DANCING INTO THE SUNSET

■ Couple kept same jobs for four decades

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

Chester and Elinor Yerby don't want to act their age.

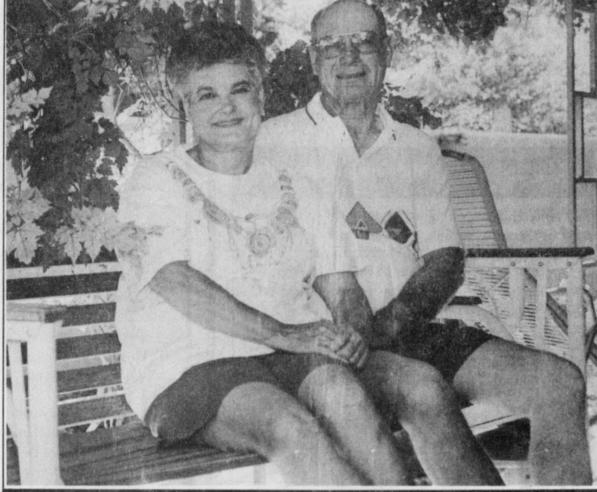

Extremely active and remarkable healthy, it's hard to believe they're recently retired "senior citizens."

But after working a combined 83 years at the same jobs, the Muleshoe couple decided to call it quits while they're still healthy. Both retired Monday.

"We feel blessed that were still in good health," said Chester, relaxed in his living room recliner in his stocking feet. "While we're still healthy, we want to do as much as we can."

Chester, 66, worked for what now is Dale Oil Co. for 40 years, mostly delivering fuel to area farmers.

"I really liked being outside and getting out and visiting with the farmers," Chester said. "I don't think I could have ever handled not working outside."

A lot has changed since he started at Finn's Gulf Wholesale in 1957 he said. Gasoline was 28¢ a gallon that first day.

The tax alone on gasoline his last day was 34¢.

Elinor, 65, worked for Western Drug for 43 years, mostly as a pharmacy technician and bookkeeper.

"I always worked like it was my store," said Elinor, "I think the work you do is something you should be

Garbarino switching positions at NMSU

By RICK WHITE Managing Editor

Daniel Garbarino was surprised to find himself playing quarterback on the scout team as a redshirt freshman last fall at New Mexico State University.

He also found out a lot about himself.

"I was kind of like a tackling dummy," said Garbarino, a former Muleshoe High School standout, whose pervious quarterback experience was limited to a few games his senior year. "But it was fun. I just like competing."

Playing behind an offensive line comprised mostly of walkons, Garbarino spent a lot of time flat on his back or running for his life.

Getting smacked around by the first team defense earned Garbarino plenty of bumps and bruises — but also the respect of his teammates.

It also helped erase any doubt that he was tough enough to play Division I football.

Garbarino returns to the New Mexico State campus in Las Cruces next week for summer school and informal workouts.

Bolstered by an off-season weight program that added 15 pounds of muscle, Garbarino was measured at 6-3 3/4 and 200 pounds. He also clocked a legitimate 4.69 in the 40 this spring.

The three-time All South Plains selection and two-time state qualifier in the hurdles was recruited as a wide receiver by Jim Hess.

But Hess was fired after a 1-9 season and replaced by former Nebraska assistant Tony Samuel this winter.

Samuel faces the difficult task of turning around one of the weakest Division I programs in the country.

Garbarino was kept at quarterback because he has the athletic ability needed to run the Nebraska I offense Samuel is installing.

The quarterback option is a big part of the run-oriented offense. Most passes are from a three-step drop or on sprint options.

Garbarino will be under the tutelage of Nebraska quarterback and Big 8 Player of the Year Gerry Gdowski.

'It's going all right," said Garbarino, who is majoring in government. "I never realized how much studying it takes. It's like taking another class."

County seeding program gets off the ground

Aircraft from the High Plains Water Conservation District No.1 seed clouds in Bailey County three or four times since a weather modification program began in late May.

Water District information/ education director Carmon McCain it will still be sometime before meteorologists determine the results.

McCain believes that weather specialists will eventually be able to produce tangible evidence on whether or not cloud seeding actually works.

Bailey County is one of 15 West Texas counties that are participating in the experimental program along with a portion of eastern New Mexico.

