U.S. envoy says Serbs ready to negotiate

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — The U.S. diplomat trying to sell Washington's peace plan for Bosnia spoke Thursday of progress in his talks, yet warned against letting expectations get too high.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke was in the Croatian capital to brief Croatian and Bosnian government officials on his talks with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the regional power broker who is key to any peace deal.

Those talks were followed by the announcement that the Bosnian Serbs and Serbian officials, led by Milosevic, would form a joint negotiating team in future peace talks.

Holbrooke spoke to reporters before NATO jets struck at Bosnian Serb targets for a second day.

He said the planned formation of a joint negotiating team "constitutes a procedural breakthrough, but only a procedural one," and he acknowledged that "tough negotiations lie ahead."

But it did end the more than year-long argument "concerning who would speak for the Bosnian Serbs and ... we can begin serious negotiations."

Holbrooke said.

Milosevic and his onetime protegee, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, have been feuding for more than a year over when and how to end the Bosnian war, fanned by Milosevic's nationalist rhetoric and dream of a "Greater Serbia."

Milosevic is now desperate to have the United Nations lift sanctions imposed three years ago to punish Serb-dominated Yugoslavia for inciting the war and wants the Bosnian Serbs to acquiesce to terms they abhor.

Holbrooke briefed Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey on his meeting with Milosevic before returning to Serbia later Thursday for more consultations.

"The actual substance of the negotiations remains extremely difficult: the map, the arrangements and so on. And you don't want to create any false optimism," Holbrooke told Associated Press Television in Zagreb. "But it is certainly true that after 16 months of arguing about who speaks for the Serbs, that issue has been resolved and the decks are now cleared for serious negotiations."

Milosevic said after Wednesday's talks that the U.S. plan "creates a real perspective for peace, and has all elements that could guarantee peace."

Native Bosnian wants arms embargo to end

by Donald Gillilan
The University Daily

Even with the NATO airstrike, and the negotiated peace talks, a native Bosnian continues to plead for the United States to end the arms embargo against his country.

In August the U.S. Congress ruled it will keep the arms embargo against Bosnia.

Wednesday, NATO bombers blasted the Serbs for shelling against Bosnia, which killed 37 people. The airstrike has led the Serbs to agree to peace talks with the Bosnians.

"The Bosnian government is willing to fight the war on their own," said Eck Spahich, who now resides in Borger. "All that they want is for the Americans to lift the arms embargo."

Bosnians have the man power to protect themselves if they are given the opportunity to obtain some sophisticated weapons, Spahich said.

"(Rep. Larry) Combest (R-Lubbock) will send American troops, if there is oil and gas involved," Spahich said. "But he will not send troops when there is no oil or gas involved."

Spahich has an uncle, aunt and 35 cousins still living in Bosnia, and they have been fighting back against the Serbs for four years, he said.

"I told Combest that people are getting killed over there," he said. "I asked Combest what will it take to change his mind to lift the embargo. Combest said he didn't want to send American boys over there."

Keith Williams, Combest's press secretary, said everyone has to consider some important questions that will arise if the United States lifts the embargo against Bosnia.

Combest does not doubt the motives of those who support this action, but he thinks it is important that some questions be answered during debate on the floor of the U.S. House, he said.

"Who provides the arms? What happens to the Americans that are training and delivering those arms?" Combest said. "There are too many unanswered questions, even before we consider the possibility of engaging Americans on the soil in Bosnia."

All questions concerning Bosnia must be answered, and all of the contingencies must be contemplated and alternatives planned, Combest said.

Several years ago, Congress voted to authorize the use of force and military action in the Persian Gulf, he said.

"At that time I had a son who wore a Marine uniform to work every day, and there was a great probability that he would go to the gulf, Combest said. "I would not vote to send my son to Bosnia, and I will not vote to send yours."

However, Neale Pearson, a Tech political science professor, said if Serbs overstep the boundaries the United Nations established, there will be military retaliation.

"NATO has to have credible force if their sanctions are to be believable," Pearson said.

Department adheres to waste guidelines

by Kirk Baird

The University Daily
Texas Tech sent a list of corrections and planned modifications to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission Thursday, regarding six separate violations relating to hazardous waste.

Tech recently was cited by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission for the six violations, including failure to properly label hazardous waste.

The violations, which both TNRCC and Tech officials said were minor and posed no health risks, occurred July 3, during a TNRCC inspection of the Tech campus.

Randy Ammons, TNRCC waste program manager, said Tech had 120 days to correct any violations, and had to notify his office of any planned or ongoing changes by Aug. 30.

Stephen Belyea, director of Tech's environmental health and safety, said some of the violations have been taken care of.

Randy Nix, manager of Tech's occupational safety, said of the six violations, four were paperwork related.

"The majority of their visit is actually a document review," Nix said.

"They look at all the paperwork associated with our waste handling and review it for completeness and correctness and things of that nature."

Belyea said he thought the violations were fairly common, and all very easy to resolve over time.

"The previous director was still listed on the paperwork as the contact person, so we had to change that because he had retired."

Nix said one violation resulted from the TNRCC inspection of a Tech research laboratory.

He said people had left the caps off some waste container bottles while they were working.

As the workers got waste from their procedures, they would take the waste to the bottles and pour it through a funnel into the bottle, he said.

"By the rules, you cannot do that," Nix said.

"You must have the cap on the bottle unless you are standing there pouring something into it."

Nix said the other part of this violation occurred because a container

Investigator questions suspects in Lee case

by Tara McQueen

The University Daily

A Dallas County detective has eliminated almost half the names on his list of possible suspects in the grave robbing of Texas Tech student Melinda Lee.

Dallas County Detective Bob Veatch said he's been able to gain information and eliminate potential suspects since arriving in Lubbock Monday.

"I'm primarily interested in what they can tell me about Melinda," Veatch said. "They are not necessarily all students."

Veatch said he has gone through more than 100 names and uncovered 12 first names of men Melinda knew from Lubbock.

"Melinda kept a calendar/diary with each month and day," Veatch said. "She wrote what she did or was going to do. We are still trying to contact various men she had contact with."

Veatch said she wrote some names several times and others only once or twice.

"Any young man who went on a date or knew Melinda quite well needs to contact me or Detective Watson," Veatch said.

"They might be one of the names we need to eliminate. Sooner or later we are liable to make contact, so if they contact us it would make it a lot easier."

Lee, a junior marketing major from Dallas, was injured when a drunk driver hit the car she was riding in on the night of Oct. 14. She spent 54 days in intensive care before her death.

Lee was buried Dec. 10, in an unmarked grave at Restland Memorial Park near Dallas.

Her body was unearched and stolen sometime during the night of Dec. 13.

Three days later, a newspaper carrier found Lee's body along a secluded Dallas road.

A plastic bag was laid over her head to protect it from the rain.

Lubbock County Investigator Tom Watson said the suspect knew Melinda or had feelings for her since so much respect was shown for the body.

Veatch said cult and gang activity have been ruled out as possibilities since Melinda's body was not harmed.

Veatch, who has worked solely on this case for nine months, said an individual took the body.

"Since there is an $11,000 reward, by now someone would be talking,"

Veatch said.

"It may have been a person who was too timid to ask Melinda out or he could have been obsessed with her. Someone may have seen someone watching Melinda—this is the kind of information we are still looking for."

Veatch said Lee was definitely targeted.

"Why is she the only one who has been dug up in years and no one has been dug up since?" he asked. "There are between eight and 15 burials a day at Restland. There are several entrance ways and the suspect drove over a two and half-foot high fence to get to the unmarked grave."

Veatch said the suspect must have followed the family from the funeral.

"She was targeted because there were other fresh graves around hers," he added.

Parking Problems

Tech officials need to install alternate policy

It just isn't fair and there isn't a thing the Office of Traffic and Parking will do about it for another two to three weeks.

Yep, parking problems — and probably more than half of the Texas Tech student population has dealt with them since Monday.

