Bombing deaths may rise over 200

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — On a day when the White House suggested the death toll could surpass 200, a tiny victim of the federal building bombing was buried amid hearts and teddy bears. And the search for her murderers pressed on.

One-year-old Baylee Almon — the infant who, photographed in a fireman's arms, broke hearts around the world — was the first of the 80 victims recovered so far to be laid to rest. "Baylee is in God's hands," the Rev. Charles McDade said at her funeral Monday.

As suspect Timothy McVeigh sat in jail, his lawyers sought to pull out of the case. One of the lawyers said he doubted anyone in Oklahoma City could give him a fair hearing.

The hunt for a so-far-unidentified second suspect remained investigators' top focus. The FBI said an Army deserter questioned Sunday had no part in the attack, then continued to follow leads across the country. As debris was hauled out by searchers, agents combed it for clues.

The search for the missing resumed in the tomb of pulverized concrete and broken pipes, with special precautions taken to ensure workers' health against infection from decaying bodies.

Searchers once again failed to reach the day care and Social Security areas of the building. They used chainsaws and jackhammers to whittle away at a three-story high pile of rubble pancaked on those areas, but said they wouldn't get there until today.

Among the bodies found Monday was that of a Marine, still in uniform at his recruiting desk in the rubble.

The Pentagon identified him as Capt. Randolph Guzman, 28, of Castro Valley, Calif.

Reporters allowed inside for the first time saw search dogs gingerly creeping and helmeted workers crawling into spaces braced with four-by-fours like a mineshaft.

But pool correspondent Roger O'Neil of NBC said other images particularly stayed with him, "from the determined look on the rescuers' faces ... to the toys." His voice faltered momentarily describing a memorial wreath of fresh white mums laid amid the ruin.

The death toll included those killed in the blast and a nurse, Rebecca Anderson, who was mortally injured after she went to the bomb scene to help in rescue efforts Wednesday.

Three other rescue workers had been injured, none seriously.

White House chief of staff Leon Panetta said the death toll could rise above 200.

Several funerals and memorial services were held Monday.

At another funeral, the three children of Lola Bolden, a 40-year-old Army sergeant, wept in a small chapel where Maj. Ronald Bain, who worked with her, eulogized: "She takes with her a part of our battalion."

While Weldon Kennedy, the agent leading the FBI's investigation, reported swift progress with a probe ranging "literally throughout the United States," major puzzle pieces were still missing — including the second of two men pictured in FBI sketches last week.

"John Doe 2 has not been identified and remains at large," presumably armed and dangerous, Kennedy said.

Potatoes focus of Combest plant tour

By Donald Gillilan

The University Daily

Dehydrated potatoes were the theme of a tour given to Rep. Pat Robert, R-Kan., and Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, at the Lubbock Breedlove Dehydration Plant Monday.

"We hit all the major spots of the plant," said Kimberly Glaus-Läte, Breedlove Dehydration Plant technical manager, who conducted the tour. "They (Congressmen) got the standard tour."

The tour showed the transformation of fresh potatoes to dehydrated potatoes.

Dehydrated potatoes can be added to water and swell up to provide a good size meal, she said.

Dawn Kingsbery, Breedlove Dehydration Plant president, said the potatoes are washed first and then are sent to a peeler.

After the potatoes are peeled, they are washed again, she said.

"The potatoes are then sliced and diced," Kingsbery said. "Then they will go through the dehydrator, and it takes about three to four hours for the whole process to be completed."

The Breedlove Dehydration Plant will process at least two trucks of potatoes daily, she said.

Combest said the tour was a success. He said the federal government has nothing to do with plant's accomplishments.

"There is not one dime that goes into this operation," said Combest. "This shows that one of the things the federal government can do is get out of the way."

People are willing to join programs such as these because they can see the impact of the operation, he said.

Capping it: Rep. Pat Robert (left), R-Kan., Rep. Larry Combest (center), R-Lubbock and Kimberly Glaus-Läte, Breedlove Dehydration Plant technical manager, tour the plant. Robert and Combest toured to promote awareness of world hunger.

"I have never seen the federal government able to run a place better than the private sector," Combest said.

Roberts, U.S. House agriculture committee chairman, said the plant is a major technological success.

The project shows that problems of hunger can be addressed with alternatives, and the federal government should join the private sector to work together, he said.

"There is significant progress being made," he said. "We are seeing these kind of plants happening all over the country."

Carolyn Lanier, South Plains Food Bank executive director, said she is excited Combest and Roberts visited to the plant.

"I'm thrilled and excited, this is history in the making," Lanier said. "This plant is going to change the way we feed the hungry."

Clifford Hamilton, a Lubbock area farmer, said he plans to ask lawmakers for a tax break for farmers who give food to the plant.

"We give the food to the plant for free," Hamilton said. "The tour went pretty good, now it's a matter on what they can get done in Washington."

Glaus-Läte said the tour was a good opportunity because the plant is a pilot program to show others it can be done.

"The people who live in Lubbock, Texas, need to be aware of the fact that the plant that was developed here is the very first non-profit dehydration plant in the world, this is the very first step of a long journey in conquering world hunger," she said.

"It was funded through private donations and through foundation money. If it wasn't for the generosity of the people of Lubbock this plant would not exist here and would have been built somewhere else."

Tech coach resigns

Ritchie-Stone heads to Appalachian State

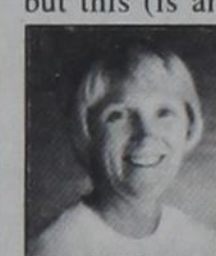

By Jonathan Harris

The University Daily

Texas Tech strength and conditioning coach Meg Ritchie-Stone announced her resignation Monday to join her husband in North Carolina.

Ritchie-Stone said she would leave around May 15 to take an assistant track coach position at Appalachian State and be with her husband Michael Stone, who is a physiology professor at the Boone, N.C., school.

"I've been very happy at Tech, but this (is an) opportunity to live in the same town with my husband and to get involved with track again," she said. "I hope I've had a positive impact on the program at Tech for the short period of time I've been here."

Ritchie-Stone is one of two women to hold Division I head strength coaching jobs.

She arrived at Tech in January

1994 replacing Joe Juraszek, who left for Oklahoma.

"Meg did a tremendous job here, and we hate to lose her," Tech football coach Spike Dykes said. "I do understand the difficulty of being married and living in two different places. I'll appreciate what she has done for the Red Raiders."

Ritchie-Stone will coach sprinters and throwers for both men's and women's track at Appalachian State.

The native of Scotland was a world-class discus thrower and shot putter. She was a discus finalist for Britain in the 1980 and 1984 Olympic games.

She served as an assistant track coach at Arizona before accepting Arizona's head strength coaching position. Ritchie-Stone said getting back into track will open doors.

"I've been asked to join the Olympic Development Committee, and you have to be a track coach in order to do that," Ritchie-Stone said.

Tech Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said the search for a replacement will begin immediately.

"Meg has done a good job at Tech," Bockrath said. "I'm thankful for the time she spent at Tech and wish her continued success at Appalachian State."

Ritchie-Stone said she hopes Tech's search for a new strength coach will be a successful one.

"The facilities and everything else are in place for someone to come in and pick right up."

Close to 600 refugees keep camp in school compound

KIBEHO, Rwanda (AP) — About 600 refugees holed up at a school strewn with mangled bodies refused on Monday to leave a camp where thousands died in Rwanda's latest ethnic violence.

The camp that a week ago held 120,000 people, is now a ghost town of acres upon acres of deserted huts, broken shards of cooking pots, clothing, shoes and machetes.

At least 2,000 people were killed there by Rwandan soldiers or trampled to death in stampedes on Saturday. No bodies could be seen outside the school grounds; soldiers buried most of the dead in mass graves Sunday.

An estimated 100,000 men, women and children fled the camp, trudging Monday through ankle-deep mud and open countryside toward the provincial capital of Butare, 20 miles east of Kibeho.

Rwandan soldiers trained recoilless rifles on the school Monday but stayed back while U.N. troops using bullhorns tried to persuade the holdouts to leave.

Many of the holdouts apparently were hard-line Hutus who have the most to fear from the Tutsi-led army for the slaughter last year of some 500,000 Rwandans, most of them Tutsis. Tens of thousands of Hutus fled to Kibeho in July as Tutsi rebels overthrew the Hutu government.

