WATER, INC. MEETING TONIGHT

A detailed briefing on Water, Inc., reaction to disclosures in the West Texas-Eastern New Mexico Import Water Study Report will highlight the annual meeting of the Lynn County Unit of Water, Inc., at 8 p.m., Thursday (April 26) in the Lyntegar Community Room at Tahoka. The briefing will be presented by Duncan Ellison, Water, Inc., executive director, according to Tom Mason, unit president.

Water, Inc., officials have expressed optimism about the report which says that there are excess flows in the Mississippi River that could be available for diversion to the west, although calculated by Bureau of Reclamation project formulation standards the project falls short of economic justification. The study includes another calculation based on Water Resources Council proposed project-formulation standards that shows economic justification. Ellison is expected to review the report and to detail the thrust of Water, Inc., future activities in support of implementation of the import project.

The general public has been invited to attend the meeting of the unit which was formed in 1970. Mason has served as president for the past two years. Other officers are Joe Unfred, vice-president; Robert Abbe, secretary-treasurer; and Clint Walker, district director.

White, Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carter White.

If you plan to attend the Rodeo, call one of these girls for your tickets. Prices are adult advance tickets, $1.25 and at the gate, $1.50 children, advance, 75 cents, at the gate, $1.00.

There will be calf roping, ribbon roping, goat roping, bull riding, bareback riding, barrel racing and pole bending.

The stock and clowns for the rodeo will be furnished by King Rodeo Company of Seminole.

Organized Crime

For quick cash, there's nothing like the great American system of "putting it on plastic."

Husbands everywhere are familiar with, "but darling, it didn't cost us anything. I put it on our credit card."

The "ready credit" way of life has changed family budgets throughout the 50 states . . . families of hard-working, honest fathers, and also those of the less-than-honest "godfathers."

Within recent years organized crime has gained a foothold in the legitimate business world in Texas.

Credit card theft, criminal "monopolies," extortion and stock fraud are beginning to get their share of attention from law enforcement officials at all levels.

The Texas Organized Crime Prevention Council, co-chaired by Attorney General John Hill and Colonel Wilson E. Speir, Director of the Department of Public Safety, is mapping an all-out campaign on this relatively new organized crime endeavor in our state.

Credit card companies and innocent merchants are feeling the pinch of organized criminal rings as well as individual operators.

Illinois recently completed an exhaustive three-year investigation into the criminal field. Estimates there are that illicit credit card practices cost companies in that state more than $20 million during the period under study.

One high-rolling crook bragged he "averaged out around $50,000 a year" and boasted various credit card companies would verify he had "beat them out of $30,000 to $40,000 in cash."

There are no corresponding loss figures for Texas available at this time. The Illinois investigation was under a legislative mandate.

But there is no doubt Texas credit card firms are being bilked, as newspaper stories verify almost daily.

In a North Texas City not long ago police officers seized between 500 to 700 credit cards and identify documents which had been stolen.

Credit card theft is an all too frequent occurrence, as court records throughout the state will show.

The underworld price for a credit card ranges from $25 to $100 -- depending on its origin.

Cards stolen from the U.S. mails and bank cards go for the top price.

Stolen cards procured by pickpockets, burglars or prostitutes who "roll" a client are in the cheaper price brackets because their loss is more quickly noticed.

These cards usually are good for a buying spree lasting from two days to a week. Typically, a thief will either purchase merchandise or sell the card outright.

When a card gets "hot" it often will be left in some public place. Smooth operators pick a neighborhood where the finder usually would not be inclined to turn in the card anyway.

When the unsuspecting -- and dishonest at heart -- finder tries to make a purchase he may not only get caught on his own fraud attempt but may also be left holding the sack for all the previous illegal buys.

Organized crime has eagerly reached into this type of professionalism, adding the aspect of collusion as it refines the process.

One shyster explains, "some companies are so interested in giving you credit, they very seldom go into a really thorough check of a card applicant's background."

A credit card obtained through a fraudulent application is considered the "safest" by business crooks.

Merchandise obtained with fraudulent credit cards is especially valuable to the thief's "fence" (dealer in stolen goods.)

