Football Prospects Coach Reviews

Coach A. J. Viertel was speaking at the Rotary Club last Thursday and in his talk gave a run-down on his 1973 squad and prospects for the season.

There must be a rebuilding year for the Bulldogs, since Tahoka has been heavily via graduation of many top players from last year's team, and few of last year's players are back.

Coach seems pleased with the effort of his squad so far and predicts an interesting season.

There are 16 seniors and 15

juniors on this year's squad.

He has 28 boys on the varsity squad. There are 22 on the junior varsity, 28 on the freshman squad, 30 eighth graders and about 35 seventh graders participating in football.

Accompanying Viertel to the meeting were Ken Purcell, his offensive backfield coach, and Tom Miller, line coach.

Tahoka plays Stanton here this Friday night.

Clint Walker was in charge of the program and introduced the speaker.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Women Bartenders?

Do women have a constitutional right to be bartenders? Until the last few years, courts have steadfastly said no. Laws against women bartenders, when challenged as discriminatory, were upheld on two main grounds:

1) that their presence would encourage immorality in a place "where the worst passions are aroused;" and
2) that they could not keep the peace as effectively as men bartenders.

But in several recent cases, courts have taken a fresh look at the question and come up with the opposite answer. Immorality is no more encouraged, said one court, by a woman behind the bar than by waitresses out front serving cocktails.

As for keeping the peace, another court had this comment: "The saloon days of the Wild West are long gone. Nowadays the typical bar does not provide a setting for violence and danger, if in fact it ever did."

For good measure, the court added:

"Women are as capable of mixing drinks as men."

Less innocuous activities, however, may still be subject to restraint. Another case involved a city ordinance forbidding the use of "B girls"—women hired by the management to solicit drinks from male customers. A tavern owner claimed that his women employees were being deprived of their freedom of speech and assembly.

"Their freedom of speech," he reasoned, "includes the right to talk to customers and their freedom of assembly includes the right to mingle with customers."

But a court said the rights of speech and assembly, while guaranteed in general by the Constitution, may be limited in specific situations for specific reasons. Noting the city's power to discourage drinking, the court said:

"If the regulation curtails freedom in some slight degree, the limitation is not unconstitutional. These rights are not absolute."

The Politics Involved

One reason the American public, and many writers, have had second thoughts about the fairness of the hearings of the Watergate Committee is the obvious and possible political motivation involved.

This is not to say the motives of committee members are improper. But elected politicians are, after all, politicians. And every committee in Congress is Democratic. And every Democrat wants to regain the White House in 1976. They should. The temptation here to act politically is obvious.

Secondly, the committee staff is really the group running the hearing, not committee members, whose time is stretched so thin. The chief counsel of the committee is Samuel Dash, who is at least suspect as being rabidly anti-Nixon.

Another staff member, Carmine Belino, is accused of having aided in the Democratic bugging of Nixon headquarters in 1960. Belino denies the three affidavits, but G.O.P. Senators asked he be removed from the Watergate committee. Chairman Sam Ervin refused.

All this, plus the hero behavior of committee members, reacting to the applause and exhibitionism of spectators, gives the hearing a less-than-impartial flavor. The committee's refusal to postpone its show at the request of Democratic investigator Archibald Cox, of the Justice Department, also indicates the politicians want the limelight.

They have put on a good show, members are now national celebrities, and much valuable information has been publicized and uncovered—but it nevertheless has been a partisan, political show to a large degree.

A New Farm Era

Because of world conditions and Republican farm philosophy the nation and its farmers are moving into a new era. The new era ends one begun by President Franklin Roosevelt, a parity price support system which has cost the nation varying billions each year, in holding down production and holding up prices, saving many farmers, however, in the early years.

It could be that the new farm bill passed by Congress and signed by President Nixon in mid-August is the most significant legislation produced at the 1973 session, for it changes the philosophy of the government from one of restricting production to encouraging all-out production.

Because today's worldwide demand for food is great and growing, and supply inadequate to meet demand, this is now possible without the federal government holding prices up. In fact, the government's support prices today for the major crops are below the market price.