One of the leaders of the refugees, 73-year-old Silas Ndamamira, said the people were too frightened to leave.

"We have decided to stay here, but we are looking for somewhere else to go," he said.

New KTXT-FM manager selected

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily

Keith Porterfield, a senior telecommunications major from Lamesa, was announced as the 1995-96 KTXT-FM station manager Friday night.

"We had four qualified candidates, and the selection committee chose Keith because he had experience, a good proposal for programming and an understanding of the purpose of KTXT-FM," said Clive Kinghorn, faculty adviser to KTXT-FM and a member of the selection committee.

Kinghorn said he thinks students will respond well to Porterfield.

He will make a good manager, Kinghorn said.

"I think Keith's knowledge of alternative music and dedication to that music make him a perfect candidate for the position," said Mike Millard, the 1994-95 KTXT-FM station manager and a member of the selection committee.

"He has experience working as a disc jockey, as well as music director."

Millard said he believes Porterfield will be able to bring a comfortable atmosphere and fresh ideas to the station.

"Keith hasn't been here too long, but he knows what is going on," he said.

Porterfield said he feels he is qualified for the position because of his dedication and his past experience with KTXT-FM.

"I've worked at KTXT-FM for a couple of years now, and being station manager is something I have always wanted to do," Porterfield said. "I have seen how things work and know where I want the station to go."

Although the format will basically stay the same at KTXT-FM,

Porterfield

Porterfield said he would like to strengthen communication and involvement between the staff members.

"We are going to try to get the disc jockeys and general staff more involved with what is going on," he said. "Oftentimes, they just come to work, finish their shift and go home. They aren't involved."

Porterfield said the station is working on putting in a computer system and putting everything on a network.

"The computer system would help improve the sound quality and get things more organized," he said.

After working at KTXT-FM, Porterfield gave up his dream of being a television anchor and decided he wanted to work in radio.

"I've always been interested in the broadcast medium, and some of my friends talked me into disc jockeying for KTXT-FM," he said. "It turned out to be a good move, because I really enjoyed it."

Earth Day already forgotten by society

Saturday marked the 25th anniversary of Earth Day, and the nation celebrated it like it was Arbor Day.

No party or hoopla.

In Lubbock, the near-freezing weather seemed more important.

For years, companies and environmental groups have been shoving the "recycle, reuse, be kind to the environment" statements down our throats.

Recycling — glass to french fry oil — has been the thing to do.

Yet, on the biggest day of the year, everyone should be taking care of Mother Nature's creations, not much has happened.

Earth Day received less news coverage and subsequent attention than in the past few years.

Maybe the day didn't get much recognition because it fell on a weekend, and government employees didn't get a day off.

It's a pity that people get bored with one national issue and throw it on the back burner for another year.

Sadly, this day may go down just like the truly useless national day on the calendar from Friendship Day (Aug. 6) to United Nations Day (Oct. 24).

Earth Day seemed, for a time, to be something for the hippies who were trying to save the earth, but the people who started this noble effort aren't doing a very good job to promote this be-kind-to-the-environment day.

The first Earth Day in 1970 was intended to prompt the nation's citizens to pay attention to environmental concerns.

This year, minuscule events like a fair at the Houston Zoo and the distribution of seeds topped the list of Earth Day events in Texas.

At Texas Tech, the University Center had a Toxic Tour of Texas display of photographs about wastes, such as chemicals, that are found in the West Texas area.

Where are all of these environmental groups when you need them?

They always happen to spring up at major oil spills or near the cutting of trees.

Groups who have the urge to celebrate this holiday have all year to prepare for this day. It is their time in the spotlight, and some choose to ignore it.

Schools should get on the bandwagon too.

What a better time to educate children about recycling than Earth Day, a ready-made time to illustrate how we misuse our environment?

If Earth Day is to be celebrated, it should be done with a bang.

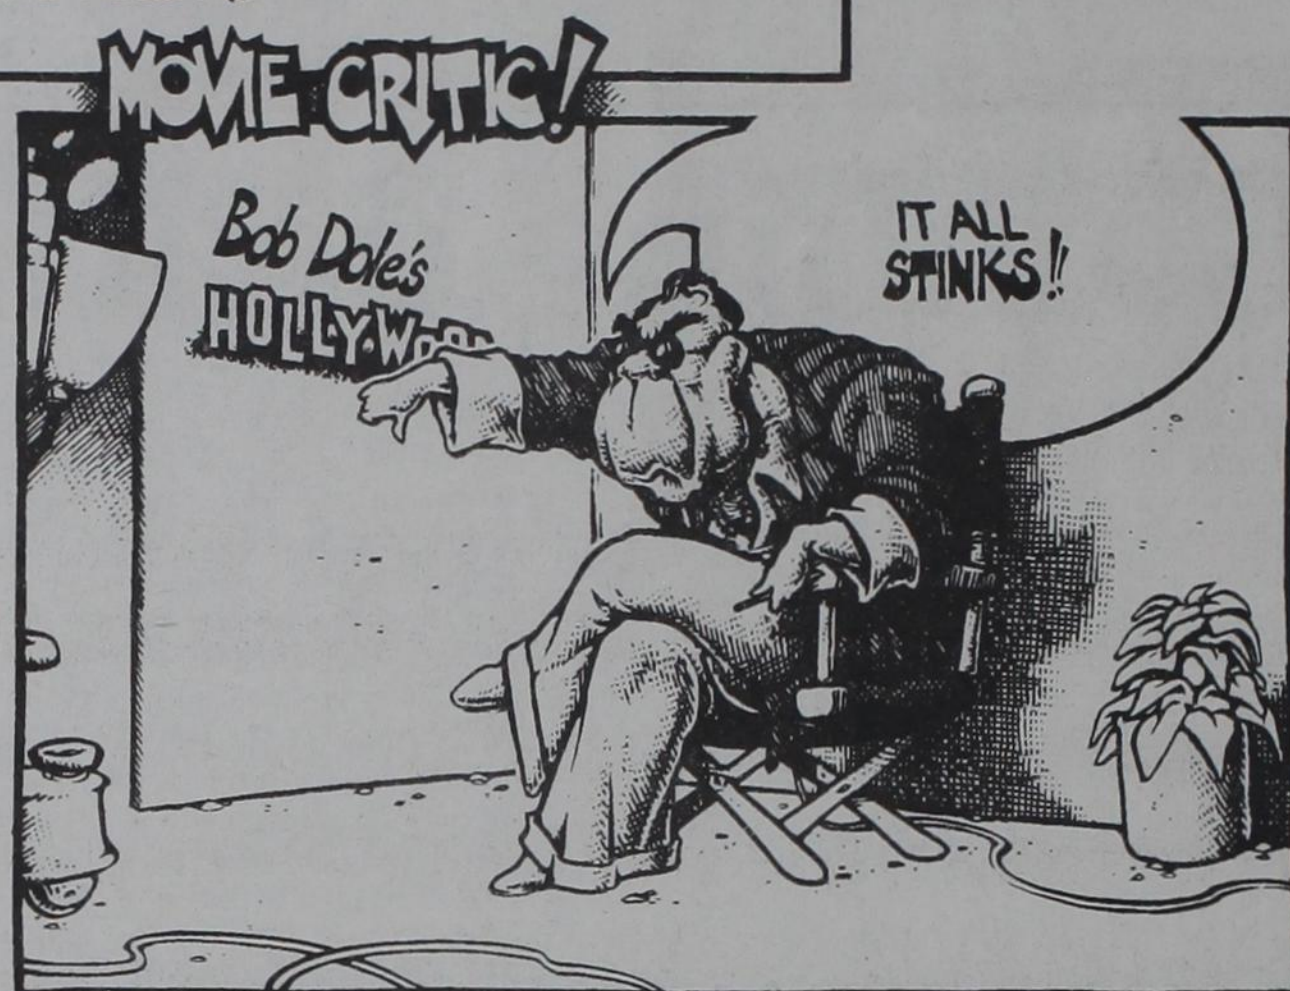

Trees should be planted, flowers should be watered, recyclable paper should be used.

Arbor Day is not enough.

Recent letter avoids religious creed issue

To the editor:

I was pleased to see that the battle regarding the inclusion of the March 21 ad "Creed Based On Facts" had been engaged in the April 6 letter "Reader Disturbed by Creed Advertisement." The piece so deftly avoided the real issues. The writer rightly does not adequately "take issue with the content" of either the creed or my April 3 letter regarding the same, for to do so he would find himself floundering in a sea of self contradiction.

