Mother's Day is To Be Observed

Practically all the Ballinger churches will observe Mother's Day in some service Sunday. On account of the baccalaureate exercises in the morning the usual time for observance of Mother's Day will be impossible and other arrangements will be made to remember mothers in some way during the day.

The First Methodist Church will hold a special service at 9:45 Sunday morning with all the Sunday school assembled for a program in the main auditorium of the church. Members of the Sunday school will be given parts on the program and special music will be rendered by the choir. Rev. T. E. Bowman will give a short message on the observance of the day and the entire Sunday school time will be used in this service. Dr. R. O. Sory, new presiding elder, will be with the church in the evening service to deliver his first message here to the local congregation and special Mother's Day music will be given at this service.

The Eighth Street Presbyterian Church will use the evening service for the staging of a special Mother's Day program. A complete program for this service will be found in the regular church announcements. The church will not hold morning service but will join in the public school exercises at the Ballinger Baptist Church at 11 a. m.

Rev. F. M. Crabtree, pastor of the First Christian Church, will preach in San Angelo in the forenoon, taking the place of J. William Stephens, who will come here to address the senior class of the Ballinger high school in the baccalaureate service. In the evening this church will observe Mother's Day in an appropriate manner.

At the First Presbyterian Church Mother's Day will be remembered at the Sunday school hour and no church service will be held in its observance. Most of the Sunday school will assemble together for the Mother's Day program at the beginning of Sunday school while the children will have their own program in a separate section.

Rev. J. H. McClain, pastor, said no plans had been made for Mother's Day at the Ballinger Baptist Church. Both the morning baccalaureate and the county-wide graduation service in the afternoon will be held in this church, making it almost impossible to arrange any special programs for the day.

Mother's Day was created in 1913 by a special act of congress and the observance of the event instituted, the president issuing a proclamation for the first national observance in 1914 and fixing the second Sunday in May for the annual date. Its object is the well-being and honor for the home, its observance demanding some act of kindness, gift or tribute in remembrance of the mother to whom grateful attention is due. An international Mother's Day association was later organized and still functions.

It is customary for everyone to wear on this day a flower in honor of his mother. If she be living a red flower should be worn and a white flower honors the mother who is departed this life.

Two School Programs Will be Given at Baptist Church Sunday

Sixty-one seniors will take part in the baccalaureate service here Sunday morning at the Baptist church which is the first program in connection with commencement. The Ballinger high school faculty was in session all Saturday morning determining those who would be included in the graduation class for 1931. By noon all grades had been assembled and the sixty-one students announced.

Baccalaureate will be held at the 11 o'clock hour and Rev. William Stephens, pastor of the First Christian Church, San Angelo, will deliver the message.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Baptist church the county-wide graduation will be held at which time 182 students will be given diplomas for completion of seventh grade work. Ed. Nunnally of San Angelo Junior College will deliver the address.

Dr. Brooks is At Death's Door

(By Associated Press) WACO, May 9.—Attending physicians today said President Samuel Palmer Brooks, of Baylor University, was "very low and may die at any moment."

Only last night, Dr. Brooks, ill with cancer, ceased the labor of signing diplomas for this year's graduates of Baylor, leaving the task incomplete with 275 diplomas signed out of 428.

Today the noted educator was under the influence of opiates to relieve his pain.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Tomlinson, Leonard, Texas, are here visiting their daughter, Mrs. D. J. Patterson, and Mr. Patterson.

"ECHO" DEVICE PERFECTED TO FIND DEPTH OF BEDROCK

IOWA CITY, Ia., May 9.—The principle of the depth-finder used to determine the depth of water in the sea has been applied to a machine for finding how deep bedrock lies below the earth's surface.

A device perfected by Austin N. Stanton of this city sets up pressure waves directed at the bedrock, which are finally reflected back to the surface. By determining the length of time and considering characteristics of the terrain it is possible to compute how far below the surface is the bedrock.

Ready to Start On Bridge Work

The Austin Bridge company had everything at their gravel pit here on the J. T. Moreland farm ready for operation and expected to make a test run late Saturday afternoon and be ready for full time operation Monday morning.

J. B. Templeton, vice president of the company, spent most of Saturday here inspecting the job and seeing that everything was in readiness for the work to begin. He returned to Dallas Saturday afternoon, leaving W. B. Hammons in charge as general superintendent.