Precipitation enhancement, or cloud seeding, is an attempt to encourage clouds to generate more rainfall than they would otherwise by introducing seeding agents, such as silveriodide. The silveriodide provides additional condensation nuclei to allow more cloud moisture to be converted to raindrops large enough to survive the fall through the dry subcloud layer and reach the ground as meaningful rainfall.

Participants will pay a prorata share of the fixed and reimbursable program costs, based upon acreage. The High Plains Water District will pay 81 percent for its 6.8 million acre service area and will be adjusted if other counties en-

City police make another drug bust

The drug trafficking crackdown continues along U.S. Highway 84.

Muleshoe Police arrested a Clovis man and woman on drug charges Wednesday following a routine traffic stop.

Gaining consent to search the 1983 Chevrolet pickup truck being driven by Roy Keith Kincaid, police found both liquid and crystallized methamphetamine, a small amount of marijuana, and drug paraphernalia.

Kincaid, 33, and Ferna Leigh Goins, 30, were charged with possession of a controlled substance, which is a state jail felony, and possession of mari-

Each was being held Thursday at the Bailey County Jail on a $3,250 bond.

Police also confiscated a little more than $200 in cash and will also confiscate the truck, according to Muleshoe Police Chief Rick Henegar.

"We're going to take and take from them dopers," Henegar said.

It was the second traffic related drug arrest in a little more than a month.

Muleshoe Police arrested three people and confiscated 112 grams of methaphetimine, five grams of cocaine and $7,500 in cash during a May

Yummy Sardines

By John Erikson

(In the previous chapter, Slim, a ranch hand takes Hank the Cowdog and his sidekick, Drover, for a pickup ride. Hank takes the opportunity to grill Drover about why he had run off and left Hank chasing ashes from an explosion while Slim was burning garbage. Hank is still mad that Loper, the rancher, had laughed at him and wants to find out why he was the scapegoat. But Drover can only think of billy goats and what goats eat. Hank's interrogation of Drover goes nowhere fast.)

Slim slammed the mailbox shut—that's kind of a tongue -twister, isn't it? And turned onto the little road that led to his house. When we reached the front door, he dogs, and catch a mouse."

I went streaking inside. Drover went inside, too, but he didn't "streak." He lollygagged around, as he usually does, and at that speed he couldn't catch a mouse if the mouse threw up his hand and surren-

Paws, I guess. Threw up his paws. Mice don't have hands, see.

Right away, I flushed out three head of mice and chased one of them to the three sacks of trash sitting beside the back door. He dived into the trash and so did I.

My goodness, what a mess. The mouse managed to escape - I mean, who could find a little mouse in the mountain of garbage? - The mouse managed to escape, but only by the tiniest of margins.

Unfortunately, the three sacks of garbage didn't manage to escape and they, well, became, "rearranged," shall we say, all over the west side of the kitchen.

I brought up the subject of mice."

Slim laughed and held up a small, flat can. Again, my tongue shot out and swept my lips. It appeared that my mouth had begun to water, so to speak.

"Yummy Sardines."

I moved mu front feet up and down. A whine leaped out of my throat, and yes, my mouth was watering like crazy. Could he hurry this deal up?

He squinted his eyes at the can. "There's just one little problem, Hankie. This can's

Retired teachers receive pension raise

Retired school personnel in Texas can look forward to receiving retirement annuity increases that range from 2% to 14% with the signing by Gov. George W. Bush of the Teacher Retirement System Omnibus Bill.

The increase will be reflected in retirees' Sept. 30 annuity checks as well as additional health care benefit improvements.

HB2644 is the result of the Texas Retired Teachers Association working in cooperation with the Teacher Retirement Plan to restore what retired school personnel had lost to inflation, correct inequities in years of retirement and bring all annuitants up to a level playing field.

Passage of HB2644 represents the second largest annuity increase — $1.4 billion for retired school personnel ever passed by the Texas Legislature. The largest increase — $1.6 billion — was passed Garbarino suited up for two games last year; the Aggies' season opener against the University of New Mexico and at Louisiana State, which plays in the 78,000-seat "Death Valley."

"I was overwhelmed at LSU and I didn't even play," said Garbarino, who was born in Louisiana and still has family there.

Garbarino said he's content with his college choice, even though in the long run he'd probably play more at a smaller school.

"If my best is not good enough, that's okay," he said. "If I don't make it I will still have broadened my horizons."

So, Dear, Whisper in My Ear, But No Teeth, Please

will never understand why some gals think that it is romantically alluring for some slobbering guy to nibble on their ear. (I have this on good authority from the one gal whose ear I am licensed to nibble upon.) I still don't understand.