A "fence" doesn't ask where the goods came from. Television sets, shotguns, clothes -- items such as these make up the bulk of hot merchandise found on the fence's shelves.

Fraudulent credit cards are used to maintain luxury living habits, to gain funds for legal advice and bail bonds.

Stealing and selling a credit card is a common means for a drug addict to obtain funds to support his habit.

Fraudulent -- and legitimate -- credit cards often are used by criminals to do everything from settle a gambling debt to keeping his automobiles running.

Some credit card abuses involved collusion with employees or even the merchants themselves. A store clerk will write a fraudulent sales invoice on a "hot" card then give his cohort half the value of the merchandise which is left on the shelf.

Later, that same crooked employee sells the merchandise to a legitimate purchaser at full value . . . or sells it to an out-of-town friend or gives it to another merchant at a lower price.

Forgetful customers will go off and leave their credit cards at times, opening door for dishonest employees to haul in the loot.

This is especially true at service stations where such items as tires or batteries can be charged without knowledge of the credit card owner and later sold to a "fence" for cash.

Crooked transactions such as these are punishable under state laws.

Most Texans are credit card holders from one or more major companies. Each of these companies has simple reporting systems for lost or stolen cards. Every card holder should maintain his own file of card numbers separate from the cards themselves so that he will have this information for reporting in case his cards are lost or stolen. Missing cards should be IMMEDIATELY reported to the card issuing company to insure minimum risk to the rightful cardholder.

Less easy to pinpoint and reprimand than credit card abuses are some of the more subtle tactics practiced throughout underworld circles to gain footholds in legitimate business enterprises.

Mob infiltration of the business community appears in many disguises.

According to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, an industry or firm may serve as a front to camouflage the presence of criminal individuals or syndicate operations.

Specifically, organized crime uses commercial enterprises as sources of reportable income. Business fronts are used to siphon off profits through legal and illegal means and to clothe the criminal entrepreneur in an aura of semi-respectability.

Such "legitimate fronts" also are used as a dodge to cover tax gimmicks.

Ultimately, of course, the criminal executive is interested in making money just like his honest counterpart. He just goes about it in a different manner utilizing scare tactics and sometimes "muscle."

Two common racketeer schemes involve criminal monopolies and extortion.

A national task force on organized crime points out the difference in the two methods.

A criminal monopoly is a "pure racket" employing strong-arm tactics to keep competition destroyed or scared away to gain business success.

Protection money to the mob once was a way of life -- and still is sometimes -- for small businessmen in the large cities of the East. Fail to pay and you get a brick through the window or your store burns down.

This type of extortion doesn't seek to destroy competition as is the case with criminal monopoly.

There are no indications, said the Organized Crime Prevention Council, that Mafia families are operating as such in the Lone Star State.

However, direct links between "home grown" Texas hoods and the organized underworld do exist.

One particular scheme which has shown up in Texas is the planned bankruptcy fraud.

A corporation will be set up as a going legitimate concern. It promptly buys all sorts of equipment through credit and then quickly takes voluntary bankruptcy.

The illicit gains are converted to cash quickly and the mob has pocket money.

This particular device was one of the favorite methods of supplying "family" members with their every need during the heyday of the Mafia in New York and Chicago over a period of three decades.

The mind-boggling, whirlwind high-finance arena of stock fraud and stock manipulation really doesn't touch the life of the average Texan -- unless he has his life savings invested in a company which is involved.

There is evidence of some link to organized crime in specific cases, but for the most part dishonest businessmen are able to operate because there always are potential investors with ideas of quick wealth.

Where organized crime does directly become involved in corporate swindlings, strong-arm tactics are often employed. It is not unknown for a mobster to actually take over a legitimate business and freeze or scare the owner out.

One classic case came to light in South Texas several months ago where the owner of a small incorporated business became involved in creation of a new conglomerate through a legitimate friend.

A "friend" of his friend convinced him to put his business into the conglomerate "because it will double your profits."

