Affirmative action takes off at Tech

Panel debates issue

Students support hiring policies

by Carrie Kilman
and Tara McQueen

The University Daily

Texas Tech students voted in favor of affirmative action during Tuesday's debate sponsored by the University Center Ideas and Issues Committee.

Of the 40 audience members, 24 cast their opinion about affirmative action: 15 voted to keep affirmative action, and nine voted against it.

The debate was the first UC-sponsored debate of the fall semester and consisted of a panel in favor of affirmative action and a panel opposed to it.

"Affirmative action doesn't fit the American ideal," said Margie Jefferson, a panel member opposed to affirmative action. "Affirmative action means we have to have special help."

"I feel as a black American I am just as capable as any American. If I don't get what I want, I try harder."

Jefferson, president of the National Coalition of One Hundred Black Women, said there has always been discrimination throughout the world.

"The Irish and Jews were discriminated against, and that didn't stop those people from pursuing their goals," she said.

"I don't feel the government owes black Americans anything."

Julio Llanas, director of the Tech Office for Affirmative Action and Personnel Relations, was a panel member supporting affirmative action and said there is still a need for it.

"We are trying to break through the barriers in front of us," Llanas said.

"African-Americans are paying taxes to support this facility, and they deserve to be represented."

Both sides of the affirmative action panel agreed standards should not be lowered to allow minorities into colleges.

"Affirmative action does not advocate treating anyone in a special way, Llanas said.

"If you are not qualified you will not get a job under affirmative action." Tech sets goals, not quotas, Llanas said.

"Once we reach that percentage, that's where affirmative action ends," he said. "You have to hire a qualified person first and foremost."

Christopher Snead, a panel member against affirmative action and workshop coordinator for the Head Start program, said goals or quotas based on race are illegal.

"Before there was affirmative action, there was hard work," Snead said.

"Is it fair to lower standards for some students and displace those who qualify? In the long run, no one wins."

Panel member Eric Sanchez, a history graduate student from Willow Park, spoke on the con side of the debate.

"The U.S. Supreme court decided in 1989 in the case Adarand v. Pena, that preference based on race alone is unconstitutional," Sanchez said.

"We needed it in the past, but not anymore. It judges people by group membership rather than as individuals."

Goals are the same as quotas, he said.

"Affirmative action has pulled us apart as a society," Sanchez said. "Experience and qualifications should get you the job, not what race you are."

Alfonso Scandrett Jr., Tech assistant athletic director, spoke from the audience during the question-answer section of the debate.

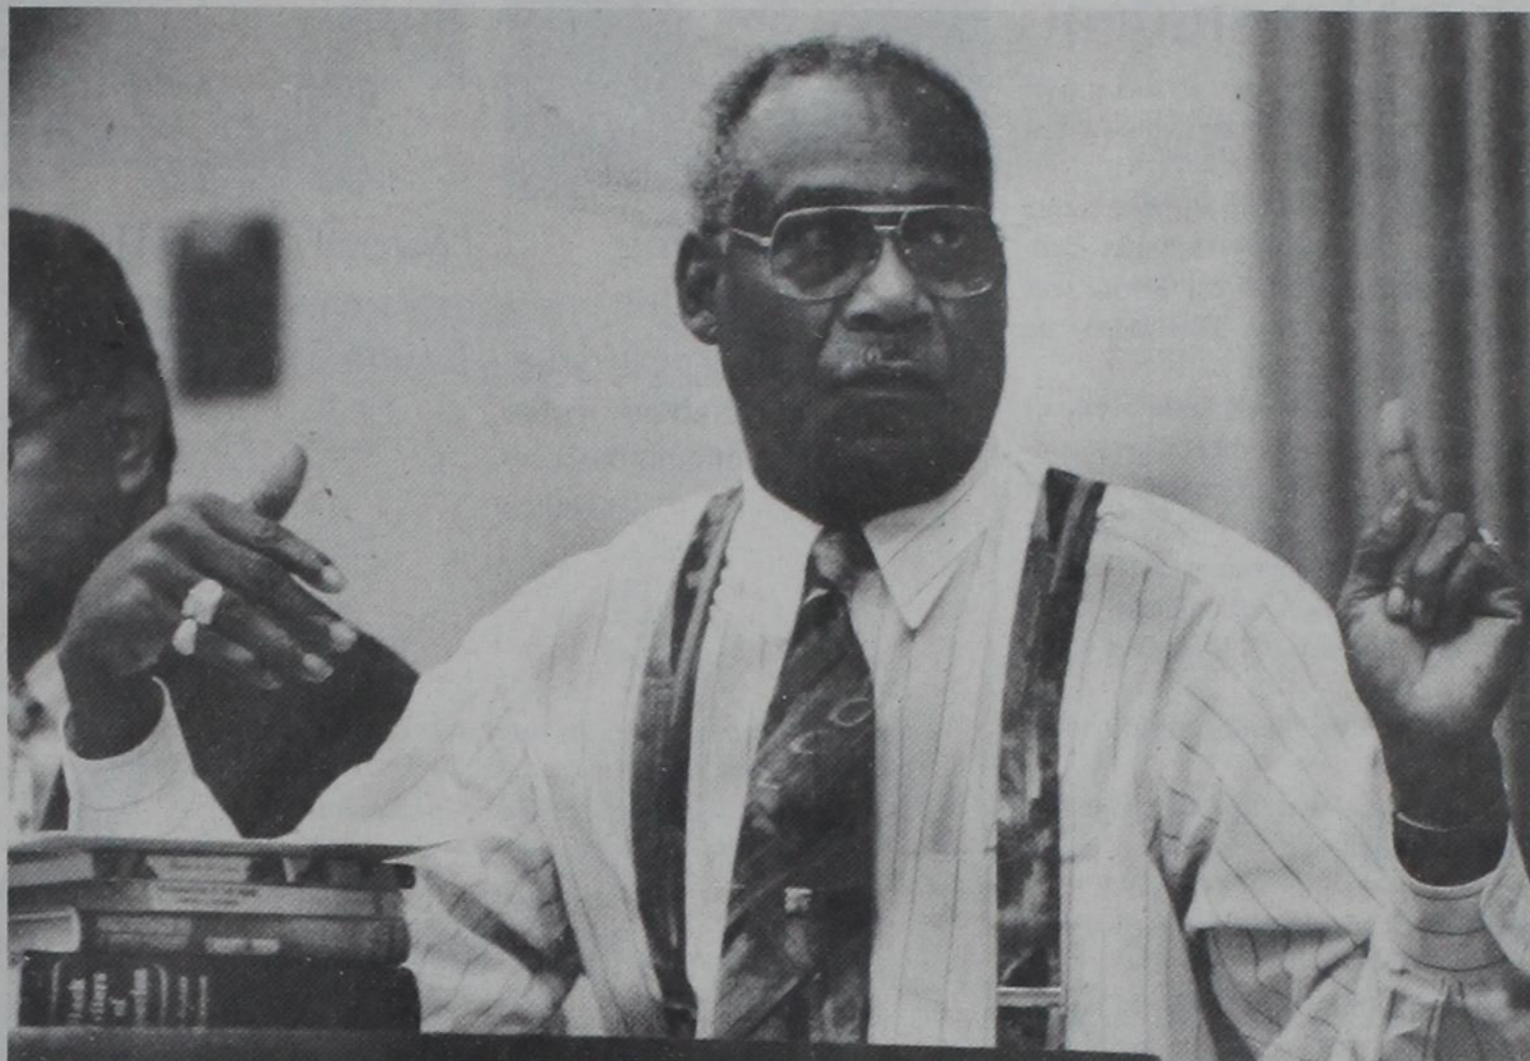

"I don't think we are making a conscious effort to recruit minority faculty," he said.

