QUARREL OVER LIQUOR STILL ENDS IN DEATH

Another Body is Found Near Blazing Oil Well

(By Associated Press)
GLADEWATER, Tex., May 2.—A body, believed to be either that of Bill Harroun or Bob Murdock, two of the nine men who perished in the explosion and fire Tuesday at the Sinclair No. 1 Cole oil well near here, was recovered from the draw pit today by workmen who are preparing the burning well for an explosive shot in an attempt to extinguish the blaze tomorrow.

The body was so badly burned it was impossible immediately to determine which of the two missing men it was. Other bodies which have been recovered have been identified.

The body later was identified as that of Bob Murdock, of Orlando, Oklahoma, a driller, through a key ring.

ROCK CARVING REVIVES "BURIED TREASURE" TALK

(By Associated Press)
CLEBURNE, May 2.—The finding of a carving on a sandstone rock and the bones of what is believed to have been an Indian below it has caused speculation in Johnson county as to buried treasure and legends of the Redmen that may lead to more discoveries.

A party of Cleburne men made the find at the Irwin T. Ward from eight miles southeast of Cleburne. They brought a part of one of the bones back with them and reported that the carving on the sandstone resembled the head of an Indian.

2,500 People Witness Health Pageant; Children are Awarded Health Buttons

A crowd estimated at 2,500 from all sections of Runnels county witnessed the staging of the May Day health program here Friday afternoon. Practically every school in the county was represented and many parents and teachers were here for the event.

The program was staged by the Runnels County Public Health Nursing Service as the climax of its successful year's work in this county. The success of the work was shown at the conclusion of the program when more than 480 children marched by the reviewing stand and received health buttons. This group was cut because of the fact that many had not been vaccinated against small pox, and, as R. E. White, county superintendent, explained, had the vaccinations been given the number would have run over 1,800.

The stage on the court house lawn was beautifully decorated and roped away from the crowd by local women, and with a background of beautiful trees was very pretty. The Ballinger Band opened the program with a short concert while the spectators gathered and found places where they could see the program, and the children to receive buttons were ushered to a reserved section on the lawn directly in front of the stage.

With a heralding blast from the band the royal procession began that brought the health queen

175 Club Women On Inspection Trip

Runnels county club women gathered here Friday and left for an inspection of the rooms entered in the living room contest of this county. Approximately 175 women with their families made the trip leaving Ballinger at 8 o'clock and returning here about 3 in the afternoon.

In the forenoon the clubbers visited the place of Mrs. Fred Prinzing, Miles, Mrs. R. B. Martin of Maverick, and Mrs. Ira McNeil at North Norton. The party assembled at noon Friday at Norton and spread their lunch in the tabernacla there. All women on the trip carried lunch baskets and the dinner was very enjoyable with many good things to appeal to the appetite. Some suggested that the dinner was proof of a conservation program in the county or so much could not have been assembled at one time.

Mrs. W. Larkin Hayley of Norton believes in bestowing flowers to the living and surprised with a gorgeous bouquet the following: Mrs. Ira McNeil, first winner; Mrs. Fred Prinzing, second winner; Mrs. J. C. Taylor and Mrs. R. D. Martin, both winners in the contest; Mrs. T. A. Crockett, winner of 4-H pantry contest in 1930 and Mrs. Lura Hollingsworth, county home demonstration agent.

After the lunch was completed the following clubs entertained with stunts: Bethel, North Norton, Maverick, Victory, and Norton.

The last place visited in the afternoon was that of Mrs. J. C. Taylor and from there the party came to Ballinger to attend the health pageant.

Those on the trip report a very enjoyable day's outing and many complimentary remarks were heard of the four living rooms visited. The visitors to these rooms were surprised at the low expense of improvement which averaged only $14.77 to the room.

PLANES CARRY QUAILS FROM LAREDO TO NEW YORK

(By Associated Press)
LAREDO, May 2.—Bob whites, quail from Mexico which refuse to fly voluntarily to the United States from Mexico are now moving northward in large quantities—but in cages aboard airplanes. They are being imported from Mexico by Dr. Frank Kent of San Antonio for breeding purposes and are going on to places in New York and Massachusetts, where they are used in bird dog field trials. It is reported.

Special crates with self feeding devices are provided and the birds are fed water-soaked grain en route. The transportation of the quail by airplane was made with the railway express. Dr. Kent recently imported 200,000 quail from Mexico and shipped to all parts of this country for restocking reservations and for other purposes.

