Faculty pay among nation's lowest

by Kirk Baird

The University Daily

Texas Tech faculty members' salaries continue to rank low nationally, despite efforts from the Tech administration to increase faculty pay.

"Faculty salary increase is the highest priority," Tech President Robert Lawless said. "Our faculty is under compensated."

Since the Texas Legislature did not provide for any salary increase, Lawless said he hoped faculty members would be heartened with the increase the Board of Regents provided.

"I hope the raise we provided would show them (faculty) we realize the critical role they play," Lawless said. "A lot of the public institutions can not do anything if the legislature does not do anything."

Tech ranks in the bottom of the four faculty salary slots of Division I schools, specifically: professor, associate professor, assistant professor and instructor, according to the American Association of University Professors.

Tech professors received an average salary of $62,900 compared to the national average of $71,290. Tech associate professors received an average salary of $44,100 compared to the national average of $50,420. Tech assistant professors received an average salary of $36,900 compared to the national average of $42,500. Tech instructors received an average salary of $25,200 compared to the national average of $30,500.

In terms of overall compensation, including cost of health insurance and pension funding, Tech ranked low nationally, according to AAUP.

The latest rankings reflect a continued decline in the overall national standings of Tech faculty salaries, but do not reflect the 4 percent salary awarded to faculty members this summer.

Texas provided for an increase in general use fees as long as the fees did not exceed the rate for in-state tuition, which is currently $30. The Tech Board of Regents approved the general use fee rate of $21 in June and August meetings. From that fee came a 4 percent salary increase to faculty members, with 3 percent awarded for merit and 1 percent for equity.

Another source of money the state provided for was in the increase to the Higher Education Assistance Fund, from $10.5 million to $16.8 million. HEAF was set up for major repairs and renovations, equipment purchases and acquisition to the libraries and never was intended for raising faculty sala-

Five in millions Black students join march

by Carrie Kilman

The University Daily

The largest mobilization of black men to march on Washington, D.C., since World War II will include representatives from Texas Tech.

The Million Man March, planned for Oct. 16, was organized by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

The march represents a holy day for oppressed people, said Ben Conley, a graduate student from Midland and member of People's Organized Watch on Equal Rights.

Conley plans to attend the march with four other Tech students from POWER, he said.

"The march is considered a symbolic gesture," he said.

"It is a day of atonement for black males for things we did not or could not do for our families and communities."

Black people across the nation are asked to stay at home on the day of the march to pray and fast from sun up to sun down, Conley said.

People are asked not to work or go to school so the rest of the country will recognize the importance of the occasion, he said.

"Even black male athletes are asked not to pick up a ball, shoot a ball or throw a ball," Conley said. "No money will be made off of blacks on that day."

Participants will adhere to four basic tenets: Social responsibility, economic development, spiritual renewal and political empowerment, he said.

"The black community is very divided right now," he said. "We can't move forward until we come together.

"We need to be responsible for our actions and stop making excuses for what we've done."

Conley said he was unsure in the beginning whether to support the march because he is not a supporter of symbolic politics, but chose supporting a controversial cause designed to help people rather than feeling comfortable in mainstream America.

The march should raise awareness of the problems black students face on the Tech campus, Conley said.

"There are not very many of us here at Tech," he said.

"The retention and graduation rates are low and black enrollment is down from last year. This is something that is going to have to change."

Black athletes at Tech encounter problems unknown to most white students, Conley said.

"With the attitude we're getting toward affirmative action, there's obviously not as great a concern for getting blacks into school for academic purposes as there is for athletic purposes," he said.

"Tech is concerned with how they can benefit from us, not how we can benefit from attending Tech."

Toussaint Martin, a junior pre-medicine and philosophy major from Washington, D.C., and member of POWER, said organizers plan to register eight million people to vote as independents on the day of the march to create a sense of political empowerment within the black community that is not restricted by two-party ties.

"(The march) is not just a Farrakhan thing, it's a people of color thing," Martin said.

Abbott campaigns for state's high court slot

by Brent Dirks

The University Daily

Newly appointed Texas Supreme Court Justice Greg Abbott campaigned Thursday night to the Lubbock County Young Republicans at the Godbold Cultural Center.

Abbott, who was appointed by Gov. George Bush Jr., to replace retiring Justice Jack Hightower, will begin his term at the first of the year, but is up for re-election in 1996.

While on the bench, Abbott said he wants to help change the court's philosophies.

"Certain philosophies were leaning too much toward the liberal agenda, but I want to restore integrity to the Supreme Court by adhering to the conservative philosophy of judicial restraint," he said.

Abbott said in the 1970s and 1980s, he felt the Texas Supreme Court judges were "abandoning the power of what judges should do and derogating the separation of powers."

One of those areas Abbott believed needed to be changed was tort reform.

Tort is personal injury civil cases. "In the '70s and '80s, the Texas Supreme Court was rocked with a great expansion in tort reform," he said.

Abbott said this great expansion in tort reform hurt working class people.

Abbott said just because the Texas Supreme Court is perceived as better than in the past, he is still concerned.

"Because there is a 7-2 Republican majority on the court, I am con-

AT&T freed from rate caps

WASHINGTON (AP) — AT&T, like its long-distance rivals, soon will be able to charge what it wants.

Federal regulators agreed Thursday to lift rules controlling the rates the telephone giant charges its 80 million residential customers.

Low-income customers and those who make few long-distance calls would be protected.

The Federal Communications Commission, citing a more competitive long-distance market, voted 5-0 to lift price regulations on AT&T.

The change takes effect 30 days after the FCC makes the written order public.

AT&T competitor MCI and the Consumer Federation of America oppose the change.

"They didn't need to throw out all the rules and the tools to protect long-distance telephone customers," said the consumer group's legislative counsel, Bradley Stillman.

"Residential customers could end up with higher rates or they may not see lower rates." The FCC and AT&T disagree.

They say the action would let AT&T, which owns over 50 percent of the long-distance market, act more competitively, which eventually should lower residential rates and speed new services to the public.

Competition will set prices, they say.

Superstitions abound on Friday the 13th

by Leslie Weeks

The University Daily

Dig out the rabbit's foot, stock up on salt and watch out for those pesky black cats. Today is Friday the 13th and anything can happen — at least according to several students on campus.

