Lawless discusses Tech parking woes

by Carrie Kilman

The University Daily

Parking problems on the Texas Tech campus may soon be solved by plans Tech President Robert Lawless outlined at the Student Senate meeting Thursday.

Since the fall semester began, commuter students have complained about the shortage of parking spaces, Lawless said.

"This is not a problem that is beyond our control," he said. "We, the administration, have created the problem by scheduling all of your classes at 10 a.m. We take full responsibility."

More classes are scheduled at 10 a.m. than at any other time of the day, Lawless said.

"I want to ask you, how will students react to spreading out classes into the afternoon?" he said. "Parking lots are not that full at 2 p.m."

The administration is considering offering more sections of classes in the afternoon instead of mainly in the morning, Lawless said.

"I'm asking for student input before we decide to go and do something," he said. "Students can't take certain basic core classes during their freshman and sophomore years because of the parking and scheduling problems."

The Office of Traffic and Parking sells more parking permits than there are parking spaces because not all students come to campus every day, Lawless said.

"To build a parking garage may be part of the solution," he said.

Matt Freeman, a senior political science major from Lubbock and senate president, said Lawless' solution for the parking problem is not feasible.

"I think Tech has too many parking hassles," Freeman said.

"We either need to increase the number of parking places offered to students or build new lots."

Classes offered in the afternoon do not constitute a solution for working students, he said.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, made an appearance at the senate meeting to speak about the increase in the general use fee.

"I take full responsibility for the use fee increase," Montford said.

"It was either that or increase the tuition drastically."

The fee was increased to distribute money to schools who "deeply needed it," he said.

"Don't blame (the increase) on your president, blame it on me."

Bush tours dehydration plant Governor comments on Tech's tuition increase

by Tara McQueen

The University Daily

Gov. George Bush Jr. commented on tuition and faculty salaries at Texas Tech during a tour of Lubbock's Breedlove Dehydration plant.

"It is a good bargain," Bush said. "Texas students are fortunate to live in a state where tuition is so reasonable. Tech was well funded during this session."

Bush said Tech faculty pay raises are decided upon by the Board of Regents.

"It is the state government's job to provide budgets," he said.

The Texas Legislature provided Tech with a $255 million total budget for the 1995 academic year but did not provide for faculty increases, Tech president Robert Lawless previously said in The University Daily.

By increasing general use fees, the regents provided a 3 percent merit-based salary increase and a 1 percent equity raise for Tech faculty and staff, Lawless said.

Bush and his wife, Laura, began their three-day tour of Lubbock with a visit to a local elementary school and the Breedlove Dehydration plant.

"I consider this plant to the best of Texas," Bush said. "Breedlove has taken a failing agriculture item and made it into a successful food product. They have taken a product that had been plowed under and created meals for less than 2 cents (a serving)."

Bush said he read about Breedlove Dehydrated Food in Southwest Airline's magazine "Spirit."

"I wanted to see first hand how it worked," he said. "This is a tremendous example of people making a dream come true."

"I want Texas to be a beacon state — this is how you make Texas a beacon state right here."

Bush brought former superintendent of Lubbock schools Mike Moses with him on the tour.

"Texas schools will be a better place because of a Texas product — Commissioner of Education Mike Moses," Bush said.

Bush and Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, tasted three soups made from dehydrated foods at the plant.

The soup will be used to feed U.S. senators in a special session, said Kenneth Gray, Breedlove plant manager.

Gramm plans to reinvent welfare system

by Kirk Baird

The University Daily

To explain Sen. Phil Gramm's, R-Texas, stance on the welfare reform bill, Gramm's state director, Ed Hodges, said the proposed legislation will end welfare as we know it in America.

Hodges, speaking Thursday morning at the Lubbock Texas Employment Commission, said the bill will put an end to the cycle of dependency welfare places on its benefactors.

"People are more and more dependent on government handouts today than they were yesterday, last year or 30 years ago," Hodges said. "The federal government has not addressed ending that cycle of dependency. We feel we have a bill that will do that and will put people to work and off government, or other types of pay-rolls."

The U.S. Senate and the U.S. House of Representatives both passed similar versions of the welfare reform bill.

Both versions of the bill call for eliminating national entitlements, reducing the size of federal welfare agencies and allowing an accumulation of welfare for five years before recipients are cut off, he said.

In addition, illegal immigrants or non-citizens will no longer be eligible to receive welfare benefits, Hodges said.

Both bills require recipients of welfare to work for their benefits, but the versions differ on the work required for welfare eligibility.

The Senate bill defines work as employment in the public or private sector, such as someone doing community service or pursuing a vocational education, he said.

Hurricane Opal kills 15

PANAMA CITY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Under blue skies, the damage wrought by Hurricane Opal became clear Thursday: hundreds of houses smashed into splintered boards, condominiums flattened, hotel walls caved in and boats tossed ashore along 120 miles of eroded beach.

"This is what I call utter destruction," an astonished Al Donaldson said as the homeowner looked over Santa Rosa Beach, west of Panama City.

Opal, which hit land late Wednesday with gusts up to 144 mph, killed at least 15 people and caused an estimated $1.8 billion in damage to insured property along the Florida Panhandle. That made it the second-costliest storm in state history after Hurricane Andrew, which inflicted $17 billion in damage in 1992.

Fifteen Panhandle counties were approved for federal emergency aid.

"Blocks and blocks of homes are gone," said Jo Miglino, a spokeswoman for the state Division of Emergency Management. "We have widespread reports ... of many, many homes destroyed."

Opal lost its punch as it blew through Alabama but still knocked out power to 2 million in Florida, Georgia, Alabama and the Carolinas. Many homes also had no water or phone service.

Almost 4,500 National Guardsmen were posted in Florida to prevent looting. Bay County, where an estimated 100 homes were destroyed and 1,000 damaged, was under a dusk-to-dawn curfew, and the Guard set up a center to provide food, water, clothes and showers to people left homeless.

As Opal approached land Wednesday, more than 100,000 coastal residents fled inland, clogging highways.

By midday, Opal had been downgraded to a tropical depression and was 95 miles south of Lexington, Ky., with sustained winds of 35 mph.

The storm disrupted air traffic throughout the day, causing flight delays from Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Chicago and New York, state officials said.

Serbs call 60-day cease fire to war

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Bosnia's combatants agreed Thursday to a 60-day cease-fire and new talks ending their 3 1/2 years of carnage, taking one big step closer to a peace settlement that U.S. troops would help police.

The accord on the cease-fire was reached during United States' strongest press yet for peace in Bosnia. In announcing the agreement, President Clinton in Washington acknowledged that unresolved problems remained before it takes effect Tuesday.

"We need to be clear-eyed about this," he said. "It matters what the parties do, not just what they say."

NATO planners said they would hasten work on a military force to help enforce an eventual peace arrangement. The United States would commit roughly 20,000 troops to such a force, but is saying they would not enter Bosnia until a final peace deal is signed.

Citing progress toward peace, the United Nations announced it could cut its troops in Bosnia by 9,000 troops, or one-third of its force in Bosnia. It was not known how long the withdrawals would take.

In contrast to countless failed truces, the warring factions seemed to want this cease-fire.

Pope decries abortion, euthanasia at public mass in New York

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Invoking Emma Lazarus' plea for America to embrace the huddled masses, Pope John Paul II urged the nation Thursday to welcome immigrants and rid itself of the "moral blight" of abortion and euthanasia.

Just 10 miles from the Statue of Liberty, the pontiff told 82,948 rain-soaked worshippers — a Giants Stadium record — to continue in the tradition of the civil rights movements to extend legal protection to "the unborn child," the elderly and the severely disabled.

