Tech fraternity loses charter for hazing

by Ginger Pope/UD

Sigma Phi Epsilon lost its charter Wednesday after a Texas Tech alum reported a hazing incident to the Dean of Students Office.

A Sigma Phi Epsilon member, who wished to remain anonymous, said no one involved in the incident ate Copenhagen chewing tobacco, as reported by KCB Channel 11 News Thursday night.

Sigma Phi Epsilon's national fraternity voted Wednesday to withdraw Tech's charter, and Lubbock police have since begun an investigation into the charter's activities, said Michael Sommermeyer, assistant director of News and Publications. Sigma Phi Epsilon members involved in the hazing incident were expelled from the fraternity.

"The Dean of Students Office was contacted Monday by a Sigma Phi Epsilon alumni with concern about inappropriate behavior by active members," he said.

The national fraternity's office then was contacted by the Dean of Students Office, Sommermeyer said.

After the president and regional director of Sigma Phi Epsilon met with the dean's office Tuesday, the local chapter was placed on suspension pending an investigation by the national fraternity.

"If inappropriate behaviors were carried out by individuals, they could be charged," he said. "I'll make a point to say there is sufficient evidence."

The behavior was inconsistent with the student code of conduct and could violate the law, he said.

All new members who joined the chapter this fall have been given a complete refund of their fees, Sommermeyer said.

In an official statement released Thursday, the Sigma Phi Epsilon board of directors said the national fraternity does not support or condone the actions of Tech's chapter.

Patricia Honacki, assistant dean of students, said Sigma Phi Epsilon's national fraternity does not expect Tech's chapter to return until the fall of 1999.

"The university supports the decision of the national fraternity," Honacki said.

"Activities inconsistent with the ritual mission and purpose of the national fraternity will not be tolerated."

Anthony Abeyta, president of Sigma Phi Epsilon, and other active members would not comment about the incident Thursday nor would they say why they would not comment.

Sigma Phi Epsilon's adviser Mark Potter could not be reached for comment late Thursday.

Bill Morgan, public information officer with the Lubbock Police Department, said an officer was positioned at the chapter's lodge Wednesday in case of any disturbances when their charter was revoked.

Problems continue with Iraq

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq is concealing weapons materials and failing to turn over important documents to U.N. monitors, a top U.N. weapons inspector said Thursday after meeting with Iraqi government officials.

A U.N. commission created to ensure that Iraq eliminates its nuclear, biological and chemical weapons programs has repeatedly accused the country of hiding important documents as well as actual weapons components.

Thursday's comments by Charles Duelfer, deputy chairman of the commission, suggest the inspectors will again cite Iraq's lack of progress when it issues its next report, due later this month.

Speaking here after five days of meetings in Iraq, Duelfer, an American, said there were still "serious problems" with Iraq's statements on its biological and chemical weapons programs as well as its long-range missile program.

Iraq claims it has complied with the demands of the commission, established shortly after Iraq's defeat in the 1991 Persian Gulf War. Iraq contends the continued sanctions are part of a U.S.-led effort to weaken Iraq.

But Security Council members insist Iraq is not in compliance, and have said that only if Iraq fully cooperates will they lift the economic sanctions imposed after Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

"Clearly we do not have the confidence yet to go to the Security Council and tell them with any kind of confidence that we have accounted for all of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction programs," Duelfer said after arriving in Bahrain, the U.N. commission's regional headquarters. "We still believe Iraq retains prohibited documents and materials."

They will perform at the Homecoming game at 6:30 p.m. against Baylor Saturday. The Goin' Band from Raiderland has performed for music lovers from Denver to Dublin.

President signs new crime bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring a "sea change" in attitudes toward crime, President Clinton signed into law Thursday bills to fight illegal drugs, keep track of sex offenders and provide college funds for the children of slain police officers.

Clinton signed the three bills in a Rose Garden ceremony just before leaving for a New York retreat to prepare for Sunday's debate with Republican nominee Bob Dole, in which crime and drugs are certain to come up.

"This is a good day for America because we have seen a sea change in the attitudes of our people, the action of our communities and the work in Washington on the problem of crime," Clinton said.

Dole's campaign knocked Clinton's record on fighting illegal drugs Thursday, and Dole himself continued to accuse Clinton of using executive privilege to hide a 1995 memo "telling him how bad his drug policy was."

In the memo, the heads of the FBI and the Drug Enforcement Administration complained about a lack of "any true leadership" in fighting an influx of heroin and cocaine, according to an August report in Newsweek magazine.

Earlier this week, Clinton asserted presidential privilege over the memo and refused to turn it over to a congressional subcommittee.

"The president's claimed executive privilege. He doesn't want anybody to know before Nov. 5," Dole said during a campaign stop in Johnson City, Tenn.

Asked whether the memo criticized Clinton's leadership of anti-drug efforts, Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick said Thursday, "Not in my view at all."

She added that the Justice Department's legal experts on executive privilege had approved Clinton's claim of it in this case.

Anonymous family gives to new arena

by Kristi Rieken/UD

Another $1 million donation to the construction of the proposed $35 to $40 million United Spirit Arena was announced Thursday.

But unlike past donations, this one had an interesting twist — the donation was given by a Lubbock family who wishes to remain anonymous.

Total donations now amount to $16.2 million, leaving Tech officials less than $10 million away from their goal of $25 million in private donations. Five contributions already have been made, beginning with a $10 million donation from United Supermarkets.

Other contributors are Coca Cola, which gave $2 million; McDougal Properties and City Bank, which gave $1 million each; and Plains National Bank, which gave $1.2 million.

Tech Chancellor John T. Montford said he hopes to reach the $25 million goal by the time Tech officials present the arena proposal to the College Coordinating Board on Oct. 18.

Thursday's donation comes on the heels of Tuesday's student vote overwhelmingly in favor of funding the arena with part of the general use fee.

"This is a teamwork effort — anytime you undertake a major project of this initiative it is a team effort," Montford said.

"The fact that the vote was so overwhelmingly supportive I think evidences a student body that is very enthusiastic about our participation in the Big 12."

At least one Tech student greeted the news of the donation with optimism.

"I definitely think it will help because if potential donors know we are behind it, they are more likely to give more money," said Trey McCavit, a freshman mechanical engineering major from Pampa.

Throughout the fund-raising campaign for the arena, detractors have said more money should be used for academics instead of using so much money for athletics, but Montford said he has big plans ahead for academic fund raising.

"I want to emphasize that we have major academic funding initiatives under way," Montford said.

"We're holding off some announcements until we get this done, but we are spending an equal, if not greater amount of time working on our academic endowment and I am very excited about developments there."

Registration deadline nears

by Joe Brower/UD

The countdown to the '96 election is rapidly approaching and the deadline to register to vote is even closer. Monday marks the final day to register to vote.

Texas Tech's Freshman Council has been overseeing voter registration on campus and will do so until the deadline.

"We've set up tables for voter registration in the University Center from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.," said Blythe Harrell, the adviser of Freshman Council and a junior public relations major from Beaumont.

"Students can still register at Raider Alley on Saturday from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m."

Harrell said this year's turnout for voter registration on campus has been higher than what she expected.

"The turnout has been really good this year," Harrell said. "I was surprised to see how many people came out to register."

Prompted by the need to get students out to register, the University Democrats and the College Republicans have been busy preparing students to vote.

Lisa Marbach, chairman of the College Republicans, said voter registration and voting are important because it is a rare opportunity for everyone to air their opinion.

"Besides lobbying for party officials, it is the average Joe's chance to get their message heard in Washington," she said.

"We've been working voter registration for the past two months going around the dorms and helping out at the UC," said Mike Turner, president of the University Democrats.

Turner said the University Democrats will be promoting voter turnout during the following weeks.

To register off-campus, students can pick up applications at the Department of Motor Vehicles in Lubbock.

"The qualifications to register and vote are that the applicant must be a U.S. citizen, 18 years old or older and cannot have a felony record," said Barbara Brooks of the County Voter Registrar's Office.

Their View

Bachelor groans over estate sales, haunting puns

Kirk Baird/columnist

Face it, in today's stretch-your-dollar-until-it-breaks times, people will do anything to save a buck. Clipping coupons, rummaging through bargain bins, going to garage sales, it's all acceptable, nothing's too low. Well, except for one savings bonanza: estate sales.

No matter how tough times get, I just cannot bring myself to shop at estate sales. The whole concept of wandering through a recently departed person's home, picking out a mattress and box spring, and then haggling over the price for minutes — it just seems pathetic.