"Awful stuff happens to me on Friday the 13th," said Carol McFarling, a junior journalism major from Lubbock. "I'm dreading it. I never go out on the night of Friday the 13th. I just stay in my house. If the phone rings I don't answer it. I really just hate to see it coming."

McFarling said her phobia began more than 20 years ago on a trip home from Carlsbad, N.M.

She was driving a new car she had purchased two months before. Suddenly, the transmission "just fell right out from under it," she said.

Since then, she said many unfortunate events have happened on Friday the 13th that have reinforced her phobia.

However, she said her fear is not shared by any of her family members.

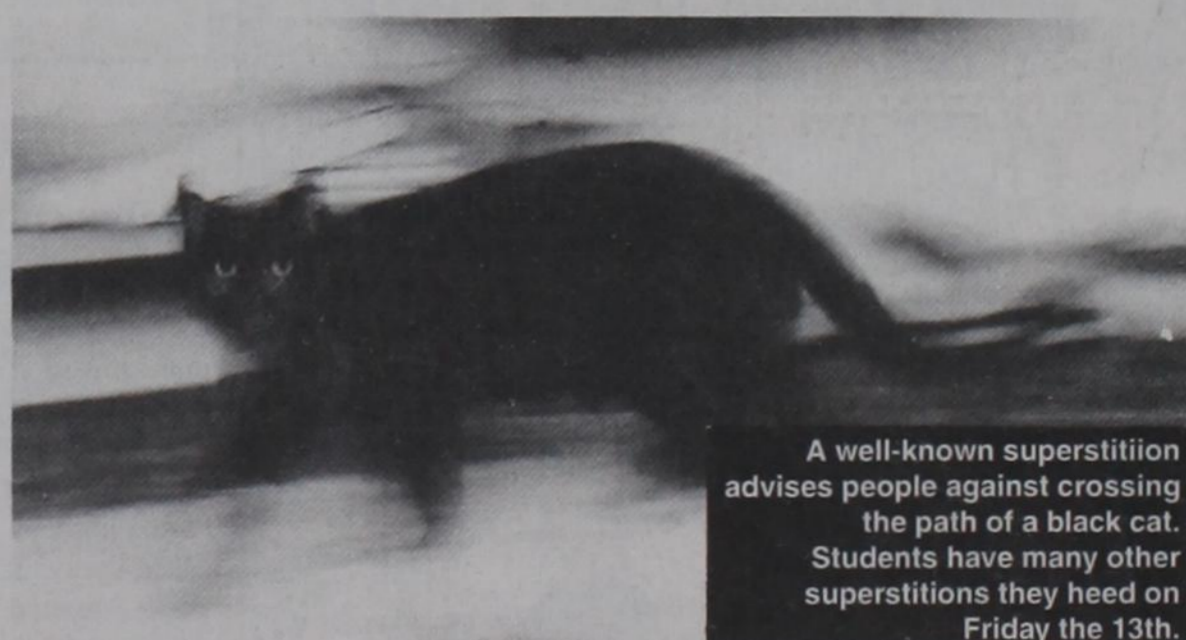

"My mother and father were married on Friday the 13th," she said. "Of course, they have been fighting with each other for more than 50 years now."

An automobile accident influenced Lisa Berg's view of the unlucky day.

"It was Jan. 13 and I was supposed to come back to Tech, but I decided to stay home instead," said Berg, a sophomore agriculture communications major from Des Moines, N.M. "I drove to a basketball game and hit a deer, wrecking my car."

Berg said she thinks the hidden message was to return to Tech when she had planned to, but she is still suspicious about Friday the 13th.

Rather than risk an automobile accident, one student prefers to stay home where he considers himself safe.

A well-known superstition advises people against crossing the path of a black cat. Students have many other superstitions they heed on Friday the 13th.

"I just think weird things happen," said Shawn Vinson, a freshmen electrical engineering major from Dallas. "I don't like to do major things. I don't fly or take a long drive home by myself. It's too risky."

Nikki Cromey, a sophomore restaurant, hotel and institutional management major from Anchorage, Alaska, said she has a genuine fear of Friday the 13th. The fear probably stems from several childhood experiences occurring on that date, she said.

When she was in sixth grade, she and another girl were angry with another. On Friday the 13th, they ended up getting into a fist-fight, which escalated into a fight between all of the students at her school, on an ice-skating rink.

"Then in seventh grade at my Catholic school, the roof collapsed on Friday the 13th," she said.

Cromey said she will take precautions today.

"I will be extra careful," she said. "I won't drive. I'm going to walk carefully and look both ways extra times."

However, not all students worry about Friday the 13th.

"It's a day like any other day," said Marsha Perales, a senior biochemistry major from Laredo.

"Oh wait," she said, laughing. "I shouldn't say that, I may jinx myself."

Friday the 13th!

Day makes special celebration, alleviates normal routine of bad luck

CHRIS WALTERS
UD guest columnist

Today is Friday the 13th, which I'm sure you've noticed by now, unless something really bad (like your head exploding) has already happened to you.

As we all know — those of us with heads, at least — Friday the 13th is like a national holiday for Murphy's Law. The only day worse than today is St. Patrick's Day, because there are those really scary people who still insist on pinching. This forces people like myself to come up with absurd descriptions of what we might be wearing that is green. ("The stitching in my underwear." "This tarnish on my ring." "My pancreas.")

I actually sort of like today. My life of quiet desperation is normally so miserable that these Fridays are like personal holidays. All the bad luck has to run off and torment everyone else, leaving me unmolested for 24 hours.

You may think that's a twisted sort of optimism — like being glad you weren't drafted into a war because you're a double-amputee — but that's just the positive kind of guy I am. I've already had so much bad luck that I will be able to enjoy Fridays the 13th well into the third millennium.

I realize some of you may be saying, "But Chris, we don't care what your problems are." Maybe not, but at least I don't refer to myself as a "we," freak.

Besides, I'm doing this as a public service — if you read this column, then something bad will have already happened to you, thus protecting you from any worse luck for the rest of the day. (If you want extra protection, read this while lying in the middle of the street or while hopping backwards on one foot down a staircase.)