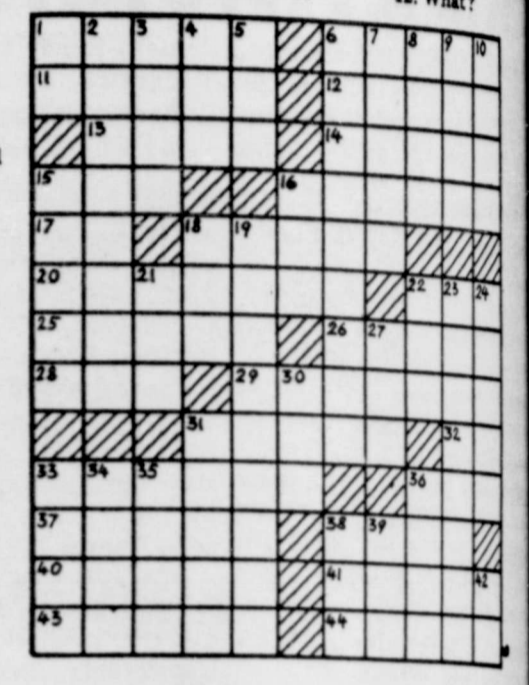

Thus the cost of support to farmers is dropping drastically. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz says four billions were paid farmers last year under the price support program but that this figure will drop to two billions this year and to only half a billion next year. This is refreshing news in times when every federal budget seems to grow and every dollar is needed.

Historically, the new law means the United States is taking a turn back toward its agricultural past, will become a greater farm products exporter, as in its early history. (Industrial exports are also likely to

Cotton Aids Trade Balance
Cotton exports in the current season are expected to contribute approximately $750 million to the nation's export earnings.

Carolyn Haley Says...

Communities that overlook senior citizens waste human capital. Society puts great value on individual worth and each person's ability to contribute, but how many times do we overlook the senior citizen?

Though some citizens over 65 physically can't work, don't need -- or want -- to work, most older persons have skills and abilities they want to use. They need and deserve to feel they're worthwhile, useful, contributing members of society. We as a community can give them this chance. Ideas are limitless if we look at the older citizen as a person who can contribute.

If they're not pressured with deadlines, retired typists, secretaries and clerks can handle part time work for churches, charitable organizations and small businesses. Educators can work for tutoring services or help slow learners. Businessmen can aid new businesses which lack skills in management. Also, youth groups need leaders; invalids need visitors, and hospitals need volunteers.

Aging citizens are virtually untapped reservoirs who provide human capital to meet these needs. Let's use them.

Are you one of the many who can't have salt or sugar in your diet? If so, home canning operations don't have to fold when salt-free or sugar-free diets enter the picture. Sugar and salt used in regular home canning are primarily for flavor. They don't affect the keeping quality of food.

To can without sugar, use fully ripe -- but not soft-ripe - fruit. Prepare fruit as you would for regular canning. Then add a little water and cook fruit until it's boiling hot. Pack hot into hot canning jars. If needed, add boiling water to cover. Adjust and process in a water canner, following recommended time for fruit being canned. Add artificial sweeteners before it's canned. Sweetener should be added to fruit it's ready to eat.

To can vegetables or without salt, just process usual, leaving out salt.

In canning special foods, just one member of the half-pint or pint jars is the best size to use.

Once open, a jar of canned food will keep in refrigerator for two or three days, depending on the food and refrigerator temperature.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

by Max Baker

This is the time of year when the Plains is at its best. The green of cotton fields covers the land like a blanket and there is no thought of dust storms or blowing sand. However, this is the time to consider ways to reduce blowing once the strippers have left the fields bare.

Wind erosion is a problem that occurs every year to some degree and, unless unchecked, can cause a tremendous amount of damage; not only on young crops, but even on the soil itself.

It has been estimated that one cubic mile of air has the potential to carry 126,000 tons of soil. This is equal to the total amount of top soil from 126 acres of land. But wind erosion isn't just the shifting of soil particles from one field to another.

Only the coarse particles shift. The real and lasting destruction comes with the removal of the fine particles which contain the majority of the nutrients in the soil. These fine particles which contain large components of soil nitrogen are lifted high in the air as dust to be carried to the east far from the Plains.