"But we are finding a lot of football and basketball players who are qualified."

Scandrett cited the fact that 40 percent of the Tech football team is black, while only 1 percent of the 1994 Tech faculty was black.

"All students would benefit from a multicultural faculty," he said.

Connie Robinson, a senior broadcast journalism major from Haynesville, La., attended the debate and said she thought both sides of the panel presented good arguments.

Robinson said she agreed with panel members supporting affirmative action.

"I don't think I'd be here today if my family hadn't benefited from affirmative action," Robinson said.

Stephanie Williams, a senior public relations major from Dallas and UC Programs Ideas and Issues committee member, said she believes most of the audience agreed that affirmative action policies should continue.

"I was not surprised (with audience reaction)," Williams said. "Affirmative action is very controversial. It not only affects the nation, it affects Texas Tech on a local level as well."

The next UC debate will take place in November. The topic will be First Amendment issues, said Jamie Carothers, chairperson of the Ideas and Issues Committee.

"We want issues that are going to generate thought, and issues that people care about," Carothers said.

The committee will plan more debates in the spring, she said.

That's affirmative: (above) Abraham Spires, a legal assistant and debate panel member, argues for affirmative action during Tuesday's table discussions in the University Center. The debate was the first of two this fall, sponsored by UC Programs Ideas and Issues Committee, which will focus on different issues.

Arguing their case: (left) Pro-affirmative action panelists — Anthony Jones, Lubbock's Human Relations Coordinator, Julio Llanas, director of Texas Tech and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center Affirmative Action and Personnel Relations Office and Abraham Spires, a mediator and legal assistant — make a point in the debate while anti-affirmative action panelists — Eric Sanchez, a graduate student in History from Willow Park, Margie Jefferson, president of the National Coalition of One-Hundred Black Women and Christopher Snead, former Tech student — listen for a chance to rebuttal. The six panelists debated in front of an audience of about 20 people.

Minority enrollment increases

by Kirk Baird

The University Daily

Fall student enrollment at Texas Tech showed an increase from the Hispanic community, while the number of incoming black students decreased slightly.

New enrollment figures also show an increase in Native Americans, Asians and aliens, which is anyone maintaining citizenship outside the United States.

Patrick Day, coordinator of Tech's Multicultural Services Center, said a factor in the larger Hispanic enrollment was the proximity of Tech.

"The cultural shift coming to Tech is not as great for Hispanic students," Day said.

Tech recently was honored by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board for achieving significant increases in Hispanic and black student enrollment from 1989 to 1994.

Hispanic students at Tech increased 32.4 percent from 1,788 to 2,368, while black student enrollment increased 16 percent from 607 to 704, according to Coordinating Board records.

Priscilla Soto, Hispanic Student Society president, said she agreed with Day's assessment.

"Hispanics are used to the community, and they feel more comfortable in West Texas," Soto said.

Both Day and Soto said another factor in the Hispanic student increase was a more aggressive recruiting from the New Student Relations Office.

Robert Ewalt, vice president for student affairs, said he was encouraged by the new Tech minority enrollment figures, overall, but was disappointed in the drop in black student enrollment.

Tech engineering dean visits Siberia

by Charles Melton

The University Daily

A Siberian refinery is meeting its need for chemical engineers through Texas Tech's chemical engineering program.

The reputation of Tech's chemical engineering department played a role in 16 Russian students attending Tech to study chemical engineering, said Jorge Aunon, dean of the College of Engineering.

Aunon was invited by the Komsomolsk Oil Refinery to visit Siberia during the summer to meet the students' parents and tour Komsomolsk-On-Amur State Technical University.

"I went to Komsomolsk, a town in Siberia which has a fairly large oil refinery and aircraft industry, for a week in August," Aunon said. "It was hot and humid, with lots of vegetation. It made for an interesting trip."

The refinery is sponsoring the program that brought the students to Tech in order to meet its need for qualified chemical engineers, Aunon said.

"The oil refinery has sent students to Tech for the past two years," he said.

The students are taking intensive English courses and are dedicated students, he said.

Once they complete their English courses, the Russian students should graduate in three years, because they have taken many of the background courses required in engineering, Aunon said.

"There is pressure on the students to do well, because of the stipulations of the program and their families," he said.

Tech's Office of International Affairs is involved in the administration of the program.

"We have helped the students in many non-academic aspects of the program including getting their money to them and experiencing America," said Robert Crosier, special projects counselor.

Learning a new language has taken some time and some of the students have just begun taking regular chemical engineering classes, he said.

Even though they are taking regular classes, they are still in the process of developing language skills, he said.

Republican proposes legislation to make English top U.S. language

by Donald Gillilan

The University Daily

Echos of a language controversy that recently shook Amarillo are reverberating in Washington.

Rep. Pete King, R-N.Y., recommended changing government policies to make English the first official U.S. language.

A U.S. House subcommittee has scheduled hearings in mid-October on a range of proposals, including two that deal with bilingual education.

"It makes for great political rhetoric," said Victor Hernandez, Lubbock City Councilman and a member of the Mexican-American Bar Association. "Unfortunately, it also creates a further divided community. I think there will be a very big push in this coming presidential election year to pass such a bill."

The solution to the problem of making English the official language is the status quo, Hernandez said.

"There has never been an official language in the United States, and there is no reason to have an official language," he said. "It's all politics at its best or worst depending on your perspective."

A similar controversy concerning the English language erupted

Last month State District Judge Sam Kiser ordered a Spanish-speaking mother in Amarillo to speak both English and Spanish to her 5-year-old child; he later vacated the order.

Dan Isett, Tech College Republican president, said making English the official U.S. language would contribute to the unity of the country.

"When the immigrants came, they did not keep on speaking their native language," Isett said. "They learned English and assimilated into the American society."

What drew people to the United States was freedom, and what makes this country great was the unity of the people, he said.

"The people on the other side of this issue want to exploit the differences that people have," Isett said. "Having English as the official language is more practical."

Mark Somma, Tech political science professor, said to actually use legislation to make English the official language is not symbolic.

"One of this country's greatest strengths is its diversity," Somma said. "We have attracted people from all over the world to come here and help build the country, and they have done it."