Students without proper stickers on their vehicles are parking wherever they please — in residence hall parking lots and commuter lots, where they don't belong. Those students who did pay their $56 or $39 for their campus spot are left high and dry — pushed out by their fellow students who were too cheap to buy their sticker before the first day of school.

Gail Wolfe, director of the Office of Traffic and Parking, said there are a number of students at the beginning of each school year who do not buy their parking stickers on time.

The office will give students living in residence halls a few more days to purchase a sticker and commuter students another week before they start ticketing and towing vehicles. OK, that makes sense. Boot their butts out of there now!

Returning students generally have an idea about when and where they can park on campus. They know the best time of year to purchase a sticker for the fall semester is in the spring of the previous school year — before all of the spots are sold. First-year students receive a packet in the mail and something in their residence hall mailboxes about parking.

It's just so easy for every Tech student to do the logical thing. But it seems even easier for a large portion of students to ignore what's right and infringe on the property of others. Students who paid, well in advance, for a parking spot deserve one fair and square. And those same students shouldn't be told they have to park in a commuter parking lot in the middle of the night or park somewhere five miles from campus because someone else stole their spot.

Tech officials should develop some kind of priority system, in which upperclassmen will be allowed to be buy their fall parking sticker on one day in the spring, followed by underclassmen the following day.

And the Office of Traffic and Parking should start ticketing and towing from day one. It's the only fair way.

UD photos not a representation of real life

MICHELLE ELIZARDO

UD staff reporter

As you are scanning the pages of The UD, there's a little tidbit about The UD staff that every reader should know.

The mugshots that grace the pages of The UD really don't look like most of us. I think it has something to do with the ink.

If a reader were to come up to the newsroom, there would be a wave of shock and relief in that we really don't look like our mugs.

Why don't any forms of identification, newspaper mugs, driver's license or passport photos, ever look decent?

Let me say this first, I don't believe it's the photographer in this case. The camera mysteriously knows that this will be a photo to identify the person, and it just doesn't look good.

I truly believe not even the best photographer in the world can make anyone's mugshot look like the person or sometimes even decent.

Going into my third year at The UD, I can say I have never seen a mug of myself that closely resembles me.

I may just look dandy in those yearly Christmas photos but get me near a place where a photo would have to identify me and I'm shot.

My first year at The UD, my hair looked like a flashback from the '80s

I truly believe not even the best photographer in the world can make anyone's mugshot look decent.

— like a leader of a rock 'n' roll band. It was everywhere.

Yuck.

The second semester, in an attempt to change the old mug, I looked like I had no hair because it was plastered to my head — too much mousse.

Last school year I quit looking at my mug. It saved me a lot of stress and grief. The UD mugs are only the beginning. Having retail experience, I have seen other forms of identification, and I have never seen a mug that looks like the person and or looks decent. I fully and completely support the notion of submitting Olan Mills photographs to the Department of Public Safety.

If you have a bad photograph you can hide it in your closet, but these things you can't.

The DPS can even make people who "photograph well" look like they're having a bad hair day.

But nothing can compare to having your eyes closed on your license though.

Passport photos are even worse. I look nothing like my passport photo. I was truly overcome with fear that I wouldn't be able to get back into the country because I don't look like my mug.

It is bad enough you have to show this piece of plastic to everyone in order to identify yourself, why do they look so different or so tacky?

At least we will always have our Social Security numbers to go by; those will never look different or ugly.

So the next time you see a mug of a UDer, you will know we really don't look like that in real life.

Kevorkian not to blame for personal euthanasia choices

CHRIS WALTERS

UD guest columnist

The murder charges against Dr. Jack Kevorkian were dropped Wednesday, but he's still being tried for assisting the suicides of two women who chose to die in 1991 and asked for his help.

Dr. Kevorkian, popularly referred to in the media as "Dr. Death" (as if he's the arch-nemesis of a comic book superhero), has been assisting with such suicides for years now. It seems his name constantly resurfaces in news reports about the legal and ethical problems of such acts of euthanasia.

I'm still a little confused about why so many people object to the idea of someone who is terminally ill choosing to die.

I guess there are those who would argue that the quantity of life is more important than the quality of it. But who cares if modern science can keep a person alive, if that person is in complete misery?

To argue that only a god or "the natural process" has the authority to end our lives is absurd. Quite often, the only reason the people Dr. Kevorkian helps are still around is because of developments in medicine that have supplanted any "natural" processes in the first place.

I think the idea that our lives are not ours to control, or that we exist only to serve a mysterious, unseen force, is medieval. We may not be able to choose whether or not we develop cancer or multiple sclerosis (at least not yet), but in a very real sense we can choose when we want to die from it.

But many people seem to feel that it's their duty to butt in on such a personal choice. Making suicide illegal is a pretty ineffective course of action. I mean, if I really wanted to end my life, I wouldn't exactly consider myself hindered by such laws. What would the officials do? Lock my corpse up in a cell? Handcuff me to the coffin? Fine me?

Lawmakers and lawyers are finally figuring this out, because now they're trying to fine and/or imprison whoever is left around after a suicide. Hence the recurring prosecutions against Dr. Kevorkian.

Those the doctor helped to die were adults. They had every right to make their own decisions about their lives. Unlike the abortion debate, where there is the very real issue of how (or whether) to give a voice to those who cannot defend themselves, these adults did have voices. They exercised their rights.

If you, or I, or a state official, or a priest, or a close relation of the deceased do not agree with that choice, too bad. Hey, that's what personal freedom is all about.

I suppose it will be a while before we learn how to protect the rights of those who wish to end what they consider unendurable suffering, instead of protecting them from themselves for the sake of our own personal beliefs.

In Oregon, voters approved a law last November that allowed doctors to administer lethal doses of medication for dying patients who want to die sooner. A U.S. District judge struck the law down last month, saying it was "unconstitutional." How can a law guaranteeing terminally ill patients the right to die peacefully be unconstitutional?

It's not like they die by throwing themselves in front of traffic, or leaping from the roof of a crowded hotel. Unlike these less heroically-motivated attempts, no one else is put into danger. Small children aren't subjected to the sight of a body. Tax money is not used to dredge cars up from the depths of rivers. Medicare won't pay for euthanasia.

Assisted suicide is not mandatory. No one is forced to live with whatever guilt (real or theorized) that may come from helping someone else to die. No one except Jack Kevorkian, who seems willing to risk the consequences. I hope the legal system is sane enough to guarantee this freedom to him, and to anyone who comes to him for help.

Chris Walters is a senior sociology and English major from Lubbock.

Scholarships help ease students' financial burdens

by Michelle Elizardo

The University Daily

A college scholarship is the last thing Texas Tech student Karen Byers thought she would receive from her late great-grandfather.

Byers is the recipient of the LaVerne Noyes Scholarship, a scholarship awarded to descendants of World War I veterans.

"I had seen it (the scholarship) before," Byers said.

"I thought about applying for it, and now I'm glad that I applied."

Byers, also the recipient of the Kirkpatrick Family scholarship, is among the hundreds of students attending Tech on a scholarship.

"It makes me appreciate my education a lot more, and it makes me strive to do my best," she said.

Byers said her scholarships are a driving force to make her excel.

"Earning a scholarship makes me feel like I need to maintain good grades," she said.

Many students said even though it does take time to fill out an application, it is definitely worthwhile.

"You never know until you try," Byers said.

"You don't lose anything by applying at all."

In 1989, the year President Robert

Lawless became president of the university, Tech offered two presidential scholarships, said Jim Brunjes, vice president for administration.

Today, the school welcomes 153 presidential scholars, Brunjes said.

He added that in 1989, seven presidential scholarships were awarded to students.

Now, 302 such scholarships are available for students who apply and qualify.

Brenda Lauterbach, a senior agronomy major from Canyon, has been awarded presidential and dean's scholarships since she was a freshman.

Lauterbach said the scholarship will keep her out of debt in the future.

"It's a big advantage because I won't have to pay that off when I get out of school," she said.