Here, in no particular order, are some examples from my short life of true bad luck:

One time, when I was 9 or 10 years old, I dressed up like a mummy for Halloween. I wrapped myself up in yards of torn bedsheets and — to this day I don't know what I was thinking — decided that the best thing to wear under the strips would be thermal underwear. Not denim, or shorts, but underwear. And my mother let me, God rest her soul (she's not really even dead yet, if that's any clue to how much I've forgiven her).

As you can imagine, my homemade costume quickly fell apart — on the bus, on the playground, in the cafeteria, in the hall — and I spent all day with the teacher's stapler glued to my hand, wishing I were dead or in a coma.

A year ago, I took a Spanish class from an instructor who insisted on calling me "Señor Pollo" (long story), which means "Mister Chicken."

It got so bad that when I'd see other students outside of class, they'd recognize me and call out, "Hey, Mr. Chicken!"

My parents bought me a pony once and the first day they brought it home I fell off it, it ran out into the middle of the farm road in front of our house and an elderly couple hit it with their car, killing it instantly.

In elementary (and I only tell you this because I trust you, or because I am an idiot who wants to be ridiculed by complete strangers), I was waiting after school for the late bus — which is what they call it when there are more kids than buses.

And I really had to pee, but I was afraid if I went inside I'd miss the bus and have to spend the night at school. So I stayed outside and ended up peeing on myself.

I lost my left leg in a car accident two years ago. Not really. I just threw that in to add "mood."

One time I was swimming in a lake, and I hadn't tied my swimming trunks very well, and when I went under they came off and floated on the surface of the water. And then a turtle bit me. (Yes, this is true.)

See? And these are just off the top of my head. Who knows what I'd remember if I underwent some of that regression therapy. I'd share more, but I'm going to see my counselor now. Have a nice day.

Chris Walters is a senior English and sociology major from Lubbock.

Raise the Pay

Tech faculty needs larger salaries

An average salary of $62,900 a year is not enough.

Texas Tech ranks the lowest among SWC schools in average salaries for professors, associate professors, assistant professors and instructors.

Professors are paid $62,900, $8,390 less than the national average, associate professors are paid an average of $44,100 compared to the national average of $50,420, assistant professors receive an average salary of $36,900 compared to the national average of $42,900 and Tech's instructors receive $25,200, $5,300 less than the national average.

Tech professors also see less in the way of health care packages and other forms of overall compensation.

It's time Tech dug into its pockets and offered a little bit more.

After all, here at Tech, students are interested in bang for their buck... they want quality, qualified professors and instructors.

And to get those, an obvious incentive is dollar signs.

Tech just doesn't offer enough of them.

Tech is well below the national average in faculty salaries and that definitely correlates with the qualified and specific amount of faculty recruited to teach at Tech.

And while the Tech Board of Regents did award faculty members a 4 percent salary increase this summer from the General Use Fee, it's still not enough.

The Tech regents show limited support for Tech faculty and the Texas Legislature shows even less. Without increasing salaries and other benefits in higher education institutions, Texas schools will see an even greater drop-off in faculty transferring to teach at state colleges and universities.

Rallying and securing endowments for Tech is one way to ensure dedicated professors and instructors will seek Tech out as an institution to complete research and share knowledge with students.

Perhaps the Legislature does not understand outstanding professors and instructors are an incredible recruiting tool. With qualified teachers at a credible university come worthwhile, dedicated students.

It all comes full circle. And beginning with supporting faculty and bringing their salaries on par with those of other Texas universities is a perfect way to begin.

The University Daily editorial board voted 4-3-1 on this issue.

“It's time Tech dug into its pockets and offered a little bit more. After all, here at Tech, students are interested in bang for their buck...”

Coffee column shows lacks of understanding

To the editor: Kimberly Ott's column printed 10/11/95 shows a profound lack of understanding and mischaracterization of the legal system in America. She states, "I find it highly unlikely that hot coffee could cause burns that require plastic surgery or deserve millions of dollars of surgery." Oh really? Since when are editorial columnists for the Tech newspaper licensed doctors of medicine? It's also my guess that since you are not a doctor of medicine, your opinion is completely without foundation. Before writing such a poorly considered statement, ask yourself a question: Is it even remotely possible that a case like this could make it to court without extensive evidence by physicians and plastic surgeons that suggest the severity of the burns and the applicable medical remedy?

Repairing second and third degree burns like the ones in the case you cited, specifically burns on the legs and pubic area, is a lengthy and delicate process.

Did you know that in cases similar to the ones you complain of that the coffee in question was heated far above the accepted industry standards, resulting in temperatures that could (and did) easily burn people more quickly and severely? Did you know in the now famous McDonald's coffee case there were numerous complaints and less severe burns from the extreme temperature of the coffee which McDonald's did nothing about?

It's bad enough that the legal profession takes a regular beating from the media for doing its job. It's worse that we have to take it from critics who are so misinformed, unqualified, and irrational that their complaints and points of contention have no validity. Many people unschooled in the intricacies of law wrongfully believe articles like yours because they think that the writer has performed a proper and exhaustive search of relevant facts concerning the law. They are right to assume such a duty to integrity exists, but as this article blatantly highlights, they are wrong to assume it is always fulfilled.

Farmer-Stockman show ends three-day run

by Charles Melton
The University Daily

Combines, plows, antique tractors and fields of cotton, corn and alfalfa gathered together as the third annual Texas Farmer-Stockman Show came to a close Thursday in Lubbock.

The event, which began Tuesday at Lubbock City Farms, located on 50th Street and County Road 28, is sponsored by the Texas Farmer-Stockman as an opportunity for their advertisers to display their products to farmers and ranchers.

For those interested in farm equipment and crop performance, the show featured equipment demonstrations by companies like John Deere and New Holland and crop performance demonstrations by seed companies.

Family-living exhibits and workshops, antique tractor displays and an opportunity to see the latest in farm and ranch technology were at the show.

"Things are going pretty well this year," said Allen Payne, manager of AgCHEM Equipment, Inc. in Lubbock.

"I think we'll see the show get better and better, because of improved attendance and media coverage."

AgCHEM has exhibited at the show since it began, and has gained product recognition from local farmers and ranchers, Payne said.

AgCHEM displayed two 1996 Rowgators, which are row crop post-emergent applicators, along with a new saddle mount tank system for John Deere equipment, Payne said.