When there is a country that is multicultural, such as the United States, the government has to be careful with the legislation, Somma said.

Tim Lambert, Lubbock representative for the Texas State Republican Executive Committee, said anybody who has done research on this topic knows that in order to be successful, they have to be able to speak English.

"There has been strong support for this measure for a long time," Lambert said. "To my understanding, the polls show that a majority of Americans want English."

TECH Talks

Q: Do you think English should be the official language of the United States?

Rain creates messy Tech campus, change of atmosphere for student

KIMBERLY OTT
UD guest columnist

I awoke to the not-so-soft pitter-pattering of rain on my window last Friday morning.

This came as a big surprise to me because I had always thought Lubbock, really all of West Texas, was supposed to be dry. That means no heavy spouts of rain.

This is my first year here, so I don't know if I had yet another false preconception or if this is an unusual year for weather.

However, I do know that I was so convinced that Lubbock was dry that I almost didn't pack my umbrella when I came to school. When I was told I needed waterproof boots to wade through water on campus, I thought it was a joke.

My first few weeks in Lubbock lived up to my expectations of little to no rain.

I even wrote my parents to tell them that I had seen the first signs of precipitation when it sprinkled briefly one afternoon.

Then, all of a sudden, the storms hit.

I felt like I was back in Houston, where it is not uncommon for it to rain for a few days.

Friday, when I awoke, it had apparently been raining for a couple of hours. I met a scene of soggy despair when I stepped outside en route to my 8 a.m. English class.

Feeling the wind and the rain on my bare legs, I promptly turned around to go back inside and change clothes. Instead of the shorts, T-shirt and loafers that I had on, I opted for jeans, a sweatshirt, and yes, waterproof boots.

I was happy to find that I remembered where I had hung my umbrella — although I really don't know how much good it did once the chilling wind turned it inside out.

After receiving more than four inches of rain Friday, the Texas Tech campus was a wreck. Because Lubbock is so flat and because it rains so little, I've been told that building a drainage system is just not economical or practical.

The water flowed freely across the streets, sidewalks, and fields, turning them into a muddy mess. I saw students struggle to stay dry with raincoats and umbrellas, but the water was too high. I, like many other students, stuck strictly to the flooded sidewalks because my usual path across the fields was just plain infeasible.

Off-campus, the scene was no better. Intersections turned into makeshift drainage systems. Officials were forced to close the intersections of 19th Street and Flint Avenue, Fourth Street and Slide Road, and Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue.

Many commuting students had trouble getting to class because of traffic problems resulting from the rain. Maintenance vehicles were busy setting up barricades to prevent motorists from stalling on flooded streets.

All of this because someone decided drainage systems are not needed in Lubbock. After sloshing through ankle-deep water all day, I tend to disagree.

Fraternity shows lack of respect for fellow students

To the editor: My girlfriend and I arrived at the first home game with high expectations for our football team, and expected a really close game. Little did we realize the disappointment we were going to experience, not from our team, but from a particular group of students sitting near us.

No, this is not about tortilla tossing, this is about certain "gang" activity exhibited by one of the social fraternities here on the Tech campus. To set the scene, my girlfriend and I arrived at the game 50 minutes before the game started to make sure we could get some good seats with our general admission student tickets. About 20 or 25 minutes before game time some members arrived and sat at the ends of four rows of seats in this general admission section. Their objective? To save seats for members of their fraternity and friends so they would not have to come so early to get good seats. As most people are aware, you are not allowed to save seats (at least not of that magnitude) in the student section of Jones Stadium. There are means of reserving a section for large groups that you can arrange ahead of time through stadium officials. Just before the band was about to take the field for the pregame show, two of my friends arrived, and made the mistake of sitting in this "reserved" section. One of the fraternity members who was saving these seats came over and tried to inform these buddies of mine that they were sitting in a reserved section. After I informed him that he could not save seats in the student section and that there was nothing he could do about it, he left, and I thought that would be the end of it.

Five minutes before game time, another member came over and told my friends they had to move. This time the argument went on and off for three-fourths of the first quarter of the game. It is important to note that the majority of the people that the seats were being saved for failed to arrive until five minutes had ticked off the game clock. At the start of the second half, after everyone stood the entire first half of the game, I thought everyone was in the mood to actually show some spirit and support of our team. Imagine my surprise when I stand for the second half and these people behind me start yelling at me to sit down.

One of my friends made the mistake of acknowledging their presence and turned around to tell them to just shut up because we were not going to sit down. This is when these fraternity members started throwing ice and half full glasses of Coke at us. After they had pelted and showered me, my friends and almost everyone around us, I left to get a police officer. Of course they did not know that was what I was doing, and they cheered when I left. LPD and stadium officials were informed of the situation and were monitoring this section of the stands for the rest of the game. Luckily for the fraternity members, they were not throwing ice any more, just yelling names. Upon my return to my seat, a member of this fraternity came down and tried to explain how rude and inconsiderate we were for not sitting down where everyone else was sitting. Nope, I don't take hypocrite's advice, sorry.

I remained the whole game, standing, and the majority of these fraternity members left with over half of the fourth quarter left. I realize that we were ahead by a wide margin, but there is always something to be said about team support until finish, bitter or not. My girlfriend was quick to point out that the people behind us failed to cheer except when a touchdown was scored, and then they were asking "What happened?" during the entire second half. What were they doing? Socializing, smoking and drinking alcohol, of which two of these activities are prohibited in Jones Stadium. The other is frowned upon by other people trying to watch the game. This seems like a waste of money, and time. If all you were going to do was this, you should have gone home at the half, or better yet, not come at all. There were plenty of Red Raiders that would have gladly taken the space you were occupying. And as a final note, in my six years of attending home games as a student of this university, I can honestly say, I have never been more appalled by fellow student behavior.

Tech students' views about sex differ

by Emily Elsen

The University Daily

College life may lead students to view ideas in a new perspective, including their outlook on sexuality.

"A big part of their sexual experimentation is being away from home for the first time," said Eileen Nathan, associate director of the University Counseling Center.

Students tend to experiment with many things during this time, mostly alcohol and sex, she said.

"One thing students need to be wary of is that alcohol is a tremendous factor in the amount of acquaintance rapes committed because it alters peoples' perceptions," she said.

Jo Hutcherson, director of Student Health at Thompson Hall, said students become sexually active simply because they want to experiment.

"Students entering college think they're immortal," Hutcherson said. "They live for today and they think that everybody is a good person."

SEX SURVEY

of 100 random Tech students

- 35 are sexually active.
- 26 were treated for a sexually transmitted disease.
- 13 do not use contraception.
- 28 have become more sexually active since entering college.

Bad choices and unprotected sex stem from peer pressure or choices made while drinking, she said.

"I think you have to stand up for your own values," Hutcherson said.

"If you can make good choices about your sexual behavior you can look in the mirror everyday and feel good about yourself."