Rikki Farquer, a freshman undecided major from Canadian, said the scholarship she received from Tech made it easier to attend college.

"It helps a lot," Farquer said. "It helps with the little things you have to pay for, and it gives me more money to spend on myself."

Farquer said the two scholarships she has given her an advantage in classes.

"It helps as a freshman because I don't have to worry so much. I can concentrate on classes and that's important when you first come to college," she said.

Kathy Bevers, a senior biology major from Austin, said she wouldn't know the first place to look to get a scholarship.

"They are important because some people won't be able to go to school without a scholarship," Bevers said.

Kamisha Hamilton, a mechanical engineering scholarship recipient and a senior mechanical engineering major from Houston, said she received her two scholarships in the College of Engineering by filling out an application from the college.

"It didn't take that long to fill out the application," said Hamilton, a third-year scholarship recipient.

"Students might be scared about writing an essay, but it's worth it in the end."

Because she does have a scholarship, Hamilton said she doesn't need to search for a job.

"For my major, it's important that I don't work," Hamilton said. "I like having the free time, not having to worry about having to go to a job and feeling that extra stress."

Growth in financial aid office accompanied by smiles, help

by Emily Elsen

The University Daily

Sometimes the line seems to extend toward the horizon and the paperwork seems never ending, but the patient smiles that the people in this department wear never seem to waver.

Texas Tech's Office of Financial Aid is the fastest growing department on campus, said Ronny Barnes, director of Tech's financial aid department.

Last year, $60 million was awarded in grants, scholarships and loans, Barnes said.

About 3,800 students apply each year.

Of those students, 2,500 receive some sort of institutional or privately funded scholarship, he said.

"There are very few scholarships that go unclaimed each year," Barnes said. "Of these scholarships, a small percentage are need-based."

Most of them, however, are academic or recruiting scholarships."

Tech students need to realize the academic and privately funded scholarships are handled through their respective colleges, Barnes said.

This is where they need to go for scholarship information, Barnes said.

"What we are most concerned with is making sure the right candidates are awarded the scholarships, and when students don't apply they are limiting themselves," Barnes said.

The Office of Financial Aid works in conjunction with the different colleges to make sure all avenues of financial aid are considered, Barnes said.

"There are many considerations for scholarships and grants," he said.

"However, what most students don't realize is that the formula used to establish need incorporates what their parents should be able to contribute as opposed to what they are willing to contribute based upon their income."

The recent changes in the financial aid process in 1993 made it much easier for low-income families to get the financial aid they needed, Barnes said.

The new criteria for grant eligibility depends largely on family size, the number of family members in college and the adjusted gross income, Barnes said.

"Apply early when you file your income tax returns and always make copies of everything," Barnes said.

Alice Salazar, a financial aid adviser at Tech, said students need to apply early and be patient with the system.

"When students apply early, problems can be spotted and corrected so that the student doesn't have to wait in long lines in August and September," Salazar said.

Salazar said that the most rewarding part about working in the Office of Financial Aid is making friends with the students and their parents.

"I know students get sore at our office because of the long lines and the long waits on the phone," Salazar said.

Cotton futures appear grim for South Plains

by Charles Melton

The University Daily

Most cotton production predictions call for an average year, but there is still uncertainty about this year's crop, according to several local cotton growers and buyers.

"Late planting and a dry summer have created a real mixed bag for this year's cotton crop," said Allen Mackey of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Overall, the crop will be below-average to average, Mackey said.

"In another 20 days, we will know exactly where we are, but a wet fall could mean real trouble," Mackey said.

Dan Lawson, office manager of the Liberty Co-Op Gin, said the cotton quality will not be known until the cotton is in the gin.

"It's pretty hard to guess," Lawson said. "It will vary from very good to very bad."

Irrigated fields have enjoyed near ideal conditions, while dryland fields have been variable with hit or miss rains, he said.

Lawson said farmers should begin stripping cotton on Oct. 1 at the earliest, but it will probably be later.

Lois Baird, secretary of the Yellowhouse Gin, agreed with Lawson's prediction.

"Overall, the crop is like last year's unless we have insect problems," Baird said.

Some dryland fields are in such poor shape they might not be stripped, Baird said.

Stripping should begin in three weeks, which was when it started last year, Baird said.

The five-year cotton production average for Lubbock County is 218,000 bales total and a 483-pound per acre average, said Shawn Wade of Plains Cotton Growers.

Last year's crop was above average and Lubbock County was third in the state in cotton production, Wade said. Hockley and Hale County were among the top 10 cotton producing counties in the state, he said.

"The cotton market is extremely volatile and prices could go virtually anywhere," said Don Ethridge, professor of agricultural economics in the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources at Texas Tech.

The High Plains cotton crop should be an average crop, a little above 3 million bales, said Phil Bogel, president of Bogel Cotton Company.

Bogel expects the price of cotton to be about 70 cents at the time of harvest.

Buzz Young, of C.B. Buzz Young Cotton, predicts a harvest of 3 million bales for this area.

As for the price, it all depends on the weather, the damage done by insects like the boll weevil and army worm, and other market conditions, Young said.

Most farmers have their cotton contracted at 75 or 76 cents, Young said.

The consensus from cotton buyers, cotton gin operators, and others in the cotton industry is 1995's cotton crop will be average at best.

Tech students ride waves in ATLC

by Brian Lacy

The University Daily

If you feel like you are driving a 1972 Ford Pinto on the information super highway, you are in luck.

Beginning Sept. 8, the Texas Tech Advanced Technology Learning Center (ATLC), located in the library basement, will offer six different classes for students interested in learning the highways and byways of traveling on the Internet.

"Most of the courses will be starting up next week, continuing on into next month," said Sam Segran, manager of Academic Computing Facilities for the ATLC.

"There are many aspects to the Internet and these classes introduce students to them. The classes are free and they fill up quickly, so interested students should come by the ATLC as soon as possible."

The Internet is being used more and more frequently in the business world, Segran said, and he said he believes an overall knowledge of what it is and how it works is beneficial.

"Basically, Internet is a network of networks that allows you to communicate with different cities in areas all over the world," Segran said. "I know of several teachers who teach their students over the Internet in the educational community, and it is useful for business and many other things."

Tech students can gain access through their own computers to the Internet for free if they have paid their $70 computer fee, Segran said.

"Students interested in gaining access need to come by to the ATLC receptionist and get an account," Segran said.

"The process then takes about two weeks, afterwards the student has access."

Once on-line, students may then access the Texas Tech home page, which offers students several benefits, including a list of which classes are open in the fall, street closings on campus and the latest news about Tech, Segran said.

"We also have offered access to all the universities in the Big 12, and Tech students can conveniently visit those cities as well," Segran said.

Segran said there are many other advantages to Internet access as well.

"Students will have information at their fingertips that they probably couldn't get to without the Internet," Segran said.

"Half the time when you call on the telephone to get information, it's like a shot in the dark. Using the Internet saves time and money."

In an attempt to make surfing the Internet much easier for students, the ATLC also is trying to make available the PPP, or Point to Point protocol, which is a user-friendly graphic interface program.

"It is being looked at for student's Surfin' the net: Rob Casillas, a engineering technology major from Houston, logs onto the Internet from the ATLC, which is located in the basement of the library.

use later in the year," Segran said. "It's a new service that we definitely plan to get soon."

However, with all this convenience comes responsibility, Segran said.

"Students can get so carried away doing all this, they can forget they have homework," Segran said. "Also, there is a lot of power out there, and just because you have the knowledge to get to a certain file legally, does not make it right or ethical."

"While there are a lot of neat things, the Internet takes a lot of self discipline."

There are many Tech students who take advantage of the Internet every day.

"The Internet makes research a lot easier," said Matt Hetzel, a sophomore chemical engineering major from San Antonio.

"There are a lot of people who use the Internet, and it truly does make things easier. But you have to know what you're doing."