California is experimenting in the use of airplanes for sowing rice and distributing fertilizer. Indiana has used planes for dusting apple orchards.

GREENVILLE, Tex., May 2.—Miss Maud Summerlin, of Greenville, was injured internally and is not expected to live; and Elton Thompson, Enloe, Carlton Robinson, Naples, and Miss Montie Campton, Greenville, were injured early today when the automobile in which they were returning from a dance at Paris swerved to avoid striking a freight train and turned over.

Before the wreck the party stopped to aid a group of young men repairing a tire on another automobile when a farmer shot at them from his house nearby, wounding young Robinson in the shoulder. Placing Robinson in the car the group was speeding to a doctor when the wreck occurred.

Thompson, thrown from the machine by the impact, suffered a crushed foot which was amputated.

Crews Men Injured When Car Hits Calf

T. E. Beard, teacher in the school at Crews, and H. L. Berry, trustee of the school, were injured in a car accident Saturday morning at 6:30 one mile west of Comanche. The two men left Ballinger Saturday morning for Stephenville and near Comanche ran into a calf in the road, almost demolishing their car and injuring both men.

Mr. Berry was only bruised and scratched, but Mr. Beard sustained a fractured hip and probable internal injuries, according to medical examiners at the Medical Arts Hospital in Brownwood where the men were rushed in an ambulance.

The calf which caused the accident was killed instantly when the car struck it.

The last word received here from Brownwood indicated that Mr. Beard was resting well and a later examination was expected to reveal the extent of his injuries.

Mrs. C. C. Gannaway has returned from a visit to Newcastle and will be at home here.

SUNDOWN STORIES

SHIP CALLING

By Mary Graham Bonner Now that they had visited the big ship and had seen everything fine about it, the Little Black Clock said that they were going to continue with the calls he had planned for them.

So they got into their plane and they spent the whole day flying from one ship to another.

On each ship was a splendid landing deck and, to their surprise, on most of the decks they found many planes beside their own.

Most of these belonged to people who just wanted an ocean voyage and did not care about going to any particular place.

She was always so excited when she could see another boat far, far in the distance and then the Little Black Clock would say:

"Shall we visit that one?"

"Well—" answered Peggy and John. "Are either of you hungry?" the Little Black Clock asked as they visited a ship late in the day.

"We'll go and see the captain of this ship," he added.

HOW'S your HEALTH

BOTTLE-FED BABIES Breast-fed babies are better off. Bottle-fed ones do not appear to thrive as well.

Medical science has long sought an adequate explanation for this difference. It has been found, in part at least, in the self-evident fact that after all human breast milk must be best fitted for human babies.

Even modification of cows' milk in accordance with the very best calculated formula doesn't convert it into human milk.

There is also evidence to show that human milk contains vitamins which are essential to the normal growth of the infant.

An important advantage in breast feeding is that the milk passes directly, so to say, from the producer to the consumer, with little opportunity for contamination of the milk.

But in bottle feeding, the milk is subjected to much handling and the risk of its being rendered impure is much greater.

This danger can be overcome by scrupulous care and cleanliness. Bottles, nipples and all containers should be sterilized by boiling, protected against contact

Doumer, "Man of Grit," Leads Candidates Seeking Presidency of French Republic

By T. T. Topping PARIS, May 2.—(AP)—Paul Doumer, leading candidate to succeed President Gaston Doumergue, is France's "man of grit."

When four of Doumer's sons were killed at short intervals in the world war, a wave of sympathy went up throughout France for the statesman.

But the courageous Doumer clamped tight his teeth and his entire attitude proclaimed that he would rather be known as "Pater Fortissimus" than "Pater Dolorosus."

Today he never mentions the sons he gave for this country and his friends and colleagues respect his sorrow.

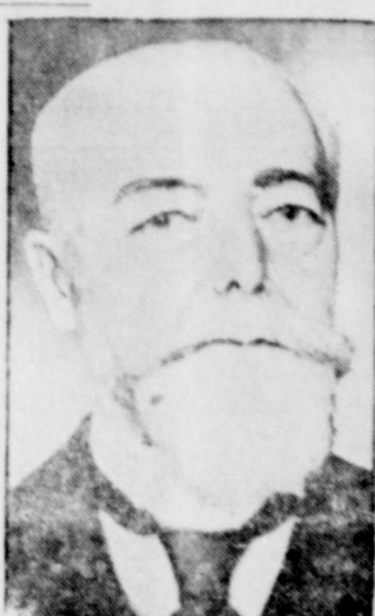

One of the strongest arguments for advancing Doumer to the post of "first citizen" when the national assembly meets on May 13, is that, coming from a man who has suffered so keenly from the war, words of peace toward late enemies or potential adversaries would carry a lot of weight in international circles.

