Some progress made in Hebron talks

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Only a day after the U.S. mediator threatened to leave, Israel and the Palestinians seemed near to agreeing on Israel's pullout from the West Bank town of Hebron early Wednesday. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said a deal was "very close to completion."

Talks lasted into early Wednesday morning at a Jerusalem hotel, and Israel Radio said higher-level negotiators — including the Israeli military chief and Yasser Arafat's deputy — had been brought in. The radio said a deal might be announced during the night.

The sides reached agreement early Tuesday morning on the future administration of civil affairs in Hebron and were close to agreeing on the security arrangements, Israeli reports said.

"I hope it will be finished quickly," Netanyahu said of the agreement. He told reporters that a meeting between him and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat would be "desirable" when an accord is reached.

But despite the optimism of the Israeli side, the Palestinians have said they do not want to settle for a deal that resolves only the question of Hebron.

They also want Israel to stop expansion of Jewish settlements, ease the closure of Palestinian areas, release Palestinian prisoners and resolve other outstanding issues.

"Hebron is not the issue. It's whether they want peace or not, and all the indications show that they don't want peace," said Ahmed Qureia, speaker of the Palestinian legislative council.

The Israelis claim the Palestinians are stalling to put pressure on Israel and to portray it as having reneged on the agreements signed by its previous, more dovish government.

"The person who is stalling today and the person who is posturing is Arafat," said Israeli President Ezer Weizman.

The latest round of talks began in response to a plea from President Clinton following a week of violence in which Palestinian police and Israeli soldiers opened fire on one another, killing 79 people.

At a summit in Washington, Clinton persuaded the two sides to negotiate until they reached accord.

The United States reportedly has been pressing the two sides to reach agreement on a Hebron pullback before the U.S. elections.

Under the Israel-PLO accords, Israel was to have pulled out of Hebron in March. But then-Prime Minister Shimon Peres delayed the pullout after a series of bombings by Islamic militants in Israel. Netanyahu postponed the withdrawal again after he won Israel's May election, demanding better security for the 450 Jewish settlers who live in the city of 94,000 Arabs.

Monday, U.S. envoy Dennis Ross, who is mediating the talks, announced he was returning to Washington, apparently after concluding that the talks were hopelessly deadlocked. He was en route to the airport when he received a phone call — from Netanyahu, according to one unconfirmed report — and returned.

Strip boosts city economy

by April Castro/UD

Lubbock, a city some have termed the "wettest dry town in Texas," perhaps has the most lucrative alcohol industry in the area, some industry officials say.

Almost 2 percent of the city's total retail profits comes in the form of alcohol sales, according to figures released by State Comptroller John Sharp.

The city's alcohol retailers are grouped together at the "Strip," set up outside the southern city limits just outside the town's dry zone.

Texas Tech consumers who want to buy beer or liquor must drive about five miles from campus to the strip, a situation that is not always safe when drinking.

Competition between retailers at the Strip keeps the prices reasonable during the week, but does not have much effect on the cost during the busy weekend, said Shawn Jones, assistant manager of the Strip's Cellular.

The city's alcohol retail setup is of maximum benefit for local retailers and wholesalers within the Strip system, Jones said.

However, for consumers the system is not so beneficial.

"The setup is better for us, but it is difficult for consumers," he said.

"A consumer could just go to the local convenience store and pick up a six pack anywhere else, and it would be cheaper. But this is good for us, because we are all out here at the same place."

Should Lubbock county go wet, the entire Strip would be wiped out, because people would not drive that far for alcohol, Jones said.

A local option election to make the county wet failed in 1994 and does not have much chance for success in the future, said Dan Cullers, chief of Lubbock's Texas Alcohol Beverage Commission office.

INFORMATION FROM 91-95 TO 91-96

With Nationwide Alcohol Awareness Week being celebrated on the Tech campus, many students still are unaware of many city ordinances involving alcoholic consumption, Cullers said.

In September, three Tech students were arrested for possessing more alcohol than is legal in the county. According to police reports, the students were carrying 12 kegs and 60 cases of beer, as well as a couple of bottles of hard liquor, in a rented U-Haul trailer.

"In a dry area, one case of beer or one quart of liquor or the equivalent for personal consumption is all that is legal," Cullers said.

Washington won't appeal waste ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration will comply with a court order and accept for disposal tons of highly radioactive nuclear waste from civilian reactors. Officials say, however, there's no place to put it right now.

The Energy Department said Tuesday it would not challenge an appeals court ruling last July that directed the department beginning in 1998 to accept spent nuclear fuel now stored at commercial reactors in 34 states.

Assistant Energy Secretary Thomas Grumbly acknowledged that at this time the government can't say where it will put the used reactor fuel. He said he hoped that by 1998 a decision would be made on whether a permanent repository in Nevada is suitable for the material.

"Physically we can't take the waste," said Grumbly. Even if the Yucca Mountain site in Nevada is found technically acceptable for underground storage of the estimated 30,000 tons of highly radioactive used fuel now at reactors, that facility is not expected to be completed until 2010 at the earliest.

The administration has opposed efforts in Congress to build a temporary storage site in Nevada, arguing such a decision could jeopardize efforts to find a permanent repository for the fuel, which will remain highly radioactive for hundreds of years.

In a statement Tuesday, the Energy Department said it would not appeal the July court decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The department is reviewing its options as to what further steps may be taken," said the statement. Grumbly said the administration and the Congress is "going to have to step up and deal with the nuclear waste issue ... (and) not put it on the back burner."

In response to a lawsuit filed by nuclear plant operators and some state regulators, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled last July that the government is obligated under a 1982 law to take the highly radioactive spent fuel now at reactor sites and store it at a centralized location beginning at least by Jan. 31, 1998.

“Physically we can't take the waste.”

Week educates students

by Ginger Pope/UD

Alcohol is on the minds of many Texas Tech students this week.

Alcohol Awareness Week, which began Monday and ends Friday, is to educate students about alcohol and the consequences it can bring, said Trudy Putteet, Tech associate dean of students.

"Alcohol impacts every portion of life," Putteet said. "We sometimes don't stop to examine the consequences of the actions we take."

Alcohol is not allowed on the Tech campus, Putteet said. Students found with possession of alcohol or publicly intoxicated are referred to the Dean of Students Office for disciplinary actions.

The University Police Department reported 94 occurrences of a minor in possession of alcohol between Jan. 1 and Oct. 22. The UPD reported five driving while intoxicated incidents between July 1 and Dec.

31, 1994, five DWI incidents during 1995 and 14 DWI incidents between Jan. 1 and Oct. 22.

UPD reports show 49 occurrences of public intoxication between July 1 and Dec. 31, 1994, 88 incidents in 1995 and 81 incidents between Jan. 1 and Oct. 22.

A student is intoxicated when they have a blood alcohol concentration of .10 or more or do not have the normal use of men-

Techsans make trek up the hill

Tech graduates find new home, each other in United States capital

by James Walker/UD

He may be a long way from home, but Washington, D.C., lobbyist Larry Meyers still flies the Texas flag in front of his house.

"Tech is still a part of my daily life," said Meyers, a 1971 Texas Tech graduate and part of a network of Tech alumni working in all parts of the nation's capital.

