paramilitary groups

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — President Clinton led an anguished nation Sunday in prayers for victims of the federal office building bombing and outlined a series of broad steps to give the government new powers to fight terrorism. He said the bombers should be executed.

Clinton also directed his administration to replace the office building devastated by last Wednesday's blast and appointed Attorney Gen. Janet Reno to oversee a 60-day high-level review of the vulnerability of federal buildings. There are more than 8,000 such structures in the country.

He said Americans may have to exercise some "discipline" in their freedoms in order to allow law officers to prevent terrorism at home.

"In the face of death, let us honor life," he told Oklahoma City mourners.

Clinton also denounced paramilitary groups and those who glorified the Branch Davidian cult members who died in a bloody standoff with federal agents two years ago.

"Those people murdered a bunch of innocent law enforcement officials who worked for the federal government,"

Clinton said.

He said there are potential problems in trying to crack down on paramilitary organizations.

"I don't want to interfere with anyone's constitutional rights," he said. However, he said that no one has the right to violate laws against life and property.

Among the steps announced on Sunday by Clinton:

- Legislation to establish a Domestic Counter-terrorism Center to be headed by the FBI; creation of a special fund to be used for infiltrating suspected terrorist organizations and other means of combating terrorism.

- Legislation to give the FBI increased authority to comb through hotel and motel registers and to search phone logs, greater access to credit card records.

- Pressing for passage of the administration's Omnibus Counter-terrorism Act, which would give the government more power to fight terrorism greater authority to protect the confidentiality of sources in official proceedings.