"Both as Americans and as followers of Christ, American Catholics must be committed to the defense of life in all its stages and in every condition," the pontiff declared from a giant altar at one end zone.

In addition to his criticism of liberals' attempts to expand access to abortion and to permit assisted suicides, the pope was critical of recent conservative efforts to limit immigration.

He recited part of Lazarus' 19th century poem in urging Americans to continue to welcome immigrants yearning to breathe free and to serve the poor.

"If America were to turn on itself, would this not be the beginning of the end of what constitutes the very essence of the 'American Experience?'" he asked in his homily.

Hours of steady rain and raw October weather could not detract from the enthusiasm of the huddled masses inside the converted football field. Some wept, others pressed their hands to their hearts or cried "Viva el Papa" as the pontiff circled the stadium in his popemobile.

"This is the most important day of my life. I cannot describe to you how important it is to be here," 76-year-old Edward Pietro of Toms River said. "After today, if nothing else exciting or wonderful happens in my life, I will die a fulfilled man."

Earlier, the pope urged the United Nations to be an authentic force for peace.

"The United Nations Organization needs to rise more and more above the cold status of an administrative institution and to become a moral center where all the nations of the world feel at home," he told the 185-member General Assembly.

The pope's visit during the United Nations' 50th anniversary year was the central point of his fourth pilgrimage to the United States. The organization is deeply in debt, in part because of its expanded peacekeeping operations in Bosnia and elsewhere, and John Paul wants to see it strengthened.

But that meeting like the other events since the pope's arrival Wednesday was for a small group of dignitaries and invited guests. It was at the Giants Stadium that masses of the faithful could see the Pope.

UD editor bets A&M editor Tech will take game victory

MEGAN CLARK

UD editor

(no relation — the Clarks in my family are all Red Raiders) a simple bet was arranged.

Usually I'm not the gambling kind, but in the wake of a less than impressive start to the '95 SWC season, perhaps some good ol' incentive is in order.

And who better to offer incentives than The UD? The UD is read by 98 percent of the campus community and the Tech football team surely is among those numbers.

And while The UD editorial board isn't ready to shave Double Ts into the backs of their heads as UD Editor Gilbert Dunkley and UD Sports Editor Colin Killian (now a sports information director at A&M) did when Tech beat A&M 30-12 in 1984, we do offer some tempting alternatives.

If Tech beats A&M (no matter what the score), The Battalion editorial board will pay homage to Tech and The UD by showing their Raider spirit on their newspaper's Opinion page and submitting a photograph for The UD to print.

If Tech loses, The UD editorial board does the same — but wearing maroon and white.

Let's not let that happen. When Tech plays A&M in College Station, it's a tough game, with the Aggies more often than not coming out on top.

But there hasn't been a victorious Tech team in Jones Stadium after facing the Aggies since 1989.

It's time for some change and Tech can meet the challenge. I saw how the Red Raiders played the then No. 10 Aggies last year at Kyle Field — A&M's home luck advantage was pushed.

Who says their No. 8 ranking can't be pushed this time around? UD sports reporter Jared Parcell is willing to shave his head for a Tech victory (see page 7 for his column).

The editorial board also is willing to sacrifice sacred space in Monday's edition to prove the Raiders are a contender with top-ranked teams.

The Tech football team should be willing to pull through with a big victory. And Tech students should be willing to make more than a mediocre appearance at Saturday's game.

So, Zach, Zebbie and the boys, if you're reading this, help The UD and win one for us.

We'll thank you later.

Pope makes visit to the United States, should take time to talk to citizens

CHRIS WALTERS

UD guest columnist

Well, the Pope is here. Not here in Lubbock, of course. I think he landed in New Jersey sometime Wednesday, and he's staying through the weekend. He spoke with President Clinton and Thursday he spoke to the general assembly of the United Nations — you know, serious stuff.

One would think that a visit from the most prestigious representative of any faith, anywhere, would bring out the best in our nation.

One would think this if one were freebasing crack, that is. After all, America isn't exactly known for restraint or inhibition. Look what we did to the Olympic games in 1984. (A UFO? Was that really necessary?)

Already I've heard reports about scalpers selling tickets to the Pope's appearances. Is this really what a visit from the Pope means to our nation — Ticketmaster and scalping? T-shirts? Little Pope-in-his-bulletproof-Popemobile snowglobes and other sundry souvenirs?

It is my opinion that yes, this is exactly what the Pope means to America.

I'm not a Catholic. I don't even support the idea of Catholicism. But whether you agree with everything the Pope represents or not, you have to admit that his presence means something.

In an age where spirituality seems fractured and privatized to such a degree that many Americans don't even know for sure what their beliefs are, the Pope represents a unified, cohesive sense of religion.

But I'm worried about him and not just because of his hip. All he ever gets to do over here is meet with officials, perform mass, meet with more officials, perform mass, and so on.

The policy making will go on regardless of these symbolic appearances, and there's a lot more to this country besides Bill Clinton and the United Nations.

The Pope needs to meet Middle

“ The Pope needs to meet Middle America. He needs to spend the day at Disneyland.”

America. He needs to spend the day at Disneyland. He needs to see a basketball game or a rodeo. He needs to visit a multiplex theater. The huge success of his book last year (the fact that Catholics as well as non-Catholics bought it) gives some indication of just how high our interest is in him. He's already got one foot firmly planted in our popular culture, so why not let him see what he's getting into?

I think that if the Pope is going to have such a strong influence on our policy makers, he should know more about the people for whom the policies are intended. And we should get to know him a little better, too.

A weekly news magazine recently printed a feature about a nun who has her own talk show and who is now head of one of the three largest religious networks on cable television. Why doesn't the Pope have a TV show here in America? Why doesn't he ever make guest appearances, other than on news programs or C-SPAN? I'm not trying to offend all the Catholics on campus. (Well maybe that's a little bit, but that's only because the "Letters to the Editor" column has been so dismal this semester.)

But I think it's important to realize that the Pope has become an icon. He's joined the likes of Elvis, Mickey Mouse and Alfred Hitchcock in the iconography of American popular culture. I'm not trivializing the Pope's position. I'm trying to point out that despite his serious role in today's world, you can buy silly Pope souvenirs wherever he makes appearances in America. Even a nonbeliever, such as myself, is a little taken aback.

As society, and consequently our culture, continue to evolve, it looks like the Pope is running the risk of losing some of his significance as a religious leader.

The last time he was associated with entertainment was when Sinead O'Conner ripped his picture up on national television. In America, if you're not entertaining, then no one takes you seriously.

When the Pope leaves our country in a few more days, how long will he continue to hold our attention? The media will already be chasing other stories, and all of the non-Catholics of America who aren't politicians or journalists will have forgotten he was here.

Magazine's rankings do not reflect university status

To the editor: When I visited Texas Tech campus for the first time 25 years ago for an interview, I was impressed with the campus, with the faculty, and with the potential the university seemed to have.

Under the dynamic leadership of then President Grover Murray, the university seemed poised to take its place as one of the true multipurpose universities in the state.

I am equally impressed with President Robert Lawless' hopes that by 2005 Texas Tech University will be the university of choice among many Texas students.

However, much has to be accomplished during the intervening decade.

Just where we stand at present in relationship to the other three multipurpose universities can be indicated by reference to "U.S. News and World Report's" 1996 annual "Guide to America's Best Colleges."

Reference also can be given to the National Research Council's "sweeping assessment of the nation's doctoral programs," printed in part in the Sept. 22, 1995 "Chronicle of Higher Education."

The "Guide to America's Best Colleges" ranks the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M University in its second tier of national universities.

No university in the first, second, or third tier has a higher student/faculty ratio than Texas Tech or a lower student expenditure.

Indeed, out of the 229 national universities in the four tiers.