Meyers said he never intended to go into politics, but throughout his college years his life began to head in that direction.

"I don't know how, but I ended up president of the (Tech) Freshman Council," he said.

Keith

When Lloyd Bentsen began his campaign for the U.S. Senate, Meyers was asked to help. Later, he followed Bentsen to Washington, serving as his legislative director for four years.

Meyers formed his own lobbying agency in January 1981.

Now, Meyers and other Tech alumni in Washington do everything they can to make newcomers from Lubbock feel at home on Capitol Hill.

One relative newcomer is Kathy Keith, a 1993 Tech graduate and legislative director for Rep. Bill Richardson, D-Santa Fe, N.M.

Keith recently was named president of the Washington, D.C., chapter of the Texas Tech Ex-Students Association.

"The alumni association is fairly active," Keith said. "We have an annual barbecue, and we always try to get a bus together and go to any game in the area."

Tech alumni often gather in sports bars to watch Tech games they cannot see in person, she said.

For those interested in a job or internship on Capitol Hill, the competition is often fierce.

"There are very few jobs and a lot of people who want them," she said.

Fortunately, many members of Congress prefer hiring people from their own districts, she said.

"They are also looking for people who are willing to work very hard," she said. "Washington has a reputation for that, and it's true, that you work some very long hours just because of the nature of the Congress."

Tech students interested in internships in Washington, D.C., should feel free to call Tech alumni in Washing-

Hate Fest '96 perfect for Tech, aids apathy issue

Julie Mitchell/columnist

Rather than having yearly love fests, I think we should have a yearly hate fest. We could have it right here on campus. Instead of hippies preaching peace and equality we could have rappers — really angry rappers. The t-shirts (there are always T-shirts you know) could be designed by an artist inspired by hatred, and all the different gangs could run the booths. And there could be a different theme for each booth, and not that old boring stuff like the "Pretzel Booth" either, our booths would have titles like "Hate Hotdogs" or "Pop a Cap in Him Coke." I thought, too, that we should put all the booths at least two buildings away from the law school. That way the law students will have to walk across campus and then they will be in the mood to be mad.

It only makes sense that we have a hate fest since we are filled with anger and bitterness. Who wants to celebrate love when one can wallow in animosity? I would rather be witness to a good fight (the more blood, the better the fight) than a good deed any day. You may think you disagree with me on this point, but wouldn't you rather watch football players knock one another down than help one another up?

That's another thing we could do at Hate Fest '96. We could play a no holds barred, no pads allowed game of football. We should play the elephants vs. the donkeys, because they are already so good at bashing each other. I wonder how much bashing they would do, knowing that they were going to get bashed back?

I also thought about setting up a tug of war game between smokers and non-smokers, only without a rope. But I decided that wouldn't really be fun because the smokers would tire out too fast.

The fest wouldn't be complete without a contest between the Greeks and those non-affiliated. Of course these groups could not compete face to face because that might mean actually having to get to know one another, so this would be a writing competition. Both sides would write in to The University Daily, and try to out-insult the other. The only rule would be that the opposing contestant could not, under any circumstances, even have a desire to know the other contestant before passing judgment. This is a game based solely on stereotype. The winner of this competition would get to make the loser drink and lick bugs.

I was thinking that we could erect some gallows in the new stadium, and put the entire UD staff up there. Then we could shout insults like "Hey, Snappy Cartoon Man" or "Hey, Opinionated Editor." Wouldn't that be the most fun?

So we've already got the majority of bases covered. We have no-rule sports and insulting as our entertainment, we have angry rappers as our entertainers, the gangs are covering the booths, a hateful artist is designing the shirt, and we have a war between the Greeks and everybody else. Now we just need a main event for our hate fest, and I have the perfect idea. We should have a huge bonfire around all the flag poles right there in Memorial Circle, and we could burn books and flags at the same time.

If I do say so myself, this Hate Fest '96 is a much better idea than those silly love fests. Some would argue that we celebrate hate everyday so we need that one week a year to celebrate love or we might forget what love is. I don't see their point.

Readers Ask

Readers Ask is a column printed in The University Daily every other Wednesday to answer students' questions about health issues and personal safety. Drop boxes are set up in the University Center, West Hall and Student Recreation Center for questions. Not all questions are answered, but most topics are discussed. All questions are answered by Jo Henderson, student health education coordinator.

Q: Does Student Health Services give flu shots and will it make me sick?

A: We start flu shots at Student Health Services Oct. 21 at a cost of $7 each. You need to get a new shot since influenza is a rapidly mutating virus that changes each year. If you're allergic to eggs, you shouldn't receive a flu shot, since the vaccine itself is grown in egg-based culture. If you have any reaction at all, it may be minor swelling at the vaccination site and fever. This is possible even in people who don't have egg allergies. Also, look for us on the morning of Nov. 4 at the University Center and that afternoon at the Student Recreation Center with our "on the road" shot clinic.

Q: My girlfriend gets mad at me because right after we have sex I always fall asleep. I can't seem to stay awake no matter. Is this a medical condition?

A: Since this event usually takes some energetic action, it is natural that you would need rest afterward. There is also usually a release of tension and relaxation as well. This habit of yours, however, can be exasperating and very unromantic. Let me suggest that you start some regular exercise to build up your staying power.

Next, pass on the sugary food before lovemaking since it gives a quick boost and then a quick drop in energy. Finally, if you have been romancing her in the evenings, try switching to the mornings. You are fresh from a good night's sleep and your sex hormones are rising.

Q: I was diagnosed in May with Crohn's disease. What exactly is this disease and its treatment and symptoms? I have lost 40 pounds in the last six months and have a tendency to bleed and bruise easily. The blood work indicates anemia and a low immunity level.

A: Crohn's disease is a chronic inflammatory illness that can affect any part of the gastrointestinal tract. However, the most common site of inflammation is at the end of the small intestine where it joins the large intestine. The intestinal wall becomes extremely thick due to continued inflammation and deep penetrating ulcers may form. The cause of Crohn's disease is unknown, but some researchers believe there is some inherited tendency toward developing it.

The symptoms are much like yours including weight loss, anemia, spasms of abdominal pain and diarrhea. Depending on the severity of the disease, medications can be given to control the inflammation. Occasionally, surgery is required to remove the damaged portions of the intestine.

Q: I was at a party the other night and this girl was passed out in a bedroom. I didn't think much about it until the next day when I heard about someone dying of too much liquor. What does someone act like when they have had a lethal dose?

A: Acute alcohol intoxication can occur without anyone realizing it. If you find someone passed out, as you did, stop and check them out closely. If they appear unconscious or semi-conscious, if they have slow respirations of eight or less per minute or lapses in respirations of more than 10 seconds, if they feel cold and clammy or have pale or bluish skin, call 911 immediately. It's important to understand that even though the person may be semiconscious, their blood alcohol level can still rise creating a life-threatening situation. When in doubt, don't guess — call for help ASAP! By the way, Alcohol Awareness Week is Oct. 21 to Oct. 25, and you can catch a panel discussion covering all the issues at noon Oct. 23 at the University Center Faculty Club. More information also is provided throughout the week at the UC, Rec Center and campus dining halls.