Numerous tests have been conducted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to determine just what the long term effects of wind erosion are. On one test, results showed the original soil to contain 35 percent sand. However, analysis of a drift on a fence row showed it to contain 58 percent sand, thus, showing that much of the finer fertile part of the soil was carried completely away from the area. Other tests from this same soil showed it to contain 2 percent organic matter which is the source of soil nitrogen. Dust trapped that was blown from this land contained 25 percent organic matter. This fertile portion of the soil would be completely lost. Organic matter is very important in this part of the country. A soil containing 2 percent organic matter will have about 40,000 pounds per acre. This provides about 2,000 lbs. of nitrogen per acre, of which only about 30 pounds per acre is available to plants. This is essential to retain this organic matter to retain soil fertility.

One way to reduce blowing this winter is the overseeding of cotton with small grains. This seeding can be done with small electric powered seeders mounted on tractors or by flying on with airplanes. The last cultivation will incorporate the seed to emerge after rains this fall. Later, after the grain has produced sufficient vegetation to protect the land, it can be destroyed to prevent loss of deep underground moisture. The grain should be undercut with a blade or sweeps to leave the residue on the surface to protect the land. The residue should be left on the surface as long as possible to provide maximum protection.

This practice along with a minimum amount for tillage to manage the residue can considerably reduce soil blowing.

BILL GRIFFIN SAYS

A state wide hearing will be held in Austin, October 1, 1973 to discuss the proposed regulations pertaining to Brucellosis Eradication. The hearings will be held at 9:30 a.m. in room 117 of the Sam Houston State Office Building.

Ballots are available in my office to vote for the election of 4 members of the Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Board. The deadline for postmark on returning ballot.

The 64th Annual Field Day and open house at the Agricultural Research and Extension Center will be held on September 11, 1973 from 1-5 p.m.

Some of the highlights are: Cotton Diseases - Cotton diseases continue to decrease yields on the High Plains. Visitors will see a field which has been specially treated to create high levels of seedling diseases. Seed quality, placement and fungicide plus other disease control experiments, will be featured.

Soil Fertility - Fertilizer requirements of cotton grown in narrow rows, cotton-grain sorghum rotations and continuous cotton, grain sorghum, and use of tissue analysis for evaluation of nitrogen requirement will be discussed. Effect of nitrogen source, rate and variety on Verticillium wilt will be shown.

Weed Control - Weed resistance on certain perennial and annual weeds will be featured. This includes studies of preplant incorporated, preemergence and postemergence herbicides.

Special Events - (1) A special display will feature South Plains insects and their present and future impacts. (2) Specialists will be centrally located to answer questions and discuss special problems.

Short Recommends Study Inequities Cotton Contracting

Representative E. L. Short, D., Tahoka, Vice Chairman of the House Agriculture and Livestock Committee has requested that the committee set up a special investigating committee to study inequities that exist in contract cotton (not yet harvested). Short stated "that in the South Plains region, individuals and small corporations are contracting cotton to be delivered in harvest and that in certain instances the individuals or corporations have not had sufficient capital or money to cover the contract that was contracted and if the market were to break the price of cotton go down of the individual or corporation could not make sales for cotton the individuals or corporation would simply go bankrupt leaving the farmer holding the bag. The farmer has no choice but to deliver his cotton even if the price goes up."

Short said "I consider cotton contracting in certain instances like water witching, you pay me if you hit water, otherwise you don't owe me a dime."

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Ervin, Talmadge, Inouye And Bobby Baker Coverup

WASHINGTON - Senate Republican researchers have prepared some fascinating data that draw a sharp contrast between the Watergate Committee's moralizing and the very different actions of Sam Ervin, Herman Talmadge, and Daniel Inouye when the three Senators participated in the successful Democratic effort to curb the 1964 Senate investigation of Bobby Baker before that inquiry could lead to Lyndon B. Johnson and the White House.

After analyzing seven key rollcall votes on the scope and efficacy of the Baker investigation, the GOP found that each time -- on each of the seven votes - Senators Ervin, Talmadge and Inouye either voted for or were announced as favoring limitations on the inquiry. Here are the tabulations:

On May 14, 1964, the Senate took up S. Res. 330, a resolution to authorize the Senate Rules and Administration Committee through Sept. 1, 1964, to investigate Senators and all Senate employees with respect to "any financial or business interests or activities involving the giving or receiving of campaign funds under questionable circumstances."