Doumer was born in Aurillac, March 22, 1857.

Like many leading politicians of France today he started as a newspaper man. He veered to politics as private secretary of Charles Floquet, president of the chamber, in 1887.

He was elected a deputy for the first time in 1888 as a representative of the Department of the Aisne. Without interruption his mandate was renewed until January, 1912, when he was chosen senator for Corsica, a post he has held since.

Meanwhile he had been minister of finance in the Leon Bourgeois cabinet from 1895 to 1896. This was his first portfolio and it came after he had spent only seven years in parliament. Thus except for Poincare, he is one of the youngest ministers ever selected in the Third Republic.

From the ministry of finance he went to Indo-China as governor general. He remained in Hanoi from 1896 until 1902.

The years 1905 and 1906 saw him president of the chamber of deputies. In his leisure hours he wrote a book, "L'Indochine," in 1905. In it he showed a deep knowledge of oriental problems.

In 1906 he published "The Book of My Sons," a story about his sons whom he was to lose in the world war.

This is the second time that Doumer has been a candidate for the presidency. In 1905 he was the opponent of Fallieres and received 371 votes as against 449 for the latter. Doumer has been president of the French senate since January, 1927.

Doumer is a studious man with a great liking for mathematics and is an authority on finance and economics.

About New York

By Richard Massock NEW YORK, May 2.—(AP)—

Green grow the sidewalks around the Hudson tube terminal. Suburbanites again are all a-twitter with their annual yen for gardening.

New York's bulb, seed and plant market is a six-block mess of greenery every spring, when commuting Jerseyites feel the rustling of the verdant spirit in their veins.

Saturday afternoons during the planting period—April 1 to June 15—one store alone is visited by an average of 3,000 householders, shopping for seedlings.

And temporary sapling stands break out like a layer of fresh sod.

It's a curious sight along the dingy gutters of the lowest West Side.

Amateur Planters There is a nature racket, too, one of the old established houses said.

Fly-by-night dealers in shrubs and plants set up stalls to catch the business of ignorant city folk who want to start a garden but don't know the difference between arbor vitae and peach trees.

Maybe the old established house is just jealous, but anyway thousands of stone-trodding commuters get a lot of fun out of selecting front lawn beautifiers.

Rose bushes, poplar saplings and tubs of boxwood overflow the sidewalks of Barclay, Greenwich and Vesey streets. Store fronts expose rows of pansy plants, iris bulbs and innumerable other varieties of horticultural decorations.

Few people go in for vegetables. It's the touch of beauty they yearn for, as expressed in a recent bit of reportorial prose: "There are gray-haired men chained to desks in Wall Street, tired women in kitchens of Harlem, traimen dragging their lives out on subway expresses that dream day-dreams of sunny, open woodlands back among the hills, the heedless feet of childhood scuffling the dead leaves in spring woods—and the wonderment of finding the first hepatica blossoms and carrying them in chubby, eager hands to put on the teacher's desk in the little red school house at the cross-roads."

That's how we New Yorkers cut loose in the good old sappy springtime.

Floral Lore

A lot of prominent New Yorkers take pride in their lavish gardens. John D. Rockefeller, jr., is supposed to have a bed of 250,000 daffodils, or maybe it's a $250,000 bed of daffodils. T. A. Havemeyer, the sugar magnate, is a lily fancier.

John Wister, brother of Owen, the writer, is a famous iris grower. Incidentally the wisteria was named for the Wister family. It seems the Wisters introduced it from Japan, or some place.

But the big flower fans seldom visit the market. The superintendents of their country estates buy the spring layout from traveling salesmen, who are sent out by the downtown nurserymen.

It is only commuters who shop in person and for them another curbstone market nearby displays garden tools, along with fishing tackle, barometers and other knick-knacks designed to make us jittery palefaces long for the outdoor life.