Q: I notice both men and women are beginning to smoke cigars. It looks cool. Is it as dangerous as smoking a cigarette?

A: Cigars have in the last couple of years become an "in" kind of thing to do, particularly with Hollywood types.

Even though cigars are not inhaled, they can get people through cancer of the mouth and/or throat. There is really no difference in cigar or cigarette smoke (except for those of us who cannot abide the smell of a cigar but might barely tolerate the smoke from a cigarette).

Both kinds of smoke contain formaldehyde and carbon monoxide. If you want to be cool, try working out and making yourself look healthy since nothing is a worse turnoff than cigarette or cigar breath.

United Nations has duty to war crimes

The Dallas Morning News on U.N. Tribunals:

To a nation of channel surfers, the atrocities in Rwanda or Bosnia are unpleasant scenes to be blinked away with the flick of a remote control. The evil is often too overwhelming.

But civilized nations, and nations aspiring to civility, have a duty to fight war crimes. And so workers from more than 40 countries are documenting mass graves and interviewing survivors of systematic rape. These investigators report to the United Nations international crimes tribunals on Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia.

The tribunals' most passionate defender may be Richard Goldstone. A South African judge, he was chief prosecutor for the Bosnian tribunal and now leads the Rwandan panel. Mr. Goldstone is a nondescript, middle-aged man whose careful sentences belie his intensity.

He spoke recently to students, professors and alumni at Stanford University's School of Law in Palo Alto, Calif.

International humanitarian law is meant to protect innocent noncombatants during conflicts, he said.

War, like boxing, is by its nature cruel. Both probably should be banned. But as long as war and boxing exist, they need rules. The United Nations tribunals are meant to enforce the rules of war.

These first-ever U.N. tribunals have raised hopes for impartial justice among survivors, he said. That expectation of justice can forestall an endless cycle of retribution. If the tribunals prove ineffective, atrocities may resume.

He argued that U.N. peacekeepers should help locate and arrest suspected war criminals.

Students should take advantage of week

To the editor: If you haven't noticed outside the University Center this week, there is a wrecked vehicle. This vehicle is the result of an accident in 1989 that took the life of a 17-year-old and eventually the life of his passenger.

Accidents, like this one, are senseless and overwhelming on one's emotions. Unlike some other accidents that occur on our state's highways, this one was not alcohol-related. This accident could have been avoided, if safety precautions had been taken by all parties involved.

I write these few lines so other people, whether they are high school students, college students or regular drivers, can take safety measures to ensure they and their loved ones do not have to endure what these young men's families had to endure.

Students, faculty and staff members of this great institution, as we observe National Alcohol Awareness Week, I challenge you to slow down, take your time, plan ahead, take time to stop and reflect on this: What if this was me? Lastly, but foremost, Remember: If you drink, drink in moderation and never, never get behind the wheel of any vehicle and try to drive. Life is a precious commodity, just as these two young men's lives were precious to their families, their friends and our world.

Newspaper goofs with Harris misidentification

To the editor: This letter is in response to a factual error presented in "Global diversity focus of conference (10/14/96)."

The article states, "Harris, a NASA astronaut, was the first black American in space." This statement is incorrect. Although Dr. Harris was the first African American to perform a space walk, he was preceded in space by other African Americans. The first was Guion S. Bluford, Challenger STS-8, Aug. 30 to Sept. 5, 1983. During Endeavor STS-47, Sept. 12-20, 1992, Mae C. Jemison became the first African American woman astronaut.

I don't understand why the news media refuses to accurately report information regarding the space program. I worked in the news production department of a local TV affiliate and witnessed the same level of incompetence there. This is basic information that everyone has access to. Why can't the news media present it accurately? If it weren't for space science and technology, the communications industry as we currently know it wouldn't exist. The news media should exhibit respect for an industry that makes its own possible.

Democrats, Republicans visit local supporters

Combest shares views with Tech students

by Tomi Rodgers/UD
 GOP presidential hopeful Bob Dole may do a better job balancing the budget than President Clinton, said Congressman Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, to a group of Tech students and faculty Tuesday.

Combest, who is running for re-election against Democrat John Sawyer, gave a brief speech and answered informal questions during Tuesday's Texas Tech College Republicans meeting.

"The public can decide on their own what to do in their lives and don't need the government to tell them what to do," Combest said.

"We (Republicans) are going to cut back on taxes, and within seven years, balance the budget. They (Democrats) have been spending beyond our means. We can increase growth, but spend it within our means." Todd Bearden, press liaison for the College Republicans and a senior political science major from Richardson, said he thought Combest's speech was well-received by the audience.

"I have seen a lot of him in this area," Bearden said. "He really seems in touch with his district. He is a solid, honest person."

Combest was a second-ranking Republican on the House Agricultural Committee in 1993-94 and a co-chairman of the House Intelligence Committee with Dan Glickman, D-Kansas, in 1994. Together he and Glickman compiled a special report on the Aldrich Ames spy case, which involved leakage of information from the Pentagon to the Israeli Embassy.

As a member of the 104th Congress, Combest helped Tech by supporting and working to bring $8.5 million to Tech's Plant Stress Lab. He said he is a proponent of the Conservation Reserve Program and supports the new Farm Bill, although he said he is not sure how the bill is going to work.

"(We should) let farmers plant for the market instead of the program," Combest said.

Neale Pearson, Tech political science professor and self-proclaimed "sympathetic Democrat," said Combest may not be as well-suited as his more moderate counterparts.

"Combest represents active business and farming interests in West Texas relatively well," Pearson said. "Charles Stenholm (of the 17th District), might be a better chair for the House Agricultural Committee than Combest because of Stenholm's ability to work with moderate and liberal Democrats and Republicans."

Combest answered questions about tax cuts to education to the possibility of Clinton winning re-election.

"When it comes down to it, the character, trust and morals are what the people base their decisions on," he said. "The process the candidate goes through to make a decision and reach it fairly is all that matters."

Parties battle over college voters' support

by Kristi Rieken/UD
 With the 1996 presidential election less than two weeks away, many college students are taking a hard look at the Democratic and Republican candidates to see which one will serve them best.

Both parties claim they are best suited to meet the needs of students. Gary Mauro, Texas Clinton/Gore '96 Advisory Committee chairman, said Bill Clinton and Al Gore have much to offer college students. Mauro spoke to the Texas Victory Democrats at the Lubbock Democratic Party Headquarters Tuesday.

"A major benefit Clinton and Gore offer students is that they have worked to keep the student loan program, while the Republicans have tried to kill it," Mauro said. "If I hadn't got a student loan, I wouldn't have been able to get my bachelor's degree much less the law degree I have."

Cameron Graham, chairman of the Texas Tech College Republicans and a junior history major from Lubbock, refuted Mauro's claim that Republicans want to cut student loan programs.

Graham argued that a presidential candidate would not do something that would impede the nation's growth in such a way.

Although Texas often is seen as a conservative state, Mauro said that a Dallas Morning News poll showed Clinton to have a slight lead after the most recent presidential debate. Along with leading in Texas, the Democrats have an advantage over the Republicans in the 18-24 age group, Mauro said.