Kristi Flint, a junior political science major from San Angelo, said sex is different for each individual.

"For some college students, premarital sex is right and for some it is wrong," Flint said. "Some students are not mentally or emotionally ready to commit to sex."

"The whole idea of premarital sex being a concept college students are faced with in our culture stems from lots of peer pressure from our friends and the media."

Thirty percent of students who visit Student Health are treated for sexually transmitted diseases, Hutcherson said.

"If students have three new partners a year, they have a 100 percent chance of becoming infected with some kind of STD," she said.

"There are 35 different types of sexually transmitted diseases students can acquire."

Melanie Clinton, a sophomore biology major from Midland, said she will not have premarital sex because of her religious beliefs.

"Sex should be saved to give to one person," she said.

"This is a personal choice that I have made, and I won't make judgments on the way others believe."

Clinton said it is hard to practice her beliefs sometimes because society and the media perpetuate sexual themes.

"It's hardest for me because it seems that everybody else is having sex, and society says this kind of behavior is okay," she said.

Some college students are seeking long-term relationships as opposed to one-night stands, said Paul Branson, a junior finance major from El Paso.

"Some people wait longer," he said. "Some people are choosy of their sexual partners, but for others it's a sport."

Branson said he is looking for commitment in his relationships.

"I'd rather wait and find one person that I could have a relationship with, than date 10 girls that I didn't know very well," he said.

National business club now at Tech

by Brian Lacy

The University Daily

Texas Tech students now have a new outlet for gaining civic experience and performing community service in Lubbock.

The national chapter of the American Business Clubs (AMBUCS), in conjunction with the Lubbock Monterey chapter, has started a new chapter for interested Tech students — one of the first clubs of its kind, said Oscar Will, Lubbock Monterey chapter president.

"This is a pilot program as far as being available for college students," Will said. "Texas Tech is the second university to get involved."

The new college chapter, which selected its officers at its second weekly meeting Tuesday night, offers students social contacts, opportunities and personal growth, Will said.

"What we're trying to do is develop community pride and development with the college-age people," he said.

"Many times young people don't get involved in civic life, and we're trying to give them the pride that goes with giving back to the community."

The new chapter provides help for people with disabilities here in Lubbock, Will said.

"The college chapter will basically put on fund-raisers to raise money for projects throughout the Lubbock community," Will said.

The new college chapter has 11 members and needs 20 members to become an official chapter, said Richard Hamilton, a member of the AMBUCS building team.

"We have to have 20 members, but we want to get 50 members by early November," Hamilton said.

"Everyone who has come so far has been very interested in the organization."

The chapter will be basically run by students, Hamilton said.

"Those who already come to meetings will basically get to decide the future of the college chapter," he said.

"Students will decide the name of the chapter, how they wish to spend the money and whether they want to work through Texas Tech or through the city."

There are numerous projects students may help raise money for and participate in, Hamilton said.

"Whether it's supporting funding for a drug program, participating in the women's protective services as Santa Claus or building wheelchair ramps for disabled people, there are plenty of opportunities for service," he said.

"The chapter will basically create independence for those with disabilities, whether it is mental or physical."

Students interested in the AMBUCS college chapter should call Oscar Will at 793-0623.

Enrollment

has held pretty steady," Ewalt said. "We will continue to work hard to improve the enrollment in this area."

Hispanic students are more likely to attend Tech because of its location, Day said.

Blacks, however, are more likely to attend universities in larger urban areas, he said.

"We did extremely well considering many of our African-American students must travel two to three times farther than if they attended other universities closer to urban areas," Day said.

Lisa Baker, president of the Black Students Association, said New Student Relations should work with campus organizations in recruiting minority students.

By incorporating the active recruiting process, minorities would become better informed about different organizations at Tech and would be more willing to consider attending Tech, Baker said.

News media weigh decision to run Unabomber's manifesto

NEW YORK (AP) — Journalists will argue for years about the agonizing decision by The New York Times and The Washington Post to publish the 35,000-word manifesto of the terrorist known as the Unabomber.

In the din of debate Tuesday, though, there was one patch of quiet agreement. Editors and scholars around the country shared a sense of relief that they weren't the ones on the hot seat.

"I'm glad, as most editors in the country are, that it wasn't my decision to make," said Sandra Mims Rowe, editor of The Oregonian in Portland.

She added: "I think they made the right decision."

"I instinctively oppose it," said Doug Clifton, executive editor of The Miami Herald.

Still, he added, "it's a heck of a lot easier to say that in the abstract. ... They have had to deal with a real situation, while the rest of us are dealing with a theoretical one."

In the theoretical debate, the lines were drawn between those who said the two newspapers were acting in the public interest, and those who said the Times and Post had sacrificed their journalistic independence and set a dangerous precedent by caving in to a killer and extortionist.

The Unabomber, who is blamed for killing three people and injuring 23 others in a 17-year campaign of bombings, sent the manuscript to the Times and Post in June, two months after issuing a demand: If at least one of the newspapers would print his manifesto, he would stop killing.

He also demanded that the newspapers print three annual follow-up publications.

He gave the newspapers a three-month deadline. Five days short of the deadline, the Post published an eight-page section in Tuesday's editions containing the entire text of the Unabomber's essay on the evils of industrialization.

CBS falls to fourth in weekly ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk about a black eye.

Proudly unveiling several new series, along with season premieres of other returnees, CBS got its lights punched out last week.

Officially, this Sept. 11-17 Nielsen ratings report closed the book on a 1994-95 season that saw CBS free-fall from first place to third. But in a dismal final chapter, CBS buried itself into fourth for the week, while Fox Broadcasting Co. breezed to an unaccustomed third.

Winning the week was ABC, with an 11.3 rating and 19 share. Taking second place was NBC, with a 9.8 rating and 17 share. Broadcasting 15 hours of the 22-hour prime-time schedule, Fox scored an 8.4 rating and 14 share.

Then came CBS, with an 8.0 and 14 share.

Among the "emerging networks," Paramount's UPN (programming four hours weekly) had a 3.6 rating and 6 share while Warner's The WB (programming five hours weekly) had a 1.9 rating and 3 share.

One ratings point equals 959,000 television households. Share is the percentage of TV sets in use at any one time.

Fox scored solidly with its "Simpsons" who-shot-Mr.-Burns season premiere, ranking 16th. Not too far behind, at 23rd, was the same network's season launch of "Beverly Hills, 90210," up against the debut of "Central Park West," on which CBS is counting to help lead it out of the darkness.

Movies, kids' shows the villains in TV violence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Theatrical movies and children's shows, not prime-time series television, bear much of the blame for TV's blood-and-guts reputation, a study released Tuesday says.

The UCLA Television Violence Monitoring Report found that, of 121 TV series airing during the 1994-95 season, 10 were frequently violent or used violence in questionable ways — graphically or heroically, for example, said Jeffrey Cole, director of the university's Center for Communications Policy.