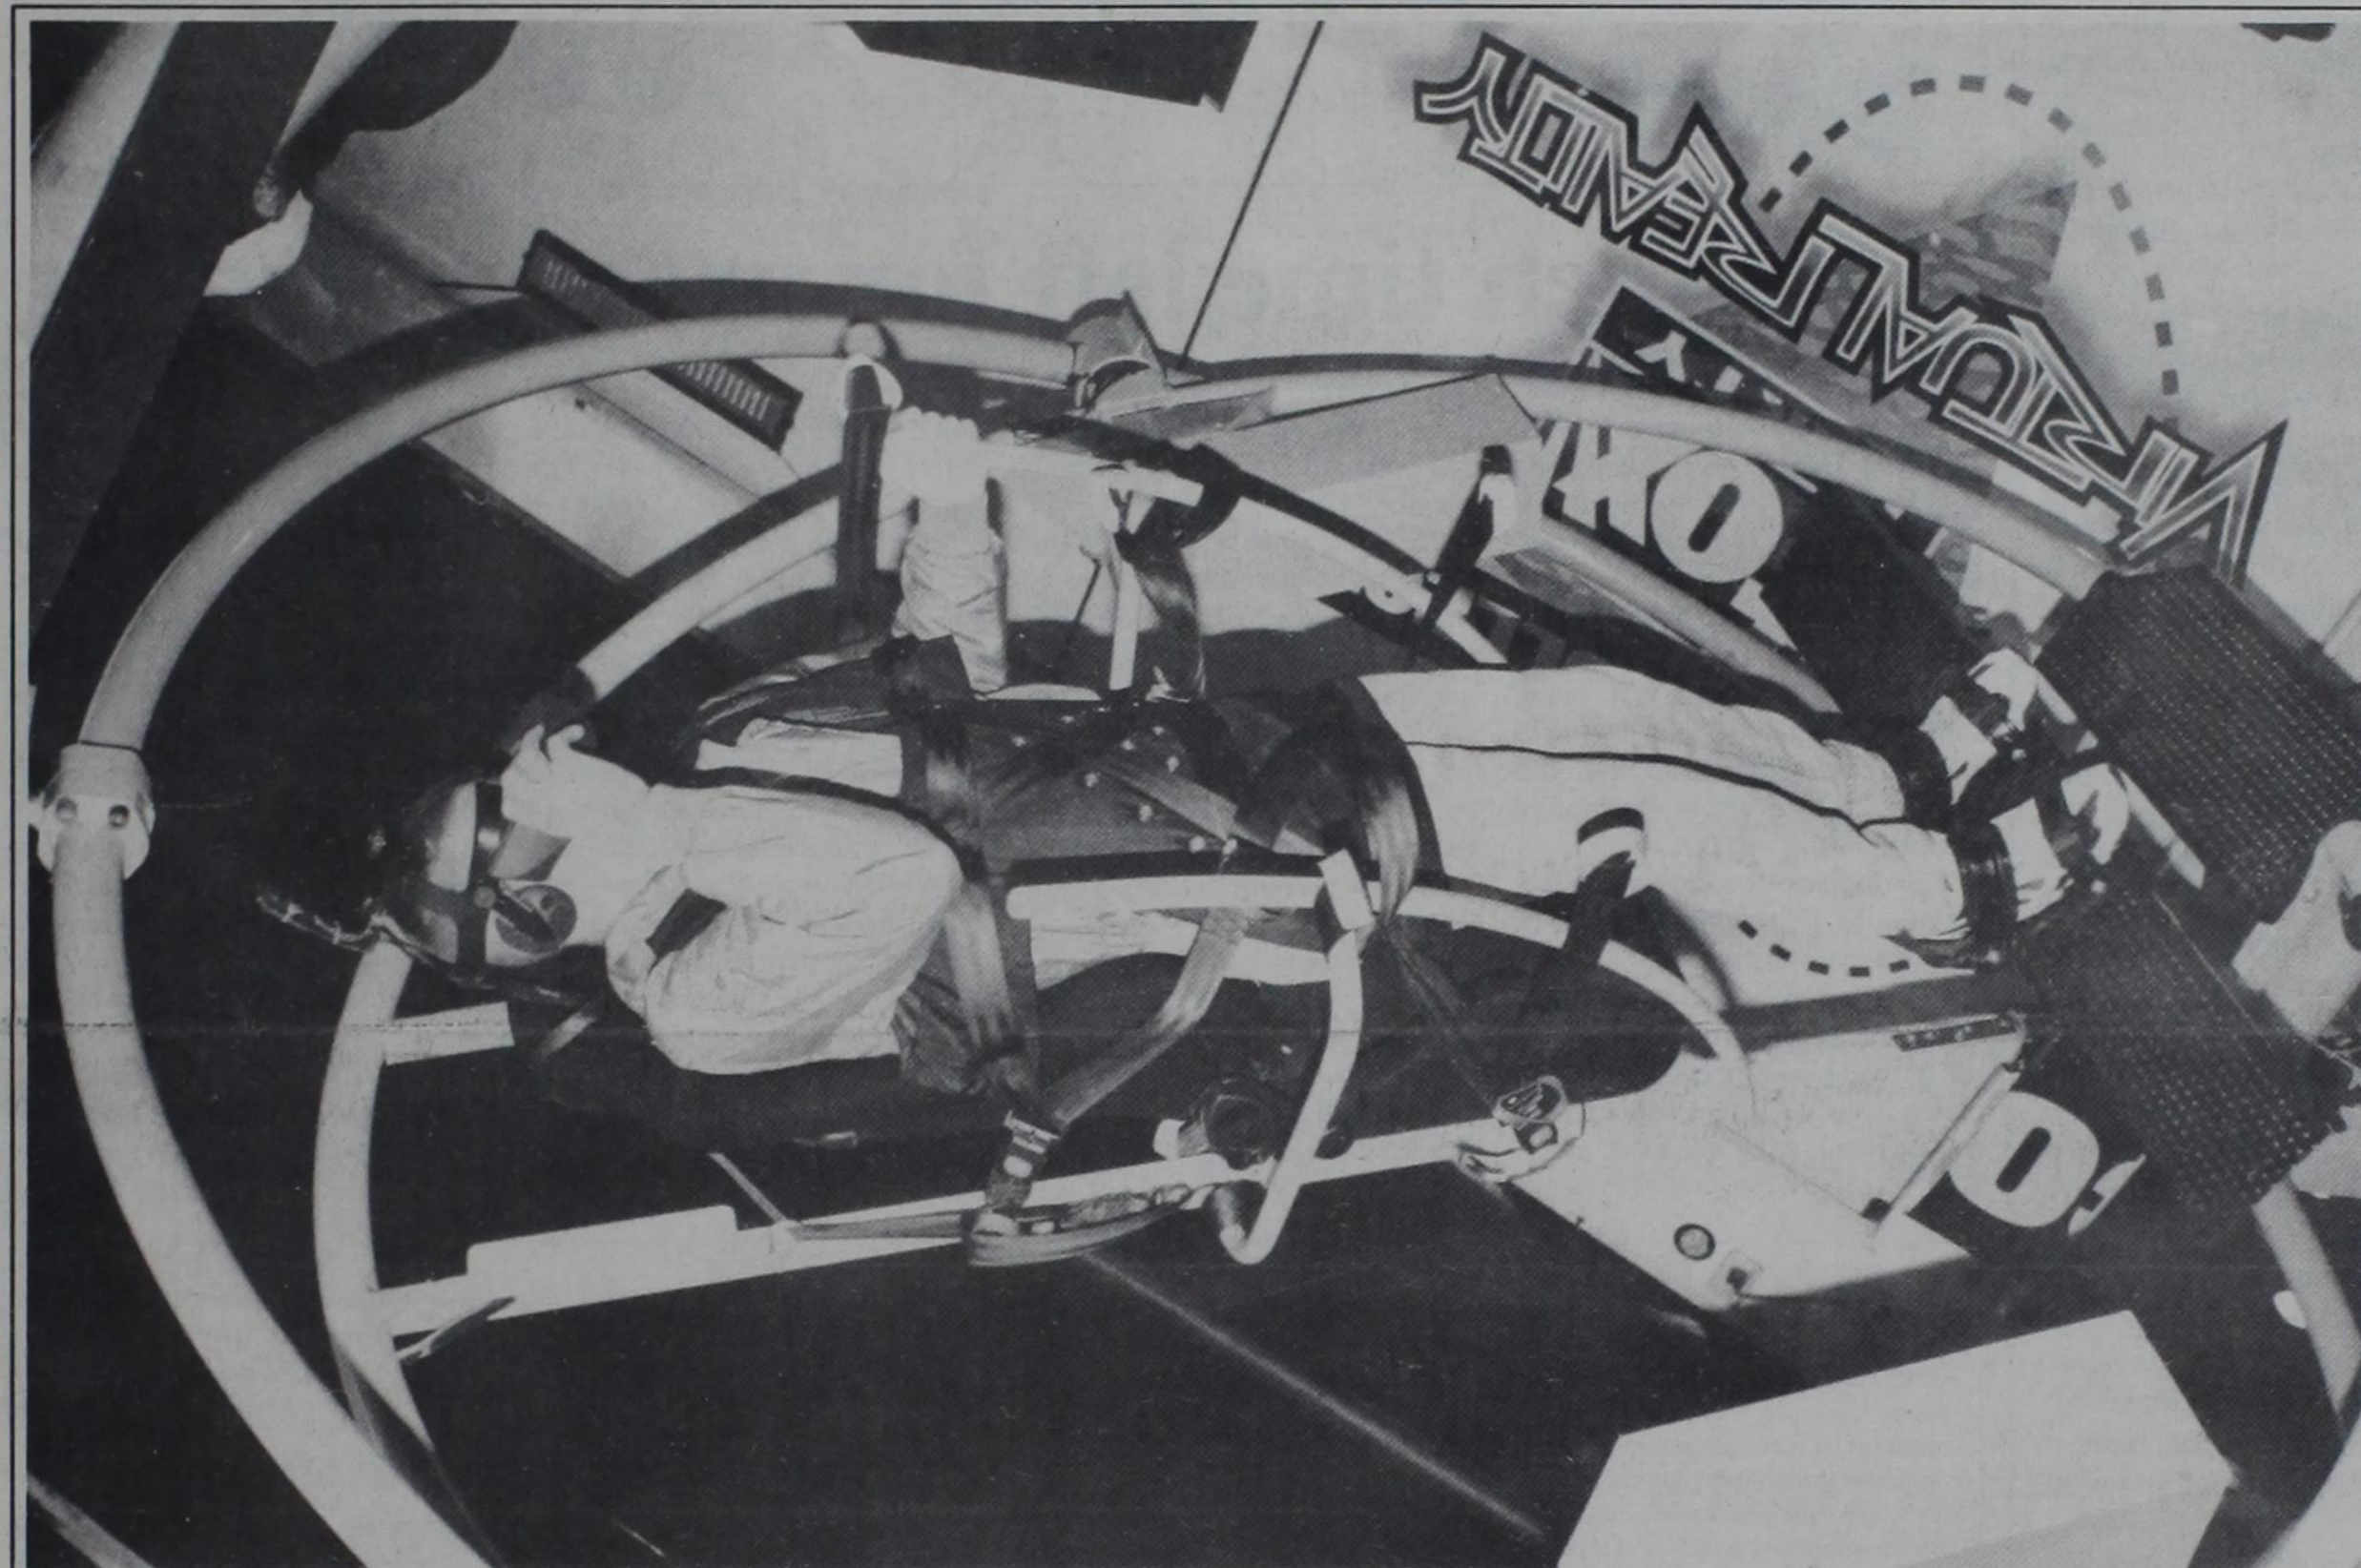

This provision has been criticized by civil liberties groups.