"The polls are looking pretty good," he said. "We lead in that age group because we focus a lot of attention on education, the economy and the environment. Those are three areas students are very concerned with."

The president, vice president and first lady will be campaigning in Texas next week, Mauro said. The exact locations have not been announced.

One Tech student said he does not believe Mauro's claims and thinks a Republican would be a better choice for him as a student.

"I really don't think Clinton will be good for us," said Andy Mitchell, a junior theater major from Amarillo.

"I don't like what he stands for, and I don't think he will follow through with his claims to improve education or the environment."

Graham said he thinks one reason college students should choose Dole for president is because of his service to the country.

"When you look at a man who has given so much to his country, a college student can't help but give his or her all to the country," Graham said.

"A lot of people scoff when we talk about Dole's record as a war hero — but I see it as another reason why he would be a good leader."

President urges NATO expansion

DETROIT (AP) — President Clinton urged U.S. allies Tuesday to admit a group of former Soviet-dominated nations into NATO by 1999, promising defense against outside aggressors.

Clinton raised the idea at a 1994 NATO summit; 1999 marks NATO's 50th anniversary and the 10th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin wall.

 ton, Keith said.

When she first arrived in Washington, D.C., Keith said her former classmate Russell Laird was instrumental in helping her adjust to the new surroundings of the big city.

Keith worked with Laird when he was Tech's SA president, and he was working for Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, when she arrived at the Capitol.

Laird said his experience as SA president and working with the university administration has been invaluable.

"The university is kind of a small community in itself, and it is very similar to the way the federal government works," he said.

Laird took an unlikely road to Washington. The Idalou native made his first trip to the nation's capital in high school through the Future Farmers of America Washington Leadership Conference, where he met Combest.

Ever since that first meeting, Laird said he knew he was interested in a career in Washington, D.C. When Laird graduated from Tech in May 1992, he was hired to work in Combest's office.

"Moving 27 hours away from home is a big adjustment," Laird said.

"But other people from Texas are up here and all the people from Texas sort of hang together."

tal or physical faculties by reason of alcohol, according to the Texas Penal Code.

Public intoxication occurs if a person appears in a public place while intoxicated to a degree the person may endanger another.

Public intoxication is a Class C misdemeanor, and a DWI is a Class B misdemeanor and can lead to 72 hours of confinement.

Patricia Honacki, assistant dean of students, said the majority of the cases handled at the Dean of Students Office are alcohol-related incidents.

Housing and Dining Services and the University Police Department can refer students to the Dean of Students Office for possible alcohol violations, Honacki said.

Alcohol regulations for Greek organizations are designed by the Panhellenic and Interfraternity councils, Honacki said.

Policies regarding alcohol at Greek functions are designed to reduce the amount of alcohol related incidents within the Greek system, said Paul Tubbs, public relations chairman for the Interfraternity Council and a senior broadcast journalism major from Denton.

Greek rules limit the amount of alcohol each student can take to a Greek event, Tubbs said. Alcohol is checked before each event and cannot be removed from the premises until the next day.

"We also have contracts with certified security guards and off-duty sheriffs that are required to be at the party location," he said.

"All our requirements must be fulfilled, or the event will not be recognized."

IFC and Panhellenic each have their own judicial board to decide what actions to take against a student who violates Greek policies, Tubbs said. Penalties include monetary fines and probation from other Greek activities.

Nyla Ptomey, associate director of Tech's Housing and Dining Services, said no alcohol is allowed in the residence halls — not even empty alcoholic beverage containers.

If a hall staff member discovers a resident or a student with alcohol while in the residence hall, the individual will have to pour out the alcohol and will receive a documentation, Ptomey said. The residence hall director will review the documentation and will conduct a hearing with the individual.

After the hearings, the hall director will decide what consequences the resident will face, she said. Sanctions vary from student to student.

Some students are referred to the Dean of Students Office following the hearing, depending on the situation, she said.

"We have a variance of sanctions because we look at each case individually," Ptomey said. "We decide on sanctions that will educate students why their behaviors were inappropriate."

Consequences students may face include community service, residence hall probation, writing a paper or designing a bulletin board about alcohol, she said.

Most students are required to attend an alcohol awareness class, Ptomey said. The class is about an hour and a half long and deals with issues about alcohol and what it can do to a person's body and behavior.

"The class also deals with the consequences of social implications and binge drinking," she said.

"One who has been drinking, has affected behaviors, but they're still responsible for their actions."

Residence halls offer programs about alcohol use and abuse, she said. They offer information about the laws and responsibilities of alcohol.

"It's (alcohol) an issue we deal with," Ptomey said. "Alcohol abuse is a problem in society today dealt with by all ages."

California wild fires continue march toward Pacific Ocean

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Fire fueled by strong winds marched from the hills near Los Angeles toward the Malibu shore Monday, sending thousands fleeing from a 2-mile-wide wall of flames that made the ocean glow red.

The firestorm was one of five wind-whipped wildfires that charred about 13,000 acres across Southern California, destroying or damaging at least 77 homes. Most of the homes were in Carlsbad, about 40 miles northeast of San Diego.

"Everybody is trying to leave Malibu. Everybody is scared, they're really scared," said Steve Aminian, owner of the Coogies cafe in Malibu's main business district, which lost electricity.

Flaming embers soared several miles ahead of the 9,000-acre fire, which burned vegetation on its 8-mile rampage from the Santa Monica Mountains west of Los Angeles to the outskirts of Malibu.

Although the trendy Pacific Coast city is known for the million-dollar mansions of such celebrities as Bruce Willis and Sylvester Stallone, the fire mainly threatened Pepperdine University, beachfront bungalows and mountainside homes.

A massive plume of brown smoke rose several thousand feet and floated ominously over Malibu.

"We're advising people to pack up their things," said city spokeswoman Sara Maurice. "Malibu has a natural, built-in fire break. Unfortunately, it's the Pacific Ocean."

“Malibu has a natural, built-in fire break. Unfortunately, it's the Pacific Ocean.”

Sara Maurice, Malibu city spokesman

Pepperdine students living on campus were evacuated to a makeshift emergency center in the school cafeteria.

Flames burned through the campus' natural vegetation, but no buildings were destroyed.

Thousands of children at area schools were evacuated.

A firefighting force of nearly 2,000 was called in to battle the blaze. Two planes and five helicopters made frequent water drops on the flames.

Meantime, in Carlsbad, wind-driven flames destroyed about 50 homes as authorities scrambled to evacuate scores of residents from the path of a 2,400-acre fire.

"We're writing off the houses that are already on fire and getting to the ones we can save," said Fire Battalion Chief Sonny Hilliard. "We're overwhelmed. Most of the area has already been evacuated."

Residents used garden hoses, swimming pools, even ice chest water to squirt their rooftops in a frantic bid to save their homes from a wind-driven firestorm.

"It looks like a war zone at the moment," said Dean McCormick, 43, as he was helping fight the flames.

Judge orders convicted child sex offender to post sign at his house

DALLAS (AP) — A judge who ordered an admitted sex offender to post a sign at his home identifying himself says she isn't trying to brand the man, but, to borrow a phrase from director Spike Lee, do the right thing.