However, nearly half of the theatrical films shown on network television raise serious concerns about violence, as did many Saturday morning children's shows as well as promotions for programming.

"We found relatively few issues of great concern within television series," Cole said. "The picture is not as hopeful with regard to theatrical films on television."

Of 118 films in the study, 50 — about 42 percent — raised concerns about violence.

In one, "Marked for Death," Cole said, "you can hear the spine crack and almost see an impalement."

In children's programming, the study particularly criticized shows that featured what Cole called "sinister combat violence" — unrelenting fights between figures of good and evil. Shows singled out include "X-Men" and "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles."

Cole stressed that the study did not simply count up the incidents of violence in any program, but tried to look at violent scenes in context, such as whether scenes are particularly gory or whether viewers are made aware of the consequences of the violence depicted.

The series that had the most incidents of questionable violence — 12 over the season — were "Walker, Texas, Ranger," "Mantis" and "The X-Files."

Others were "Due South," "Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman," "Fortune Hunter," "Tales from the Crypt," "VR.5," "Marker" and "America's Funniest Home Videos."

The $500,000 study was financed by ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox Broadcasting Co., but Cole said the researchers were not under network control. He said the networks received copies of the 181-page study at the same time it was publicly released.

Although he welcomed the networks' decision to take part in the study, he noted it was largely the result of political pressure brought to bear by members of Congress and others concerned about violence in the medium.

The study is the first of three reports that are part of the network-financed project.

The next report, reviewing the 1995-96 season, will be released next year.

The report also contains these recommendations:

- Scheduling programs with violent themes or images at 9 p.m. or later.
- Re-examining the policy on running promotional spots, including their scheduling and degree of violence shown.
- Reconsidering which theatrical films can be edited to be suitable for broadcast television.

Hey, what's that smell?

Wind direction related to odor in Lubbock

by Michelle Elizardo

The University Daily

For many Lubbock residents, the Hub City is known for the Red Raiders, the strong winds, the bad drainage system and the smell.

While walking to class, many Texas Tech students may be wondering what that funky, stinky smell might be.

"Don't be too alarmed — it's just the winds bringing in the smell from the animals housed in Lubbock's feedlots, stockyards or pig farms."

When the wind blows the right way, Hub City residents would rather be inside than face the stench that is waiting for them outside.

"It's a large concentration of manure in an area, and then when you have a good rainstorm like this, it kind of stirs things up and gets up in the air," said Kelly Leight, assistant manager at the Burnett Center, the Tech feedlot in New Deal.

Leight said there is nothing anyone can do about the smell, and it does not pose as a health hazard.

The smell does tend to get worse during wet weather, like the kind the city is currently having, and hot weather, Leight said.

"When it's hot outside, it, of course, is going to create an odor," Leight said. "The major cause is the winds blowing south to north, of course, bringing it right through town."

Any winds blowing in a strong direction will tend to disperse the smell faster, said Douglas A. Smith, a research assistant professor in the civil engineering department.

"Light winds won't carry the smell as far and that's when it gets more concentrated," Smith said.

Tech students say they have mixed feelings about the smell.

"At that point, I wanted to know why I chose Texas Tech, there are so many other colleges in towns that don't smell like cows," said Erin Carmichael, a freshman physiology major from Dallas. "It's just gross."

Jason Thomasson, a sophomore exercise sports science major from Pecos, said the smell doesn't bother him.

"It smells like home to me," he said.

When Jennifer Tidwell smells the stench in the air, she thinks of something other than manure.

"My friend stated that it smells like money because they run a cattle operation," she said. "Every time I smell, that's what I think."

Netscape security found penetratable

NEW YORK (AP) — Netscape, one of the most popular software programs for navigating the Internet, has a security flaw that could give hackers access to sensitive information such as credit card numbers, The New York Times reported on Tuesday.

Two University of California at Berkeley graduate students, Ian Goldberg, 22 and David Wagner, 21, found that a knowledgeable computer user could break the program's coding system in less than a minute to retrieve secret credit information, the newspaper said.

Their findings were published on a computer mailing list on the Internet's World Wide Web Sunday evening, the Times said.

The company said it would release a repaired version of the software within a week that can be downloaded from its web site (<http://home.netscape.com>), the Times said.

A message left by The Associated Press at Netscape offices in San Francisco late Monday wasn't returned.

An estimated 8 million users, including thousands of companies, utilize Netscape software for advertising and sales. Some use the programs to check bank balances and for catalog shopping.

Netscape began publicly trading its shares last month, and had one of the most successful debuts in Wall Street history, in part because of the company's assurances about security.

Also Tuesday, the Times reported that IBM was expected to sign a major licensing agreement with Netscape Communications, involving more than a million copies of a Netscape browser for use on the Prodigy on-line information service.

Channel hits airwaves with Star Trek marathon

by Leslie Weeks

The University Daily

Get ready to reprogram the remote and soak in some Star Trek, there's a new station in town and it's hitting the airwaves Thursday night.

The station, KUPT, is an affiliate of the United Paramount Network.

The station will officially brighten local television sets at 7 p.m. Thursday on TV channel 22.

Programming will begin with 79 back-to-back episodes of the original Star Trek series.

"There will be 79 hours of Captain Kirk and Dr. Spock," said KJTV station manager Randy Roberts.

"All the episodes will be shown in perfect order, and they will last until 2 a.m. Monday.

"We just thought it would be a fun way to kick the station off," Roberts said. "The bottom line is people like Star Trek. They are just huge hits."

Roberts said KUPT is owned by the station KJTV.

Although the station operates out of the same building, it is a completely separate station.

In the past, KUPT has shown programs such as "Saved By the Bell," "Perfect Strangers," "Step by Step," and "Murphy Brown," he said.

A prime time movie will be shown every night, Mondays and Tuesdays excluded, Roberts said.

"There will be different movies shown throughout the month," he said.

"Some movies will have very fa-

Roberts said KUPT is an over-the-air station that is free to viewers.

"If you have a TV and an antenna you should be able to pick this station up," he said.

"However, when we go on the air Thursday we will not be on the cable station."

Roberts said he is working with Cox Cable.

He also said he hopes to make it part of their system in the near future.

"Any viewer who does have cable can disconnect the cable to pick up the new station," he said.

"If not, the cable overrides the over-the-air signals."

Randy Wink, vice president and general manager of Cox Communications, said because the company is channel constrained, they currently have no time scheduled for the new KUPT station.

"In order to offer it, we would have to drop a channel," he said.

"When we add channels we look at the type of programming it has to offer and how it meets the demographics of our consumers."

Roberts said he thinks United Paramount Network is going to be a strong network in the coming years.

"There are so many quality programs available to television stations that are on the air in Lubbock," he said.

"We don't have enough time in the day to carry all of the quality shows."

We feel there is a very definite market here."

Professor gives college career advice using six step process

by Ny Lynn Nichols

Contributing writer

Students who treat school like an 8 a.m.-to-5 p.m.-job get better grades.