Students who wish to know what they are doing on the Internet can get more specific class information by calling the ATLC at 742-1650.

Women challenge Chinese barriers to free speech

HUAIROU, China (AP)—Women at a world conference declared themselves able to do anything they set their minds to—and proceeded Thursday to knock down Chinese barriers to free speech.

Nobel Prize winner Aung San Suu Kyi, who spent six years under house arrest for fighting for democracy in Burma, set the tone in her videotaped keynote address to the NGO Forum on Women, the largest meeting of women ever. She urged governments to spend less on the war toys of grown men and much more on the urgent needs of humanity as a whole.

China had ordered that all demonstrations be held in a tiny section of the conference grounds and that China be exempt from any criticism.

But Amnesty International delegates paraded beyond the limits Thursday with banners and pictures of 11 women political prisoners, including two in China. They circulated a petition calling for the women's release and said they would deliver copies to the governments involved.

Tibetan women who live in the West showed a videotape of Tibetans forced into exile. Women delegates who came to see the tape grabbed it back from two Chinese who tried to seize it.

Throughout it all, Chinese security videotaped and took notes furiously. But only in the case of the Tibetan tape did they attempt to interfere.

The gathering has drawn thousands of private activists from around the world who came to China hoping to influence decisions made at the United Nations' Fourth World Conference on Women, which starts Monday.

The first working day of the forum was everything China had feared.

China insisted the 10-day private forum be held in Huairou, a small town an hour's drive from Beijing, in an attempt to limit contact between the women and ordinary Chinese, who were barred from the site.

But foreign delegations at Huairou said they would not be suppressed.

"We have not been silenced anywhere in the world, and we will not be silenced in China," said Pierre Sane, secretary general of Amnesty International.

Organizers said about 17,000 participants had arrived in Huairou by Wednesday morning, and that 10,000 others who had hotel reservations were expected to arrive Thursday. They said they did not know how many were denied visas by China because of their political or social views.

Some 3,000 women, and a few men, crammed into a small auditorium for Thursday's biggest draw: Suu Kyi's videotaped speech smuggled out of Burma. They applauded her for a full minute when it was over.

"The education and empowerment of women throughout the world cannot fail to result in a more caring, tolerant, just and peaceful life for all," Suu Kyi said.

Suu drew laughter when she referred to the "age-old prejudice the world over ... that women talk too much," and asked, "But is this really a weakness?"

Ito limits Furhman's crude slang remarks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a major blow to the defense in the final days of its case, O.J. Simpson's judge ruled Thursday that jurors can hear just two of 41 remarks in which Detective Mark Furhman uses a racial slur for blacks.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito said defense lawyers can present to jurors just two excerpts of audiotapes Furhman made with a screenwriter in which he uses the word "nigger."

In rejecting the other 39 examples, Ito said: "The court finds the probative value of the remaining examples to be substantially and overwhelmingly outweighed by the danger of undue prejudice."

However, Ito ruled that screenwriter Laura Hart McKinny can tell jurors that Furhman used the word "nigger" 41 times during the interviews.

"Just as a defendant with prior felony convictions testifying before a jury is not entitled to a false aura of credibility, neither is Furhman," Ito wrote.

An outraged Johnnie Cochran Jr. called Ito's ruling "one of the cruelest, unfair decisions ever rendered in a criminal court in this country."

"For this judge to rule that only two of those incidents are admissible is outrageous, is specious, and it's unspeakable," Simpson's lead defense lawyer said. "We are shocked and we think there is no justification."

Furhman, who testified about finding a bloody glove near Simpson's mansion, denied under oath that he had used the word "nigger" during the past 10 years. The detective is now retired and living in Idaho.

Simpson's attorneys accuse Furhman of being a racist who tried to frame Simpson for the murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

The defense had hoped to wrap up its case this week or early next week by playing the tapes to undermine Furhman's credibility.

Legal analysts said Ito's ruling was a blow to the defense because testimony about just two of the racially inflammatory statements will be presented to the black-majority jury.

"Judge Ito has come to the rescue of the prosecution," said defense lawyer Marcia Morrissey. "He has severely limited the jury's ability to determine Furhman's credibility."

Prosecutors praised the ruling. "While we decry racism, these tapes are an issue for another forum, another time, and not this murder trial," District Attorney Gil Garcetti said in a statement.

The tapes were obtained by the defense from McKinny, a North Carolina screenwriter who conducted a series of interviews of Furhman since 1985 as part of a fictional project about the Los Angeles Police Department.

In passages of the tapes played in court Tuesday outside the jury's presence, Furhman used the word 41 times and bragged about planting evidence.

His representatives have said Furhman exaggerated his comments to make a better story for the screenplay and that he suffered a "mental block" when he denied using the epithet.

The defense had asked Ito to let jurors see or hear 61 excerpts from the tapes.

They included the 41 statements with the word "nigger," 18 about alleged police misconduct, and two about Furhman's feelings on being a witness.

In the two examples admitted by Ito, Furhman says: "We have no niggers where I grew up."

In the other, McKinny asks: "Why do they live in that area?" Furhman responds: "That's where niggers live."

Ito barred the admission of the 18 statements about alleged police misconduct, mostly on the grounds that the incidents are too inflammatory and the defense had failed to prove the incidents actually happened.

In excluding Furhman's statements about beating and framing suspects, Ito attacked the defense theory that Furhman moved a glove from the murder scene.

Families sue property firm over plane crash

DALLAS (AP) — The families of two executives killed in an April plane crash in the New Mexico mountains, a crash that went unconfirmed for four months, have sued the executives' employer.

In separate lawsuits, the families of Teresa Gray of Plano and David Warren of Carrollton have accused top management at Univesco Inc. of Addison of negligence in allowing an unqualified pilot at the controls of the single-engine Cessna 172.

The company declined comment Thursday on the lawsuits, filed in state district court in Dallas. David Bower, vice president of corporate affairs for Univesco, said the company had not yet seen the lawsuits.

Killed with Mrs. Gray, 33, and Warren, 42, were company attorney David Kalnes 37, and pilot Mark Ballew, 45. The plane vanished April 24, shortly after taking off from Page, Ariz., on a flight back to Addison Airport, just north of Dallas.

The wreckage was found Aug. 20 in the Chuska Mountains, along the New Mexico-Arizona border, about 115 miles southeast of Page.

The aircraft was owned by Robert Werra, Univesco's chief executive.

The lawsuits allege that the property management company "negligently entrusted the aircraft to a pilot who was not properly rated for the flight and who did not meet the minimum (federal) safety requirements."

Attorney John Howie, who is representing both families, said preliminary results of the federal investigation of the accident show that the engine on the 33-year-old aircraft was not running when the plane crashed.

"There was no indication of mechanical problems," Howie said. "We believe the evidence strongly suggests mismanagement on the part of the pilot."

Federal Aviation Administration records show that Ballew allowed his pilot's license to expire 20 months before the accident by failing to take a required medical exam and flight test.

USDA files complaint, no more monkeying around

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture says the South Texas Primate Observatory has been monkeying around for too long and the agency wants it stopped.

The USDA filed a complaint this week accusing the observatory of violations over the last five years involving the colony of more than 600 uncaged Japanese Snow monkeys living on a private ranch outside Dilley.

An observatory spokeswoman calls the complaint "very political," and says many of the violations cited have been corrected. Representatives of seven state and federal agencies went to Dilley in June to talk about the monkeys' uncertain legal status and the potential threats they hold for humans and native animals.

The four-hour meeting included lots of heated arguments, but no list of dos and don'ts, the observatory's Lou Griffin said.

"Not one person has called me back and said, 'Here's what you need to do,'" she said.

The USDA's complaint cites the primate observatory for a va-

Tech Tutors teach high school students

by Carrie Kilman

The University Daily

Shameca Wilson wants to go to college.

Two years away from her high school graduation, Wilson does not think she would be where she is today without the help of a few special people.

Todd Golden, a chemical engineering major from Coppell, is one of those people.

