Regents may consider Tech expansion

by Kristi Rieken/UD

The Texas Tech Board of Regents may discuss plans to expand the university during a meeting at 2 p.m. today.

Although there has been no official word, one member of the board indicated that the possibility of establishing a Texas Tech University System could be discussed at today's meeting. Regent Alan White, from Lubbock, said he would not comment on the expansion rumors — yet.

"I don't have a comment on that right now, maybe I will comment on Friday," White said Tuesday.

Tech Chancellor John T. Montford, who will address the board today for the first time, said Thursday the issue could be discussed during today's meeting.

The meeting will be conducted in the board room on the second floor of the administration building. Committee meetings begin at 10 a.m. today in room 104 of the administration building.

As reported in The University Daily Wednesday, several Texas newspapers reported during the past week that Tech regents plan to create a statewide university system comparable to the University of Texas system.

The San Angelo Standard-Times reported Oct. 31 that the entire Texas State University System would be included in the new Tech system.

The Texas State University System includes Southwest Texas State University, Angelo State University, Sul Ross State University, Sam Houston State University and several branches of Lamar University.

Tech President Donald Haragan denied the newspapers' reports Tuesday, saying that a move to create a Tech university system is not being planned. Haragan said he did not know where the newspapers received the information, although he said the idea to create a statewide system has been discussed in the past.

Lamar-Port Arthur President W. Sam Monroe said Tuesday the school has received no official word of such a move and all information they have is what they read in the newspapers.

In other business, regents plan to discuss the approval of the establishment of a University Medical Center

Trust that will create 10 endowed faculty chairs at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. On Oct. 28, James P. Courtney, president and chief executive officer of UMC, announced the creation of the $10 million trust for that purpose. Other chairs in the School of Medicine also are expected to be established.

Regents also will discuss the final authorization of the sale of the Pyramid Plaza Office Building.

Tech officials indicated earlier this year that funds from the sale will be used to pay part of some high-level administrators salaries. During today's meeting regents will discuss the approval of an amendment extending Tech's contract with Lubbock Power and Light for electric and steam provisions by 10 years.

This comes less than one month after LP&L entered into a $4.25 million, 30-year advertising agreement with Tech. Another item on the regents' agenda is increasing Tech's proposed 1997 budget. When the 1996 budget was created, no money was allotted for the salary of the chancellor or members of his administration.

Ex-Saddle Tramps return home

Spirit organization celebrates 60 years of service to Tech

John Woolke/UD

Tradition keepers: The Saddle Tramps rejoice in Texas Tech's victory over Texas A&M Oct. 26. The Red Raiders beat the Aggies 13-10 in College Station. The Saddle Tramps were formed in 1936 by Tech student Arch Lamb to support men's athletics.

by Sara Kattawar/UD

The Saddle Tramps have served the Texas Tech administration and athletics for 60 years, since their founding by Tech alumnus Arch Lamb in 1936.

This weekend marks the 60th anniversary for the group, and hundreds of former Tech Saddle Tramp members will attend various activities hosted by the Texas Tech Ex-Students Association.

Jim Douglass, assistant director of the Ex-Students Association and former Saddle Tramp, said the event will take place this weekend, the same weekend of the Tech vs. University of Texas-Austin game.

The big weekend events are usually on the same weekend as either the Tech vs. Texas A&M or Tech vs. University of Texas, every five years.

"This is good for the former Tramps because they can come to the game and participate in the activities," Douglass said. "One of the things we will do is have the former Tramps go out onto the field with current members during the second half of the game."

The former Saddle Tramps enjoy being a part of the school spirit once again, Douglass said.

The former Saddle Tramps also will be invited to a luncheon. Organizers planned a dinner for the weekend celebration until the time for the football game changed, he said.

"The time has been changed to noon on Saturday, in the same location, the Holiday Inn Civic Center," Douglass said. "The emcee will be Arch Lamb and guest speakers include Texas Tech President Dr. Donald R. Haragan and Gerald Myers."

Other events scheduled for this weekend include a golf tournament, a pep rally and a barbecue, he said.

"We will also have a tent for the former tramps at Raider Alley, before the game," Douglass said.

The Saddle Tramps have done many service projects for Tech, he said. They were responsible for organizing the construction of the seal in the front of the campus at the Broadway entrance and also the creation of Raider Red.

"Former Saddle Tramp member Jim Gaspard created Raider Red in 1971," Douglass said.

Gaspard said he and his wife look forward to coming to the anniversary celebration.

"We are really excited to be coming to Lubbock and watching Tech beat Texas," Gaspard said. "Besides, this is a chance for me to see all of my friends and ex-Saddle Tramps members who I haven't seen in awhile."

Gaspard said being a Saddle Tramp gave him the chance to be involved in the campus and experience campus life, even though he was older than most of the first-year Saddle Tramps.

"For me, since I was coming out of the service, a soldier in Vietnam, and being 22, joining the Saddle Tramps was a way for me to get back into college life," he said.

Self to take over as Masked Rider

by Ginger Pope/UD

A substitute Masked Rider will take the reigns of Tech mascot High Red Bug Saturday during the Tech vs. the University of Texas-Austin football game.

The Masked Rider Committee decided Oct. 29 to temporarily replace Masked Rider Martha Reed with JoLynn Self, the '95-'96 Masked Rider, said Jenny Passow, Masked Rider adviser and a University Center activities specialist.

A substitute rider was needed after Reed's foot was broken during the Tech vs. A&M University football game Oct. 26 in College Station.

During pregame activities, Tech mascot High Red Bug slipped and fell while Reed was on the horse. Reed's foot was injured during the fall.

Self, a senior biology major from Amarillo, said she is comfortable with the idea of riding in Saturday's game.

Even though she did not run the horse after a Tech score last year, Self did the pregame run last year and has practiced running High Red Bug around the track.

"We've been practicing the run, and we're keeping the same assistants," Self said.

Chancellor John T. Montford said that he will approve the recommendation today to use Self as a temporary replacement.

Robert King, a doctor with the Tech athletic department, examined X-rays of Reed's foot after the fall and determined it was fractured.

Reed visited King's office Monday to have the splint removed from her foot, but she is still on crutches.

Passow said she would have to receive a statement from King saying Reed's foot was in satisfactory condition before Reed could ride in Saturday's game.

"I have to hear from him officially, and then she (Reed) has to be cleared with the horse specialist and me before she can ride," she said.

The Masked Rider and safety personnel will use the same safety procedures used in the Oct. 26 game during Saturday's game, Passow said.

"High Red Bug is ready to go, and JoLynn knows the horse," she said.

Whether Reed will ride in the next home game will depend on what the doctor says about her foot, Passow said.

King said he has not sent any official word as to whether Reed could ride and said Passow has not requested a statement.

Heidi Brady, the Masked Rider's horse specialist and an assistant professor with the animal science department, said High Red Bug is fine following the fall and is ready to ride Saturday. Even though Fox Sports Southwest will televise Saturday's game, Brady believes the horse will handle the media and the crowd well.

"He's been handling it well through the season, and several games have been televised," Brady said.

Senate assists engineering students

by Ginger Pope/UD

The Texas Tech Student Senate passed a resolution Thursday for a meeting to resolve conflicts between students and administrators in the College of Engineering.

Jorge Auñón, dean of the College of Engineering, announced last week he plans to combine the department of engineering technology into the departments of civil engineering, electrical engineering and chemical engineering, as reported Wednesday in The University Daily.

Student senators voted in favor of the resolution to show their support of the department of engineering technology, said Clint Freeman, a student senator-at-large and a senior general engineering major from Farmington, N.M. The resolution approved a meeting among administration, faculty and students.

"We want the meeting to take place so students and administration can have an open discussion about the department," Freeman said.

Engineering students are worried the department will lose its accreditation if it is divided and merged into other areas, he said.

After engineering students signed petitions against merging the department with others within the college, Auñón sent a memo to students and faculty announcing his reconsideration of the department merger. However, the senate wants to ensure students are heard, Freeman said.

In other business, senators approved a resolution presented by the external relations committee to use The UD to inform Tech students about Student Association representation.

The publication is expected to appear on the viewpoints page at the beginning of each month during the fall and spring semesters.

The publication will let students know what types of legislation and ideas student senators are working on, said Jarrett Andrews, senator for the College of Arts and Sciences and a junior political science major from Cameron.