LIGHTNING FLASHES CREATE FREE NITROGEN FOR FARMS

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, May 2.—

Fertilizer, in the form of nitrogen, is "pulled out of the air" by lightning, says the bureau of mines.

When a lightning flash causes discharge of electricity in the atmosphere, nitrogen combines with oxygen to form oxide of nitrogen.

The oxides are dissolved in rain to make nitrous and nitric acids, which are carried down to the earth's surface and washed into the soil.

It is estimated that lightning results in the fixation of 100,000,000 tons of nitrogen every year.

Mad Pursuit

BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: Nora Lake's dream for sympathy when she nurses the afflicted patient brings an illness caused by an infected hand. Her father, realizing that his quest of art has deprived the motherless girl of a home, would like to see her but her initial interest in the man is due to his being the brother of the Jonathan Thayer she once had met. When Julia plans to marry Mrs. Nevers, Nora, bringing Nicholas the news, finds him disconsolate because his painting hand is paralyzed. Impulsively, she asks him to take her across Mexico to Naples, they set out for Albany, but Nicholas leaves himself on the first night train. Then, in a moment of self-sacrifice, she is proceeding to a hospital. Nora keeps in bitter self-reproach.

Chapter 12

APPRAISING EYES

NORA sat in the old city station, her legs huddled about her feet. From time to time she glanced up at the clock and then with apprehension at the station doors. How many times in the last hour had she turned with a trembling intensity as some stranger passed her. She had thought of running away, of refusing to meet Nicholas family face to face. But that was what her father would have done, and, knowing it she sat on. Would it be Jon who came to meet her? Or that step-sister, Damon?

She wondered miserably if she could go through with it. But she would. She must. There was only one thing she wanted now, the old house, quiet and peace. She did not want to come alive again, for that would hurt too much. But a sky and a garden and trees. They couldn't hurt you.

No one had come for her. Perhaps no one ever would. The doctor had sent the wireless for her, to Jon and to her own people.

Then glancing up, she saw Jonathan Thayer. She would have known him anywhere though it was five years since she had seen him. The pale clear-cut face, the lips a little insolent, and that air of cold reserve.

She looked at him again, glancing uncertainly about, studying the people. She waited. He would smile when he saw her, he would remember her at once. For the first time a little throb of feeling seemed to break through the ice at her heart. He met her eyes as he came toward, hesitated, stood before her with his soft hat in his hand.

"I'm Jonathan Thayer. Are you?"

"Yes," she answered almost inaudibly.

He had not recognized her. At first she could not believe it. She understood his expression. It was one of horrified dismay. His eyes raked her in silent criticism. She still wore the blue suit and scarlet blouse.

"I hope you haven't been waiting long," Jon was saying. "I was out when the wire came saying on what train you would arrive."

He was studying her with quick glances. What a slim long-legged little creature she was with that white face held under a fierce control. She could have borne his pity, but his frank dismay was unbearable. She disliked him violently.

"Of course you must have something to eat first," he said.

He acted as though nothing had happened, as he asked for her trunk check and found that she had no trunk. There was only one thing she could not part with. That was the painting of the peasant woman, she clung to it, in spite of his offer to buy it, put with her bags.

to stop before they should cross the street.

He said nothing as they walked to the restaurant. She felt she might burst into tears before this boy who showed so plainly that he had not wanted to see her, and never wanted to see her again.

Two waiters gave every attention. Jon Thayer seemed to draw out in others a desire to serve him; or perhaps it was his careless manner of being used to money. Nora was keenly aware of this. Her antagonism made her more sensitive to each small gesture.

"Your cable came about a week ago," Jon said avoiding her eyes and speaking with a hard composure. "I have and my step-father asked me to tell you that you are to come to them as soon as they are free. Unfortunately, we have some cousins with us now and the house is crowded or I should take you home with me."

"Oh no," Nora answered. "It isn't necessary. Perhaps I can tell you anything you want me to—and then I'll go." She stopped, catching her lower lip between her teeth.

"Not here! Not now!" he said as a waiter appeared.

"Have you ever been to this city before?" Jon asked. "Not had when you set used to it. Although I wouldn't live here except that I work in one of the beauty warehouses down by the river. My father owned it," he ended.

She could not talk about deplorable things; and when the waiter brought the chicken she found she could not eat. Her eyes filled with tears and she had to fight to keep them back. The terrible part was that she was not crying for Nicholas, for anything, except, perhaps her own bitter disillusion.