To the lasting regret of the honest businessman, he discovered the conglomerate was mob-controlled. They milked his assets bone-dry, even threatening violence at one point, then walked away.

This short-term exploitation of the small businessman in Texas is not prevalent, but it can happen to anyone unless prospective new partnerships are carefully checked.

Recognition of the enemy is the best weapon against organized crime for the average Texan.

The public must be constantly aware of and educated to the fact there is organized crime in the areas of theft, prostitution, narcotics, gambling, illegitimate take-overs of businesses, credit card abuse and all the other by-products of criminal activity.

Colonel Speir says "the best defense against organized crime is an educated public, a public unwilling to be victimized."

He urges "recognized organized crime for what it is and what it stands for and then illegally-based criminal operations won't stand a chance in Texas if the tax-paying citizen is willing to strike with us at the economic threshold of mobdom and help us keep our state clean."

Why high priced food is still your best buy

You can buy a lot of things today that have gone up in price faster than food, but that doesn't make the weekly grocery bill seem any smaller to the city shopper. In fact, the high costs of nearly everything else probably make this nation's housewives more conscious of the prices they are paying for food.

To help clear up the food supply-price controversy, the USDA recently issued a report providing about 15 pages of brief explanations and tables explaining the farmers' side.

For example, this report says that average wages increased nearly 2 1/2 times in the past 20 years. The price of food eaten at home increased less than 40%. In the past five years, wages advanced 36% -- food at home, 22%.

What if food prices had gone up as much as wages? The table gives the answer, as well as an interesting comparison of costs of various grocery items over the years.

If wages had gone up no faster than food prices in the last 20 years, industrial workers would be earning only an average $2.23 per hour now, not $3.65.

When farm prices go up, they usually come down later, the report explains -- contrasting agriculture to industry. Since 1952, average farm prices have advanced in only 10 of the 20 years, and total increase has been 12%.

Wholesale prices for industrial commodities have increased in 16 of the past 20 years for a total increase of 40%. Costs of services have gone up every year since 1952 for a total advance of 107%.

These increases have affected farmers as well as other businessmen. Farm wages are 2.4 times higher than 20 years ago -- machinery prices are nearly double -- farm real estate taxes are 3.7 times higher. That leaves groceries as the best buy for the farm family as well as other consumers -- up 38% from 1952 to 1972.

For a copy of this report, "What's Happened To Food Prices?" write the Office of Communication, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Attending Easter Sunrise Services in Wilson were Zella Taylor, Leona Waldrip and Trudy Schuknecht of Tahoka. The Lutheran Church held the services in the football stadium. Coats and lap robes felt good in the early morning cold that had threatening winds and light rains.

Their children Bub and wife, Carolyn and their children, Jack Jim and Cristy of Denver City and John Ed and wife Donna with children Norma Jo and Randy of Tahoka and Donnie's mother, Mrs. Hattie Fulford enjoyed the cook-out of steak and chicken, topped off with strawberry pie.

BENSON AND SHORT IN AUSTIN

Senator Lloyd Benson and State Representative E.L. Short of Tahoka greeted each other on the floor of the House after the Senator spoke to a Joint Session of the Texas Legislature in Austin, Texas.

The Senator discussed with Representative Short the remarks he stated to the House about a bill he has proposed that would embrace Texas' method of financing through a positive budget with required spending responsibility and pre-determined spending instead of "piecemeal appropriations as is the current practice," contribution to the state.

Soon afterwards the House began debate on the Appropriations Bill, working night and day to complete work on the bill which allocates 9.7 billion dollars, and attempts to provide needed services without added taxes.

Representative Short said "that the new Appropriations Bill is written so that it require 'no new spending' but further stated that he felt like the close to three billion dollars of Federal Revenue Sharing that Texas is to receive should not have been included in the Appropriations Bill because it was scattered among several functions of government it should have been set aside and used for emergency measures in the operation of government to prevent a Special Session as occurred last year."

