Short Speaks At Rotary Meet

E. L. Short, state representative from this 73rd district, in a talk before Tahoka Rotary Club Thursday reported on the recent session of the Texas Legislature.

There were 2042 bills introduced during the session, and 2,000 of them passed into law. Some lobbyists give that group a bad name, but he said as a whole they served a good purpose in our legislative process. Most of these people are experts in their fields, and furnish members of the legislature valuable information on bills up for passage. Each legislator may hear both sides of a given question, and then make up his mind on his vote.

Touching on the increasing cost of government, which spiraling increase most average citizens do not like, he pointed briefly at the increasing demand for added services and increasing costs of everything in life. In spite of the great increase, he said Texas ranks 23rd among states of the nation in per capita cost of state government.

Another vital problem facing Texas, he said, is the diminishing supply of natural gas, much of which is being piped north and east. He declared the time is not too far distant when we may not have enough gas available for our domestic use.

He thought the legislative redistricting bill was fair. Terry county has been added to this district in order to bring population up to average by Supreme Court formula, and joins Lynn, Dawson, Andrews, Martin, and Gaines in the 73rd District.

Short had several local bills passed including bills creating Dawson County juvenile district, Seminole hospital district, Andrews County Industrial Foundation, abolishing the office of county superintendent in Lynn county, and was joined by other legislators in presenting bills that would govern rock festivals, amending the liquor bill requiring private clubs to have at least 50 members who are residents of the county in which such private club operates, and amending an antiquated prairie dog control law.

Texas voters will have opportunity to decide on 14 amendments to the state constitution in 1972.

Southern Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Wells, is the new club sweetheart, succeeding Carol Thomas.

Texas Press Honors Former News Editor

Frank P. Hill, former editor and publisher of The News, was one of 12 Texas newsmen honored "in recognition of 50 years of service to journalism" at the recent convention of Texas Press Association held in Austin.

Although not present for the ceremony, Hill received in the mail last week his certificate and a small gold billfold-size metal plaque signifying the recognition.

Hill retired April 1, 1967, after having been with The News since 1923, when his dad, the late E. I. Hill Sr., bought The News from R. B. Haynes, now of Miami.

He told the present editor this week that he began setting type by hand at age 12 down at Roscoe after E. I. Hill had bought that paper in 1914. During his college days at West Texas State, he served successively as reporter, business manager, and edi-

Undersecretary of Agriculture J. Phil Campbell, flew into Tahoka Airport Thursday afternoon, and was accompanied by some local agricultural leaders on a brief tour of southwest Lynn county and north Dawson county's dry areas, then spoke before a crowd of farmers and other at Lamesa's Park. He was on a hurried two-day tour of Texas drought areas.

Raised on a Georgia cotton farm, the Nixon Administration Undersecretary expressed sympathy for the plight of cotton, and assured various people both in private and in his talk at Lamesa he and the administration will do all in its power to help solve cotton problems.

Bertice Askew, county ASCS Committee chairman, declared Mr. Campbell was easy to talk with and seemed sincere in his interest in agriculture's problems.

Mr. Askew, ASCS Committee member Waymon Smith, and Duane Howell of the Avalanche - Journal, accompanied Mr. Campbell on the trip west on US 380, thence to Wells and New Moore and south over farm roads to Lamesa, passing many fields too dry to plant and others in desperate need of immediate rain.

Pat Guy of the local ASCS office and Boyd Barnes, also a committeeman, accompanied them.

Undersecretary Campbell flew in here from Amarillo by private plane, arriving at about 2:30, an hour late on his schedule.

He was accompanied by Marshall Garber, USDA regional director in charge of school lunch, food stamp, nutrition, and commodity programs for seven Southwestern states plus the Navajo Nations; Zack Fisher, from Senator John Tower's office; and Jim Campbell of Pampa.

He was greeted at the airport here by Mayor Meldon Leslie, County Agent Bill Griffin, and about 20 farmers and agricultural leaders including the others named above; also by Duane Howell, who was reared here, and R. S. Tapp, Lubbock cotton merchant.

When he shook hands with Duane, he remarked, "Yes, I know who you are. I read your column all the time." Duane Howell, Avalanche

Journal farm editor, writes the "Plains Farming" column for the Lubbock newspaper.

Campbell expressed opposition to the $20,000 per crop limit on price support and diversion payments tacked on to the agricultural appropriations bill recently by the House, and declared "such a low-level limitation will kill the farm program." He said the Administration will exert every effort to influence the Senate to defeat this rider to the bill. He said the Administration has opposed any payment ceiling limitation.