Another local company exhibiting at the show was American Equipment and Trailer.

The company displayed three trailers comprised of a grain trailer, small gooseneck trailer and an implement trailer, said Bill Butler, general manager of the company.

"Last year, we saw some results from the show, but this year the crowd seems to be down," Butler said.

Several Texas Tech professors and students attended the show during the week.

"The show is starting to develop a reputation and field demonstrations are a strength," said Harlan Thorvilson, associate professor of plant and soil science in the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources.

The show is similar to farm progress shows in the Midwest, he said.

"The Farmer-Stockman show is a worthy enterprise and one important aspect of it is that it puts agriculture, which is the major industry in this region, in the forefront of people's minds," Thorvilson said.

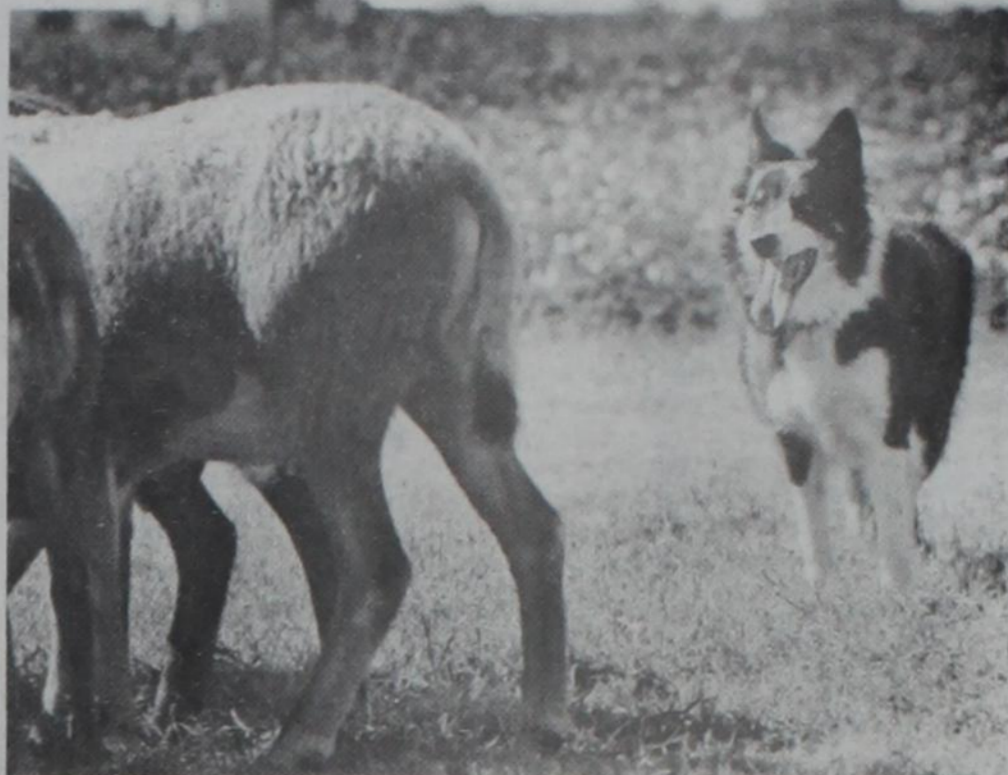

The farm equipment, including new plows, John Deere and New Holland tractors and trucks, are nice aspects of the show, said Jess Staples, a senior history major from Tuleta.

"John Deere and New Holland have the best set-ups out of all of the tractor companies I have seen and on the ranching side, the cattle handling equipment by Priefert was interesting," Staples said.

"The people are extremely nice and it's nice to be around country folks."

Big Green Machine: New Holland and John Deere tractor companies held a "Ride-N-Drive" exhibit at the Farmer-Stockman Show.

Head 'em up: Messie, a Border Collie from Vance's Border Collies in Lubbock, put on a sheep-tending demonstration Thursday morning at the Farmer-Stockman Show.

Lubbock City Council debates smoking ban

by Tara McQueen

The University Daily

Lubbock City Council two-stepped around the smoking ban ordinance Thursday at their bi-monthly meeting.

At the previous council meeting, three members of the council were ready to vote in favor of a total smoking ban. At Thursday's meeting, however, only one member was in favor of the ban.

It was two steps forward and one step back, said Councilwoman Windi Sitton.

"Historically it has been the role of our government to protect the health of citizens," Sitton said. "Second-hand smoke is declared by all medical agencies as a cancer-causing agent. We can't risk any of our citizens' health, therefore I support a total ban on smoking."

After more than a year, the council is still divided on the proposed ban, Mayor David Langston said.

"We have no conclusion," Langston said. "Council members lie everywhere along the spectrum from a total ban to leaving the current ordinance intact."

He said his position is to come up with a consensus or compromise that will pass a formal vote.

Libby Stuyt, a Texas Tech Health Sciences Center psychiatrist, spoke to the council about the effects of addictive substances.

"I work with people with drug problems," said Stuyt, medical director for the Southwest Institute for Addictive Diseases.

"Ninety percent of smokers started (smoking) before the age of 18 and 90 percent of all chemically dependent people smoke."

Cigarettes are the first drug minors purchase illegally, she said.

Chris Longren, chairman of the smoking ban subcommittee, spoke on behalf of the Lubbock Restaurant Association.

"It's not a smoker's rights issue, it's a private business issue," Longren said.

"We want a chance for business to operate their own way with more freedom."

The council will vote on a version of the original proposal during a meeting next Thursday.

House expanding for more families, patients

by Emily Elsen

The University Daily

The Ronald McDonald House is expanding to accommodate the growing waiting list of patients and their families who are seeking treatment in Lubbock hospitals.

Funding for the construction project was donated through grants and donations from Lubbock citizens, said LaJuana Quarles, house manager of the Ronald McDonald House.

Lee Lewis Construction, which built the original building, was commissioned to do the renovations, Quarles said.

Construction crews broke ground on a renovation project which will add eight new bedrooms and an expanded dining room to the facility, Quarles said.

The Ronald McDonald House offers Texas Tech students on-campus opportunities for volunteering, she said.

Quarles said the house can always use Tech students because the families that live there can benefit from someone to talk to, and students can provide transportation or just come and bake cookies in the kitchen for the families.