The district attorney in Tarrant County, where the case originated, has asked Attorney General Dan Morales to determine whether a judge can require such a notice. State District Judge Sharen Wilson said Tuesday she believes it's appropriate in certain instances to require a sign be posted, especially if the offender has a child in the home.

"Here's the problem: Kids have kids over," Wilson said, explaining that those parents should know an offender's background. "There is no other way to define the risk."

Morales, who hasn't reviewed the case pending before the opinions committee, said Tuesday he isn't aware of any specific constitutional violation.

Forty-nine states already operate or are establishing their own registries to track sex offenders, as mandated by the 1994 anti-crime law.

Texas law requires residents to be told when sex offenders move into their neighborhoods. But at least one report earlier this year suggested that the legislation hasn't made the intended impact.

"I think that's great as far as it goes," Wilson said of the notification laws, "but quite frankly, it's difficult to get that information and you can't call and ask about a particular person."

Wilson isn't alone in meting out unusual punishment. Two years ago in Houston, a piano teacher accused of fondling two students was ordered to give away his $12,000 piano and post a warning sign on his house.

Rebels assassinate Burundi governor

BUJUMBURA, Burundi (AP) — The Tutsi military governor of a province dominated by Hutu rebels was assassinated while on a campaign trip to rally villager support, a Burundi government spokesman said Tuesday.

Lt. Col. Marcel Sinarinze was killed Monday as he was traveling in a convoy near the Zairian border town of Buganda, 25 miles northwest of Bujumbura, said Evold Banzaze, a spokesman for Burundi's military ruler, Maj. Pierre Buyoya.

Four soldiers and one civilian also were killed; another soldier was seriously wounded.

"We are certain this attack was carried out by Hutu rebels who have been fighting in the area during the last few days," Banzaze said.

Sinarinze, governor of northwestern Cibitoke province, had been in the area to encourage Hutu villagers to cooperate with the Tutsi-dominated military, he said.

The province is a stronghold of Hutu rebels fighting the military for control of the tiny African nation on the north end of Lake Tanganyika.

Sinarinze's predecessor was assassinated in May and a legislator from the province was killed in April. In August 1995, gunmen ambushed U.S. Ambassador Bob Kruger in Cibitoke. Kruger survived the attack, but a priest who was with him was killed.

Sinarinze, a political moderate, was a longtime ally of Buyoya, who seized power in a coup July 25. Buyoya has pledged to stop the ethnic violence in Burundi and has appointed new military governors in most provinces.

More than 150,000 people, mostly civilians, have died in ethnic violence since 1993, when Burundi's first democratically elected Hutu president was assassinated by Tutsi paratroopers.

Emir of Qatar names son crown prince

DOHA, Qatar (AP) — The emir of Qatar has named the third of his four sons to be crown prince after passing a decree that permits any of his sons to succeed him, not just the eldest.

Sheik Hamad bin Khalifa Al Thani named his 18-year-old son, Sheik Jassem bin Hamad Al Thani, to be his successor after consulting with other members of the ruling family, including his eldest son, the official Qatar News Agency said. It gave no other details.

Sheik Hamad seized power in this tiny Persian Gulf state in June 1995 when he ousted his father in a bloodless palace coup. The former emir, Sheik Khalifa bin Hamad Al Thani, was on vacation in Europe at the time.

The new crown prince, Sheik Jassem, is fluent in English and French, graduated this year from Britain's Sandhurst Military Academy, and is a lieutenant in the Qatari armed forces, the news agency said.

According to Qatari sources who spoke on condition of anonymity, the elder sons were not considered to have the qualities needed to lead the emirate. Sheik Jassem was chosen for his leadership qualities and because he is better educated, they said.

A settlement reached Sunday between the emir and his ousted father over billions of dollars in missing state funds appears to have paved the way for naming the new crown prince, the sources said.

According to the agreement, the former emir is welcome to return to the country as the "father" of all Qataris.

Qatar, whose citizens number about 200,000 people, is located on the world's third largest natural gas reserves.

Venereal diseases on the rise in Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Sexually transmitted diseases have spread to near-epidemic scale in Russia and medical institutions are unable to cope.

The number of Russians infected with syphilis this year has risen by 60 percent in comparison with the previous year, Alexei Karpeyev, head of the health ministry's venereal diseases department, told top health officials Tuesday.

Of every 100,000 Russians, 177 are now infected with syphilis, compared to an average of three per 100,000 in European countries, the ITAR-Tass news agency quoted him as saying.

Karpeyev attributed the rapid spread of venereal diseases to the growing number of prostitute rings in Russia.

Tech student struggles to overcome alcohol problem

by Sara Kattawar/UD

For some alcoholics, it takes more than a few drinks to admit they have a drinking problem.

Mike grew up in a normal family with two happily married parents. His family never moved around and went to church every Sunday. However, underneath what seemed to be a wonderful life, a dangerous addiction slowly was ripping the family apart.

Mike is a recovering alcoholic, and a member of the Texas Tech Center for Study of Addiction 12-step alcohol recovery program. He agreed to be interviewed under the condition that his last name was withheld.

"I drank and partied in high school," Mike said. "It was easy to find alcohol; either we would go to places that sold to minors or asked older people to buy it for us."

As he grew older, Mike lost sight of his responsibilities and began to concentrate more on his party weekends.

"I became more concerned about where the next party would be, not getting my history homework done," Mike said.

His drinking problem also adversely affected his relationship with his parents.

"My family didn't condone drinking," Mike said. "I withdrew from my parents and we got into many fights."

During his senior year in high school, Mike began to have trouble with school officials and eventually dropped out of school.

Drinking Habits

Answer yes or no to the following questions.

1. Have you ever missed a class as a result of drinking?
2. Have you ever felt you should cut down on your drinking?
3. Have you ever felt bad or guilty about your drinking?
4. Have you ever been in conflict with the law because of intoxication?
5. Do you ever chug drinks or play drinking games looking for an immediate buzz?
6. Do you drink often to the state of intoxication?
7. Have you ever driven an automobile while under the influence of alcohol?
8. Does your tolerance seem to be increasing?
9. Have people ever annoyed you by criticizing your drinking?
10. Do you ever use alcohol to help you "cope with life"?
11. Have you ever used alcohol to help you get to sleep?
12. Do you ever drink in the morning or alone?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, you may want to consider talking to someone about this checklist.

be a normal person," Mike said. "I was not aware of what was going on, although I thought I was in control of my life."

The drugs and alcohol took a toll on his marriage, and after a bitter fight with his wife, she left him. It was the same night that Mike was pulled over, charged with driving while intoxicated and thrown in jail for violation of his probation. Mike already had been on probation for a previous DWI conviction.

Sitting alone in the jail cell, Mike realized there was a problem and decided it was time for him to get help.

Under the influence of alcohol, Mike turned into another person. Alcohol began to run his life and make him do things he ordinarily would not do.

"I became a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," Mike said. "Once, I hit my baby boy because he was crying, something I would never do when sober."

The clinical definition of an alcoholic is a person who does not have any control over their drinking, said Debbie Frapp, assistant director for the Center for Study of Addictions.

Alcohol affects the personality of the person who is drinking, Frapp said.

