Special Court Hearing is Denied by Judge Walden

(By Associated Press)
ARDMORE, Okla., July 20.—District Judge Asa Walden today refused to call a special term of court to try Bill Guess and Cecil Crosby, former deputy sheriffs, for the murder of Manuel Garcia Gomez. Judge Walden said the cases would be tried at the regular term of district court in September. The defense had asked for a special term when the state refused to agree to a dismissal.

Later Judge John Owen of another division of the district court refused to dismiss the charge against Crosby for slaying Emilio Cortes Rubio, kinsman of the president of Mexico.

Guess, who did the actual shooting, recently was acquitted of a murder charge in the Rubio case. Crosby still is under both charges.

REV. CRABTREE IMPROVING FOLLOWING SUDDEN ATTACK

Rev. F. M. Crabtree became suddenly ill Sunday evening just before time for him to preach at the First Christian Church. He was in the pulpit when members of the congregation noticed that he slumped in his seat, and several rushed to him before he fell from his chair.

The pastor was removed to his home and was resting fairly well Monday. He had been ill several weeks ago and had not thoroughly recovered from that illness when stricken Sunday.

Miss Evelyn Shepherd left Sunday evening for Colorado, Texas, where she will visit friends several days.

Congressional Redistricting May Come Up During Special Session

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, July 20.—Belief that little difficulty will be encountered in passage of a congressional redistricting bill at the special session of legislature is entertained by Governor R. S. Sterling who said redistricting would be one of the few subjects submitted to the special session.

Sterling said leading proponents of the congressional redistricting bills probably would start their discussions where they left off at the end of the regular session, the governor apparently believing they were near to an agreement on location of the three new districts when the regular session ended.

House and senate conferees, however, admitted in the closing hours of the session they were a considerable distance from an agreement, although on two separate occasions they announced they had agreed upon a plan.

On one occasion a majority of the senate conferees refused to sign the free conference report and on the other the senate refused to adopt the report by a few votes after it had been signed by a majority of its conferees. On the latter occasion, the house had adopted the report before it was turned down in the senate. A last minute effort to obtain a bill that would be acceptable failed and the conference broke up with the members of the re-

Two Women Hurt When Car Turtles

Mrs. Roy Mack and Mrs. Bailey Mack, of Winters, were slightly injured Monday morning about 7:30 a few miles east of Rowena when the automobile they were driving turned over on highway 30. The women left Winters early in the morning for San Angelo, to spend the day, and when within a short distance of Rowena the car ran from the pavement into soft dirt and in getting back on the paving the machine turned over several times.

Mrs. Bailey Mack received a bad cut on a knee, supposed to have been caused by broken glass from a door, and sustained a few minor cuts and bruises. Mrs. Roy Mack, who was driving, escaped with only a few bruises which are not considered serious. The car, a Chrysler coupe, was considerably damaged, and was brought to Ballinger by a wrecker from Cameron's Garage.

Scott H. Mack, father-in-law of the two women, was one of the first to reach the scene. He and Dick Uecker left the Kirk & Mack store shortly before 7:30 to go to Lowake on business, and were but a short distance behind when the accident occurred, however they did not know who occupied the coupe until they arrived at the scene. The victims were rushed to the Halley & Love Sanitarium here, where they received treatment for their injuries, and later were taken to the Scott H. Mack home, 611 Broadway.

Roy and Bailey Mack arrived here shortly after the wreck and spent the day here with their wives.

The injured consider themselves fortunate in receiving wounds that are expected to heal soon. The automobile was running at a fair rate of speed but the steel frame of the body kept it from breaking in on the occupants.

Miss Frances Holman returned to Chicago Sunday after spending two weeks here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Holman.

Pipe-Loving Business Man Sounds America's Voice in Germany's Crisis Council

WASHINGTON, July 20.—(AP)—Across the somber stage of Germany's growing theater of finances strides a quiet, successful business man noted for the long hours he gives a serious role when the occasion demands.

In his lighter moments, however, Frederic Moseley Sackett, America's ambassador to Germany, often debates with himself whether a big cigar or briar pipe is the better smoke. He likes both. He also delights in golfing, boating and bowling.

This former senator from Kentucky, a transplanted native son of Rhode Island, rather jauntily wears his 62 years. His compact physique of medium height carries much of youth's elasticity. His studious grey eyes are clear, and his brown hair is almost frost free.

Reserved, he always dresses conservatively, seldom varying from sober suits. In fact he is so wedded to dark clothes that his occasional summer garb of pongee draws comment from his co-workers.

He is fond of a cozy chair at home with meaty books within easy reach. Although a member of many clubs, he prefers life at home where he and his wife, the former Olive Speed of Kentucky, frequently entertain.