Ronald McDonald House

Jim Cawthon: The University Daily

"Volunteers are what help keep the Ronald McDonald House running," she said. "The rewards are great, knowing that you are helping families get through a difficult time in their lives."

Quarles said it makes her feel good when Tech students come in any time and can feel at home and bake cookies in the kitchen.

Nancy Laughlin, development coordinator of the Ronald McDonald House, said since there is such a connection between Tech and the Ronald McDonald House anyway, it is natural it should serve as a home away from home for Tech students.

"Last year, an organization held a scavenger hunt and gathered items from our wish list for the house," Laughlin said.

There are many organizations who donate food and evening meals for the family, she said.

"Civic groups, branches of the city of Lubbock and restaurants bring evening meals for us," Laughlin said.

Sometimes the organizations bring meals already prepared, but some bring the ingredients and use the kitchen facilities there, she said.

"There have even been times when I have gotten here early and there were baskets of food on the doorstep with no note attached," Laughlin said.

There are many ways Tech students can contribute their time to helping out at the Ronald McDonald House, she said.

"We need drivers to take the families to the hospital and administrative volunteers to keep up with typing and answer phones," she said.

Boy allows himself to be burned

DENVER (AP) — A 12-year-old boy allowed himself to be doused with lighter fluid and set afire by three other boys who offered him a soda and a quarter if he agreed to do it.

Jack "Ben" Wiley Jr. was in serious condition Thursday with second-degree burns over a fifth of his body. Hospital officials put him on a respirator because he breathed the searing flames.

Wiley and the three other boys — two of them 13 and the other 12 — had apparently stolen the lighter fluid during a shoplifting spree Wednesday, Fort Morgan Police Chief Harold Davission said.

Teacher arrested for growing marijuana

SLIDELL, La. (AP)—A former teacher of the year was arrested along with her weightlifter husband Thursday after deputies found 10 marijuana plants growing in their home. Laurie Wilder Maschek, a fifth-grade teacher, and her 34-year-old husband, James Maschek, were charged with marijuana cultivation and other offenses carrying a total of more than 50 years in prison. Mrs. Maschek, 32, was named teacher of the year by her St. Tammany Parish school system in 1992.

Accused murderer beaten by neighbors

DETROIT (AP)—A man accused of bursting into a home and fatally shooting two women Thursday was punched and kicked by his neighbors as he was handcuffed and taken from his home.

The neighbors later turned on his mother, police said. Neither was seriously injured.

Witnesses told police three men kicked in the front door of a house and began shooting early Thursday. The two women, ages 23 and 34, were dead on arrival at a hospital. A 44-year-old man was in serious condition with one gunshot wound.

Neither the suspect nor the three victims were identified. Police were searching for the other two suspects.

Several children and two young women who were in the house and witnessed the shootings were not hurt, police said.

Calphillisea Winters, one of the women in the house, told WDIV-TV that one of the suspects "told them to kill everybody in the house ... kill the kids and all."

The man in custody lived across the street and was the estranged boyfriend of one of the women, Cmdr. Charles Wilson said.

Salaries

ries, such as using a portion of the general use fee to increase faculty salary, but much more needs to be done.

"We're not happy where we are and we're open to suggestions," Burns said.

The lower salary rates of Tech and most public Texas universities compared to universities in other states is a result of the Texas Legislature's unwillingness to support higher education as well as other states, said Daniel Nathan, chairman of the philosophy department in the College of Arts and Sciences and President of the American Association of University Professors.

"There is an inadequate appreciation for higher education in the Texas population and in the Legislature," Nathan said.

Despite the best efforts from Lawless and other university presidents, faculty salaries have gone down, he said.

Moral of the faculty is a concern as well as losing professors to other universities that can offer more money, Nathan said.

"Not being paid what colleagues are paid in relative positions makes you feel second class," Nathan said.

"If you feel you're being treated poorly, it makes it difficult to work to the best of your ability and can inhibit your motivation."

Burns said it is demoralizing for faculty when they work their tail off and do not feel they have been adequately compensated for their work.

cerned because satisfaction breeds complacency," he said.

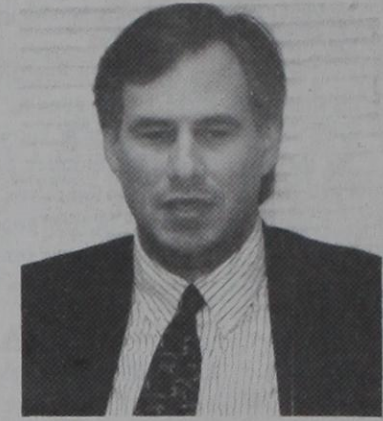

Abbott said his 1996 campaign will not include "dirty" campaigning.

"I want to strictly avoid a dirty campaign because a dirty campaign gets you nowhere," he said.

"I have many positive points on my background."

Another point of Abbott's platform will be campaign contributions.

"Historically, most campaign contributions to the Supreme Court judge candidates have been lawyers," he said.

Abbott

"I want the majority of my campaign contributions to be from non-lawyers."

Abbott is the judge of the 129th state Civil District Court in Houston.

"Since his election, Judge Abbott has been rated the most outstanding judge in Harris County in every poll by the Harris County Bar Association," said Robert Pratt of the Lubbock County Young Republicans.

"There's a lot of judges in Harris County and that's saying something, too,"

In his court, Abbott has dispersed some of the backlog of cases, Pratt said.

"He has reduced the number of cases in his court by almost 20 percent," Pratt said.

Cars available without ashtrays

DETROIT (AP) — Four out of five American drivers don't smoke in the car or let their passengers light up. Is it any wonder Detroit is moving increasingly toward making the "ash receiver" optional equipment?

Chrysler Corp. made a splash at an auto show last year by introducing new cars without ashtrays or cigarette lighters — apparently the first mass-market vehicles since the 1930s without standard ashtrays.

"I figured for many years that people were using ashtrays for other purposes," said Tom Moulson, a senior vice president at Market Opinion Research, which released a survey Thursday on smoking and cars.

The Farmington Hills company found that 78 percent of drivers said they never smoke in the car. Five percent smoke on some trips, while 17 percent almost always light up. Eighty percent said they don't let passengers smoke.