He met her eyes and his hand on the table clenched, but he talked on casually until she had control of herself.

"You're not eating anything," he said.

"You're not doing very well yourself."

He took out a cigarette case and lit one for her. She could see his fingers quite steady as he lit it. She closed her eyes for a moment and Jon saw the sweep of dusky lashes on her cheeks, the weary grace of her slim long body. A wild cry came to her mind. A wild cry for little things, with a haunting charm, perhaps, that he had been too hurt to see at first. He said, leaning toward her.

"I don't like to take you to a hotel tonight. But I don't know what else to do."

"I have an aunt who lives here, a Mrs. Durant. I haven't seen her since I was eight. But I cabled to her too, so she knows—" her voice broke, she steadied it, "and I can go there."

"But I'll come tomorrow to take you home. Damon wants to see you. Do you think that you could come then?"

"Oh yes," she said, thinking that the quicker it was over, the better. The waiter brought them small cups of black coffee. The silence between them became charged with all they dared not say. Jon put down his cup; it rattled in the saucer and he said in a hoarse voice:

Johnny Farrell on GOLF

By Johnny Farrell
(Former American Open Champion)
As Told to Alan Gould
NO. 4 THE STANCE

WRONG... Legs too far apart, knees too stiff. RIGHT... Legs moved in, knees loosened to permit free and easy pivot.

The proper stance for the drive is with the knees relaxed, slightly bent.

This makes it easy to develop the relaxed body pivot. Stiffness at the address, with the feet too far apart, makes it impossible to pivot properly.

Relax, too, on the follow-through. No not stiffen up at the finish. The fullness and ease of the follow-through is a factor in giving power and distance.

Do not sacrifice the accuracy of tee shots, however, by too much stress on distance.

Too often the player loses control off the tees by the desire to slug the ball out of sight. I know it is difficult to check this desire, especially among the players who get pretty good distance anyway, but it seldom pays dividends.

Willie MacFarlane's play at Miami, where he single-handedly beat Gene Sarazen and myself in the four-ball matches last winter, furnished a great lesson along this line.

Willie was outdriven by his partner, Wiffy Cox, as well as by Gene and myself, all the way frequently by as much as 50 yards. However, he was invariably "inside" when we got to the green. He was straight all the way. That is the important thing.

How often have you seen the older player on the club course, satisfied to hit his 150-175 yard shots straight down the fairway, the woods or traps? It doesn't pay to try to kill the ball, either off the tee, or in an attempt to make up for ground lost by a poor shot.

Johnny Farrell on the left imitates the dub to show the wrong stance. The correct form which made him one of the best pros in the country is shown at the right.

Businesses Which Help Build City

Coca Cola Bottling Company
The Coca Cola Bottling Company of Ballinger is indeed an important factor in the commercial life of Ballinger and serves the citizens of this county with wholesome beverages.

J. E. Davis, manager and owner of the company, came to Ballinger in November, 1919, purchasing the Ballinger Bottling Works from W. A. Bridwell. Prior to taking charge of the local plant Mr. Davis had engaged in the bottling industry for 20 years and was thoroughly familiar with every detail of drink making.

In 1922 the firm name was changed to the Coca Cola Bottling Company. Mr. Davis having entered into a contract with that famous beverage manufacturer to bottle Coca Cola, and the Ballinger plant is the only drink maker in Runnels county entitled to bottle the beverage.

In the period the business has been operated here under the control of Mr. Davis three complete changes have been made in the equipment, going from old foot power to a modern, completely automatic plant. The most modern machinery available is used and the factory and from the time a dirty bottle is placed in the large sterilizing machine until the drink is bottled, capped, inspected and placed in a case nothing is touched by hand or exposed.

Inspectors for the Coca Cola Company inspect the plant not more than sixty days apart, arriving without warning. They make a rigid inspection and expect dealers operating under their brand-name to score 100 per cent in quality of drinks and general sanitation.

Since coming to Ballinger Mr. Davis has developed the plant's output from about 13,000 to 50,000 cases annually. The best year was experienced in 1923.

ANNUAL FACULTY PICNIC IS HELD FRIDAY NIGHT

The entire faculty of the Ballinger schools enjoyed their annual picnic Friday night at the dam near Paint Rock on the Concho river. All members were present with the exception of three and everyone reported an excellent time and wonderful picnic supper.

