A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Haircut sparks lawsuit

Shelley Osborne had a bad hair day when she walked out of a salon six years ago, but she won't be getting any compensation for her suffering.

A Johnson City (Tenn.) City Law Court last week dismissed Osborne's $10.5 million lawsuit against stylist Ginny Barbee, the salon and its owner, JC Penney.

Osborne, 37, claimed she was "ruined" after Barbee trimmed her waist-length hair and left her with locks just above the shoulders.

Wrong checkbook stolen

Topeka, Kan., Police Officer Jason Cooper thought he was lucky to be nearby as a man tried to cash a stolen check.

Then the officer got more good news.

After arresting the man on forgery charges, Cooper learned that the checks the suspect was trying to cash were his own.

The officer's checkbook had been stolen when his car was burglarized more than a month ago.

"It was some pretty sweet justice," Cooper said.

No more boring flights

Snigapore Airlines passengers can challenge each other to digital chess or mahjong and the whole plane can compete in a digital quiz show.

The airline has been testing the games on select flights since April and plans to launch an "In-flight Challenge" trivia game during the airline's inaugural flight to Chicago, a company spokesman said.

The airline was the first in the world to make personal entertainment standard on long-haul flights.

Beef having bright spots, cloudy spots

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
COLLEGE STATION

— High consumption and prices are the best of times for beef producers, and a foreign animal disease such as foot-and-mouth would certainly be the worst of times.

Last week's 47th annual Beef Cattle Short Course at Texas A&M University showed ranchers how to take advantage of the good times and how to prevent some of those bad times, according to course coordinator Dr. Larry Boleman.

According to Boleman, every segment of the beef industry has been profitable in 2001, and the future looks good. While retail beef prices have gone up, consumption has increased as well.

"All of these are almost rare — that's the best of times," he said.

The worst of times has been an increase in diseases such as bovine spongiform encephalopathy and foot-and-mouth in some countries, especially across Europe, and that has worried producers, Boleman said.

But the attitude of producers is still positive, he said.

Income-tax extension ends Aug. 15

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
Taxpayers who requested an extension for filing their tax return need to be aware that the Aug. 15 deadline for filing is this week. Forms should be post-marked by that date.

"While it is possible to get an additional two-month extension, taxpayers should know that they will not receive their advance payment check, commonly called a tax rebate check, until their 2000 return is filed," said Kay Wiseman, owner of H&R Block in Muleshoe.

"It is also important to remember that the extensions apply only to the filing of forms — all taxes were due April 16," she added.

Any taxes due that have not been paid are accumulating interest — and possibly penalties if the amount due is more than 10 percent of the total tax liability.

Taxpayers who have not yet filed a 2000 return should remember that they will not receive the advance payment check authorized by the new tax law until their return is filed and processed by the IRS, Wiseman said, and advance payment checks will not be sent out after December.

If a taxpayer's return is not filed in time to be processed by the end of the year, that taxpayer will not receive the check, she said. They still may claim a credit, to the extent that they qualify for it, on their 2001 tax return.

No changes should be made to a 2000 return in anticipation of an expected advance payment for 2001.

Taxpayers who have no balance due from a prior year and who cannot pay the full amount due on their current-year return may file a Form 9465, Installment Request Agreement.

Those taxpayers who cannot pay the amount due because of undue hardship may use Form 1127, Application for Extension of Time To Pay Taxes.

If that application is accepted, the taxpayer is given up to six months to pay the tax, free from penalty.

Interest accrues, however, from the time the tax was due.

Ag museum schedules first event

By ROGER HALDENBY
Plains Cotton Growers

As the first generations of people who pioneered agriculture on the High Plains of Texas pass away, more and more of the unique history and heritage of this region is being lost forever.

A group of individuals interested in organizing an Agriculture Heritage Museum has been meeting for the past several months under the leadership of David Langston, former mayor of Lubbock.

The first membership meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. Aug. 25, on the north end of the American Wind Power Center, 1501 Canyon Lake Drive.

Admission for this kick-off dinner is $25 per person, and seats can be reserved by contacting David Langston at (806) 765-7491. Charter membership is also available for $200 per family or $500 for a corporate membership.

Dress for the event is casual. There will be good food, entertainment by Kenny Maines and friends, and a short program about the dream to establish this museum and what it will take to make it a reality.

New doctor practicing in Muleshoe

Dr. Thomas Smith has joined the medical staff of Muleshoe Area Medical Center and began practice at the Medical Clinic of Muleshoe on July 18.

The family practitioner joins Dr. Kyle Sheets. Both will see walk-in patients as well as accepting appointments.

"We are delighted to have Dr. Smith join the medical staff of the hospital," said Dr. Bruce Purdy, president of the hospital medical staff.

"His background, training and interest will be an asset in assuring consistent access to medical services for the residents of our area."

Before becoming a doctor, Smith received a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from Texas Tech University in Lubbock. He worked on space-shuttle communications for Lockheed Engineering and Rockwell Space Systems, both in Houston.

He graduated from the University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston, in 1998. During his third year of family-practice residency at Valley Baptist Medical Center in Harlingen, he did a rural rotation with the Indian Health Service at Kakanak Hospital in Dillingham, Alaska.

Lubbock center to host watermelon field day

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
LUBBOCK — Nothing beats a slice of fresh watermelon on a hot summer's day. That's what is on tap Aug. 14, along with a watermelon variety field day, at Texas A&M's Agricultural Research and Extension Center here.

The field tour will run from 10 a.m. to noon, said Dr. David Bender, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station vegetable researcher.

"Participants will have an opportunity to view 39 seeded and seedless watermelon cultivars at this field day," Bender said. "These melons were grown on raised plastic-mulched beds watered by drip irrigation."