Excavations have been started for the bridge at Long Branch and forms will be set and ready for cement to be poured some time next week. When this work is under way preparations for other construction will be started and within the next few weeks several of the eight bridges to be built on Highway 23 will be under construction.

Scientific "Miracle" Enables Saving of Siam King's Eyes

(By Howard W. Blakeslee (Associated Press Science Editor))

NEW YORK, May 9.—Removal of a cataract, the eye trouble of King Prajadhipok of Siam, is a miraculous. A vital part of the eye is removed and glasses made to substitute for it. The operation is one of the miracles of medical science.

Cataract usually is due to clouding over of the crystalline lens of the eye. A person with this lens is a crystal-clear body placed just behind the pupil. For good vision this lens must stay clear.

Nature is ingenious in the manner of feeding this living tissue. Blood vessels could not serve this end, because were they to pass through the lens the clearness would be lost. Hence nature has provided a clear, water-like fluid in front of the lens and a jelly-like substance behind it. Through the agency of these the lens secures its sustenance.

With age this arrangement may prove inadequate and the lens will commence to degenerate, becoming cloudy. This is cataract.

The disease may result from other causes—an injury, or a complication of organic diseases, like diabetes. Children may be born with it, and the condition may come on at any stage in life.

In the main cataract is an old-age disease resulting from impairment of the nutrition of the crystalline lens. Many an old person shows cloudiness of the lens around the edges, and yet has fairly good eyesight. If the entire lens becomes involved blindness follows.

A person with cataract may see light as if looking at frosted glass. Objects are shadows. When the clouded crystalline lens is removed by the operation for cataract, the frosted pane is gone but objects cannot be distinguished because there is no focusing lens.

This defect is remedied very simply by use of glasses of ordinary type, thickened to supply the lens effect.

Dr. John M. Wheeler, New York eye specialist, has been selected to do the operation on King Prajadhipok's eyes.

Another try is expected to be made late today.

Aviator Crashes, But is Uninjured

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, May 9.—Lieut. Gaffney, Kelly Field aviator, flying one of the fifty-two manoeuvring airplanes, crashed here today in the back yard of the F. H. Terrell home, and wrecked his plane.

Whereupon Gaffney climbed into another ship and returned uninjured to San Antonio. A clogged gas line killed the motor.

PIANO RECITAL MONDAY EVENING AT AUDITORIUM

Mrs. L. Schermerhorn will present her piano class recital Monday evening at the high school auditorium at 8 o'clock. This will be one of the programs on the regular commencement schedule and the public will be welcome to attend without any admission charge. A very pleasing and entertaining program has been arranged.

Ask Receivership For C. C. Julian

(By Associated Press) OKLAHOMA CITY, May 9.—Miss Marjorie Bennett, of Hollywood, today filed a suit for receivership for C. C. Julian, oil operator, and four of his companies.

The woman, a stockholder, alleged Julian is "incompetent and is dissipating the assets of the companies."

FIRE DEPARTMENT GETS NICE CHECK SATURDAY

Ballinger firemen received a letter from the First National Bank Saturday together with a check for $25 as a reward for their efficient work in extinguishing the fire Friday morning in the Hub building. The letter expressed the appreciation of the officers and directors of this bank for the work done by the volunteer firemen and spoke of the department in very complimentary terms.

Plot is Discovered To Assassinate King

(By Associated Press) BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 9.—Police here today were reported to have uncovered a plot to assassinate King Carol tomorrow on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of his enthronement.

The first report said an armed individual was found concealed under the stands from which the king and the royal family planned to watch a military parade.

It was also reported here today that Queen Helen is coming home from Jugo-Slavia, prepared it was believed, for a reconciliation with Carol after accepting the services of her brother-in-law, King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia, to be mediator.

Six Men Killed In Freight Wreck

(By Associated Press) PENDENNIS, Kas., May 9.—Six unidentified men were killed, and one was seriously injured near the railroad station here today when fifteen cars of Missouri Pacific freight train No. 66 were derailed.

The bodies, one of which was that of a negro, were taken to Dighton, Kansas by the county coroner.

BEAUMONT POLICE LAUD CITY'S RADIO SYSTEM

(By Associated Press) BEAUMONT, May 9.—Two instances showing how Beaumont's new police radio system expedites police work have been demonstrated.

A burglar was captured by means of the radio with the elapse of only a few minutes and a lost child was restored to her parents on Sunday afternoon in three minutes.