"We have been looking for ways to let students know what is going on," Andrews said.

Clinton shaping new Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — With gaping holes in his staff and Cabinet, President Clinton pledged Thursday to "cast a wide net" for his second-term team, suggesting that he may land a Republican or two.

Even as Clinton made the promise, Transportation Secretary Federico Peña told the White House he was resigning — making him the fifth Cabinet secretary who plans to leave.

Three more members could announce similar plans soon, and the president might lose half his Cabinet.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who formally resigned in a White House ceremony Thursday, told The Associated Press: "The time simply has come for someone else to pick up the baton."

Chief of Staff Leon Panetta will announce his resignation any day now, and North Carolina businessman Erskine Bowles is the clear front-runner to replace him.

Clinton's decision is expected soon; aides hoped it would be made in time for a Friday news conference.

Three advisers, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton and Bowles discussed Thursday the prospect of Bowles taking the job, and the businessman asked to think about it overnight.

Bowles, former deputy White House chief of staff, is reluctant to replace Panetta — and is proposing certain conditions regarding the sweep of his authority that may not be acceptable to Clinton, a senior official said.

"The price might be too high," said the aide, who did not know the conditions.

Their View

Students should make efforts to voice concerns

Matthew Dillingham/guest columnist

This is directed toward all of the students who like to complain about unfair and how unrepresentative we are here at Texas Tech's student publications department. I have one question for all of you: Where were you Tuesday?

The annual Meet the Media was held at the University Center Courtyard Tuesday, and the majority of you who are disgruntled with Tech's student media weren't there and/or were afraid to speak your mind at the session.

The University Daily, La Ventana and KTXM-FM (88.1) student leaders invited the entire campus to speak its minds, and most students were not considerate enough to show up.

There are no excuses, besides maybe class for a few, but the rest of the student body should have been there. Most students can hide and complain behind the cover of a letter to the editor, but when it comes to face-to-face contact with the student media, most students are a no-show.

Apparently, students don't care and all of this concern they express toward our so-called negative or irresponsible news coverage is a bunch of hot air. The student media is preached at constantly to take action, instead of writing and complaining about life on campus, so we took action and got no response. The student media gave the student body a chance to speak its mind, and you, as a body, did not do your duty.

We were there, fully exposed to your potential criticisms, comments and ideas, and no one showed up.

True, a class was in attendance that was required to be there, and there were a handful of concerned students who listened and expressed their views, but the vast majority of students who usually complain were nowhere to be found.

This lack of interest in Tech events is a habit for many students. The student body is constantly given the chance to discuss new ideas, learn about different areas on campus and the world — yet most students ignore the chances given to them.

So, I should not be surprised there was such a lack of participation at Meet the Media Tuesday.

We will all be better off as soon as the Tech community realizes there is more to do in Lubbock than hang out and drink beer, and that there are opportunities offered here on campus.

As written by Amy "The Terminator" Osmulski in the Nov. 6 issue of The University Daily, "ignorance is bliss," and how blissful it is here on campus.

We, the students at the student publications department, are students much like the majority of others on the Tech campus, and we're involved in a learning experience while working at this department.

Thus, we will make mistakes and misjudgments much like most do in the classroom and in other learning experiences.

So, for all of you weak hypocrites who did not show up Tuesday for Meet the Media and are afraid to personally speak your minds, keep quiet and let us practice our First Amendment rights.

Matthew Dillingham is the managing editor of La Ventana and a senior marketing major from Amarillo.

Jungle Boogie

Columnist's favorite pastime comes to abrupt end

Kirk Baird/columnist

As I strolled out on the dance floor, I began to feel a certain amount of confidence that a few beers will bring.

The music was thumpin' and I began to swivel my hips to the intoxicating beat. This way, that way — Elvis had nothin' on me.

I guess I was so enraptured with shaking my booty I failed to notice that everyone had cleared off the dance floor. In fact, it wasn't until the paramedics arrived and tried to take me away, that I noticed anything was wrong at all.

It seemed all my attention-grabbing shimmying and swaying worked, but for the wrong reason. Someone thought I was having a seizure.

I admit, I was a little rusty, so my patented cool dance floor moves were a little jerky. And any frothing at the mouth I experienced was simply beer-related.

I argued with the paramedics that I was OK, even as they fastened me to a cart and rolled me away.

Finally, I came to the Clayton Williams conclusion: "If it was inevitable, just sit back, relax and enjoy it."

This isn't the only time such an incident has happened to me.

I once won the "Worst Dancer" contest at a local tavern. The prize was a pitcher o' beer, a pack o' condoms and a hearty applause from my friends.

Each friend, including my dance partner, congratulated me on my dancing prowess.

My partner, in fact, remarked how hysterical my antiquated moves were, and how I looked like a reject from "Saturday Night Fever."

I didn't have the heart to tell her the "antiquated moves" I used were part of my normal dancing routine, ones which previously had gotten the attention of paramedics.

So it was with a bit o' uneasiness that I recently found myself in a local club.

The music was blaring and sweaty bodies were gyrating on the dance floor — and I was without my dancing shoes.

My friends, however, couldn't wait to try out their latest dance steps under the blinking colored lights and fog machines. As they sauntered out on the stage, shaking all the way, I made my way to the bar to try and calm my nerves, and hopefully discover my happy feet.

It didn't work.

Song after song pounded through the speakers, but my butt sat firmly on a stool instead of causing gasps of horror at its quirky-yet-strangely-violent thrusts to the beat.

As the night wore on, so did my fascination with my watch. I kept staring at it every few seconds, praying someone would notice.

Finally, some friends took pity on me and said they were ready to go.

Suddenly, the dance floor began to clear. At the center of the mayhem was some guy dancin' this way and that, looking like a deformed frog in a blender.

"Poor bastard," I thought. "I know what he's going through. But man, he sure could dance."

County should move precincts on campus

To the editor: I am writing this letter in reference to Tuesday's election. Last year, Texas Tech finally received a voting precinct of its own. No longer would on-campus students have to travel away from campus to cast their votes.

This was a decision that benefitted Texas Tech students in a very positive way. Because of this decision, Tech students could let their voices be heard without leaving campus. However, a problem still exists.

What about the rest of the student population?

Students who live off campus are forced to vote within their precincts. For Lubbockites this may not be a problem. But, for the rest of us, polling locations are a serious problem when considering whether or not to participate in the election. Where in the "heck" is Posey Elementary School?

Lubbock County should allow all Tech students, faculty and staff to vote here on campus. Tech makes up over 26,000 votes in Lubbock alone. This would increase voter turnout and would get students involved in the affairs of this great nation in which we live. Until Lubbock County decides to act on this situation, Tech students will not be able to truly "rock the vote!"

Apple should take care with column topics

To the editor: This is in regard to Christy Apple's article, "Tiger lost in woods with race-driven commercials." (Sports 10/30/96) Apple has every right to be upset with Nike for exploiting young athletes, but she has no right to compare her situations to theirs. Apple has every right to earn huge amounts of money and lower her handicap to join a private club, but Tiger Woods can never change the color of his skin. I cannot see how talent and a pocketbook got mixed up with race, color, creed and religion in her column. I know a private club has every right to deny membership on all grounds to any individual who may wish to join, but when their only defense is race and color, then I hardly pity the person is denied. I cannot believe The University Daily let this column appear in its pages. If it should have even appeared anywhere, it should have been in Viewpoints.

Tech does something right with Morris case

To the editor: Tuesday I read an article on the front page of The University Daily celebrating Texas Tech's commitment to academic excellence. The article, which was probably met by more boos than yeahs, detailed Sammy Morris' expulsion from Tech due to excessive absences from an XL class.

First, an explanation about the XL classes. These classes teach basic management skills every college student needs to know. If a student's GPA drops below a 2.0, he or she is required to take the class. The classes are open to any other student who feels his or her skills are in need of improvement. There is one simple rule — you are permitted two absences. After the third one, you are out. Gone. Kaput. Period.

This isn't arbitrary. This isn't intended to be malicious. This simply is to make sure that a student is committed to learning and committed to being a full-time student. If you can't make the class and follow the rules, then one has to question your work ethic regarding attending college.

For whichever reason Morris was taking the XL class is of no concern to us — it is something that is between him, his family and his advisor.

However, because Morris is Tech's second leading receiver, catching 13 passes out of the backfield and gaining more than 400 total yards this season, the populace believes he should be granted special permission to remain a Tech student.