The telephone survey questioned 1,000 people in July, and its results have an error margin of plus or minus 3 percentage points. The survey did not ask how many of the 1,000 were smokers.

The findings bear out the conclusions of market researchers at automakers that are moving toward smokeless vehicles for reasons that have little to do with health benefits.

"It was a matter of making the best use of space in the vehicle," said Chrysler Corp. spokeswoman Pamela Mahoney. "By taking out the ash receiver they gain another cup holder."

At the 1994 North American International Auto Show, Chrysler displayed its new Cirrus and Stratus cars without ashtrays or lighters, known in the industry as "ash receivers."

Motown legend cut-out stolen, returned to Stubb's

Patrick Bulteel: The University Daily

Happy Homecoming: Ayn Bowron is happy to have the Natalie Cole cut-out come back home after it disappeared from Stubb's Bar-B-Q.

by Leslie Weeks
The University Daily

The band was blaring live music, smoke filled the air and alcohol was flowing freely at Stubb's Bar-B-Q the night of Oct. 4.

Everyone was having a great time — then it happened. Natalie Cole was kidnapped. There was no planning and no big scene.

Someone just walked up to her, folded her in half and slipped out the door.

However, after extensive detective work by employees and associates of Stubb's Bar-B-Q, the Natalie cut-out was recovered Monday night.

She was located by an associate of Stubb's manager Ayn Bowron.

The associate was driving on 14th Street and happened to look up, noticing a silhouette of the Natalie Cole cut-out in a window, Bowron said.

The associate immediately called Bowron, who went to the address to reclaim the victim.

The victim was described as "life-size" and "made of cardboard."

Bowron said she confronted the woman who had stolen the cardboard cut-out of Natalie Cole.

"I said, 'I'm Miss Ayn from Stubb's Bar-B-Q and I came to get Natalie Cole back,'" Bowron said.

Bowron said she walked in, picked up the cut-out and returned to Stubb's.

"It was really great," she said. "When I walked back into Stubb's, people started clapping and cheering."

The cut-out has been with Stubb's for more than 20 years.

"I have been in the business for 20 years, people get a little liquor in their system, and they'll do things they don't normally do."

Ayn Bowron, Stubb's Bar-B-Q manager

It was stolen during regular business hours.

Bartender Craig Reinhart said he actually saw the cut-out kidnapper the night it occurred.

"It was my night off, and I had gone to see a couple of bands," he said.

"I came walking over to Stubb's, and I saw a girl walking out the door with it."

But Reinhart said he was unable to fully describe the girl.

"I saw her, but the whole thing happened so quickly, and I'd been drinking pretty heavily," he said.

"I wasn't in any shape to deal with it so I ran in and called the manager."

Bowron said the assailant also had been spotted carrying the Cole cut-out across the Texas Tech campus by a customer. Bowron refused to reveal the abductor's name, but said she was a law student at Tech.

In addition to the previous associate who located the cut-out, Bowron said another Stubb's employee also discovered the thief.

The employee was at another local bar, listening for clues and she realized who the kidnapper was.

The employee managed to begin a conversation with the abductor and made her feel guilty, Bowron said.

As a result, the woman later called and apologized, offering to write a formal apology to Stubb's.

"She said she felt really bad," Bowron said.

She said she was really drunk and she was going to return her in a couple of weeks."

Surprisingly enough, Bowron said this is not the first case of cut-out crime.

"In the past, someone walked out with the Willie Nelson cut-out," she said.

"But at least they left half of him here."

Bowron said people periodically walk off with items and then bring them back, saying they were drunk.

"I have been in the bar business for 20 years," she said.

"People get a little liquor in their system, and they'll do things they don't normally do."

Bowron said she gives credit to her employees for finding the cut-out.

"I'm really glad our employees are snitches," she said.

"They're loyal to us."

Bergman receives award from estate

NEW YORK (AP) — Ingmar Bergman's boyhood love for Lillian Gish had a happy ending: a $200,000 award from the late actress' estate.

The 77-year-old Swedish director is this year's recipient of the Dorothy and Lillian Gish Prize.

Gish, who died in 1993, created the honor in her will.

The only stipulation was that it go to a person "who has made an outstanding contribution to the beauty of the world and also to mankind's enjoyment and understanding of life" through the arts.

Linn Ullmann, Bergman's daughter with actress Liv Ullmann, collected the award Wednesday on his behalf.

Volleyball team to battle Nevada after three-match loss

by Chris Parry

The University Daily

The Texas Tech volleyball team squares off against Nevada at 7 p.m. today at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The Red Raiders enter the match losers of their last three matches after a five-game loss to the Rice Owls Wednesday. Junior defensive specialist Courtney Thames said Tech has to get going immediately against the Wolfpack.

"I think we have to start getting focused right now," she said. "We have to turn it around."

Tech contained Rice's leading hitter swing hitter Sammy Waldron to .050 in hitting during the match. Now the Raiders need to focus their attention on another swing hitter, Nevada sophomore Tiffany Neumeier. Neumeier has 218 kills this season for the Wolfpack, averaging four kills a game.

Tech coach Jeff Nelson said Nevada is similar in play style to Rice.

"Although Nevada does not have a dominating player like Rice does, they have a lot of solid players," he said.

Another key to the Wolf Pack offense is sophomore swing hitter April Colgrove, who is second on the team on kills with 205. Colgrove leads the Big West Conference in digs averaging 3.68 digs per game.

"I've looked at their digs per game and I don't think it is something we are going to key on," Nelson said.

The team is playing well enough to win, they just can not close the deal when it needs to, he said.

"We have been in some of these matches and we are really playing average," Nelson said. "We are not playing our best ball and have had opportunities to win them."

Nelson said Tech is going to change its offensive set-up a little bit by inserting freshman outside hitter Kristen Holmes.

"She plays well in practice and she has been playing better when she goes into games," he said.

Nelson said Tech needs to play tough and has to win on Friday.

"We need a win to get over this hump," Nelson said. "Until we get it, it's going to be a struggle."

Diggin' the Red Raiders' game: Tech senior middle blocker Jill Slapper, No. 12, watches as teammate Cristine Martin digs the ball. Tech suffered a five-game loss to the Rice Owls Wednesday night. The Red Raiders will now compete against Nevada at 7 p.m. today in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Third playoff game begins

CLEVELAND (AP) — This is the type of matchup that can become an October memory, a moment that can make a single baseball game seem so special.