There is zest for him in driving an automobile. But of late his American-made limousine No. 14 has been parked most of each day before the official residence in Berlin of Chancellor Bruening or of Foreign Minister Curtius. Germany's financial situation has elicited his full attention.

Under less exacting duties he relishes the crash of toppling maple pins or the feel of driver and mid-iron. His associates say he is proficient in both sports.

Wherever he is, he usually can haul forth a briar pipe or formidable cigar. He sees to it that all places where he lingers long have an ample supply of both.

The Sacketts, who are without children, have traveled extensively, making trips abroad practically every year for many years before Mr. Sackett resigned from the senate about 18 months ago

FREDERIC M. SACKETT

Recent weeks have been busy ones for Frederic M. Sackett, American ambassador to Berlin, as he has taken a leading part in the struggle to preserve the Reich's financial structure.

To accept his present post, Son of a wealthy Rhode Island woolen manufacturer, he was educated at Brown university and Harvard law school. He entered the coal business in Louisville directly after his collegiate days and later extended his interests to the cemetery industry.

Aside from being a member of the Kentucky state board of charities for four years and a federal administrator for two years, he never had held public office until elected to the United States senate nearly six years ago.

Although no orator in the popular sense, he has the reputation of being armed with facts when he ascends a rostrum.

Goodwill Trip to Olfen Tuesday Starts at 7:30

Good will trippers will leave here Tuesday evening at 7:30 for Olfen on the second of the scheduled trips in the interest of the Runnels county fair and to assist 4-H club members in staging programs prior to the opening of the short course at A & M. College. The trip for Tuesday night was first announced for Crews but due to a revival meeting in progress there which will run until Wednesday night, the Olfen and Crews dates were changed and Crews will be visited Thursday night.

Saturday and Sunday entertainers met in a rehearsal on the program for the Tuesday night engagement and the entertainment will be greatly improved at the Olfen meeting. The program will not be long, but every number will be well worth hearing.

Those in charge of the goodwill trips were delighted with the attendance at the first meeting held at Hatchel last week and are urging that even more join the caravan of cars to Olfen Tuesday night. This section has had plenty of rain during the last week but roads are in good shape and by going before dark local people will have the opportunity of seeing some of the best crops in the county at this time.

The 4-H clubs are planning to be hosts to the Ballinger crowd Tuesday night and after the program will offer home made cream, cake, cold drinks and watermelons for sale to those attending the entertainment. The money taken in from this source will be used in defraying expenses of their members to the short course. Leaders of the trip are expecting several hundred Ballinger people to attend the meeting and have notified Olfen that more than the number attending at Hatchel is expected to line up with the caravan for the trip.

Runnels Tonight
The 4-H clubs at Runnels are staging a cream supper at the Runnels school Monday night. Chas. T. Grant and members of the Citizens band will attend this gathering and present a program of music for the Runnels people. C. W. Lehmborg stated Monday that he hoped a number of Ballinger people would drive out to the gathering and help the boys and girls to make their effort a success. The Runnels people have worked hard to raise enough money to have all clubs represented at the short course and this entertainment is their final effort to complete that fund.

The program will start at 8:30 and will be held in the open where it is cool.

W. A. FRANCIS REMAINS IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Reports from the bedside of W. A. Francis Monday morning said his condition was more serious and little hope is held for his recovery. All the sick man's relatives have been summoned to his bedside. He was reported worse Sunday afternoon and little improvement, if any, was seen in his condition Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Arch O'Kelly, of Lubbock, are visiting relatives in Ballinger.

Fixing Oil Prices is Probed by Board

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, July 20.—The House in investigating the oil industry today endeavored to learn if price fixing agreements existed among the major companies.

R. D. Parker, chief supervisor of the oil and gas division of the state railroad commission, testified that he did not know who fixed the oil prices. Under questioning he said if one company raised or lowered prices the others usually followed suit. The supervisor said pipe line rates could be protested by the operators.

Are you ready for the good-will trip to Olen Tuesday night. It is always easy to get a crowd on a new project but when the new wears off it takes loyal citizens to keep going and doing their share to make such trips successful. It is hoped that the entire schedule of sixteen trips will bring out good crowds and local people are urged to realize their duty in this undertaking and be on hand at each meeting.

Car wrecks over the week-end should make people think about how they drive and the condition of their car. There is nothing more dangerous on the road than a car with worn-out casings that may blow out any time. A blow-out while running fast is always dangerous and it takes a good driver to keep a car from turning over even at a moderate rate of speed. Before starting on a trip have tires, brakes and steering devices inspected closely and if anything is recommended by the mechanic have it attended to and save injuries and perhaps lives.