A neighbor telephones police that a burglar was ransacking a residential section root beer stand. The call was received shortly after midnight and immediately broadcast from headquarters. A cruiser car equipped with receiving set picked up the broadcast and one minute later had placed the burglar in custody, surprising him in the act.

In the case of the lost girl, a detective captain, while riding about the city, heard over his auto radio set that a small girl had been found at a certain drug store of the city. He was at the store within a minute and while attempting to learn from the lost child where she lived, headquarters broadcast her address, and she was returned to her parents about a minute later.

Chief of Police Carl E. Kennedy is enthusiastic over the successful operation of the radio system as demonstrated by these two routine cases.

No Elephants for Siam's King

Convenience of Modern Travel Speed His Journeys

THE King of Siam, Prajadhipok, and his queen, are going to surprise many Americans as they travel about on their visit to this country this spring, by being a very up-to-date young couple. People who expect them to appear with a procession of white elephants moving to weird minor strains of Oriental music, will be disappointed.

Prajadhipok, on the other hand, will not be surprised at the wonders of the New World. He and the queen enjoy all the latest conveniences at home in their capital, Bangkok, including modern automobiles, a modern speedboat to travel on the Menam River, and modern dwellings. They have a miniature golf course of their own. The queen wears the latest Paris frocks.

Much of their comfort is made in America. The waters of Long Island Sound boast no finer little vessel than the new 30-foot Hacker-craft cruiser-commuter with a Packard engine, delivered to His Majesty recently from this country. In all his travels, on land and water, American lubricant, Mobil-oil, goes with the king, for no other is used either in his speed-boat or his automobiles.

Remember Mother tomorrow.

Two school classes will have special services here tomorrow. The graduating class of the Ballinger high school will enter their first program Sunday morning and in the afternoon all the rural schools will assemble here for 7th grade graduation exercises and to receive diplomas. Local people are invited to attend both these services.

Street lighting improvements are being installed here and in a short time portions of the town that have heretofore been dark will be lighted all through the night. New modern standards have arrived and are being installed at present by the West Texas Utilities Company.

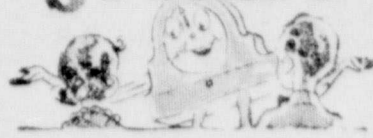

Saturday will place in circulation the first pay-up checks. These checks will be issued by responsible firms of Ballinger and before being cashed must bear ten endorsements on the back. The purpose of the scheme is to start a campaign of paying debts or at least making payments on debts. The Retail Merchants Association of Ballinger is anxious to have as many firms use these checks as possible and make an effort to get their employees to take a part of their salaries in these pay-up checks.

People who work hard on a job without compensation hate to have their work spoiled and there are none who work more faithfully than those attending to the cemetery here. To be thoughtless people ruin their work is indeed discouraging and even worse than that. Everyone should appreciate a beautiful resting place for their loved ones and even those who have no loved ones buried there should look on this good work with pride. Respect the graves of the dead and assist in keeping and making the cemetery more beautiful.

Ballinger for the first time in its history begins the spring season when irrigation will be heavy with a supply of water that will last for the year. There has in other years, been more or less fear here because of a 90-day water supply, but with the completion of the new system, the town is assured of a supply that will take care of an entire summer and allow irrigation. Such things help a town and a long-felt need has finally been taken care of here and in case of an unexpected growth, the supply can easily be increased to suit the demand.

Miss Addie Lou Glass left Friday afternoon for Texarkana and Shreveport to visit for several weeks. She will return to Denton about June 1 and enter North Texas Teachers College for the summer.

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE FREIGHT TRAIN

By Mary Graham Bonner We have an invitation to ride on a freight train," the Little Black Clock told Peggy and John, who always shared in his magical adventures.

A long, long freight train was about to pull out of the freight yard. The children rode with the engine driver, who told them all the ways of freight trains.

There are many cars from different places attached to their train, and it seemed funny to John to think of the automobiles carried in some of the cars, traveling so very slowly.

The engineer told them how the freight trains made way for the big express trains.

But, no matter how slowly the freight train might travel or how long it would be sidetracked, he said it was always known at the yards where they were.

Then the Clock, whose magic enabled him to change the time, turned it slowly forward, and it was very dark.

Now the engine made a great noise—a heavy, slow, lazy noise, so unlike the swift, sudden shrieks and whistles of the passenger trains.

Finally they stopped and shunted over to another track.

"They'll be here for quite a while," said the Clock. "So I think we'd better take our place, which is going to meet us here, and go back home."