He shouldn't. He filed for an appeal. Appeals are only granted for a "life-changing event," according to Susan Crow, the XL coordinator. If Morris was enduring a "life-changing event" that precluded his attendance, then why didn't that event affect his playing skills or playing time? Clearly it didn't.

No one knows the exact reason why Morris didn't attend regularly — and it isn't our business. The fact is, a student was expelled from Texas Tech, something that happens at least 20 or 30 times a semester, and it finally made the front page. Why? Because a starting football player couldn't satisfy the requirements of a class. Kudos to Tech for reaffirming its commitment to academic excellence in the face of all the public sentiment against it. You did something right.

Legislation may affect Tech's graduate programs

by Kristi Rieken/UD

Legislation set to go into effect this summer could cost Texas Tech and its graduate school more than $1 million in state funds, said Assistant Graduate Dean Mari Jane Davis.

The Texas Legislature passed legislation in 1993 that would kill state funding for students who have more than 130 doctoral hours.

The minimum number of hours to be a doctoral candidate is 60, Davis said. The state believes that 130 hours is "giving them time enough" to complete their doctoral work, she said.

This and other issues were discussed Thursday during a meeting of the Tech Graduate Council in the Academic Affairs Conference Center.

Tech has 106 doctoral students who would be affected if this change took place today, Davis said.

"This is a major, major problem," Davis said. "We have got to do something about these people. Many of these 106 don't have a clue what they are going to do their research on."

If the legislation was enacted this year, Tech would lose about $1.25 million — that loss could affect people throughout the university, Davis said.

"It will affect faculty salaries, DOE money, which is departmental money, and it will affect how many TA's we can hire," she said. "It will just trickle down through the university, and it could end up affecting undergraduates as well."

Because the state will not start denying funding for these students until summer 1997, officials have some time to think of a viable solution to the problem, she said.

"We have a window of about seven months to analyze the situation and find a solution that is fair to the students," Davis said.

Graduate School Dean David Schmidly agreed with Davis and said the graduate school needs to find a way to solve the problems caused by the impending funding cut.

"We are going to have to get serious about getting this done," Schmidly said. "We need to recognize the problem and work within each of the colleges to get it remedied."

A possible aid in solving this problem was suggested by one member of the council. He suggested that students who have more than 130 hours be required to pay out-of-state tuition, which would not equal the amount that formerly came from the state, but it could help.

At this time there are 23 students who are scheduled to receive their doctoral degrees in December. Nine already have requested an extension, and of those, one has been granted. Graduate school officials have not yet reviewed the other eight. No action was taken on this issue Thursday, but members were encouraged to discuss possible solutions with the deans of each of their respective colleges.

In addition to the Masked Rider tradition, Montford said he wants to reinstate the tradition of firing a cannon during the game.

The ROTC used to fire a small artillery cannon during Tech home games, and many requests to resume the tradition were made about the time the Masked Rider tradition was reinstated, Montford said.

A cannon, similar to those used in the Civil War, was found last week in the local area, but Tech officials still have to approve the cannon's safety, Montford said.

"It has to be safe and appropriately done," Montford said. "We sure or may not use it."

Ron Damron, assistant athletic director for facilities, said they have practiced firing the cannon to make sure it works and is safe.

The custom-made cannon is not large, Damron said.

If used, it will fire gunpowder, he said.

Officials will place the cannon at the north end of the stadium, and the owner of the cannon will fire it with the assistance of the ROTC, Damron said.

ABC must turn over Whitewater interview tapes, judge rules

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A federal judge gave ABC 10 days to give Whitewater prosecutors a transcript and videotape of its "PrimeTime Live" interview with Susan McDougal.

Susan McDougal, convicted of federal fraud charges uncovered in the Whitewater probe, remains in a county jail for contempt of court because she has refused to talk to investigators about business dealings by the president and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright ruled Wednesday in favor of Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth W. Starr, who had subpoenaed outtakes from the Aug. 30 interview for ABC's "PrimeTime Live" television show.

Wright rejected the network's claim of "journalist's privilege" not to obey the subpoena.

ABC and Starr's office declined to comment.

Whitewater prosecutors issued subpoenas to the network Sept. 3 and Sept. 10. In the interview, Susan McDougal said she was tempted to tell Whitewater prosecutors whatever they wanted to hear in exchange for a recommendation for a reduced sentence.

Last month, a federal appeals court rejected Susan McDougal's argument that she had a constitutional right not to participate in grand jury proceedings. She said she feared being charged with perjury if her testimony didn't match the testimony of other grand jury witnesses.

Susan McDougal, who was convicted of fraud charges along with her ex-husband, Jim McDougal, and then-Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, says she knows of no wrongdoing by the Clintons.

Russian leader Yeltsin back on feet following quintuple bypass surgery

MOSCOW (AP) — Impressing doctors with the speed of his recovery, President Boris Yeltsin was up on his feet Thursday and proclaiming he was back at work two days after a quintuple heart bypass.

The Kremlin portrayed the 65-year-old president as a man eager to be back at the helm of leadership and pursuing all his presidential duties — something his surgeon said could happen in 10 to 12 days.

Yeltsin has not yet appeared before the public but, clearly anxious to reassert his authority, he issued a statement Thursday to the nation through his press service.

"Dear Russians! I'm glad to announce that the operation was successful. I'm back to work again. As I promised, the situation in the country was under control," Yeltsin said.

He also sought to counter attacks from the opposition Communists.

Excellence in education

Tech engineering professor awarded for skillful teaching, lauded by former students

by Rebecca Babb/UD

The esteem of students and a feeling of personal accomplishment are a few of the immaterial rewards teaching has to offer.

In addition to these intangible rewards, Darrell Vines, Texas Tech electrical engineering professor engineering, has received a Distinguished Educator Award from the Texas Tech College of Engineering.

"It's kind of embarrassing because when I was a student here, there were a lot of distinguished faculty members who are still here, and I feel embarrassed to be honored in their presence," Vines said. "The thing I feel best about is that it recognizes dedicated faculty."

this type has been given by the College of Engineering, Vines said.

The award is in the amount of $5,000, which will be added to Vines' base salary, he said.

"I still get to teach the same classes as I used to teach," Vines said. "I still have the same parking space. Students still complain, and the staff relates to me in the same way."

But after receiving this award, he has a few extra privileges, Vines said.

"I get to chair the Teaching Awards Committee in the College of Engineering, and that's been pretty active this fall," Vines said.

Another responsibility that comes with the award is that Vines is in charge of informing the quality of teaching and curriculum in the College of Engineering, he said.

"One of the things that I really want students to do is work together," Vines said.

"That's probably my main objective."

Vines said he is encouraging cooperation among students by using teamwork in projects involving building electric cars and converting a minivan to run on propane instead of gasoline.

“He challenged us and made us think outside the textbook.”

"My contribution is to work really closely with the students as they learn to work together as a team," Vines said.

"My vision is that when students begin to take respect for their education, students better appreciate what they learn."

David Divine, a former student of Vines who graduated from Texas Tech in 1969 with a bachelor of science degree in engineering and is now an entrepreneurial professional in engineering, nominated Vines for this award.

"I think he's a student's teacher," Divine said.

"He communicates to the students and shows a lot of concern for the undergraduates. It's nice to have someone who really cares."

Divine said being one of Vines' students was a positive and inspirational experience.

"I knew what to expect and what he expected of me," Divine said. "He challenged us and made us think outside the textbook."

Rick Overman, another former student of Vines who graduated in 1978 with a bachelor of science degree in engineering, is a senior vice president for Hicks and Ragland, a Lubbock-based engineering firm.

"I think the thing I remember most about Professor Vines is that not only did he teach us things that were important in engineering, he also taught us life lessons," Overman said.

"He built character in his students."

Overman said he now tries to mentor the young people in his firm the way Vines did for him.

"I can't think of another professor that is more deserving of this award than Professor Vines," Overman said.

Poll shows Hispanics supported Clinton, Morales

DALLAS (AP) — Hispanics, following tradition, strongly backed President Clinton and Democratic U.S. Senate nominee Victor Morales in the general election, but it wasn't enough for them to claim victory in Texas.

"It kept them from being beaten more badly than they were," said Jerry Polinard, professor of political science at the University of Texas-Pan American in Edinburg.