It's also kind of morbid.

I don't care how much of a bargain I might find on a bed, the simple fact is the deceased may have expired on it.

You just don't know. It's not like a sign's posted stating: "Mr. Smith died on this Lazy Boy so we're reducing it in price by an extra $25." And you certainly can't ask: "I really love this couch...no one died on it, did they?"

If I seem a little bitter, it's for good reason.

Several years ago a former roommate persuaded me to go with him to an estate sale, whereupon we found a homely but comfortable recliner. It was cheap, only $12.

We needed a comfy chair for our swinging pad, so I was more than willing to pay for half, forking over the six bones to purchase the chair.

We loaded up the recliner in a truck and headed home, grinning from ear to ear.

Once we brought it into our bachelor pad, we debated for five minutes where it should sit. Of course, proximity to the boob tube was of utmost importance so we moved it next to our couch.

We flipped a coin to see who would receive the first opportunity to break it in and I won. I couldn't wait to plop my can on top of this comfortable recliner. With a beer in one hand and a remote in the other, I made my descent. Unfortunately for me I sat on this invisible spring just below the surface of the cushion.

To say I received my Christmas goose early is an understatement. I jumped up howling, spilling the beer all over our carpet and dropping the remote.

This was just the beginning of our troubles.

We soon discovered the chair was infested with roaches. Big roaches; the kind that greet you at the door and ask, "What's for dinner?"

Then our living room bargain began to smell. It reeked like someone...well, someone had died in it. I think someone did.

Late at night, we began to hear moans and groans from our living room. At first, I thought it was my roommate and his girlfriend. He thought it was me (I didn't have a girlfriend at the time).

Then we thought it was the neighbors who were borrowing our living room. When we went in to the room to confront them late one night, we discovered, to our surprise, no one was there. When we left, the moans continued.

Finally, we realized our mistake and sold the chair to some sucker, I mean friend. I lost track of it after that.

Ever since then I have hated estate sales. Sure you get inexpensive items, but it is a high price to pay for the bargain of a lifetime (pun intended).

Your View

Columnist shares only immature column views

To the editor: I waited this long to respond to a column written by one of your guest columnists because I wanted to see the outcome of the vote for the student fee increase to additionally fund the arena. But first, let me as one of those who opposed the fee increase to congratulate those who wanted the fee increase on their victory. Also, let me commend The University Daily for its excellent job at keeping the student body informed and updated on the entire arena and fee increase happenings.

But I must inform you (The UD editorial board) that the choice to print the column "Complainers should leave Tech arena alone" by Toby Hamilton, (Their View 10/1/96), was a very poor choice. I, as well as many other students, feel that this person's opinion of his fellow students reflected badly on The UD. Being both a journalist and an editor for both a high school newspaper and college newspaper, I understand that because you printed the column doesn't necessarily mean that his views reflect the views of The UD staff. But that privilege is under the basic assumption that everyone who attends or instructs at Texas Tech, or anyone who submits a writing is an adult.

I feel that this column was childish and immature. I would expect it to appear in a junior high newspaper before an obviously superior newspaper such as The UD.

I have always considered The UD to be a place where one can make his or her views known to the general student body. Since not every student who cares about important topics have the time or the proper connections to make his opinion known to bodies such as the Student Association or the Board of Regents, The UD provides a place where one can make these opinions known. I used The UD to make it clear to everyone that I was not opposed to the arena because I didn't want to improve the face of Tech to the rest of the Big 12, but because there are more precedent things that need to be taken care of first, such as the condition of some of the labs on campus or the condition of the elevators in the residence halls. And many other students use The UD to make their opinions known to the general student body on a wide variety of subjects.

But I have yet to see The UD print an infantile opinion such as "the science/engineering areas have fewer pretty girls than business communications or mass communications building," or "why do fingernails have to keep growing and growing." Hamilton chose to use his chance to write for The UD to call people "complainers who were complaining about nothing." Worse off, the people that he was calling "complainers" were those who enjoy taking the time to write the campus newspaper and discuss their opinions and views on a very important subject — the new arena and the possible student fee increase. Although this subject was not important to some students, it was of great importance to many.

I have spent the last couple of days since this column was printed to read past issues of The UD to see if I could find just one opinion or argument concerning the arena that could be considered "complaining." I did not find one.

Every opinion and argument that The UD printed concerning the arena was logical and well thought out, and each (opinion) was just as informed as the next. I did not even see one opinion about any other subject that was as lame-brained as this column.

As for Hamilton, if you consider things such as fingernails and the number of pretty girls in your pre-med classes important — more power to you. Everyone is entitled to their opinion.

But to put down someone else for their opinions on important subjects, such as the fee increase or the broken clocks on campus, is immature and disrespectful. If you can't submit a column or letter to the editor that is concerning something that needs to be said, then please don't submit. And do your immature name calling outside of the prestige of Texas Tech and its excellent newspaper. Not only did you make those of us who care enough to submit our opinions look bad, you made yourself and The UD look bad.

Marijuana use not safe, healthy, reader says

To the editor: When I read The University Daily today (9/30/96), I must say that I was rather disgusted to read about the comments appearing in the article "Marijuana use rises in college."

I am tired of hearing people say that marijuana use is safe and that it harms no one.

Anyone who believes this needs to open their eyes and look at the repercussions of their actions.

How many law enforcement officers have died as a result of some pothead's selfish desire to get stoned? Every time we hear about a DEA officer, FBI agent or policeman dying as a result of attempting to stop the illegal drug trade, no one points their finger at the real culprits—the users.

Let me make a couple of analogies. After having robbed a bank, the police are chasing you.

A patrol officer in pursuit of you strikes and kills a pedestrian.

In this scenario, you are legally responsible for the death of the pedestrian.

If you had not robbed the bank, the police officer would not have been chasing you and would not have hit the pedestrian.

It is called felony murder.

We all know it is illegal to possess any items made from the bodies of elephants, gorillas or rhinoceroses. It does not matter whether the possessor of some such item was the killer of the animal in the question, the fact that it was purchased means that the purchaser is responsible, at least in part, for the death of this animal.

When it is said that marijuana and/or other illegal drugs harm no one, I would like to have these people speak to the families of those men and women who chose to uphold the law and give the ultimate sacrifice.

Explain to the husbands, wives, children and parents of these people that despite the fact that this drug was known to be illegal, it was used anyway, that it is of small consequence that their family is shattered forever.

Whether this or any other drug should be legalized is a different decision altogether, but as long as it is illegal, anyone who uses it is but one hand away from pulling the trigger themselves.

Thurman Harrell, senior mechanical engineering major

Information request about partial abortions

To the editor: I am writing in response to the recent article concerning partial birth abortion (9/27/96) edition of The UD. Actually, I am writing to request the assistance of UD readers and/or staffers concerning the appropriateness of this procedure. To avoid partisan responses from either pro-choice or pro-life advocates, let me just make it clear that my status as a pro-life advocate and the fact that I am physically compelled to hurl at the thought of millions of dead babies is not particularly relevant to the questions I will be asking today. I am asking for medical information, not opinions. So, with that in mind, I will continue.

The premises for my confusion deal with the reason listed for the veto and the definition of a partial birth abortion.

In reference to the first premise, the article states, "Clinton vetoed the ban on partial birth abortions five months ago on the grounds that, while it allowed for exceptions when the mother's life was at risk, it contained no exception to protect the mother's health." From this perspective we see two things: The health of the unborn is irrelevant; and there is a distinction made between the risk of death and the risk of diminished health. So, my question is this: What is defined as "the mother's health" besides death that is relevant to this issue?

I would appreciate the informed response of anyone willing to reply. However, I personally discourage name calling and inappropriate inferences just because I "rattled a few feathers."

If one wants to point out something I have not considered I am more than willing to listen. Knowledge is what I seek and at this point I am lacking enough knowledge to morally, socially, or medically justify the use of this procedure.

Graduate Council discusses diversity issues

by Kristi Rieken/UD

Recent affirmative action changes have caused Texas Tech officials to rethink their recruiting efforts, according to the Texas Tech Graduate Council.

"We're trying to insure that we recruit the best students we possibly can to graduate programs at Texas Tech and also have a diverse population of students," said David J. Schmidly, dean of Tech's graduate school.

"We feel that Texas is a diverse state and our recruiting efforts should insure that we represent that diversity."

These and other issues were discussed Thursday at the second Graduate Council meeting of the year.