The first vote came on an amendment by Senator Carl Curtis to allow any three members of the committee (i.e., the GOP minority) to call witnesses. All Republican Senators voted "yes," along with 12 Democrats. Senator

Inouye voted "no," and Messrs. Ervin and Talmadge announced against. Then Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield offered a motion to table (kill) the investigating resolution. All the Republicans voted "no," joined by nine Democrats. Senators Ervin and Inouye both voted to table and kill the investigation; Senator Talmadge announced in favor of tabling.

On September 10, 1964, the matter came up again. Under pressure, the Democratic leadership had agreed on S. Res. 367, a weak investigating resolution. Senate Republicans offered a substitute resolution, S. Res. 368, to shift the investigation to the Government Operations Committee (in lieu of the Rules and Administration Committee) and broaden it in scope. Their logic was simple: the chairman of the Rules and Administration Committee was Senator B. Everett Jordan of North Carolina, a political ally of South Carolinian Baker, and Republicans figured that Jordan would not conduct a spirited investigation. But the alternative resolution failed. Senators Ervin and Inouye voted to keep the investigation in Jordan's hands, Senator Talmadge announced the same sentiments.

Four other votes followed on September 10: One to turn the Baker investigation over to the Select Committee on Standards and Conduct, another to empower any three members of the investigating Committee to call witnesses, a third to extend the investigation to matters relating to the construction of government buildings, and the fourth to call as witnesses all persons mentioned in allegations concerning overpayment on the D. C. Stadium contract. In each case, the Republicans lost, and in each case, Senators Ervin, Talmadge, and Inouye voted to limit and restrict the inquiry.

The best description of the Baker investigation, offered by ranking Rules Committee Republican Carl Curtis, is, "massive cover-up." When Senate Democrats were finally forced to act, they crippled the investigation before it started, and then controlled it by party vote once it was in motion. Watergate Committee Chairman Sam Ervin supported each and every restriction on the investigation. He went along with his fellow North Carolinian, Sen. Jordan, the man in charge of the charade. So did Senators Talmadge and Inouye.

During the course of the Watergate investigation, the three committee Democrats have frequently expressed themselves on the immorality of covering up and subordinating illegalities, to the political needs of a Presidential campaign. Considering the actions of the three in safeguarding Lyndon Johnson during the 1964 campaign, one can only conclude that hypocrisy is playing its all-too-usual role in U.S. politics.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1973

Austin—The Texas Constitutional Revision Commission made key decisions last week on finance and legislative sections of the state's basic laws.

It will formulate recommendations September 6-8 on judiciary and education provisions. Sections on local government and general provisions will be reviewed September 13-15.

Final action of the 37-member body, which is studying changes needed in the state's basic laws, is scheduled September 27-29.

Meanwhile, a legislative planning committee for the January-May 1974 constitutional convention of lawmakers is moving ahead with preparations for the historic gathering.

The planners have voted to spend $33,938 on new chairs and desks to place in the House of Representatives chamber during the convention. Chairs, costing $165 apiece, will be replicas of those used by delegates to the 1876 constitutional convention. The desks, considerably more economical, will be made by state prison system inmates at a cost of $22.50 each.

The revision commission practiced some economies (of language) in shortening the recommended general legislative tax power section of the constitution from the present lengthy statement of limits and exemptions to the following:

"Taxes shall be levied and collected by general law for public purposes only, and shall be equal and uniform."

The 181 legislators who will be delegates to the convention will convene here December 6-8 for a briefing on details of the commission's recommendations. The convention will open January 8.

Child Care Rules Tightened—The State Board of Public Welfare is toughening requirements for licensing child-care institutions and has named former State Rep. Randy Pendleton of Andrews as temporary head of a licensing division.

Pendleton said the new division will shift role of the Welfare Department from urging facilities to comply with the law to active enforcement of the law and policing of facilities.

The Board also named a new six-member advisory council (with three alternate members) on child care administration to assist in checking credentials of personnel at child care facilities. The legislature this year required administrators to be licensed by January 1.

Farm Production Highs Set—Texas farmers and livestock raisers are setting new production levels this year, Agriculture Commissioner John White reported.

Records, according to White, are being tied or broken for wheat, cotton, grain sorghum, corn, peanuts, soybeans, oats, barley, rye and rice. Texas is first in the nation in cotton and grain sorghum and fourth in wheat production.