"With college students, it may just be missing classes," Frapp said. "For others it can be as serious as letting inhibitions go and doing something they would ordinarily not do when sober."

Mike joined a 12-step program after the violation of his probation. Through the meetings, he was able to turn his life around. Mike soon realized it was possible to have a life without alcohol.

"I discovered that because my mind is not blurred by alcohol," he said. "Now, I remember what I did the night before, I don't have to worry about jail, and I am no longer hurting people."

Mike believes he is a productive member of society and is no longer a loser.

"The 12-step program makes me feel like a human being again," Mike said.

The road to recovery was not easy, he said. The first step was admitting he had a problem and wanting to get help for his problem.

"A person with the addiction has to want to recover along with needing the treatment," Mike said.

Mike has been sober since April 8, 1995. Since that time, he has received his GED and enrolled as a student at Tech.

"Life is better now because I am doing and thinking about things differently," he said. "Now I am looking to a higher power to help me through things and I am improving my relationship with my creator. I don't have to drink and medicate to make things better."

Mike advises anyone who thinks they have a drinking problem to get help.

"Usually if someone thinks they may have a problem, they usually have one," he said. "Find help from the 12-step program, the Center for Addiction Studies or talk to someone."

Mike said he wants to emphasize how much better his life is without alcohol.

"Today, I can be happy with who I am and without alcohol," Mike said.

"Now I am honest with people and I can take responsibility for my actions."

'Complete Works of God' less than holy

by Sara Kattawar/UD

For the actors of the Reduced Shakespeare Company, two hours was enough time to present the entire works of the Bible — that is, the abridged version.

Three men performed biblical verses Tuesday night, with the help of the holy word of God, several audience members and strange props.

Throughout the performance, the actors tied biblical passages to the present times.

Some audience members laughed at many of the references made by the actors, while others were shocked by the lewd comparisons.

The show was split into two parts, with a 15-minute intermission. The first half was a presentation of the Old Testament, and the second half was a presentation of the New Testament. Although the first half left many audience members uneasy, the majority of them enjoyed the second half much better.

During the second half of the show, the cast involved the audience, and basically summed up the New Testament quickly. It was less crude and easier for the audience to understand.

Game, set, match for Sabatini

NEW YORK (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini, who parlayed her glamorous profile and classic strokes into one of the most lucrative careers in tennis history, will announce her retirement Thursday in the city of her two greatest triumphs.

Winless for nearly two years and coming off a straight-sets, first-round loss to Jennifer Capriati in Switzerland, the 26-year-old Argentine will call it quits at a news conference at Madison Square Garden.

The WTA Tour would not confirm the retirement, saying only the news conference was "major" and concerned Sabatini's "future" in tennis.

A source close to Sabatini said the retirement will take effect immediately, and there are no plans for her to play in selected tournaments or make a farewell tour.

Sabatini captured her lone Grand Slam title, the U.S. Open in 1990, in New York.

"She definitely could have won more Grand Slams, for sure," Monica Seles said Tuesday. "I don't know why she didn't; she had so much talent."

"Some of the volleys she could hit were unbelievable. It was just pure talent and great touch."

Soccer team ensures winning season

Incoming: Freshman goalkeeper Lizzie Pruitt blocks a shot at a Texas Tech soccer practice. The Red Raiders remained at No. 7 in the Central Region.

by Brent Dirks/UD

The Texas Tech soccer team assured itself a winning season for the third consecutive year after a week-end win over Southwest Missouri State. But the Red Raiders remained seventh in the Central Region Poll released Tuesday.

"For the third year in a row, Texas Tech women's soccer will have a winning season, even if we were to lose our other games, God forbid," said Tech coach Diane Nichols.

"That's a nice little bit of relief by that win."

The third-year coach said she was happy with the way the team played in the 5-1 victory over the Southwest Missouri Bears Sunday.

Forward Amaris Weeks-Smith had her first career hat trick in the 5-1 victory. Tech's leading scorer, forward Kristy Frantz, added two goals to her season total of 16 goals and 39 points.

"Amaris really did a nice job of getting three goals in a game," Nichols said.

Nichols said she would have liked to have beaten Baylor, but Tech could not contain Bear forward Molly Cameron, who scored Baylor's only goal in the 1-0 victory.

"Molly Cameron leads the nation in goals, and we couldn't stop her," Nichols said. "We knew that was probably going to be the key to deny Molly the ball and not let her get a shot off. When Molly gets the ball at her feet, she finds a way of finding the back of the net."

Peterson

Weeks-Smith

Midfielder Ashlyn Peterson, who guarded Cameron during the game, said Cameron is a great player.

"The goal was just a miscommunication between me and the sweeper (Jamie Woods)," Peterson said.

Weeks-Smith said Tech should have won the game against Baylor.

"We should have won," Weeks-Smith said. "We dominated them for the whole game."

After the Baylor loss, Tech's Big 12 Conference Tournament chances still are not decided, Nichols said. This weekend's games against Iowa State and national powerhouse Nebraska are important, she said.

"That hurt is a little bit going into the Big 12 standings going into the tournament in St. Louis in November," Nichols said. "So what we have to do is try to come back and win one of the two games that we have this weekend."

Red Raider men's golf team struggles at home

The Texas Tech men's golf team continued to struggle, finishing in a tie for 11th place as the host school of the Red Raider Intercollegiate tournament played Monday and Tuesday at the Hillcrest Country Club in Lubbock.

The tournament was originally scheduled for 54 holes, but Monday's second round was canceled because of rain and cold weather. Tech and 16 other schools finished the final 18 holes Tuesday.

The Red Raiders entered the final round 21 strokes behind leader Kent

State and failed to make up any ground Tuesday.

Tech finished 23 strokes behind Iowa State, who came from two behind Kent State to win first place by two strokes.

Tech suited up five players for the tournament, led by seniors Patrick Barley and Chris Hill.

Barley fired an even-par 72 Tuesday to finish in a 17th-place tie. Hill, who like Barley shot a 76 Monday, closed out his tournament with a three-over 75 for 32nd place.

Laird Sparks, Tom Baldwin and Philip Tate rounded out the Red Raiders squad. Sparks finished 45th at nine-over, Baldwin at 11-over in 57th place, and Tate at 12-over in 61st place.

Three Big 12 Conference teams other than Tech participated in the tournament. Iowa State finished first, while Kansas State and Missouri finished behind Tech in 14th and 16th place, respectively.

Drake was the favorite coming into the tournament, Tech coach Tommy Wilson said, having won two of its first three tournaments. However, Drake finished in a tie with the Red Raiders for 11th place.

The top-three finishers were Jason Knutzon from Iowa State, Alex Maynard of Arkansas-Little Rock and Ben Curtis from Kent State.

Knutzon's two-day total of five-under topped Maynard and Curtis, who finished in a tie for second at even par.

The Red Raiders have one tournament left on their fall schedule, Nov. 8-9 in the Harvey Penick Intercollegiate, to be played in Austin.

Jimmy, Jerry praise each other before crucial game

IRVING (AP) — Whatever their feelings for each other may be, Jerry Jones and Jimmy Johnson weren't saying.