John and Peggy had enjoyed the freight train trip immensely. They wouldn't have missed it for anything. They had been allowed to see what the different cars held.

But the Clock knew when they had had enough.

For days and days afterward the children talked about the puffing, slow-moving but powerful engine which carried so many cars.

HOW'S your HEALTH

By Dr. Jago Goldstein, Academy of Medicine

"ATHLETE'S FOOT"

The fungi are a class of plant-like parasites affecting man and animals, which while seldom, if ever, endangering life, nearly always produce annoying conditions and are responsible for a number of skin diseases.

"Athlete's foot" has become the common name for a group of diseases affecting the hands and feet, not because athletic activities have any direct bearing upon the condition, but because it is common among athletes.

The explanation for this is that fungi thrive under moist and warm conditions. Swimming pools and gymnasia are therefore ideal places for the development of fungi. Furthermore, those using either swimming pools or gymnasia usually walk barefoot and thus become infected.

In an examination of the feet of 100 college students in California, made by Drs. Hulsey and Jordan, it was found that 67 per cent had fungus infections of the toes. This percentage is somewhat higher than that found by other investigators, but demonstrates this condition to be generally widespread.

Contrary to what might be expected, frequent washing of the feet does not have an adverse effect on the prevalence of this disease.

In the study of the feet of 520 boys attending a trade school in New York city, it was reported that fungus disease of the feet was found mostly among the cleanest, whereas other feet, "covered," as the author said, "with almost enough black dirt to grow vegetables," showed no effects of the presence of fungi.

Dirt, however, is no preventive for fungus disease of the feet. On the contrary, frequent washing of the feet is recommended.

However, those frequenting swimming pools or gymnasia should avoid going about barefoot. Particular care should be taken to wipe dry the webs and spaces between the toes.

The use of talcum powder is highly recommended, but when the fungus infection has appeared, it is wise to secure medical help.

Mad Pursuit

BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: When Nora Lake's husband Nicholas Thayer jumps to death from the steamer carrying them to America she combats to bring his home. There Nicholas' brother Jonathan meets her and takes her to her Aunt Emily and her cousin, Francis, separated from her husband and crippled Halie. Next day Nora goes to the Thayer place near the city. Damon Van Vorst, Nicholas' stepson blames her for failing to prevent Nicholas' suicide but Nora accepts her station to live with them. Jonathan tells her his opinion has been due to fear that she would have left him. He then reproaches her for an estrangement between himself and Nicholas. She tells more kindly to send him but when she over-hears his reference to her "trump of a father" her indignation mounts.

Chapter 18

NEWS FROM JULIAN

AS Nora stepped out of the limousine before Aunt Em's she found it had begun to rain. Halie wedged into a rocking chair in the living room with Dickie.

"I'm to go next week, I'll die!" Nora cried, unable to keep her excitement out of her voice.

"What are they like?" Halie asked while Alice came to lean shyly against Nora.

"I don't know how to tell you. Damon is cool and lovely. And I wish you could see me. Van Vorst Damon sat at the tea table and only candies were lighted and the twilight came in—"

"A bit staged, wasn't it?" but could Halie asked dryly.

"Oh Halie, how can you? But you would have loved the house! It has immense rooms with high ceilings, bonas everywhere and white flairs." She stopped for breath.

"And Mr. Van Vorst showed me some old books and told me about his horses. That lively old house! It was built in 1807, and there is an Adam fireplace—"

"Well, for my part I prefer a little reality and not so much sweetness and light," Halie said with a dry smile. But she observed that Nora had not mentioned Jon's name.

Nora laughed helplessly and ran upstairs to take off her things, to look about the bare attic room so scrupulously clean and to give a thankful sigh as she realized that after this week she need never see it again.

There was a letter for her on the bureau.

That was terrible news, Nora. It did me in for a day. Things have not been going so well with me since Helen for a mere whim is not going to marry me. I don't know how to tell you. I came in at dawn one morning and she had just left. I was so shocked I accepted a thing like that.

"I miss you, Nora. My own. What a splendid time we used to have. This place now is just a seething mass of damn trouble. I'm going to leave. I might even go home. By the way I've been working like mad since you left. I've done some good things. I have a plan—do some of that to my next."

Her father's letter worried her. His preoccupation with himself had made the tragedy negligible. Her poor darling Julian, how would he ever get along without her? If only he had smashed the water color before he had planned to marry. The Nevers, what a difference it would have made to them both. When she came downstairs she saw Aunt Em's wet coat hanging in the hall.