However, he pointed out that farm area congressmen are now in the minority in Congress and support of city congressmen must be had to pass effective farm legislation. To secure this support, farm area congressmen must try to understand and help solve city problems.

Campbell is an advocate of the cotton research and promotion program, and was instrumental in getting the first-year $10 million appropriation for this the 1970 Act.

He agreed that more needs to be done in trying to move American cotton into world trade.

USDA Official Blasts Payment Limitation

"Would Be Catastrophic For Cotton"

SCORNS LIMITATION PAYMENT TALK - Under Secretary of Agriculture Phil Campbell told a group of over 100 farmers, businessmen and agricultural agency officials here Thursday that payment limitation talks would "ruin cotton." The USDA official scorned talk of a disaster declaration because it would do the farmer very little good, but would be costly because of increased food stamps and unemployment benefits. Under Secretary of Agriculture Phil Campbell, who is in charge of the cotton research and promotion program, and was instrumental in getting the first-year $10 million appropriation for this the 1970 Act.

He agreed that more needs to be done in trying to move American cotton into world trade.

He said the Administration will exert every effort to influence the Senate to defeat this rider to the bill. He said the Administration has opposed any payment ceiling limitation.

However, he pointed out that farm area congressmen are now in the minority in Congress and support of city congressmen must be had to pass effective farm legislation. To secure this support, farm area congressmen must try to understand and help solve city problems.

Campbell is an advocate of the cotton research and promotion program, and was instrumental in getting the first-year $10 million appropriation for this the 1970 Act.

He agreed that more needs to be done in trying to move American cotton into world trade.

He said USDA will consider eliminating or softening the set-aside requirements of cotton, or releasing diverted acres for planting to cotton.

Campbell expressed concern over the migration from the farm to the city, and declared the Administration is committed to a "revitalized rural America" to help solve both rural and urban problems.

He expressed the belief farmers do not want a hand-out, and said that the Farm and Home Administration will be authorized to participate with banks in farm loans to drought-stricken farmers where banks have extended themselves to the limits of credit under the law.

Local farm leaders were encouraged by Mr. Campbell's attitude and sympathetic ear. He said to be one of the Administration's most knowledgeable officials in the field of cotton.

Mr. Fisher told a News reporter Senator Tower is very concerned about both the drought and farm program, and will do everything he can in the Senate to have the $20,000 per crop limitation removed.

This limitation trend is dangerous, he thinks, and could prove disastrous to West Texas cotton production.

18 Year Olds May Vote In All Election

This is to formally notify you that persons 18, 19, or 20 years of age who are presently registered to vote for federal elections only may now vote in all elections in your county and other political subdivisions.

The 26th Amendment to the United States Constitution lowering the voting age to 18 in all elections has been duly ratified by the state legislatures as prescribed by the Federal Constitution. The Federal Register in Washington D.C. confirmed July 1, 1971, that this new amendment went into immediate effect. This United States Constitutional Amendment overrides Article VI of the Texas Constitution insofar as it requires an otherwise qualified voter to be 21 years of age to be eligible to vote. Thus as of July 1, 1971, any registered 18, 19 or 20 year old may vote in any election - federal, state, county, city, or other political subdivision.

Persons who turned 18 years of age after the close of the regular 1971 registration period may still register for the current voting year. The certificate is effective for any election held 30 days after registration. It is not necessary to segregate these late registrations from any other age classification on the list of registered voters. Also, do not stamp any of these registration certificates "FOR FEDERAL ELECTIONS ONLY".

Please make this information available to your local news media. If we can be of any assistance in this matter, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Highlights AND Sidelights by Vern Sanford TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Gov. Preston Smith, in an unprecedented veto action, turned the job of rewriting the entire 1973 state budget to a special legislative session next year.

Smith took the axe to $3.1 billion in state spending which he found "unnecessary and unwarranted" for the second half of the biennium. He announced his decision on a statewide television program, and said that he will submit to the lawmakers, before September 1972, a new 1973 budget proposal which will require no new taxes.

Smith made it clear that a 1972 special session is inevitable, anyway, because the Legislature did not appropriate welfare funds for the second year.

Governor's action may accomplish the following regardless of whether a new tax bill can be avoided next year (Texas Research League estimates a $474 million biennial tax bill will be required in the 1972 special session):

- Legislators will have to take a sober second look at spending items in an election year when many are faced with general election contests.