The members of the faculty gathered at the high school Friday afternoon at 5:30 and left at once for the location. Supper was spread just before dark after weiners and bacon had been drolled and tables arranged. After each member was served they gathered around the camp fire for the meal and later in the night sang songs and played games until time to come home.

The annual picnic of this body is looked forward to each year and is staged just before the end of school. There are two more weeks of work before school will be dismissed and the members return to their homes or to summer schools.

Harold Shoes Blues Away in New Thrill Film

When better thrills are made, Harold Lloyd makes them in "Feet First," his latest talkie, which comes to the Palace Theatre tomorrow for a three-day engagement.

For Harold was thinking of "Safety Last," when he made "Feet First."

"Safety Last" was the greatest thriller that the spectacled genius of mirth-and-gasps ever made. In it he was seen climbing about, falling, and catching himself just in time on the roof-edges and cornices of sky-scrapers.

"Feet First" has thrills in it just like that, only more so.

Harold is seen as an ambitious young apprentice shoe clerk who, in his effort to make good with his employer gets into all kinds of humorous situations—putting gun-boat sized shoes on the cutes tootsies of his employer's wife; crashing a society lady in order to impress a young ball he falls in love with; finding himself aboard a trans-Pacific steamer without a ticket; hiding in a mail bag only to be picked up and carried with the mail on a ship-to-shore airplane, and finally landing on a painter's scaffolding in mid-air, wrapped up in the mail-bag.

Then follow those hair-raising thrills which are so typically Lloyd. He wriggles free from the bag, looks about him, and realizes with horror that a slight jolt will catapult him hundreds of feet to the ground below. He almost loses his grip in one screaming lurch after another, but finally makes a safe descent to terra firma.

Needless to say he wins the girl—and he deserves to, after such schools to get buttons. Contributing to the success of the day were many individuals and organizations, however the Boy Scouts in their police duty were largely responsible for this. These lads were on the job at every turn and rendered a valuable service. The Ballinger Band was also due its share of the credit along with the police department, Camp Fire Girls and many others too numerous to mention separately.

The crowd cooperated with the Scouts on every request and stayed in place without crowding down close where it would have interfered with the work of the children.

Every school in the county with the exception of five took part in the program and had children present to receive health buttons.

At the conclusion of the program every school child in the county lined up and marched past tables where they were served a bottle of iced soda water by the Coca Cola Bottling Company of Ballinger. J. E. Davis, manager of that plant, asked to be allowed to treat the youngsters attending and a total of 960 bottles were dispensed in short order at the close of the program.

Those who planned and directed the work of the pageant are being congratulated for staging one of the prettiest and most successful programs ever presented here.

MODERN MARRIAGE IS DEFENDED BY LECTURER

(By Associated Press) EL PASO, May 2.—Modern marriage was defended by Mrs. Margaret Wells Wood, social hygiene lecturer, in an address here before co-eds of the College of Mines.

"There is nothing wrong with modern marriage," she said. "The trouble lies with people who do not understand each other."

She described poor health, economical reasons and abuses of the body as causes for marital unhappiness in most cases. Until the World War, she said, the extent of prostitution and social disease was not realized.

Petting she described as something done just as freely many years ago, but not as openly as in modern times, and at all times injurious to both boy and girl.

Narcotics Bill is Passed by Senate

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, May 2.—Texas will join hands with the federal government in checking the traffic in narcotics, if the Texas senate plans materialize.

The senate recently passed a bill by J. W. E. H. Beck of DeKalb which sought to make possession and transportation of narcotics a violation of the state statutes.

Beck explained passage of such legislation would have the effect of placing a double check on narcotics distribution. He said his bill did not propose to interfere with federal enforcement of the narcotics acts, but rather sought to aid enforcement.

The Beck bill covered planting, growing, possession and transportation of marijuana, an intoxication producing weed. Marijuana is used in cigarettes which are prepared for the addicts, or which they themselves prepare. The bill mentioned marijuana, cannabis indica and coca leaves.

Marijuana weed has been known to grow in Central Texas. The plant sometimes reaches a height of from 10 to 12 feet. The leaves are gathered at the proper time, when in a ripened state, to be used as substitute for cigarettes. The Beck bill would require a permit to plant or grow these plants.

Some of the provisions of the Beck bill are:

Providing for the confiscation of automobiles or other vehicles used in the illicit transportation of narcotics.