The smell of damp umbrella was in the air, and a faint odor of a disinfectant hung about Dr. More's office.

Aunt Em looked up as Nora came in pulling off her wet gray coat on gloves. "I hear you're going to leave us next week. It's what you've wanted all the time, isn't it?" she asked mildly.

Nora felt uncomfortable for a moment, under the scrutiny of those lively, gray eyes. Did Aunt Em know that she felt pity and even a faint contempt for her father's people? She must be careful to hide it from them these last days she was to be with them, never realizing how pervasive thought is, how it can create its own atmosphere more subtly than words.

Frances came blowing in, her cheeks rosy, a stream of water trickling from her hat.

"I'm soaking," she cried. "Did you get wet, Mother?" Aunt Em had been tramping the streets, walking from lesson to lesson but she smiled and shook her head.

"Come and kiss me, Dickie. Some one went and took my umbrella from the office. Splashed it, the brute!" Fran cried, throwing off her hat and tossing it down anywhere, brushing back the wet hair from her glowing face.

"I stayed late to type a letter for Mr. Dusenbury. He was so grateful, he told me. And then he drove off in his limousine and left me in the doorway. I met Fergus and he saved my life." Fran ended ed with a cough she tried to choke down.

Fergus was behind her. "You'll have supper with us tonight?" Aunt Em asked the young doctor.

He thanked her but said no white Fran struggled out of her wet coat and hugged Dickie.

Aunt Em stood up brisk and smiling. "I gave a music lesson to the McIntosh boy today. They can't pay me anything for his lessons but when I came away Mrs. McIntosh had a dozen eggs for me, and I stopped on the way home to get baking powder for biscuit. Now Fergus, you see you'll have to stay!"

Nora looked at Fergus More leaning against the door, his hands in his pockets. He was tall and lean and his clothes so carefully brushed were the worse for wear. He had thick velvety eyebrows and no earnest and rather obstinate face was lightened by gray eyes and a humorous mouth.

"It's awfully good of you," he hesitated, then he added with excitement, "I had my first patient today."

"No!" Halie cried. "Is he still living?"

"Don't pay any attention to her. Mrs. Barton, she's jealous of my professional success." To prove it to you, he brought out a soft and wilted dollar bill and laid it down before them on the table. "My luck is changing. My office is going to be so full of patients that a waiting line will run clear down the steps."

Halie sniffed. "I'll believe it when I don't see you running around the block with your bag for exercise."

"You didn't know that?" he asked against.

He threw back his head and his big roasting laughter was joined by the rest.

Fran cried, "We'll have to celebrate. You will have dinner with us. Wouldn't a big cup of coffee taste good? But we haven't any cream."

"Let me get the cream," Fergus said, and before they could stop him he had caught up his hat and was banging the door behind him.

They trooped down the stairs to the basement. Dickie as a special treat was allowed to have supper with them, and Nora and Halie brought out two more chairs while Fran lit the gas heater. Fran took out the blue willow plates to be warmed. Fergus More came back with the cream and a jar of raspberry paste and a bunch of red carnations.

"I'll send you shopping again," Fran laughed. "The things you can buy for a dollar!"

But Nora had seen the books he had carried with him; and she knew there was a certain way of raising money under the sign of three golden balls.

The spicy sweetness of the pinks the odor of steaming coffee and not biscuit filled the dining room with heartening fragrance. The chairs were drawn up to the table and Dickie was propped up on the encyclopaedia. Alice insisted on sitting next to Nora.

Nora and Fran wore deep in talk while Halie made enigmatic comments. Aunt Em was having a low valued conversation with Fergus. "When her mother died I told Julian I'd like to take Nora but he said he wouldn't have the child brought up according to middle-class standards," she chuckled with a glance at Nora. "I remember they were living in a wretched tenement at the time. She was such a bedraggled pretty little thing. I asked her if she wouldn't like to come to live with me. She answered get along without me. She and I went to the grocer's together and she asked the man to charge a bottle of milk and a loaf of bread. The grocer asked when her father would pay his bill. 'My father's an artist and can't be bothered with bills!' she told him. 'A dead beat, you mean, don't you?' Nora turned on him, her eyes blazing, and called him a dirty brute. She was eight at that time. I settled with the grocer and the last I saw of her she was hugging the bread against her chest."

"Mother, what are you saying to Fergus?" Fran cried, "with your heads close together!"