Nursing Home News

To begin a big Thanks to Mrs. Lillie (Pete) Ethridge and Mrs. L.W. Gandy for mowing our weeds on the outside as well as our back and front yard. Those old weeds were so big and I'm sure they wore themselves out before getting it all done. So thank you dear ladies. You will never know how proud we are of you. Tahoka has so many nice people who think of us here in the nursing home. Our flowers seed that were planted are peeping through the ground even though the sand blows.

Thanks to the Pleasant Grove and Wesley Chapel Church for our Easter Lillies.

Ruth Reese and Louise Wyatt and Trudy Schuknecht visited the people they have adopted to do nice things for. They are from the Rebekah Lodge 209. So many of the patients are suffering from the old bug. Nausea and diarrhea.

Mrs. Alcy Clark was taken back to the Lynn County Hospital early Sunday morning. We hope her stay won't be long.

Mrs. Corbin visited her daughter, Mrs. Messer who's children were all at home. There were four generations. Mr. Anderson returned from Crawford. Glad to be back here in the home. Also he ate Easter dinner with his family. Easter Sunday was just another day to most of us. Some were not able to go out. Other's family lived to far away. Any way we had a good dinner. In fact all our meals are good as a group of people at Tech work up the menu for us.

Corine Izard talked to her folks in San Antonio. That snapped her out of her blues.

Mrs. Price's children spent

Easter with their grandparents in Lufkin. They came home tired and glad to see Mommy.

Rita Barnett spent Easter in Wichita. Jerrie Ann Martin and Willie Ewing were married April 20 at the church. Reports were it was a beautiful wedding. Jerrie Ann is one of our cooks. Needless to say she is on cloud nine now. Happy marriage, Jerrie and Willie.

Mrs. Helen Collins came down and did some voluntary beauty work, like combing and setting hair for the ones who can't get out. She being a licensed beauty operator. She plans on coming down often to help boost our moral for we do get blue. Thank you so much Helen.

Brother Daniel and a group from the Methodist Church were here Sunday. Mr. Thomas was moved to Saint Mary's Hospital Saturday. He wanted Dr. Key to check him over.

Visiting Mrs. McCord were Carlce and Ruth Edwards of Denver City, E.L. Short and wife, Dink, Pattie Lyn Short and friend from WTSU also Vivian Bruns and little son, Darren. They took pictures of Mrs. McCord's great, great-grandmother, Lena Short-great-grandmother, E.L. Short-grandfather, Vivian Short Bruns - Mother and Daughters - making five generations.

Someone is failing to sign our guest book. Now over by the coke machine so please look and sign your name and who you visit.

Mollie and Mike Brumit of Carlsbad, New Mexico signed but didn't say who they visited. The rain didn't stop Mrs. Hammonds and her ladies so we had good singing Monday.

A SHORT REPORT

BY REP. E. L. SHORT

Representative Rosson of Snyder, Hanna of Breckenridge and myself have become very concerned about diesel and propane fuel shortages predicted in the days ahead. The Railroad Commission can prevent the transportation of these products out of state in case a need can be proven that they stay in Texas. Our Resolution requests that the Railroad Commission take care of Texans first; every dealer in our area is on a prorated amount at this time. The plant at Big Springs is scheduled for closing and has already received an order to stay open 30 days pending a hearing. I testify at this hearing Monday.

HSR 24 asked the President to restore the REA and REAP funds, our efforts were assisted Thursday in Congress by a vote of 317 to 92, also asking the President to restore these funds. Our Congressional Members received a copy of the House Resolution. Three of us co-authored this Bill.

Some of the bills I have introduced are: H.B. 1159 -- to make record of unknown and unclaimed mineral interest owners; this is a hindrance to natural resource development. H.B. 1320 -- to prevent state appropriations being spent for influencing the outcome of an election or passage or defeat of a bill. The problem lies with campus towns whereas a college paper could direct the votes with editorials and elect temporary residents to school boards, city council, etc. This is happening today in certain areas of Texas and it could happen by which a high school paper could cause the same problem. H.B. 1503 -- would permit a person to sue on a breach of warranty for an inferior product in his county of residence, county of purchase or home office of the manufacturer; at this time he is only able to sue at the home office or place of manufacture.