Golden is part of Tech Tutors, a program that matches Tech students with underprivileged children who need help with school.

Students like Golden are not easy to find, said Dan Tinney, a senior math major from Houston and Tech Tutors coordinator.

The tutoring program, which is part of the Community Action Network, desperately needs more student volunteers, Tinney said.

"Tech Tutors is looking for students of all majors, but especially students with strong backgrounds in math and science," he said.

Tech Tutors was started in January 1992 by Cheryl Schubert, coordinator of Student Activities.

Since the program's beginning, it has grown from 16 student tutors in 1992 to its present size of 45, Tinney said.

Tech volunteers work with area students at the Parkway and Guadalupe Neighborhood Centers and at the Emergency Children's Center for one hour twice a week, he said.

About 50 students from kindergarten to grade 12 are being tutored through Tech Tutors, Tinney said.

Tech students interested in volunteering for Tech Tutors are invited to attend the orientation meetings at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in the Masked Rider Room of the University Center.

The orientation will introduce students to the program, Tinney said.

Tinney, who has been a tutor for two years, said the program has helped him personally.

"It helped me boost my GPA," Tinney said.

"I tutor every week, and when I get home I feel like a hypocrite if I don't study."

Golden said he sees no reason why Tech students should not volunteer for the tutoring program.

"These kids need people to tutor them," Golden said.

"Every year, there are more kids wanting to be tutored than there are tutors."

Golden has been a volunteer tutor for the past two years and would like to see the number of volunteers grow, he said.

"I'd like to see every kid who wants help in school to get that help," Golden said.

"Shameca is lucky — she has family that loves her. A lot of the kids don't have family support."

Jim Cawthon: The University Daily

Tutor me this: Todd Golden, a senior chemical engineering major from Coppell, tutors Shameca Wilson, a junior at Coronado High School, at the Parkway Neighborhood Center on Wednesday night.

Although Shameca, who is a junior at Coronado High School, said she has greatly benefited from the program, she also would like to see Tech Tutors grow.

"(We need) more tutors to help the younger kids whose parents aren't around to do that," she said. "Many of the kids need help. We all need them."

Liz Taylor splits with husband number seven

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor says she and husband No. 7 Larry Fortensky "need our own space for a while" and are splitting up, four years after their lavish wedding at Michael Jackson's ranch.

"We have agreed to a trial separation. We both hope this is only temporary," Taylor said in a statement Tuesday.

The 63-year-old violet-eyed actress told syndicated columnist Liz Smith: "I feel sad. I sincerely hope it will work out."

Fortensky, 43, met Taylor in 1988 at the Betty Ford Clinic, where they were being treated for substance abuse.

They were married Oct. 6, 1991, at Jackson's Neverland Ranch.

The breakup announcement came one day after Elizabeth Arden canceled the September launch of Taylor's Black Pearls perfume in a dispute with department stores over sales clerks' commissions.

Taylor underwent a second hip replacement surgery two months ago and has been using a cane to walk.

Taylor's six previous husbands were hotel heir Conrad "Nicky" Hilton, actor Michael Wilding, Broadway producer Mike Todd, singer Eddie Fisher, Richard Burton — whom she married twice — and Virginia Sen. John Warner.

KOHM joins food bank to feed Lubbock

by Leslie Weeks

The University Daily
For the next week, KOHM-FM (89.1) will be nourishing not only the minds, but the bodies of the South Plains.

The station, which features classical music and national radio programs and news, will begin a fundraiser to benefit the station and the South Plains Food Bank at 8 a.m. Monday.

The drive will continue until midnight Sept. 10.

"We will actually go on the air and solicit contributions from our listeners," Station Manager Sylvia Jones said.

"We stay with our regular programming, but when there are breaks at the end of pieces we ask for contributions."

Jones said the goal is to raise $45,000, which is $5,000 more than the station's goal last year.

"Texas Tech does not fund us," Jones said.

"The Corporation for Public Broadcasting is responsible for approximately one-third of our funding."

It will decrease this year through 1998 and then disappears altogether."

The amount of contributions also will determine how much food is donated by businesses such as Lowe's and United.

Office Depot will donate school supplies and Eckerd will donate personal hygiene products.

"As money is pledged or mailed, food is given to the food bank by Lowe's and United," Jones said.

"There is a direct relationship between how much we raise and how much they give."

For example, United Supermarkets will donate 10 pounds of food for every $50.

"When we had this opportunity to work with KOHM we were just delighted," said Gerre Sears, director of land use and development for the South Plains Food Bank.

"It will be a successful fund-raiser for KOHM and more food for us."

"Obviously it's one way of supporting great news and music programming," Jones said.

"We hope they (students) take advantage of what we have to offer 24 hours a day and now they can help us and the food bank at the same time."

Sears said fall is the hardest time of year for the food bank.

"Having a fund-raiser now is very, very timely for us," she said.

Jones said contributions of any size are welcome.

"We have a lot of people who give us $5," she said.

"They don't have to feel embarrassed."

We are more than happy to accept it."

World record museum goes out of business

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a once-in-a-lifetime chance to put a statue of the World's Tallest Man in the middle of your living room — if you have 9-foot ceilings.

A dilapidated Guinness Book of World Records museum is going out of business, and its exhibits were up for sale Wednesday, giving patrons first crack at its bizarre inventory.

The museum, an Empire State Building fixture for 19 years, will be permanently closed after Labor Day, taking its quirky collection along.

"The end of an era," proclaimed a cardboard sign near its ticket booth. "Inquire inside for the price of your future Guinness memorabilia."

That includes a plastic replica of Krystyne Kolorful, the world's most tattooed lady. Or a genuine photo of the largest baked pizza in U.S. history — with a diameter of 100 feet, 1 inch. Or the headless statue of the world's tallest man, Robert Wadlow, who was 8 feet 11.1 inches tall when he died in 1940 at 22. (Guinness is keeping the head for trademark reasons.)

Just make a bid, nothing has a price tag. "We're not that tacky," said Paul Burns, who's overseeing the sale.

It's tacky enough already, said Leslie Batnick, taking a lunchtime tour with his two sons. There was nothing in the exhibit that inspired him to start writing checks.

"The kids might get a kick out of taking home the tattooed lady, but I don't think so," said Batnick, standing beside a statue of the world's fattest man, 1,069-pound Robert "Earl" Hughes.

Yury Konev, 18, was examining a collection of shovels honoring the gluttonous work of Pete Dowdeswell, who holds the following eating records: 22 meat pies in 18 minutes, 13 seconds; 21 hamburgers in 9 minutes, 42 seconds; 1 pound of raw eels in 13.7 seconds; 13 raw eggs in one second.

Homecoming queen shot by high school dropout

WILLIAMSON, W. Va. (AP) — A dropout who may have been infatuated with his high school's homecoming queen has been charged with shooting her to death just days before she was to start college.

James C. Pennington, 20, told authorities he shot Michael Ann Koontz twice with a .22-caliber weapon on Aug. 25, when the 17-year-old girl left home to run an errand, police said.

Koontz's body was found in woods near a sewage treatment plant just north of this tiny town on Monday, the same day the Williamson High School cheerleader and homecoming queen was to start classes at Marshall University.

Pennington, who dropped out of Williamson High in 1992, was arrested Wednesday and appeared at a hearing Thursday, where he was ordered held without bail. No plea was entered and his court-appointed lawyers had no comment.

"They were friends. They went to school together," Sheriff Gerald Chafin said.

"I understand he might have been infatuated with her."

Koontz had not been sexually assaulted.

Pennington was on probation for a theft conviction last year. Court records show Pennington and three other men broke into a pharmacy in 1993 and stole more than $11,000 in prescription pills.

The victim's brother, Tim Koontz, a lawyer, said investigators for his firm helped police catch the suspect by finding the person who supplied Pennington with the bullets.

"Of all the people to kill, my sister was the worst person you could pick because I could never rest until they spent the rest of their life in jail," Koontz said. "They picked the wrong family."