Confederate veterans and their widows have been alarmed recently when their pension warrants were not paid on account of the fund being exhausted. In most places banks are cashing the warrants for a discount of 2 per cent and will hold them until the money is in the fund with which to redeem them. The last session of the legislature made it possible to pay these warrants from the general fund when the special fund was exhausted but this time the general fund was short of money and the warrants could not be paid. The department at Austin received many pitiful letters from those who receive these pensions stating that they were badly in need of the money, the source of their living.

Mrs. Lara Hollingsworth, county home demonstration agent, is working on a booth which will show the development of beef canning in this county. She will display this at the A. & M. College short course and will also keep it for exhibition in fairs in this section next fall. Rannels county perhaps has set a record in this endeavor and the program did not stop with the canning of beef but was continued with garden products. Many thousand cans are being stored in the family pantries this summer and will supply the table during the winter. Merchants who handle cans and canning supplies say the demand for such merchandise has been greater this year than ever before in history.

MOVIES TO SHOW HOW FARMERS CAN SAVE CROPS

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, July 26.—Agriculture is going into the movies and Hollywood is being brought to the farmers.

The visual instruction bureau of the University of Texas is acting as the distributing agency for the farm motion picture films, depicting the various phases of agriculture.

One of them, if he lives up to the claims made by the title writers and the bureau, will be farm relief in a big way. Its title is "Making Hay-Time Play-Time" and it is purported to show how the farmer may turn the heretofore extremely arduous task of gathering his alfalfa into a festival of pleasant, light work. The harvesting of hay has been regarded for generations as one of the most distasteful jobs of farming, since it necessarily must be carried out under the broiling sun.

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE DEEP OCEAN

By Mary Graham Bonner

John could hardly wait for the adventure the Clock had promised. Not only was he going to use his magic and turn the time ahead into the future, but he was going to let John see deep ocean diving, and let him go down and see the ocean floor.

The Clock was waiting for John and Peggy at the end of the garden. Peggy and the Little Black Clock were going along too, but they were not going down with the divers.

In a short time the Clock had taken them to the coast, and they all went into a boat with the strangest-looking divers the children had ever seen.

They wore costumes that looked to John like queer submarine boats! There were windows in the costumes and tanks attached to them, and breathing tubes and telephones, and attached to the arms were ready-made hands with hammers and hoes.

The Little Black Clock explained that these would be useful in digging out safes and chests from sunken vessels. And these extra hands would be worked by the diver's hands inside the costume.

Attached to the legs of these outfits were claw-like feet, which would help the divers over rocky and slippery places.

And then to John's excitement they put one of these strange outfits on him, and down, down he went with one of the others until he was at the ocean's bottom and it was very dark.

He was so glad that he did not feel afraid. And now he stopped using the valves that had helped him go down.

They had let the water in just so much. And he knew that when he was going up again, he would blow the water out with compressed air. But now he was on the ocean floor!

SEX EDUCATION—II

The matter of sex education is highly involved. It is charged with many explosives. It must be handled carefully or else something is liable to go off without warning.

There are different groups firmly holding different convictions about sex education. Some of these groups are liberal, others are conservative.

Bound up as these convictions are with religion and moral training, it is usually professed to argue about them.

Those, however, who do not have firmly set views on the subject and who are seeking enlightenment will find available many works on the subject of sex education.

Unfortunately these works are not all of equal merit. Some are positively worthless, if not misleading. Hence the uninitiated should seek guidance in the selection of authoritative works.

The first line of approach should be through the family physician. Consult him about your own and your children's problems in sex education. Usually the doctor can be of assistance.

If the doctor is unable or unwilling to help, you can secure the advice and information you seek from your local social hygiene association, and if you do not know where it may be reached, inquire by letter of the American Social Hygiene Association, 450 Seventh Avenue, New York city.

There are two parts to sex education—one is the content and the other is the method. To teach your children, it is essential that you own knowledge be adequate and correct. In addition, you must also know how to go about teaching.

Both of these items are dealt with a hundred-page book called "Parents and Sex Education," by Benjamin C. Gruenberg. This book is published and may be purchased from the American Social Hygiene Association at the foregoing address.

(Associated Press Radio Editor) Let's take a look around the net-work studios and see what can be found.

It's surprising the odds and ends of news that develop in these sound-proof structures.

There's Dorothy Knapp, the NBC "television girl," who is considered about the prettiest thing in radio entertainers. Listen to what she's telling her friends:

"You know, when I took that airplane flight to Atlantic City last week they made me an honorary pilot."

Coming up the street is Heywood Brown. He's going over to CBS to make one of his rare microphone appearances.

Before he ran for congress on the Socialist ticket in New York city he was on the air pretty regularly. He still gets letters asking why he does not return more often. The writers say they like his style of presentation, a sort of slow easy-going method of enunciation, contrasting with the rapid-fire delivery of Floyd Gibbons.