That was the key piece of advice University of Alabama Professor Rae Mellichamp gave to students and professors at his seminar "How to Get Better Grades and Have More Fun" at 7 p.m. Tuesday in LH 202, Business Administration Auditorium.

"You're all going to be working 8 (a.m.) to 5 (p.m.) for the rest of your productive lives," Mellichamp said. "You're going to have to get up early, and you've got to make your time count during the day."

He said there are two reasons students should make good grades.

"No. 1, they're prominent," he said. "No. 2, they're permanent."

"(Recruits will) be politely interested in your activities," he said.

"When you graduate from Texas Tech University and start looking for a job, the No. 1 thing recruits are going to want to know is what were your grades."

He graduated from Georgia Tech with a 2.4 GPA, he said. "I graduated years later with a Ph.D." he said. "My GPA was a 3.9 plus."

He changed his study habits, and the change contributed to his GPA's increase, Mellichamp said.

There are six ways students can increase grades, he said.

"No. 1, you ought to have written down the GPA you want to graduate with," he said.

Students may raise their goal, but not lower it, he said.

His second point is treating college like an 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. job.

"(If a student has) no class from 9 (a.m.) to 10 (p.m.) — what do you do," Mellichamp said.

"If you take that one-hour chunk, three days a week, you can do the homework for two courses," he said.

Going to class is the third way to improve grades, he said.

"The worst excuse I ever heard," was a girl stayed home to bury her cat," he said.

"Students who come to class make good grades," he said.

Fourth, keeping up with assignments is important, he said.

Getting to know professors was his fifth piece of advice.

"(The student who has) been to class, been by to see me, been enthusiastic — I'll give that student a higher grade every time," he said.

Lastly, students should be well-rounded, he said.

"I had reached all my goals before I was 30," Mellichamp said. "I had that empty feeling. I started looking at the Bible."

"I think it's all real practical," said Jennifer Oswald, a senior general dietetics major from Houston. "They're things I knew but haven't been doing."

Mellichamp's advice will be put to good use, Oswald said.

"I'm going to start keeping up with my homework and get to know my professors," she said. "When I see my first round of grades come back, that will be my motivation."

Spray could help relieve anguish of common cold

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Sorry, the common cold still has no cure.

But the next best thing is in the works: a simple nasal spray to protect people from catching the sniffles.

If this treatment works out — and it's still far from proven and years away from drugstore shelves — it will be a rare victory against an exceptionally wily enemy.

No medicine can make the ubiquitous head cold go away, not even chicken soup.

And nothing can keep the runny nose, the aching sinuses, the sore throat and all the rest from striking the body in the first place.

But that may be changing. In recent years, scientists have learned a lot about how the cold virus raises havoc. And this new understanding is beginning to pay off with strategies that may at last fend it off.

The latest approach is intended to protect vulnerable nasal passages from invasion by the rhinovirus.

It seems to work — at least in chimpanzees.

Whether humans will fare so well remains to be seen.

The precise dosage is a future matter, too, but scientists believe they can develop a spray that will be squirted in the nose just once or twice a day to keep colds away through the worst season.

If the blocking agent pans out, it will be the first medicine that stops infection using the variety of the virus that causes about half of all colds.

"The idea is to take advantage of how the rhinovirus enters the body," said Dr. Edward D. Huguene of Bayer Corp., who heads the team developing the drug.

He outlined the work Tuesday at an infectious disease meeting sponsored by the American Society for Microbiology. About 100 varieties of rhinovirus exist.

Catching one of these makes people immune to that particular bug. But they are still susceptible to all other strains.

That's why the average adult catches two or three colds a year.

The virus attacks through the nose. It latches onto a spot in the nasal lining that scientists call intracellular adhesion molecule-1, or ICAM-1.

The new treatment is a modified version of ICAM-1 in soluble spray form.

When put into the nose, this protein swamps the virus with potential targets so it latches harmlessly onto the decoy rather than the lining of the nose.

Popcorn king Redenbacher, 88, dies in whirlpool spa

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Orville Redenbacher, whose devotion to creating and promoting a fluffier, tastier popcorn turned him into a bow-tied advertising icon, has died. He was 88.

Redenbacher was found Tuesday morning in a whirlpool spa in his condominium, where he drowned following a heart attack, said Cal Vine, of the medical examiner's office.

Redenbacher, instantly recognizable by his natty bow tie and suspenders and neatly parted white hair, became famous through cheerful, folksy commercials for the popcorn named after him.

"Many people thought he was a media creation, but what people saw on television, that was him," said William E. Smith, executive director of The Popcorn Institute in Chicago and a friend of Redenbacher's for 43 years.

"In all of our industry, he was one of the great gentlemen and great personalities."

Redenbacher's image, so wholesome and middle-American it almost seemed a caricature, overshadowed his agricultural savvy, which he used to create his gourmet popping corn with his friend Charles Bowman.

Armstrong refuses to play as peacemaker on feuding team

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—B.J. Armstrong says he'll do anything he can to make the Golden State Warriors a better club, even if it means coming off the bench.

But there's a limit to what he'll do for the team.

Armstrong, a day after his trade from the Toronto Raptors to the Warriors, said Tuesday he has no desire to act as a peacemaker between feuding All-Star guards Tim Hardaway and Latrell Sprewell.

"I don't want to take on too much," Armstrong said. "I want to be very careful."

Armstrong, the first pick by Toronto in June's expansion draft, was traded to the Warriors on Monday for forwards Victor Alexander and Carlos Rogers and the rights to second-round draft picks Dwayne Whitfield, Martin Lewis and Michael McDonald.

After winning three NBA championship rings in six seasons with the Chicago Bulls, Armstrong will join a team that finished last season in disarray—including public bickering between Hardaway and Sprewell.

The trade for Armstrong, whose 43.7 percent accuracy from 3-point range is the third best in league history, has been a poorly kept secret since the NBA draft in late June.

But it could not be announced until the lockout was lifted Monday.

Armstrong took time out from his honeymoon in the Napa Valley on Tuesday for a Warriors news conference.

The acquisition of Armstrong has led to speculation Hardaway or Sprewell will be traded.

General manager Dave Twardzik has dismissed such rumors.

Coach Rick Adelman, who also will be beginning his first season with the Warriors, said having three talented guards battling for playing time is a healthy situation similar to one he faced in Portland with Terry Porter, Rod Strickland and Clyde Drexler.

Adelman said no one has been promised a starting backcourt job with the Warriors.

"It's not going to be like last year," he said. "It's a new year, a new staff."

Tech women' soccer team set to take on Angelo State

by Brent Ross

The University Daily

The Texas Tech women's soccer team plays Angelo State at 1 p.m. today at R.P. Fuller Track Stadium. This will be the second meeting between the two teams in eight days.

The Red Raiders are coming off a pair of weekend matches in which they suffered their first loss of the season to Tulsa.

Junior midfielder Kristi Patterson said the team can use the loss to improve itself.