Chafin said ballistics tests will be conducted on a gun found near the body to determine whether it was used to kill the girl.

The death has stunned residents in the town of about 4,100. Ms. Koontz was a popular student; she had worked in the principal's office at Williamson High and was voted homecoming queen and most popular in her senior class of 83 students last year.

Surgeon struggles with suicidal man

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — In the "I swear it's true category": the ocean rescue of a suicidal man by Michael Jackson's plastic surgeon as Heidi Fleiss ran for a phone to call 911.

The surgeon, Dr. Steven Hoefflin, said he and Fleiss were in a group walking off dinner on Santa Monica Pier early Thursday when they saw a man with his hands cuffed behind his back jump into the water.

"I just went right in. He was going to drown if I didn't do something," said Hoefflin, who had been at the same fashionable restaurant as Fleiss but had never met the woman convicted of running a call girl ring for the rich and famous.

Hoefflin struggled with the man in 56-degree water for 30 minutes, joined by a second person in their group. A Harbor Patrol boat was used to fish the three out. Hoefflin's hand was cut but all were otherwise unhurt.

Fleiss, 29, was convicted earlier this month of conspiracy, tax evasion and money laundering. She was released without bail pending her sentencing Nov. 13. She already had been sentenced to three years on state pandering charges.

Fleiss called 911 as the struggle went on in the water. The identity of the suicidal man wasn't released. Police said he was despondent over financial matters and hospitalized for psychiatric evaluation.

Nelson era begins at Arizona tournament

by Chris Parry

The University Daily

When the Texas Tech volleyball team takes to the court in the Doubletree Classic today in Tucson, Ariz., two newcomers will be making their Red Raider debuts.

Tech coach Jeff Nelson, who will make his head coaching debut this weekend, announced his starting lineup Wednesday, and it mixes some returning players with a transfer and a setter who was in high school at this time last year.

Tech Director of Athletics Bob Bockrath said he likes the team's chances in Nelson's debut.

"I have a good sense that they are going to be competitive," Bockrath said.

Nelson said that Lisa Hilgers, a freshman from Victoria, Minn., will be starting at the setting position, while preseason all-conference pick Jennifer Cohn, Jill Slapper and transfer Jill Burness will be starting in the quick attack positions and Brande Brown

Cohn earns preseason honor

Texas Tech middle blocker Jennifer Cohn was the only Red Raider to garner preseason all-conference honors in the poll of Southwest Conference coaches.

Cohn

Cohn, a 6-foot senior middle blocker from Round Rock, was named a first team All-SWC selection.

and Diane Owens will be starting in the swing hitting positions. Nelson said he is bringing a new offensive scheme to the team this season.

"The offense we will be playing is very non-traditional, players aren't just going to migrate to a position on the court," Nelson said. "They are going to be moving around in different positions constantly. I think the way we can beat some of these top teams is by surprising them with our quickness and how fast we move the ball around."

Tech will play its first game of the tournament against California-Santa Barbara. Nelson said he has a great deal of respect for the Gauchos.

"Santa Barbara was in the final 16 last year," Nelson said. "They have been ranked in the top 20 ever since volleyball started doing rankings."

Nelson said he also respects the Gauchos' head coach Kathy Gregory. "She's phenomenal," Nelson said. "Certainly we will be matched with not only a great team, but a great coach as well."

Tech will have to rebound quickly from its first match as the Red Raiders will face Missouri at 7 p.m. today. Nelson said he doesn't know what to expect from this match.

"Missouri is a rebuilding program," he said. "They have only three people returning, but they did a great job recruiting and with new kids, they can go either way."

Nelson said he is confident his team will play well against the Tigers.

"I certainly anticipate that it is a match we can go out and expect to win and get a victory and roll on," he said.

Tech's final match of the Round Robin Tournament will be at 3:30 p.m. Saturday as it faces the host school, Arizona.

"They play a real feisty, vocal brand of volleyball," Nelson said of the Wildcats. "It will be our first real chance to play in front of a great big crowd."

Cowboys poised for classic Monday night matchup

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — To say the New York Giants have been building to their season opener with the Dallas Cowboys is an understatement. Since training camp opened, this has been THE GAME.

When daily two-a-days ended and the team broke down for quick meetings on the field, Dallas was on the players' minds.

The meetings usually ended with players extending a hand into a huddle and then breaking with shouts such as "Win," "Monday night" and "Cowboys."

All the preparation and practices are now over and the Giants (9-7) will get an indication if they can compete with Dallas (12-4) for the NFC East title, which the Cowboys have won three straight years.

Giants coach Dan Reeves already has told his players they can go 11-5 and challenge for the division.

"We can really set the tone and get some momentum for this season if we can win this ballgame," linebacker Corey Miller said.

A lot of the Giants' hopes for this season revolve around a season-ending, six-game winning streak in 1994 that was capped by a 15-10 win over the Cowboys here. That ended a five-game losing streak against Dallas that was highlighted by an embarrassing 38-10 at Irving, Texas on Nov. 7.

But Dallas had nothing to gain in the regular-season finale.

Quarterback Troy Aikman played sparingly in the first half and halfback Emmitt Smith sat out with a hamstring injury.

"Let me tell you," Cowboys coach Barry Switzer said. "I can look at both films. I can look at their game here early on when we were in the hunt and I can look at the film when we played there. There's no question, we will be more like the team that played on Monday night when they came to Texas Stadium."

"It won't be that team they met in the last game of the season," Switzer said. "I can assure you of that."

Dallas lost a little more talent in the offseason that the Giants, with center

Mark Stepnoski, wide receiver Alvin Harper and safety James Washington all signing elsewhere as free agents. New York's biggest loss was third-down specialist Dave Meggett.

"They still have the big three, (Michael) Irvin, Emmitt and Troy," Miller said.

"You have to shut the running game down and make them throw the ball. We can't let Emmitt have the kind of game he had here two years ago (32 rushes for 168 yards and 10 catches for 61). We have to get after them and be aggressive and put some pressure on Troy."

The Cowboys obviously are going to try to do the same thing to Brown, who was knocked out of two preseason games and missed another with injuries.

If the second-year starter goes down again, New York will really be in trouble.

Backup Kent Graham was waived on Wednesday.

Since Tommy Maddox doesn't know the offense yet, that would leave the job to Stan White, a second-year pro who hasn't taken a snap in a regular-season NFL game.

The key will be whether the Giants can run the ball and stop Smith.

Brown said the offense feels it can move the ball against Dallas, noting most of the yards the team gained in the second game came against the Cowboys' first string.

"This is a huge game for us, but we can't get so wrapped up in a one-game season that destroys the other 15," Brown said.

"We're going to go out and try to do everything we can. But I remember other Giants teams that were so fired up for first games against the 49ers that if they didn't win, it took them time to recover. We have 15 big games after this one."

While concerned with the Giants, the Cowboys focus is to find a way to beat the 49ers and win another NFL title.

"This team has the talent to win the Super Bowl," Aikman said. "Nothing less will be accepted."

Oilers open season with expansion Jaguars

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Jacksonville Jaguars have never played Houston. They've never played anybody in the regular season.

So why does there seem to be bad blood between the teams meeting Sunday in the Jaguars' historic first game?

Two key members of the Oilers' run-and-shoot glory days, receiver Ernest Givins and offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride, are now in Jacksonville. And they would like nothing better than to show that Houston made a huge mistake when it sent them packing.

Givins, especially, has made it clear he's bitter about the way he was treated by the Oilers, who asked their career leading receiver to take a huge pay cut and then unceremoniously released him when he wouldn't.

"Anytime you're playing against people you grew up with, you want to show them you can still do the exact same things you did for the past nine years," said Givins, who caught 542 passes at Houston, but slumped to 36 receptions last year.

As Houston crashed and burned to a 2-14 finish last year, Gilbride was fired along with head coach Jack Pardee.

Gilbride insists he harbors no grudge against his former team.