The National Research Council ranked 41 fields of graduate studies in the areas of Arts and Humanities, Biological Sciences, Engineering, Physical Sciences and Mathematics, and Social and Behavioral Sciences.

Texas Tech University is represented by 17 programs, a high of 54, a low of 126, and an average of 92.32. Two other Texas universities, comparable in size to Texas Tech showed up as follows: the University of Texas at Arlington with nine programs, a high of 40, a low of 117, and an average of 101.44; the University of North Texas with 13 programs, a high of 21, a low of 128, and an average of 105.38.

The Texas Tech University programs in the rankings are Spanish (54), music (57), civil engineering (60), electrical engineering (69), ecology (72), chemistry (90), geosciences (91), political science (91), cellular biology (90.5), history (98), physiology (104), mathematics (107), English (107.5), pharmacology (115.5), physics (118.5), psychology (118.5) and biochemistry (126).

Texas Tech University has the potential to be an outstanding regional university and to hold its own nationally in a number of fields, but we are most definitely playing catch-up, and within the state of Texas with both the University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems having privileged access to the Permanent University Fund (PUF), we are playing catch-up considerably disadvantaged.

Tech joins Netherlands to solve soil problems

by Charles Melton
The University Daily

Cleaning up contaminated soil is the focus of a joint project involving Texas Tech and the Van Hall Institute in the Netherlands. Soil contamination has been a problem in the Netherlands since the 1980s and is the focus of the Superfund project sponsored by the United States Environmental Protection Agency, said David Goldsborough, a Van Hall Institute faculty member.

In the early 1980s, there were 4,000 contaminated sites in the Netherlands, but now there are close to a million, Goldsborough said.

While the Netherlands and United States have similar problems with soil, the Netherlands has no land to spare, he said.

The Netherlands government comes up with reasonable laws dealing with soil contamination, but they are based on the wrong assumptions, Goldsborough said.

"In the United States, laws are implemented, and we find out we don't know much about the problem," said Raghu Narayan, chairman of the chemical engineering department in Tech's College of Engineering.

If the work is done in Holland and other places, it is important to know what professionals and researchers are doing, Narayan said. "Here are people working on similar concerns," Narayan said. "The ultimate beneficiary of this work will be the population where ever these problems exist."

Handling soil contamination is part of the environmental science field, Narayan said.

Because of the broad scope of environmental engineering, professionals in the field must be knowledgeable in many areas, he said.

People often think pollution comes from industrial sources, but it also comes from agriculture, automobiles and power plants, Narayan said.

"Our challenge is to do an effective job of educating and training, not only people in the field, but the public as well," he said.

AIDS victims reflect on past mistakes

by Emily Elsen

The University Daily

Being infected with AIDS has given some people a new definition of life.

"God works in mysterious ways," said Joseph Tasby, 26, who is HIV positive. "When I found out I was HIV positive, I have had renewed strength to continue living."

Tasby said he has been alive for 26 years, but he has actually been living for the month since his diagnosis.

"A lot of people do not know they are infected," he said.

"Everyone needs to get tested because it could be you."

Tasby said he decided to get tested after a friend died this year because of complications caused by AIDS.

"I, like everyone else, haven't been living my life in a monastery," Tasby said.

"Everybody can think of one example of a time in their lives when they were not especially careful."

In a few years, students may pay

"AIDS is not a death sentence, but a life sentence."

Buddy McArthur, AIDS patient

the price for a moment of passion now, he said.

"Right now, I can't think where I could have gotten AIDS from, which is why I encourage students to stop playing with their lives," Tasby said. "You can't tell from people's faces who is infected with AIDS."

It was disappointing more Texas Tech students did not attend AIDS Awareness Week activities to learn more about AIDS, he said.

"It's not just gays and drug users who are getting infected," Tasby said. "A lot of victims of AIDS are people who partied like me who couldn't wait those few extra minutes to use a condom."

Buddy McArthur, who now has full-blown AIDS, learned he had the disease two years ago.

"AIDS is not a death sentence, but a life sentence," McArthur said. "You are given a chance to live your life the way you want to."

Once diagnosed with AIDS, everything changes, he said.

"You begin noticing friends and family more," he said. "Everything begins to mean so much more to you."

McArthur said he has learned not to point the finger at who gave him the disease because four are pointing right back at him.

"The hardest thing about having AIDS is not being able to work anymore," he said.

"Sometimes your body just cannot handle the stress."

McArthur said he uses this time to get involved in the lives of others.

"This disease has helped my significant other and I get closer together," he said.

"Sometimes he is in denial and sometimes he is not."

Lubbock has an excellent support system for AIDS patients through the South Plains AIDS Research Center, McArthur said.

"I have met more friends through SPARC than I have ever had in my life," he said.

Nancy Ray, education director at SPARC, said this dialogue with living AIDS patients is an important experience for students because people have many misconceptions about AIDS.

"Having this disease is not a character flaw," she said.

"It might just mean they made a poor decision and all of us have done this."

Ray said she encourages students to get tested because just knowing whether they have the disease can prolong their life.

Luby's cafeteria to allow concealed weapon possession

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The cafeteria chain affected by one of the worst mass killings in U.S. history says it will allow Texans to carry handguns legally into its restaurants.

The president of the San Antonio-based company, Robert Erben, said the Oct. 16, 1991, shooting deaths of 23 people at the Luby's Cafeteria in Killeen did not prompt the decision.

But, "subconsciously, Killeen affects everything we do," Erben said. In a statement released by the company Thursday, Luby's said it believes "it's best to follow the law as it was intended, rather than trying to second-guess the Legislature. The state's concealed handgun law will allow residents who meet the requirements to carry guns.

simply as employment. The goal of welfare recipients employed also differs in the Senate and House versions of the bill.

The House bill also provides for a family cap, which limits the number of children allowed to increase welfare aid, Hodges said. There is no family cap provision in the Senate bill.

A conference committee is scheduled to discuss the differences between the two versions of the welfare reform bill, he said.

Gramm will not vote for the final welfare bill unless it has a strict work requirement, a lifetime cap, an end to welfare for illegal immigrants and a family cap, Hodges said.

Hodges said President Clinton would accept ending national entitlement and agreed to a work requirement and a lifetime cap, but has not set it as a five-year cap. Clinton also agreed to ending welfare for illegal immigrants and to the reduction of the federal administration of welfare, but has not set a percentage for those cuts.

The Clinton administration has said it will not accept a family cap, Hodges said.

Jyl Josephson, assistant professor of political science in the College of Arts and Sciences, said Gramm's idea of welfare recipients working for their benefits is not new.

The government has joined work programs to the Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other general assistance programs since the 1960s, Josephson said.

"Work requirements were put into general assistance programs but the federal government did not adequately fund them," she said.

As a result, there are long lines from people who want training to get better jobs, but the resources are not available to them, Josephson said.

The money spent on work programs could better be spent, she said. Since many welfare recipients do not have high school or college educations, programs designed to educate would work better than work-related programs, Josephson said.

"Most jobs that do not require a high school education pay only minimum wage," she said. "You cannot support a family on minimum wage."

Josephson said she was concerned about Gramm's plan to eliminate entitlement and place the money in block funds for states to allocate.

"If a state is experiencing a budget crisis, they can tell the poor they've run out of money and they can't help them," she said. "The poor will get hurt."

Mercenary surrenders in Comoros Island after French invasion

MORONI, Comoros Islands (AP) — A grizzled, limping soldier of fortune ended his latest power grab in Africa on Thursday by quietly leading his camouflage-clad band of white mercenaries into French custody.

The subdued surrender on the Comoros Islands off Africa's east coast came after a lightning invasion of French troops ended a short-lived coup by Bob Denard, two dozen mercenaries and about 300 allied Comorian soldiers.