- Fact that little additional federal aid is available for welfare spending, in spite of predictions by Smith, Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and others, will be partially obscured, since the special session will not be confined to welfare alone but opened to the entire area of government spending for 1973.

Smith declined to reveal his future political plans but left dangling the prospect of a third term race.

Governor claims the public response has been almost 100 per cent favorable to his historic veto. Lieutenant Governor and House Speaker Gus Nutscher pledged cooperation. COURTS SPEAK - State Supreme Court, in a five-four decision, held that an insurance company can't fight its policyholders in suits against uninsured motorists except in unusual situations.

A man fired by an oil company for not getting enough new business in the Beaumont-Houston area was granted a new trail through a Supreme Court order.

High Court upheld the county court at law finding that a San Antonio woman could collect damages from the City of San Antonio for condemnation of her land and for damage to property due to erosion.

Supreme Court heard arguments in the Braniff and Texas International Airways effort to ground the new Southwest Airlines (Dallas, Houston, San Antonio routes).

Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the death penalty of a man convicted of a 1967 knife murder of a Baylor University coed and ordered a new trial.

Trial of former San Marcos Police Chief Waymon Dial, for burglary, has been transferred to Harris County.

AG OPINIONS - Texas Water Quality Board may contract for the state with the federal government for federal grants or loans under the federal water pollution control act - subject to a 60-day limitation and the governor's approval - Atty. Gen. Crawford C. Martin has held.

In other recent opinions, Martin concluded that: + El Paso can contract with the Council of Governments for a recreation area partly within the city limits, partly in the county and partly in Dona Ana county, New Mexico.

+ National Guard Armory Board has authority to determine the lowest and best bid and best interest of the state on armory construction which involves unknown factors on a fixed bid, price and congressional factors.

- Concentrated Employment Project federal funds are not subject to auditing procedures applicable to county funds.

+ A city fireman, on returning from military leave, is entitled to credit for the time spent in service, in figuring city payroll longevity.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

By RICHARD L. CHRISTIE

The 1,500 upstream flood prevention dam to be built in Texas was contracted for construction this week, reports State Conservationist Clyde W. Graham of the USDA Soil Conservation Service.

East Fork Construction Company of Seagoville was low bidder for the contract.

The dam is Site No. 13 in the Hickory Creek watershed near Denton. The Hickory Creek project will provide flood prevention and recreation for the City of Denton while protecting cropland, roads, bridges and other property in the watershed. The dam will be the sixth in a series of 16 to be built in the watershed.

The project, including conservation land treatment in the watershed, is expected to keep 58,000 tons of sediment out of Garza-Little Elm Reservoir each year when completed. Garza-Little Elm serves as a water supply for Denton, Dallas and other cities in North Texas.

"The 1,500th dam marks another milestone in the watershed approach to resource management in Texas," Graham said. "Upstream watershed projects have vast environmental benefits; they not only cut flood damages but they also reduce erosion and sediment damage. And sediment is still our state's biggest pollutant. It fills lakes, streams and harbors; it kills fish and ruins their spawning grounds."

Graham said watershed lakes also provide recreation areas while creating new fish and wildlife habitat.

The Hickory Creek project includes two lakes planned above the City of Denton which will supplement the city's long range recreation and flood control program. The city is buying land around the proposed lakes which will be converted into a 327-acre regional park. The city is working with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in developing the park.

The creek below the park area runs through Denton and has a long history of flooding. The city has widened and concrete lined part of the creek to reduce flooding; however rapid urban growth has intensified runoff, making the channel capacity inadequate. Massive expansion of the creek channel would be needed without the two upstream watershed lakes.

Jim White, City Manager for the City of Denton, says the Hickory Creek project will save the city several million dollars. Without the watershed project, he says engineering consultants estimate it would cost the city $17 million to widen and concrete line the channel sufficiently to provided adequate flood protection.

"We're not only saving money through the watershed project," he pointed out, "but we'll also have a beautiful regional park with two watershed lakes. On top of that, the project will reduce flooding, erosion, and sediment damage which will benefit our city as well as the entire Trinity basin."

State Conservationist Graham said some 2,200 upstream watershed lakes have been planned in Texas in 118 watershed projects now in operation. The projects usually include a combination of stepped up soil and water conservation work in the watershed plus a series of dams to retard floodwater during heavy rains. Sediment storage space is provided in reservoir areas which form small lakes averaging 15 to 25 acres in size.

