SEES PERILS FOR MUSIC IN RADIO BROADCASTS

(By Associated Press)
OXFORD, England, Feb. 12.—Broadcasting under the English system has its perils for music, believes Dr. John B. McEwen, principal of the Royal Academy of Music.

With proper direction the radio could have only beneficial effects on both the art and the artist, he told the society of musicians here.

But unless adequate safeguards are provided, he added, there is danger of degeneration.

England's radio is a semi-official monopoly and it was its bureaucratic dangers to which Dr. McEwen largely referred.

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 12.—Testifying that the extension of the Abilene & Southern Railway from Ballinger to San Angelo would encourage feeding of cattle and sheep in the area between the two cities, witnesses today testified at the interstate commerce commission hearing here. Several of the witnesses said the real reason was the new route would offer overnight delivery to the Fort Worth markets.

The hearing probably will close this afternoon.

Charles B. Metcalfe, pioneer settler, testified that the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe had given San Angelo a "step-child service."

W. I. Marshall, county farm agent, said this territory's agricultural future was in the development of feeding operations that would provide a market for feed crops through beef and mutton production.

Earl Hoppe, vice-president of the West Texas Utilities Company, testified that his company had spent $2,000,000 in San Angelo in increasing water and power facilities in the past two years, believing that San Angelo would reach 75,000 population in two years. Hoppe said his company was negotiating with new industries to come to San Angelo, and that his company felt more assured of adequate service where more than one railroad was bidding for business.

STAR, MAN, ELECTRON, CALLED CREATION UNITS

(By Associated Press)
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 12.—A star—a man—an electron—three key units in creation.

This daring comparison is suggested by one of the world's best known astronomers, Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory, in his book, "Flights from Chaos."

"It is a singular fact," he says, "that electrons, in diameter, are just as much smaller than a man as he is smaller than a super-giant red star, the biggest body he measures."

Cotton Acreage Bill Up; Some Doubt It is Legal

Four Prisoners Carried to Prison

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, Feb. 12.—Representative J. R. Donnell, of Hillsboro, today introduced a cotton acreage reduction bill, which would allot one bale to each four acres of land under cultivation, and place a $5 a bale tax on each bale over the allotment.

AUSTIN, Feb. 12.—A plea of opponents of the bill to set up a commission to supervise the reduction of cotton acreage to reconsider their stand and unite in the acreage reduction movement has been issued by J. E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture. Many representatives said they believed the bill was unconstitutional and that it would interfere illegally with the operation of private business.

Under the bill, the commission would be given the right to reduce the acreage of any farm planted in cotton 50 per cent. The commission also would supervise the conservation of water and soil and would have charge of soil erosion preventive measures. Opponents of the bill argued the expense of operating such a committee would be exorbitant and that it would cost $500,000 to get the commission through the first year.

In his plea to the members, McDonald said:

"According to press accounts, some members of the Texas legislature question the practicality of the farm conservation measure recently introduced in the house of representatives by Rep. Olsen of Yoakum and Stevenson of Junction and others.

"This is a bill similar to the one introduced by me in the 41st legislature and which was passed to the engrossing room. The measure before the house at present seeks to establish for the farm industry the same type of supervision of farm activities that has been established for the railroads, insurance companies and banks, and which, after years of operation, has proven worthy, practical and constitutional. Everyone realizes that something must be done for agriculture.

British Build Luge Flying Boat To Carry Transatlantic Air Mail

A huge all-metal monoplane, artist's sketch of which is shown above, is being built in England to make the British bid for transatlantic airmail service. It will be powered by six 900-horsepower engines and is to have a maximum speed of 145 miles an hour. Below are projected routes for airmail service to Europe.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The British are building an experimental long-range flying boat to bid for the potential harvest of transatlantic airmail service.

Scheduled service obviously depends on development of flying boats that can bridge the gulf regularly between the Azores and Bermuda.

So far no flying boat has demonstrated this ability, together with a capacity for carrying a payload. But British aviation experts are letting no grass grow under their pontoons, to borrow a phrase.

The air ministry is building an enormous all-metal monoplane in the Vickers plant, a ship to be powered by six 900-horsepower Rolls Royce engines. It will have a maximum speed of 145 miles per hour, as deduced from wind tunnel tests.

