Dalton Wood, New Lynn County News Owner

Effective April 27

Sale of the Lynn County News to Dalton Wood of Slaton was announced this week by Mr. and Mrs. John Valentine, who have owned and published the newspaper here for the last nine years.

Wood, who has been the editor and managing partner in the Slaton Slatonite for the last seven years, will begin operating The News on April 27. He is selling his share of the Slatonite to his partner and son, Wendell Tooley of Tulsa and Brad Tooley of Lubbock.

In making the announcement, the Valentines said, "We are very fortunate to have served and associated with the people in Lynn County in this capacity for the past nine years. We also feel that Mr. Wood will be a great asset to the community and will make every effort to make the Lynn County News one of the best papers of its size in the state."

Wood, a veteran of more than 25 years experience in the newspaper business, has operated several weekly newspapers and has worked for several daily newspapers, mostly as a copy editor or directing the activities of news staff members.

A graduate of Jacksboro High School, Wood received a bachelor of arts degree in journalism at North Texas State University in 1950, after which he was employed for brief periods at the Graham Newsfoto and Vernon Daily Record before going to work at the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal as a reporter and photographer. He later moved to the copy desk as an editor and headline writer, and also wrote editorials for several months in a total of about six years of service at the A-J, in three different periods of employment there.

Pioneer Museum Begins New Phase & Hopes To Open Soon

Tahoka Pioneer Museum Association is in the process of a complete re-organization with a goal set to open the facility as soon as possible.

The building was completed last fall and many items have been donated for display but more are needed. All these items should be catalogued before an opening is set.

At a meeting of citizens interested in the Museum, about two weeks ago, Mayor Meldon Leslie, representing City of Tahoka, appointed an executive committee, composed of Dr. K. R. Durham, Mrs. Kenneth (Mackey) Turner, and Frank Hill, to nominate five or more directors to serve with them. He announced the Museum is now in the hands of the organization that the proposed board will complete. Dr. Durham has announced these nominees have been made as other board members: Mrs. Oscar (Bernice) Roberts; Harold Green; Mrs. F. B. (Madeline) Hegi; Winston Wharton; Bill Craig; and Mrs. Jess (Mabel) Gurley.

In the meantime, Mrs. L. F. (Pat) Jacobs of Wilson is cataloguing the 300 or 400 items already received. When this is complete, the Museum expects again to begin soliciting suitable articles of local historic interest for display.

Right now, the Museum would like to have the donation from interesting persons of a flat-top desk and a letter file or two to hold records, and an old-style roll-top desk for both use and exhibit.

A number of volunteer workers will also be needed soon. Such workers, Dr. Durham says, will probably

Lynn County Begins Drug Education

By Carolyn Klaus
Parents, school officials, and county and city leaders have recently become outwardly concerned about drug abuse in Lynn County. As a result of this concern two schools, Tahoka and Wilson, held drug programs at their schools last week.

Drug dependence is a problem all over the U.S., in the city, suburb, and country and Lynn County is no different.

Tahoka held their drug information program Wednesday afternoon, March 7, which was introduced by Superintendent Jim Coulston and presented by the Human Resources Center in Lubbock and was prepared to educate the school officials and faculty.

Wilson's drug program was held Thursday night, March 8, and was introduced by Superintendent L. F. Jacobs and counselor Herb Williams with Lynn County Sheriff Deputy Stanley Krause presenting the program that was designed to educate adults in the community about the usage and abuse of drugs. [This was an excellent program and this editor would recommend it to any group.]

Drugs have been a way of life in the United States since the early 1900's-people take prescribed drugs for all sorts of ailments. Drug use is defined as the introduction of a substance into the body that does not normally belong. The abuse of drugs has been with us as long as drugs themselves and is defined as illegally obtained drugs that are usually self administered. "Drugs have been and will continue to be a way of life for us," says Deputy Stanley Krause, "so we can't deny their existence but must learn to deal with or handle them." Educating people is the only hope of controlling drug abuse.

As for the reason for involvement in drug abuse, the reasons are as varied as the number of people involved. They all have one thing in common through, they are used to avoid life's problems--such as feelings of isolation, loneliness, stress (among students it's usually high expectations by parents), peer pressure, and not enough guidance in making decisions when growing up. Whatever the problem--drugs never cure it, only cover it up and open the door to more new problems.

In Lynn County the main usage is with marijuana, pills, and paint sniffing. According to Krause, the education and prevention of drug abuse is a team responsibility shared by parents, church, community and social organizations. The biggest help the public or community can provide the law enforcement group is to report any suspicious activity to proper authorities and then forget about it. That includes when you actually see someone using or buying drugs. They will handle it after the report and you will no longer be involved. Symptoms of marijuana do not necessarily follow the (see Drug Abuse, page 4)

LYNN COUNTY DEPUTY SHERIFF STANLEY KRAUSE presented a drug education program in Wilson Thursday night, March 8. According to drug officials, he is one of the best informed drug men in the state of Texas and very qualified to give such a program.