The Council is made up of faculty department chairs from each of Tech's departments, with Schmidly presiding over the group.

The new recruiting offices Tech is establishing in Dallas and Houston, although geared towards undergraduate recruiting, should help in graduate recruiting as well, Schmidly said.

The Hopwood decision, in which the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled race could no longer be a factor in admissions in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi colleges, will have a major effect on Tech's graduate school, said Troy Johnson, director of graduate admissions and enrollment management.

"Hopwood's put a limit on our ability to admit students based on race or to award scholarships based on race," Johnson said.

"That is a primary way that universities in Texas have diversified their graduate populations and without being able to make decisions based on that it's going to be that much more difficult to be able to diversify our student body."

Because of this decision, more schools in states other than Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana have been able to attract Texas students out of state.

The ruling makes recruiting students to Tech's graduate program and forces Tech officials to develop new methods to lure students to the program, he said.

"We have to find new ways to diversify, such as enhancing recruitment and trying to get more under-represented students interested in our programs," Johnson said.

Schmidly said although the Hopwood decision is going to make recruiting minorities more difficult, it will not stop the graduate school from pursuing all its options within the law to attract these students.

"It is the law and we have to live within the law, but it doesn't prevent us from being creative and looking at a diversity of students in our programs," Schmidly said.

"But we have to be fair, and we have to meet the requirements of this law and we will."

Popular date rape drug linked to El Paso death

EL PASO (AP) — A girl who was gang raped and later died of a drug overdose had voluntarily taken Rohypnol, known as the date-rape drug, before the assault, authorities say.

Police are awaiting a full toxicology report to confirm how much of the tranquilizer 15-year-old Thelma Rascon had ingested.

They say Rascon had also been taking other drugs and drinking beer before her death following a party at a downtown hotel during which a 16-year-old was also assaulted after voluntarily taking Rohypnol.

"They thought it was just a way to get high," police sex-crimes detective Millie Hinojos said Wednesday.

Five men charged with aggravated sexual assault in the Sept. 16 attacks also were under the influence of the same mix of drugs and alcohol as the victims, Hinojos said.

Hinojos and other victims' advocates said the assault on Rascon shows use of the date-rape drug is spreading throughout clubs, bars and even high schools in El Paso.

Rascon's death was the second in Texas to be linked to so-called date-rape drugs, which get their name because they are sometimes used to incapacitate women so they can more easily be sexually assaulted.

Hillory Farias, a 17-year-old high school student, died in August near Houston after someone apparently slipped the depressant Gamma y-hydroxybutyrate, also known as GHB or Easy Lay, into her soft drink.

It is almost impossible to overdose on Rohypnol by itself, said Joe Rico, pharmacist at the West Texas Poison Control Center. "Only when you combine it with alcohol, other drugs, that's when it becomes lethal," he said.

Rohypnol is prescribed in 64 countries to combat severe and debilitating sleep disorders. It is not available in U.S. pharmacies but can be purchased in Mexico.

The U.S. Customs Service on March 5 outlawed its importation.

State child support collections increase by more than $100 million

AUSTIN (AP) — The state child support program collected more than $619 million in the recently-ended fiscal year, up from $514 million the year before, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said Thursday.

"These accomplishments translate into food, clothing, housing, and education for children who might otherwise be without those basic needs," he said.

In the 1996 fiscal year, which ended Aug. 31, the child support program established paternities for almost 44,000 children and obtained more than 45,000 court orders for support, Morales said.

His office is responsible for locating parents and establishing paternity in state-ordered child support cases.

In more than 300,000 of about 800,000 current cases, the legal identity of one parent has not been established, Morales said. In those cases, the attorney general's office has to track down the parent before child support can be ordered, he said.

Morales said despite criticism of his child support division, "everything indicates excellence" in the program.

Some lawmakers have said child support collections do not belong in Morales' office, adding that a separate agency could do a better job.

"I understand he quoted all kinds of figures today, but according to federal offices, he's only collecting on 18 percent of the cases in his office," said Sen. Chris Harris, R-Arlington.

Registration deadline for academy today

Registration deadline for the Texas Tech African-American Student Leadership Academy is today in the Dean of Students office.

Author Na'im Akbar and professor Cherry Ross Gooden will be featured speakers at the conference Oct. 10 through 13 on the Tech campus.

Tech students must pay a registration fee of $25 which includes meals, conference materials and transportation.

Patrick Day, assistant dean of students, said the conference will provide students the opportunity to explore leadership possibilities with the African-American community and Tech.

Tech faculty, staff donate to charity

by Ginger Pope/UD

Many Texas Tech employees are digging deep into their pockets to raise more than $250,000 for charity.

The State Employee Charitable Campaign offers a chance for faculty, staff and students employed by Tech to give money to a charity of their choice.

The campaign, which began Sept. 1 and continues until Oct. 31, seeks a combined goal of $277,500 in donations for both Tech and the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Diane Henderson, a general business major from Olympia, Wash., and a teaching assistant for management courses, said she has been interested in charity work for several years.

"I've always been interested in giving," Henderson said. "I have no time, but I can give a little money — it's the least I can do."

Donating through the SECC can make a difference no matter how much money one gives, she said.

"I've worked for charities before, and I know how important they are," Henderson said.

Jim Bob Jones, local employee committee chair and director of TTUHSC relations, said the SECC focuses strictly on Texas college employees.

The SECC provides state employees a listing of charities to which they can choose to give money through a direct donation or by payroll deduction, Jones said.

Employees can automatically contribute money to a charity through deductions in each paycheck, or they simply can write a check, he said.

"The apportioned goal for SECC is based on the salary dollars in each department of the university," he said.

"We divide the total goal by staff salaries to decide what each department ought to give."

Each department has a campaign coordinator to inform employees about the charities involved with SECC and to ask for donations, he said.

"The No. 1 reason why people don't contribute is because they are never asked," he said.

"Charitable giving is one of the most important things we can do as an institute of higher education."

Court ponders: How old is too old to fly?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Should airline pilots be allowed to continue flying after they reach age 60?

Lawyers clashed over that question before an appellate court panel Thursday as a pilots' association fought to overturn federal rules that ban them from commercial flying after age 60.

That 36-year-old regulation violates the law banning on-the-job age discrimination, argued attorney Nicholas Cobbs. He represented the Professional Pilots Federation, a group of about 2,000 pilots from 40 airlines formed to combat the age rule.

Christine Kohl, a Justice Department lawyer representing the Federal Aviation Administration, said that as people age, their skills deteriorate.

"What we're talking about is limiting risk, and that's a policy judgment," she said.

While the courtroom battle focuses on safety and an apparent clash of federal rules, the background issue is jobs flying airplanes.

Having a maximum age limit for commercial pilots guarantees a steady stream of openings for young flyers.

As a result, the older pilots formed their own group to battle against the age limit. Both the giant Air Line Pilots Association, representing the majority of commercial pilots, and the Allied Pilots Association, representing American Airlines' pilots, favor keeping the age rule.

Cobbs argued that pilots over 60 are allowed to work for private corporations and said there is no evidence they are any less safe than younger flyers.

Under current rules, he added, the FAA can grant waivers to permit pilots with serious medical conditions to keep flying if they are regularly monitored, "but somehow, once a pilot gets over the age 60, we can't evaluate them."

"Our position is that the technology is sufficient to evaluate pilots on their individual abilities," said Cobbs, arguing for elimination of the age rule.

Kohl said the FAA has not eliminated the possibility of some eventual change, but has been unable to find a test for the abilities of aging pilots.

First Amendment celebrated with Banned Books Week

by Darcy Rosie/UD

While books such as Howard Stern's "Private Parts" and Madonna's "Sex" are among the most recent books to fall under the vigilant eyes of censors, censorship is not a new problem.

In past years, classic works such as "Gulliver's Travels" and "Of Mice and Men" were banned in some public libraries.

Peggy Hastings, a manager of Barnes & Noble Bookstore in Lubbock, recalled reading "Peyton Place" in hiding because it deals with rape, alcohol abuse and other problems.

"I read it when I was in high school, and it was something you didn't want to get caught reading," Hastings said.

Barnes & Noble is commemorating National Banned Books Week, Sept. 28 to Oct. 5, by displaying some of the literary works banned in the past, she said. Books including "Gulliver's Travels," "Huckleberry Finn," "The Color Purple," "Fahrenheit 451" and "The Prince of Tides" will be displayed throughout the week.