The conversation became general. But Nora was not here with them; she was watching a long room fill with green twilight, seeing a man's fair head bent for a moment, while the scent of lilacs drifted to her.

ated, only to fall in love with his son. A gang killing brings the plot to a climax.

Robert Armstrong heads the imposing supporting cast as Joe Garson, the gangster who loves the heroine but "takes the jolt" so that she may be free to marry the man she really loves. Kent Douglass, a newcomer to the screen, has the romantic lead. Douglass is noted for his work on the stage in "Caprice" and other successes.

Marie Prevost is cast in the role of Aggie, and John Miljan is Inspector Burke. Other important parts are those of Purnell Pratt as the store owner, Hale Hamilton as district attorney, Robert Emmet O'Connor as the detective, Tyrrell Davis as English Eddie, William Bakewell as the young attorney, George Cooper as a gangster, Gwen Lee as a "moll," and Isabel Withers as the girl whose crime sent the heroine to prison.

Jack Oakie in New Joy Fest

The country pumpkin invades pine-apple-land and bombards the racketeers with razberries! Jack Oakie's back-and-funny, funnier than ever. He smacks the underworld with wise-cracks in "The Gang Buster," which closes at the Palace Theatre tonight.

Oakie undertakes the highly precarious job of selling accident insurance in a city infested with easy-money desperadoes. Everybody wants his policies, except the insurance company for which he works. Then "America's joy-friend" delves into the dives of the underworld, and digs up a lot of happiness, including a romance. Jean Arthur is the girl and William Boyd furnishes a large share of the thrills. Yes, there are thrills, too, and suspense, but everything begins and ends in a big guffaw.

The Ballinger Cemetery Assn.

The Ballinger Cemetery Association was chartered under the laws of the State of Texas in 1919 and the tax rate fixed at $5 per lot per year. To date less than five per cent of the lot owners have failed to cooperate with the association in accepting the levy against their lots. Through the tax money a large and extensive improvement campaign has been successfully carried on. The taxes paid by lot owners is the only support the organization has and from that source two new sections have been improved since 1919.

The heaviest expense of the association has been labor. During the spring and summer from two to four men are employed to look after and water the grounds and one man is maintained the year round. In the improvement program the largest expense has been for cement curbing. This work has been done throughout the cemetery grounds until every lot is now surrounded by concrete. Good roads of gravel and clay have been built along the principal driveways and the water supply has been improved until it is now ample to take care of the entire plot of ground with water at the corner of every improved lot.

The laws of the state allow all associations the right to sell the unused portion of any lot upon the failure of owner to pay tax, but this drastic measure has never been enforced here. Depression, however, has been felt by the association, and delinquent tax rolls are much heavier this year than in recent years and the program of work is demanding more expense and time.

At the beginning of the organization E. Shepperd was elected president of the cemetery body and he still holds that office. He is at present assisted by C. J. Lynn, vice president; A. R. Murchison, secretary-treasurer, and the following board members: Jack McGregor, Mrs. G. M. Vaughn and Mrs. R. P. Kirk.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 trees and plants have been set out in the cemetery since the organization in 1919 and many thousand hedge plants, aside from the flowering plants and shrubs set on individual lots. The grounds have been surveyed and mapped and the location of every grave shown.

An endowment fund is maintained which is invested in government securities. Any lot can be endowed by the payment of $100 and the association will furnish a bronze tablet showing that the lot has been endowed and when.

The above space contributed by the Farmers & Merchants State Bank.

Johnny Farrell on GOLF

WRONG!... left arm bent too much, relying on wrists which results in weak, sloppy effect.

Mastery of the full iron shot is one way to keep those card spoiling sixes and sevens out of a round, Johnny Farrell says.

No. 10 Take the Penalty

If it isn't well known already, it should be fairly obvious that you can't win in golf with sixes and sevens.

I know you will remind me that Bobby Jones tied for the open championship at Winged Foot in 1929 despite two sevens on his card for the last round, but he was lucky enough to sink a 12-foot putt on the last hole to gain that tie.

However, since Jones is always the exception when golf is being discussed I guess this proves the rule.

I have studied the cards of many big tournaments, and I find that the fellow who wins usually has played safe, refusing to run the risks that may mean a six or a seven.

I daresay I have lost a half dozen important tournaments in my career by taking chances, doing foolish things that I can go back and pick out later as the cause of a fatal extra stroke or two.

Tommy Kerrigan, my first instructor, would have won many a big tournament or championship but for his unwillingness to take the penalty for a poor shot, trying instead to make up his mistake only to get into more difficulty.