Randy Johnson vs. the Cleveland Indians.

The most intimidating, dominant pitcher the sport has seen in years going against the most fearsome, fearless lineup in the game today. Facing each other on Friday the 13th, the fate of a whole season is at stake.

For Johnson, game three of the AL playoffs at Jacobs Field will mark the fourth time in 12 days that he's been asked by the Seattle Mariners to carry them.

"If we don't win those games, we wouldn't be here right now," Johnson said. "It just so happens I was pitching those games. Because I have risen to the occasion for those games, there are expectations on me."

TEXAS TECH VS ARKANSAS STATE

The University Daily

Texas Tech University

THE SERIES

The No. 25-ranked (AP) Texas Tech Red Raiders (2-2) will host the Arkansas State Indians (2-4) Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in Jones Stadium. A crowd of 35,000 is expected for the game designated at Family Day. The game will be the second of three consecutive home games for the Red Raiders. The Red Raiders are coming off what may be the biggest win in head coach Spike Dykes' tenure, a climatic 14-7 last-second victory over No. 8-ranked Texas A&M. It was Tech's first win over a Top 10 team since 1986 (17-7 win at Arkansas) and the school's first win over a top 10 team at home since 1978 (22-21 over Houston).

"This will be a tough week. It's always tougher when you take a break from conference play but now we always have to contend with the A&M game. It's really important that we forget this win over A&M and get ready to play another team. I'm sure Arkansas State would like nothing better than to come into Lubbock and knock us off."

THE COACHES

Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes (S.F. Austin '59) is dean of the Southwest Conference coaches. He has compiled an overall mark of 49-46-1. He has earned three SWC Coach of the Year Awards (1989, 1993 and 1994), has led the Red Raiders to an upper division league finish in each of his eight seasons. He coached the Red Raiders to three consecutive SWC runner-up finishes before breaking through to the co-championship last season (only the school's second since joining the Southwest Conference in 1960). He's won more conference games (34) than any other previous Tech coach and he has taken four teams to bowl games. Arkansas State coach, John Bobo is 5-21-1 in his third year as head coach.

PLAYER PROFILE

MARCUS COLEMAN

RAIDER

Marcus Coleman, defensive and special teams coaches' player of the week, had perhaps his best game last week as he bids for the Jim Thorpe Award. Coleman was in on a career high 15 tackles, including two for losses, and he batted away three passes and caused a fumble. He might have had the late game pass interception if Thomas had not been there. His next pass interception returned for a touchdown will tie the NCAA career record of five (held by Ken Thomas of San Diego State, 1979-82, and Jackie Walker of Tennessee, 1969-71). He currently holds the Southwest Conference career mark with four: Texas A&M and Rice in 1994, Texas in 1993 and Wyoming in 1992. Coleman, an All-America candidate, shines as a cover man and pass rusher. The raider position is more like another safety spot in a 4-4 defense. 1994: Coleman was the consensus All-SWC with his two passes for touchdowns during the season against A&M and Rice. His high tackle games were 13 vs. Texas and nine vs. Nebraska and Oklahoma. He is usually the first man down on Tech's punt coverage. 1993: Consensus second team All-SWC was one of the league's top big play men. Coleman turned the momentum around in the Texas game with 56-yard pass interception return for a touchdown. He was voted the league's co-Defensive Player of the Week after the UT game. Coleman started the last 10 games and was tied for the team lead with eight pass breakups. 1992: Coleman saw extensive playing time at strong safety as a true freshman. He started three games, including the last two, and alternated halves much of the season with Bart Thomas. He was tied for third on team in passes broken up (four) and interceptions (two). He returned a pickoff 65 yards for a touchdown vs. Wyoming which was the second longest interception return in SWC in '92. He was a key performer on special teams by knocking away three placement kicks and returning three punts for 46 yards. PERSONAL: Coleman is a senior from Dallas majoring in communication Studies.

Z-TEAM Z-FENSE

If there were any doubters about the quality of the Texas Tech defense before the Texas A&M game, all should have disappeared afterwards. "Our defense really has been swarming to the ball," said Dykes. "We did a good job of stopping Leeland McElroy (27 carries for 80 yards) and didn't give up any big plays in the passing game." The defensive starters have given up five touchdowns in four games and one came on a three-yard drive after a fumble. In the past three games, opponents have had possessions inside of Tech's 20-yard-line six times but reached the end zone just once. And it has come against quality competition: three of the four teams were ranked in the Top 25 last week.

ABOUT THE OFFENSE

While the offense had found the going tough the last couple of weeks, there have been some high points. Byron Hanspard had more all-purpose yards last week than NCAA leader Leeland McElroy (108 to 80). Zebbie Lethridge has thrown 111 passes this season without an interception and he has either run or passed for a touchdown in every one of his career starts. Tight end Jerod Fiebigler caught his first two passes of the season against the Aggies after showing "big time" signs during two-a-days. While a number of key performers returned from last year, the offense starts only three seniors (tight end, guard and fullback) and four sophomores start.

Jones vows to fight NFL

IRVING (AP) — Jerry Jones says the NFL is out to get him and he's not about to let the league harass his Dallas Cowboys.

Jones, the Cowboys' rebellious owner, was furious Thursday over the league's ruling that he restructure Deion Sanders' $35 million contract.

"This is not about Deion, what this is about is sticking it to the Cowboys," Jones said. "They're trying to intimidate the Cowboys, they're trying to be a bully. It's so transparent that the NFL is being selective."

Last month, Jones vowed to fight a $300 million lawsuit filed by the NFL in an effort to stop him from signing any more licensing deals without league approval. Jones defied the league by agreeing to separate deals with Nike, Inc., Pepsi and American Express.

Jones plans to fight the NFL's objection to Sanders' contract as soon as he finds out from the league what's specifically wrong with it.

"The NFL has chosen to change the salary cap rules in mid-stream," Jones said. "The first time we step out and use the system for a high profile free agent, the NFL objects to it."

Texas faces Oklahoma in 90th border war

AUSTIN (AP) — Players can make history with one great game or even one great play in a rivalry with as much intensity and tradition as Texas-Oklahoma.

