MEADOW SCHOOL NOTES

Thanks, Mr. Editor, for your generous proffer of space in the Herald for school purposes, and we shall make use of a portion of it before we finish this article.

Last Friday evening was our regular evening for our counting contest, and Tark Lindsey took the lead with 88 points in 50 minutes. No one came close enough to him to be entitled to a report.

We have the following names to report on the "Honor Roll": Vincent Lindsey and Kopley Lindsey. Let's try to have more names to report next week, little folks.

Bro. V. H. Traimel filled his regular appointment in his pulpit at this place, Sunday, and preached two real eloquent and earnest sermons.

MOORE SCHOOLHOUSE TALK

Our Commissioners' Court will meet next month; and now let the people and patrons of Meadow "come alive" and get a petition before that body and have them order an election in this district for a special tax to build, equip, and run such a school as her people deserve.

This is the proper way to do the thing, for, if there is not enough school interest in any community to vote the tax, it would be worse than folly for a few men of means to build a house by private subscription; as it takes more than a house, furniture and teachers to make a school.

But we have utmost confidence in the intelligence of the Meadow school patrons as a body, and fully believe they will carry this move to an ultimate success as they have everything else they have touched, if some have betrayed signs of despondency, and expressed a wish to "sell out and go where there is already a good school. Now here is the proposition. You would not appreciate or be proud of a school you had not helped to build; and as regards selling out and going to a good school, that means a great sacrifice in many ways, but mostly in the price you would have to take for your place; as this pile of ashes would admonish the prospective purchaser to buy shy in such a place. If you want to sell to an advantage, build you a good school where you are, and then you won't want to sell out. (That is not the best expression in the world, but it serves our purpose all right alright). You must build the school house first. The idea reminds me of the fellow who said he would have to wear his new boots a few days before he could put them on. I am not hunting a job. I can get that anywhere. I am pleading solely for the interest of these bright boys and girls. Let every one take courage and "swing to the willow and whoop for the landing.

J. W. Taylor,

Yes, and besides not appreciating the "moved to" school as he should, the "moved to" people would always be asking the hateful question: Why were you not public spirited enough to build a school where you came from? In fact, they would make it so uncomfortably warm for him that he would soon feel like the famous 30c piece.

Those of the Meadow people who put their shoulder to the wheel and build a school commensurate with that splendid little town, will be lauded by the rising generation long after their philanthropic bones are molding in dust.—Ed.

Daughter is Gured.

The suffragettes have lost one powerful disciple, Miss Matilda Howe, daughter of Ed Howe, editor of the Atchison (Kan.) Globe and author of "The Story of a Country Town." One day's work in her father's print shop caused her to change her mind.

Miss Howe, like many other daughters of western rich men, felt that woman are not getting a square deal in the pursuit of happiness and power. She believed that the suffragettes of England and the United States are on the right track and that their plan of campaign will soon result in the emancipation of the gentler sex. She took a great interest in the movement. Her father combated the idea. He tried to convince her that a Woman's place was at home and that the men folk should look after business and politics for the family. But Miss Howe kept up her discussion.

Father Finds a Cure.

Finally her father said: "Daughter, if women must run the country, they must also do the work. Now I propose to let you test some of your suffragette ideas. I will make you a reporter at a regular salary. You will be treated just the same as other reporters—no better, no worse. If you can demonstrate that downtown work is more suitable to women than work around home, then I will withdraw my objections and let you have your own way and be a suffragette."

Miss Howe said that was a fair proposition and she accepted it. She went to work the next morning. She lasted just part of one day. She is no longer a suffragette. Here is what she says of the experience:

"My idea was to sail down about nine o'clock, gossip a little with the force, dash off an article or two on the typewriter, have lunch and go home. Instead I was routed out in the middle of the night when it was still dark and when all women are still fast asleep. I was hurried through breakfast and out in the cold to run for a car. The car was full of men; no women.

"I got to the office and was given a corner with some other reporters. I sat down and started a conversation, but they answered in monosyllables. In a few minutes each one grabbed his or her hat and dashed out. They came back at various times, rushed to their machines and began to write at a rate that got on my nerves. When they finished their mad race with the typewriter they rushed out again. I tried to write but the combined noise of a half-dozen typewriters almost drove me mad.

She is Not Noticed.

"I left my corner and wandered around. Nobody noticed me. Always before they had stopped to talk. Then I was the proprietor's daughter; now I was one of the force. There was not a quiet place to be found for a moment.

There was not a room where I could be alone and away from the rush and noise. How they could all work at the tension that they all seemed to take as a matter of course was more than I could understand.