"Hopefully it will be a building process," Patterson said. "That's the way I'm looking at it."

"That game really showed us what we need to work on."

Tech is looking to improve on last Wednesday's 3-1 defeat of Angelo State. Forward Jennifer Benat scored twice and added an assist to go along with defender Raney Terrell's second-half goal.

Patterson said this week in practice the team has been concentrating on ball control.

"The main thing we are working on is possession," she said. "That's what we need to work on. If you possess the ball, you can win the game."

An underlying theme of today's game will be the showdown between Patterson and her sister Kasey Patterson, a midfielder for the Rams.

The Red Raiders lost key players Patterson and goalkeeper Stephanie Carter to injury in the first meeting with Angelo State. Tech head coach Diane Nichols attributed these injuries to the Rams' physical play, but said Tech is better prepared for the second meeting.

"We pretty much know their strengths and weaknesses," Nichols said. "We know what to expect."

Nichols said if it doesn't rain today, conditions at the field should be fine even after the rain this weekend.

"I think (R.P.) Fuller field will be all right," Nichols said. "This is great soccer weather."

Tagliabue defends NFL's revenue-sharing system to Cowboys' Jones

ATLANTA (AP)—An angry commissioner Paul Tagliabue vehemently defended the NFL's revenue-sharing system Tuesday, even as Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones insisted he was not trying to tear it down.

Jones met Tuesday with the team owners who sued him for $300 million after he signed agreements with non-league sponsors Nike and Pepsi. While Jones expressed satisfaction with the meeting, Tagliabue never seemed more ready to take him on.

"The National Football League has very clear cut ways of doing business which has distinguished it from all other leagues and made it as great as it is," the normally composed Tagliabue said during a news conference in which he frequently raised his voice.

"It's a philosophy and a commitment to do business in a certain way that's been very successful. That's what it's about. When you have a successful philosophy which has worked for 76 1/2 years, you hold it pretty sacred."

The suit was filed Monday in federal court in New York after a unanimous vote by five members of the executive committee of NFL Properties, the league's marketing arm.

"This attack on NFL Properties is part of the pressure for teams to move, because if they're going to do their own marketing, then everyone is going to try to move to the best market," Tagliabue said.

"That's what this is about. It's not about soda pops and cola and shoes, logos, do-rags and so forth."

Jones met for four hours with the other 29 owners, and he assured them he wasn't breaking league rules.

Spikers open SWC play with Cougars

by Chris Parry

The University Daily

The Texas Tech volleyball team heads into Southwest Conference play with a key matchup against Houston at 7 p.m. today at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The Cougars are the defending SWC champions, and are led by the hitting tandem of junior Nashika Stokes and sophomore Debbie Vokes. Stokes leads the conference with 4.47 kills a game, including 24 kills in the Cougars' win over Florida State Saturday.

Tech coach Jeff Nelson said he recognizes the force of the Cougar hitter.

"She's an outstanding player," Nelson said of Stokes.

Vokes is another concern for Tech as she is third in the SWC in kills, averaging 4.05 kills a game. Vokes has posted double-figure kills in every match this season.

Despite the strong hitting duo, the Cougars have played through some key injuries — including the season-ending knee injury suffered by junior All-SWC candidate Emily Leffers.

Nelson said Tech needs to keep playing with the same intensity as it did last weekend.

"We need to serve the ball tough," Nelson said.

"The key is who's aggressive and who goes after it."

TEXAS TECH (7-3) vs. HOUSTON (5-3)

Time: 7 p.m. Day: Today
Place: Lubbock Municipal Coliseum
Series record: Houston leads the series 26-15
Last Meeting: Houston won in three games in the Southwest Conference Tournament, Nov. 19.

Radio/TV: KTXT-FM 88.1

Key Matchup: Tech's blockers will have to neutralize a strong Houston hitting duo.

UD Prediction: Tech in five games.

Nelson said if his team can maintain the level that it has been playing at of late, then it has a good chance to come out with a win.

Tech is coming off its first tournament title in four years and has a 7-3 record going into tonight's match. Senior outside hitter Jennifer Cohn was named Southwest Conference player of the week for her efforts this weekend in the Iowa State Tournament.

Cohn said Tech's defense will play a big part in the outcome of the match.

"Outside blocking is a big key to the game," Cohn said. "Our blocking needs to improve."

Tech rides a four-game winning streak into this conference opener and has won six out of its last seven games.

Senior outside hitter Diane Owens said the team feels good about the match.

"I think we are in a really good position," Owens said. "Last week was a big confidence booster."

Tech, which lost three times to Houston last year, had its 25-match winning streak in the Student Recreation Center snapped when the Cougars won in five games 7-15, 15-12, 6-15, 15-13, 12-15.

Owens said the players remember last year and know what they have to do to be successful this time around.

"We have some revenge out for them," Owens said. "We need to maintain ball control and keep our intensity up from last weekend."

The match is being billed as "Business Day," which means anyone leaving a business card will receive $1 off on up to four match tickets ($5 adult or $3 children).

Tech remains focused on Baylor

by Jared Parcell

The University Daily

The Texas Tech football team will relax this week with only three scheduled practices, but will remain focused on its next opponent, Southwest Conference foe Baylor, Tech coach Spike Dykes said Monday.

Tech (1-1) enters its final off week of the season, and starts a nine-game stretch, beginning with the Bears, in Waco, on Sept. 30.

The game has been moved to an 11 a.m. kickoff and will be televised by ABC on a regional basis.

The Red Raiders are coming off an impressive 41-14 victory over the Missouri Tigers, a future Big 12 opponent.

Quarterback Zebbie Lethridge has struggled in the early portion of the season, but Dykes said there is no reason to be concerned.

Lethridge, a sophomore from Lubbock, has completed 17 of 47 passes for 290 yards and three touchdowns.

"We have to have some consistency," Dykes said.

"The problem is we have a new cast of characters. The timing is not there but with an off week, they can become more familiar with each other."

Dykes said wide receiver Field Scovell was limited to holding on field goal attempts Saturday against the Tigers because of a hamstring injury.

Dykes said sophomore receiver Tony Darden, who was on the receiving end of Lethridge's 66-yard touchdown strike against Missouri, left the game after he suffered a sprained ankle on the play. Darden will not miss any game time.

With the loss of leading receiver Sheldon Bass, who broke his collar bone during two-a-days, Tech receiving corp has not been in top shape, Dykes said.

Sophomore I-back Byron Hanspard has emerged as the team's rushing leader, gaining a career-high 117 yards

Thomas nabs weekly honor

For the third time in his Red Raider career, senior middle line-backer Zach Thomas was named Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week.

Thomas

In Texas Tech's 41-14 victory over Missouri, Thomas finished with a career-high 20 tackles.

"It doesn't matter how many tackles I have," he said.

"I should be there to make tackles. I haven't played to the top of my game yet."