Going to Press

Hard at work at a desk on the eighteenth floor of the CBS building is Bill Schott, the former newspaperman who conducts "Going to Press" each Wednesday night.

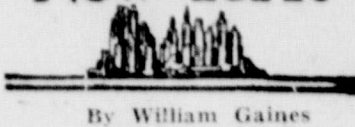

Bill has gone in strenuously now for television reception experimentation, but still finds time to dig up big names from the newspaper world for his programs.

He recently sat before a camera so his friends throughout the country could see what he looks like.

Rudy Vallee spends part of his time lately wondering what is going to happen to the song writers, now that a new song doesn't last more than a month or so.

He thinks the American public learns its new songs via radio rather than purchasing them at a music store. As evidence of

About New York

By William Gaines

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP)—Would you like to have a little noise in your home?

A shop which sells sounds has been opened right here where there's more free noise than in any other city in the world. Just name your clatter and Matthew Purcell will deliver it to you, canned.

Purcell, who raised his first infantile hulla-balloo in Dublin, in approved Irish fashion, was the late David Belasco's expert on stage properties. He was associated with Belasco for 30 years.

Meritorious Racket

Soon Purcell will be involved in such transactions as the sale of donkey brays and rain patters to little theater groups. At the same time he will be supplying professional producers with anything from the jangle of ashcans at 5 a. m. to the reverberation of a sunset gun.

And it won't surprise him if he receives requests for such home devices as a bark minus the meat-guiping dog (practicable in this depression), or a snore without the sleeper.

Of course he'll be ready to fill orders for silent stage properties and illusions as well, including stage money.

In years of satisfying the fastidious Belasco, whose passion was for realistic effects, bespeak his competence.

Purcell says the most difficult assignment he ever had was achieving the particular typhoon tonal effects required by Belasco for a play called "Salvaged" some years ago.

The master of properties labored for weeks, finally to succeed with an alluring, fascinating appearance that will not streak, spot, rub off or show the effects of perspiration. Dance or indulge in sports fully confident your complexion will retain all of its original beauty.

Tariffs and Flowers

Purcell's business temporarily will be carried on under the same roof, where gorgeous flowers are made of screen wire and sheet metal, cellophane, wood, paper, wax, glass, feathers and Japanese fiber by his old friend, Philip Roman.

Roman, a native of Atlanta, Ga., developed his extraordinary business fact he displayed a royalty check just received from a music publisher. It called for a total of one cent.

ness from what, 20 years ago, was a hobby. Interested in botany, he began making models of plants and flowers.

Many exquisite and elaborate stage gardens have been created for Belasco and other producers in his upstairs shop, where Roman has a collection of steel dies for leaves and petals he values at $10,000. All the work is done by hand.

The slump in spending and the importation of cheap artificial flowers from Germany have just about ruined his home decoration business. In Germany, principally in Sebantz, child laborers are paid only three or four cents a day by the flower makers, Roman says.

Thus, despite a 90 per cent tariff on artificial flowers, the Germans can undersell him here. Roman believes the child labor law in this country is just, but he advocates a 300 per cent duty against his foreign competitors because he must have such a law.

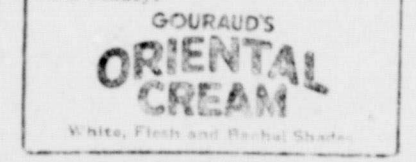

The imported produce has not challenged Roman's theatrical trade, however. Stage flowers must be fireproofed. The cheap German articles are not, Roman's are.

CONTESTS TO FEATURE ENTERTAINMENT AT A & M

COLLEGE STATION, July 26.—A new and novel feature planned for the twenty-second annual Farmers Short Course at the Texas A & M College July 27-Aug. 1 will be the nightly entertainment program on the college drill field. This program will be much in the nature of a county fair entertainment program of days of the past, including such homely sports as ducking stool event, barnyard contests such as killing and picking, harnessing work teams, guessing at the production of dairy cows, climbing the greased pole, old time community play and the like. In addition the customary free motion picture show will be given every night. This should prove wholesome and inexpensive fun for all and serve as a demonstration in how country people can get more enjoyment out of their fairs by entertaining themselves than by resorting to professional entertainers," said Director O. B. Martin of the Extension Service in commenting on the entertainment feature planned.

A large variety of talks and demonstrations, touching virtually every phase of farm and home activity, will make up the programs during the daylight hours. Special programs have been arranged for boys and girls in addition to the farm and ranch and homemaking programs for adults. A number of special conferences are scheduled.