Republicans and Democrats alike predicted that Hispanics could provide the swing votes in both races. A Texas Democratic Party spokesman called the group's vote "a sleeping giant."

Indeed, a record 1.6 million Hispanics registered to vote, and officials with the San Antonio-based Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project conclude that 69 percent, or 1.1 million, cast ballots. Slightly more than 977,000 came to the polls on Election Day, including about 14 percent who voted for the first time.

Clinton, who hoped to be the first Democrat in 20 years to carry the Lone Star State, received more support among Hispanics than in his previous White House bid, a voter poll found.

Clinton garnered 75 percent of the Latino vote this year, compared with 58 percent in 1992. GOP candidate Bob Dole received 17 percent.

Morales, Texas' first Hispanic major-party Senate nominee, was the clear winner among Latinos, with nearly 80 percent of the vote against incumbent GOP Sen. Phil Gramm.

Campus building renamed in honor of Tech graduate

Texas Tech's electrical engineering research annex will be renamed and dedicated at 4 p.m. today at the northwest end of the building.

The building will take the name of Charles A. Bassett II, a 1960 Tech graduate who died six years after graduation.

Bassett, a U.S. Air Force captain, served in Korea before coming to Tech to complete an engineering degree. After graduating with honors, he returned to a test pilot school and was among the first pilots selected for the NASA astronaut program. He was scheduled to pilot Gemini IX in July 1966, but died in a trainer jet crash in St. Louis Feb. 28, 1966.

Chancellor John T. Montford and President Donald Haragan will speak at the ceremony.

Center becomes hub for Tech information

by Ginger Pope/UD

The Texas Tech Information Center offers new alternatives for those seeking information about Tech.

Gary Vivian, a higher education graduate student from Lubbock and a center employee, said the center provides students and faculty optional ways, other than using the Tech phone operator, to get information.

The center, which opened Oct. 28, is located in the northeast corner of the University Center food court, under the stairs by the north entrance.

"It provides opportunity for more accessibility and a more personal one-on-one experience," Vivian said.

"And instead of calling five or six places, people can call the center once."

parents visit for orientations or during weekends, Vivian said.

UC Director Tom Shubert said the goal of the information center is not to translate university policy, but to direct people to the appropriate place to get information.

"We want to help people know who to contact and how to reach them," Shubert said. "People can come in, and we will point them in the right direction."

The center is something Tech has needed for some time, and last semester's UC fee increase made it possible, he said.

Before now, questions could have gone unanswered.

"Questions have been asked before in many places, and our question is, 'Were they ever answered?'" he said.

As long as the center is utilized, it will remain as a service to Tech, Shubert said.

"We answer questions about event locations, Tech express, sports events and bus routes."

Joni Penman, worker at the Texas Tech Information Center

Center operators try to gather information from every Tech department to store in the center's database, he said.

"We're very mobile, and we can go out and meet with organizations or departments, or they can mail the information or bring it by," Vivian said. "We try to meet the needs of every department."

People have expressed some curiosity about the center's purpose, he said.

Even though it is experiencing a slow start, Vivian said he expects the center's business to increase.

Another feature the center has considered is a World Wide Web home page, Vivian said.

Alumni and students could receive up-to-date information about Tech events through their computers.

The center also will have information available when students and Joni Penman, a sophomore early childhood education major from Rochester who works at the center, said it offers answers to questions about the UC and Tech.

"We answer questions about event locations, Tech Express, sports events and bus routes," Penman said. "We keep the information stored on a computer for reference."

Many people do not know what the center is and why it is here, she said.

The most popular question asked is, "What is this?"

With more promotion and as time passes people will become more familiar with the center, Penman said.

The Tech information center is open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. Sundays, and can be reached at 742-1344.

AmeriCorps offers alternative to loans

by Tomi Rodgers/UD

Students have the opportunity to serve their community while earning money for their education through AmeriCorps, a program created by President Clinton that provides alternatives to student loans for education.

AmeriCorps began in 1994 and currently boasts more than 25,000 members, according to information provided by Harris Wofford, AmeriCorps executive officer.

AmeriCorps' parent organization is the Corporation for National Service. The corporation provides four types of programs: AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps, AmeriCorps VISTA, (Volunteers in Service to America) and AmeriCorps state and national programs.

For a student to become involved in the AmeriCorps program, they must be at least 17 years old and be willing to give up one year of school to work for their community or other areas of the country, according to information provided by Sandy Scott, a writer with the Office of Public Affairs for the Corporation for National Service.

Students are allowed to serve two one-year terms, and each term pays $4,725, Scott said.

The program welcomes students to serve more than two terms, but they will not be paid for it.

If a student would like to work with the program part time while going to school, the program pays $2,362.50, Scott said. Awards from both types of service will be taxed the year they are used.

According to information from Wofford, most members are sponsored by local or national charities, civic organizations, schools and religious and community groups.

Another program created through the Corporation for National Service is Learn and Serve America. This program currently involves 30,000 students working to service their community as part of their education, Scott said.

"The work often is connected to a curriculum in a class," Scott said. "The service learning gives grants to schools to promote student service, but doesn't pay money to the student. It makes better students and citizens."

With AmeriCorps, once students serve their term, a voucher is sent to a loan holder or the school the student plans to attend, according to information from the AmeriCorps Web site. The award, which must be used within seven years upon completion of service, can only be used to pay for future loans or repay an existing loan.

According to the program rules, no student loan payments can be made while serving a term.

If the student serves an entire term full time, the program will pay for the interest incurred during that year, but if it is a loan the student has defaulted on, they may not be eligible for postponement.

The AmeriCorps program rules state that the money it pays will pay for all or part of the cost of attending a "qualified institution of higher learning."

This includes tuition, required materials and supplies, and allowances granted by the school for room and board, transportation and miscellaneous personal expenses.

Scott also mentioned the benefits of the Learn and Serve America program, which helps with education.

"The president proposed that half of the new work study jobs will be community service oriented, and that at least 100,000 jobs will be working towards America Reads, (the program Clinton devised to help tutor students to reading level by third grade)," Scott said.

Dan Bookhamer, a junior recreation leisure studies major from Granbury, said he was interested once he learned more about the program.

"If it helped the environment and worked on things such as helping the community, I'd give it a thumbs up," Bookhamer said.

Bookhamer said some students may not be interested in this program if they had the chance to work on it.

"If a student is going to take the year off to work, they'd make more money with a regular job," Bookhamer said.

The organization has been referred to as "the domestic PeaceCorps," referring to work done by the program to immunize children, teaching and tutoring children to read, clearing trails and improving the community in much the same way many young adults do in other countries with the late President John F. Kennedy's PeaceCorps.

Students can get information on the AmeriCorps program by calling 1-800-942-2677 or checking its web site at www.cns.gov.

"The president proposed that half of the new work study jobs will be community service oriented."

Baptist dominant religious group among state's inmates

AUSTIN (AP) — It may just be because Grandma tried to steer them to church, but more prisoners say they're Baptist than any other denomination.

According to new figures from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, 39,781 inmates — or more than 30 percent of the population of 131,316 — call themselves Baptist.

The only other category in the double digits is Catholic, topping 18 percent of Texas prisoners.

A whopping 22 percent are categorized as "unknown," representing inmates who didn't say or didn't care when asked for their religious denomination.

The rest of the inmates are divided among the categories of Christian Church, Methodist, Church of Christ, Pentecostal, Muslim, Protestant, Jewish, non-denominational, no religious preference and other.

Those who participate in the agency's religion programs, however, say the denomination isn't as important as the chance to turn lives around.

"I was saved in prison," said Sam Pollinzi, executive director of a Dallas facility that eases released inmates' transition into society.

"Another inmate just came up and started talking to me about Jesus, and I had tried everything else there was in life to try by that age. I decided to try Jesus. It worked," said Pollinzi, 43.

He was released from prison 15 years ago after serving eight years of a 40-year sentence for aggravated robbery and sale and possession of heroin.

Pollinzi credits religion with his ability to stay out of trouble.

"If I got to where I can't pay the rent one week, I can't go to the closet and get my college diploma down and ask it for help. I rely on Jesus. I can go to him and ask him for help," said Pollinzi, who has a wife and three children and attends a non-denominational church.

Information gathered on inmates' religion is used in the Criminal Justice Department's religion programs to provide prisoners with appropriate services, said Jerry Groom, director of chaplains and an Assemblies of God minister.