Alumni Center

- Three thousand people donated money or funds to the building.
- The center cost $2.4 million but is worth $3.5 million because of donations.

Nation mourns for victims of bombing

By Donald Gillilan

The University Daily

The nation assembled together for a moment of silence Sunday to pray for those who have lost their lives, for those with friends or families who have lost a loved one and for a community struggling for hope.

President Clinton declared Sunday as a national day of mourning in remembrance of those tragically killed in the car bombing in Oklahoma City Wednesday.

A car bomb gutted the city's Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, killing more than 70 people. Officials are estimating that the death toll will rise to more than 150 victims.

Three suspects, linked to a citizen militia, are being questioned concerning their connection to the bombing. Timothy McVeigh has already been charged with participation in the bombing, and two brothers, Terry and James Nichols, are being questioned as material witnesses. Federal officials believe as many as six anti-government extremists may have conspired to destroy the building.

Clinton asked the nation to fly their flags at half-staff, and citizens who do not own flagpoles also were encouraged to display the flag as a symbol of mourning.

In a speech Clinton gave to mourners at the State Fair Arena in Oklahoma, he offered hope to families, parents and children across the United States.

"To all the members of the families who have suffered loss, though we share your grief, your pain is unimaginable," Clinton said. "You have lost too much, but you have not lost everything, and you have certainly not lost America, for we will stand with you."

If anyone believes Americans are only mean and selfish, then those people need to come to Oklahoma, he said.

"To all my fellow Americans beyond this hall, I say one thing," he said. "What we owe those who have sacrificed is the duty to purge ourselves of the dark forces which gave rise to this evil."

Clinton said he spoke with a girl whose parents worked at the federal building and said the girl asked the Clintons to plant a tree at the White House for the children.

"This morning before we got on the plane to come here, we planted that tree in honor of the children in Oklahoma," he said. "It was a dogwood, with its wonderful spring flowers and its deep enduring roots."

Clinton said the people who died in the building are now with God, and someday we will be with them.

Lubbock area churches also showed their respect during services Sunday by dressing in black and offering prayer.

Bill Starcher, Broadway Church of Christ educational minister in Lubbock, said it is appropriate to mourn the death of innocent people.

"We need to join together more," Starcher said. "We have done a lot of praying for the people in Oklahoma, and we are planning to take some action for the crisis."

Roger Wisdom, Melonie Baptist Church pastor, said the church had planned to conduct a prayer for those who died in the bombing.

"This incident (car bombing) is an example of sin at its worst," Wisdom said. "It's man at his worst. In my heart, I want to believe that they just wanted to blow up the building and not hurt the children, but of course that's not the case."

Residents celebrate 25th anniversary of Earth Day

Events planned across state to honor birth of movement

By Shannon Murphy

The University Daily

A variety of activities, from household hazardous waste collections to recycling drives across the state, helped celebrate the 25th anniversary of Earth Day Saturday.

The first Earth Day was celebrated in 1970 to call attention to environmental concerns.

Described as the symbolic birth of the environmental movement, what began as a new concept has evolved into a mainstream commitment embraced by the vast majority of Texans, said John Hall, Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission chairman.

The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission helped Texans mark the anniversary with a wide range of events designed to provide an opportunity for Texans to actively protect the environment.

"I urge every Texan to get involved in Earth Day," Hall said. "The universal message of Earth Day is to think globally and act locally. The events that are going on this weekend truly prove that Texans truly care for their environment."

The TNRC created a program, called Clean Texas 2000, to serve as an information and materials clearinghouse for individuals, businesses and governments from around the state that chose to play an active role in Earth Day, he said.

"For example, the citizens of Earth, Texas, which is 65 miles northwest of Lubbock, and its city government and U.S. Postal Service gave away 2,500 seedlings for planting trees and other things," he said.

"Also, the city of Houston sponsored a fair at the Houston Zoo."

In conjunction with the anniversary of Earth Day, Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and the H-E-B Grocery Company announced that $25,000 in environmental education grant money will be available to Texas schools in the seventh annual Environmental Challenge Program.

"The Environmental Challenge Program is one that encourages teachers and schools to teach students environmental education and carry out projects regarding the environment," said Elna Christopher, Texas General Land Office representative.

During the first five years of the program, a total of $10,000 was awarded to schools upon completion to innovative, hands-on environmental education programs, Christopher said.

H-E-B Grocery Company was pleased to increase the grant money by $15,000 to a total of $25,000, said Bill Fry, H-E-B's director of quality assurance.

"This program has been a real success, and we are pleased to be involved with it," Fry said. "It is great to see youngsters get excited about helping the environment and what they can do. Maybe the youngsters can even pass on some of what they learn to their parents and to other kids."

In Lubbock, Barnes and Noble Bookstores celebrated Earth Day by bringing in an author to discuss his Earth-related books.

"We had the author Hyemeyohsts Storm come and talk about his two books, 'Meeting Our Earth' and 'Lightning Bolt,'" said Jennifer Branam, Barnes and Noble's supervisor. "He also gave a lecture and held a question and answer period."

The main idea of Storm's lecture was about taking care of the Earth, Branam said. "We had a good turnout, and he gave an excellent presentation," Branam said.

Entertainer uses musical, comedy theme for show

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily

From Gilligan to Mick Jagger, comedian/musical entertainer Tommy Rucker always seems to keep audiences busy, laughing or helping.

With a brown mop on his head and a smile on his face, Rucker may sing his reggae version of the "Gilligan's Island" theme or perform a two-minute version of an entire Rolling Stones concert with his tongue.

"I have the audience do things like sing, 'Day oh! Day-oh! . . . Day-oh bread!' during the 'Gilligan's Island' theme," Rucker said.

"I want the audience to get involved because that is what helps make the show."

Rucker will be performing his "rock 'n comedy" at 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday at Chelsea Street Pub and Grill. Admission is free.

"We invite the public to come out and experience the one-of-a-kind show that only Tommy Rucker can deliver," said Billy Pritchard, vice president of entertainment for CS Promotions.

One of a kind may be the only way to describe Rucker, also known as the obnoxious rhinestone cowboy, Daryl, who once led an audience into the parking lot to paint psychedelic designs on his tour van.

Describing his off-beat performance as "jokes you can dance to," Rucker said he also brings straight rock 'n roll to the stage.

He plays guitar, sings and spices things up with a digital drum machine he calls "Doc."