Luxurious accommodations for 40 passengers are provided in the plan, with detachable sleeping bunks for 20 passengers.

Operating quarters for the crew are totally enclosed and pilots are situated high up with an excellent view.

The hull is of stainless steel, the wing of metal, with the exception of the covering of the trailing portion, which is fabric. The main spar structure also is stainless steel throughout, including the nose covering.

It has a wing span of 174 feet and an overall height of 32 feet. It will carry 2,250 gallons of gasoline.

Loaded for six hours' endurance it can carry a payload of 16,000 pounds, it is estimated, and 6,800 pounds for 12 hours. On the 12-hour trip 16,500 pounds of gasoline would be consumed, the ship to have a total weight at start of 75,000 pounds.

For landing the ship can be throttled down to 72.5 per hour and climb at a rate of 750 feet a minute. Its service ceiling will be 11,000 feet. The normal range, it is estimated, will be 700 miles, with a maximum of 1,300.

Airline for Passengers Only Profits Over Short Route

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Four months of operation have convinced backers of a Washington-New York air line that there is money in aerial transport carrying passengers only.

C. T. LUDINGTON

They believe they have shown the aviation world for the first time that profits are possible without subsidy, so long as a natural short route is operated intensively.

The project is known as the Ludington line, headed by two brothers, C. T. and N. S. Ludington. Paul Collins, former air mail pilot, Gene Vidal, one-time army flier, and Amelia Earhart, transatlantic aviatrix, are in charge of operations, executive work and traffic.

"We have waited until our operations have given us a cross-section of all types of weather," Vidal said, "and now believe we have proved that operations confined to passengers can be profitable."

"In four months the line has made 2,200 trips, flown 430,000 plane-miles, and carried 17,100 passengers. We carry more passengers daily than all lines out of London in the most intensive operation between terminals in the world."

During December, which Vidal says was rated by the weather bureau as a poor flying month, the line flew 120,200 miles out its scheduled 124,000 miles. Since inauguration of the line, an average of 140 passengers has been carried daily. On exceptional days 250 to 270 passengers have flown. The line operates eight trimotors scheduled to fly 20 trips a day though 30 trips have been flown on some days.

During the four months it has been found that there is 50 per cent more traffic going to New York than to Washington. The heaviest traffic is carried between 3 and 5 o'clock in the afternoons. Between 30 and 35 per cent of the passengers are women.

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE COWS

By Mary Graham Bonner

The Little Black Clock met the children down at the foot of the magic path. It had been snowing all day and they told the Clock how they had played in the snow and what fun they had had.

"Well, you don't want a sleigh-ride or anything like that this evening. I think perhaps it would be fun if I simply turned the time back to last summer and we spent a nice, warm lazy afternoon in a meadow."

The children thought this would be a lovely change from the snowy weather.

Not that they didn't like the snow. They did. They loved it, but it was so wonderful to be able to have a summer afternoon once in a while just by means of the Clock's magic.

They wandered off toward a meadow. It was lovely and warm, and the sun was shining and the bees and insects were singing lazy little humming songs.

In the meadow many cows were resting. Several were looking about at the scenery. Others did not bother to look at anything.

They turned their heads as Peggy and John drew near. "Hello," said the Little Black Clock.

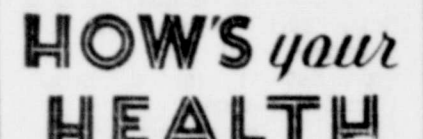

"Moo, moo, hello," they said. "What are you doing?" Peggy asked the cows, although it was really a foolish question.

"Nothing, nothing at all," said one of the cows. "There is nothing in the world that is so restful as simply to do nothing at all once in a while."

"People know nothing of this great joy. They always feel they must be doing something."

"Grown-ups are forever busy about this and that, working or rushing around. Children are always busy studying, playing games, or wondering what they will do. They all must be doing something all the time they are awake."

HOW'S your HEALTH

CARBON MONOXIDE

The winter season brings with it an ever increasing number of deaths due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Faulty gas fixtures, open coal fires, stoves prematurely dampened and exhaust gases from automobiles are the principal sources of this highly toxic poison, capable of destroying life in concentration as low as two-tenths of one per cent.