The writer finds both creed and letter judgmental and exclusivistic ill-befitting "the intellectual and spiritual climate of a university," and affirms (absolutely) that the concept of "absolute truth should be traded for a more acceptable, albeit "fuzzy logic," paradigm in which one makes ethical choices for himself, content to be uncertain about (presumably) everything.

A Christian admits that in many areas truth is "nailed down," although there is room for matters of opinion (Romans 14); that often one receives through objective revelation (Scripture) commands and principles whereby he need not think up ethical responses that are too often flawed; and that he consequently can know in advance the "right" thing to do in various situations.

Although the writer would dare not admit it, the logical consequence of his perspective is that he can claim no absolute standard to recognize the rightness or the wrongness of things like Hitler's choices regarding the Jews; the recent events in Bosnia or Rwanda; or even someone's decision to experience personal fulfillment in punching the writer in the nose with no provocation and for no reason.

These decisions are not automatically apparent to all; consider Nietzsche's "Superman" who held that society's strongest ought to rule the defaulting weaker who depended on irrelevant moral absolutes regarding oppression. Indeed, Christians are quite content to submit to the Lord who created them in matters of life and morality because ethics are often very contradictory.

But place the foregoing momentarily aside. What the writer refuses to confront is the fundamental reason Christians hold to the absolutes they do. At fundamental issue in this whole debate is their affirmation that Jesus of Nazareth proved his right to make laws and set absolute standards by predicting his literal resurrection from literal death. And once again, the Christian contends that this can be demonstrated through legal proofs and conventional tests of historicity.

Until skeptics accept the challenge to debate this question and demonstrate that it is a foolish and unwanted contention, they simply have nothing to say. Again, Scripture says (1) Christians are fooled to be pitied, and (2) they should give up their cause and live with moral uncertainty should Jesus' resurrection be shown to be an unfortunate deception or a myth (1 Corinthians 15:14, 32).

Will this writer or someone else accept the challenge to discuss this issue in a rational and formal setting?

Lubbock should adopt smoking policy

To the editor:

Recently this paper included on the front page a reprinted article concerning the recent change of a smoking policy in the state of New York. The article related how New York's 1988 legislative law had extended its ban on smoking in restaurants and the like to now restrict smoking to within six feet of a bar within the establishment. If the establishment happens to have no bar, then it automatically becomes a non-smoking establishment under the new law.

I would like to see such a policy replicated within the Lubbock city limits by whatever governing body must convene in order to make such a restriction mandatory.

I believe that in New York, such an action required that a vote be put to the citizens that are now under the new law. Therefore, I would ask that such a vote be put to the eligible voters of Lubbock, Texas.

Currently, I do smoke on occasion, however, I tend to smoke only in the company of other smokers and usually only when I frequent establishments where the acquaintances that I meet there also smoke to pass the time.

If such a ban were extended to the Lubbock community, I know that I would comply to the new law and smoke less frequently, and perhaps stop smoking altogether.

I personally believe smoking has ill effects on all concerned and that smoke inhalation is a serious concern for anyone and everyone who may encounter side-stream smoke in any setting whatsoever.

I applaud the citizens of New York state for their initiative and their success in establishing such a restrictive ban on smoking in areas where others might come to serious physical harm as a result of side-stream smoke. I believe that this is perhaps the first time such a large number of voting citizens have collectively chosen to make a significant step in the right direction in regards to this issue.

I also applaud the decision of Delta Airlines and others who have chosen to ban smoking on all flights to any destination whatsoever.

I do realize that this letter will stimulate a great deal of controversy and debate from both sides of the side-streamed fence. I welcome it to take place on the pages of not only this paper but also within the pages of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. I believe that the coming debate will help to heighten the public concern for this issue and to draw additional support for the proposed smoking ban.

I would like to assist or lead such an initiative that would ultimately bring this issue to a vote before the citizens of the Lubbock community, and I would appreciate any knowledgeable suggestions from any Tech students and faculty.

Thank you for your consideration.

Purple dinosaur not serious social issue

To the editor:

I am not sure why Mr. Walters claims Barney is the Antichrist, but in case he's been too busy exposing the deceptive and evil intentions of one oversized, purple, TV character, I would like to remind (perhaps inform) him that there are many more serious problems in our world than the antics of Barney and his friends. However, since he chose to attack the Barnster in his April 14 article "Barney lacking as children's role model," I feel obligated to offer my opinion on the subject.

I am going to take a wild stab in the dark and guess (pray) that you (Mr. Walters) don't have any children! If you did you would have a better understanding about what is important to the growth and development of children. I do not claim that Barney is the best role model for children, but I do maintain that his influence is minimal compared to that of a parent's. I showed some trepidation in letting my son watch the show. However, when I looked into my son's eyes and saw how happy he was imagining and singing along with Barney, I realized that his happiness was and is the only thing that matters.

I am a single parent and sharing the responsibility of raising a child is taxing on his mother and I. We believe his happiness is paramount. If letting him watch Barney makes him happy, why keep him from seeing it? If I was not confident in our ability to properly raise our son and if one television show was going to be responsible for his education, then I would worry about the effects Barney (or any other TV program) might have on him. Fortunately, his development depends on his mother and I and the people close to us.

When you are active in your child's life, it is not as important to censor his viewing habits. I watch the Barney show and I enjoy it. Why? Because my son enjoys it. We sing and play and laugh and when I disagree with what is being said on the show I talk to him about why I feel the way I do. The show is simple and there is no reason to make it complex. Life is difficult enough as it is and there are plenty of "real life" shows that will teach my child about the "real world." Sometimes — most times — simple is better.

Two major concepts reflected in the "Barney and Friends" show are that single-parent families are families and using your imagination is fun. Obviously, to those of us who are single-parents, it is nice to get support from any source. As for using imagination, I can think of few better developmental tools than allowing young children to use their minds in a fun and creative way.

I would like to expose my child to as many different views and opinions as possible (yes, even yours). I want him to have a mind of his own. I don't want a clone of myself. By letting him watch, listen, feel, eat and do things differently than myself, I hope to enhance his development tenfold over what I could teach him alone. Barney has as much or as little influence as a parent allows, and although he isn't the greatest role model, there are worse. At least Barney wouldn't consider a tranquilizer gun as a baby-sitting tool!

Human Sciences students win awards

A scholarship and an internship were awarded to two Texas Tech College of Human Sciences students.

Laura Rush, a senior dietetics major from Little Rock, Ark., was awarded a scholarship by the Texas Dietetic Association Foundation for the fall 1995 semester. Thirteen students received scholarships out of 46 applicants.

The TDA will present Rush with the scholarship Friday in Houston at its annual meeting.

An internship with Textile

Clothing Technology Corporation was awarded to Theresa Alexander, a senior fashion design major from Lockhart.

Eight students from Canada and the United States are chosen to attend the internship in Cary, N.C., each year.

Internship students learn methods of manufacturing apparel and United States manufacturing improvement theories. TCTC is a conglomerate of different manufacturing companies and firms, Alexander said.

Miller Girls aid Oklahoma City bombing victims

By Angela Murray

The University Daily

The Texas Tech Miller Girls have challenged all Tech student organizations to donate money to aid the victims of the Oklahoma City car bombing.

"We are challenging all other student organizations to meet or exceed our $150 donation to the Victim's Aid Fund at the Lubbock chapter of the American Red Cross," said April Davis, a senior public relations major from San Antonio.

Miller Girls is a Tech service organization established on campus in 1977, Davis said.

"We are fulfilling our purpose as a service organization on campus by contributing our efforts to the victims in Oklahoma," she said. "The Miller Girls set up a fund with the Lubbock chapter of the American Red Cross, so that other organizations could make a donation."

Davis said she believes the Oklahoma City bombing victims will benefit from the challenge.

"Our goal is to try to get as many organizations as possible to contribute at least $150," she said. "The amount of money is not a huge amount, but if several organizations will participate, we can impact a city."

The Miller Girls contributed money to victims of the Lancaster tornado last year, she said.

"One of our members had family in Lancaster, and we saw this tragedy affected her family," Davis said. "We decided that the Oklahoma tragedy was worthy of our attention as well."