Rucker has performed concerts across the country, appeared on MTV and opened for The Doobie Brothers.

He has two albums called "Tommy Rucker Live" and "Rowdy."

A native of Oregon, Rucker was born Tommy Greenough and played in his first band when he was 11. He attended the University of Oregon, earned his law degree and passed the bar exam.

Rucker, who gave up his law career to become a full-time entertainer, said he was drawn to the stage.

"I gave it up for something I loved," he said.

Bomb threats result in danger, not amusement

Last week's tragedy in Oklahoma has touched every city and every individual in America. On Sunday, the entire nation mourned as they took an extended moment of silence to remember the deaths of the adults and children involved in the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City.

However, as always when tragedies occur, there is a certain fringe element that tries to take advantage of the situation by gaining notoriety or just entertaining themselves at the expense of others.

We're talking about those freaks of nature who call claiming they played a part in the bombing just to get attention.

These people are almost as low as the people who actually planted the bomb. More than 70 innocent people were killed, at least 12 of them children. Nearly 450 people were injured and more than 100 people are still missing.

What kind of person would call in, trying to take credit for this tragedy? Besides the fact that anyone who would try to profit from the death of so many innocent people is obviously sick, there also is the follow-up investigation to consider.

These phony bombers are only hindering the investigative process. Even though they aren't telling the truth about taking part in the bombing, the leads still must be followed, wasting time, manpower and money. We are sure most of you, if not all of you, have seen the graphic pictures of the victims being carried out of what is left of the building. They're often crying, hysterical, bloody or even dead. Law enforcement officials are working overtime to handle the crisis. They don't need people, hungry for attention, calling in and complicating matters.

However, people who falsely claim to have participated in the bombing aren't the only idiots in this situation.

There also are the dangerous pranksters who call in bomb threats to other buildings just for entertainment.

These calls create fear and panic in an already terrifying situation. Federal buildings across the country experienced bomb threats, including the local federal building in Lubbock. Contrary to popular belief, even the Texas Tech community isn't exempt from these types of calls. Both the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center and KTX-TM received bomb threats Thursday.

Ha, ha. That was a really funny prank. We're sure employees in all of those buildings were really amused. People who perform these calls aren't merely getting a laugh at the expense of others, they're going way overboard.

Sure, prank calling may have been fun at slumber parties or to ex-boyfriends in junior high, but we're older now and with age comes responsibility. People who perform these threatening calls need to grow up. It's not funny, it's dangerous and it's sick.

At a time like this, we, as a nation and as a campus, need to stick together and help out those in need instead of creating more problems to deal with.

The seven-member editorial board voted 7-0 on this issue.

Not much time left for procrastinators

Christy Everett

As the semester starts to wind down, panic sets in the hearts of student procrastinators.

With only eight days of class left, many students will have to stop saying "I can still pull that grade up" and start to read the 18 chapters of required reading for the final.

For students who have yet to buy their books, this could be a difficult task to accomplish.

We all say to ourselves that it will be so much easier to bring a grade up with the comprehensive final than it is to read three chapters for a test early on in the semester.

It also is during this period of time students become experts on many things. After all, it is hard to stop procrastinating after this much practice.

This is probably the only time during the year students use the following excuses to find more ways to get out of studying:

- Watch the news 24-7 claiming the need to become an expert on either the Oklahoma City bombing or the O.J. Simpson trial. Claim you are the only person with the ability to find the missing link to solve the case.
- Clean the apartment of all moving and growing food items.
- Rescure the toaster oven for the fourth time this week.
- Carefully watch the super-mop infomercial to see if it really can clean up an egg yolk without leaving the sticky film behind. This could be useful information in the future and really impresses most dates.

Write a letter to the editor at the student newspaper about the need for more coverage of ways to procrastinate.

Go to the library with the intent to study. Instead, learn how to use the microfilm machine, floss your teeth in the bathroom and check out government documents.

While you are there, learn about the many services provided through student fees that you never took advantage of.

Call the director of the CNN-TV news network and question him about the decision to preempt the O.J. Simpson trial Thursday for live bombing coverage.

What if the case breaks or another juror is lost and minute-to-minute coverage of the trial is not available?

Call the Kato Kaelin phone line to see what he has to say. Try to talk him into creating his own psychic network.

Once again, write to your friendly fast food restaurant managers and request alterations in ketchup packaging.

While you are at it, inquire into the methods used to rig napkin holders so you don't get the needed two napkins (one for the lap and one to wipe your fingers and mouth) but instead get about 40 napkins.

UD reporter had right to express herself

To the editor:

My name is Marc Ferrino, I am the lead vocalist for Catch 22. I am writing in regard to Ms. Osmulski's review articles on April 10 and April 12. It is a misfortune that a simple review of a local band had to end up in such controversy. Ms. Osmulski had every right to express her own musical tastes in her review, that is what she was assigned to do. She is also correct in the fact that Catch 22 did not have any previous knowledge of her credentials and musical tastes. Maybe we should have thought about this before letting our material end up in the wrong hands. In the future, it might be a better idea for the newspaper staff to make a more objective view on the material they critique. The important message for the students of Texas Tech is to form their own opinions on the music they choose to listen to. As a band, there will always be someone, somewhere, who will disagree on your own musical tastes, and that's OK. The real truth to this situation is to listen to our CD. It contains some really great music, and it's our music! We created it, we recorded it, we released it to the public. Who gives a — what Amy Osmulski has to say about it. We would also like to thank everybody who called in to protest Amy's opinion. She is right in the fact that it should have been handled in a different manner. I apologize for the numerous phone calls you received at home. If you want your word to be heard, write to the editor of the paper. Also, if anyone has a question of what Catch 22 is all about, take an evening of your choice to come and watch us play, then you can form your own opinion. Who knows Amy, maybe you could even come. One final note, if you are interested in reading a positive review of our CD, pick up a copy of the Depot District newsletter.

Ad demonstrates democracy in action

To the editor:

I have been on campus for several years and the letter titled "Ad demonstrates religious intolerance" (March 28) attacking the "creed" advertisement is the first one that inspired me to respond.

Whether I agree with the religious content or not, I found it refreshing to see an ad for something other than liquor stores, night clubs, etc. to appear in The UD. I believe the ad to be democracy in action and what America is supposed to be about: freedom of religion as well as freedom of speech.

As for a disclaimer, the fact that the ad was signed indicated to me that it had been paid for by those who signed it. Who knows? The UD just might sell a full page of space to the letter writer and friends so they can advertise their "creed."

Writer clears meaning of original letter

To the editor:

Please note a few comments regarding the April 10 letter entitled "Contradiction presented in recent letter," which refers to my April 3 letter "Concern about religious intolerance valid."