"It's like playing against family members. You want to do your best," he said. "There are people there who I was very close to, people I had a great deal of feeling and respect and emotion for."

Considering the Jaguars will have few chances to win this season, they want to take advantage of their season opener. Though Houston is a 3 1/2-point favorite, both squads have the look of an expansion team.

Houston had the worst record in the NFL and endured a tumultuous preseason, losing all three games, having another canceled because of a subpar playing surface at the Astrodome and enduring rumors that the franchise is on the verge of moving to Nashville, Tenn.

"Everything was running along nice and smooth until a couple of weeks ago, when things started to happen," said coach Jeff Fisher, who took over for Pardee last year and now has the job on a fulltime basis. "The cancellation against San Diego was kind of a stumbling block for us from an experience standpoint — experience we needed, especially on offense."

The Oilers have the potential for a solid defense with Ray Childress on the line, Al Smith at middle linebacker and Cris Dishman in the secondary. But the transition from the run-and-shoot, which once made Houston the most feared offensive team in the league, has been painful.

Last year, the Oilers averaged only 14 points a game, and they aren't likely to blossom into an offensive powerhouse with journeyman Chris Chandler at quarterback while first-round pick Steve "Air" McNair is given time to develop.

McNair played sparingly in the preseason, completing only 4 of 8 passes for 54 yards. "He throws the ball well, moves around well, but he has trouble reading defenses," Dishman said. "He's still a year or so away."

Jacksonville has a solid quarterback in Steve Beuerlein, who has started for three other NFL teams.

But Jacksonville's offensive line has only two players who have started anywhere else, and the receiver corps has a bundle of possession-type receivers (like Givins), but little speed. Starting tight end Derek Brown, a former first-round pick of the Giants, is out because of a broken rib and other internal injuries suffered in the final preseason game.

The defensive outlook is better, with an experienced line that includes former Jets standout Jeff Lageman, ex-Detroit starter Kelvin Pritchett and Joel Smeenge.

Liberty sues over celebration rule

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The Baptist college Jerry Falwell founded filed a lawsuit Thursday to prevent the NCAA from enforcing a rule prohibiting football players from kneeling in prayer to celebrate touchdowns.

Liberty University asked U.S. District Judge James Turk to block the NCAA from penalizing teams whose players pray on the field beginning with Saturday's games.

"This stadium is a public place. Why should you — the NCAA — tell me where I need to pray?" said Liberty coach Sam Rutigliano, a plaintiff in the lawsuit along with the university and four football players.

The NCAA this season will strictly enforce a 3-year-old rule that bans players from removing their helmets, taunting the crowd or opposing players, posing or dancing after touchdowns or big plays. Liberty's lawsuit claims that banning players from kneeling to pray on the field is religious discrimination and violates the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

"The NCAA is overstepping its bounds. It's doing something that is not only unconstitutional, it's immoral, going against someone's religion," said Jarrod Everson, a Liberty freshman football player. He is not among the four plaintiffs.

Liberty athletic director Chuck Burch said the NCAA went too far in trying to eliminate unsportsmanlike showboating. "It's hard for me to look at somebody kneeling in prayer as being offensive," he said.

The NCAA does not ban prayer outright. Players can kneel on the sidelines, but not on the playing field or the end zone. Team members also are allowed to pray together before or after the game. It also allows all the players of one team to kneel together briefly after a big play.

Marlin takes final shot at Winston Million

DARLINGTON, SC (AP) — With a little bit of luck, Sterling Marlin could come away from Sunday's Southern 500 at Darlington Raceway more than $100,000 richer and a lot closer to the Winston Cup points lead.

Marlin, winner of the Daytona 500 back in February, is eligible for the Winston Select Million bonus, which goes to any driver winning two of NASCAR's Big Four — the races at Daytona and Darlington, as well as the Winston Select 500 at Talladega and the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte.

A driver winning three of the Big Four collects $1 million, but nobody has done that since Bill Elliott in the inaugural year of the bonus in 1985.

Mark Martin and Bobby Labonte, winners at Talladega and Charlotte, respectively, also are eligible for the six-figure bonus at Darlington.

But Marlin seems to have just a little edge, based on his accomplishments this season.

"We won the three races at the tracks for the Winston Million already this year, but they were the wrong races except for Daytona," said Marlin, who won the TransSouth 400 at Darlington in March and the DieHard 500 at Talladega in July.

"There'd be a lot more pressure on us if we were going for the million at Darlington."

The press would be talking about it all week and so would everybody else, but the $100,000 would be a nice bonus, too. Three of us are going for it and Bobby Labonte runs well there and so does Mark Martin. I'd say it's pretty much a tossup between us three."

Actually, doing well at Darlington is a must for Marlin, who is in a battle for the Winston Cup title for the first time. His best previous season was seventh in 1991.

Going into the weekend, Marlin trails leader Jeff Gordon by 176 points and is 104 ahead of third-place Martin and 118 in front of seven-time and defending series champion Dale Earnhardt.

"Darlington would be a great place to pick up some points, but you can lose a bunch down there, too," Marlin said.

"You've got to be around at the finish to have a shot at it. We've got 100 more (miles) this time than we did in March, and that's another 100 miles that something can go wrong. Some of the slower cars got some of the faster cars in trouble down there last time."

"We'll be disappointed if we don't win the title this year," he added.

"Gordon has been awesome this season. He hasn't had any trouble at all. It seems like if they're running at the end of the race, they're in the top five."

"Knock on wood, but we don't have any DNFs (did not finish) this season, either. We had to stop and fix one at Talladega, but we were running at the end."

Marlin, who has finished in the top 10 in 11 of the last 13 races, including five top-5s, added, "We're starting to get down to crunch time as far as the points go."

"We've got nine races left, and that's not a bunch. We need to make up over 170 points overall, so we need to gain 20 a race to have a shot at it in Atlanta" on Nov. 12 in the season finale.

"Basically, we can either do that or the 24 car (Gordon) is going to have to run into trouble."

"I don't wish bad luck on anybody," Marlin said.

"I think winning a championship means more if you win it on the track. ... I wish the best of luck to them and hope we have the best of luck, and may the best team win."

"Win, lose or draw, we've done our best. We just have to keep digging and hope things go our way."

Oilers no longer consider Astrodome wonderful

HOUSTON (AP)—Signs around the Houston Astrodome and patches worn on the sleeves of Houston Astros baseball players proudly proclaim the domed stadium as "The Original."

When it opened in April 1965, it was the world's first air-conditioned, completely enclosed multipurpose sports stadium and earned the billing "The Eighth Wonder of the World."

Thirty years later, the stadium's loudest critic—Bud Adams, owner of the Houston Oilers—would prefer to call the place he rents for his team as "The Obsolete."

Adams is threatening to move his team to Nashville, Tenn., where city and state officials are dangling promises of guaranteed ticket sales and millions in profits from concessions and parking if he relocates.

The problems with the Astrodome, according to Adams, are many. It's too small, with a capacity of 60,000 putting it near the bottom of the NFL sites. It's ill-suited for football, with just 18,000 seats considered prime viewing spots. And he bristles that he must lease the place from a sports competitor—the Astros—who manage the dome for Harris County.

He'll stay, though, if somebody comes up with the estimated $250 million for a new football-only stadium, preferably in downtown Houston.

So far, he's received little support. Top officials from Houston, Harris County and the state of Texas say Adams' dream dome will remain just that unless he can find a way to pay for it without using tax money.

City leaders are miffed that Adams is using the same ploy that won him $60 million in Astrodome improvements less than a decade ago—improvements that won't be paid for until well into the next century and perhaps well after Adams and the Oilers are gone from the nation's fourth-largest city.

After embracing Jacksonville, Fla., as a new home for the Oilers, Adams in 1987 agreed to remain in his hometown after the county agreed to Astrodome renovations that expanded its capacity by 10,000, added luxury boxes and installed new artificial turf specifically for football.

The expenditures were double the original $31.6 million cost of the stadium.