Requiring persons engaged in prescribing narcotics to first undergo a physical examination.

Proposing to treat addicts at state's expense by incarcerating them in state institutions upon recommendation of the state board of health.

Shops, warehouses, building and places frequented by addicts, and automobiles, vehicle, steamships engaged in transporting narcotics illegally would be brought under the Nuisance Act.

Doctors placing addicts under treatment would be compelled to advise the state board of health within 72 hours of beginning treatment.

The bill proposed that no narcotics prescription should be refilled, and stated further that the prescription should not be filled later than two days after it was written.

Under the bill any dispenser of narcotics, upon second conviction, would have his license revoked.

The Beck bill drew the attention of Governor Ross S. Sterling who recently, by message, urged the legislature to give the bill careful consideration with a view to enacting it into law. The governor explained Texas was without statutes governing the growing, possession and transportation of such "dopes" as marijuana.

Urges Rural Fire Companies

WASHINGTON, May 2.—If farmers would provide themselves with simple fire-fighting equipment, organize community fire companies and use more care in construction of buildings, the nation's $100,000,000 annual farm fire loss could be cut in half.

Miss Dorothy Lynn Is Contest Winner

Miss Dorothy Lynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lynn, has been announced winner of first prize in the essay contest held in connection with the recent Ford show at San Angelo. The Harwell Motor company of Ballinger sponsored the essay contest and those who visited the show submitted their papers here which were sent to the Dallas office to be judged.

Miss Lynn scored a grade of 98 on her paper to win the first prize of $10 given by the local Ford dealer. Second place went to Leslie Sheffey and third to Bobbie Marie Avey.

Following is the essay submitted on "what makes quality in the Ford."

"The quality of the Ford first consists in the fact that it is made from raw materials which are assembled at the great Ford plant in Detroit, Michigan, and are converted into parts that go to make up a complete unit. These parts are made and tested by experienced and skilled engineers and mechanics, therefore every part is made exactly as specified. This gives quality, endurance, efficiency and appearance.

"The entire mechanism is as perfect as can be made by human hands; consequently the quality found in the Ford car can not be surpassed.

"Another point not to be overlooked in the quality of the Ford is that the most modern machinery that is used for purpose of making it in the factory.

"The Ford consumes less gas per mileage than any other car. Tests have been made and it has been found that it can run fifty-eight miles on one gallon of gasoline. Can any other make of car measure up to that standard?"

"It furnishes high speed, abundance of power and a 'quick pick-up'.

"The body lines are never excelled by other cars that are priced much higher.

"If you are looking for a car of quality you will find this in every model of the Ford car.

"Quality is the watch word of the Ford Motor Company.

UNIFORM HIGHWAY SIGNS TO AID EUROPEAN DRIVERS

(By Associated Press) GENEVA, May 2.—A simplification of highway signs was agreed upon by a European conference held here under League of Nations auspices.

The conference adopted the following three types of road signs: a triangular sign to indicate danger, a circular sign to show legal regulations and a rectangular sign to give travel information.

Countries party to this agreement will seek to eliminate unnecessary signs on European roads and to make those employed conform to the simple scheme of three types.

Banquet Thursday To Honor Workers

The Lions and Rotary clubs and the chamber of commerce will unite here next Thursday night in a banquet at the Central hotel in honor of those men in the county who have given of their time in carrying on the Red Cross and federal farm loan work here.

The banquet has been planned for these men to show the appreciation of their work and tickets will be open to everyone at fifty cents per plate. The tickets will be placed on sale at all drug stores Monday morning and the sale will close Wednesday night in order to notify the hotel how many plates to arrange. The banquet is open to everyone, both men and women, and all local people are urged to secure their tickets early next week.

In a small way local residents know of the work that has been conducted in this county but the details are even beyond understanding unless heard from these workers. A number of men have devoted their full time to the work without compensation and have met with many difficulties in carrying on according to the plan of the organizations furnishing the money.

A program committee has been named and will arrange a pleasing and entertaining program to follow the banquet. This program will be ready and will be published next Tuesday.

Both civic clubs and the directors of the chamber of commerce have voted for the staging of this banquet and the presidents of the organizations unite in urging their members to attend 100 per cent. No tickets will be sold after Wednesday night.

Earlier planting of rice fields has been found possible by the use of airplanes in California while the soil is still to wet for ground machinery.