The writer feels I contradict myself when I empathize with Jews who want to celebrate Passover and Hanukkah yet call for them to become God's True Israel as Christians. I was only trying to agree as far as possible with the Jewish student whose original letter I was addressing. I sought to imitate the spirit of accommodation modeled by the Apostle Paul, a rabbi and convert to Christianity who legitimately continued to keep Jewish observances and laws which were not incompatible with Christianity (Acts 21:20-24, 1 Corinthians 9:19-20). One need not give up his Jewish Heritage and traditions to become a Christian.

Scripture assures in an agricultural illustration that although Jews rejected Jesus their Messiah and were "cut off" from God's True Israel (which included Gentiles who put faith in Jesus), they could be "grafted in again" to the spiritual tree "if they do not persist in unbelief" (Romans 11:19-21).

The writer reveals that she is an unformed Christian (if not indeed apostate) by acknowledging "the validity of all religions, regardless of origin." She ignores the biblical reference I provided where the Christ makes the exclusive claim to be the only way God: "no man comes to the Father but through Me" (John 14:6).

Regarding the writer's proposal that evidentiary "fact" differs from "subjective" truth, concerning historical events they are one and the same. "Fact" derives from the Latin "factum," simply meaning "that which is done; in deed." Scripture speaks of the Resurrection in the context of facility in 1 Corinthians 15:12-19. My proposal to formally debate the reasonableness of the Resurrection was not intended to be a concession to the earlier comments of my letter. It was an intermediary proposal for absolute skeptics who find the question entirely implausible.

To assert a fact that God raised Jesus from literal death, I pose an historical question, its truthfulness demonstrable by conventional scholarly tests. Is Lincoln's assassination in Ford Theater objective and provable "fact," or is that supposed truth something that reason-

Bomb threats explode in Lubbock area

By Linda Carriger
The University Daily

About an hour before the FBI responded to a bomb threat at the George H. Mahon Federal Building in downtown Lubbock Friday, Texas Tech received a bomb threat as well.

An unidentified woman called the administration building at 7:36 a.m., saying she had placed a bomb in the building.

The building was evacuated, but no bomb was found, said Margaret Lutherer, director of Tech news and publications.

Faculty and staff were back in the building after an hour bomb search

The George H. Mahon Federal Building

by the FBI. Yet, just as Tech workers returned to the building, an unidentified woman phoned in a bomb threat at the Lubbock federal building at 8:45 a.m. Friday.

About 185 government employees and visitors evacuated the building minutes after the threat was called in.

"We had a contingency plan to vacate the building, and we had people out quickly," said Dick Baker from the U.S. Attorney's Office.

The FBI did not find a bomb. Lutherer said she thinks the threats are a result of Wednesday's Oklahoma City tragedy.

A car bomb outside the federal building in Oklahoma City gouged a nine-story hole in the complex and killed more than 70 people and left about 432 people injured.

Bob Blecksmith, Lubbock bureau

FBI agent, thinks the threats were a reverberation of that blast as well.

"There are sick people out there trying to play off the disaster of what happened in Oklahoma City," he said.

Baker said the government will prosecute the woman who called in the threats if she is caught.

Friday's threat is the first for the federal building and the third for the Tech campus since the tragedy in Oklahoma. On Thursday, the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center and KTXU-FM received bomb threats. No bombs were found at either location.

Mock Congress faces real, national dilemmas

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two North Texas congressmen decided to let several hundred private citizens drive for a while.

The substitutes couldn't eliminate the federal deficit, either.

A mock Congress organized by Reps. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth, and Joe Barton, R-Ennis, allowed people a chance to face the dilemmas that confront the nation's lawmakers.

"The event is a full-scaled mock Congress charged with a goal of passing a balanced federal budget," said Barton, who played House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Participants in the Saturday convocation at the American Airlines Training and Conference Center were directed to decide, under the rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, what to cut from the president's budget requests. Despite a daylong struggle over Medicare, mass transit and foreign aid, the group of teachers, business executives, homemakers and political activists never escaped the red.

But some insisted they got much closer to ending the federal deficit than Washington will.

"I would venture to say our cuts will be more than achieved in the real Congress," said Tarrant County District Clerk Tom Wilder, a Republican.

The mock representatives — 172 Republicans and 161 Democrats — broke into committees like their namesakes to hash out cuts, and then went to the floor for amendments and a final vote.

House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, an Ohio Republican who traveled to Texas to play himself, told the mock lawmakers that their efforts might prove to Congress that a balanced budget is possible.

"The federal budget is controllable," he said. "It doesn't take a rocket scientist."

Geren, in his official role, voted for eight of 10 items in the GOP Contract with America. Nevertheless, on Saturday, he pushed more defense cuts in portraying House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

Job fair slated to provide help for future teachers

By Gary Black
The University Daily

An education job fair involving 113 school districts from Texas, New Mexico and Colorado will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Texas Tech University Center Ballroom.

The job fair is sponsored by the Tech Career Planning and Placement Center.

"What they are coming for is to interview education majors," said David Kraus, Career Planning Placement Center director. "It is a prime way a lot of young people looking for a teaching job get hired and make contacts."

All education majors are encouraged to attend, Kraus said.

"We think this has been real successful," he said.

"Some students will get job offers that day — but don't be disappointed if you don't."

The job fair is a chance for students to get their foot in the door, Kraus said.

"Some students don't know what openings they will have in the fall," he said.

"The students do get their resumes out and make contacts."

Lynn Elms, College of Education field based teaching experiences director, said the job fair is an opportunity to do some networking within the education field.

"It is an advantage that results in jobs," Elms said.

"We allow student teachers to take a day from student teaching to interview. I have had students come back and say so-and-so offered me a job."

Students interested in learning how to appear professional should attend, Elms said.

"Anyone who wants to learn how to present themselves for employment should come," Elms said. "It's not just for education majors, it's for anyone who wants to learn to be professional."

Kathy Lynch, a senior music education major from Houston, said she plans to scout the fair for jobs in the Houston area.

"I want to see what kind of schools are there and ask questions," Lynch said.

"I am hoping that districts from the Houston area come up. There are a lot of them down there, so I think chances are good they will be here."

The job fair is a chance to pick up applications and get a name out to different school districts, Lynch said.

Tech's Merket Alumni Center provides

Home Away from Home for all Techsans

By Linda Carriger
The University Daily

The lounge in the Merket Alumni Center looks like a rich uncle's favorite den, sprinkled with Texas Tech memorabilia such as a deflated football signed by the 1937 Red Raiders and yearbooks from 1928 to 1989.