Hastings said her own experiences led her to believe people who want to ban books are not being open to different views, but she does understand their reasons for protesting.

"People that object to the subject matter of certain books are narrowing their minds by not seeing all sides," Hastings said. "However, I can see their side in that if they don't object, then it's like saying they approve."

The national event is sponsored by the American Libraries Association and six other organizations including the American Society of Journalists and Authors.

The event began in 1982 and continues to play an important role in reminding the public of the basic democratic rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press, said Deborah Liebow, assistant director of the Office for Intellectual Freedom in the American Libraries Association in Chicago.

"Over the years we have noticed an increase in the number of local communities which set up displays and promote the ideal of free speech," Liebow said.

Continual efforts to remind people of the past injustices of banning books emphasize the importance of eliminating censorship in other mediums such as the Internet, she said.

"It's a new area of potential censorship (the Internet), so it's something we try to keep at the forefront of our minds," Liebow said.

On the Texas Tech campus, students visiting the library might notice the display cases wrapped in bright yellow caution tape. The showcase draws attention to the dangers of censorship and provides a sampling of previously banned books.

Doug Birdsall, associate director of libraries at Tech, said although the library rarely gets challenged about the type of books it stocks, it is committed to promoting Banned Books Week.

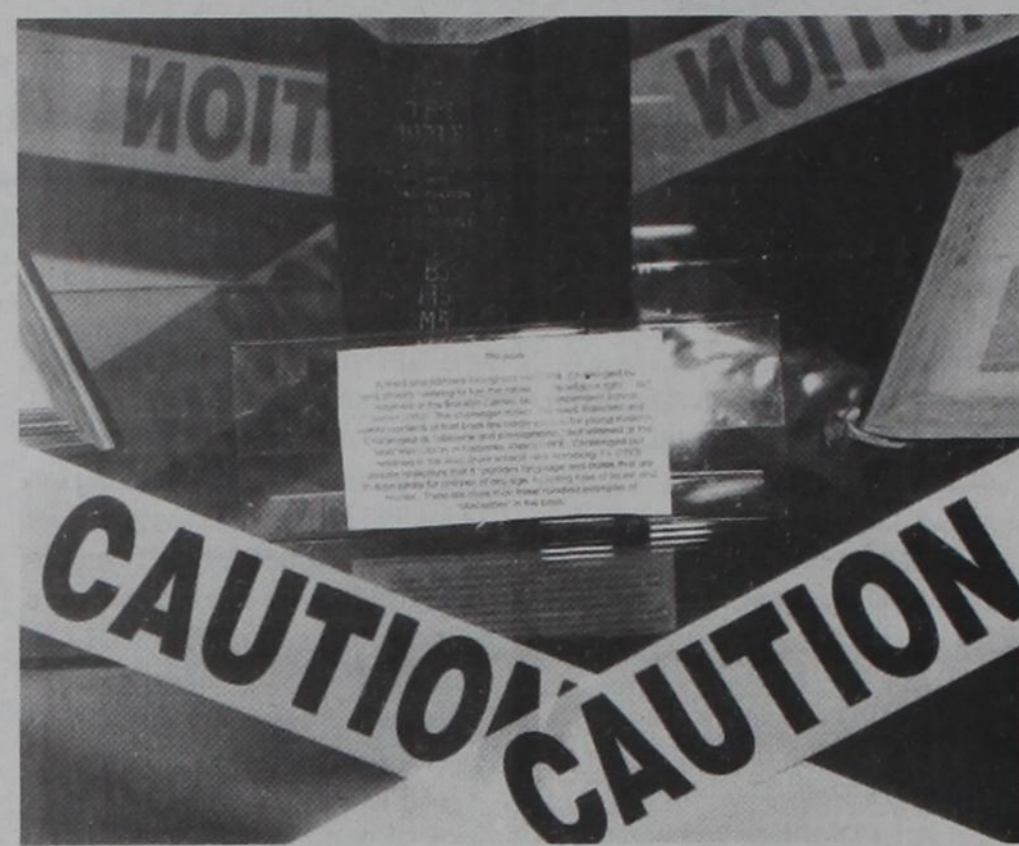

"We are just one library of a national community of libraries, and we want to support this annual effort by the American Libraries Association," Birdsall said. "It's very important to public libraries in particular because they have challenges to books regularly."

The event is educational as well because students can see what kinds of books were controversial, he said.

"Nobody would even blink at some of those books today," Birdsall said.

Roe Ridley, a senior public relations major from El Paso, believes having a national awareness week of banned books might influence greater interest in reading.

"I think it would incite people to read books to see why they were banned in the first place," Ridley said.

Dykes lends name to heart health cause

by Darcy Rosie/UD

Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes will be in two places at once this Saturday — in a manner of speaking.

Physically he will be leading the Texas Tech Red Raider football team as it prepares for the Baylor Bears.

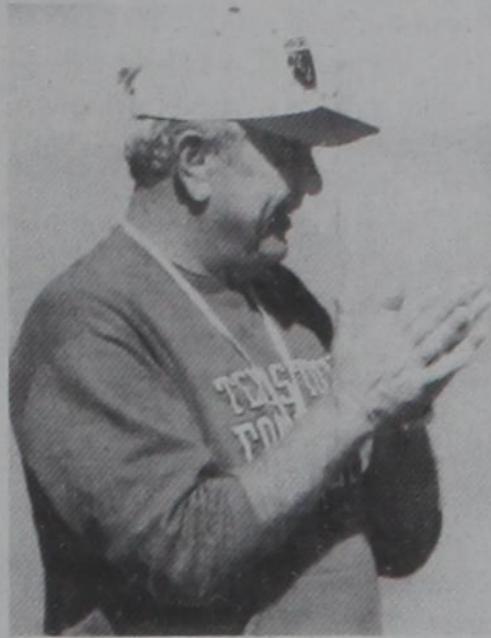

But his name and his spirit also will be leading the charge against heart disease in the Annual Healthy Choice American Heart Walk.

Dykes was named honorary chairman of the Heart Walk by local American Heart Association officials partly because of his popularity, but also because of his recovery from triple-bypass surgery this past summer.

"We are delighted to be working with Coach Dykes," said Doug Hodel, regional director of AHA. "Part of our mission is to recognize heart disease survivors, and he is a true survivor, having recently undergone a successful heart bypass. Making him honorary chairman was a natural thing to do."

Having a person with Dykes' profile draws attention to heart disease and the importance of taking better care of themselves, Hodel said.

"He brings a lot of notoriety to the American Heart Association," he said. "Football season is a good time to bring attention to health matters."

But football season also is a hectic time for a coach focused on his team's performance in the Big 12 Conference.

AHA was well aware of the importance of Saturday's game when they nominated Dykes, he said.

He did some public service announcements about changing people's lifestyles and about supporting the association in this year's walk.

"He has given us a lot of his time and he'll be with us in spirit on Saturday," Hodel said.

Dykes knows his name can help promote awareness and research.

"I hope it (my name) helps make people aware that heart disease can be managed and is curable," Dykes said.

Organizations like AHA make research available and events like this really help them out, he said.

"AHA is a great faculty for extending people's lives," he said. "It makes people aware, and that is half the battle. So much of being unhealthy is ignorance."

Although Dykes' surgery was not an emergency, it was something that built up gradually until it had to be fixed, he said.

Dykes credits his family for seeing him through the operation.

"Anytime you have a set back, family support is invaluable," he said. "My wife (Sharon) was a great nurse."

In his 10th year as head coach, Dykes realizes he has received better medical care than most people and appreciates the help.

"I have had way better care than I deserve," Dykes said.

Dykes said he had never spent a night in a hospital until his surgery last summer.

"It just shows how important it is to be aware of your lifestyle," he said.

"Now, I am just trying to get my strength back and maintain a healthier lifestyle," Dykes said.

Ray Irvin, director of the lifestyles center at Methodist Hospital, said having Dykes represent the Heart Walk will bring much needed attention.

"Heart disease is still the No. 1 killer in America today," said Irvin, a Tech graduate. "We're glad coach Dykes gave his time and his name because it will help bring awareness to heart disease."

Preventing heart disease means making personal changes, he said.

"If a person will just pursue some type of activity around the house, there are benefits," Irvin said. "A regular low-fat diet is best, and that seems to be the hardest part. Some people want a magic pill."

Saturday's walk coincides with Heart Week and begins at 10 a.m. at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

M&M's try out new look for fall; aqua, teal in for season

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue M&M's were just the beginning. Get ready for gold, silver, teal and purple.