The relatively large number of Baptists simply reflects the overall population in Texas, he added.

A number of prisoners may not actually have a church affiliation, Groom said, but reach back into their childhood when they were asked about religion.

"They were never really members, but maybe Grandma took them to a little Baptist church somewhere, so that's what they remember, and that's what they declare," Groom said.

The prison system has 145 full-time chaplains, 25 part-time and numerous volunteers, Groom said.

Religious programs don't just encompass worship services, but include life skills, therapeutic programs and literacy efforts.

Services also are provided to inmates' families, victims' families and agency staff, Groom said.

About 25 percent of prisoners participate actively in religion on a full-time basis, Groom estimated.

Global surveyor en route to Mars in search of life on planet

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's Mars Global Surveyor sped toward the Red Planet Thursday. It is the first NASA spacecraft in a series of orbiters, rovers and robots that could answer the question: Was there ever life on Mars?

A Delta rocket carrying the unmanned global surveyor lifted off on time at noon — one day after high wind scuttled the first launch attempt — and propelled the boxy, 10-foot spacecraft toward Mars at 24,000 mph. "We're on our way!" NASA space science chief Wesley Huntress Jr. said. "These are the kind of days you kind of live for in space science and space exploration." The spacecraft will reach Mars after a journey of 10 months and 435 million miles. Once in the desired 235-mile-high orbit, in March 1998, the global surveyor will begin mapping the Martian atmosphere and virtually the entire surface of the planet. The survey will last 687 days, or a full Martian year. It will send images and other data back to Earth within 20 to 40 minutes. The images will be posted on the Internet for public viewing within a day or two after that, Huntress said.

One of the main objectives of the $230 million mission is to scout for landing spots for future landing missions, including one in which a spacecraft will bring Martian soil and rocks back to Earth sometime in the next decade. NASA plans to send a pair of spacecraft to Mars every 26 months through 2005. The second in this series of 10, the Mars Pathfinder, is due to lift off Dec. 2 and land July 4, 1997. Neither of NASA's 1976 Viking landers found any conclusive sign of life on Mars, and Huntress expects it will take hard evidence — like returned samples — to "put the nail on that." If evidence of life is found, that could eventually lead to manned flights to Mars, Huntress said.

CNN wins right for Cuban bureau

ATLANTA (AP) — The Cable News Network won permission from the Cuban government on Thursday to open a bureau in Havana.

If approved by U.S. officials, CNN would be the first American-based news organization with a full-time presence in the Communist country.

The Cuban Foreign Ministry announced the decision in a brief statement in Havana.

"We've been working on it for a while," CNN spokesman David Talley said. The next step is to win approval from the State Department, and "we have no idea how long that will be."

No details of the Havana bureau have been set, pending U.S. permission, Talley said Thursday.

In recent years, U.S. journalists have been allowed to make reporting trips to Cuba, and Cuban officials say that more than 90 percent of visas requested from American reporters have been approved. But the U.S. trade embargo had prevented news organizations from opening bureaus on the island.

The door to a permanent U.S. news media presence was opened a year ago when President Clinton issued an executive order easing restrictions on travel to Cuba by Cuban-Americans, academics, clergy and students.

Among the news organizations negotiating to open bureaus in Cuba is

The Associated Press, which was the last American news outlet in Cuba. The AP was expelled from that country in 1969 as part of a general radicalization of the Castro revolution.

Ted Turner, who owned CNN until Turner's merger with Time Warner, has had a long-standing acquaintance with Cuban President Fidel Castro.

CNN has frequently sent its crews to Cuba. This year, CNN covered Castro's 70th birthday in August.

CNN has more than 30 bureaus worldwide and a system of 600 broadcast affiliates. Earlier this year, Talley said, the network opened a bureau in Hong Kong, which is to revert to Communist China in 1999.

Kalf fries give event regional flavor

by Sara Kattawar/UD

The Phi Delta Theta and Kappa Alpha fraternities will sponsor their 16th annual Kalf Fry at 8 p.m. Friday in the Lubbock Civic Center.

Cade Walton, Kappa Alpha president, said the Kalf Fry was started in 1980 by Harvy Hildebrant, to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The Kalf Fry is an event in which participants prepare around 500 pounds of calf testicles, Walton said. Another attraction for the event is entertainment from country-music pioneer Willie Nelson and Gary P. Nunn.

The two fraternities work together to make the event successful.

The chairmen have worked for months to prepare for the event by finding and arranging for the calf testicles to be prepared, Walton said.

"They pick up the calf testicles, then the KA and Phi Delta members cut them up," he said. "River Smith will do the actual cooking of the calf fry."

There will be food concessions, and Coors Light will be the third-party vendor but they have nothing to do with the Kalf Fry, Walton said. Any money Coors Light makes does not benefit the MDA.

Walton said the event is sponsored by MDA and Dollar Western Wear.

"Originally it was just a KA event," Walton said. "But later, a gentleman

“ It is a bigger draw for people that we are selling the fry — in this area they are considered a delicacy. ”

Eric Gilbert, Phi Delta Theta president named Andy Barron asked the Phi Deltas to help us out."

Walton said this helped improve the relationship between the two fraternities.

The event might have ended in 1989 because it was not raising enough money, he said.

"So the KA president at the time, Rhett Stokes, said they would take money out of the fraternity funds and then try to fund raise at the Depot District," Walton said.

All of the proceeds from the Kalf

Fry are to benefit the MDA, he said.

"Last year, the KA chapter won the Cross and Rose Award, a national award given to KA fraternities in honor of donating the most money to MDA," Walton said.

Walton said each of the fraternities elects a Kalf Fry chairman and they have co-chairmen working under them.

"Their job is to make sure everything runs smoothly and to train the members for the next year's Kalf Fry," he said.

Walton said the fraternities sold more than 8,000 tickets during 1995.

"The event was held in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, and they turned away people because of fire codes," Walton said. "This year there is an 8,000 ticket limit for the Civic Center."

Walton said he expects a large turnout for the event.

"In the past, we had entertainment such as Little Texas, David Allen Coe, Jerry Jeff Walker and Willie Nelson," he said. "This year Willie Nelson will perform and his opening act will be Gary P. Nunn."

Walton said people from out of state are calling about the Kalf Fry.

"This will probably be the largest Kalf Fry ever because there will be hundreds of alumni from each of the two fraternities there," Walton said.

"We usually try to have the Kalf Fry the weekend of either the A&M vs. Tech or the Tech vs. UT game."

Jason Johnson, Phi Delta Theta member and Phi Delt Kalf Fry chairman, said they are expecting 7,000 people to attend the event.

"The doors will open at 8 p.m., and the show begins at 9 p.m. with Gary P. Nunn and Willie Nelson taking the stage at 11 p.m.," Johnson said.

Johnson said the event has gone well so far.

KA Chairman Scott Martin worked with Johnson to organize the event.

"The event sponsors the MDA," Martin said. "Last year we gave them between $4,000 and $8,000."

Martin said this is one of the largest Greek events because it involves more than 7,500 people.

"I think people should come to the Kalf Fry for a good, clean and fun time," Martin said.

Phi Delta Theta President Eric Gilbert said the event usually attracts thousands of people.

"The ranchers in the area donate the fry," Gilbert said. "It is a bigger draw for people that we are selling the fry — in this area they are considered a delicacy."

Tickets are available at the University Center and Dollar Western Wear for $13.

At the door, tickets will cost $15.

Saddle Tramps

Gaspard said being a Saddle Tramp had certain benefits, such as going to out-of-town games and doing activities around campus.

Gaspard also said he is excited about his part in the creation of the costume for Raider Red.

"Raider Red was not created to replace the Masked Rider," he said. "He was created to go to the out-of-town games in which the live mascot could not attend because the ground was paved."

The costume came from the late Dirk West's cartoon drawings, he said.

The original costume was made from chicken wire and crepe paper, he said.

"I molded the ears after the shape of my girlfriend's, who is now my wife," Gaspard said.

Current members of the Saddle

Tramps carry on the traditions set by the founding Saddle Tramps.

"Basically, we keep the same schedule for the men's athletics every year," said Brad Dierlam, a senior agricultural communications major from Victoria and a Saddle Tramp. "We pretty much do what the administration asks us to do."