Denard and the hired guns who followed him in his latest African escapade emerged unarmed Thursday from the military barracks that had served as their command center since they deposed the president of the Comoros one week ago.

Some of the mercenaries were overweight, tattooed veterans with gray hair while others were smooth-faced youngsters.

Twenty-three were from France, like Denard, and one was Belgian.

Play highlights 1937 depression-era family

by Brian Lacy

The University Daily

It was show time for the Texas Tech University Theatre as the first play of the 1995-96 season, "Brighton Beach Memoirs," premiered Thursday.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs," a self-portrait of playwright Neil Simon as a Brooklyn teenager in 1937, continues Friday night until Sunday, and then runs again Oct. 12-15.

The play, which was first performed on Broadway in the early 80s, highlights the lives of a Jewish family during the depression.

It primarily focuses on the young son Eugene, the narrator and central character.

"I think Eugene is a lot like me, because he's going to do what he's going to do, no matter what anyone says," said Seth Marstrand, a junior theater arts major from Lubbock who plays Eugene.

"If he has got something to say, he's going to say it."

"It is such a fun role because it's not every day you get to goof around and act like a kid, which is what Eugene is."

The cast includes Eugene's father, Jack, played by graduate student Jason Lee, and Eugene's mother Kate, played by graduate student Paula Rodriguez.

The family is sharing a house with Eugene's aunt Blanche, played by graduate student Darise Error, and her two daughters.

"I think this cast is one of the best casts I've ever worked with - it's incredible," Marstrand said. "We work so well together."

"I think that will come through to the audience and make the performance that much more enjoyable," he said.

The story finds Eugene becoming attracted to his cousin Nora, played by freshman Meilani Moreno, and the play centers around his dealings with these emotions, said director Jonathan Marks.

"It is a story of a boy coming of age in the depression," Marks said.

"He lives with two different families that are packed into a single house and his hormones get excited by the closeness of the cousin."

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" is typical of playwright Neil Simon's work, Marks said.

"Simon dealt with a series of plays with his own coming of age, and 'Brighton Beach Memoirs' is the first one," he said.

"In the second play dealing with the character Eugene, he goes to World War II, and in the third, it is his life as a comedian.

"In each play, it is the same group of characters and Simon's reflection on the people that helped him grow up."

Marks said he believes this play will find broad appeal with Tech students.

"It's a terrific comedy and a play of great feeling," he said. "Nobody has sold more tickets than Neil Simon because he's so in touch with peoples' feelings. I think he is a playwright that people want to see, and audiences here are going to have a great time."

Marks thinks Tech's cast will help further this enjoyment.

"I'm new here at Tech, and I didn't know what to expect," he said. "But I think I got my dream cast. I couldn't have hoped for anything better."

Bugs Bunny takes shape in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Nyyyyyaaaaaaah, what's up, Doc? Certainly not a bust of abolitionist Frederick Douglass. Red tape is keeping the statue from being installed at historic Faneuil Hall.

But a larger statue has popped up with no problem: Bugs Bunny in bronze.

The main difference is in who controls the statues' fates. Both will be installed at Faneuil Hall Marketplace, but Bugs is outdoors on private property, in front of the Warner Brothers Studio Store. The Douglass statue is headed for a spot inside the 253-year-old meeting hall, which is owned by the city.

Bugs Bunny is at the opposite end of the marketplace, maybe 100 yards from where Douglass' bust will be erected.

City officials have wanted to honor a historical black figure in the meeting house for years, but it was not until September 1994 that a suitable bust was found.

Tech student carries on family tradition

For Natalie Maines, the urge to sing was as natural as taking a breath or learning to walk. After all, everyone from her grandfather to her aunt LaTronda had spent time on stage, singing, performing and entertaining the masses.

"I started singing when I was about 2 years old," said Maines, who will perform at the Tech FANdango at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, east of the Market Alumni Center.

"They just couldn't shut me up," she said. "The first song I remember singing was that disco song, 'Shake Your Bootie.' Then it was probably the whole record 'Grease.'"

Maines, a junior telecommunications major from Lubbock, said she was inspired by artists such as James Taylor, Aretha Franklin, Linda Ronstadt and Bonnie Raitt.

However, early influences were a little more close to home.

Her grandfather and her brother created the music group, the Maines Brothers, and her father, local musician Lloyd Maines, and her uncle later took over the group.

"Music was, and is, a major part of our lives," she said. "We had music playing constantly."

"It's like a natural thing," she said "I don't think anybody in the family chose music, they could just pick up an instrument. My dad can play six instruments and he doesn't even have to try."

Maines said her father was not home much when she was young.

He toured with Joe Ely and then he and his brother signed with Mercury, which resulted in even more touring.

Eventually, the brothers broke away from Mercury so they could be with their families more and pursue other interests, Maines said.

"My dad is still a phenomenal musician and producer," she said.

"That's how he still makes his living. I guess it was more dominant with him because that's what he continues to do."

As a producer, Maines said her father would often take her and her sister to the studio with him.

"My sister would get a few notes out and then I would be hogging the microphone," she said.

As a child, Maines said she also sang backup on several albums and occasionally provided "a giggle" when needed.

As she grew up, Maines continued to use her talent.

She sang in several commercials and occasionally performed with the Maines Brothers.

In 1994, she auditioned and won a partial scholarship to the Berklee College of Music in Boston.

However, the experience was not all Maines had imagined it to be.

"I went there all by myself. I had never even been to Boston," she said.

"I was sad about leaving home and my family."

Berklee was highly overrated, she said.

"People there are in such hard competition," Maines said. "Nobody even wanted to hear each other. I had enough self-confidence that I didn't feel like I had to be cut-throat."

"I could compliment people. But most people were totally concerned with themselves. I learned a whole lot, though. The teachers really knew their stuff."

Maines said the work itself was not hard, but she did not get to sing as much as she would have liked to.

"The younger bands were really hard and heavy," she said. "I could have done it, but I would probably have ruined my voice."

After five months, Maines returned to Lubbock.

"The whole time I was there I was thinking of coming home, then on the cab to the airport back here I kind of got choked up. It had been my life for five months."

Since returning to West Texas, Maines has continued to sing.

She has performed at the Cactus Theater, done studio work and jingles, worked on her guitar playing and sent off demos.

"Just recently have I been known for myself," she said. "People aren't referring to me as, 'Lloyd Maines' daughter."

"They actually recognize me now and ask me personally to do shows."

She also has performed with artists including Pat Green, LaTronda Maines and Andy Wilkinson.

"Natalie has a voice that is expressive, but also powerful," Wilkinson said.

"She has a wonderful musical sense about her."

Maines performed a song called "White Woman's Clothes," on Wilkinson's "Charlie Goodnight" album.

"When it was written it was clear she was the one to sing it," Wilkinson said.

"It required a voice that was pleasant to listen to, but soulful."

"The song is sad, but somewhat detached," he said. "She was able to put the perfect touch on it."

Maines said all she wants to do now is sing.

"I guess at this point I'm willing to go on tour and sing backup for someone even though I've always sworn I wouldn't do that," she said.

"I'm willing to do anything right now in music as long as it makes me a living."

She said her long-term goal is to become a household name.

"It's not even that I want to be famous or have lots of money," she said. "I just want to sing in front of thousands of people and have them love me."

Journalist sues former employer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter is suing the Albuquerque Journal a third time, alleging gender bias that led to her resignation.

Tamar Stieber lost in two previous lawsuits. Her third, filed Sept. 29 in U.S. District Court, alleges she was met with retaliation after writing a 1992 letter to newspaper executives alleging unequal treatment.