M&M-Mars is expanding its 56-year-old candy line to include 18 new colors that cross the spectrum.

The old standards — red, green, yellow, brown, orange and the relatively new blue — now will compete with the likes of white and black, pink and maroon, aqua and light yellow.

"Color has been so integral in M&M's life span and consumers love color," said Marlene Machut, a spokeswoman for the Hackettstown, N.J.-based candy maker. "We felt this was the right time to come out with this."

The new colors, however, will be sold only in specialty stores in 26 markets from Denver to the East Coast. The M&M's, which come in the plain chocolate variety, will not be sold in individual packages, but rather by weight. Supermarkets will not carry the new colors, for now.

"This is a test in terms of this creative batch of colors," said Machut, adding that the reaction will determine which colors may later be included in regular M&M packages.

The traditional M&M mix remained unchanged from 1949 until the blue debut 1 1/2 years ago, except for a decade-long leave-of-absence by red, removed in 1976 because of what the company called misplaced concern over the food dye. Red returned in 1987.

'Red Noses' opens new season at University Theatre

by Darcy Rosie/UD

The University Theatre at Texas Tech opens its 1996-1997 season Monday as "Red Noses" makes its debut on the laboratory stage.

The play shows Monday through Friday at 8 p.m. and Oct. 13 at 2 p.m., and admission price is $3 for current Tech students. Rush seating will be available as well.

"Red Noses" is the first of two laboratory productions this semester.

Laboratory performances are student-operated to provide them with a real working experience, said Fred Christoffel, director of theatre arts.

"The laboratory is our experimental stage," Christoffel said. "We try to do fewer commercial plays and more avant-garde works."

The department has made changes this year to improve seating availability.

"We want students to be able to attend more shows and this frees up seating, particularly in the beginning of the week," he said. "That's why we now have seven performances instead of only having four like last year."

Rush seating means students can get free seating if the performance is not sold out five minutes before the beginning of the play, he said.

"Red Noses" is one of the more "avant-garde" shows, Christoffel said.

"We try to do material that is challenging but inviting to the public," said Deborah Martin, University Theatre promotions director. "That is why we have plays like 'Red Noses' and mainstage productions like 'Cabaret.'"

"Red Noses" will double as Tech's entry in the 29th annual American Colleges Theatre Festival Nov. 16 in Wichita Falls, Martin said. This will be the University Theatre's first entry in the competition in four years.

The first mainstage theatre production will be "Cabaret," a musical showing Oct. 17-20 and Oct. 24-27.

"It's one of the most provocative musicals of our times," she said.

The play deals with the dark times surrounding the Holocaust, Martin said. However, the theme is light and emotional.

Joshua Krause, a senior theatre arts major from Abilene and "Red Noses" cast member, is excited about playing a role in a play that will be judged in competition.

"It adds a little more publicity to us as a group," Krause said. "We get to travel and compete, which adds a little flare to the whole thing."

Texas gardeners dig into Internet use

WACO (AP) — Elm Mott resident Mike Barrington has been digging in the dirt since he was a kid, so it was a natural step for him to produce a CD-ROM that focuses on Texas gardening.

Barrington, a mechanical engineer by trade, said the idea for "Grow It Texas Style" came about on a visit to his parents, who have seemingly always owned a nursery. His mother was digging around for some information for a client, and Barrington told her she needed a database for all the plants.

That was the seed of an idea that eventually bloomed into "Grow It Texas Style."

Barrington set about creating a database and moved into the CD-ROM phase. Now he has a third of 5,000 plants cataloged on the CD-ROM. He hopes to get another 1,000 onto his Web site at some point.

He said growers send information about their plants in to be cataloged.

"Growers like to promo their plants," Barrington said.

"That's how we're getting our plant material right now."

Plants on "Grow It Texas Style" are indexed on 176 criteria, from soil types to heights, leaf color to texture, he said.

The CD-ROM is getting good reviews from local people in the industry.

Barry Houck, vice president and general manager of Westview Nursery, said he likes it.

"I think it's very good," he said.

"It tells a lot about a lot of the plants around here that people don't know much about."

But Houck said he is not selling the CD-ROM right now.

Reid Lewis, manager of Organic Plus, said he's been selling "Grow It Texas Style" for six to eight months.

"It's a great concept," Lewis said.

"CDs are the next thing to come along."

Lewis said the CD-ROM has been selling "fairly well" at his store.

He is a self-described "anti-computer person" and gave it to some friends to try out, while he watched.

David Nealy, owner and master nurseryman at Town and Country Gardens, said he purchased the CD-ROM at the Texas Association of Nurseryman show several weeks ago.

"If I see there's a market for it, I'll start selling it," Nealy said.

Of special importance is the section on how to remedy insects.

MLB umpires say no room for compromise

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball umpires, insisting "there's no room for compromise," said they will strike Friday because of Roberto Alomar's continued presence in the playoffs.

"We are walking out after the last game tonight," umpires union head Richie Phillips said Thursday by telephone from his Philadelphia office.

Lawyers for the umpires and baseball owners are to appear Friday in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, where the American and National leagues have asked for an injunction that would prevent yet another baseball walkout.

U.S. District Judge Edmund Ludwig, who was assigned the case Tuesday, was attempting to work out a deal by telephone Thursday, Phillips said.

Another person involved in the case said there were negotiations among owners, umpires and the players' association.

"We're not making any progress toward a settlement, any progress whatsoever," Phillips said. "There's no room for compromise. They could offer us everything in the world, and they've offered us a lot, and there's nothing that would change our stance."

Two games are scheduled for Friday, with Baltimore playing Cleveland in the late afternoon and the New York Yankees at Texas in the evening. Replacement umpires will be on standby in case the regulars refuse to work.

Red Raiders set to go Bear hunting

by Heath Robinson/UD

Texas Tech and Baylor square off Saturday in the first Big 12 Conference football game in Lubbock, with both teams jockeying for position among the elite of the conference's South Division. The game will kick off at 6:30 p.m. at Jones Stadium.

Tech (2-2 overall, 1-1 in the Big 12) is coming off its most impressive outing of the season, a 58-20 trouncing of Utah State on Saturday in Lubbock. The passing game broke out of its season-long slump as Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge hit 14 of 24 passes for 178 yards and three touchdowns, completing passes to 11 different receivers. Coming into the game, Lethridge had completed 35.3 percent of his attempts, for an average of 110 yards per game.

Tailback Byron Hanspard has been consistent for the Red Raiders all season, rushing for more than 200 yards in three of Tech's four games, and rushing for at least 100 yards in his last 10 ballgames, dating back to last season. Following last week's game, Utah State coach John L. Smith tabbed Hanspard "bye-bye Byron," remarking on Hanspard's 224-yard effort against the Aggies.

Baylor coach Chuck Reedy, who has led his team to a 3-0 record overall and 0-0 in the Big 12, has no fancy nicknames for Hanspard, he just knows what a great runner he is.

"Byron Hanspard is a great player for Tech," Reedy said. "He was tremendous last year, and I think he has improved. He's definitely stronger, and he seems to be a little bit faster."

Reedy also knows containing Hanspard is next to impossible and said a team effort would be required in order to keep him under control.

"You have to have 11 guys flying to the football and gang tackle him with a lot of people," Reedy said. "If you don't keep him from getting to the perimeter and going upfield, he can make it a real long day for you."

In order for the Red Raiders to hand Baylor its first loss, Tech will have to contain some of the Big 12's most ex-

San Antonio signs Dominique 'human highlight film' Wilkins

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Dominique Wilkins, whose quest for a championship was finally fulfilled last season in Greece after 13 years with the Atlanta Hawks, Los Angeles Clippers and Boston Celtics, is coming back to the NBA.

The San Antonio Spurs announced Thursday they'd reached a verbal agreement with Wilkins that would allow the high-scoring, high-flying forward to return to the United States after one year with Panathinaikos Athens of the Greek League. Details of the agreement were not released.

"We are extremely fortunate to have the opportunity to sign a player like Dominique at this point in time," said Spurs general manager Gregg Popovich.

"His experience and ability to score will certainly be a positive for our team."

The 6-foot-8, 215-pound Wilkins becomes the NBA's active scoring leader with 25,389 points, which ranks eighth all-time. He's averaged 25.8 points, 6.8 rebounds and 1.36 steals over 984 games.