Bender and others will explain how the melon variety trial was planted, cared for and watered during the growing season, and also discuss the results of this year's trial.

"This trial is one of five conducted at different locations in the Texas statewide watermelon trials. The trials are funded by the watermelon-seed industry. Cultivars include industry standards, and the latest releases from commercial breeding programs," Bender said.

"This is an excellent way to evaluate and compare differences in quality, internal texture, color and taste. We also will discuss the developments in commercial watermelon production," he added.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Members of Muleshoe's Boy Scout Troop 620 attended Camp Tres Ritos in Tres Ritos, N.M., July 8-14.

Participating were Scouts Cody Black and Matthew Richards, with Mike Richards as leader.

Merit badges were earned in archery, shotgun shooting, basketball, soil and water conservation, camping and cooking.

Wednesday was free time during the camp, so the group went whitewater rafting on the Rio Grande near Taos. All meals were prepared by the Scouts and included such items as mesquite-broiled chicken and chicken-fried steak.

The group is also sponsoring a Scout Get Together on Aug. 13 from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at Mule-Putt Miniature Golf in Muleshoe.

More information on Scouting is available from Richards at 272-3536 or mikeyr@fivearea.com.

Christians Know the End of the Story

Setting up housekeeping is no easy task. But the opposite task on the other end of the journey is infinitely harder. Ask anyone who has buried their last parent or whose parents have had to move into a care facility. That person will tell you that sifting through three-quarters worth of a century's accumulated mounds of paper, pictures, trinkets, and family treasures is, well, a daunting task.

But it can be interesting. It can bring laughter. And tears.

And it certainly can make you think. Probably such an undertaking takes much of its character and color from the character and lives of the folks who've gone on. That, at least, was my experience with my own parents. Mom passed away first, and we cleaned and culled. But the real job came when Dad passed away some years later.

I was surprised at some of what they kept and some of the treasures and the trinkets we ran across. We found tons of birthday and anniversary cards that Mom and Dad gave to each other, cards of both sorts lovingly inscribed in their completely unique handwriting. (Mom's was the most beautiful and perfect penmanship I have ever seen; Dad's, perhaps the most unique.) I don't think they ever threw away a single card. My siblings and I even found the little pencil-written penny post card that Dad had mailed to his own folks as he and my mother had just left their wedding for their honeymoon. He described them as "supremely happy," and signed the card proudly, "Mr. & Mrs. G. B. Shelburne, Jr."

I found the letter one of the men I'm named for had penned to me and my family when I had just been born. I found a kindergarten graduation diploma, a notebook with pasted pictures used to help me learn the letters of the alphabet in 1st grade, and crayon-colored pictures that I had drawn in 3rd grade.

I found a letter I'd written home from scout camp, dripping with homesickness. I found a number of pictures of myself in various embarrassing stages of adolescent ugly-duckling-hood.

And I think I found every letter I'd ever written Mom and Dad once I'd left home. I read some of the college letters we'd written, and I was reminded reading between the lines (I'd blissfully almost forgotten) that Juana and I thought we might starve before we got me through school.

We didn't starve. We made it. And that may be one very valuable lesson that comes from taking this sort of mandatory trip down memory lane. What we were so worried about then either never happened or we got through it.

Mom and Dad made a successful trip through this life. If our eyes stay focused on the same Lord who led them through, so will we. We may not know what may transpire in our life's story tomorrow or Thursday or next week. But Christians know the Author. He's told us the end of the story. And it's great!

Genetically modified foods studied

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
AUSTIN—The Texas Medical Association has launched a yearlong study to arm physicians with information they can provide patients on the potential health effects of genetically modified foods.

The study is being conducted by the association's Task Force on Genetically Modified Foods, which was appointed by association President Tom B. Hancher, MD, of Columbus.

Hancher said accurate information on genetically altered crops is needed because, if safe, they could benefit the agricultural economy of the United States and help ease famine in underdeveloped countries.

In developing countries, crops that have been genetically engineered to be more resistant to disease and to be more productive would be a tremendous asset," Hancher said. "But at the same time, we want to be certain those crops are safe for human consumption."

The task force, which held its first meeting June 27, is made up of consumers, producers, scientists, physicians, legislators and state agriculture officials.

The panel will review existing research on genetically modified foods and draw conclusions about whether such foods are safe for human consumption and, if safe, whether there is a clear benefit from these products for consumers, the agriculture industry and developing nations.

At the initial meeting, task force members pointed to a lack of consumer confidence in biotechnology and the need for consumers to have unbiased information about the safety of genetically altered foods so they

TOPS NEWS

Leader Laverne James presided over the TOPS No. 34 meeting Aug. 9.

The meeting was held in the Muleshoe Church of Christ fellowship room.

Both the opening and closing songs, "The Slimmer We'll Be" and "The Goodnight Song," were led by Alma Robertson.

The minutes were read by Secretary Tommie Fulcher and approved as read.

Weight recorders Alene Bryant and Linda White gave the roll call and conducted the weigh-in. Eleven members were present.

The best loser was Lucille Harp, first runner-up Alma Robertson and second runner-up Elaine Coburn.

The program was about drinking water. Eight glasses of water per day traditionally has been recommended as the ideal amount, especially for those trying to lose weight.

A recent magazine article, however, state that eight glasses of water would not help curb the appetite and could even be unhealthy, but most authorities do not agree with that.

The group's discussion came to the conclusion that it is up to the individual to decide how much water to drink, considering that water nourishes the skin and keeps the body from dehydration in addition to satisfying thirst.

The next meeting is scheduled for Aug. 16 at the same site. Visitors are welcome.