She contends the newspaper failed to provide a lawyer to defend her First Amendment Rights when covering a story in which a judge sought to limit her reporting. Providing a lawyer was the normal practice, the suit says.

Stieber also alleges the paper made the work place "such a hostile environment that (she) could not reasonably continue to work for the defendant as a reporter."

The paper denies the allegations and says the third lawsuit revisits allegations filed previously.

"The litigation lottery seems to continue," said newspaper attorney Jim Dines.

Do or die week for Tech, other teams around nation

JARED PARCELL
UD sports reporter

As I sat at my desk scratching my head, trying to figure out just what games to pick, I suddenly realized something — I need a haircut — but I have no money to spend on one.

Then I remembered some of the unbelievable things sports reporters have done to encourage the team they cover.

People have stayed on the radio all night or sat on billboards. I doubt if Lubbock has all-night radio stations or billboards, unless I just have never noticed.

So I've decided to take a risk. If Texas Tech beats Texas A&M on Saturday, I will let someone, whoever cuts hair for the team, shave my head (to an extent because I need to look for jobs in a month). But yes, I will come over to practice Monday and pay up on my gamble.

• No. 8 Texas A&M (-9) at Texas Tech

The last time the Red Raiders beat the Aggies (27-24), was Oct. 7, 1989. Six years later to the date, Tech will try it again. Does anyone really think the Raiders stand a chance against Texas A&M? Of course, because the Aggies are overrated. Leeland McElroy will try to run, run but Tech will stuff, stuff, stuff his attack. Tech 30 Texas A&M 24.

• Rice (+18 1/2) at No. 18 Texas

Longhorn quarterback James "I'm the Soul Man" Brown is coming to a stadium near you. He's the SWC leader in passing efficiency, completing 58 passes in 110 attempts for nine touchdowns and 1,011 yards. Last week, Ken Hatfield's Owls allowed Army to fight back and tie the game 21-21. Texas saves John Mackovic as he hangs onto his job for yet another week. Texas 27, Rice 13.

• Houston (+16) at TCU

Andre Davis and Max Knake will lead the Horny Toads over Cougar High. Will Houston even come close to winning a game this year or is it an 0-11 year? The Coogs are always on the road — but who wouldn't want to get out of the Bayou City's heat and humidity. TCU 24, Houston 7.

• No. 3 Florida (-10) at No. 21 LSU

The Tigers should be embarrassed by their performance against South Carolina last Saturday. There is no reason why this team should have tied the Gamecocks. Because of the South Carolina game, the Gators will crush LSU. Florida quarterback Danny Wuerffel will throw for more than 300 yards and four touchdowns. Florida 41, LSU 24.

• No. 5 Ohio State (-1 1/2) at No. 12 Penn State

The Buckeyes are in Happy Valley, ruining Joe Paterno's day this time.

Wisconsin toppled the Nittany Lions (what is a Nittany?) Saturday and Ohio State exploded past Notre Dame and Ron "I'm no Heisman candidate" Powlus. John Cooper will watch as his OSU team topples Penn State and climbs closer to the No. 1 ranking. Ohio State 38, Penn State 20.

• Miami (+17) at No. 1 Florida State

Butch Davis, you should have stayed with the Dallas Cowboys. Instead, you decided to go coach the Hurricanes and what a showing you've given the people in Dade County. Bobby "I promise we don't run the score up" Bowden and the Seminoles will have to hold off a Hurricane attack that will throw everything out the window to win this game. No matter what, it won't work. Florida State 31, Miami 17.

For the season: My record vs. the line is 13-8-1 and it is 18-4 straight up

■ Tech keys on stopping McElroy

by Jared Parcell

The University Daily
For the third consecutive game, the Texas Tech defense will be out to stop an opponent's running attack.

First, the Red Raiders had to stop Brock Olivo from Missouri. Olivo gained 28 yards on 17 carries Sept. 16. Saturday, the Red Raiders had to worry about Baylor's Jerod Douglas, who picked up 157 yards on 17 attempts.

The Aggies backfield features a Heisman Trophy candidate in junior Leeland McElroy.

"I think playing against Jerod Douglas will help us this week," Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "They're very similar. McElroy is a little bigger. He is everything he is supposed to be. I don't know the last time I saw a runner like him in this conference."

The Aggies will be looking to extend their current winning streak against the Raiders to six when the two teams play Saturday at Jones Stadium. No. 8 Texas A&M and the Red Raiders will be playing in front of a crowd, expected to be in excess of 50,000.

McElroy has accumulated 397 yards in 81 rushes. He has 396 total yards coming out of the backfield to catch a pass (10 catches for 204 yards) from quarterback Corey Pullig and returning kickoffs (eight for 192 yards). He leads Texas A&M with eight touchdowns, six on the ground and two receiving.

"The key is stopping McElroy," said Tech safety Dane Johnson, who is tied for fourth on the team with 19 tackles. "Corey Pullig is capable of beating anyone. We will be successful if we stop the run and control the passing game."

Under Pressure: Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge avoids the pressure of Baylor's Daryl Gardener during Tech's 9-7 loss to the Bears Saturday.

better performance out of the sophomore from Lubbock when the Red Raiders face No. 8 Texas A&M at 1 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium.

Tech has asked its defense to step up on several occasions this season and it has responded. Opponents of Tech are averaging 137.3 yards on the ground and 162.3 yards in the air while scoring only 15.7 points a game.

One of the keys for the Raiders has been the play of the linebacking corps — Robert Johnson, Zach Thomas and Shawn Banks.

Thomas leads the defense with 42 tackles, and Banks is second with 30 stops.

"We have been playing together for a couple of years," said Johnson, the junior linebacker from Lubbock, who has 15 tackles in 1995. "We know what the other one is going to do. We have such confidence in each other on the defense. It (the confidence) starts at the front, moves to the middle all the way to the defensive backs."

Forcing turnovers has been another key for the Tech defense. This season, the Red Raiders have forced six miscues by their opponents, four fumbles and two interceptions.

The Raider defensive pressure has resulted in many scoring opportunities for the Tech offense, including two touchdowns in the season opener against Penn State Sept. 9.

Banks also recovered a fumble in the end zone in the game against the Nittany Lions.

Pullig also is a key figure of the defense in stopping the Aggies attack. He has thrown 78 passes, completing 42 for 581 yards and five touchdowns. Pullig is second in the conference, trailing only James Brown of Texas in passing efficiency.

Pressuring the quarterback has not been a problem for Tech this season. The Raiders have eight sacks, led by Marcus Coleman with two.

"We won't feel any pressure," said Coleman, who is tied with D. Johnson in tackles. "The key is being ready to play. Everybody on the defense wants to make the play."

Tech offense faces tough test with A&M

by Jared Parcell

The University Daily

When the Texas Tech offense takes the field Saturday against No. 8 Texas A&M, it will face a swarming Aggie defense.

The Red Raiders (1-2 overall, 0-1 Southwest Conference) are averaging 23.7 points and 317.3 yards per game. "A&M is a very quick team," offensive guard Casey Jones said.

"I like playing against A&M because you know you have to play at your best."

Texas A&M (2-1, 0-0) is opening its 1995 SWC season against Tech.

The Raiders and Aggies collide at 1 p.m. Saturday. The game will be televised on a pay-per-view basis while a sell-out crowd of more than 50,000 is expected to pack Jones Stadium.

Tech is coming off last week's disappointing 9-7 loss to Baylor. Texas A&M enters the 54th meeting between the two teams after an off week. The Aggies may have lost their national title hopes, losing to No. 5 Colorado, 29-21, Sept. 23.

"If we play well we can erase our very poor performance at Baylor," Jones said.

"We need to play assignment football and pick up linebackers blitzing. Their speed and blitzes are a big concern. If we don't pick up the blitzes they'll be in the backfield."