Known as the "human highlight film" in his younger days, Wilkins won the NBA slam dunk titles in 1985 and 1990 and was an All-Star from 1986-94. He made the All-NBA team seven times.

Despite flashy personal success, Wilkins' teams never excelled in the playoffs. He made the postseason nine times, but his teams never even reached the NBA Finals.

The Spurs have been a playoff perennial since center David Robinson came aboard, but — like Wilkins — they've been unable to take the final step.

However, Wilkins will be relied on to become the secondary scoring threat San Antonio has lacked.

plosive performers. Baylor tailback Jerod Douglas averages 86.3 yards per game on the ground and returns kick-offs at a clip of 33.3 yards a return for his career.

At receiver for the Bears are Kalief Muhammad and Pearce Pegross. They are the big play performers for the Bears, as all of quarterback Jeff Watson's touchdown throws this season have gone to the duo. Muhammad has three touchdowns and averages 13.4 yards per catch. Pegross has two touchdowns on the season and gains more than 15 yards per catch. "They really have three outstanding performers in Douglas, Muhammad and Pegross," Tech coach Spike Dykes said.

"In the past, they have been more defense-oriented. But this season the offense has been great for them. It's going to be a real test for our defense to contain them."

Baylor has few standout defensive performers, losing defensive end Darryl Gardener to the Miami Dolphins in the first round of last year's NFL Draft. Only four starters return for the Bears' defense from 1995's 7-4 squad.

Middle linebacker Dean Jackson leads the defense with 32 tackles and two interceptions through three games. Baylor is giving up 364 yards of offense a game to its opponents, including 145.7 yards on the ground.

"Last year, they were a dominating defensive team," Dykes said. "This year, they have a stronger offense, but their defense isn't quite as good. But it still adds up to a good team."

Rangers, Yankees prepare for game three in Arlington

ARLINGTON (AP)—Baseball stadiums can't field or hit but there's something about The Ballpark in Arlington that has made the building a haunted house for the New York Yankees.

The Yankees lost five of six games against the Texas Rangers in the facility this year and are 3-13 since it was built in 1994.

The Yankees' Jimmy Key (12-11) goes against the Rangers' Darren Oliver (14-6) in game three

Friday night with the best-of-5 American League divisional series tied at a game apiece.

Key was 0-2 and had an 8.71 earned-run average against the Rangers this year. Oliver was 1-0 with a 2.57 ERA and beat Key in their only head-to-head meeting.

"There must be something in the water here," Key said Thursday. "Baseball is a funny game and I'm not smart enough to figure it out. All I know is we've got to stop it."

Key added "I love hostile places. I feed off it. I like the challenge."

Key made a few soft tosses on the side Thursday but the rest of his Yankees teammates took the day off because of the late hour. Texas also canceled its scheduled workout.

Texas won the series opener in Yankee Stadium 6-2 behind the pitching of John Burkett.

The Yankees rebounded Wednesday night 5-4 in 12 innings, thanks to a throwing error by third baseman Dean Palmer.

Yankees manager Joe Torre said the team didn't even get its luggage at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport until 7 a.m. Thursday.

"I decided to grab some breakfast with Don Zimmer and we ran into Juan Gonzalez in the restaurant," Torre said.

"He had already eaten," Torre joked, "so it was too late to poison him. I was hoping he would at least pick up our checks."

Gonzalez has three homers and seven RBIs against the Yankees in the series.

Torre said he knows why Arlington is such a jinx for his team and

"I love hostile places. I feed off it. I like the challenge."

Yankees' game three starter, Jimmy Key it has nothing to do with the water.

"We have not pitched well here," Torre said.

"If we can just keep the game close until we get to our bullpen, we will be OK."

Torre's

against the Rangers include batting Derek Jeter leadoff and playing Charlie Hayes at third instead of Wade Boggs.

He also said that former Ranger Kenny Rogers will start Game 4 for the Yankees on Saturday.

Catcher Jim Leyritz, who was hit in the arm Wednesday night, is fine and X-rays were negative, said Torre, who won't decide on a complete batting order until Friday.

The Rangers were upbeat despite the extra-inning loss in Game 2.

"We got a split in New York and that's what we wanted," said Texas second baseman Mark McLemore. "Now, we've got the Yankees in our ballpark where we have the best record in the league."

Texas was 50-31 during the regular season, the second-best home record behind Cleveland in the major league this year.

Volleyball team puts 15-0 record on road

by Christy Apple/UD

The No. 24 Texas Tech volleyball team plays its first Big 12 Conference road game at 7 p.m. today in Austin.

The Red Raiders head to the capital city with a 15-0 overall record 2-0 Big 12 record, while the Longhorns enter the contest with a 1-1 conference record. Texas is ranked sixth in the Big 12 and No. 8 in the nation.

Texas brings in last year's No. 1 freshman in the country, Demetria Sance.

Tech has focused on her during practice by putting assistant coaches Mike Lessinger and Nancy Todd on the other side of the net.

Senior outside hitter Lacy Nye said the Red Raider practices have been intense and have been focused on digging the ball.

"We pretended Lessinger was Sance in practice," Nye said.

"Nelson told us that if we could dig his hits than we could dig her hits."

Nye is excited about playing Texas this year more than any other year because she knows Tech actually has a chance to win going into the match.

"In the past, our chances were not as good, but this year it is a reality," Nye said.

"I know that we are going to win."

Nelson realizes Texas is not as strong as it has been in the past because of a three-game loss last weekend to Texas A&M.

"Texas has been struggling a little bit, and we are hoping to capitalize on that," Nelson said.

Senior outside hitter Cristine Martin said the Red Raiders are not going to worry about the Aggies until they polish off the Longhorns.

"We have focused on Texas all week, and after we beat them we will worry about A&M," Martin said.

At 1 p.m. Sunday at G. Rollie White

Coliseum in College Station, the Red Raiders take on the No. 16 Texas A&M Aggies, who join the Red Raiders at 2-0 in the Big 12 and 11-2 overall.

Tech brings power to the middle blocker position with junior Brande Brown, who is 12th in the nation in hitting percentage.

Senior Jill Burness, who is fourth in the nation in blocks, is also a force in the middle.

Texas A&M brings junior outside hitter Kristi Smederud, who is 12th in the nation in kills. As a team, the Aggies are 20th in the nation in kills.

Texas A&M's Big 12 Player of the Week, Page White, enters the match with a .400 hitting percentage and 13 kills in the win over the fifth-ranked Longhorns.

"We are positive about this weekend," Nye said.

"We have no doubt this weekend that we can win and honestly say that we are a better team this year."

"In the past our chances were not as good, but this year it is a reality."

Coach brings valuable experience, attitude to team

by Christy Apple/UD

Texas Tech assistant volleyball coach Mike Lessinger is living the dream of many students right out of college.

Lessinger, 23, has plenty of playing experience, but now sees the world of coaching at his fingertips.

Lessinger came to the program with Tech coach Jeff Nelson after playing for him at Arizona State. Lessinger was a four-year letterman on the Sun Devils' men's volleyball team.

He was selected as team captain during his junior and senior year and was a second-team All-American his senior year.

Nelson invited Lessinger to help him take on the task of rebuilding the Red Raider volleyball team.

With one semester left to graduate, Lessinger decided to take on the challenge and start his coaching career early at Tech.

"The opportunity is everything that I hoped and more," Lessinger said. "I am enjoying this so much and to see a program be rebuilt is really neat."

Lessinger said he sees his role as being the go-between guy for the players and the coaching staff.

"By playing under Jeff in Arizona I know what he is trying to accomplish," Lessinger said. "I know what his system is and what the outcome is like."

Nelson said Lessinger brings a level of experience to the program.

"He brings in an ability to play at a high level," Nelson said. "He is a very good player, and the kids respect that about him."

Lessinger finds being a player and a coach is exciting and he uses his skills as a player to help Tech's volleyball team improve defensively.

"When I play, it is at a different level than theirs," Lessinger said.

"I get higher on the net and hit harder at them to prepare them for the bigger teams that can hit."

Nelson said Lessinger will not ask the team to do anything he can not do himself.

Lessinger's philosophy is if practice is harder than the games, then he has helped the team more.

Lessinger not only has taken on the challenge of assisting the Tech volleyball team, but he is the head coach of his own men's club volleyball team at Tech.

"I enjoy doing things my own way," Lessinger said. "Ninety percent of the things that Jeff does, I do with my team."

Lessinger anticipates the success of his men's volleyball team just as he had success with his team in Arizona.