The group does various activities, such as decorate the campus for the games and ring the bells after athletic victories, Dierlam said.

"We serve as ambassadors of Tech, do various service projects and participate in dinners as escorts," he said.

Dierlam said being involved with the Saddle Tramps is a good way for students to get involved in the campus.

"I have been a member since the spring of 1994, and being a member has helped me become involved in Texas Tech," Dierlam said. "I am more than a regular student."

Children's book signing at alumni center

Characters from the new children's book, "Look Who's Going to Texas Tech," will be on hand at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Market Alumni Center to sign the books.

The book, which is geared toward preschoolers and elementary school students, costs $16.95 and is designed to introduce children to the campus and traditions of Texas Tech.

The characters in the book include Saddle Tramps, honor students and members of the Goin' Band from Raiderland.

The book was designed by Marsha Gustafson, editor of the Texas Techsan magazine, and illustrated by Lubbock illustrator Kent Gamble.

Big 12 South Division up for grabs Saturday

by Heath Robinson/UD

Despite suffering two conference losses this season, Texas Tech has a chance to qualify for the Big 12 Conference championship game Saturday.

Tech (5-3 overall, 4-2 Big 12) plays Texas Saturday at 6 p.m. at Jones Stadium. A Tech victory coupled with an Oklahoma loss to Oklahoma State Saturday would propel the Red Raiders to St. Louis for a Dec. 7 matchup with the winner of the Big 12 North Division.

A loss to Texas (4-4 overall, 3-2 Big 12), and the Longhorns would have the inside track to St. Louis.

"It does kind of have the sense of a playoff game," Texas flanker Wayne McGarity said. "Right now they're at the top (of the South Division) — that's where we want to be. We have to win this game to get there."

In order to win the game, Texas will have to do something it has yet to accomplish this season: win on the road. The Longhorns have suffered losses at No. 7 Colorado, at No. 15 Virginia and against Oklahoma in Dallas.

Tech will be attempting to revenge last year's loss to Texas. No. 13 Texas sprinted out to a 48-0 lead before settling for a 48-7 victory over No. 23 Tech. It was the largest win over a ranked opponent in Texas history.

Texas lost only twice last year, both times to top-10 opponents, in capturing the final Southwest Conference Championship without losing to a conference opponent. The Longhorns were favored to win the South Division of the Big 12 with ease as every major offensive threat returned.

Since the loss to Notre Dame on the last play of the game, Texas also has blown fourth-quarter leads against Colorado and Oklahoma. In three of its four losses this season, Texas has blown double-digit leads. Brown addressed the Longhorns problems.

"We have to improve and keep getting better," Brown said. "I don't think there is a mental problem with this team. We just can't blow leads. We have to establish control against Tech and maintain it for four quarters."

Texas will try to establish control with its running game. Ricky Williams and Shon Mitchell both average more than five yards a carry for the Longhorns.

Williams, a sophomore from San Diego, Calif., has been given the nickname "Little Earl" by his teammates, a reference to Texas great Earl Campbell, who won the 1977 Heisman Trophy as a running back for the Longhorns. Williams has 787 yards rushing with nine touchdowns this season. Tech coach Spike Dykes was an assistant at Texas when Campbell played and knows that comparison to Campbell is tall praise.

Shanna Sargent-Milnor/Student Publications

Positive yards: Zebbie Lethridge scrambles from trouble in the pocket. Saturday, Lethridge must face one of the nation's best secondaries in Texas.

"They're saying he's better at this stage of his career than Campbell was," Dykes said. "If that's true, we're in a whole lot of trouble, because Earl used to leave people scattered all over the field. He was impossible to stop." Last season Williams and Mitchell both rushed for more than 100 yards against the Red Raiders.

Tech linebacker Robert Johnson has tried to put that game behind him.

"That game is in the past," Johnson said. "We both respect each other, and we know that we're going to give each other our best shots. It's an important game, and last year doesn't mean anything."

What will mean something is how effective Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge can be against the Texas secondary. Texas cornerback Bryant Westbrook and safety Chris Carter are both projected as first-round draft picks in the NFL, and along with cornerback Taje Allen and strong safety Tre Thomas, form one of the nation's best secondaries.

"I have to be able to pass the ball in order for us to win the game," Lethridge said. "They can't just key on Byron (Hanspard). That secondary is great, and they're extremely hard to throw against. I'll have to play my best game of the season to be successful against them."

Lethridge will be without his second-favorite receiver for the rest of the season. Fullback Sammy Morris was expelled from the university for violation of the attendance policy in the Tech XL program.

Morris was Tech's second-leading rusher with 226 yards rushing and four touchdowns. Morris also led the team in receiving touchdowns with two and receiving yards with 221.

"He played a large part of our offense," Lethridge said. "We'll need Ryan Jones to step in for him and do some of the things he did."

Golf tees off in final fall tournament

The Texas Tech men's golf team travels to Austin to compete today and Saturday in the Harvey Penick Intercollegiate. Texas will host the tournament at Morris Williams Golf Course, and 10 schools will take part.

Tech is attempting to reverse its fortunes this season. In the Red Raiders' three previous tournaments, they have finished no better than 11th place and finished next-to-last in two of the tournaments.

Tech will be taking six members to the tournament. Patrick Barley will be joined by junior Tom Baldwin and senior Chris Hill. Junior Laird Sparks, sophomore Philip Tate and sophomore Sean Mulherin.

Mulherin will be playing in a tournament for the first time since Tech opened the fall season in the Kansas Invitational.

Participating schools include Tech, Baylor, Houston, Stephen F. Austin, North Texas, Mississippi State, Sam Houston, Lamar, Southwest Louisiana and host Texas.

Former Estacado High stars set for gridiron reunion on Jones Stadium turf

by Heath Robinson/UD

When Texas Tech and Texas kick off at 6 p.m. Saturday in Jones Stadium, there will be one Longhorn who feels right at home in Lubbock. In 1991, Taje Allen was a talented football player at Lubbock's Estacado High, where he was a teammate of current Red Raider linebacker Robert Johnson and Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge.

In 1992, Allen skipped town and signed a scholarship with the rival Longhorns. As a member of the Houston Chronicle Super 100 recruiting list, where he was ranked as the state's 51st best recruit, Allen was recruited by many other schools besides Tech and Texas. But Allen decided Austin was the place he should go for school. Allen now has been a starter in the Texas secondary the last two and a half seasons. He has played in two bowl games with the Longhorns, including a 10-2-1 campaign last season.

But long before he got to Texas, Allen teamed up with Lethridge and Johnson to form one of the best teams in Estacado history. Allen and Johnson were seniors in 1991, when Lethridge was the junior quarterback.

Estacado went 10-2 and finished as area finalists. Johnson recalls the good times the two spent together.

"Taje's a great friend of mine, no matter what team he plays for right now," Johnson said. "We had a lot of good times on and off the field when we were in high school, and we still keep pretty close."

Allen and Johnson were first-team All-State as seniors at Estacado, both as members of the secondary. When it came time to make recruiting trips for the two friends, Johnson said it just didn't work out.

"We started out saying that we might go to the same school, and we would try to coordinate the same visits," Johnson said.

"But he really loved Texas and their program, as well as the school."

While Lethridge was a year younger than both Johnson and Allen, he too remembers their high school experience.

"We had a really good team," Lethridge said. "And we were all good athletes. I'm glad Robert and I ended up at Tech, and I am happy Taje's been so successful at Texas."

To beat Texas, Lethridge knows he will have to conquer Allen and the vaunted Texas secondary.

"They have the best secondary I have ever seen," Lethridge said.

"Taje doesn't get a whole lot of attention, but that's because he is surrounded by All-Americans like Chris Carter and Bryant Westbrook."

Louis Kelley, who coached the trio at Estacado, recalled some of the fond memories they brought him.

"They were all really good kids and great athletes," Kelley said. "They all had their heads on straight, and really led my team. Zebbie and Taje are great kids and athletes."

"And Robert Johnson is the kind of player every coach wants to have on his team. He gave it his all in practice and in games."

"Out of 30 years of coaching, he's one of the best I have ever seen."

Johnson and Allen will both leave the college ranks after this season. With a Tech win Saturday, Johnson will be able to boast of a 3-1 record against Texas and Allen during his career.

"Sometimes when we see each other over the summer we kid around about who won last year and who's going to win next year," Johnson said of the friendly rivalry. "But it's all in good fun. Taje really likes Texas, and I really like Texas Tech. We both respect each other's decisions about the school we went to."