Thomas shared the defensive award with Tre Thomas of Texas, who intercepted three passes during the Longhorns' 38-27 win over Pittsburgh.

Leeland McElroy, a Heisman trophy candidate from Texas A&M, was named SWC Offensive Player of the Week.

He rushed 23 times for 116 yards and three touchdowns.

Thomas also caught four passes for 128 yards and another touchdown.

"It's good to be recognized, but hopefully I can be named more often," Thomas said.

"I don't think about it. We're just trying to get ready for Baylor."

NCAA will not impose penalty on Baylor

WACO (AP) — The NCAA said Tuesday it will not impose additional penalties on Baylor University's basketball program, which the school itself has already punished.

The NCAA deplored "significant, intentional and egregious" violations of the program under former head coach Darrel Johnson, but said Baylor's self-imposed sanctions were enough. The school has replaced the entire coaching staff, reduced scholarships and imposed a two-year ban on post-season play and one-year ban on television appearances.

"As a result of these actions, the committee declined to impose any further penalties on the university," the committee said in a statement released at the start of a 2 p.m. CDT news conference.

"Had the former coaches involved in the case still been employed at Baylor, the university could have been subjected to additional penalties," the statement said.

The committee did place restrictions on the future employment by NCAA member institutions of the four coaches involved in the case.

Fit/Well

Screening scheduled for Sept. 28

Every adult is advised to know his or her cholesterol reading. The Student Rec Center provides this opportunity twice each semester and this service is available to all students, faculty and staff and spouses — Rec center membership is not required. The cost is $8 for a total lipid profile (total cholesterol, HDL, VLDL and triglyceride) and the glucose reading is an additional $2. The screening will be done from 6:40 to 8:30 a.m. Please register by Sept. 27 by calling 742-3828. Payment is required when the screening is done. A 12-hour fast is suggested. Take advantage of this service and become more responsible for your health.

Walking workshop tonight

Learn how to make walking your aerobic exercise. Some principles will be discussed and participants will walk the Rockport 1-mile walk. The results of this give a 20-week walking program. The workshop will be held in Room 205 but come prepared to walk.

Weight management class continues

The Weight Management Class began last night but participants can still register by calling 742-3828. The class will run for 4 more weeks on Tuesdays from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Nutrition, exercise and behavior modification will be discussed. There is a $6 fee.

Interested in Being an Aerobic Instructor?

The Rec Center is offering a 4-week program to learn the basics of teaching aerobics. Class will meet on Tuesdays, Sept. 26 through October 17 from 4 to 5:15 p.m. There is a $12 fee for the class.

For those more advanced aerobic instructors...

Please note that an AFAA aerobic primary certification will be offered at the Rec Center Oct. 28. Texas Tech full-time students, faculty and staff are eligible for a discounted price of $99 instead of $229. Information and applications are available from Betty Blanton at 742-3828. A weekend of seminars title the West Texas Fitness Jam also will be offered that weekend. Please call for information.

Weekly Injury Clinic Scheduled

The first in a series of weekly injury clinics begins next Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Room 201 of the Student Recreation Center.

The clinics, which are free, are hosted by Dr. Dan Burchfield and the Sports Medicine residents from the Texas Tech Health Science Center.

Students with athletic-type injuries are encouraged to attend the clinic and have one of the orthopaedic doctors examine the injury. Rehabilitation, referrals and advice on prevention will be discussed with each individual.

All exams and discussions are handled in a group setting so those attending are reminded to dress in workout gear if appropriate.

This clinic will meet each Wednesday through Nov. 15. Additional information is available by calling the Recreational Sports office at 742-3351.

Outdoor Clinic

Two upcoming workshops on outdoor topics are rappelling and knot tying. Rappelling will be held Thursday at 4 p.m. and the knot tying workshop will be held Sept. 25 at 5 p.m.

These workshops are open to all students and individuals who have memberships to the Student Recreation Center. Sign up in the Outdoor Shop at 742-2949.

At the rappelling workshop, participants will learn about the equipment, procedures and safety of rappelling. They will then rappel down a 30-foot wall inside the SRC. It is a basic learning experience for beginners. Participants should meet on the top floor of the SRC, north end.

The knot tying workshop will cover basic knots and ways in which they can be used. Participants will learn a bowline, a figure eight, a fisherman's knot and many more. Learn how to tie down a canoe, stake a tent, etc. Basic knots for rock climbing also will be covered.

Upcoming Adventure Trips

The Outdoor Program is taking a group to Carlsbad Caverns National Park this weekend. Call the Outdoor Shop to see if there are any spaces available.

Wichita Mountain Wildlife Refuge, Elk Bugling Sept. 29-Oct. 1

Travel to this beautiful wildlife refuge where herds of buffalo, longhorn cattle and elk reside and wander freely. Rangers from the park will take the group on an elk bugling tour to see and hear these wonderful creatures. Cost of the trip is $40 and includes transportation, park and camping fees and camping fees. There will be a pre-trip meeting Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 5:15 p.m., Room 205 SRC. Please call the Outdoor Shop for more information or to see if there are any spots remaining, 742-2949.

Volleyball, co-rec basketball coming soon

Intramural Volleyball will be the highlight sports for intramurals in the coming weeks.

Entries for these activities will be accepted in SRC 202 beginning Oct. 3 and will continue through Oct. 5.

Teams wishing to enter are reminded that the earlier they enter the better their chances of selecting a favorable playing time.

Team managers should bring a list of players' names, addresses and phone numbers to SRC 202 during the entry period along with their refundable $25 forfeit fee to select their regular season playing time.

Call to reserve fitness equipment or racquetball courts today. 742-3352.

The Pool will be closed Sept. 21-26 to put the top on.

Alternative Men's Gym hours are:
 Thurs. 9/21 12:30-1:30 p.m. and 6:30-9 p.m.
 Fri. 9/22 Noon-1 p.m. and 6:30-9 p.m.
 Sat. 9/23 3-6 p.m.
 Mon. 9/25 Noon-1 p.m. and 6:30-9 p.m.
 Tues 9/26 12:30-1:30 p.m. and 6:30-9 p.m.

**The Men's Gym is located on Akron Street just across from the white dome-covered building.

Golf entries being accepted

Entries are now being taken for the 1995 Intramural Singles Golf Tournament in the Rec Sports Office, SRC 202, during regular office hours.

Entries will be accepted through Sept. 27.

Each entry must be accompanied by a nonrefundable $19 green fee. Make checks payable to Elm Grove Golf Course.

The tournament will be played Sept. 30 with available tee times beginning at 1 a.m. and ending at 4:12 p.m.

All entrants may select their tee time at time of entry. Information sheets are now available in the Rec Sports Office.

This is an 18-hole, low gross score tournament played by USGA and course rules. For more information, contact the Intramural Sports Office at 742-3351 during regular office hours.

Fall intramural schedules available

Fall intramural softball and co-rec volleyball teams have begun league play. Teams who have registered to play are encouraged to come by the Student Recreation