Jones, the Dallas Cowboys owner who hired and fired Johnson after five-year tenure that included two Super Bowl titles, said: "Our feelings make no difference how this game comes out."

Johnson, in a national conference call Tuesday, agreed: "My relationship with the owner and coach (Barry Switzer) have nothing to do with this game. Obviously, there's some emotional ties with a lot of players and assistant coaches I have a lot of feelings for."

Johnson, who took over the Dolphins this year from Don Shula, said he doesn't have to tell his players how he feels heading into Sunday's showdown between Dallas and Miami.

"Our players understand this is an emotional game for me," Johnson said. "What is important is we're 4-3 and trying to get back on the winning track and playoffs."

Jones praised Johnson, his former teammate at the University of Arkansas, although their divorce came because they couldn't get along.

"Jimmy inspired me, he brought out the best in me," Jones said at his weekly luncheon. "We have a competition this Sunday. I'm not about to tarnish what we did for five years. If I did that, I couldn't look in the mirror."

Johnson said he still has a lot of respect for Jones despite their feud.

"I've always said he's the greatest businessman I've ever known in my life," Johnson said. "Jerry was always very good. He always relied on people who had expertise. We had no problems there."

Jones described his relationship with Johnson as "no relationship."

He said: "We worked together five years. We shared something special for five years, low times and exhilarating times. I have a lot of respect for him and I always have."

"I felt we could work together and we did. The facts are life has been good to both of us since Jimmy left."

Said Johnson: "I decided I wanted to part company and move to South Florida. I was pleased then and I'm pleased now."

Jones said all the hype around the game is enjoyable.

"This game is getting a lot of visibility and I like that," he said. "But we're behind the 8-ball at 4-3 and I don't like that."

Jones added: "I'm glad to have Jimmy back in the NFL. Nobody likes sizzle and entertainment like I do and Jimmy brings that to the NFL."

Red Raider fall sports set standard in Big 12

Christy Apple/sports reporter

The fall semester is halfway through, and Texas Tech has shown it can rise to the occasion of entering the Big 12 Conference.

Many people were skeptical of the Red Raiders' performance when they entered the "Big League." If people want to go strictly by records and statistics, then Tech is faring pretty well.

Tech's football team just took on the Nebraska Cornhuskers this weekend. Of course in the end, the better team always knows how to pull out the win. Even though they may be almighty, the Huskers really did not earn any respect from me.

If you look at Tech's golf program, the women have improved and putted their way into the top 10 of every tournament they have played. Many people do not realize Tech has one of the best women's golf programs in the nation.

I understand it is not as exciting as hitting that 54-yard field goal and it barely making it through the uprights. But just wait until you get older and this sport becomes more appealing to you. You may catch yourself bragging about the time when you were in college, and the golf team at Tech was incredible.

The volleyball team had an impeccable 15-0 record for the first 15 games of the season. Now that the Red Raiders have started playing conference, their performance has not dropped off much.

The early challenges were against Texas and Texas A&M, two games the Red Raiders lost. But national champion Nebraska visits Lubbock this weekend, and this game will show if the volleyball team can put on the big people shoes and play at the Cornhuskers' level.

For some sports, the midseason records are close to .500, but the records do not show what has happened during the season. The soccer team has few followers, but the number increases weekly. The Red Raiders' season is nearing its end, but they still have a grueling road ahead.

For the sports that have not hit their respective playing surfaces yet, they will have a tough challenge in trying to match the fall sports, assuming they all finish with good seasons.

The basketball programs should not have a problem dominating the Big 12, along with the baseball, tennis and golf's other season. I did not forget the softball team except with a record of 4-41 last season, I didn't think I really had to say much.

Christy Apple is a junior public relations major from Plano.

Rugby embraced by women at Tech

by Sebastian Kitchen/UD

Members of the Texas Tech women's rugby team hit just like the men do — and they like it.

"Rugby is a very male-dominated sport," said team captain Roberta Lindhorst. "It takes a certain mentality to be women who play contact sports. We have to be very aggressive."

In its second year, the women's rugby team is one of Tech's newest club sports. The players play full contact without pads — just like the men do — and they even wear mouthpieces to protect them while they are playing.

"We are very feminine, but when we are on the field, we are all business," said team member Merritt King.

Last year the team did not have enough players to compete and was forced to only play a few games because of the lack of players. The team had to combine with other teams so it would have enough people to play.

This season the team has 25 players compared to seven last year. Although the team is well-stocked, membership is still open to anyone interested in playing.

Roberta Lindhorst is one of only three returning players. The other returning players are Paula Lindhorst and Jena Wisniewski.

"Everyone else either graduated, married or moved," Lindhorst said.

The team plays year-round with fall, spring and summer seasons. It plays two or three games and participates in two or three tournaments during the season. So far this fall, the team has played a home game and competed in two tournaments; one in Dallas and one in Albuquerque, N.M.

"We are a new team who is doing really well," said team member Dottie Bargas.

"Other schools in the area are glad we have a team."

Even though Tech is not a member of any rugby unions, the team has a coach who volunteers to help them. Joe Workman, who played rugby with the Tech men's team for several years, coaches the team and still plays with graduate students at the university.

"I did not do it to try to pick up women," Workman said.

"If I did, me being the coach would not have worked out after the first road trip."

Workman's roommate also played rugby at Tech. His roommate's girlfriend would sometimes play with the men and together, the three of them formed the team.

Workman said several people come out for the team this season and hopes they have even more next season.

"If we have another large turnout next season, we will have a full-blown program," Workman said.

"Anybody who does not think women should play contact sports should come out and watch them play. There is nothing more exciting than watching 15 women run around hitting 15 other women."

"We are very feminine, but when we are on the field we are all business."

Merritt King, women's rugby team member

Yankees put end to Braves' dream of sweep

ATLANTA (AP) — Now this was what the New York Yankees were supposed to do all along.

Get six good innings from David Cone. Get a home run from Bernie Williams. And then let the bullpen do the rest.

It all came together for the Yankees on Tuesday night, and not a moment too soon. Their 5-2 win over Atlanta cut the Braves' lead to 2-1, and put the drama back into a World Series that was on the verge of becoming a walk-over.

"This was our formula," Cone said. "Get to the bullpen, get Bernie to get big hits, get a key defensive play." Relievers Mariano Rivera, Graeme Lloyd and John Wetteland finished off a victory that made the Yankees the first team ever to win six straight road games in the postseason.

"Sometimes, playing at home in the postseason isn't an advantage. You get so charged up that you lose focus of what you have to do," Yankees manager Joe Torre said.

"I think any time in a short series when you win, the momentum is on your side," Torre said.

"Hopefully, we can build on this."

The win ended New York's six-game losing streak in the World Series that dated to 1981 and stopped a five-game winning streak by the Braves during which they had outscored opponents 48-2.

"I think the mindset, generally, of the team was that we were a little bit embarrassed," Cone said.

New York will try to make it 7-0 away from Yankee Stadium on Wednesday night when Kenny Rogers pitches against Atlanta's Denny Neagle. Rogers originally was dropped from the rotation, but restored when a rainout took away the travel day and forced the Yankees to use four starters.

