Happy Halloween happens at Tech

by Brian Lacy

The University Daily

There is no trick involved when Texas Tech student organizations get together to treat Lubbockites to a safe and fun Halloween.

Tonight, candy seekers of all ages can fulfill their cravings for ghoulish pleasure at the Eight Ball Cafe, Greek Circle and Sneed Residence Hall thanks to the work of several Tech organizations.

For costumed crusaders who crave the club atmosphere on the day of terror, Tech's radio station 88.1 KTXT will provide a night of dancing, prizes and "smashing pumpkins" for its participants at the Eight Ball Cafe, located at 2411 Main St.

"This is totally geared toward Tech students," said Danielle Carey, a senior telecommunications major from Houston and public service announcement director at KTXT.

"Your typical Halloween party has people in costumes just standing around drinking, but this is definitely not that."

There are plenty of reasons to attend 'Halloween Havok,' said Zoltan Istok, a sophomore business major from Budapest, Hungary, and underwriting director at KTXT.

"People with costumes will be awarded throughout the night," Istok said. "Prizes will be given out for costumes, spontaneity and just to people who show up.

"We're doing something unprecedented in that we're going to have a smashing pumpkins contest."

The Kitchen Club will let women in free, and men who are wearing costumes will be admitted for $3 from 10 p.m. until 2 a.m.

State representatives discuss Proposition 11

Representatives supporting Proposition 11 on the Nov. 7 constitutional amendment election helped clarify the proposition Monday morning at Lubbock Aero, located at the Lubbock International Airport.

Proposition 11 will allow private landowners who manage their property for wildlife to change from an agricultural tax valuation to a wildlife management tax valuation.

Life's lessons change little during school, college years

MARY HUDSPETH

UD asst. copy editor

You've probably heard the expression "Everything I ever needed to know I learned in kindergarten."

This particular phrase has found itself floating through my mind quite often since I entered college.

The amount of similarities between with few modifications, of course.

I came up with the following list: · In kindergarten, you went to school for half a day.

In college, you can go to class for half a day

In kindergarten, your parents hated to drop you off.

In college, your parents hate for you to come back.

 In kindergarten, Mickey Mouse was on your television. In college, he is on your clothes.

In kindergarten, you drank milk and your parents drank beer.

In college, you drink beer and your parents drink milk. In kindergarten, you hit the person you liked.

In college, you hit the person who looks at you the wrong way in a bar.

In kindergarten, you're ready to move on.

In college, you're afraid to move on.

In kindergarten, the whiners cried.

In college, the whiners write letters to the editor.

In kindergarten, you learn the basics of education.

In college, you learn the basics of life.

• In kindergarten, nap time was required to keep crankiness to a minimum. In college, you take naps to keep crankiness to a minimum.

• In kindergarten, you were sent to the principal's office for misbehaving.

In college, you are sent to the Dean of Student's Office for misbehaving. In kindergarten, boys and girls had cooties.

In college, boys and girls have STDs.

• In kindergarten, boys and girls were a mystery to each other.

In college, boys and girls are still a mystery to each other.

In kindergarten, you spent play money

In college, you spend mommy and daddy's money.

In kindergarten, your parents dressed you.

In college, you dress like your parents.

Not much has changed since age five. Well, that's they way it seems sometimes.

Life was much simpler then.

It also seems the further I get in college, the more I've gone back to high school, which in many ways is more useless and immature than kindergarten.

At least then, you could chalk up doing stupid things to age. Not so anymore.

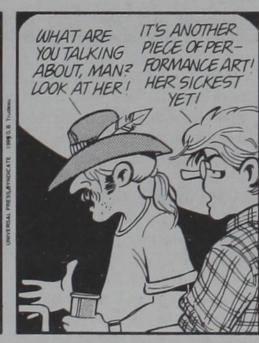

Of course, when I was in kindergarten I still sucked my thumb and had to keep from wetting my pants... maybe college isn't so bad after all.

Baltimore hires Davey Johnson

Giants' Brown will play Sunday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Quarterback Dave Brown hyperextended his left knee in the New York Giants' 24-15 win over Washington but he will play this weekend against the Seattle Seahawks.

Brown underwent a magnetic resonance imaging test Monday at the New York Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City, spokesman Pat Hanlon said.

The quarterback will wear a brace Sunday at Seattle.

The injury happened late in the third quarter when linebacker Ken Harvey hit Brown on the knee just after he threw an 11yard pass to Aaron Pierce. After resting on the sidelines, Brown played the fourth quarter.