The Aggie defense is allowing opposing offenses 269 yards of total offense and has given up 55 points in three games.

Because of the defensive pressure, Texas A&M's defense is ranked second in the SWC, trailing only Baylor and it is tied for ninth in the nation.

Texas Tech, despite averaging more than 300 yards, ranks sixth in the conference.

Quarterback Zebbie Lethridge has yet to find his mark, completing 30 passes in 83 attempts, averaging 145.3 yards this season.

“By far, this might be the quickest team we face this year.”

Byron Hanspard, Tech sophomore running back

Split end Field Scovell is Tech's leading receiver, catching eight passes, one for a touchdown, for 153 yards.

I-back Byron Hanspard has carried his share of the Tech offensive load, gaining 275 yards on 59 carries.

"By far, they might be the quickest team we will face this year," Hanspard said.

"To win, we will have to go out and perfect what we have. We have to play our game the way we know how. It will depend on how well we prepare and how much we want to go out and play."

Texas A&M has seven quarterback sacks for 36 yards lost. Outside linebackers Reggie Brown and Keith Mitchell lead the charge with two sacks each.

The Aggies have six turnovers, four fumble recoveries and two interceptions by cornerback Ray Mickens.

Tech's offense has five turnovers, fumbling the ball four times and throwing one interception.

Tech fullback Todd Walker, who has 28 yards on 10 rushes, said he will be kept busy blocking blitzing linebackers.

"Their speed will hurt us when they blitz," Walker said. "We've been working all week on picking up the blitz. They have great speed at the linebacking spot and everyone is talented."

Baylor eligible for SWC basketball title

DALLAS (AP) — Baylor will be allowed to compete in the final Southwest Conference men's basketball tournament, the SWC athletic directors voted Thursday.

The vote, taken at the SWC Directors of Athletics meeting in Dallas, followed NCAA recommendations to allow the Bears to participate in the conference tournament, which takes place in Dallas next March.

"We felt that Baylor should be added back to the SWC tournament," said meeting chairman Wally Groff of Texas A&M. "The NCAA allowed Baylor to return to eligibility for the 1996 NCAA tournament after Baylor had self-imposed sanctions."

Cowboy's absent cornerbacks may help Packers' quarterback

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The absence of Dallas cornerbacks Deion Sanders and Kevin Smith could give Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre a boost when the Packers meet the Cowboys at Texas Stadium Sunday.

Favre is tied for third in the NFL with nine touchdown passes this season and has tied an NFL record with at least two touchdown passes in 12 consecutive games.

The Cowboy defense ranks 10th in the league, but it lost Smith for the year in the season opener with an Achilles tendon injury, and Sanders is sidelined while recovering from arthroscopic surgery on his ankle.

"They still have great team speed, but they don't have the experience they used to," Packers coach Mike Holmgren said.

In place of Smith and Sanders,

Dallas has Clayton Holmes and Larry Brown, who started last year at right cornerback. Rookie Alundis Brice is a backup.

The Cowboys defense will have the job of stopping Packers wide receivers Robert Brooks, Anthony Morgan and Mark Ingram, who have combined for seven touchdowns.

"Because they're coming off a loss, a game they should've won, there might be some confusion," Green Bay wide receiver Terry Mickens said. "We just have to go in there and take advantage of key situations."

Mickens said the key to taking advantage of the Cowboys' secondary will be establishing a running game.

Green Bay, with Edgar Bennett averaging 3.2 yards a carry, ranks 21st in rushing, while Dallas is fifth against the run.

Soccer team seeks first SWC win against A&M

by Brent Ross

The University Daily

The Texas Tech women's soccer team will take on Texas A&M at 1 p.m. Sunday in College Station. The Red Raiders are in search of their first Southwest Conference win.

Tech (8-4-1, 0-2) is trying to turn around its two-match losing streak in which it has lost to Centenary and Texas Christian. Tech assistant coach Felix Oskam said it will be difficult for the team to rebound this weekend.

"The problem is our next opponent is Texas A&M," Oskam said. "It's going to be very tough."

The Aggies are ranked 15th in the latest ISAA Collegiate rankings. A&M returns 18 letterwinners and 10 starters from a team that went 15-2-2 last season, including a 3-1 defeat of the Red Raiders in Lubbock.

Oskam said A&M (7-3, 1-0) is a team that is full of great athletes.

"They can jump, they play physical, and they have speed," he said.

Tech coach Diane Nichols said the Aggies are a top opponent.

"They're probably the second toughest team we'll face this year," she said. "They'll be one of the most balanced teams we'll play all year."

Oskam said the Red Raiders will be concerned with stooping the Aggie's leading scorer, Bryn Blalack. Blalack is ranked third in the SWC in scoring with 26 points and 11 goals.

"She's great in the air," he said. "She has a great shot. She was the Southwest Conference player of the week last week."

He said he does not feel last year's loss to the Aggies will have any lasting effects on Sunday's game. However, he did say A&M's larger field will affect the game.

"It's going to be wider and longer, and they can utilize their speed," Oskam said. "It can give us problems."

Tech coach Diane Nichols said Tech's recent schedule might be a reason for their lackluster play.

"We've had a very grueling schedule. We've played five games in 10 days," Nichols said. "For the game of soccer, it's just a tough schedule."

Swoopes talks about Olympic team

by Brent Ross

The University Daily

With a shoe named after her due in stores soon, former Lady Raider Sheryl Swoopes is now the international scene.

Swoopes, who was the 1993 collegiate player of the year after leading Texas Tech to the 1993 national championship, is endorsing her own basketball shoe for women.

"It was a big surprise when Nike first approached me," Swoopes said. "I was just excited about the fact that they were interested in designing a women's basketball shoe."

Swoopes is in the first week of a three-week training camp to prepare the U.S. Women's National Team for an extensive tour of the top NCAA Division I schools. The camp is being held at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo.

"I want to say how excited I am to play with what I consider to be the 10 best players in the country," Swoopes said.

Swoopes suffered a setback when she sprained her ankle early in camp and then the injury was reagravated Wednesday.

"Well, first of all, it is very disappointing," Swoopes said. "Unfortunately, I didn't get the opportunity to play."

SWOOPES

Swoopes said her experiences as a Lady Raider have helped her acclimate to the Olympic level.

"I think in every game I just always try to concentrate on my job and play my game," she said. "I think playing at Texas Tech has helped me know what to expect."

Swoopes said she is anticipating the team's Feb. 3 game against the Lady Raiders in Lubbock.

"I talked to coach Sharp and coach Weese, and we joked about playing each other," Swoopes said. "I'm definitely looking forward to it. I'm ready to come back and play some basketball against Tech."

Lisa Leslie, the 1994 collegiate player of the year from Southern California, joined Swoopes in promoting the national team.

"I feel playing for the U.S.A. has been a dream of all of ours," Leslie said. "I think by having this team together, it will give us the best chance to win the gold."

Leslie said the team is not shying away from the spotlight.

"Unlike the men, this team grabs at the opportunity to be role models," Leslie said.

Swoopes echoed her teammates thoughts.

"I think we all jump at the chance to be female role models to look up to," Swoopes said. "Unfortunately, when I was growing up, I didn't have that female role model."

Leslie said she hopes the national team will help the new women's professional league (ABL).

"I think if we're as successful as many think we will be, it will open up some eyes," Leslie said. "I feel once we get enough media attention, it will definitely provide more interest in the ABL."

Rodman prepares to play for Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Dennis Rodman removed the ski cap, revealing his latest coiffure creation. The hair was red, except for a black bull at the crown.

It's a new era for the Chicago Bulls.