Basketball team scrimmages Saturday

The Texas Tech men's basketball team plays its second intrasquad scrimmage at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Athletic Training Center. The teams will be divided into a red and white team.

The white team won the first scrimmage of the season, 109-99. Junior guard Cory Carr led the white team to victory with 42 points. The red team fell short, despite guard Stan Bonewitz making seven 3-pointers and ending the scrimmage with 27 points.

A true freshman from Pampa High, Rayford Young, had an impressive first showing of the season, putting up 19 points and two steals.

Rain delays Big 12 soccer tournament

Texas Tech's first game in the Big 12 Conference postseason tournament against Missouri that was scheduled for Thursday at the Anhuesser-Busch Conference & Sports Center in St. Louis was postponed because of rain.

Tech entered the tournament as the fourth seed with a 13-7 overall record and a 5-4 record in Big 12 competition.

Men's tennis team seeks improvement

by Brent Dirks/UD

The Texas Tech men's tennis team hopes to live up to its preseason ranking of 40th in the nation when the Red Raiders travel to the ITA Regional Rolex in Fort Worth beginning today and continuing through Sunday.

"I think the guys this fall have been sporadic," said Tim Siegel, director of tennis.

"There are quite a few new players this fall and two that will come in the spring. But our major concern is the players we have right now."

Ryan Shupe, Petar Danolic, Tylir Jimenez, Charles Bradshaw, Steve Wood and Doug Lacy will compete for Tech in the tournament, Siegel said.

The doubles teams in the tournament for the Red Raiders will be Lacy-Bradshaw, Wood-Danolic and Shupe-Jimenez.

Shupe, who won two singles matches at the Last Hurrah of the Southwest Conference last week against Texas and Texas A&M, has had the best showings for Tech in this year's fall tournament season, Siegel said.

Danolic, who was ranked 40th in the nation and sixth in the region in the preseason singles polls released last week, has not had his best fall season, Siegel said.

"He's a tremendous guy to do well, but he's not having a good fall," Siegel said about Danolic. "I'm looking forward to see that change."

Siegel said he is looking for Wood, Shupe and Jimenez to step up at the Regional Rolex.

He also said the tournament will be a good chance for the doubles team of Shupe-Jimenez to do well.

They are ranked 29th nationally and fourth in the region.

Siegel said the tournament will be a good opportunity for the men's team to show how they have improved from last season to this season.

"We've got to go out and prove we are going to do better," Siegel said about his team's performance.

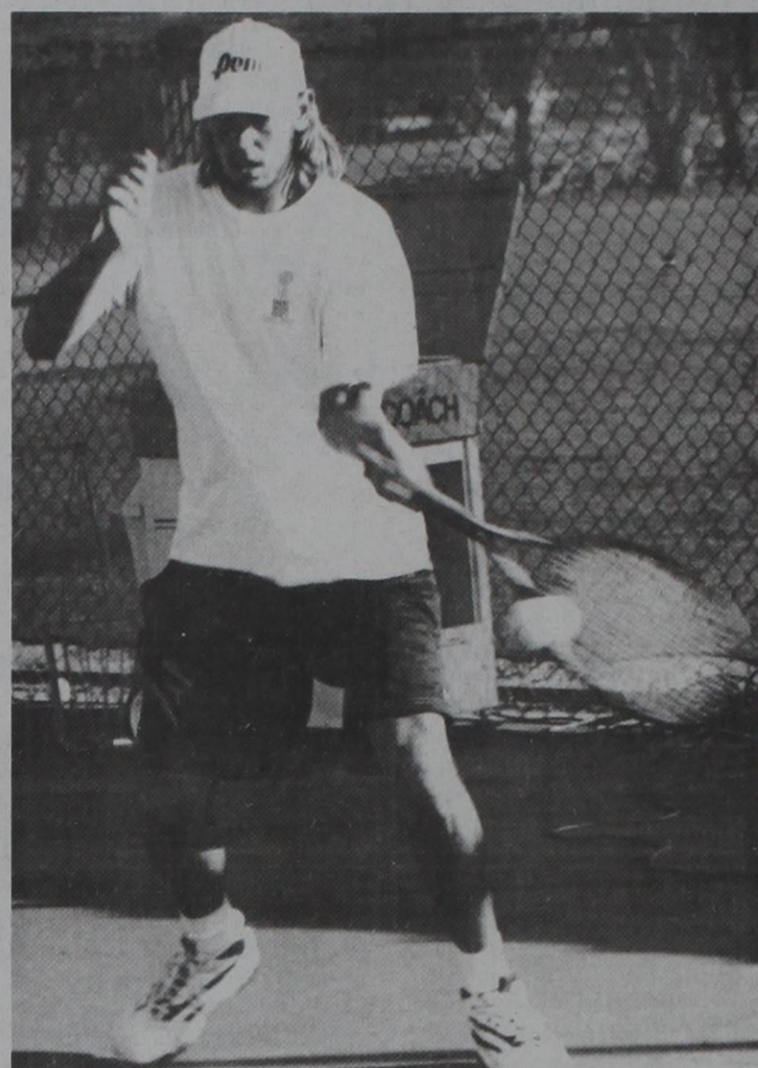

"Every match we're a representative of Texas Tech, and we must do a good job. We'll be ready."

Danolic said the tournament is definitely a big opportunity for him as well as Tech to perform to its potential.

"We've worked hard the past couple of weeks," Danolic said. "We're going to go out there and do our best. What happens, happens."

The sophomore from Croatia said he really has not thought about his preseason ranking.

"It's good to start the season, but I don't think about it much," he said of his preseason ranking.

Wes Underwood/UD

On the return: Steve Wood, a junior exercise and sport sciences major from Boca Raton, Fla., practices his return game in preparation for the ITA Regional Rolex in Fort Worth, which starts today and lasts until Sunday.

"It's from last year's results."

Danolic also thought his fall tournament season performances were below his usual expectations for his level of play on the tennis court.

"I'm looking forward to this tournament," Danolic said. "When you work hard, good things will come."

Tech Lady Raiders defeat Zola Volan Hungary, 69-58

by Brent Dirks/UD

The Texas Tech Lady Raiders showed some unkind Southern hospitality in their first exhibition game of the season, defeating Zola Volan Hungary 69-58 Wednesday night at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Tech took the lead from the beginning and never relented. Tech junior post Alicia Thompson came out on fire as she scored the Lady Raiders' first 10 points of the game, finishing the first half with 20 points on 7 of 8 shooting.

"Alicia Thompson got off to exactly the kind of start that we hoped she would," Tech coach Marsha Sharp said.

"I think that was exactly what you hoped that someone of her caliber would step up and take everybody and carry them on their backs for a little while. That's the trait of a good player."

Thompson said she believes the team as a whole did well in its first bout of the season, and she was excited to start up play again.

"I was just thankful to the Lord for giving me the opportunity for doing so well, and for my teammates to give me the ball," Thompson said.

As Thompson's hot streak began to wane, the rest of Tech's starting five, including freshman point guard Melinda Schmucker, stepped up and helped the Lady Raiders to a 36-28 lead.

In the second half it was all Tech as the Lady Raiders got leads as large as 20 points. However, Hungary stayed in the game by using the shorter, American three-point line to its advantage.

Zola Volan made 5 of 16 three-pointers in the game but could not get hot from normal range. The Tech defense limited the Hungarians to 35 percent shooting.

Sharp said the Lady Raiders did a better job of controlling the boards than she expected, even after being outbounded by the taller Hungarian team 22 to 18 in the first half and 40 to 39 for the game.

"The first part of the game where we had our projected starters on the floor I thought we controlled boards a little better than I anticipated this early in the season," Sharp said.

"I think you can attribute that to Alicia and Crystal. They both did a really good job."

Sharp said the team did a fairly good job of managing the up-tempo, fast break kind of game that the Lady Raiders played against the international game.