But I'm pretty sure that heavyweight champion (chomp-ion?) Evander Holyfield found former champ Mike Tyson's biting his ear last week anything but romantic.

Faith Curtis Shelburne

Try disgusting. Revolting. Maddening. Insane. Quite a number of words would work. But not, and this is the only bit of normalcy in an otherwise weird story, romantic.

Why'd Tyson do it? Lots of folks wonder. Sports commentators, who could hardly believe their own video tapes, spent lots of time wondering. (One newspaper headline alluded to the "sucker munch.") Tyson won-

Did you see the news conference where Tyson apologized for his outrageous, carnivorous ear-munching tendencies? He made a very lucid statement (for a guy who'd just tried to chew off a man's ear) and then said that he was working with professionals (doctors? counselors?) to try to discover what would cause one man to decide in the heat of battle to eat another man's ear.

Hmm. What do you suppose they'll discover? He hopes, I'm sure, that some sort of vitamin deficiency, hormonal imbalance, genetic abnormality, maybe an ear-wax shortage, will get him off the hook, or the lobe, as the case may be. I can see the headlines now. "Genetic Test Formulated To Identify Potential Ear-biters." "Phases of the Moon Coupled With Low B12 May Ear-nibbling Human Syndrome." "Ear-jerking Teacher in Tyson's Past Blamed for Ear Incident: NEA Has No Comment."

Seems to me that Tyson is just like the rest of us who at times have stood horrified at our own behavior desperately needing some way to convince ourselves that our shocking behavior is something we could not help and not, consequently, our fault. It was something that happened to us, not something we did.

We don't blame somebody for being born with a short leg or an undeveloped hand or crossed eyes. Maybe scientists will discover a mysterious ear-biting gene that has suddenly afflicted Mike Tyson. But I doubt it. For a better use of his abundant funds, I'd suggest he fire a doctor or two and, for free, read Romans 7 where the Apostle Paul confesses to standing aghast at his own behavior. Paul sets up both the problem and the cure. Great medicine for people tempted to bite off ears. Or heads. Or trouble. Or more than they can chew I'll say this: I'm pretty sure Tyson's problem is hereditary. He's a child of Adam. And so are we.

Curtis Shelburne is minister of the 16th & D Church of Christ in Muleshoe.

pooched up in the middle, which means the sardines might be spoilt.

No problem there. Shucks, I June 16-20. ate spoiled sardines all the time, and could we hurry up?

"That's why I saved 'em for you, but I don't want you getting sick in my house."

Sick? That was ridiculous. No dog in history had ever gotten sick on sardines. I could almost taste 'em, yummy sardines.

it a try, but if you get to feeling system. sick, let me know."

down on the floor. Right away I turned a menacing glare towards Drover and showed him some fangs. "These are my sardines, pal, so don't even think what you're thinking.

"I was just thinking that sardines make me sick."

Fine. Go chase your tail. Having disposed of Dover, I turned back to my feastly treasure and . . . wow! Those were some wonderful-smelling sardines, and I was so excited that my legs were quivering.

Sardines packed in oil. My favorite kind.

Slim watched with a lopsided grin as I tore into those yummy delicious awesomely wonderful sardines. I gobbled them in huge in huge bites, hardly noticing that, yes, they had a slightly rancid taste to them.

Maybe they were a little past their prime, but that was no big deal. As you may know, we dogs have a digestive system that allows us to eat many food items that would make others ill.

Great sardines! Don't know as I'd ever had better, which just went to prove what I'd always said: A little age on a sardine don't hurt a thing.

Slim watched me eat awhile, then he got down on his hands and knees and started picking up the garbage mess.

"I don't understand what brings these durned mice into my house. You'd think a mouse would rather stay outside where it's nice and clean."

The only trouble with sardine cans is that they don't stand still. Every time you take a lick, they move across the floor. They're not as fast as mice, but by George, you have to stay with 'em and chase them down.

A lot of your ordinary dogs don't have the patience to tackle a major sardine hob and stick with it to the end. They'll get tired of chasing that can across the floor and just give up.

Not me. I followed it all the way across the kitchen and was out in the middle of the living room when, suddenly and out of nowhere, I heard a tap at the

Then someone said, "Yoohoo, Slim? Are you home?"

Well, you know me. I'm never too busy to bark and I never make careless assumptions about who's at the door. Fellers, I bristled up and barked.

And you'll never guess who it was.