"The noise continued, the typewriter were going all the time, the telephones were ringing continually and outside on the street the noise of the wagons and people helped to make it more deafening. I went out to lunch and ate with about fifty men, all eating at the same rate the typewriters were running.

"I was so unstrung that I felt I would have a fit on the spot. I went back to the office. There things were going in the same old way.

"Finally a horrible earthquake sort of noise started from underneath. It was only the paper going to press. Nobody else noticed it. But I could stand the racket no longer. I grabbed my hat and struck for home, where I laid down and rested.

"After waking I thought the whole thing over and reached the conclusion that downtown work was meant for men, and henceforth I am willing to let them do it. They can run the business of the country and its politics, too, for all I care. No suffragette business for me any more."

July and Independence

July is the important month in the history of political liberty. The United States celebrates its independence on July the 4th. The patriotic efforts of the liberator Simon Bolivar, for the independence of Venezuela were consummated on July 5, Columbia riding herself of the Spanish yoke on July 20. Then there is France with her July 14, marking the date when the suffering French people stormed the bastille. The Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, capitulated on July 18.

Gosh!aint hogs high. We have often heard about the the cow what jumped the moon, and now if the pig tries the north star—we pass our plate for more hash.

Some people kick when there's no local news in The Reporter and compliment us when there's more than usual—just like we could invent them at will and leave them out as we saw fit. It must happen before we can print it and if it don't happen you won't see it in the paper. News items are funny things. Some weeks we have more than we can handle and again the whole Pinkerton force couldn't run one down—Stanton Reporter.

We notice that the Tahoka News has been criticised because it carried a large "ad" for the Lubbock Commercial Club. If a single man in or around Brownfield opened their mouth about the matter in an adverse manner, because the Herald carried the same ad, it is more than we have heard. On the other hand, we have heard several of our business men have complimented Lubbock's determination to succeed.

We are truly glad that we have to deal with broad-minded men, that recognize that our space is the same to us that their merchandise is to them, and the honest man with the cash can buy it, no matter where he lives.

The Tahoka people that raised the biggest howl, we will insure, supports their paper the least. But with their howling they involuntarily acknowledge that advertising does pay.

This is baby kissing year. Keep them near the door.

Brownfield has taken new roots and is on the go again. There never has been a time when the town was absolutely on the stand still, but there has been times when only one bouse was being planned, or under construction. There is now planned or in course of construction more dwellings, business houses, and churches than there were built in the year 1909. With a railroad in forty miles, and with others planned closer, and a fine season to start crops this year, Terry county people in general are in high spirits, and are going to put more money into improvements than ever before. Lumber and coal can now be bought at prices that are not prohibitive and they were the qualities that has kept many a shaky easterner from investing money in our fertile lands or thriving little cities.

It is not the height of folly to say we will have a railroad running into Brownfield before the year 1910 comes to a close. More wonderful things have happened in much less time.

Two of the largest railroad systems in the world have their eyes on Brownfield, each daring the other to make a break. Some day one will step over our border, and then the other will get busy. We've said it all along! and some of these days we are going to be able to say, "I told you so."

We notice several of the brightest boys in town ream the streets Sundays, when they should be at Sunday school. Now some one will say this is none of our business, which we readily admit. We haven't raised any children, but we do know, judging them by ourselves, that they will not learn anything that is likely to permanently injure them at Sunday school, but one the other hand they might learn something that would make a lasting impression on them for good. We have never believe in forcing a child to do anything, that could be done by a little persuasion, but we do think that with a little advise along these lines from the parents, they would, in most cases, be needed by the boys, and they would become regular Sunday school students.

Let us view the earth from pole to pole, and from east to west, and we find that where God's word is made a close study, there we find the very pinnacle of civilization, moral and political liberty. Where God's word is studied only occasionally, we find, strife, discord, riots, anarchy, ruin, rebellion and infidelity. Again: Where the word of God is suppressed or unknown, there is nothing refining, elevating or uplifting. All is darkness. Friendship, love and truth is an unknown quality, and the inhabitants are nothing more or less than human beast, ready to devour their own kin without a stroke of remorse of conscience.

Let us study deeply the great importance of bringing up our children as we should, lest they bring us shame and disgrace. The "boys of today are the men of tomorrow." Make little men of them now, and they will be too manly to ever depart from it.

Chance For a Scrap.