So in advising the average tournament player I say: "Play safe when you are in a tough spot. Don't take the long chances that you hope will mean a miraculous three or four, but which usually mean a sloppy six or seven. Be content with the five. You can win with fives, but you can't win with sixes and sevens."

I should say probably 99 per cent of the players have the fault of not playing safe. If they stopped to analyze their results back over no more than a half dozen rounds, they would find it was just common sense to do these things.

1. Play OUT of the woods instead of through them.

2. Go for the green instead of the pin on most approach shots, especially if the cup is located on a projection or beyond a trap. 3. Use the right club in a bunker, remembering that the first objective is to get out.

SCOUTS HOLD MEETING, WORK SESSION FRIDAY

The Boy Scouts held their first meeting in their new club house Friday afternoon for the purpose of cleaning up the grounds and the house. Twenty-two boys were present and worked hard until everything was in first class order and the entire grounds surrounding the shack in condition.

The boys were proud and showed a great amount of enthusiasm in their work and plan to do much work there to make it more suitable to their needs.

At the close of the work session Scoutmaster J. G. Tuckey made a short talk to the boys on the meaning of Mother's Day and urged them to be good Scouts and show their love and gratitude to mothers on this day set aside for them. Rev. E. W. McLaurin was also present at the meeting to help the boys in their work.

CAT PLAYS MOTHER TO SQUIRREL AND RABBIT

(By Associated Press) MCKINNEY, Tex., May 9.—A "Missionary" cat is the property of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Bradley of Weston in North Collin.

This cat believes in not only caring for her kind, but for orphans of other members of the animal kingdom. Tabby has two children of her own which she tenderly cares for. She has also reared three squirrels from babyhood. In addition, she cared for a baby rabbit, which recently made its escape, chilling to death one cold night.

This member of the feline family shows no partiality among her varied children. However, she looks on in wonderment when her bushy-tailed children refuse the rats and mice she so faithfully provides.

Have You Met the Lady Who Never Reads the Ads?

GO INTO her kitchen. The shelves are filled with advertised brands of soup and soap and foods of all sorts. Her electric iron and ice-box have been advertised regularly. So have her rugs and towels and table silver. Somebody must have been reading "the ads" . . . asking for known quality . . . buying the goods . . . giving them leadership.

Few women now are content to miss the marvelous comforts of the times. Almost every one is planning to make next year easier and pleasanter than this year. You read the advertisements with interest because in them you find the freshest news and the most practical ideas about keeping house—and about all other innovations in the art of modern living.

Naturally your interest and your confidence grow when you see the same product appearing over and over again. Improved . . . better now than ever, but an old friend anyway. Something you can rely on to meet a need, and do a job.

Follow the advertisements in this paper carefully. They are full of interesting facts and useful ideas. They will save you time and money . . . and bring you better things

MOVIES

"Paid" Story of Girl Who Gets Even with Society

"Paid," which will be the attraction starting tomorrow afternoon at the Palace Theatre, is Joan Crawford's first straight dramatic starring vehicle, and is of particular interest in being the first dialogue film version of Bayard Veiller's sensational stage play, "Within the Law."

According to word from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, Miss Crawford was given her opportunity to play the tragic heroine in this smashing under-drama in recognition of her splendid portrayal in "Our Blushing Brides" and other recent hits. In essaying this difficult role, Miss Crawford follows in the footsteps of Jane Cowl who created the part of Mary Turner on the New York stage in 1912, and Alice Joyce and Norma Talmadge who played it on the silent screen in 1917 and 1923 respectively.

The play was written eighteen years ago and is generally regarded as Veiller's finest work. Among the dramatist's other successes were "The Thirteenth Chair," and "The Trial of Mary Dugan." With the exception of modernization of dialogue and action by Lucien Hubbard and Charles McArthur, the play comes to the talking screen intact in original form.

Sam Wood is the director, and as usual gives a finished production.

Briefly, the plot of "Paid" concerns a shop girl, "framed" and sent to jail for a robbery, who plots revenge on society and on the man who had her incarcerated.

Cemetery Flowers Mrs. Jeanes is Laid to Rest at Old Runnels

Complaints are still being filed by lot owners at Evergreen Cemetery on account of flowers and bulbs being taken from lots and graves. Such a protest was made public a week or more ago, but recently a number of graves have been robbed of beautiful flowers which the owners worked hard to get started. One member of the association stated Saturday that he knew of no means of enforcing rights there as it was impossible to keep a guard on duty all the time to watch. The association requests the cooperation of those interested and very effort will be made to protect the lots where individuals work to locate their them.