"I had a relative who said, 'Why run off to join the circus? It's come to join us,'" Bulls coach Phil Jackson said during media day Thursday when the just-acquired Rodman stole the spotlight from Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and the rest of the Bulls. "It's a little wild."

Once identified by Jordan's soaring, balletic moves, the Bulls' most recognizable player is now a hired gun they used to despise.

Jordan and Pippen were mostly gracious with their comments about their new teammate, the always controversial four-time NBA rebounding champion who arrived this week in a trade with San Antonio for backup center Will Perdue.

Pippen seemed skeptical about Rodman's ability to blend in. "I think we went out and got a good player."

"Hopefully, we can stay together as a team," said Pippen, who for the 17 months of Jordan's retirement was the unquestioned team leader but now must play third fiddle to the magnificent Michael and the outrageous Dennis.

During the 1991 playoffs, when Rodman was the baddest of the Detroit Pistons' infamous Bad Boys, Pippen was the recipient of a vicious shove in the back that earned Rodman a $5,000 fine.

"I knew that question was coming," said Pippen, who still has a scar on his chin from that incident.

"I've pretty much put it all behind me, and I realize that we're now teammates."

Has he had any meaningful conversations with Rodman since? "No," Pippen said, "and I probably never will." Jordan said that incident "created a fire in us to beat his team."

"In essence, it helped us get better. Once we beat Detroit, we felt confident we could beat anybody."

"That helped, even though it created some anger and some hate."

The hate, Jordan said, is gone. The Bulls got past the Pistons and won three consecutive titles before Jordan retired to play baseball.

Jordan returned last March because he thought the Bulls could win a championship.

They couldn't with the players they had — or, more accurately, the power forward they didn't have.

Jordan and Pippen were impressed that Jackson and general manager Jerry Krause included them in the decision to go after the 6-foot-8 Rodman.

TEXAS TECH VS TEXAS A&M

The University Daily

Texas Tech University

THE SERIES

In what is Texas Tech's second-oldest rivalry, the Red Raiders trail 31-21-1 since play between the two schools began in 1927. The Aggies lead 18-16-1 in Southwest Conference meetings and are on top 11-9 in games played in Lubbock. The Aggies have won the last five contests, their longest series winning streak. Tech's last win came on Oct. 7, 1989, six years to the day of this year's game! Since Texas Tech defeated A&M in Lubbock in 1989, the series has taken a very strange twist. The Raiders have come ever-so-close to winning three times in College Station but have lost handily in the two games in Lubbock. Last year, the Aggies scored on three of their last four possessions to claim a 23-17 victory. Field Scovell got a long, final play pass just out of the end zone. In 1992, Tony Venetoulis kicked a 21 yard field goal on the last play of the game to give A&M a 19-17 victory. In 1990, A&M prevailed 28-24 after a Robert Hall-led drive stalled at the Aggies 15 in the closing seconds.

THE COACHES

Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes (S.F. Austin '59) is dean of the Southwest Conference coaches. He has compiled an overall mark of 48-46-1. He has earned three SWC Coach of the Year Awards (1989, 1993 and 1994), has led the Red Raiders to an upper division league finish in each of his eight seasons. He coached the Red Raiders to three consecutive SWC runner-up finishes before breaking through to the co-championship last season (only the school's second since joining the Southwest Conference in 1960). He's won more conference games (33) than any other previous Tech coach and he has taken four teams to bowl games. Dykes is 2-6 vs the Aggies, the only SWC opponent to which he trails. Dykes and Rice coach Ken Hatfield are the only SWC coaches to own a victory over R.C. Slocum. Slocum (McNeese State '67) is 61-13-2 in his seventh season at Texas A&M.

SCOUT

Texas A&M, located in College Station, has an enrollment of 43,862 students, including four offensive starters. The Aggies have a streak in Southwest Conference play since December 1, 1990. Tech's Aggies feature offensive linemen (allowing 269 yards per game) Brandon Mitchell is a All-American (166 points per game), scoring (166 points per game). Punter Sean Taylor is a leader with 46.9 average on three attempts.

Texas Tech has been in the top 25 and come up just short of the top 10 in the State and two points shy of the top 10 in resiliency. The Red Raiders' regular season games have a margin of 29 points or more average on three attempts.

Todd Walker, coaches Offensive Player of the Week, is not a flashy player but always get the job done. He held off Rod Hobbs to retain the starting fullback job in the spring semester. Walker is the consistent solid blocker for Byron Hanspard. 1994: He walked on and earned the starting position for 10 games. Walker's best game was 26 yards on five carries, and caught the two-point conversion pass vs. New Mexico Lobos. He caught two passes for 61 yards vs. TCU, including season long 45 yarder. 1993: Attended Tech as regular student. 1992: served as squadman. 1991: redshirt season. PERSONAL: Walker is an mechanical engineering major from El Paso, TX.

REPORT

College station, has a student returning 39 of 63 lettermen, and seven defensive players. The team has a 29-game non-losing conference record dating back to 1928-29 to Texas). The nation's top defenses (same). Defensive end All-American candidate. The SWC in rushing (132 and all-purpose yards (264) is among the nation's top.

so close twice this season (lost by one point to Penn State). Dykes must still lead the Raiders. The Raiders have split their last 12 games winning by an average of 10 points and losing by an average of 10 points a game.

THE RESULTS

Z-TEAM Z-FENSE

Highlights have been many on the defensive side of the ball so far this season. Texas Tech held Baylor to only 44 yards passing (6-16-2) last week. That's the fewest passing yards a Tech defense has surrendered in 12 years (31 to Tulsa in '83) and the lowest to an SWC foe in 18 seasons (29 to Baylor in '77). Tech did not allow a touchdown to Baylor despite BU starting six possessions within 55 yards on the Raider end zone. In three games, the Raiders starting defense has given up four touchdowns, and one of those came on a three-yard drive after a fumble to Penn State. The Raiders have made 25 plays behind the line of scrimmage. While the experienced linebacking crew has gotten much recognition, the surprising play in the interior has been a major factor. Sophomore tackle Corey Chandler, who originally walked on, was credited with 10 tackles last week against the Bears. "One of the major factors for us so far has been the fact that our defense hasn't been surprised by anything yet," said Dykes. "Our defensive coaches have done an excellent job of preparing our players in practice."

The Texas Tech Red Raiders (1-2) will host the No. 8 ranked Texas A&M Aggies (2-1) in a colossal collision Saturday at 1 p.m. in Jones stadium. A sellout crowd in excess of 50,000 is expected. The game is the first of three consecutive home appearances for the Red Raiders. The game will pit Texas Tech's pressure defense, which is surrendering just 300 yards a game, vs. the nation's all-purpose yardage leader, Texas A&M's Leeland McElroy. McElroy is a strong Heisman Trophy candidate.

QUARTERBACKS:

Aggie quarterback Corey Pullig doesn't impress many with his numbers, but the senior from Deer Park is tied for winningest quarterback in A&M history. Pullig is the SWC's second-rated passer with 581 yards and five touchdowns. Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge needs to shake off a slow start for the Tech offense to be effective against the Aggies.

RUNNING BACKS:

The Aggies running attack goes through one man, Leeland McElroy, who is a candidate for the Doak Walker Award and the Heisman Trophy. Backups Surr Parker and D'Andre Hardeeman were two of the top high school runners recruited last season. Tech running back Byron Hanspard remains a threat despite a drop in production.

DEFENSIVE LINE:

The Tech line was the question mark entering the year, but a group of young, inexperienced players have stepped up to lead the Raiders to a ranking of 19th in total defense. The Aggie front four, led by Brandon Mitchell, is ranked ninth in total distance.