Other measures which can be included in upstream watershed projects include treating critically gullied areas, municipal water supply storage space, floodwater diversions, and cleaning out sediment-choked stream channels.

Sponsors of watershed projects secure all land, easements and rights-of-way needed for construction at no cost to the federal government. Sponsors also maintain completed projects. The Soil Conservation Service provides planning and installation services and administers construction funds appropriated by Congress.

Sponsors of the Hickory Creek project include the City of Denton, the Denton County Commissioners Court, and the Denton - Wise Soil and Water Conservation District.

Grass is one of the most effective pollution control and air conditioning devices that nature has to offer.

"One acre of grass releases about 2,400 gallons of water on a summer day through evaporation and transpiration," according to Allen V. Sheppard, head of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service office in Tahoka.

"This much evaporation equals the cooling effect of a 70-ton air conditioner," Sheppard continued. "And grass is ideal for erosion control, beautification, and animal forage."

Sheppard said grasses vary widely within individual species. There may be dozens of strains of side-oats grama, for example, growing within an area only a few counties. These variations are caused by differences in climate, soils, elevation and other factors.

S.C.S. conducts a constant search for superior strains of grasses and other plants, Sheppard said.

"What we're looking for are strains of grasses that will help solve some specific environmental problems," Allen Sheppard explained. "In Texas, we need grasses that will thrive on several drouthy soils; cool season plants that will extend the grazing season; and plants that will provide forage for livestock while also providing better food and cover for more kinds of wildlife."

Allen Sheppard added that conservationists also need salt tolerant grasses that will grow on a wide variety of problem sites, forbs and woody plants useful to wildlife and livestock that can be planted in range seeding mixtures, and water-tolerant plants that will curb wave action on earthen dams.

To help coordinate the search for better plants, SCS operates 20 plant materials centers in the United States. One is located in Texas at Knox City. Scientists at these centers grow and evaluate plants from all over the world to help find strains that will solve specific problems.

The most recent grass selected and put into use by SCS plant materials work in Texas is Selection 75 Kleingrass. Released in 1968, the plant is a leafy, highly palatable grass that is now being grown widely in Central Texas. It is used mostly in tame pastures where high rates of fertilizer are used.

BILL GRINA, County Agent, Says.....
"Better cotton yields for profits and markets; in 1971 is the theme for an all out Beltwide campaign to aid the cotton industry. Fred C. Elliott, said the objective is to increase cotton yields to the maximum profitable level, using recommended practices for each producing area to increase producer income. In view of the present market situation, he added, a major goal is to stabilize the current competitive position of the fiber crop and build a base for market expansion. Elliott noted for five consecutive years, more cotton has been sold than produced and it now appears the carryover by the end of July will be no more than four and a quarter to four and a half million bales, the lowest in 20 years. The same situation exists worldwide, he said. Although no ruinous shortage has yet developed, the uncertainty about next season's supply has already affected the

THE FAMILY LAWYER
Parking Lot Perils
As part of its service, a neighborhood market maintained a parking lot behind the building. Near one corner of the lot, the stump of an old post jutted up from the ground. One evening a woman shopper tripped over the stump and fell, dislocating a hip. The law places upon the owner of a parking lot a basic responsibility to keep it in safe condition. Furthermore, he is usually liable for injuries caused by the negligence of his hired help. Nevertheless, the owner does not guarantee absolute safety. Some accidents are simply not his fault. Thus: a man got hurt in a parking lot when he slipped on a gob of ice cream. Demanding damages in court, he argued: "It is up to the attendant to keep the place clean. Since he failed to do so, his employer is liable." However, no one had any idea how long the ice cream had been lying there—or who had dropped it in the first place. Rejecting the man's claim, the court said there was "no evidence that the condition had existed long enough for the (attendant), in the exercise of reasonable care, to have discovered and remedied it." Suppose the accident is caused by someone's careless driving within the lot. May that be blamed on the lot owner? That question arose when a motorist drove the wrong way in a one-way aisle and knocked down a small boy. The boy's parents tried to pin liability on the owner of the lot, on the theory that it was his duty to "police" all drivers on his premises. However, the court held the owner not liable, because even a watchful attendant could hardly have acted quickly enough to be helpful. Preventing this kind of an accident, the court felt, would call for closer policing by the management than the law could fairly expect. A public service feature of the American Bar Association and the State Bar of Texas. Written by Will Bernard.