Some of us have introduced a joint Resolution that the State of Texas not use their revenue sharing monies to initiate new programs. It is thought that revenue sharing might be temporary and that the money is desperately needed in existing operations of state government to prevent new taxes.

A new day in Texas was the passage of H.B. 185 permitting firemen and policemen to strike, better known as arbitration -- status of the bill; passed Senate, Governor threatened to veto, recalled by

House and Senate at Governor's suggestion to be cleaned up. I will oppose this bill at every opportunity. The Senate is sitting on two other bills waiting for the outcome of this issue. One would permit teachers to strike and the other would permit anyone to strike.

H.B. 205 would give any person the right to file suit against another person, a company or corporation if he thought they were harming the environment of air, water or land.

A man in Austin received 5 years probated sentence this week for having a ton (2,000) lbs. of Marijuana.

12 2X3 foot - 36,000 stitch needle point wild flowers of Texas are being made to be put on the dining chairs at the Governor's Mansion. The design was taken from the Texas Highway Dept. Brochure. My wife, Dink and I other Rep. wives are doing this, they say it could take 2 years.

Lake Travis has a spot named Hippie Hollow where nude swimming is the order of the day. Senator Herring has introduced a bill to make this a crime. Senate status of the Hippie Hollow Bill of naked swimmers has been put on the table.

Representative Sarah Weddington's H.B. 148, 149 and 150 would permit abortion, contraceptives and sterilization; some of this would be without parental consent.

H.B. 120 -- permitting 18 year olds to serve as jurors will soon be on the Governor's desk.

TEXAS HIGHWAYS

Everyone knows it takes engineers to design and build highways.

Not many know that it also takes professional sociologists; economists; biologists; archaeologists, air, water and noise pollution experts and many other skilled professionals.

How these scientific disciplines can be best employed in the public interest is the subject of an action plan now being prepared at the direction of the Texas Highway Commission.

The draft of the plan was mailed out this week (April 1) to federal, local and state government agencies; wildlife, conservation and environmental groups and others. They have been asked to review and comment on the plan.

The Texas Highway C

mission long has made it a policy that all highway projects in the State be planned and developed to make positive contributions to the social, economic and environmental well-being of the public.

Simply stated, the final action plan will outline specifically how human, community and environmental factors will be considered in planning all new highway projects.

The draft plan, presented for review this week, also provides for adding more professionals in the fields dealing with social, economic and environmental factors to the permanent staff of the Department.

Consultants and staff members of other public agencies including cities, counties and councils of government would be involved in the planning process as appropriate.

Another key feature of the proposed plan provides for more public involvement during highway and transportation systems planning processes.

The process includes informal public meetings for an exchange of views and information between highway planners and members of communities which might be affected by a highway project.

Such meetings would be in addition to the more formal public hearing which precedes decisions on projects.

The draft action plan was prepared following guidelines set out by the Federal Highway Administration, U.S. Department of Transportation and based on provisions of the Federal Highway Act of 1970.

Initially, some 375 governmental units and agencies, environmental and conservation groups such as the Sierra Club, the National Audubon Society, the Citizens Environmental Coalition and others were asked to submit information to be considered in drafting the Action Plan.

The plan was prepared by an interdisciplinary team consisting of 25 members representing fields such as mass transportation, sociology, economics, aesthetics, architecture, public participation, urban transportation systems, planning, land service roads, history, water resources, archaeology, right of way and law.

In addition to specialists employed by the Highway Department, the team includes staff members of Texas A&M University, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the Governor's office, Texas Water Rights Commission, Texas Water Development Board, Texas Water Rights Commission, Texas Municipal League, and the Texas State Historical Survey Committee.

In addition to governmental agencies, cities, counties and private organizations receiving the draft action plan for review this week, other organizations and individuals interested have been invited to review the draft plan. All comments will be given careful, serious study and consideration.

Interested groups or individuals desiring information may view the draft plan at Highway Department district offices throughout the State or may contact the Interdisciplinary Team for Action Plan, Texas Highway Department, Austin, Texas 78701. To be considered in the final action plan, comments must be received by May 5, 1973.