"It's a home away from home," said Bill Dean, Tech ex-student association executive vice president. "We feel this gives us a place where the alumni can come by and hang out."

But alumni are not the only Techsans that should consider the center home.

"Obviously it's an alumni center, but undergraduate students are going to be alumni someday, we hope," Dean said. "They're welcome here, too."

The idea for the center emerged in 1980 but was put on the back burner in favor of efforts to establish a scholarship endowment fund for students.

In the late 1980s, when the old president's house — which is now part of the center — was overcrowded with offices and staff members, the idea emerged again.

Dean thought raising money for the complex was going to be difficult, he said.

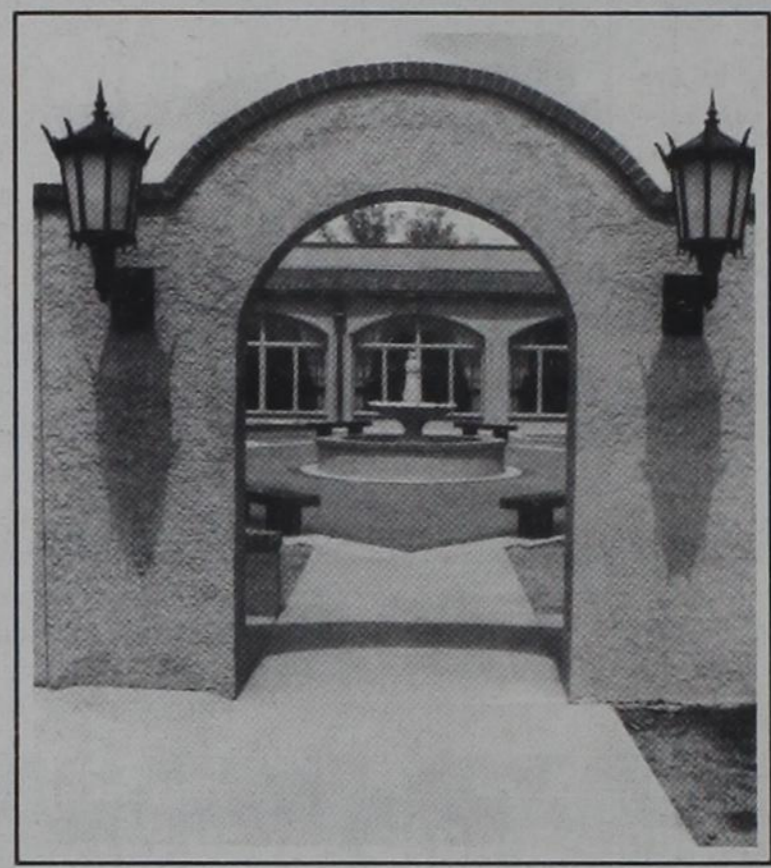

"When you start raising money for a building — bricks and mortar — that doesn't have a lot of sex appeal, and I was afraid people wouldn't go for the idea," he said.

But Dean's fears were unfounded. Construction for the center began in 1993.

Three thousand people donated to the project.

Some donated money and some donated materials, Dean said.

though. There are a few touch-ups yet to be made.

Several donor plaques, piled in the west corner of the old president's house, wait to line the sidewalks around the center.

In the courtyard, the fountain does not work, and the landscaping has not been done.

And a drinking fountain in the west corridor doesn't operate.

Dean said he does not know when the finishing touches will be completed, but the center itself is ready for operation.

The center has been busy since it opened April 9.

The banquet room was booked by Tech organizations every night last week and looks to be busy again this week, said Jamie Ponse, assistant manager of the University Center Catering.

"Our business has gone sky-high since this has been open," he said.

"I think just by looking at this place, they (organizations) want to be in here. It's really nice."

The building is so busy that the ex-student association can not book their own banquet room for the Senior Exit Dinner 6 p.m. Thursday, Dean said.

"We're going to have it in the U.C. banquet room because the facility (alumni center) is booked," he said.

The dinner is free for graduating seniors, but tickets must be picked up at the alumni center before the banquet, Dean said.

New associate deans named to department

By Angela Murray
The University Daily

William Marcy has been named the new associate dean for research and administration, and James Gregory has been selected as the associate dean for undergraduate studies in the Texas Tech College of Engineering.

Marcy is a professor and former chairman of the department of computer science, and Gregory is a professor in the department of civil engineering.

Both men assumed their new duties in March.

"I am really enjoying my new job," Marcy said. "I enjoy working with our new dean of engineering."

Marcy said his job involves a variety of tasks, including working with the dean of engineering with administrative duties.

"I help with strategic planning and budgeting, and I also help with facilitation of research," he said. "I help faculty and others to find funding for the research they want to do."

Marcy said he has played a role in obtaining about $6 million in funds for various educational and industrial research projects over a 15 year period.

"I have worked on the Off-Campus Master's of Engineering Program and the Interdisciplinary Doctorate of Engineering Program," he said.

Students can use e-mail to receive homework assignments and turn them in, and leave questions for their professors through the program, Marcy said.

"I am also thrilled to be involved with the committee on multimedia teaching and learning center," Marcy said.

Marcy received his bachelor's and master's degrees in electrical engineering in 1964 and 1966 from Tech. He earned an interdisciplinary doctorate in engineering from Tech in 1972. He also served as a branch chief for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Gregory said his responsibilities include taking care of students.

"We have the attitude that anyone who meets Texas Tech's entrance requirements, with a little work, should be able to obtain a degree in engineering," he said.

Gregory said he wrote a computer program for students called the Grade Requirements Evaluation Game. Students can use the program and determine what strategies will help them build a higher GPA.

"This program has been used by high-risk students in conjunction with counseling in 1993," he said.

Gregory earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in 1970 and 1971 from University of Missouri-Columbia. He earned his doctorate in agricultural engineering and soil physics from Iowa State University in 1977. Gregory said that he has worked as a consultant in Northern Africa, China and Australia.

"I am still teaching three civil engineering classes and this has caused a busy transition period, but I really enjoy my job," Gregory said.

Health care showcased through weekend fair

By Jamie McDonald
The University Daily

National Medical Laboratory Week, April 17 through Friday, helped recognize all medical professionals who work behind the scenes in hospitals and clinics around the nation.

The week's events were designed to promote recognition of the clinical lab scientists, said Barbara Border, Texas Tech assistant professor of clinical laboratory science.

ment can be given. The doctors make a diagnosis from what we tell them. We are part of the clinical health care team."

To recognize the clinical laboratory profession, some area hospitals conducted open houses for people to come inside the labs to see the routine, said Hal Larsen, Tech clinical laboratory science department chairman.