Jessica White, a sophomore political science major from Waco, said the Miller Girls voted unanimously to donate $150 to bombing victims Thursday.

"The Miller Girls want to support the victims in Oklahoma City, and one way we can do this is by donating money to help them until they can get back on their feet," White said.

Miller Girls members spend many of their weekends participating in various service projects throughout the Lubbock community, Davis said. The Oklahoma City donation is one way of reaching out past the community, she said.

"If we can't go to Oklahoma and help, we would like to send our money," White said.

Student organizations received letters in their boxes at the University Center Student Organization Service Office explaining the challenge Friday, Davis said. The fund, called the Texas Tech Oklahoma Aid Fund, has been established at the Lubbock American Red Cross Office at 2201 Avenue X. Organizations that need more information may contact the office at 765-8534.

Texas public education may need special session

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said Monday he's concerned that a special legislative session will be needed to complete work on a public education overhaul.

A plan to revamp education, including loosening state control over local school districts, passed the Senate and is pending in a House committee, which could vote as early as this week.

"I'm worried about a special session ... I'm just afraid that there will not be sufficient time before the end of the session to get an education bill. That's what I'm worried about," Bullock told The Associated Press.

House Public Education Committee Chairman Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, said he shares Bullock's concern, but that he's committed to completing work before the regular session ends May 29.

"I still think we can (finish the bill), but it's going to be tough," he said.

House Speaker Pete Laney, D-

Hale Center, says there's enough time left in the regular session to reach agreement.

"We are not going to have a special session. We don't even want to talk about a special session because there is not going to be one. We are going to do our best to finish our labors and go home," he said.

Sadler said he planned to review a draft of the education reform bill Monday evening to see whether it's in shape to be voted on by his committee this week.

"I am committed to do everything within my power to get it done within the regular session, but I am concerned about it," Sadler said. "I don't think we want to rush through and make mistakes just because we're in a hurry at the end."

Sadler said work may be required on a House committee proposal to raise teacher pay to ensure it isn't costly for local school districts.

Bullock noted that House rules limit consideration of bills during the last days of the regular session. The rules were changed last session to avoid a crunch of legislation that lawmakers don't have time to read.

The last date on which the full House can consider a bill that has already passed the Senate — such as the education overhaul bill — is May 23. Sadler said he expects his committee to vote out an education bill either this week or next week, and that it would be up for consideration by the full House in a week to 10 days after that.

Since the two chambers differ on such areas as how far to go in easing state regulations on local school districts, a House-Senate conference committee is expected to be needed to negotiate differences. The last day on which the House could adopt a conference committee report is May 28.

Gov. George W. Bush, whose agenda includes dramatic loosening of state control over education, said of the session's progress, "I'm happy. However, I will be more happy when there is an education bill that decontrols the school system."

Bush names new agency leaders

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush on Monday named a top aide, a former House speaker and a businesswoman to take over the troubled Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

He called it an agency "rocked by scandal."

If given expected Senate confirmation, the three will become the first conservators to take over a state government agency, Bush said.

"There's been bad misuse of taxpayers' money, and we won't tolerate that in this state," Bush said.

The governor said he expects the trio to "find out what's wrong, what needs to be done to clean it up — and we will do so in short order."

Conservatorship was recommended by legislative leaders after they determined that gross financial mismanagement was rampant at the drug and alcohol commission.

The recommendation came after audits and a Texas Rangers and agency investigation.

Moscow experiences strange weather

MOSCOW (AP) — Barbecue season has begun, bikinis are out in force and swimmers have started flocking to the Moscow River.

For the last week, a record-setting April warm spell has catapulted the Russian capital from the dregs of winter into what feels like summer. Every day has set a new record with temperatures Monday again reaching the mid-70s.

On Sunday, the Russian Orthodox Easter, Muscovites who a year ago were coping with ice and snow headed to parks, riverbanks and dachas in huge numbers. Smoke wafted into the sky from cookouts, and green grass began to overtake the city's dirt and grime.

"There's been no such weather in 120 years of scientific observation," Roman Vilfand of the Russian Hydrometeorological Center said Monday.

Many residents did not pack away their winter boots and fur hats. Snow in May is not unheard of in Moscow.

"This weather is typical of mid-July, the warmest time of year," Vilfand said. "It's going to change soon."

Senate tentatively approves amendment

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate has tentatively approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would do away with partisan election of state district judges and appeals court judges. The measure, requires another Senate vote before being sent to the House, which is working on its own judicial reform plan. House passage by a two-thirds margin would be required for the measure to be placed before voters.

Five Army crewmen die in helicopter crash during test flight

FLORENCE (AP) — Five crew members aboard an Army helicopter died Monday when the twin-rotor aircraft exploded during a routine testing flight, authorities and witnesses said.

"When we got to the scene, there was still debris falling from the air," said Steve Pruett, a homebuilder who was working nearby. He and Jeffrey Condon, a construction worker building the only home in the vicinity, said four men and one woman were killed. Condon said he checked for vital signs.

Brain bank lets researchers learn about Alzheimer's

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Marilyn Porter wanted to know more about the disease that stole her mother's mind.

So when her mother died in 1988 with Alzheimer's disease, Porter donated her brain to the brain bank at Sun Health Research Institute here.

"It was a finality to the disease for me," said Porter, who now leads an Alzheimer's support group.

"I wanted to know exactly what happened to her," Porter said, "and I knew that her tissue could possibly help someone else."

Brains donated to Sun Health are supplied to researchers at the institute and across the country who are trying to find causes and cures for Alzheimer's and other diseases.

Of the 30 brain banks in the United States, Sun Health's is the only one located in and funded primarily by a retirement community.

"I have always said if the cure for Alzheimer's disease can't be found in Sun City, it may very well be found in a Sun City," said Joseph Rogers, director of the institute.

"This is likely the world's most concentrated Alzheimer's population," he said.

Nationally, 4 million people now have Alzheimer's, a degenerative disease that attacks the brains of the elderly, causing confusion, emotional instability and progressive mental deterioration.

Of the 59,000 Arizonans with Alzheimer's, 32,000 live in Maricopa County, where Sun City is located.

Sun City and Sun City West, about 14 miles north of Phoenix, have a combined population of about 75,000.

The average age is 72. "The demographics here are just crying out to have this facility," said Rogers, who started the brain bank in 1987.

More than 300 people have donated their brains, and about 400 have signed up to have their brains given to the institute when they die.

Parts of 200 brains are stored in freezers at the facility.

Rose Ruth, a former hospital volunteer, said she and her brother discussed donating his brain to the center before he died of heart disease in January.

"A lot of my friends have Alzheimer's disease," said Ruth, who lives in Phoenix. "If no one donates brains, they're never going to find a cure."

While many of the donors had Alzheimer's, about one-third of the brains given to the bank are from people without a brain disease.

Donors' brains are removed within three hours of death at the adjacent Boswell Memorial Hospital.

They are cut into sections and paper-thin slices and sent out, sometimes immediately, to researchers who depend on getting the tissue as soon after death as possible.

The tissue is used by researchers at Sun Health studying Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, Huntington's and other diseases and by scientists across the country.

The tissue is essential to the search for an Alzheimer's cure, said Dr. Edward Bird, director of the McLean Hospital brain bank at Harvard Medical School.

"The disease can't be found in animal brains, so this is one case where animal research can't come forward with the answer," Bird said. "The brain tissue, both diseased and normal, is crucial."

It costs about $2,000 to process each brain, and the Sun City bank fills about 40 requests for tissue each year.

The volume of requests demonstrates the value of the center, said Dr. Allen Roses, who directs a brain bank at the Joseph and Kathleen Bryan Alzheimer's Disease Research Center at Duke University in Durham, N.C.

Brain banks that cannot provide tissue within hours after death are used less frequently, he said.

"You judge a brain bank by how much it is used," Roses said.

Rogers said he's disappointed that the bank at Sun Health has failed to win federal funding.

The research center also has raised about $100,000 in grants from foundations over the last two years.

"We aren't a medical school and we don't have a big name," Rogers said.

"But I think we still have one of the best brain banks in the country," he said.

Texas attorney general touts Charity Registration Bill

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 150 charities are supporting legislation that would require registration of charitable organizations and professional solicitors, Attorney General Dan Morales says.

Morales says the bill would allow the state to crack down on fraudulent charities and dishonest solicitors.