Carbon monoxide is the more dangerous because it is colorless, tasteless and practically odorless. Rescue crews of the bureau of mines carry canaries. Should the canaries show distress or become unconscious, it would warn the men of the presence of carbon monoxide.

The poisonous effects of this gas arise from the firm combination it forms with the hemoglobin of the red blood cells, preventing the blood from taking up and carrying oxygen to the tissues. Asphyxiation results.

When from ten to twenty per cent of the blood has been saturated with carbon monoxide, there results a sensation of tightness across the forehead, slight headache and a flushing, which is due to the dilation or relaxation of blood vessels in the skin.

As the percentage of blood affected increases, there are headaches, throbbing in the temples, dimness of vision, general weakness, nausea and vomiting, and collapse.

In the household, one of the most common sources of carbon monoxide is the unburned gas escape; from a faulty main or gas pipe, or faulty fixtures.

Hot water heaters and gas heating stoves may give out carbon monoxide, resulting from incomplete combustion.

The percentage of carbon monoxide coming from an automobile exhaust in a closed garage is large and may produce fatal poisoning in a very short time.

LETTERS to the Editor

OBSERVATIONS AROUND THE CAPITAL

By Rep. G. Y. Lee

The deliberation careful study given the bills that are introduced and passed to the various committees for investigation indicates the legislation is getting very careful study.

Most of the major committees have sub-committees to which the bills are referred for investigation, and after careful study they will report them back to the full committee. Then the measure is considered by the full committee together with the sub-committee report.

All bills are not what their names import, some very long and the language seems to have been used to hide the real purpose of the measure. Who was the great man who stated that "words are used to conceal the meaning of the speaker?" He must have had close touch with legislative bill.

One amendment to the constitution to be introduced this week provides for the state to have authority to procure sites and equipment for the production of electrical power and dispense it to the people. This will marshal all the utilities people in solid mass to oppose its passage. Big business seems to be against the government's showing any consideration for the general welfare of the people where it is not permitted to be the dispenser. Are the people only "SHEEP" to be shorn at the will of the specially anointed?

Senator Weinart, who has served the state long and faithfully, is one of the large men in the House. He is very able and his heart and soul is in his work for the relieving as much as possible the heavy burdens of our common citizenry. The people have a grand champion in the senator. Watch his work in the House of Representatives.

The bill introduced to create a utilities commission provides for the salary of three commissioners at a sum of $10,000 per annum. Why not place the duty with the railroad commission, whose members are elected by the people and owe their allegiance to the great mass of voters? Then the state could save $23,000 in the very beginning. The railroad commission could procure a man to attend to the enforcement of the law and be where the responsibility could not be evaded. This head of the department of utilities could be procured for some $5,000 to $7,000. Economy should not be effective on one class alone.

The people have a right to expect economy and they do require it in every branch of the government. Let's help the people.

Governor Sterling has all the ear marks of a man of the Jim Hogg type. The people of Texas are going to be proud of their governor. The manner in which he comprehends their needs, the heartfelt sympathy that he holds for their welfare, the big stick that he wields in their defense is giving encouragement to your legislators that have the people's interest at heart. Facing the future with grim determination to fight the battles of the people in a righteous cause, may the longing of every heart be that of helpful encouragement, and may encouragement be expressed. Give him the flowers now. It will be very vital to his success and the forward going of Texas.

Background
A Hollywood writer relates that he wandered into a vaudeville casting agency some years ago and was astounded to see an applicant reading Anatole France as he waited in line. The rest were thumbing theatrical trade papers and magazines, if anything.
The player with literary tastes was Edward G. Robinson, now the screen's foremost exponent of gangster types. And that is a point of some soreness with Robinson, whose stage versatility seems to mean nothing in the movies.
The varied characters he has played in the past are all obliterated now because he has made an impression as a gangster. And a gangster he will remain if the movies have their way. But Robinson may have something to say about that.

Pinch-Hitting
Mae Murray is back in pictures now, as a featured player supporting Lowell Sherman.
Her return recalls the time when her box-office name aided in the survival of a now prosperous movie company. The old Metro organization, now M-G-M, was in a slump after the war.
Robert Z. Leonard, director and producer, was releasing his Murray features through Metro, which early in 1921 had a tremendous but expensive money-maker in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." The Murray pictures, comparatively inexpensive and turned out rapidly, gave the company quick returns while profits from "The Four Horsemen" were coming in.