A health fair also was conducted Friday and Saturday at South Plains Mall, Border said.

Border hopes the events will help to expand the field, she said.

"There is more complicated and intricate technology, and people have to be more highly trained," she said. "More and more diseases have been able to be diagnosed with tests. More people are needed to run the tests. For example, there is an expansion into criminology labs. We now can test the DNA instead of just the type."

People with an interest in science should look into one of the many professions involving laboratory work, Border said.

"A lot of students go to school looking for a biology or chemistry degree," Border said.

Lawsuit involves tort reform cases

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Isolated, impoverished Maverick County on the Texas-Mexico border has found itself at the epicenter of the state's current tort reform temblor.

Two lawsuits in state district court involving thousands of plaintiffs have raised questions about current Texas laws governing where court cases can be filed and who can file them.

"It's interesting that a small, poor county, which is what we're dealing with there, is becoming a magnet for litigation of that magnitude," said George Diaz-Arrastia, a corporate defense lawyer in one of the lawsuits.

Campaign contributions are also in the mix.

Several lawyers in the two cases contributed thousands of dollars to the presiding judge's campaign in 1993.

1993 was the year before the lawsuits were filed, according to campaign finance reports reviewed by The Associated Press.

Japanese doomsday cult leader fatally stabbed

TOKYO (AP) — As police and dozens of reporters looked on, a right-wing extremist on Sunday ambushed and fatally stabbed a senior leader of the doomsday cult suspected in the lethal nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways.

The attack occurred as Hideo Murai, 36, head of the Aum Shinri Kyo (Supreme Truth) cult's "Science and Technology Ministry," was returning to the cult's Tokyo headquarters Sunday night. Murai was one of the five top leaders of the cult.

Murai underwent surgery, but died of blood loss and internal injuries several hours later, according to a hospital spokesman.

The stabbing was the latest chapter in a wave of violence that has deeply shaken Japan, which has long taken the safety of its streets as a matter of national pride.

Reporters and TV crews have been staked out in front of the cult headquarters for days, and several networks broadcast video showing a man pushing through the throng and slashing at Murai.

The attacker dropped his bloody weapon, a long-bladed kitchen knife, in the melee that followed and was arrested.

Police identified him as Hirokyuki

Jo, 29, a member of a rightist organization.

Japan's state-run television network, NHK, said Jo told police he wanted to punish Murai because of trouble caused by the cult.

The cult has denied any connection with the Tokyo attack, which killed 12 people, or with two cases last week in which hundreds of people complained of stinging eyes and sore throats at a train station and shopping center in Yokohama, just south of the capital.

Yet the cult has been the focus of an intense police investigation since the March 20 subway killings.

Japanese media reported over the weekend that police were planning to round up top leaders of the cult — including founder Shoko Asahara — as early as Monday in connection with the subway attack, and reporters had been staking out Aum facilities around the clock.

Police have conducted daily searches of cult compounds since the subway killings and discovered tons of chemicals and equipment that could have been used to produce sarin, the kind of nerve gas used in the subway attack.

Reports quoting anonymous police sources said that officials have also uncovered evidence of rifle production facilities, biological warfare labs and even plans to purchase nuclear weapons from Russia.

Ten days after the subway attack, Japan's top police official, who was responsible for the investigation, was shot and nearly killed as he left home for work.

And, as Parliament passed a law banning the possession of sarin last week, hundreds of people were sickened by toxic fumes released at a major train station just south of Tokyo.

Nearly two dozen more were hospitalized in a similar incident at a shopping center near the same station Friday.

Police have not made any arrests in any of those cases, and have not officially identified any suspects.

The department Murai headed within the cult has been linked to its chemical research.

He has appeared on television to deny that the cult ever has produced sarin.

Deep thoughts about sports

Jared Parcell

Hmmm..... Let's think about some things for a minute.

• Leading off with baseball, this time on the major league level. Peter Angelos, owner of the Baltimore Orioles has done it again. First, he would not field a team of replacement birds. Now, the money-hungry owner, one of 27, wants to rearrange the American League schedule, already established.

He wants his O's to play a home game when Cal "Enerzizer" Ripken Jr. breaks Lou Gehrig's streak of consecutive games played.

The way things are set, Baltimore will host the California Angels on Sept. 6. But Angelos, wanting to play weather man, wants to switch home dates with the Indians, so they can play the Tribe Sept. 8-10 in Baltimore in case of rain outs.

Here's to you Angelos!

The fans at Jacobs Field in Cleveland should rain on Angelos' parade. Rain outs are a part of baseball, so deal with it.

Tech coach Larry Hays didn't get to change home dates with the Texas-Arlington Mavericks in order to have an opportunity to get a career win 1,000 at home.

Just a little information for those who think I'm ragging on Ripken, I'm not, because I was able to get his autograph when I went to Florida for Spring Training three years ago.

• And now, what most of you have been waiting for, my weekly Dallas Mavericks bash. The NBA is preparing for the announcement of Rookie of the Year during the play-offs.

My vote, and it is not because I reside in Dallas when I try to escape the wrath of Lubbock winds, is for Jason Kidd. Look at what he has meant to the Mavs. He put together back-to-back triple-double games against the Los Angeles Lakers and Minnesota Timberwolves within the past two weeks.

Last Tuesday (April 11) night, against the defending World Champion Houston Rockets, he set a Mavs all-time team record with his third triple-double of the year. He is the only Maverick to have three such games in his career, and his back-to-back feat was the first time that had ever happened.

Take into account what the rookie from California has done for this team.

He's turned them from a bottom-of-the-barrel, beat-us-every-night team (13-69 last season) into one that was contending for a play-off spot (36-43 this season) before Thursday's game with the play-off bound San Antonio Spurs.

But of course, avid readers of this column know my thoughts on the Mavs reaching the post-season. Since it won't happen, maybe they can get the center of attention they are missing.

Aggies slam Tech's door to SWC lead

By Jared Parcell
The University Daily

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M first baseman Jeff Bailey had his dream come true after hitting a grand slam in the bottom of the 10th and lifting Texas A&M to a 9-8 win over Tech Sunday at Olsen Field.

"This is the biggest moment of my life," said Bailey, who had two home runs in the game. "After the walk (to Chad Alexander), everything fell into place. I'm glad I got the opportunity."

Tech, 39-10 overall and 10-7 in the Southwest Conference, took an 8-4 lead into the 10th after scoring on Dion Ruecker's two-run single up the middle. In the bottom of the inning, Robert Harris hit a one-out single up the middle off losing pitcher Matt Miller (8-3).