John Woolke/UD

Watchful eyes: Texas Tech assistant volleyball coach Mike Lessinger keeps a watchful eye on the team's practice as the Red Raiders prepare for this weekend's Big 12 games against Texas and Texas A&M on the road.

He is currently looking at the local level of competition and then will move regionally as well as nationally. The top 40 men's teams will compete in Arizona for the National Championship in club volleyball.

"If teams finish in the top 15 of the tournament, they can usually play against or make up some of the Division I schools that have men's volleyball," Lessinger said.

Being young enables Lessinger to make many choices and take his time in moving up in the coaching ladder. He is in no hurry to go anywhere and he has nothing more than to learn about the game.

Later down the road he said he would like to be coach, but he sees it as a future challenge.

Lessinger does not see coaching as a job because it is too fun to be considered a job.

"If I won the lottery tomorrow I would come into the office an hour and a half later," Lessinger said.

Tech soccer goes with youth in goal

by Brent Dirks/UD

As the new kid on the block, Lizzie Pruitt has used her goalkeeping skills to make an impact at Texas Tech.

"I played goalie since I was about five," Pruitt said. "My brother played goalie, and they asked who wanted to play and I volunteered because my brother was cool."

Pruitt has recorded three shut-outs and allowed 1.33 goals per game in her 10 games as a Red Raider. She said goalkeeping is different from the other positions in soccer because of the mental aspects of the position.

"It's real hard to stay focused during the whole game," she said. "You can go 20 minutes and not have any action, then all of a sudden make the biggest save of the game. So it takes a whole lot of mental game to keep focused all of the time."

The freshman from Arlington said Tech was a good choice for her to play college soccer because she is the youngest member of her family.

"I'm the last one to leave," she said. "It was far enough away from home, and yet it was close enough. My parents can still come watch me play instead of far away where they couldn't watch any games."

Pruitt said it has been difficult for her to establish the leadership a team must have in its goalkeeper.

"Coming in as a freshman, it's hard to gain respect of everybody because they have to listen to you and have to work with you," she said. "But for the most part, (my role has) been a leader and everybody has taken to it and respected it on and off the field."

Even so, Pruitt said she has enjoyed her first year on the soccer team and of college.

“It takes a whole lot of mental game to keep focused all of the time.”

Lizzie Pruitt, Tech freshman goalkeeper

"It's awesome," she said. "Everybody is great. If you see anybody in the halls you say, 'How are you doing,' and in the classroom everybody is talking. I'm really excited; everybody is outgoing."

This year, Pruitt said, she would like to see the team make the first Big 12 Conference Tournament Nov. 7-10 in St. Louis.

"Our biggest goal this year is to make the Big 12 Conference Tournament," she said. "That would be a big step. Maybe by the time I graduate we can contend for the championship."

Pruitt said she was glad to be a part of the freshman class that has six starters in the Tech lineup.

"I think we are kind of at a crossroads right now," Pruitt said. "I think we're going to pick it up because we're settling in and we know that this is the big time."

Tech assistant coach Felix Oskam said Pruitt's height presents a big asset to the team's play this year.

John Woolke/UD

Reaching for glory: Texas Tech freshman goalkeeper Lizzie Pruitt dives for a shot at the Red Raiders' practice. Pruitt was a three-sport star at Arlington High, playing basketball, soccer and softball.

"She's a tall girl," Oskam said. "When you have a tall girl the other team takes notice."

Pruitt's play has been like a roller coaster this year, but that will change as she plays more, he said.

"She's had some good games, but she has also had some games where she let some balls slip past her," Oskam said. "That causes a little concern, but when she concentrates more, she'll be a big asset."

Red Raider men's golf team heads to Michigan

by Heath Robinson/UD

The Texas Tech men's golf team will try to rebound from a disappointing start to the season this weekend in Ann Arbor, Mich. The Red Raiders will be among 18 teams participating in The Wolverine Invitational.

The 54-hole tournament will be played at The University of Michigan Golf Course, designed by Allster MacKenzie. MacKenzie is the same man who designed the Augusta National Golf Course.

Tech's team consists of sophomore Ronny Gailey, senior Chris Hill, sophomore Travis Pope, junior Laird Sparks and sophomore Philip Tate.

Hill, Pope and Tate all made the trip to Tech's first tournament, Sept. 23-24 at the Kansas Invitational. Tech finished 16th out of 17 teams, and Hill was the Red Raiders' top finisher in a 31st place tie.

Tech coach Tommy Wilson is expecting a better performance from his team.

"The Michigan tournament will be a tough one," Wilson said. "We have an inexperienced team that needs a lot of work, but I am hoping for better results than the first tournament."

Tech will be facing a talented field, as Michigan and Michigan State bring top-flight programs into the tournament.

Drake is also in the field, the same team that won the Kansas Invitational and finished a whopping 54 strokes ahead of the Red Raiders in the 54-hole tournament.

The University of Michigan Golf Course is a par 71 course with a distance of 6,700 yards. Wilson said he is worried the course's tough design may cause trouble for his team.

Cowboys hope less Emmitt means more

IRVING (AP)—For at least the rest of the 1996 season, the workload on the Dallas Cowboys' superstar running back Emmitt Smith will be eased.

Smith, battered and bruised like he has never been so early in a season, can't carry the Cowboys' running game by himself anymore.

Young Sherman Williams, drafted two years ago and left idle on the bench, could be a big player as Dallas tries defending its Super Bowl title through October, November and December.

The Cowboys gave Williams his first big chance in a game that mattered in Monday night's 23-19 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles. Williams responded with 27 yards on seven carries, including several big plays while the ailing Smith rested on the sidelines.

"Emmitt's still not there, he's not hitting on all cylinders," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said.

"Sherman is fast and gives us a change of pace when he goes in there. He has the ability to make some big plays."

Williams was the Cowboys' first pick in the NFL draft two years ago, although some critics had charged it was a wasted pick.

Pagnozzi revisits former glory days by driving in winning run

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A member of the St. Louis Cardinals' mostly forgotten old guard ended nine years of frustration. Tom Pagnozzi, who played on the 1987 World Series team before the Cardinals had several mediocre seasons, drove in the game-winner with a shot off reliever Trevor Hoffman's glove in the eighth inning Thursday, giving St. Louis a 5-4 win over the San Diego Padres and a 2-0 lead in their NL playoff series. The teams resume the best-of-5 series Saturday in San Diego. St. Louis had blown a 4-1 lead, allowing San Diego to tie it in the eighth on Steve Finley's RBI groundout. Brian Jordan drew a leadoff walk in the ninth off Doug Bochtler and advanced on a groundout before John Mabry, who hadn't hit the ball out of the infield in six playoff at-bats, was intentionally walked. Bochtler's wild pitch moved the runners into scoring position, and Pagnozzi hit a 1-1 pitch just to the left of Hoffman, who got the tip of his glove on the ball but couldn't catch it. The ball bounced to second baseman Jody Reed, who threw to first as Jordan scored. Dennis Eckersley pitched a perfect ninth for his second save of the series and the 13th of his postseason career. St. Louis starter Andy Benes retired the first 12 batters, striking out six, before Caminiti led off the fifth with his homer. Benes struck out nine and allowed four runs on six hits. He tired in the eighth, leaving after allowing a leadoff single to pinch-hitter Scott Livingstone and a walk to Rickey Henderson.

Tech women's soccer returns home

by Brent Dirks/UD

After two weeks on the road, Texas Tech's soccer team returns to the friendly confines of R.P. Fuller Track Stadium where the Red Raiders have not lost a game this season.

Tech (7-3 overall, 3-1 Big 12 Conference) will play Oral Roberts at 4 p.m. today and South Alabama at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The team is glad to be home after splitting a pair of weekend games, said Tech coach Diane Nichols. The split came by winning against Missouri and losing to Kansas.

Nichols said she thought Tech's speed would have beaten Kansas, but the Jayhawks prevailed 1-0.

"I felt like we were a faster team than Kansas," she said. "Except when we arrived at the field, there was standing water and the field was so muddy that our speed didn't help us. But hats off to Kansas, they played better than us and beat us."

Nichols said she was happy with the way the team played in the 3-1 victory over the Tigers, but the win did not come without a price.

"With five seconds left, (midfielder) Julie Clement gets kicked in the nose and had a bad fracture," Nichols said.

"She went off to a plastic surgeon (Monday). I think Julie is a tough kid. I've seen her play with a sprained ankle, and if anybody can come back it is Julie."