Such was the case last year as Texas quarterback James Brown sizzled in place of injured starter Shea Morenz and nose guard Stonie Clark came up with a victory-preserving tackle on fourth-and-goal in the final seconds as the Longhorns beat the Sooners 17-10.

Both players became part of the legend that surrounds the rivalry, which will mark its 90th meeting when No. 13 Oklahoma (4-1) meets No. 18 Texas (4-1) in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas on Saturday.

Brown, then a redshirt freshman, overcame the hype of the annual Red River shootout and an early interception to help his team battle back from a 7-0 halftime deficit.

He completed 17-of-22 passes for 148 yards and a touchdown while rushing for 51 yards and a TD.

It was an amazing performance considering Brown had endured a miserable week of practice leading up to the game with the Sooners.

His teammates were worried.

"We had some reservations and probably would have preferred Shea at the time," Texas offensive tackle John Elmore said.

"James was never known as a good practice quarterback.

"I was surprised at how well he handled the pressure of making his first start in one of the greatest rivalries in the history of college football," Elmore said.

"He wasn't rambling, and his eyes weren't big and wide. He was calm."

Brown said he hardly remembers any details from the game and downplays his performance.

"I haven't looked back on it," Brown said.

"The only big thing in my mind was that it was my first start. I got to show people I could play. The year before I was just taking stats."

This year, Brown is a virtual veteran as a sophomore. He said he won't be nervous on Saturday.

"I'll be intense until we start blowing them out," Brown said. "I am confident about every game."

Maddux hopes to end playoff woes

ATLANTA (AP) — Greg Maddux, the superhuman shoo-in for an unprecedented fourth straight Cy Young Award, is a mere mortal in the postseason.

Maddux acknowledges it, his teammates know it and the Cincinnati Reds are hoping he stays that way in Game 3 so they can have a chance at getting back into the NL playoff series they trail 2-0.

Maddux's manager, however, expects the trend to cease when the Braves host the Reds Friday night at Fulton County Stadium.

"I know him, and he's preparing himself for this. He's going to go out there and be just like he usually is," Bobby Cox said.

All the talk about Maddux's supposed vulnerability in the postseason comes from comparing his regular season statistics to his playoff numbers.

The contrast is stark, if not stunning.

The same pitcher who went 19-2 this year with a 1.63 ERA, the fierce competitor who has won his last 18 regular-season starts on the road, the control freak who walked only 23 batters all season has been a regular Joe in the playoffs.

TWO-MINUTE DRILL

Sophomore place kicker Tony Rogers has made his presence felt on the field for No. 25 Texas Tech. The Plano product has converted eight consecutive field goals between 40-49 yards.

Q: What do you know about Arkansas State?

A: I don't know anything about them. We're ranked again so we need to go out and play four quarters of football. They're not a big-name team but we can't take them lightly.

Tony Rogers

Q: Why have you been so successful kicking field goals 40-49 yards out?

A: It started with coach (Rhudy) Maskew when he had Jon (Davis) and me kicking field goals from 35 yards out. When you get into a routine day after day you get comfortable.

Coach (Dean) Campbell has us kicking short field goals so I feel comfortable anywhere on the field.

Tech knows little about Arkansas State

by Jared Parcell

The University Daily

The Indians are coming. The Indians are coming.

No. 25 Texas Tech (2-2) is preparing to face non-conference opponent Arkansas State at 6:30 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium.

The Indians (2-4) have competed in Division-I football since 1992, posting a 3-18-1 record the last two seasons.

The Indians, a member of the Big West Conference, are coming into their first-ever showdown with the Red Raiders after losing to conference foe Southwestern Louisiana 38-9 last week. Tech is coming off a 14-7 upset win over Texas A&M.

"We haven't played a team like Texas Tech," Arkansas State coach John Bobo said. "We're not used to seeing a team with their size and strength. We need to play as well as we can and hope Texas Tech doesn't."

They're on an emotional high and we had a disappointing loss to a member of our conference.

"Every team has its ups and downs. Once the schedule is set, you can't change it."

Arkansas State is led offensively by senior quarterback Johnny Covington. He has completed 101 passes in 209 attempts for 1,040 yards and five touchdowns. On the ground,

Jim Cawthon: The University Daily

Career day: Senior raider Marcus Coleman, who had 15 tackles in Texas Tech's 14-7 win over Texas A&M, had three pass breakups against the Aggies including one intended for Leeland McElroy.

junior Corey Walker has 451 yards and four touchdowns in 113 carries.

Tech has been led this season by a strong defensive effort. Opponents are averaging 13.5 points and 311.6 yards per game. The defense has given up 128.3 yards rushing a game and an average of 183.3 yards through the air.

The Raiders have recovered six fumbles and forced five interceptions. Zach Thomas' 23-yard interception sealed Tech's win over the Aggies.

"I don't think the key to our success is strictly defense," sophomore defensive tackle Corey Chandler said. "The key is maintaining the same intensity and focus we've had. We need to use our God-given talent to the best of our ability."

Chandler, who has forced two fumbles and has 16 tackles, said the Indians like to run the screen pass, an offensive scheme the defense has been working on all week.

"This will really gauge our success," he said. "This will be a true indication of our motivation to play. We will see if we've been playing for the big games or the glory of God."

Offensively, Tech is averaging 303.3 yards, 137.5 rushing and 165.8 passing while scoring at a clip of 21.3 points per game. Arkansas State is allowing 460.3 yards a game and 28.3 points per contest.

I-back Byron Hanspard leads the rushing charge with 336 yards on 79 rushes and two touchdowns. Quarterback Zebbie Lethridge is 44-of-111 passing this year for 663 yards and four touchdowns.

"He has the ability to sit in the pocket and execute the play scheme," Bobo said. "His ability to scramble is an added threat. If we don't play physical enough, we can get pounded. The big thing for us is not turning the ball over. If we do, it could get ugly quick."

Split end Field Scovell is the top receiver with 10 catches for 168 yards and one touchdown.

"We're limited to the amount of film on them," Scovell said. "Coach (Dick) Winder is accurate in assessing opposing defenses. This might be a chance for the offense to put some points on the board. We need to remember that upsets can happen every Saturday."