An Oilers agreement with Nashville could send the team packing, although Harris County officials are promising a legal fight if Adams breaks a 10-year lease he signed in 1987.

Houston also is facing likely pressure from its two-time defending NBA champion Houston Rockets.

Owner Leslie Alexander wants a new building larger and with more luxury boxes than The Summit arena, which opened in 1975, seats 16,611 and has just a handful of the pricey luxury boxes.

Adams tried to lure Alexander a year ago into a plan for a downtown stadium that would serve both the football and basketball teams.

Opening week in SWC means easy predictions

JARED PARCELL

UD assistant sports editor

Guess who's back for another year of exciting, but controversial columns! Yes, that's right, I failed to graduate last year, and thus begins my final 23 hours of college life.

Why change things? I really would hate to miss Sports IQ on Monday nights and Sports Trivia on Thursdays at Conference Cafe or Bash Riprock's. And who can pass up the opportunity to play QB-1 all weekend. Plus, another year of making bold predictions on college football games. So let's get ready to gamble! As I sit here, reading the Las Vegas odds, I wonder why I've been in college for six years. It's because I miss too many classes and have to retake them. Then again, it could be that through the years, I've been told that college is the best time of your life, so enjoy it as much as possible. For those who know me, credit card companies included, I most certainly have.

• Houston Cougars (+46) at Florida Gators

The Gators shouldn't have any trouble covering this one. Cougar High has become the laughing stock of the Southwest Conference, capturing two wins the last two seasons. Florida is nationally ranked and led by quarterback Danny Wuerffel, who has 40 touchdown passes in two seasons. Houston will be out of this one before the end of the National Anthem. Peter McNeely wouldn't even last as long in this one as he did against Mike Tyson.

• Arkansas Razorbacks (-7 1/2) at SMU Mustangs

Why break tradition? I love the Mustangs, despite their recent struggles. Ramon Flanigan returns to lead the offensive attack, throwing for 1,869 yards last season. The Razorbacks are lacking an offense in the powerful Southeastern Conference. Week in and week out, I will always take the Mustangs to cover.

• LSU Tigers (+15) at No. 3 Texas A&M Aggies

Are the Aggies for real? Leeland McElroy will take his first steps toward the Heisman Trophy. Besides, A&M hasn't lost a season opener at Kyle Field since 1987. The Tigers might be able to cover the spread in this one — if McElroy breaks his leg.

• No. 18 Texas Longhorns (-10 1/2) at Hawaii Rainbows

I'm going out on a limb early, saying Texas will win the SWC regular season title. The Longhorns start off away from the 48 contiguous states to take on a green-colored uniformed team with rainbows across their chest. Now you tell me who's going to win. No doubt, people taking Texas as favorites will see gold at the end of a different rainbow.

• Baylor Bears (-9) at Tulsa Golden Hurricane

Baylor coach Chuck Reedy will finally test his tailback offense featuring sophomores Anthony Hodge and Jerod Douglas. This one between the Bears and Golden Hurricane is a toss-up. Avoid it, unless you have money to spend.

• North Texas Eagles (+19) at Missouri Tigers

The Eagles, a former Division I-AA school, won't stand a chance. Against the Tigers, this should not be a barn burner but a channel changer.

Soccer team to open season at home

Shanna Sargent-Milnor: The University Daily

Ready for action: Senior goalkeeper Stephanie Carter and the Texas Tech soccer team take on North Texas and Louisiana State in a pair of Labor Day weekend games at R.P. Fuller Track Stadium.

by Brent Ross

The University Daily

The Texas Tech women's soccer team will open its second season at 2 p.m. Saturday at the R.P. Fuller Track Stadium when it takes on North Texas.

North Texas is entering its first season as a Division I soccer team. Last year, the Eagles competed against Division I teams, but they were still considered a club team.

Tech coach Diane Nichols said North Texas enters its first season under a cloud of controversy.

She said the university dropped its successful men's team and added women's soccer to comply with the Title IX regulations.

Nichols said it is frustrating trying to prepare for a team without any films or a track record to examine.

"We don't know what to expect because they are a first-year team," Nichols said.

"They have what I consider to be a real good recruiting class."

North Texas played host to Tech last year in a game in which the Red Raiders earned a 7-0 win.

"We played them last year as a club team and we hammered them," assistant coach Barbara Chura said.

Chura said this year's North Texas team is much improved and the Red Raiders are not taking them lightly.

"We're definitely not coming out with the attitude that they'll be easy," Chura said.

Freshman fullback Jennifer Wood, a newcomer to college soccer, is confident about this year's Tech team.

"The team is very good," Wood said.

"I think we'll give some teams a hard time."

Wood said she had no apprehensions about her performance or the performance of the team going into the first game.

"I think the team is ready," she said.

"We've practiced hard and I think it'll all show up Saturday."

Tech hopes to open its season as successfully as it did last year. The Red Raiders posted a mark of 3-1-1 in the first month last season.

Tech will get a chance to flex its muscles when the Red Raiders face nationally recognized Louisiana State at noon Monday at R.P. Fuller Track Stadium.

"We're excited to have such a big name team here for the Labor Day weekend," Nichols said.

Tickets for both games cost $4 for adults and $2 for children.

Seles cruises while seeds fall during U.S. Open play

NEW YORK (AP) — Crouching low, squinting in the sun, the swirling wind tossing her curly hair, Monica Seles stood poised to pounce on serves, then hesitated as if unsure, the familiar suddenly alien.

She pushed balls back softly instead of slugging them, and when it was her turn to serve she settled for safety rather than power.

Against any of the top 20 players, Seles might have been knocked out of the U.S. Open on Thursday, her comeback interrupted in the second round on a day when upsets were not uncommon.

Luckily for her, she played Erika de Lone, ranked No. 113 and playing at the Open for the first time in four years after taking a hiatus from Harvard. Seles beat her easily when they played once as 17 year olds in 1991, and she beat her just as easily again this time, 6-2, 6-1.

The score aside, Seles was not as impressive as she's been in winning all her matches since returning to tournament play two weeks ago. It wasn't a case of nerves, which might have accounted for her breathlessness Monday night in her first-round match. She looked unusually tentative, and the only reason she could give was the breeze.

"The only thing today that was really bugging me was the wind because it was swirling," she said. "I couldn't control the ball, where to go, or the ball toss, or everything." Despite getting clobbered, de Lone left the court unimpressed by Seles and convinced one of the better players might beat her.

"She didn't serve particularly well today, compared to the match I saw her in the first round," de Lone said. "Her second serve is pretty vulnerable. I tried to take advantage of it, but sometimes went for too much and missed the returns."

"I really didn't feel like she took complete and total charge until 4-1 in the second set. Then she just started hitting her first serves a lot harder, hitting aces, hitting winners off the second shot. But before that, she wasn't going for it as much as I normally see her go for it. She was staying in the point and giving me more chances than I thought I would have. I should have taken advantage of them a few more times."

If Seles had been playing a stronger, more experienced opponent, one who could hit more than the five winners de Lone managed, she might not have gotten away with the opportunities she offered.

Some other seeded players were not so lucky to escape.

No. 10 Lindsay Davenport lost 6-1, 6-3 to Zina Garrison Jackson, who put off plans of retirement and decided to rededicate herself to the game.

Sergi Bruguera, the men's No. 11 seed, was upset by Daniel Vacek.

In other women's matches, No. 4 Conchita Martinez beat Kimberly Po 6-1, 6-4; No. 5 Jana Novotna routed Asa Carlsson 6-1, 6-2; No. 7 Kimiko Date defeated Lisa Raymond 6-2, 1-6, 6-4; No. 11 Anke Huber downed Anne Miller 6-0, 7-5; and No. 16 Brenda Schultz-McCarthy beat Lindsay Lee 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Among the men, No. 7 Yevgeny Kafelnikov 6-3, 6-4, 6-4; No. 13 Marc Rosset stopped Patrick Rafter 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.