"The legitimate charities are supporting these bills, despite the inconvenience of additional paperwork, because they will be rewarded tenfold," Morales said Monday.

"Fraudulent charities are taking money that would otherwise go to the legitimate charities. The good and generous Texans who have given their hard-earned cash for purported worthy causes are discouraged from giving again when they discover they have been duped," he said.

The legislation would require charities and professional solicitors to provide the attorney general's office with information regarding the nature of their organization, the principals involved and financial records.

Morales said Texas is the only large state that lacks such registration.

Rep. Garnet Coleman, D-Houston, and Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, are sponsoring the bill in their respective chambers.

If the Legislature approves, consumers could contact the attorney general's office to determine if a charity or the professional solicitor were registered with the state, and obtain other important information about the organizations.

"By giving us the tools to fight charitable fraud, consumer confidence will be restored. They will be willing to donate again, knowing their money is going to a legitimate charity," Morales said.

Under the legislation, certain organizations such as churches, universities and nonprofit hospitals would be exempt from registration requirements.

Carl Gerstacker, former Dow chemical chairman, dies at 78

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — Carl Gerstacker, who rose from washing test tubes at Dow Chemical Co. to become its board chairman, died Sunday night of leukemia. He was 78.

"He had been battling leukemia for several years now," said Gerstacker's stepson, state Sen. Bill Schuette, R-Midland.

Gerstacker spent 44 years at Dow, from washing test tubes in 1938 to holding the position of chairman from 1960-76. He retired in 1981.

Dow chief executive officer Frank Popoff said Monday that Gerstacker was the financial brains of the company during a period of major growth.

He also was on the board of directors for Kmart Corp., Sara Lee Corp., Eaton Corp. and Chemical Financial Corp., and was on the Albion College board of trustees, Schuette said.

He is survived by his wife, Esther Schuette, son, Bill, and two daughters, Bette M. Gerstacker, of Honolulu, and Lisa G. Walsh of Boulder, Colo.; two stepdaughters, Sandra S. Joys, of Greenwich, Conn., and Gretchen S. Schuette, of Troutdale, Ore., and nine grandchildren.

Bill would outlaw tobacco products in state prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas Department of Criminal Justice policy prohibiting tobacco products in state prisons would become law under a bill given preliminary approval by the Texas House Monday.

The no-smoking provision was an amendment to a bill by Rep. Allen Hightower, D-Huntsville, aimed at revising the state's criminal justice system. The bill faces a final House vote before being sent to the Senate.

The legislation includes a hotly debated provision that would extend the deadline for the state's new system of jails for nonviolent offenders to be used as transfer facilities for violent convicts awaiting placement in state prisons.

Lawmakers rejected an amendment that would have allowed conjugal visits in prisons, and accepted an amendment allowing an inmate to be the hunted in an attack dog training exercise if there is consent.

The criminal justice board last November adopted a measure prohibiting tobacco products in prisons, recreation yards, parking lots and any other property owned or leased by the prison agency.

It is aimed primarily at cigarettes, but also applies to items such as chewing tobacco.

"Our taxpayers have built $1 billion worth of new prisons and inmates are spitting, chewing, smoking and lighting cigarettes," said Rep. Dianne Delisi, R-Temple, who sponsored the amendment to ban tobacco products in prisons.

"It's a safety problem. It's a health care problem, and our constituents want the costs inside the prison reduced."

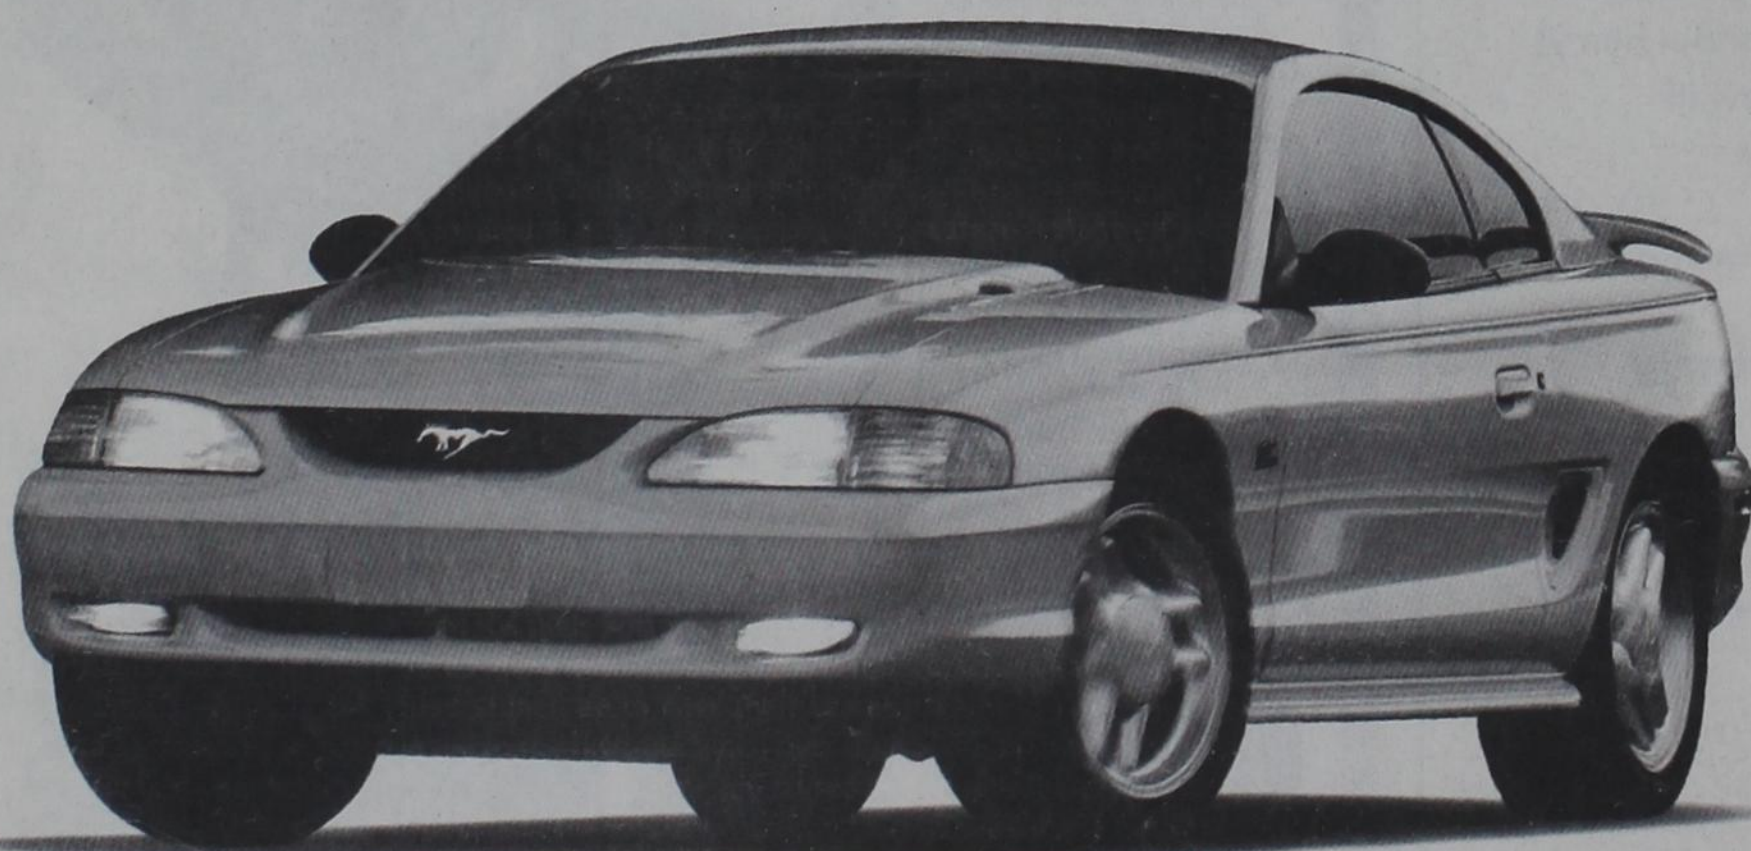

Delisi said it's unfair for the state's taxpayers to pay the health costs of tobacco-using prisoners.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, attempted to amend the bill to allow inmates to have private visits with their spouses.