Paul Barber, who picked up the win in relief, followed with a single to left. Ryan Huffman singled off the wall, scoring Harris. After Matt Garrick struck out for the second out of the inning, Alexander walked, setting the scene for Bailey.

"I wish I could apologize to my teammates 100 times because I let them all down," Miller said. "They battled all day to get us in position to win the game, and I let them down."

A&M (33-15-1, 12-6) is tied with Rice at 12-6 for first place in the conference. The Red Raiders, who could have moved into sole possession of first with a win, are in third, a game and a half back.

Jason Totman put Tech on the scoreboard first, when he led off the first inning with a triple into right center field and scored on a bunt by DuRoss. On the play, catcher William Shiflett could not hold onto the throw from pitcher Shane King.

Despite a strong wind blowing in, Ruecker blasted his 12th home run of the season off the scoreboard in left center field in the second inning. Lindstrom, who had a two strike single, scored ahead of Ruecker, putting the Red Raiders ahead, 3-0.

Tech continued to pick up hits with two strikes in the third inning, when Bryant singled up the middle on a 2-2 pitch. Kastelic scored Bryant when he laced an 0-2 pitch into the right field corner for a double, giving Tech a 4-0 lead.

The Red Raiders had several chances to score, but had four runners cut down trying to steal and put the lead-off man on in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings.

"We let the game get away early," said Tech right fielder Brandon Welch, who watched Bailey's home run clear the fence.

"It's just one of those things that happen. I was just hoping the ball would go foul."

Bailey cut the Tech lead in half, 4-2, hitting a two-out, two-run home run to right field, scoring Huffman who led off the bottom of the fifth inning with a walk.

Kolb hit the next batter, Chad Allen and was pulled from the game for Jimmy Frush.

Frush walked Curl, putting runners at first and second, but escaped further damage as Stephens grounded out to Martinez to end the threat.

Aggie pinch hitter David Minor delivered a one-out single, scoring Harris and Huffman to tie the game, 4-4 in the bottom of the sixth inning.

"We're happy to get two wins here," Tech coach Larry Hays said. "This is a tough way to lose though."

On Saturday, Tech lefthander Jeff Peck caught a break in the second game of a doubleheader, when a hot and humid afternoon turned into a cold, windy, damp evening, as the Red Raiders swept two games from A&M.

With the wind blowing in, Peck was able to remain in control, going 8 2/3 innings before giving way to reliever Frush for the final out and save of a 4-0 Tech win.

"I kept the ball outside, forcing them to hit fly balls and ground balls," said Peck, now 8-2 on the year. "I felt comfortable with the wind blowing in. I didn't have to worry about leaving the ball up in the zone, except to left handed hitters."

DuRoss gave Peck all the runs he needed to work with in the top of the third inning, driving in Holmstead who had doubled with one out. Welch increased the Red Raider lead to 3-0 in the fourth inning. He hit a two-run home run, his eighth of the season, driving in Kastelic who walked to lead off the inning.

"I have my confidence back," Welch said. "I've felt good at the plate since last weekend (home run in the 11th inning to beat Texas)."

The Aggies threatened, leaving a total of 11 men on base, including two in the second, fourth, eighth and ninth innings. Peck and Frush (in the ninth) were able to avoid any damage. Peck scattered 10 hits and four walks but also picked up four strike outs. Frush came in and got a fly ball out to end the game.

"We still have a shot at the conference tournament, but we aren't there yet," Hays said. "A&M is a good club that can hit the ball really well."

On a humid and cloudy afternoon, Texas Tech and Texas A&M hooked up for the first game of a doubleheader.

Tech remained patient in the first game, taking advantage of anything the Aggies offered, winning 13-6.

"We took advantage of their mistakes," said Lindstrom, who had three RBI in the win. "Last night we didn't give ourselves a chance, but today we were patient at the plate and took what they gave us."

Men's golf team looks for first SWC crown

By Bryan Adams
The University Daily

The battle for the Southwest Conference Championship looks to be a dog fight for the Texas Tech men's golf team.

The Red Raiders share the conference's No. 1 ranking with Texas, while Texas A&M, Houston and Texas Christian are still in the thick of things.

With the conference champion being anybody's guess, Tech coach Tommy Wilson said every team is a concern.

"We all have friendly rivalries," Wilson said. "We need to beat seven teams, and it won't be any easy task. TCU will certainly be a factor because they have beaten everybody already, except for us. Houston is always good and this year they're hosting the tournament so they have the advantage of home course. I thought we were as good as A&M, but they whipped up on us a couple times this year. Rice is coming on real strong and SMU has a tremendous amount of talent. Texas will have to be the team to beat."

Tech takes junior Bryan Novoa, junior Chris Mathis, senior Michael Schrade, sophomore Patrick Barley and junior Chris Hill to the Old Orchard Golf Club, where the Red Raiders finished 12th in the All-America earlier this season.

"We're taking the same group that we took to the All-America except I switched out the No. 5 spot with Chris Hill instead of Greg Wetter," Wilson said. "Chris' outing before the All-America was not good so he didn't go to that one. He's worked hard and deserves to go to conference. I told Greg not to put his stuff away just yet. He could still be going to regionals after this. When we get to conference, we'll just have to dance with who brought us."

Tech has finished no higher than sixth at the SWC Championships in 11 years, but Wilson said he believes this is the year for Tech.

"This is the next to last year for the SWC Championships before we move to the Big 12," Wilson said. "This team is looking forward to conference more this year because we got a legitimate chance of winning. It's not too often that all the SWC teams get to compete on the same course, in the same conditions at the same time. Only the Harvey Penick (Tournament in Austin) has the same scenario."

Coach Wilson said the key to this year's success has been the depth of the bench. This year's team has its eyes set on the NCAA finals, and Wilson said he needs everybody hitting on the right spark plug for it to happen.

"This team has more competitive playing experience," Wilson said. "Even though I only have one senior, the young team from last year is paying dividends this year. We ought to be even stronger next year."

Wilson said the team needs to stay focused on the tournament in front of them and not look ahead to the regional championship.

"Unfortunately they (players) feel they have a lock on regionals," Wilson said.

"They're going to have to earn it. If we go out and have the same performance we had at the All-America, people are going to say, 'What happened to Tech?' and 'They can't play well when it counts?' It's whatever the committee decides."

Wilson said even if Tech doesn't come away with the conference title he is still pleased with its performance this season.

"The 93-94 season we started to nose dive in the spring," Wilson said. "This year we didn't do that. My spring seasons are very difficult, but you need to have it that way. If we go out and play well and get beat, then we got beat by the better team. These guys feel like they won't lose."