MOON of DELIGHT by Margaret Bell Houston

SYNOPSIS: When Umberto opens the chest he has stolen from the Dolores Jaxon Divitt's gambling house he has a mystery. For in it is Juanita Basara, who Divitt and his wife, Molly, conclude is a runaway from Argentina. Divitt tries to free the lovely newcomer because he fears her story in the police would expose the theft of the chest. Divitt arranges for her to sell cigarettes to his guests. She subsides dropping her threatened exposure of her ex-allocation, becoming Juanita Basara, Divitt's guest and a runaway. She comes to Divitt's home and he asks her name. She says she is Juanita Basara. For she knows the Divitt's strong hands and back the Basara holding her prisoner in the courtyard of the resort in San Telmo, French quarter.

Chapter 5 THE LOST BRACELET

CONCHITA concluded her description of Umberto's wickedness and her flame subsided. Molly's light step was coming along the balcony. She opened the door and came in, a width of spangled black over her arm.

"Did you guess what it was?" she asked brightly, glancing at the things on the bed. "Divitt says you're a Turkish lady, one that still wears veils. Just your eyes showing—you needn't be afraid. And I found these little slippers. They're such a pretty red with these gold threads. Madame Arraline ordered them for Gabreau would be in fancy dress? Gabreau was speaking to her, fitting some cigarettes into her tray, seeming to be talking about the cigarettes.

"I will come to yo' room after ever' body is 'sleep. Put out yo' light." He picked up the coins from her tray and carried them over to Molly.

Divitt was watching her again. She moved among the tables.

An old lady sat in the crowd, wearing a red and gold dress with rubies at her throat and in her white hair. A tall young man stood beside her chair, Juanita, meeting his eyes, found them blue and kind. His glance was casual, returning to the old lady and her excited dealings with roulette, but it left Juanita smug. She gave the old lady a flower. She smiled. She gave many flowers. She sold many cigarettes. Would the night never end?

It was over at last. Some one—Molly, no doubt—had laid a silk night gown on her pillow, and turned down the covers of the great canopy bed. She blew out the light, afraid to take off the black costume lest Gabreau arrive. When Gabreau came she must admit him instantly.

The house had been still for a long time. Some it would be dawn. And Gabreau forgotten?

Juanita heard the struggle in the dark.

somebody for Mardi Gras, and they were too small, I hadn't time to get the other things. I'll get them tomorrow.

"Conchita, go down and get the bangles and the pearls on my bed. See, Juanita, how thin this stuff is! I think your flesh showing through will look mysterious and Oriental. And you don't need even to speak. In fact, you mustn't, or they'll know you're not from Istanbul.

"All right, Conchita. Put the trinkets on the bureau and come here."

Juanita stood still while they dressed her, decking her with bangles and amulets. . . . She was to see Gabreau alone. Gabreau's hands were strong. They had broken a lock.

Velled and tinkling, with bare arms, her white knees showing through the thin black crepe, Juanita went with Molly and stood outside the door of the parlors receiving her tray. The parlor door opened.

Juanita closed her eyes. The light hurt them. The glances of the people at the tables, at the roulette wheel. They all seemed to hurt her eyes. Molly need not have warned her to keep silent. She could not have spoken. But she must look at them or she would not see Gabreau.

Juanita passed among the tables, bearing her tray. The people spoke pleasantly to her as they took their cigarettes, laying their coins on the tray. Yonder stood Divitt in full dress, beside the roulette wheel, watching her. Where was Gabreau?

"Cigarettes, Fatima! And lift up your veil." A man's voice. "I've just made a bet as to what your lips are like."

She held out the tray, received the coin, moved on quickly. Molly, in the cashier's cage, plucked at her sleeve.

"When they say things like that," she whispered, "you must smile and give them a flower, since you can't talk."

Where was Gabreau? . . . Ah, yonder! Coming toward her. Why had she not remembered that Juanita's heart stopped. Soft steps were coming along the balcony. They stopped at her door, and there was a knock. Instantly she opened. Instantly when the visitor had entered, she closed the door.

"You must help me!" she began.

And then she heard the key turn, heard Umberto's soft laughter, felt his hands, she sprang from him with a scream, fled in the dark to the recess behind the bed, felt him close to her, smelt the strong, mingled odor of gin and garlic. "You little fool," he said.

She could not scream with his hand on her mouth, his arm gripping her body like a vise. But she had screamed once. And now the knob of the door turned twice and did not yield. Then the window crashed in.

Umberto released her, made for the door. But a squat heavy body intervened. Juanita heard the struggle, the heavy breathing, the low Italian invectives, the twisting, the thumping, then a cry. Something fell in the dark.

Steps along the balcony, and a light pouring through the broken window. Divitt beating on the door, commanding, Conchita, whining at the window with her lamp. The key turned in the lock, the door opened. Umberto lay on the floor, his knife beside him. There was a crash on Gabreau's cheek. Conchita ran to him moaning, staunching the wound with her skirts.