The cemetery association is employing four men at present trying to keep the cemetery in perfect shape. It is right now at the growing season and all flowers and shrubs are doing fine and within a few more weeks the entire plot of ground will be in first class condition. The work has been made hard this year due to as many falling to pay the cemetery taxes. This volunteer tax money is the only revenue the association has for improving and maintaining the cemetery and they request that anyone who has not paid do so at once so that the work will not be hindered.

E. Shepperd who has served a number of years on this board stated that so much had been accomplished at the local cemetery that it was impossible to stop work there and let shrubs and grass die and to maintain it required work every day through the spring and summer. The tax revenue heretofore has been sufficient to take care of this work but this past spring collections were far below usual and money is short to carry on the work. The tax on lot owners is small and yet with all paying it is sufficient to do all the needed maintenance work each year and allow for some improvements.

Members of the association said that they had no objection to people gathering a limited quantity of bluebonnets from streets and in places where they are thick, but that to take valuable bulbs and shrubs from lots was very objectionable and would not be tolerated if parties could be caught in the act.

Everyone who has visited the cemetery this spring declares it to be the prettiest in this history of the place. Blooming flowers almost cover the ground and hedges and other plants are doing fine after the wet winter.

Scores Eighth Hole-in-One
MURKOOGE, Okla., May 9.—(AP)—Bill Nichols, former state amateur golf champion, scored his eighth hole-in-one in nine seasons on the 169-yard No. 8 at Muskogee Country Club recently. His first ace came in 1923 when he was competing for the state title over the Tulsa Country Club course.

Many friends of Mrs. L. A. Jeanes, deceased, gathered here Friday afternoon to pay their last respects to this good woman who for the past 26 years had lived a consecrated Christian life in this city and who leaves behind none but friends among those who knew her. Those who gathered at the Nazarene Church to attend the funeral were touched at the loss of this good woman from the town, the church and the home, and mourned this loss and were eager to drink in the words of comfort spoken from the pulpit.

The church was filled to overflowing long before time for the service and many stood in the rear and in the doorways to be present when praise was spoken of her life.

Rev. Messer, pastor of the San Angelo Nazarene Church, was present and offered the prayer at the opening of the service. Rev. W. Lawson Brown introduced Rev. T. E. Bowman of the Methodist Church, who spoke briefly of the life of the deceased.

Rev. Brown spoke the main tribute to Mrs. Jeanes and told of how she would be missed from her place in that church where she had been so faithful for many years. He spoke with great feeling and showed from his heart the real effort it was to say the last words over his own dear friend.

Following the service at the church the body was taken to the Old Runnels cemetery where it was interred in the family lot.

Among those from out of town attending the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Verner, Brady, C. E. Straley and son, Ernest, Comanche; Misses Ruth Rich and Virginia Bettis, H. G. Garlington, Mrs. E. L. Rasbury, Mr. and Mrs. John Harbor, and Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Messer, San Angelo; Mrs. F. M. Maddox and sons, Frank and Padgett, Lubbock; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. BERLIN'S FOREIGN COLONY COUNTS 3,000 AMERICANS
(By Associated Press)
BERLIN, May 9.—More than 3,000 Americans are among the 136,000 foreigners residing in Berlin. The foreign colony increased by 4,000 in six months. The east of Europe is most heavily represented in Berlin. There are 30,000 Poles, 23,000 Austrians and almost as many Czechs and Russians living there. Numerous too the men without a country, the majority of whom are Russia emigres. Almost 13,000 of them have found a second home in Berlin.

PAINS QUIT COMING

"When I was a girl, I suffered periodically with terrible pains in my back and sides. Often I would bend almost double with the intense pain. This would last for hours and I could get no relief.

"I tried almost everything that was recommended to me, but found nothing that would help until I began taking Cardui. My mother thought it would be good for me, so she got a bottle of Cardui and started me taking it. I soon improved. The bad spells quit coming. I was soon in normal health."

DOUGHBOYS PUT GUM IN JAWS OF EUROPE
WASHINGTON, May 9.—Pershing's "doughboys" not only helped to win the war, but they also started a new American market overseas. Aided by made-in-America movies, they put chewing gum on the export map. More than half a billion sticks, valued at $1,438,000, were sent to Europe last year. There was almost no gum exported before the war.