"If you're going to take their cigarettes away, they are going to have to have something to have some semblance of a normal life," Wilson said.

Ingram captures country spotlight

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily

Radio-friendly music does not matter to country singer Jack Ingram, who says he only wants to be a crowd pleaser.

"I enjoy making music," Ingram said. "I don't write it to be radio music, I write it to be my music."

His music is what he said he does best, and Lubbock will have the chance to hear it at 9 p.m. Thursday at Lonesome Dove.

"The people who come to my shows are young," he said. "They're intelligent college people. I'd like to think they can identify with me because I'm writing about things they can understand."

Ingram, who grew up near Houston in The Woodlands, was inspired by old favorites like Jerry Jeff

Walker and Willie Nelson.

After a few years at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Ingram decided his music-listening days were over.

"I started playing while I was still at SMU with a bunch of time on my hands," he said. "I just picked up a guitar and started picking out a few songs."

After his first performance at Dallas' Adair's Saloon, Ingram said he knew the country music spotlight was where he wanted to be.

"I asked them if they would be kind enough to let me bring in my guitar and a few drunk friends, and hand out my music," he said.

"They, somewhat apprehensively, agreed."

Ingram left SMU with more than a singing career. He graduated with a degree in psychology.

"I'm not using that degree one bit," he said. "I wanted to have a degree though, because you never know what will happen."

For now country music is what Ingram said he wants to do.

"I figure if I can make a living at it and enjoy doing it at the same time, I'm in the right business," he said.

Lance Cowan, publicity coordinator at Vector/Side One, said he thinks Ingram will be doing much more than just making a living with his music.

"Jack is a young man with a lot of integrity and a great sound," Cowan said.

Love, human relationships focus of opera

By Tara McQueen

The University Daily

Audiences will have the opportunity to spend a day in the life of a young girl, who, on the eve of her high school graduation, discovers the world beyond her family farm in the opera "The Tender Land."

Aaron Copland's opera "The Tender Land" will be staged at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the University Center Allen Theatre.

Sheila Wolk, director of Tech Music Theatre and director of the opera, said the American opera takes place in the 1930s on a Midwest farm.

"It is the story of Laurie, who is about to graduate from high school," she said. "Two drifters come looking for work, and Laurie falls in love with one of them."

Wolk said she chose the opera because she loves the music and Copland, the composer.

'The Tender Land'

Jeremy Chesnutt: The University Daily

"Because he is an American composer and because the opera is in English, I thought it wouldn't be intimidating to audiences," she said. "The story takes place in the United States, and the subject matter is very realistic. People can relate to the human relationships and real-life kind of story."

Wolk said Tech audiences will enjoy the opera because it is realistic with conversational singing and an informal tone.

"It is a very real-life story," she said. "I hope people will want to see that."

Wolk selected her cast from the Music Theatre department.

"I chose a cast based on how much theatre experience they had, strong voices and their ability to be uninhibited on stage," she said.

Amanda Lamb, a music education major from Denton, portrays Laurie.

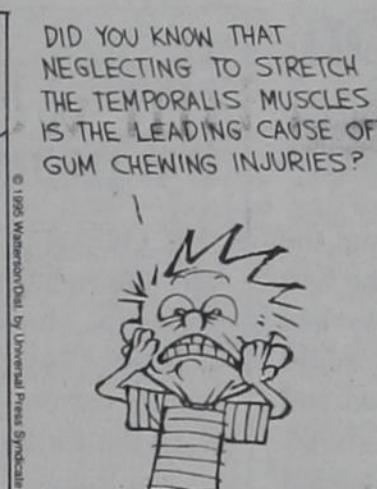

"Musically, this opera is harder because the music is harder, but the songs are easier to memorize because I understand English," Lamb said.

Lamb said she can easily relate to her character because her character is unsure about graduating from high school and unsure of what she wants to do after that.

"Everyone can relate to 'The Tender Land' opera because there is a character of every age in the production," she said.

Tickets cost $5 for Tech students and $8 for the general public and can be purchased at the University Center Ticket booth or by calling 742-3601.

Soap opera actors, producer issue bombing disclaimer

NEW YORK (AP) — The ugly reality of the Oklahoma City bombing prompted an apologetic disclaimer Monday from ABC's "All My Children," a soap opera in which a character has been plotting to bomb a wedding.

In ABC's top-rated daytime drama, the character Janet Green (played by Robin Mattson) plots to build a bomb and plant it at the wedding of Trevor and Lauren (James Kiberd and Felicity LaFortune).

The demented Janet believes she will regain custody of her infant daughter, Amanda, by destroying the couple at their wedding next month.

"Unfortunately, these scenes were taped weeks ago and began airing this week," said ABC publicist Sally Schoenbaum. "Today we showed Janet fumbling with the bomb, discovering she really doesn't know how to build a bomb."

Although wild plot turns are common during the May ratings sweeps when networks are trying to boost affiliate advertising rates, this coincidence was too painful to go unnoticed.

The show's actors and producers met and decided to air a taped statement at the top of Monday's show and before every episode that deals with the wedding bomb. The actress who plays Janet addresses the home audience directly:

"Hello, I'm Robin Mattson, the actress who plays Janet on 'All My Children,'" she said. "All of us were horrified by and deplore the violence in Oklahoma City that took so many innocent lives. Violence is never, never a way of settling differences in a civilized society."

"Today's episode, in which Janet uses a bomb, was taped long before the tragic occurrence in Oklahoma City," the actress said. "We regret this coincidence and are certain that your concerns about the story will be allayed when you see the outcome."

"All My Children" also shot a new scene to insert into the serial: "There will be a scene ... that includes newspapers with Oklahoma City reports in them, and the reports will affect Janet," Schoenbaum said.

Big Bird attacked, beaten by youths

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — A man who dressed as Big Bird for a 4-year-old's birthday party was beaten by six youths with a bat just after he left, an attack videotaped by the child's family, police said Sunday.

Wayne Quinn, 26, was taken to the hospital with badly bruised ribs and large bruises on his head and arms.

The youths, ages 16 to 20, had yelled obscenities at Quinn as he arrived dressed as the "Sesame Street" character at a house in this Boston suburb, Sgt. Karen MacAleese said.

When Quinn left, he changed out of the suit in a van and approached the youths, who were hanging out across the street from the house.

"I went over to ... ask them to knock it off with the language because of the kids," said Quinn, who was hired for the party. "They were looking for a fight."

He was punched, kicked and hit with a baseball bat.

Lady Raiders honor graduating seniors

By Bryan Adams
The University Daily

Tonight's Texas Tech Lady Raiders appreciation night will honor the graduating seniors of the women's basketball team and the Texas Tech fans.

The event will begin at 7 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium and the tickets cost $5 per person.

"The night is a good way to recognize our kids and thank our fans," Tech coach Marsha Sharp said. "We'll honor a few people, give out awards and have a high-light film."

Tickets will be on sale at the Tech ticket office until 5 p.m. and at the Auditorium Box Office beginning at 6 p.m.

Coupons for purchasing the 1994-95 highlight reel produced by Ogletree Productions will be made available. The night's festivities also will include KLBK-TV sports director John Appicello serving as master of ceremonies. Appicello, host of the Marsha Sharp show, will introduce the players and coaches as well as give a brief overview of the season.

Lady Raiders

What: Lady Raider Appreciation

When: 7 p.m. today

Where: auditorium of Lubbock Municipal Coliseum

Cost: $5 a person

• Tickets on sale at Tech ticket office until 5 p.m. and at auditorium beginning 6 p.m.

"This year we decided, instead of a banquet, to have it like this," Sharp said. "Hopefully, more people are able to come because it costs less. The auditorium can certainly hold a lot more people."

Sharp will present awards to players for Fighting Heart, Most Valuable Player and the Jeannine McHaney award.

The Lady Raiders advanced to the Elite Eight in the NCAA tournament this past season and finished the season with a 33-4 record.

The graduating seniors for the Lady

Raiders include guard Noel Johnson, guard Nikki Heath, forward Tabitha Truesdale and forward Connie Robinson. The class of 1995's record of 119-17 is the best in Tech history.

"I'm looking forward to it," Johnson said.

"For me and the rest of the seniors, it's a farewell goodbye to the fans. Four years is very hard to sum up in just a few sentences. With all my experiences here at Tech, I could write a book. There's been some good and bad experiences, and I'll certainly remember the good ones. If you get anything out of four years of basketball, it's friendship. I'm sure we'll (players and coaches) be friends for a long time."