Divitt and Gabreau lifted Umberto, carried him down the balcony to his room.

The dawn was filling the courtyard when Divitt entered Juanita's still open door. He handed her her bracelet which she had not even missed.

"Umberto found this on the stair," he said. "He stopped at your door to return it. He says you asked him in."

Juanita did not answer. She laid the bracelet in her hand. She went out, closing the door.

Juanita slept till sundown the next day.

CAPITOL News

By Charles E. Simons,
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

AUSTIN, July 20.—(AP)—“In the good old summer time” might sound fine for a fishing trip, a plunge in the old swimming hole or a picnic excursion but to members of the legislature starting a 30-day special session last Tuesday it is something else again.

Because Austin in the summer time is as hot as any place else in Texas; and most of the time that's pretty warm. In addition, the heat is intensified in the legislature halls by a roof which aids and abets the sun in making things generally uncomfortable.

Members of both houses are expected to throw dignity to the winds and appear on the legislative floors sans the conventional legislative coat, with many predicting that when the air really gets hot several will abandon heat-aggravating cravats and resort to open-throated shirts in an effort to keep cool.

The heat is especially noticeable in the hall of the house, where the heat beats down relentlessly from shortly before noon until it sinks behind the ridge on the western edge of the capital city. A myriad of fans hang from the ceiling but they provide little relief, since all they do is to beat and swish about in hot air. They do not surround the legislators with cooling breezes, but merely serve to keep the air circulating.

The senate is in a much more favorable position as far as the heat is concerned. By the time the sun reaches its zenith, it is shining mostly on the roof of the hall of the house. With the exception of a few hours in the middle of the day, the senate chamber is uniformly cool, except for the hot air unleashed by its members.

One thing the heat is expected to accomplish. And many figure accomplishment of that end will, in a way, offset the disadvantage of the heat. Because of the extreme discomfort caused by any great amount of exertion, the number of heated speeches and “caustic castigations” of this, that and the other thing probably will be held to a minimum. One thing is certain, those who have attended summer sessions in the past claim, and that is that much of the shouting, stamping, arm waving, “pointing with pride” and viewing with alarm that marks the casual and ordinary session of the legislature will be conspicuous by its absence since members will prefer to sit passively in their seats in an effort to keep cool rather than risk raising the temperature to the boiling point by a heated speech.

“You're crazy with the heat,” may come into favor with the legislators instead of the usual epithets hurled at each other in the heat of debate on controversial measures.

Another member pointed out another thing that might be mitigated by the special session. Governor R. S. Sterling has indicated he will submit only oil conservation at the beginning and maybe a few less important subjects after this troublesome question has been settled. The member in point claimed that with only one subject to talk about, the number of speeches would automatically be reduced since a person can't talk all day, more than 800 pages, even though oil conservation is a big subject.

A special session of the legislature was held in July 1929. The heat that year was normal but to obtain even a semblance of comfort in the hall of the house it was necessary to place 300-pound cakes of ice in troughs in the windows with fans behind them to throw the cooling breeze over the sweating brows of the lawmakers. This ingenious procedure probably will be repeated at this session when the heat of the afternoon sun becomes almost unbearable.

WOMAN POSSESSES BIBLE OVER 333 YEARS OLD

(By Associated Press)

WHEELER, Tex., July 20.—A Bible that is 333 years old and believed to be an old unrecorded version is owned by Mrs. E. A. Holt of this city.

Unusual features of the old volume are its body type of black, Old English, the Apocrypha or writings of doubtful origin not accepted by Protestants, the Psalms set to music, marginal notes and a commentary. It is 9 by 6 by 3 1/2 inches and contains

History of the book is not known, but Mrs. Holt's father bought it in 1830. It has been in Mrs. Holt's possession 20 years. It was printed at London by the deputies of Christopher Barker in 1598, 26 years after the Bishop's Bible was printed, and 13 years before the King James version appeared in 1611. The version is not mentioned in histories of the Bible.

Mrs. Holt, who has investigated its origin, has found that it is similar to the Geneva version in omission of the name of Paul as author of the Epistle to the Romans, and the use of “breeches” instead of “aprons” in Genesis 3:7. It differs, however, in lettering and contents, and the sources of translation were not the same.

The Psalms appear three times—before Genesis, to be used as morning and evening prayer, in the accustomed place after Job, and in the back of the volume with instructions for singing.

Instructions for the administration of baptism and burial of the dead and prayer for family use morning and evening also are included.

Businesses Which Help Build City

Ballinger Auto Company

Henry Jones came to Ballinger in 1914 and purchased a part of the Ballinger Auto Co. from W. A. Nance. These two men operated the firm for a number of years where the Nance Auto Company in now located and was purchased by Mr. Jones, Marshall Northington and K. V. Northington and moved next door to the Farmers & Merchants State Bank.