No team in baseball has overcome a 3-0 deficit in the postseason, and New York won't have to, either. After losing twice at home, the Yankees shook up their lineup, benching slumping Tino Martinez and hobbling Wade Boggs and Paul O'Neill, and Torre's moves worked.

Darryl Strawberry, Cecil Fielder and Charlie Hayes stepped in and each made contributions that helped the Yankees take a 2-1 lead after six innings against Tom Glavine.

The Yankees broke it open with a three-run eighth, highlighted by Williams' homer and Fielder's double off Greg McMichael. Williams' sixth postseason homer tied the record set by Bob Robertson of Pittsburgh in 1971.

Williams, MVP of the AL championship series, had been hitless in the first two games before an RBI single in the opening inning.

Cone stayed ahead with nasty breaking pitches, buckling the knees of several Braves hitters for six innings. He gave up four hits, the same total allowed by Glavine in seven innings.

"David Cone is still tough, even when he's losing his stuff, he can get you out," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "He's not going to give in, and he didn't give in."

Cone's key moment came in the sixth, when the Braves loaded the bases with one out. He got Fred McGriff on a popup, walked Ryan Klesko to force home a run that drew Atlanta within 2-1 and retired NLCS

MVP Javy Lopez on a foul popup.

It was Cone's first career win in the World Series and his biggest victory since missing four months this season after surgery for an aneurysm in his pitching arm.

The Yankees showed they expected it to be a low-scoring game when they had Derek Jeter, the second batter of the game, bunt following a leadoff walk by Tim Lincecum.

New York, second in the majors in fielding, got surprisingly good defense from Fielder.

Playing first base for only the 10th time since being acquired from Detroit on July 31, Fielder held his own with the glove.

He started a double play in the first and handled a couple other difficult chances, although he wasn't able to catch a foul pop near the tarpaulin later in the game.

Cone retired nine in a row early, then faced his toughest spot in the sixth with the Yankees ahead 2-0.

With Rivera and Lloyd walking up, Torre went to the mound to talk to Cone. Torre stuck with his starter, and his patience paid off.

Red Raider spikers climb polls

The Texas Tech volleyball continued its slow ascent in the national polls Tuesday.

The Red Raiders climbed four spots to No. 20 in the American Volleyball Coaches Association/USA Today Top-25 poll. They also were one of only three teams to receive votes in the Volleyball Magazine Top-20 poll. Tech's No. 20 ranking is the highest for the team since November 1992. This also is the fourth straight week Tech has been in the national polls.

Other Big 12 Conference schools in the AVCA/USA Today Top-25 poll are No. 5 Nebraska, No. 9 Texas, No. 10 Texas A&M and No. 23 Kansas State. Tech has not played Nebraska, has lost to Texas and Texas A&M, and has beaten Kansas State.

Intramural Golf Champs named

The Recreational Sports Low Ball Golf Tournament was this past weekend at the Elm Grove Course. Thirty-two teams participated in the one-day event. The Greek Black division was won with a score of 66 by the Kappa Sig team of Sky Bradshaw and Kevin Rackers. The Phi Delt team of Tyler Ince and Josh Myer took second place with a 66, losing on the seventh hole of the score-card playoff. Third place went to the Kappa Sig team of Kayle Lukert and Cody Jarrat, who shot a score of 68.

The Greek red division was won by the Phi Psi team of Eric Day and Scott Dahlen, with a score of 69. The other Phi Psi team of Michael Brock and Ruben Campos won second place a second hole score-card playoff over the Theta Chi team of John Birk and Mike Warren. Both teams shot a 76.

The Open division was won by the team of Marc Byerly and Bryce Harris with a score of 69. Second place was won by Scott Gibson and Chris Schmitt with a 70. Third place was again decided on a score-card playoff when two teams both shot a 71. Adrian Cano and Luis Ramirez won over the team of Nathan Singley and Jason Neuman.

Winners in all three division are now eligible for an intramural T-shirt the next golf tournament is scheduled for the spring with a mixed scramble.

Circuit workshop today

Muscular strength and endurance are an important component of fitness and a Circuit Workshop is an easy way to accomplish this. Come to the Fitness/Wellness Center at 2 p.m. today for a one-hour circuit workshop. Cost is $1.

Lotsa Pasta tomorrow night

It is not too late to register for an educational eating experience. For $4, you can try several different nutritious pasta dishes and learn the importance of carbohydrates in the diet. So get in your Thursday night workout and then come eat healthy. You must register by today at 742-3828.

Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week begins

Oct. 20-26 is National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week. Check out the car in front of the University Center, the information table in the University Center, Rec Center and several residence halls and attend the panel discussion at noon Wednesday in the UC.

Try out the interactive alcohol information computer program in the Rec Center. If you are legal age and choose to drink, please drink responsibly.

Whiffle Ball tournament soon

OK folks, Rec Sports has come up with another FREE, FUN recreational tournament — so put some laughter in your life, find five of your fun friends and enter the indoor whiffle ball tournament scheduled for Nov. 1-2. Information/entry forms are available throughout the Rec Center. Entries limited, so sign up now.

Wanted: Pumpkin Decorators

Halloween isn't far away, and this is just a reminder of the annual Pumpkin Carving Contest. Bring your carved Pumpkin to the Rec Center on Halloween from 3-4 p.m. Or earlier if you can part with it — we love decorations. Winners receive a National High T-shirt.

Soccer leagues starts Sunday

Teams need to come by the Rec Sports Office to obtain their league schedule. Play starts Sunday, Oct. 27. Teams do not forget that the time changes Sunday morning. The Rec Sports office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in SRC. Remember if you play, you need shin guards.

Final Women N Weights begins

Register for the last Women N Weights class, which meets from 8-9 p.m. Tuesday/Thursdays beginning Oct. 29. The course will last for five weeks. This course will teach several different kinds of weight workouts and participants should be able to continue on their own when the course is completed. Call 742-3828 to register.

There is a $5 course fee.

Archery Tourney entries due

The Recreational Sports Department is accepting entries for the archery shoot now through Tuesday, Oct. 29. The tournament begins at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 30 in the Archery Room. Entrants may select from free style, bow hunter, free style limited, traditional A, bow hunter free style, bare bow and traditional B. Questions concerning the tournament should be directed to the intramural offices at 742-3351.

Racquetball Tourney Nov. 2

The annual fall Saturday Morning Live singles racquetball tournament will be Saturday, Nov. 2 on the Recreation Center courts. There are divisions for all levels of play for both male and female racquetballers.

Entries are due by Thursday, Oct. 31 and must be turned in at the Rec Sports office, room 202.

There is no charge for entering and tournament will be completed in one day. Levels of play are A, B and C for men and Open and B for women. For additional information, please contact Joe at 742-3351.

Sport Club hosts annual Blood Drive

It is mid-fall and time once again for the Blood drive. The Texas Blood Institute, this area's nonprofit community blood provider, will be at the Student Recreation Center from noon to 9 p.m. Oct. 30 and 31. The Blood Drive is sponsored by Rec Sports. Rec Sports will give the Sport Club with the most donated pints of blood a gift of $250 for use in their traveling expenses. For an appointment to donate, call Janda Ibbetson or Pee Wee Roberson at 742-3351. Please indicate which club you wish to donate the pint of blood.