Following the festivities the players and coaches will be available for autographs and photos. Fans are requested to bring only one item to autograph.

"I think the way they're doing it this year is great," Johnson said about the appreciation night as opposed to a banquet. "It's informal, there can be a lot more people, and the fans have easy access."

Men's tennis team loses to A&M

Team expected to improve, possibly be top-20 team next season

By Jared Parcell
The University Daily

COLLEGE STATION — The Texas Tech men's tennis team's bid for an NCAA Regional berth came up short as it fell to the Texas A&M Aggies 4-0 Friday in the Southwest Conference Championships.

Tech Coach Tim Siegel said the Red Raiders could have made the final score closer, but since the Aggies held a 4-0 lead, the match was called.

"We had two match points of 3-2 in doubles competition," Siegel said.

"(Senior) Clint Graf and (freshman) Tylir Jimenez were both leading in the third set, so the final score could have been 4-3.

"Texas A&M played well and deserved to win," Siegel said. "We gave a great effort, though."

Siegel said the team has a bright future ahead of them, despite finishing at 11-12 overall and 1-6 in SWC action.

"Just wait until next year," he said. "We should be one of the favorites to win the conference if everybody returning works hard over the summer. I have nothing but praise for these guys, and they should hold their heads up high. We will be a force next year, even a top-20 team."

The team is losing its two co-captains, Graf and senior Erick Guzman next season, but Graf said the team should be improved next year.

"The team next year will be better than we were this year," Graf said.

"It was disappointing not to play on a team that went to an NCAA Regional. Next year's team has a chance to win the conference and go to the regionals," he said.

"I played four years here and got to know a lot of guys," Graf said. "When I graduate, I will teach tennis."

Tech lacrosse team finishes second

Texas Tech's men's lacrosse team came up short as it finished second in the Southwest Lacrosse Association Tournament following a loss to Texas Sunday 12-10.

This weekend marked Tech's first time to host the SWLA Championship. Going into the tournament, Tech was seeded No. 1 and beat No. 4 seed Texas A&M Saturday 7-5 for the first time in six years.

The second-seeded Texas Longhorns beat No. 3 seed Baylor 11-7 to advance to the finals.

"They made some quick scores at the end and just took it away from us," Rec Sports Director Pee Wee Roberson said. "The balls just fell for Texas."

Tech defenseman Mark

Sam W. Magee: The University Daily

Gooooaaal: Nick Marrazza, a member of the Texas Tech men's lacrosse team, celebrates a goal against Texas in their championship game Sunday. Tech lost 12-10.

Grover was named most valuable defensive player of the tournament. Roberson said Tech has been trying to bring the tournament to Lubbock for a long time.

Last year the tournament was held in Houston and Tech finished third.

Strawberry sentenced to confinement

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Darryl Strawberry got off easy Monday at his sentencing for federal tax evasion, drawing six months of home confinement instead of the three months in prison he had agreed to in a plea bargain.

Strawberry was not fined but must pay about $350,000 in back taxes, interest and penalties.

He is allowed to play baseball, including traveling to road games and practices, while serving his sentence.

"I'm very pleased. It's a blessed day for me and my family," Strawberry said. "I'm very grateful things turned out the way they did."

The sentence was unexpectedly light. Strawberry had already agreed to serve three months in prison, and his lawyers asked he be allowed to serve it near his home in Rancho Mirage, Calif. But U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker Jr. exercised his right to disregard the plea agreement and determine the penalty on his own.

"We are disappointed that the judge did not impose the agreed upon sentence," U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White said.

"Prison sentences are appropriate for violators of the tax laws in order to deter others from attempting not to pay their fair share of taxes."

Parker also sentenced Strawberry to three years' probation, 100 hours of community service and mandatory drug abuse counseling.

He said probation officials in California will set the date for the start of Strawberry's home detention. He will not be required to wear an electronic monitoring device.

Strawberry is not eligible to play in the majors until June 24.

He was suspended for the first 60 days of the season on Feb. 6 after testing positive for cocaine. The San Francisco Giants then released him.

He pleaded guilty Feb. 9 to one felony count of tax evasion for failing to report thousands of dollars of income — usually in bundles of cash — he got at autograph signing shows in the late 1980s. Taxes on that money would have been $101,000.

Contrary to reports last week, Strawberry has not agreed to cooperate with prosecutors investigating other baseball players for under-reporting income from card shows, his attorneys said.

The former All-Star addressed the judge for about three minutes before the sentence was announced.

"I apologize for the mess I've caused myself, my fans, friends and family," he said. "At some particular moments I felt it wasn't worth it to be here living."

NBA's second-worst record.

"The game served its purpose," said Spurs coach Bob Hill. "Nobody got hurt and we won. It was all good news. It's time to move on to the second season."

The Spurs used Sunday's game to work on moves they expect to use in the playoffs.

"We worked on the double (team) on the low post, on some traps. We're not a double-teaming team, but there'll be some spots for it in the playoffs," Hill said.

David Robinson, who had planned to stay home and rest his sore left foot, traveled to Minnesota at the behest of the league. He scored 13 points in limited playing time.

New conference to begin basketball play this season

CHICAGO (AP) — Conference USA, a new 12-school league made up mostly of teams from the Great Midwest and Metro conferences, will begin basketball competition this season, its organizers said Monday.

Alabama-Birmingham, Cincinnati, DePaul, Marquette, Memphis and St. Louis from the Great Midwest will join Louisville, North Carolina-Charlotte, Southern Mississippi, South Florida and Tulane of the Metro in a league that will have championships in 18 sports.

Houston of the Southwest Conference will began participation in 1996, the first year six football playing members (Houston, Cincinnati, Louisville, Memphis, Southern Mississippi and Tulane) will compete for a championship.

Men's basketball will be divided into three divisions — Red, White and Blue. The first conference tournament will be held at the end of next season in Memphis, followed in 1997 by Louisville. The new league will not receive an automatic NCAA tournament bid until 1997.

Monday's announcement at a downtown Chicago restaurant — the league's headquarters will be in Chicago for the first year — culminated nine months of planning, officials said. The league will officially begin operations July 1, the day after the Great Midwest and Metro are officially dissolved.

"Some schools are public, some are private, there are different sizes," said Dr. V. Lane Rawlins, president of the University of Memphis and the conference chairman of the board. "There are different processes and some of the difficulties were how we would finance it. Strangely enough we didn't have much conflict on the name. We looked at several thousand names and finally picked one."

The league presidents also picked a new commissioner — Michael Slive, who held the same post with the Great Midwest the last four years. One of the first major business considerations was to secure television contracts for basketball and football. The conference has a six-year agreement with ESPN to do basketball, including a game of the week. Liberty Sports Inc. and the conference have agreed on a five-year football package. Slive said revenue from the two packages will exceed $30 million.

The basketball programs will be the financial foundation of the league in its first years.

"There is no question about the quality of basketball. After the first year we will be known. If we had been together this year we would have had six teams from men and six from women's in the NCAA tournament. By developing that kind of recognition and strength we will help promote and build our football program. Just like the Big East."

Schools will play a 14-game conference basketball schedule once Houston joins the league. UAB, Tulane, South Florida and Southern Mississippi will be in the Red Division; Houston, Louisville, Memphis and North Carolina-Charlotte in the White; and Cincinnati, DePaul, Marquette and St. Louis in the Blue.

Spurs prepare for playoff game by practicing at Kerrville camp

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs are preparing for Monday playoffs the same way they got ready for the regular season — by heading to Kerrville for basketball camp.

The Spurs planned to practice at Schreiner College about 60 miles away in Kerrville through Wednesday before returning to San Antonio to face the Denver Nuggets on Friday in a first-round, best-of-5 playoffs series. San Antonio completed the regular season Sunday in Minnesota with a 97-91 victory over the struggling Timberwolves, who finished tied with Washington for the NBA's second-worst record.

"The game served its purpose," said Spurs coach Bob Hill. "Nobody got hurt and we won. It was all good news. It's time to move on to the second season."

The Spurs used Sunday's game to work on moves they expect to use in the playoffs.