The company continued in this location and under the same management until 1927 and during that time made a specialty of selling Chevrolet cars. During these years cars were selling fast in this county and the Ballinger Auto Company sold their share of Chevrolets.

In 1927 Mr. Jones purchased the entire business and moved to his present location. At that time he took the agency for Oakland and Pontiac cars and still handles them today.

Mr. Jones was a practical garage man, knowing the business from the back machine shop to the front. This experience has been one reason for his success in the business and his personal service which he gives his customers is still in force and he personally supervises all work and trade entrusted to his firm.

In addition to his car sales, he features the sale of Goodyear tires and tubes and supplies the tires for many cars in this county. He has a modern drive-in filling station where Sinclair products are featured and carries a large stock of accessories for all automobiles.

In connection is a modern machine and repair shop in charge of C. G. Cape where any kind of trouble to automobiles is looked after by experienced workmen.

Mr. Jones is progressive, both in business and in matters of vital interest to the town. He is a member of the Ballinger school board and gives much of his time to looking after details pertaining to the schools of the city. He is also active in other civic programs and shows his belief in Ballinger in all these moves.

The company is one of the pioneers here in the automobile industry and has kept abreast of all changes in that line of business.

Congressional Redistricting

 with frequent reports that both Greer and Metcalf were aspirants for a seat in the national congress.
 Greer emphatically denied the reports, with Metcalf denying them in more mild terms.
 Should Greer and Metcalf have their eyes on Washington, they would have plenty of company among their colleagues, several of whom admitted quietly they would seek recognition beyond the confines of their home state.
 Only one, Dr. C. J. Sherrill of Bellevue, was outspoken about his candidacy for Congress. The "Doc" said he would run for congress, congressional redistricting or no, regardless of the size or shape of the district in which his home was placed.
 Deliberations of the free conference committee on redistricting were hampered to a certain extent by opposition from representatives of various districts.
 Most of the senators and representatives wanted their counties compactly combined into a group whose interests were common.
 While the conference committees contended earnest efforts had been made to this end, dissatisfaction with the grouping of the counties was expressed by several members of the house, who, nevertheless, voted for adoption of the report.
 Should redistricting fail of realization at the special session it was generally regarded as likely that no further efforts would be made until the next regular session of the legislature in 1933, with the result that Texas would have three congressmen-at-large in the next congress. Several house members said they voted for the bill because of a dislike for congressmen-at-large.

FOREIGN BANKS IN CHILE LOSE SAVINGS ACCOUNTS
 (By Associated Press)
 SANTIAGO, Chile, July 20.—Foreign banks are prevented from holding savings accounts under a new savings bank reorganization law issued by President Carlos Ibanez, now vested with supreme government powers.
 The decree also changes the status of the Caja Nacional de Ahorros, or national savings bank, so that it can no longer do much commercial banking.
 Foreign banks as such are not specifically mentioned in the decree, but all commercial banks are prohibited from further business in savings, and virtually all the commercial banks are foreign institutions.

New Five Year Plan Seeks Fresh Founts of Power

(By Associated Press)
 MOSCOW, July 20.—Wider development and use of mineral and non-metallic materials take a prominent place in studies now being made preparatory to drafting Russia's new Five Year Plan.
 The planners hope to find new sources of energy, a phase in which they admit Soviet Russia heretofore has lagged.
 "One of the fundamental questions of the second Five Year Plan is that of mineral raw materials as a base for the development of industry," said Academician Fersman, member of the commission for preparing the plan.
 "This raw material occupies a low place in our economic life since its preparation for exploitation is far from satisfactory. We must find new beds of ore, salts and non-metallic minerals like coal, petroleum and lime."
 "The laws of economic geography must give us the answer as to where our industrial centers must be located."
 "Furthermore, we must find cheaper electro-induction materials."
 "The establishment of new sources of energy during the next five year period will mean a complete change in ideas about useful minerals. What we do not consider valuable now in relation to cheaper power may suddenly become the base for a whole line of new products."

LEGION MEETING TONIGHT AT 8
 Every member of the American Legion and Auxiliary is urged to be present at Legion Hall tonight at 8 o'clock for the last regular meeting of the year before the session of the state convention in Austin. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meetings and a social hour enjoyed.

Special guests have been invited to the session and problems confronting the post, new laws regarding disabled veterans, and other special matters will be discussed. The business session will not be long and tiresome, however, and everyone interested in the work of the World War veterans is invited to be present.