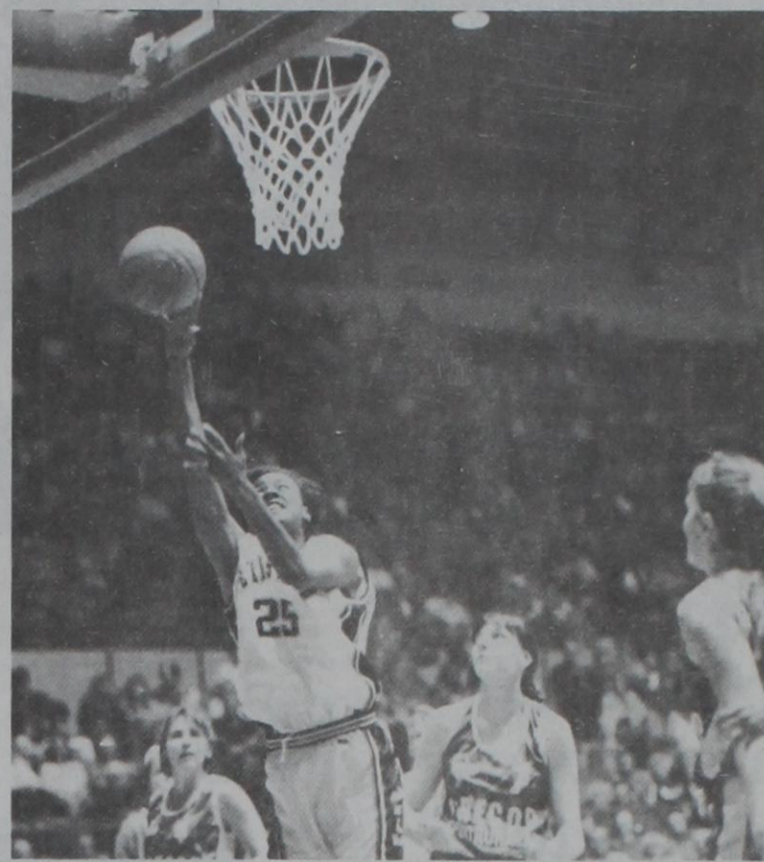

"We wanted to run because I think that's what we will do all year long," Sharp said. "I hope that is something we will be able to do all year long. I really think that's one of our strengths."

Thompson said she got a little tired fast-breaking the ball, but she thought it worked to the Lady Raiders' advantage in the game.

"I think the guards did a good job of getting the balls on the floor and getting them to players," Thompson said.

Even so, Sharp said the exhibition game was typical, and the Lady Raiders can use the experience as they continue practice for the regular season.

"There were a lot of bright spots, a lot of things that were still really ragged, some situations that will be great for us to take back to practice now and work on," Sharp said. "That's something you can't simulate in practice, what other people will do to you."

Wes Underwood/UD

Quick learner: Freshman Keitha Dickerson scores two in the Lady Raiders' 69-58 exhibition win over Zola Volan Hungary Thursday.

Oates ties for AL Manager of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Oates and Joe Torre were voted co-winners of the AL Manager of the Year on Thursday, the first tie in the 14 years of the award.

Oates and Torre each received 89 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"The only guy happier than me is Joe Torre, and that's because he won the World Series," Oates said. "But to be recognized by the writers is an honor and I'm very proud of it."

Oates led the Texas Rangers to their first postseason appearance in their 27-year history.

"We did something no other Texas Rangers team has ever done before," Oates said. "I know that going to spring training next year there's one question I won't have anymore."

Volleyball battles Longhorns, Aggies

by Christy Apple/UD

Texas Tech's volleyball coaches may be a little more noticeable this weekend than they were in the Red Raiders' last homestand, because neither one of them has hair.

Tech coach Jeff Nelson and assistant coach Mike Lessinger both lost their locks when Tech beat the defending national champion Nebraska. The haircut was used as an incentive in Tech's game against the Cornhuskers.

The No. 20 Red Raiders take on the No. 10 Texas A&M Aggies at 7 p.m. today and the No. 9 Texas Longhorns at 3 p.m. Saturday. Both matches will be played at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. Students who come to the match holding a ticket for Saturday's football game will be admitted into the volleyball match free.

Tech heads into the match with three injured starters — senior outside hitter Jill Burness, junior middle blocker Brande Brown and sophomore setter Lisa Hilgers.

Burness and Brown have severe shin splints, and Burness also is nursing two bad knees. Hilgers has been playing the latter part of the season with a sprained wrist.

All three are still going to play and start this weekend, Nelson said.

"I think that we are ready and excited to play this weekend," Nelson said. "We are definitely beat up right now."

Injury-prone senior outside hitter Cristine Martin both lead the Big 12 Conference in individual blocks and aces. Burness averages 1.61 blocks per game, and Martin averages .47 aces. Martin has tallied 39 aces in the Big 12, and Burness has 132 total blocks.

The Aggies are led by outside hitters Kristie Smedsrud and Stacy Sykora. Smedsrud leads the team with 384 kills and 59 blocks while Sykora has 310 kills and 41 blocks.

Nelson said the two are not only good volleyball players but good overall athletes.

"A&M features two outside hitters," Nelson said.

"They are as good as any in the conference. Stacy was the heptathlon winner last year."

Texas has a rough weekend of play ahead of them.

Friday they play Baylor and then travel to Lubbock to play the Red Raiders.

"We are happy about this because they have to fly in from Baylor in the morning, so that puts them out," Nelson said.

Martin said the Red Raiders still know they can beat Texas and Texas A&M even though Tech lost to the Longhorns and the Aggies the first time around, both in three-game matches.

"These games are more mental now," Martin said. "In our minds we know we can beat them, and we know that we are good enough. We just need to play with more emotion."

Nelson is hoping for large crowd support for the Red Raiders' weekend doubleheader.

"The crowds have been great," Nelson said.

"The crowd at the Nebraska game made the difference. I am hoping for the biggest one ever this weekend."

RAIDER POWER

TEXAS TECH VS TEXAS

The University Daily

Texas Tech University

November 8, 1996

SCOUTING REPORT

The Texas offense combines several of the nation's top performers, including an explosive signal caller at quarterback, a talented one-two punch at running back, a preseason All-American wideout and one of the premier tight ends in college football.

Junior quarterback James Brown was the 1995 Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Year and Longhorn MVP. He is a big-play threat as a passer and a runner. As a sophomore, he led the SWC in passing yards, total offense, passing efficiency and touchdown passes.

The backfield combination of Shon Mitchell and Ricky Williams combines speed and power. Together they were the second-most productive duo in Texas history. Williams was the SWC Freshman of the Year while Mitchell rushed for almost 1,100 yards. They were tabbed the best combo in the nation by The Sporting News.

Preseason All-American Mike Adams is the Longhorns' all-time leader in receiving yards.

Tight end Pat Fitzgerald is another preseason All-American and one of the best combination blocker/receivers in the nation.

The Texas defense lost first-team All-American defensive end Tony Brackens as well as two other starters on its defensive line. Texas also lost its outside linebacking crew.

The Longhorns have experience at the inside linebacker position and in their defensive backfield.

Their secondary has All-American and All-SWC performers returning, including Bryant Westbrook.

QUOTES OF THE WEEK

"If he's too much like Earl Campbell, we're going to need an ambulance."
Tech coach Spike Dykes on Texas running back Ricky Williams

"Last year we went down there and got killed."
Tech offensive lineman Chris Whitney on the Red Raiders' 48-7 loss to Texas

"I didn't play last year against Texas, but I'm not sure I would have made a difference."
Tech defensive end Tony Daniels on his absence because of a knee injury

PLAYER PROFILE

Adams

Mike Adams is one of the premier all-purpose performers in the nation, but the three-time semifinalist for the Biletnikoff Award still manages to spend time at the Children's Hospital in Austin, the Salvation Army and to participate in a pen-pal exchange with high school students.

Texas' all-time leading receiver, Adams' goal is to win the Biletnikoff Award for the nation's best receiver. Adams is a clutch receiver with speed and grit and was on several preseason All-America teams.

He missed the 1994 season because of a knee injury. Adams came back the next season to lead the Southwest Conference in receiving and in punt and kickoff returns.

Adams is on pace to set every Longhorn receiving record.

RAIDER REWIND

• Texas Tech's 13-10 victory was the first in College Station for the Red Raiders since 1984.

• Byron Hanspard recorded the best-ever performance for a Tech running back against the Aggies with 198 yards on a career-high 41 carries.

• Hanspard rushed for more than 100 yards for the 14th straight game.

• Hanspard passed James Gray on the single-season rushing list with 1,611 yards in eight games

• Tech has scored in 103 straight contests.