LINEBACKERS:

Tech linebackers Shawn Banks, Zach Thomas, Marcus Coleman and Robert Johnson all make big plays when called upon. Thomas may be slowed by strep throat though. Reggie Brown is the latest in a long line of great linebackers for the Wrecking Crew. Against Colorado, the senior had 10 tackles.

by Arni Sribhen

TWO-MINUTE DRILL

ZACH THOMAS

This week, senior all-American linebacker Zach Thomas sat down and discussed factors that make the Texas Tech and Texas A&M game a big draw. Unfortunately, Thomas has been on the losing end of the last three contests between the two teams.

Q: Why is there such a rivalry between Texas Tech and Texas A&M?

A: I didn't know there was one. A&M is such a good team that we always want to beat them. We always get fired up to play them because they are so good.

Q: What would it mean to you to beat A&M in your senior season?

A: It would mean a whole lot. We've lost to them three times since I've been here, and two times we should have beat them. This year, we have them here.

Q: Playing A&M when they are ranked — is that more of an incentive to win?

A: Right now they seem to be more worried about getting to the Fiesta Bowl after they lost to Colorado. They need to worry about us.

Earnhardt's protege Green reminds race fans of original

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Jeff Green never envisioned he'd grow up to become the driver of Dale Earnhardt's Busch Grand National car. When you get right down to it, though, the match appears to have been made in heaven.

"Growing up in Nashville, I was always considered the man in black, so I guess it's only right that I drive his car," Green said.

Green has displayed several Earnhardt-like tendencies in his first season driving for The Intimidator.

For starters, in true Earnhardt fashion, Green is near the top of the points chase.

With three events left, beginning with Saturday's All Pro Bumper to Bumper 300 at Charlotte Motor Speedway, Green is in third place.

He's 388 points behind leader Johnny Benson, but he could possibly catch Chad Little, who is 168 points ahead in second. And, like his boss, Green has taken his share of eyebrows with his tactics on the track. He and Little tangled during races at Bristol, Darlington and Richmond, but neither driver was sanctioned and the two raced side by side without incident in their most recent race, at Dover.

Driving aggressively in a black Chevrolet is nothing new for Green, 33, who was the 1990 track champion at Nashville Speedway.

"I drove a black Chevrolet then, too," he said. "And I don't know if you could say I was an intimidator, but I guess I was close to it."

How close? "Earnhardt came in there and raced one night," Green said, "and I beat his tail."

That kind of skill and confidence led Earnhardt to select Green to replace him when he retired from driving in NASCAR's No. 2 series last year.

Green had a few things working against him from the outset, including the fact that neither he nor Earnhardt had ever competed on the circuit full time. Then there was the little Earnhardt streak that Green had to face in his debut at Daytona. Earnhardt won five consecutive runnings of the Goody's 300, the season-opening race.

"And of course I was supposed to make it six in a row," Green said. "We had a real good car, but just missed it a little bit and ended up seventh."

The failure to win at Daytona was a sign of what was ahead as the team went through a trial-and-error process over the first portion of the season. Eight races into the schedule, Green was 15th in the points.

"But Dale, Teresa and Goodwrench were all super," Green said. "They could have easily said, 'Well, this kid just can't do it,' but they stuck with me."

Green responded with a run of five top-five finishes in six races, moving him into the top five in the season standings, where he has remained.

"I feel like we've done everything but win races," he said, "but there's three left, and hopefully, we can win one or two of them—maybe all three."

And if that doesn't happen this year, there's always 1996, when Green's role with Earnhardt will expand. Earnhardt and his Winston Cup car owner, Richard Childress, are to field a research-and-development car in that series for about 15 races. Green is in line to drive the car in about five events.

"I feel like I've got the best job in the garage," Green said. "And one of these days, the 3 car's going to be back in victory lane."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Men's tennis team competes at Texas A&M

After a successful first week of play at the National Clay Court Championships, the Texas Tech men's tennis team will play in the Texas A&M Invitational this weekend.

"I can't wait to get started," Tech coach Tim Siegel said. "Last week was a great start for Petar (Danolic) and Mattias (Rohlin)."

Danolic, a freshman from Croatia, advanced through the main draw of the tournament while Rohlin, a senior from Sweden, was beaten in the final round of qualifying.

Danolic and Rohlin will be joined by Tylir Jimenez, Deiter Schwendinger, Robert Barry and Marcello Borrelli as they compete against players from Texas A&M, TCU, Minnesota, Oklahoma and Rice.

"This is a real strong field," Siegel said. "I am looking forward to getting things started."

Cross country teams host area schools

Both Texas Tech cross country teams will host teams at the Texas Tech Invitational Saturday at Mae Simmons Park. The women's race begins at 8:30 a.m. and the men's race is scheduled to begin 10 a.m.

The women will compete against Odessa College, South Plains College, Wayland Baptist and West Texas A&M, while the men will compete against McMurry, South Plains College, Wayland Baptist and West Texas A&M.

Tech volleyball ready to bounce back against A&M

by Chris Parry

The University Daily

The Texas Tech volleyball team will try to get back on the winning track when it faces No. 24 Texas A&M at 7 p.m. in the G. Rollie White Coliseum in College Station.

The Red Raiders (12-5, 1-2 in Southwest Conference play) suffered their second SWC loss against No. 13 Texas Longhorns Wednesday night.

Junior outside hitter Lacy Nye said Tech is ready to move on to face the Aggies.

"Everyone is ready to put the loss (to Texas) behind us," she said.

Tech will need to improve on its 38 hitting errors against Texas. Tech coach Jeff Nelson said the errors reflected poor hitting and passing.

"It's more a matter of us hitting

TEXAS TECH (12-5) vs. TEXAS A&M (10-1)

Time: 7 p.m. Day: Saturday
Place: G. Rollie White Coliseum, College Station
Series record: Texas A&M leads the series 27-20

Radio/TV: None

Key Matchup: Red Raider middle blockers vs. the A&M hitting duo of Kristie Smedsrud and Page White also continues to contribute averaging 2.53 kills a game.

UD Prediction: Tech in four games

Nelson said both Slapper and senior outside hitter Diane Owens struggled a little against Texas, but he felt that they will return back to form.

"I think they will bounce back and play real well," Nelson said of the other two seniors on the team.

Texas A&M presents an imposing force to the Red Raiders.

The Lady Aggies have won their last eight straight matches and enter with a 10-1 record.

The Lady Aggies are led by their hitting and strong blocking.

Sophomore Cindy VanderWoude has been a defensive force for the team with 51 blocks this season.

The hitting responsibilities for Texas A&M have been taken care of by sophomores Page White and Kristie Smedsrud.

White has 136 kills to lead the team while Smedsrud is second with 129 kills.

Nye said Tech needs to contain Smedsrud.

"We have to try to make her hit the shot that she doesn't hit as well," Nye said.

Tech was held to less than .200 in hitting during the loss to Texas. Assistant coach Mike Lessinger said the team is hungry for a win.

"We are a little wounded right now," Lessinger said.

"I feel that they are going to come out angry and ready to play."

Junior defensive specialist Courtney Thames said Tech needs to concentrate on the main objective.

"We know we have the ability," Thames said.

"It's just a matter of going out there and performing the way we know how we can."

Jones to promote American Express

DALLAS (AP) — Jerry Jones has done it again, defying the National Football League by announcing a deal Thursday with American Express, although Visa is the league's official charge card.

American Express Travel Related Services Co. Inc. said it will become the official credit card of Texas Stadium, home of the Dallas Cowboys. Jones owns both.

Terms of the multiyear contract, which has been rumored for weeks, weren't released.

American Express said in a news release that the deal means its credit cards will be the only ones accepted to buy season football tickets.

The company's card members also can get special ticket access to sporting events and concerts. Beginning Friday, a limited number of Texas Stadium tickets will be available to American Express gold and platinum card members.