No man who has become thoroughly saturated with the Van Zandt spirit and inoculated with the Van Zandt microbe, who has lived through the recurring seasons of flowering springtime, golden summer and purple autumn who has slaked his thirst with her living waters and lubricated his interior anatomy with her esculent fruits and vegetables; who has participated in the strenuous swirl of a summer campaign or played the picnic circuit to a frazzle—we say, the man who has fallen heir to these delightful experience—can never be aught but a Van Zandter. You couldn't wear him from the good old county with a club and a bow-legged bulldog.—Grand Saline Journal:

It may be all true as written. As far as State Press is concerned he has no intention of disputing it. But he knows a man in West Texas who will argue the matter with you, either verbally or with brickbats. If you will apply in person or by registered letter we will tell you confidentially that he is the editor of a paper out there in a town that he regards as the best on earth. Who's Your Merchant?

This is an Important and Timely Question.

NOW is a good time to form your business connections for the ensuing year, and we submit that it is just as important to select the right merchant as to have the right physician or lawyer when occasion requires one.

NOW what we mean by the "right" merchant is one who is honest, truthful and sufficiently unselfish to be satisfied with a reasonable profit—One who studies the needs of his trade, buys for cash, in the best markets in such quantities and assortments as will accommodate every class of his trade—especially those who insist upon the better grades. We believe good merchandise makes good friends, and that poor merchandise will injure it not ruin, any firm which persists in handling it. We much Prefer no sale to one which Does Not Satisfy.

Our business is Merchandising

WE have been here nearly two years—long enough to establish a very good trade—Among our customers we are pleased to note many in the BROWNFIELD country—We assume that others, and all, occasionally, will find it convenient and profitable to buy in Lubbock. We are located in the State Bank building, where we have a stock of Dry Goods, Shoes, Ladies and Mens' Suits, etc, ample for a large trade, carefully selected, New, Stylish. Reliable—right in every way.

OUR prices are reasonable, being based upon a good volume of trade, and with the aim of making a friend of every Reasonable purchaser. We solicit the patronage of the Brownfield people, believing we can serve you satisfactorily and well. We want your trade—A trial will get us acquainted, and may serve to promote a permanent business relationship—the kind we like most. When you come to Lubbock, whether trading or not, call and see us—we want to know you.

H. H. Longbreak and Joe Lane are busy invoicing at the Brownfield Hardware store this week. Mr. Longbreak informed us this week that since selling the garage he would devote his entire time to the hardware store, and would carry a stock second to none in towns the size of Brownfield.

J. W. Deshazo & Co., of Lubbock have decided to locate a branch house in Brownfield which will be supplied from the parent house at Lubbock. We understand they will be down in a few days with several loads of merchandise. We welcome this enterprising firm to our little city and believe they are taking a step in the right direction.

We are glad to report that all the Brownfield boys and girls who are attending school at other places, and who were home during the holidays, report a profitable school year. They were Dee Brownfield and Will Ed. Harris of the Southwestern University, Miss Effie Brownfield of Kidd-Key and Miss Irene Copeland, of Simmons. We are glad to know they are doing fine work.

He Wants to be Clerk

We wish to call the attention of the voter to the announcement of Prof. A. K. Huckleberry which appears in this issue of the Herald. He respectfully asks the voters of Terry county to give him the office of County and District Clerk. He is well known in the county having taught school 32 months at and around Needmore. We ask you to investigate the merits of this gentleman before you cast your vote.

A Train of Freighters.

One of the largest freight aggregations that it has been our pleasure to see left here early Monday morning for Lubbock after lumber for the Baptist church. Most of them had trail wagons, though some had only one. They were J. C. Green, E.

L. Duke, J. W. Welch, W. H. Cordell, Hugh Cordell, W. A. Pyeatt, E. E. Bailey and Jim Burnett. Going some aint it.

We learned this week that Misses Fay Bynum, Pearl Stewart and Clara Randal had passed the examination and had each received second grade certificates. Each of these young ladies have received most of their education in the Brownfield public school, and their successful examination before the State Board not only reflect credit on them, but the school also. They will finish here this year unless the trustees decide to add the eleventh grade which they talk of doing, and we believe they will be supported by a big majority of the patrons in so doing. We have the money to build additional room. Why not do so, and keep both money and students at home. A child will learn just as fast here, as they will in New York.

Mr. Sparks has concluded to patronize home industries hereafter, and instead of carrying this bale of cotton to Tahoka, he went over to the Gomez gin, and would have carried the other there had they not run short on bagging.

That is right, patronize home folks, who do not tell you have just made one bale when you made more.

Making Himself Heard.

Samuel Rogers, the poet, is no doubt a great wit, but he has a turn for malice and even brutality. Some one once asked him why he never opened his mouth except to speak evil of his neighbors. He replied: "I have a very weak voice, and if I did not say malicious things I should never be heard."—Memoirs of the Duchess of Dino.