BILL GRIFFIN SAYS

Screwworms like lots of moisture, recent widespread rains over the state are clouding the outlook that has been generally bright up to now. The next few weeks will be critical as the weather gets warmer. Warmer temperatures and surplus moisture situations in South Texas is a dangerous combination for screwworm development. A case confirmed April 17 in DeWitt County indicates that screwworm flies are beginning to move northward from overwintering areas.

Officials with the Screwworm Eradication Project at Mission have pointed out that up to now cold winter and spring weather has delayed northern screwworm fly migrations from overwintering sites in Mexico. But an influx of warmer weather could change the situation quickly. In order to stay abreast of the situation and to initiate sterile fly drops where they are needed, screwworm program officials must depend on reports from individual farmers and ranchers. That's why it's so important to check animals regularly and to submit any worm samples to the Screwworm Lab for identification. Prompt reporting is essential for sterile fly drops to be effective.

The county Extension office has kits for mailing worm samples found in livestock. Samples should be sent to Box 969, Mission, Texas 78752.

Through mid-April a total of 68 screwworm cases have been confirmed in Texas. This number is down drastically from last year's level when the epidemic was already in full swing in April.

Sterile fly production at the Mission lab continues at a high rate. Almost a billion flies were released during March. 70 percent to Mexico and the remainder to Texas. All locations with confirmed cases are "hot spotted" with 200,000 flies a week for six weeks. In addition, regular grid patterns of fly releases are made weekly in southern Texas areas and overwintering areas of Mexico.

Processing of raw fiber into yarn by the relatively new "open end" spinning process holds distinct possibilities for increased usage of High Plains cotton, according to Ray Joe Riley of Hart, President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock.

Laboratory studies and commercial experience have shown, first, that the open end system is best adapted to the formation of the coarser yarns for which shorter, lower micronaire cottons cause far less problems on open end spinning frames than in the conventional ring spinning process.

There is also evidence that yarns produced from low micronaire cottons on the open end system actually have greater strength and better uniformity than like yarns from the same system using higher micronaire cottons. These results came from a study supervised by the Textile Research Center at Texas Tech University in a North Carolina pilot plant.

By the end of this year the Tech Center expects to have its own open end spinning frame in operation to conduct additional research.

There now are only about 15,000 open end spindles in the United States, an infinitesimal percentage of this country's 19 million spindle total. "But more and more mills have plans to move a portion of their operations from ring spinning to open end spinning," Riley says, "and as the movement accelerates there can be significant benefits for High Plains cotton and cotton farmers."

The open end system has a number of advantages in the production of coarser count yarns. Labor requirements are less than half of requirements for ring spinning. Lower quality, less costly raw materials can be used at production rates three to three-and-a-half times that of ring spinning. Dust and noise levels are far below ring spinning. Elongation and evenness are higher than in ring-spun yarn and there are fewer neps and other imperfections.

It is generally believed that open end yarns are from 10 to 20 percent weaker than their ring spun counterparts. And this is true when cotton in the 3.5 to 4.9 "normal" micronaire range is used. But preliminary tests recently have indicated that yarn made on the open end system from low micronaire cotton, in the 2.3 to 3.2 readings, is just as strong as that spun in the conventional manner.

Another criticism of open end spinning has been that the greater twist requirement causes fabrics to feel harsher and stiffer. And this, too, Riley says can be at least partially overcome by the use of low micronaire cottons.

Riley and other cotton officials on the Plains believe the economic advantages of open end spinning can be maximized by a mill located on the High Plains near the source of the raw material best suited to the system and point out there is more than a little interest in establishing a plant in the Lubbock area.

"And at PCG we are gearing up to cooperate fully with the Textile Research Center at Tech, machinery manufacturers and commercial companies to encourage that interest," Riley says.

Underground Moisture

Unusually heavy moisture on the High Plains during the past fall and winter, increasing the sub-soil water supply. With prospects of dry weather ahead, can this new supply of moisture be conserved?

To some extent, it can, say research scientists at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center here.

"We can use the method of minimum tillage and we can try to get by on a minimum of pre-plant irrigation," says Dr. Charles Wendt.