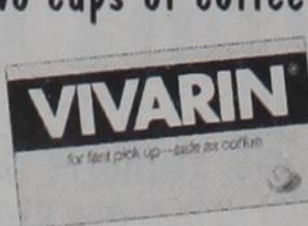

"We worked on the double (team) on the low post, on some traps. We're not a double-teaming team, but there'll be some spots for it in the playoffs," Hill said.

David Robinson, who had planned to stay home and rest his sore left foot, traveled to Minnesota at the behest of the league. He scored 13 points in limited playing time.

Women linksters claim third at SWC's

Kolb earns All-SWC honors with fifth place finish.

By Jared Parcell
The University Daily

After shooting a final-round 332 Sunday, the Texas Tech women's golf team could not overcome the Texas Longhorns or Texas A&M Aggies at the Southwest Conference Women's Golf Championships at the Bent Tree Country Club in Dallas.

Texas took home the team trophy, shooting a 951 in the three-day tournament, 40 strokes better than the Red Raiders. A&M finished four strokes behind the Longhorns, who had to hold off an Aggie charge.

Senior Stacey Kolb led Tech individually, earning All-SWC honors by finishing fifth with a 238 total. Aggie teammates Isabelle Rosberg and Jamie Hullett tied for the individual title, shooting a 230 for the tournament.

"I wish I could have played better," Kolb said. "I made a lot of friends while I was here. The difference between this year and last year was confidence. We probably didn't have as much confidence going into this tournament as we did last year because we had beaten Texas at LSU last year and A&M had been beating us this year."

Junior J.J. Rorie was second on the Tech team, shooting a 245. Tamara Parker and Kristin Kight shot three-day totals of 254 and Candy Merrill finished with a 263 total.

"We are both happy and disappointed about our performance," coach Jeff Mitchell said. "We played well, considering the conditions. I wish we could have competed better with Texas and Texas A&M. Stacey and J.J. both played well. Our three, four and five golfers need to keep us in contention at any point in time. It hasn't been a bad spring, though."

With the weekend win, Texas has now captured three SWC titles in a row and eight of the past nine. Both Texas and Texas A&M have received bids to the NCAA Regional Tournament.

Tech could receive an at-large bid prior to the May 11-13 tournament in Tucson, Ariz.

"Jeff (Mitchell) said Sunday there was a 50-50 chance we could get in," Kolb said. "Waiting is the hardest part. Head-to-head competition, stroke average and strength of schedule are the determining factors of getting in."

Atlanta coach chosen to lead Dream Team III

ATLANTA (AP) — Lenny Wilkens wasn't invited to try out for the Olympics in 1960. On Monday, he was invited to coach the team at the 1996 Atlanta Games.

The announcement, rumored for months, came at the end of an NBA regular-season in which Wilkens moved ahead of Red Auerbach to the top of the NBA list for coaching victories.

"I do look forward to participating in this huge event," the Atlanta Hawks coach said. "Certainly, being an assistant coach on the 1992 team whetted my appetite to do it. It's just a tremendous honor."

USA Basketball president C.M. Newton said three assistant coaches will be chosen in June — one from the NBA and two from college — and the first group of players will be picked in late July or early August.

The 57-year-old Wilkens recalled the end of his college career with the Friars when he was the MVP in the NIT, but wasn't invited to try out for the Olympic team.

"It was a big disappointment at the time," he said. "Every youngster in college would have loved to be on the Olympic team. I never thought much about it later."

Wilkens will have input in completing his staff and selecting the players for the '96 Games, but Newton said the same committee that picked Wilkens — the USA Basketball men's senior national team committee — will make the final determination.

"We're committed to selecting the best team," Newton said. "It probably will be all NBA players, but it will truly be open to every player in the nation."

Magic Johnson, the former NBA star who played on the 1992 gold medal team after revealing he had HIV, the virus that causes

AIDS, has said he would like to be on the 1996 team as well.

"I think it's great that you see players want to be a part of this," Wilkens said. "It will be a decision made by the U.S. Olympic Committee."

Wilkens said he won't change his coaching style, one that teaches defense first.

"Any team that I coach will understand defense," he said. "Great athletes can do whatever they want to do."

Wilkens recalled having coached five NBA all-star teams. He said he enjoyed all but one.

"One year I wasn't happy," he said.

"The players wanted to entertain rather than compete. It's not 'Entertainment Tonight.' It's competition."

This year, Wilkens surpassed Auerbach's 938 victories to become the winningest coach in NBA history, with a 968-814 record.

During 15 years as an NBA player and 22 seasons as an NBA coach or player-coach, Wilkens has been involved in more than 3,000 games — more than anyone else.

He was the assistant to Chuck Daly at the 1992 Games when NBA players first began representing the U.S. in international competition.

That came on the heels of the 1988 Games in South Korea when the U.S. failed to get to the gold medal game for the first time, having to settle for a bronze.

Wilkens said he knows the competition at the 1996 Games will be better than it was in Barcelona. And he knows the pressure will be there to win the gold.

"There's no question when you put together a team of this caliber everybody expects you to win, and you're playing at home, too," he said.

Wright inks deal with New England

Texas Tech's Byron Wright signed a free-agent deal with the New England Patriots Monday. Terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Wright, a 6-4, 245-pound defensive end from Wichita Falls, gained experience at both end spots while at Tech.

Wright

He won the starting left end job at the end of the 1993 season. In 1994, Wright was sixth on the team in tackles with 45 and led the team in sacks with 3.5. He was third in quarterback pressures with six.

Wright was part of a defense that was ranked second in the nation against the pass before the team's trip to the Cotton Bowl where it played USC.

The team's defense ended the season ranked 22nd against both the run and the pass combined.

Baseball team drops in rankings

Despite a 4-2 week in which the Texas Tech baseball team split a four-game series with nationally ranked Texas A&M in College Station, the team dropped in two of the baseball polls released Monday.

The Red Raiders dropped eight spots to No. 16 in the Collegiate Baseball poll.

Tech also dropped in the USA Today/Baseball Weekly poll, moving down one spot, to the ninth position.

Baseball America voters decided the Red Raiders were not hurt because of the split, keeping them ranked at No. 8.

Tech, 39-10 overall and 10-7 in Southwest Conference action, a game and a half behind Texas A&M (12-6) and Rice (12-6) in the conference race, will play host to the nationally ranked Owls in a three-game series this weekend at Dan Law Field.

Williams not repeat of Lassic

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A running back from Alabama gets drafted by the Dallas Cowboys to give relief to overloaded All-Pro Emmitt Smith.

Sounds familiar.

The Cowboys have tried it before and they tried it again when they picked Sherman Williams in the second round of the NFL draft.

Williams, a workhorse himself who helped lead Alabama to a 12-1 record last season, figures to give some much-needed relief to Smith, who has played through hamstring and shoulder injuries the last two seasons.

"We had the luxury to for the first time address a backup to Emmitt Smith with a top pick," said Cowboys owner Jerry Jones. "We got somebody that gives this team a chance to go on and play for a Super Bowl if we should lose Emmitt."

The Cowboys have been here before. In the fourth round of the 1993 draft, they chose former Alabama running back Derrick Lassic, the MVP in the Sugar Bowl in leading the Crimson Tide to the 1992 national title.

Lassic started his first three NFL games during Smith's holdout, but now fades out of the picture with Williams on the scene.

Williams, like Smith, can handle a lot of carries. He led the Southeastern Conference in rushing for most of last season and accounted for nearly half the Crimson Tide's offense.

Williams and quarterback Jay Barker, a fifth-round pick of Green Bay, accounted for nearly all of Alabama's scoring.

It almost didn't happen this way for Williams, sent home from the all-important NFL combine in Indianapolis in February when doctors detected an enlarged heart. Williams was later examined and cleared to play when doctors said it was just an athletic heart, brought on by intense training and not thought to be harmful.

Gerald Pohost, head of the cardiology department at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, said in some cases it is hard to pinpoint whether an enlarged heart is due to exercise or disease.

"It is a big problem in cardiology because it is difficult to determine what the line is between what's normal and abnormal," he said. "There's a gray zone."

Williams didn't want to talk about his heart, but his agent said there was no risk involved.

"No one wants him to go out there and risk himself in any way shape or form," said Gregory Samms of Miami. "We wouldn't even consider him playing if there was a problem."

Sports Fact: Sunday's win by Ford driver Rusty Wallace at the shortened Hanes 500 broke a seven-race win streak for the Chevrolet Monte Carlo in 1995.