Texas cattle on feed total 2.3 million, said White, about 700,000 more than the second-ranking state, Iowa, and an increase of nine per cent over last year. White said cattle producers marketed more cattle during June and July than they did a year ago, proving that they are not holding back because of the price freeze on beef.

White predicted that removal of the beef price ceiling will not cause skyrocketing of meat prices and may even help bring them down.

He said there are warning signs consumer resistance to the rising prices of food products is stiffening.

Insurance Deals Targeted—New Insurance Board rules aim to halt rate discrimination and unfair competition in property and casualty insurance.

Board Chairman Joe Christie said some non-rate-regulated companies, including Lloyd and reciprocals, offer unrealistically low rates to prime risks with the intention of having ultimate liability assumed by a rate-regulated company.

Christie said the "brother-in-law" deals can result only in higher rates for the majority of policyholders.

"A farce has slowly but surely been perpetrated when a large company either forms a Lloyds, or even rents one by one scheme or another, for the purpose of evading this state's regulatory laws," Christie said.

Tourism Gains—Tourism gained modestly through July with attendance at attractions up one per cent and highway tourist bureau services up nearly five per cent for the first seven months of 1973.

Nursing Home News

Where has the time gone, it seems only a short time since January 1, 1973. The rain that fell here Friday night sure peppered up the looks of our grass, flowers, and oh yes, the weeds. John Anderson, with Louise and Alex Wyatt drove Mr. Anderson to his farm and you should see the limb off a cotton stalk that he brought back with him. It has 10 grown bolls and also some small bolls. You can bet he is all smiles over his prospect of a good crop. He also attended a reunion of his deceased wife's family. He reported a good time and he saw lots of his old friends whom he hadn't seen for years - so he had happy thoughts to remember.

The Sweet Street Baptist Church people brought our Church services this past Sunday. A young man, Clevey Kerby, from Lubbock brought the scriptures, Isaiah, Chapter 43, verse 10 thru 13 on where the Lord said if everyone would give him their lives he would save them. That is true today. Mr. Kerby also gave his testimony on how his life had been changed since he was going down the wrong road. Now he says he is on the right road and he is trying to help those who will let him. It was such a wonderful service, as the young people who do try to live for the Lord, you can see the happiness in their faces.

Food brought in to the home was cantaloupes by Mrs. William Thomas, tomatos by Louise and Alex Wyatt and okra by Mrs. Maud Jones, sister-in-law of Kate Jones. Oh, we love all of you as we all like to eat. Mrs. Lewis Kitchen brought two pots of mums in memory of her husband, Mr. Lewis Kitchen who passed away.

Mr. William Foster had the misfortune of taking a fall last week. He was taken to a hospital in Lubbock where he was X-rayed and then sent to Post where Dr. Charles Tubbs treated him for two days. He returned to the home, just a little sore but nothing broken. He is able to be up and about some now and is slowly getting around again on his walker.

Joel Inklebarger took his father Bud out for a drive. He really enjoyed the drive.

Signing the guest book were: Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McGraw, Jamie Gage, Mickey Bertreaux, Mrs. Vesta Appling, Willie Fortenberry, The three faithful Jones family who we look forward to seeing weekly, they always visit all the patients every Wednesday, Herman and Tackey Messer, Vera Harston, Lela Woods, Marla Jones, and Carol Ratcliff, Nora Cook, Elizabeth Renfro. We would love to invite everyone visiting in the home to sign our guest book.

Roy Campbell ate out with his sister and family Sunday, also Avis Henry one day.

Oliver Ford's nephew visited him and visits often. The nurses have a real full time job trying to keep Oliver close to his wheel chair since he gets so swimmy headed at times and loses his balance and falls.

Our singing was good as usual. We always enjoy and look forward to our singing sessions every Monday. We would like to invite anyone who would like to come down on Monday evening at 3:00 and sing with us. Our special guest at our singing was Bertha Edwards and Leo Dulin.

Valeta Burks gave the home a box of hair rollers to use on beauty shop days and any other time they are needed. Reports are that Helen Collins, who gives her time to us by giving us hair dos, is doing good. We all miss you and wish you a speedy recovery from your surgery.

Hamilton-Fitts Wed Sept. 7

Miss Bettye Joyce Hamilton and Donnie H. Fitts will pledge vows Friday, Sept. 7, at 4:30 p.m. in the First Baptist Church in Paducah. All friends and relatives of the couple are invited to attend.