PUPILS FOUND DULL IF ROOM AIR IS COLD
(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Feb. 12.—How warmth affects dexterity of children in school is revealed in a report of the Industrial Health Research board.
It was found that where the cooling power of the air fell to a certain point, children were so cold that their manual dexterity was considerably reduced, especially when they were seated for one and three-quarter hours at a time.
In unheated open-air schools in cold wintry weather the efficiency of the children was only about half as great as that of children in well-warmed schools.

Important Stage "Names" Seen in Support in "Fast and Loose"

In addition to Miriam Hopkins, Carole Lombard, Ilka Chase, Frank Morgan and Charles Starrett, a quartet of well-known stage and screen players are seen in the cast of "Fast and Loose," which closes a run at the Palace Theatre tonight.
Henry Wadsworth, remembered for his excellent portrayal of the sailor in "Applause"; Winifred Harris, veteran stage actress; Harry Mestayer, formerly a Belasco star, and David Hutcheson, one of Broadway's favorite English actors, are in the cast.
Frank Morgan and David Hutcheson, character actors, added clever touches of their own to the dialog during the filming of the feature.
Hutcheson, who spent most of his life in England, is well acquainted with the type of English comedy character he portrays on the screen, and is, in reality, a technical expert as well as actor in scenes requiring the introduction of this type of character. His comedy is "pointed up" with English slang and idiosyncrasies.
Morgan usually "ad libs" his improvements on the dialog while scenes are in rehearsal. His ability to say the wrong thing at the right time is usually good for at least one laugh, and his suggestions are quite frequently used when the scene is "shot."

IMPATIENT CUPID SNIPS KNOT IN COURT'S RED TAPE

OWENSBORO, Ky., Feb. 12.—Cupid won a lively skirmish in the Owensboro court room when Mrs. Anna Belle Kirk, 34, and John Sneed, 55, applied for a marriage license.
Mrs. Kirk had been granted a divorce the same day, but the decree had not yet been entered upon the court minute books. The license clerk could not issue the license.
County Judge James Wilson, moved by the couple's predicament, asked Circuit Judge Geo. Wilson to have the decree entered immediately. This was done and the marriage went on.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. (Lungs and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascalets.)
Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated. Why resort to harsher things when Cascalets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime!

CAPITOL News

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, Feb. 12.—The "wide-open spaces" of West Texas have never produced a governor, but four West Texans loom in any discussion of prospective successors to Governor Sterling.

All of which discussion is somewhat premature, as there is no law against Mr. Sterling running next year to succeed himself. He has not said whether he would seek a second term but he made it plain he was not opposed to the second term policy. He cited that his newspaper, the Houston Post Dispatch, supported Walter E. Monteith in Monteith's successful campaign for re-election as mayor of Houston. M

The four West Texans who have been mentioned in connection with the governorship are Sen. Walter G. Woodward of Coleman, Sen. Clint C. Small of Wellington, Sen. Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock and W. R. Ely, chairman of the state highway commission.

Sen. Woodward won the friendship of the Sterling force and gained considerable notice when he took the lead in Sterling's campaign in the second primary last summer. Senator Small swept West Texas like a prairie fire in the first primary in the 1930 governor's race. Senator Parrish was urged by many friends to jump into the race last year but he declined. Judge Ely occupies the same position from which Mr. Sterling advanced to the chief executive's seat.

The three West Texas senators have different working policies and different personalities but they are alike in one particular—the are for the interests of West Texas.

Woodward is an orator. Handsome and well-groomed, he is one of the most forceful speakers in the Senate. He does not hesitate to "rip open" the senators who are opposing him on some proposal. Two of his hobbies are public utility regulation and the granting of water priority to municipal, domestic and irrigation to power companies.

Small did not enter the Senate until two years ago and was recognized as a leader long before the end of his first session. Through his title validation bill, he gained fame overnight. After the governor had vetoed the bill, he let the fight to pass it over the executive veto and was successful.

Small does not take part in the floor jousts as often as Woodward but he does not hesitate to express his convictions. When he gets up to speak he gives the impression of knowing what he is talking about. Small is a past master at the art of changing a bill to suit his desires through amendment rather than through introducing a proposal of his own.