"In the spring of 1972, dry weather permitted farmers to work their land any way they wanted. But the winter rains and snows left us with wet soil conditions that have delayed planting. Farmers will have to be careful this season in establishing a good seedbed for their crops, while conserving as much moisture as possible. Minimum tillage could be the answer."

Wendt, a soil physicist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, bases his conclusion on research conducted at the Center by Experiment Station personnel in 1972.

He reports that four different tillage methods were compared to determine their influence on moisture prior to planting. They were (1) Agrecology, which is a concept involving a straw-filled trench with crops being seeded on either side of the trench, (2) no-tillage (3) shred, disk, moldboard and bed, and (4) shred, disk, chisel and bed.

RESULTS OF RESEARCH

In March, all plots had adequate moisture for planting purposes. On March 25, the plots in which the trenches were to be installed were shredded and disked; the no-tillage plots were left alone; and the other plots were mold-boarded and chiseled as planned.

Not enough moisture was available for seed germination in the moldboarded plots by mid-April, and in the chiseled plots by early May. Yet, by that time the Agrecology site which had been shredded and disked and the no-tillage area both had adequate moisture for planting at three to four inch depths.

The May, rains, of course, left adequate moisture in all the test sites, with the moldboarded plots storing the least amount of water.

Cotton and grain sorghum were planted on the test plot which were subsequently irrigated on August 17 with three inches of water.

Sorghum yields on the tilled plots measured 1,300 pounds of grain per acre lower than yields from the no-tillage plots. Furthermore, in a late planting on June 21, the Agrecology yield was 1,200 pounds per acre higher than the other test sites, including the no-tillage plots. This was due to the sorghum escaping midge damage which hit the other late maturing moldboarded and no-tillage plots.

Cotton yields on the moldboarded test sites were 40 to 80 pounds of lint per acre less than the chiseled and no-tilled plots.

OTHER STUDIES

Says Wendt, tillage studies also were conducted under dryland conditions on which 16.46 inches of water were received during the growing season.

The four treatments evaluated on both grain sorghum and cotton were: (1) chiseled 1971, disked 1972; (2) chiseled 1971, chiseled 1972; (3) moldboarded 1971, disked 1972; and (4), moldboarded 1972.

All plots were bedded prior to planting.

The grain sorghum yielded 4,200 to 4,600 pounds per acre regardless of treatment. Cotton yields were greater on those plots which were shredded and disked in 1972, but less on the moldboarded plots, with the chiseled sites being intermediate in yield.

In still another study, the soil physicist reports, the Agrecology concept was compared under dryland conditions with shredding and disking. No differences in yield were obtained between treatments.

WHAT DOES IT ALL MEAN?

According to Wendt, a soil moisture survey by Oliver H. Newton, agricultural meteorologist with the Department of Commerce, and Dr. Otto C. Wilke, assistant professor with the Experiment Station at Lubbock, indicates that only about 20 percent of the area is dry enough to warrant planning for pre-irrigation at this time.

"The probabilities are extremely high that we will receive at least two more inches of water prior to planting," Wendt predicts. "In the past 60 years, when an inch of water is received in January, at least two more inches were received before planting time. The odds are very good that enough rain will be received before this season's planting that farmers will not have to pre-irrigate in those soils with deep moisture."

Says Wendt, "The producer should take care to conserve the moisture he has stored from the snow and the rains. From the 1972 data, it appears that the less the land can be tilled, the more moisture that will be conserved."

"Sorghum yields may remain as good with minimum tillage as with maximum tillage. And cotton yields may be increased by decreasing tillage."

The researcher points out that if soil was not packed with heavy equipment during weather harvesting, only a shredding, disking and bedding may be all that is necessary. If soil was packed so that deep tillage is necessary, chiseling is better than moldboarded from the stand-point of conserving and storing rainfall.

"If further rains occur, it may be necessary to plant in the old beds," he emphasizes. "In this case, just shredding and planting in the top of the beds with a buster-type planter will assure good yields if the soils have been previously compacted."