John Woolke/UD

Quick learner: Texas Tech freshman forward Kristy Frantz juggles the ball at the Red Raiders' practice. Frantz is Tech's leading scorer.

Even with the broken nose, Clement is still day-to-day and the decision will be made today if she will play against Oral Roberts, Nichols said.

Tech leads the all-time series with Oral Roberts, 1-0, with a 2-0 defeat of the Golden Eagles last season in Tulsa. Oral Roberts returns 10 lettermen and nine starters from a 7-12 season in 1995.

Forward Kyndada Aldrich and freshman Rimini Ross have lead the team to a 4-4 record this season.

"They're a much better team this year," Nichols said. "They have several foreign players, so we will have our work cut out Friday."

The rebuilding South Alabama team lost four of its top scorers as well as its coach from last year's 10-7-2 squad. The Jaguars are 1-9 this season, led by midfielder Jennifer Potter and midfielder Snjolaug Virgisdottir.

"South Alabama is struggling," Nichols said. "Their coach and some players left to go to Oklahoma State."

Co-captain defender Raney Terrell said the team is prepared for the weekend games.

"Sunday against Missouri, we played as well as we have in a long time," Terrell said. "We know that these conference games are going to be tough."

Goalkeeper Lizzie Pruitt said the Red Raiders are not overlooking the two games against Oral Roberts and South Alabama for next weekend's series against Texas and Texas A & M.

"We're using it as preparing ourselves for it so we're not looking past it because they have beat some pretty good teams," Pruitt said. "It's by no means going to be an easy weekend."

Irvin returns to inspire lagging Cowboys

IRVING (AP)—Michael Irvin returned to the Dallas Cowboys on Thursday, providing the listless Super Bowl champions with some of the spark they've been missing much of this season.

The Cowboys have struggled to go 2-3 in their star receiver's absence caused by violation of the league's drug policy.

Dallas also has lacked some of the Irvin-inspired swagger that made the Cowboys loved or hated but not ignored.

"The guys were happy to see me, but I was more happy to see them," Irvin said following his first practice with the team since training camp. "When I came in, we did some laughing and joking."

Irvin has vowed to clean up his image since pleading no-contest to felony cocaine possession charges in July.

The plea marked the end of a trial that exposed several other scandals, including a murder-for-hire plot that was funded by a Dallas policeman and targeted Irvin.

He maintained a solemn tone in an impromptu news conference Thursday.

But teammates assured that Irvin is still "The Playmaker."

"He's the same flamboyant, loving guy. He's not going to change that," quarterback Troy Aikman said.

The most unique insight came from often thoughtful offensive lineman Nate Newton, whose description of his greeting of Irvin seemed to summarize the twin personas he's trying to balance.

"I walked up to him, hugged him and kissed him," Newton said. "I told him how he's helped us dig this hole that we're in and now he's got to help bring us out of it."

"His answer was, 'I know I messed up by not being there for you guys.' We started crying and exchanging Kleenex and everything was all right." So Irvin was really humbled?

"Oh, he was flashy about it," Newton said. "He used gold Kleenex."

Irvin has remained in good shape during his time off, making him a lock to start a week from Sunday when the Cowboys host the Arizona Cardinals. Dallas has a bye this weekend.

His return should help awaken the Cowboys' once-dominant scheme that has slipped greatly without him, tight end Jay Novacek and, most recently, Kevin Williams.

No wonder Aikman said Thursday he "was as excited as anybody to have him out on the field."

Irvin — who described Aikman's early-season frustration as "the toughest thing to watch" during his absence — was just as happy.

Tech women's cross country makes fast start

Texas Tech's women's cross country team has started fast this season, winning its first tournament in Lubbock and finishing fifth out of 11 teams Sept. 21 at the SMU Invitational in Dallas.

This weekend, Tech travels to Stillwater, Okla., to compete in the Oklahoma State Open Saturday.

The freshman-dominated team has impressed so far, with Kristen Koppes and Leigh Daniel leading the Red Raiders at each meet. In Dallas, the duo finished sixth and seventh, respectively. In the first meet of the year, Koppes finished in first and Daniel second. The pair have become the two fastest freshmen in school history, said Tech women's cross country coach Kirk Elias. In the first meet, Sept. 7 in Lubbock, Koppes and Daniel just missed running 5,000 meters in under 20 minutes. Other strong performers for the Red Raiders this season have been Tandra Brillhart, Courtney Nolan and Lori Knowles. Freshman Tara Hange finished in third place in the first meet but was forced to sit out the SMU Invitational because of an illness.

Upcoming events for the Red Raiders include Oct. 12 in Lubbock at the Texas Tech Open.

Avalanche tries to keep team together for opening night

(AP)—After putting it all together in the Stanley Cup playoffs, the Colorado Avalanche are just trying to keep it together when they open the 1996-97 NHL season Friday night at St. Louis.

"It's been a funny training camp with a few injuries to key people and a couple of people not here due to contract situations, so we really haven't had the whole group together," coach

Marc Crawford said. "But we're ready to get started."

So is the rest of the NHL as the league begins its 80th season with three games Friday night: Colorado at St. Louis, Buffalo at Edmonton and the New York Islanders at Los Angeles.

The Avalanche will be missing some important pieces as they begin their quest for a second straight

Stanley Cup — not the least of which is contract holdout Valeri Kamensky, who was the third leading scorer on the team last season with 38 goals.

Crawford said Rene Corbet will play left wing on the line with Peter Forsberg and Claude Lemieux for as long as Kamensky is absent.

"I think Corbet is going to show himself very well," Crawford said, adding that he's able to fill any role.

TEXAS TECH VS BAYLOR

The University Daily

Texas Tech University

October 4, 1996

SCOUTING REPORT

The Baylor Bears come into Saturday's game against the Texas Tech Red Raiders with a record of 3-0 overall and 0-0 in the Big 12 Conference. This will be the first Big 12 game at Jones Stadium.

Baylor's three victories in 1996 have come at the expense of Louisiana Tech, 24-16, Louisville, 14-13, and Oregon State, 42-10. The Bears open conference play against Tech for the third time in four years, having won the previous two in 1993 and 1995.

Tech will be facing a potent offense highlighted by its running back and its wide receivers.

Tailback Jerod Douglas averages 86.3 rushing yards per game while returning kickoffs for an average of 33.3 yards per return for his Baylor career.

At the wideout position, Baylor employs a double threat in Kalief Muhammad and Pearce Pegross. Muhammad is averaging 13.4 yards per reception in 1996 and has recorded three touchdowns. Pegross has two touchdowns and is picking up more than 15 yards per catch.

On the defensive side of the ball, Baylor lacks standouts after losing defensive end Darryl Gardener to the Miami Dolphins. Four starters return from last year's defensive unit which helped guide the Bears to a 7-4 record in 1995.

Middle linebacker Dean Jackson is the defense's anchor with 32 tackles and two interceptions in 1996. Baylor has surrendered 364 yards of total offense in its first three games. The Tech running attack should be salivating at the 145.7 rushing yards per game the Bears are giving up.

PLAYER PROFILE

McCullough

Baylor senior cornerback George McCullough has been a force so far this season, living up to his preseason billing in the season opener at Louisiana Tech. He had six tackles, four of those unassisted. He also made a stop behind the line for a two-yard Louisiana Tech loss. Most of the night, McCullough's cover ability kept the Bulldogs throwing elsewhere. He did make a significant contribution to stopping the Tech passing game late in the third quarter by intercepting a pass and ending a Bulldog threat.

McCullough, who had been slowed by a strained foot during two-a-days, was coming off a season in which he broke up 14 passes.

The senior now has three career interceptions as a Baylor Bear.

RAIDER REWIND

- Texas Tech intercepted five passes against Utah State Saturday, just one shy of the school record of six.
- Tech scored on its first possession in its third straight game.
- The 28 points for Tech was the most points scored in the first half this season and the 58 total points for Tech was the most since a 63-25 win over Arkansas State last season.
- Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge completed passes to 12 different receivers against the Aggies and his first 10 passes were to 10 different receivers.

QUOTES OF THE WEEK

"He's a special runner, and he's extremely elusive"

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes on Baylor tailback Jerod Douglas

"When the offensive line is giving you holes that big, man you can't help but run through them."

Tech tailback Byron Hanspard

"Bye-bye Byron, that's what he is. Maybe he won't be around the next time we play them."

Utah State coach John L. Smith on Hanspard's 224-yard performance against the Aggies