Nazarene Revival Has 12 Conversions

Twelve conversions marked the Nazarene revival over the weekend and an announcement was made that services would continue until Wednesday and perhaps longer. At that time other announcements will be made regarding the closing date.
 The Saturday night service was one of the greatest of the meeting and at the close ten persons gave their lives to Christ and confessed their sins. Two others were added at the close of the Sunday night service.
 Sunday night's was by far the largest crowd during the meeting and the house was packed. The musical program was a feature, a nine-piece orchestra assisting in the music. The orchestra will perform again at the Tuesday evening service and a great chorus will assist. Rev. W. Lawson Brown the pastor, is leading the music and in charge of a devotional program at each service.
 Sunday night Rev. G. R. Doster, the evangelist, brought a great message on "A Journey to Heaven." His sermons throughout the campaign have held the audiences to perfect attention and made him many friends here.
 Services will continue each morning and evening. The morning service is from 9:30 to 10:30, and the evening service begins at 8:15. Rev. Brown renews his invitation to all the Christian people of Ballinger to cooperate in the meeting and attend regularly.

BEARCATS TO TACKLE SHEEP HERDERS SUNDAY
 The Ballinger Bearcats will entertain the fast San Angelo baseball team at Fair Park Sunday afternoon at 3:30. This club is one of the fastest to be encountered at the local park this year and fans expect plenty of action in next Sunday's game. The Bearcats are getting all the help possible for this tussle and will present a fast, hard hitting club against the San Angelo team here.
 Members of other nearby clubs will join the Bearcats to make the locals a match for the stepping San Angelo team and good pitchers will be available for the heavy mound work against the hard hitting visitors.

Charles Thorp, W. A. Nance, Jr., and Dr. W. B. Halley are participating in the invitation golf tournament at Coleman this week. Thorp recently won the championship of the Ballinger Country Club and all three players are members of the first flight here.

Miss Vernon Browning, of Alvin, is here this week a guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Forman.

Mrs. Joe Forman, Miss Vernon Browning of Alvin, Mrs. Horace Murphy and Mrs. Ida B. McCullough left Monday morning to spend the day in San Angelo.

Mixed Tournament For Local Golfers

Ballinger golf players will have something new here Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 when mixed foursomes start a small tournament of "Scotch Golf." The tournament is open to every local golf player and the only provision is that he bring a lady who will take part in the game. The first flight of eight will start at exactly 4:30 and all players are requested to be at the club shortly before that time so that partners can be arranged.
 The players will place the names of all the women in a box and before starting to play will draw a partner. In drawing if any man gets his own wife, he will draw another name and replace hers. The eight composing a foursome, four men and four women, will play four balls. The men players will take the first drive and after that every shot will be altered.
 Those in charge of the tournament do not care whether the women have ever played before or not. Many of those already signed for the play will be shooting their first ball and it will be as fair for one as for the other. Monday morning twelve couples had joined in for the play and at least that many more are wanted before Tuesday afternoon at 4:30.
 Joe Forman will be at the club to meet the players and assist in drawing for partners and getting them started with the rules fully explained. A suitable trophy will be given to the couple making the lowest score on the round.

The tournament is expected to increase interest both with the men and women in playing golf and it is the desire that every club member who plays bring a woman and take part in the game Tuesday. Those who cannot bring their wives are at liberty to bring any lady in town who would like to play. Simply place her name in the box so that she will be drawn by someone for a partner and the pairs will be even.

Labels Do Lie
 GALVESTON, July 20.—(AP)—The foreign label on the bottle may be genuine, but the stuff inside is likely to be synthetic.

Prohibition agents here said so after a raid in which they seized 218 bottles of pseudo-imported liquor with imposing labels.
 It was, they said in effect, just the garden variety of bootleg stuff.

TWO NEGROES KILLED, TWO INJURED IN CAR OVERTURN

Two negroes were killed instantly, two others seriously injured and a fifth escaped uninjured when a Ford car turned over six miles north of Winters Monday morning about 7 o'clock. The bodies of the dead negroes, William Pulliam and Seth Jones, were brought through here Monday morning by Spill Brothers undertakers on their way to San Angelo, and the injured were to be removed from Winters to San Angelo some time during the day.
 The five negroes made up an orchestra which has headquarters at San Angelo and had been to Cisco over the week-end on a playing engagement. They left Cisco after playing Sunday night and were near Winters when a front casing on their car blew out, turning the machine over and pinning four of the quintet under the wreckage. The automobile was completely demolished and two of the occupants were dead when help arrived.
 The condition of the injured negroes was serious but physicians thought they would recover.

M. C. Atkins spent Sunday in Tuscola, transacting business for the Southwest Telephone Company, and reported a heavy rain in that section during the day.

H. B. O'Kelly and Arthur Glesecke left Monday morning for Coleman to play in the qualifying rounds for the invitation golf tournament to be held there Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.