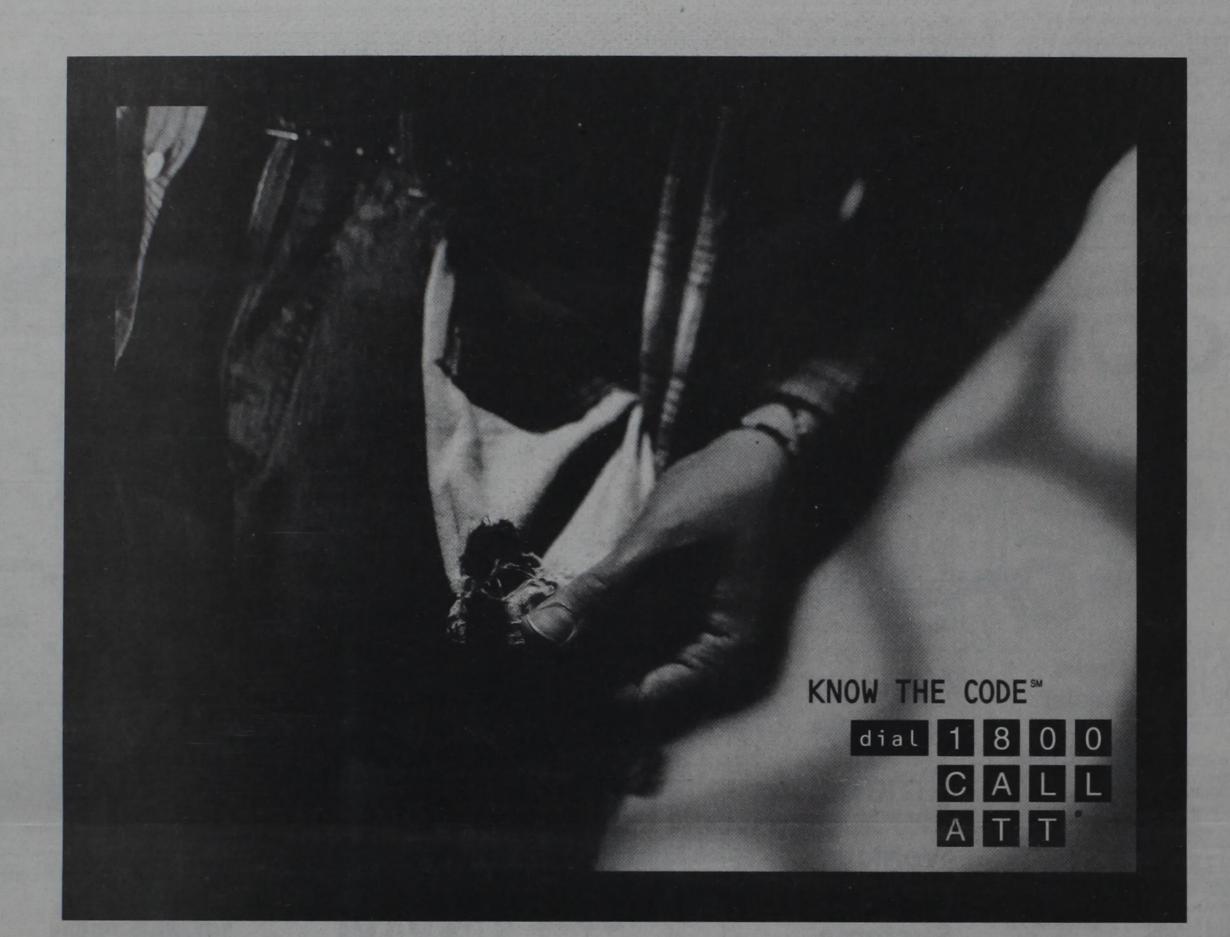

He was 11 of 22 for 139 yards and a touchdown.

Tyson hypes fight with Mathis

LAS VEGAS (AP) - With Don King busy in court, Mike Tyson took to the gym Monday to help promote his upcoming fight with Buster Mathis Jr.

Tyson sparred before invited boxing media for the first time since being released from prison, part of an effort to sell tickets for Saturday's expected mismatch.

Mathis, in fact, seemed little more than an afterthought as Tyson spent three rounds pounding sparring partner Tyrone Evans in a steamy, sweaty gym near downtown. Mathis was never mentioned by name, but Tyson found himself defending his opponent choice.