"If the producer has irrigation water and can be assured of good weed control, rather than pre-plant irrigation he might consider waiting until after the crops are seeded. Then he can irrigate to germinate and establish the crop if there is inadequate moisture in the seed zone."

Concludes Wendt, "With the diminishing water supplies, it behooves us to save as much of this stored moisture as possible. It's not often we have this good water supply to use."

Open Dating Of Meat Products

Open code dating of meat and poultry products is being proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as a benefit to consumers.

"Open code dating" involves coding products in such a manner that is easily understood by everyone, compared to "closed dates" involving special processor codes.

"The USDA has proposed a change in the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act to include open code dating," points out Dr. William J. Vastine, economist in marketing and food distribution for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The proposed change would require processors to indicate which dating system is being used whenever a calendar date is shown. This explanation would appear next to the open date."

Vastine notes that open code dating has been requested by consumer groups and that processors have generally consented to provide it. However, the USDA contends that merely coding products may violate the meat and poultry inspection regulations which prohibit any form of labeling that may be misleading.

The economist lists three types of code dates that are now being used by some processors. A "pack date" indicates the day an item was packaged in final form.

Continue emphasizing safety precautions -- such as cutting away from oneself rather than toward, making sure that no one is near a sharp edge, and putting equipment away properly so no one gets hurt.

Children also begin forming sanitation habits during pre-school years. So, instead of just insisting they wash their hands before meals, explain why it's necessary -- tell them about germs that cause illness, the agent concluded.

Number Of Firsts Set By Stamps

Postmaster Charles Townes disclosed today that customers attending the Tahoka "Postal People Day" observance at the local post office April 30 will be given attractive free souvenir envelopes. The souvenir envelopes will be imprinted or "cacheted" appropriately and attractively calling attention to "Postal People Day". One of the envelopes bearing all 10 Postal People Stamps will be hand canceled by the local post office, if requested, thus becoming what is known to collectors as a "first day" cover.

The Postal People stamps are unique. With the exception of Benjamin Franklin, this is one of the few times stamps have honored those who make it all possible. Printing 10 commemorative stamps on the same sheet is also unusual. Another innovation is the printing of a message under the adhesive. The printed messages on the gummed side do not affect the adhesive, because the print is actually underneath the gummed adhesive. Also, as a double check, the Food and Drug Administration has approved the green ink which is being used for printing the 10 different messages.

To provide an appropriate atmosphere for Postal Week celebrations the post office will be "dressed up" with colorful posters and signs.

Word to the Wise Consumer

"Beyond any doubt, the greatest engine ever invented for the discovery of truth."

John Henry Wigmore, famed legal authority, was not talking about such modern devices as the lie detector or truth serum. He was talking about the ancient art of cross-examination—that is, the use of careful, patient questioning to get at the facts.

GREAT A WINNER!
THE BEST

You as a consumer can put this "engine" to good use every time you go shopping. Asking the right questions about a product can do wonders toward helping you get your money's worth.

But one vital distinction should always be kept in mind—the distinction between questions of fact and questions of opinion. This distinction is a key to your legal rights as a consumer.

Suppose you ask, "How much weight will this water bed support?" This is a question of fact. The seller is legally bound to give you accurate information.

But suppose you ask, "What do you think of these water beds?" That is a mere question of opinion. The seller can say "They're just great!" or "They make you feel 10 years younger!" without incurring any legal responsibility at all. The law assumes—realistically—that a seller is likely to exaggerate his enthusiasm and that a buyer is likely to take such statements with a grain of salt.

Sellers are well aware of the difference between the two kinds of questions. The stockbroker who assures you that a certain stock "has a terrific potential" (matter of opinion) will probably choose his words more carefully when you inquire about the company's dividend record or outstanding debt (matters of fact).

Consider an actual case. A customer buying a short-wave radio asked the salesman whether it would get broadcasts from Rome. The salesman assured him it would.

But it wouldn't. The customer demanded his money back, and a court ruled in his favor.

"The radio, so far as getting Rome is concerned, is a failure," observed the judge. "The warranty is breached."