On the surface Parrish is a big jovial funster, but underneath is a brain which is keenly alive to the problems of government and a courage which is not easily conquered.

One of Parrish's chief interests is lightening the burden on the taxpayers, through the reduction of appropriations and the like. He is not for a drivers' license law which would add one more tax to the number motorists pay. Instead he would bar from the highway motorists who violate the law.

To know the big Lubbock man is to like him and to know him well enough to converse at length with him is to receive some interesting commentaries on solutions of government problems. On occasion, he can deliver a real oration.

Ely's job is carrying on in highway building where Mr. Sterling left off. A man of good business sense, Ely has to look after the interests of the state in highway routing and aid and at the same time appease the delegations of various counties. Ely was an associate of Mr. Sterling on the highway commission during the Moody administration.

By the time the next campaign rolls around, any or all of these men may have been pushed into the background, and some one else may have forged to the lead. In the meanwhile, many are watching Jimmy Allred, Texas' young attorney general, another West Texan.

Inspection of Local B.Y.P.U. Revival Dairies is Finished Workers Secured

R. F. Zedlitz, city milk inspector, has completed his semi-annual grading here. All dairies, small dealers in milk, and cows have been inspected, milk tested, and permits issued according to the grading.

The Runnels County Creamery was issued a permit to sell grade A pasteurized milk in Ballinger, and the following were given permits to sell grade A raw milk: Kemp Dairy, Broadway Dairy, Witt Dairy, Whidden Dairy and Jones Dairy.

Milk producers who do not sell to retail trade but to the local pasteurizing plant and who were given grade A permits are the Michaels Dairy and Fowler Dairy. Those selling to the local plant wholesale and who were given grade B permits were D. Oliver Dairy, J. Oliver Dairy, Smith Dairy, F. Kemp Dairy and G. Nunn Dairy.

In addition to the above those who have one or more cows and sell some milk were given grade D raw milk permits. These are: Mrs. H. U. Jones, Mrs. L. Farris, H. Wiesepepe, S. P. Hathaway, C. D. Middleton, E. L. DeWitt, R. R. Allman, F. W. Welhausen, A. B. Legate, R. E. White, and T. A. Duke.

Local dairies granted permits are operating under the standard city milk ordinance, under supervision of city and state authorities, cooperating with the the federal health service.

Dr. Zedlitz stated that a big improvement was noted over that of the last grading period. Dealers are trying to meet every requirement of the law, it was declared, and even go further in improving sanitation of their places.

The average amount of grade A raw and pasteurized milk sold in the city daily during the past six months was 268 gallons. The average amount of grade D raw milk sold daily during the same period was 12 gallons.

Dairies have cooperated in every possible way with the inspector since the milk ordinance was passed here and much has been done to improve the quality of this necessity. Practically all the larger dairies have equipped their places to handle grade A milk and others are said to be planning changes to secure this class of permit.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Woods are visiting this week with relatives and friends at San Antonio.

State workers have been secured for the Associational B. Y. P. U. revival to be held in this county from April 4 to 12, inclusive. Miss Grace Conn, field secretary of the state B. Y. P. U. will be here as general superintendent of the revival in this county and will be in charge of the classes at Winters for the entire week.

Hunter Lyon of Dallas will be sent here by the state board to assist in the revival in this county and will be with the Ballinger church for the entire week to direct and teach in their work. Mr. Lyon is a brother of H. C. Lyon, superintendent of the Ballinger schools and for several years has been active in B. Y. P. U. work over the state.

Miss Conn is a well known worker in all parts of the state and is sought in connection with all schools and special efforts of the organization.

A large number of churches in this county have signed up for the revival and to each of these churches will be sent a special worker from Howard Payne College at Brownwood. The plan will bring all the churches cooperating the work together at the Ballinger Baptist Church in afternoon meetings each day during the week. Reports from the different churches will be heard at these services and other important phases of the young people's work will be discussed by the two principal workers, Miss Conn and Mr. Lyon.

Each night the churches will hold their own meetings with a special leader in charge of the work in each community.

Churches in the county which have already signed up for the work include Bethel, Ballinger, Blanton, Content, Miles, Pumphrey, Paint Rock, Robert Lee and Winters. All churches of the association are expected to enter before the starting date and take advantage of the training to be derived from capable leaders who will teach the work and conduct the revival.
