A bill has been reported to the Senate estab lishing 355 new post routes, principally in the West and South. Missouri has 40, Texas 37, Tennessee 27, Dakota 26, Kentucky 21, Ohio 15, Indiana 14, Wisconsin 11, Arkansas 10, and Minnesota 9. A bill has been introduced into the Hous by Mr. Calkins providing for the payment of the expenses incurred by contested election cases in the Forty-seventh Congress. The amount aggregated $63,000. Orders have been issued to General Pope to take vigorous, measures to prevent Captain Payne and his followers from invading the Indian Territory. The Senate Postoffice Committee decided to postpone till next session further consideration of the bill to regulate rates of postage on second class matter at letter carrier offices The bill proposed to fix the rate of postage on second class publications deposited in letter carrier offices at two cents per pound. The Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill reported to the House recom mends an appropriation of $20,398,000, an increase of $49,000 as compared with last year. The increase in the amount appropriated is mainly due to the necessary provision for the increased membership of Congress, and to the fact that the next is a long Congressional session. The bill in detail varies very little from former bills, except the insertion of the clause which will make the clerical day in the various departments eight instead of seven hours in

The War Department ordered that Capt. Eads be paid the last quarterly payment for 1882, amounting to $25,000. This was due last December, but was refused, it being claimed a proper dephth was not maintained for a short time in the middle channel at the jettles. Upon a re-examination it was found

Republican Solicitude.

Not long ago Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Ryan had an animated discussion with fists in the neighborhood of New Orleans. Mr. Sullivan's arguments were so much the stronger that Mr. Ryan was convinced against his will, being "knocked out of time," and so banged and battered that his own mother would not have known him. If, while Mr. Ryan was applying raw beef to his eyes, plasters to his broken nose and ointment to his bruised ribs, he had sat up in bed to discuss the health of his jubilant and sprightly adversary—who jubilant and sprightly adversary—who was scarcely scratched—and expressed fears lest Mr. Sullivan might not be in condition to fight him again six months later, even Mr. Ryan's warmest friends would have been more than likely to me the condition of the Commissioners on the part of the United States to negotiate a new treaty of commerce with Mexico. This is the ostensible object of his present visit to Washington, but it is not by any means the only worrying about the man who inflicted them.

Yet Mr. Ryan would not have acted mole foolishly in this supposed case than the Republican party is now acting in regard to the Democratic. Republicans have been as thoroughly whipped by Democrats as Ryan was by Sullivan, but instead of attending to their own aches and pains and getting eyes, nose and ribs into presentable shape, they are wasting breath in discussing the present position and future prospects of the victors and prophesying that Democratic success in 1882 will, in all probability, prepare the way for Democratic failure in 1884. This solicitude is, under the circumstances, delightfully ridiculous. Democrats laugh at it as shifty, prepare the way for Demoreratic failure in 1884. This solicitude is, under the circumstances, delightfully ridiculous. Democrats laugh at it as the richest joke of the season. They have come out of the battle with clear and clean cuticle, far more lively and vigorous than when they wentin. They are aware that accidents and blunders may occur in the next two years which may damage their chances in the Presidential campaign; but they know that the enemy may be damaged in a similar way, and that at any rate the Republicans must pull themselves to the enter the ring at all in 1884, while the Democracy are as completely a unit as was Sullivan after he shad thumped Ryan into a bloody pulp. To be seritous -crificism and warnings, like charity, 'should begin at hone.'
The
highest authority has declared that
'they that are whole neel no physician, but they that are sick.'' Now at this time the Democrats are very whole indeed, while the Republicans are undeniably very sick. Let the latter call a consultation of political physicians with least possible delay, leaving Democrats to be doctored whenever the require it—which is not immediately. The Republican party is suffering from a complication of
of scases, the most serious of which are Stalwartism on the brain and HalfBracilism in the horain and HalfBracilism in the backbone of the presidency. The Bracilism in the h Stalwartism on the brain and Half-Breedism in the bowels. Unless these can be cured: unless brain, bowels and can be cured: un'ess brain, bowels and the entire body are restored to health, the party will soon discharge the doctors and apply to the undertaker. No argument is required to prove that until the rivel factions, whose struggles have torn the party asur'er, are cordially reconciled and heartily united, Republican strength is weakness. If a National Republican Convention were to meet to-day it would either break up in a general row, or 1 ominate a cand date of whom Democrats would make mincement at the polls. Will a National Republican the speculators that the speculators the speculators that the speculators the speculators that the spe of whom Democrats would make mincemeat at the polls. Will a National Republican Convention in 1884 do any better? Certainly not, unless the bitter feud between Stalwarts and Half-Breeds is effectually healed by that time. What prospect is there of such healing? None visible to the naked eye. Stalwarts are damning klaff-Breeds and Half-Breeds profanely taunting Stalwarts. Olivebranches are at a discount and clubs command a premium, and when the command a premium, and when the threats of civil war.

dozer, may ponder, now that his hobbobing with Mr. Arthur has come, to a violent end, and his leisure, time is correspondingly increased. For the past year or two Mr. Mahone owned the White House and all that pertained to it. He was the power behind the throne. To-day he declares never to cross the threshold of the avenue mansion while the present occupant lives within. These are sad tidings and ware sorry for Mr. Arthur, but, for all that, can not refrain from wondering what will become of Billy Mahone. A cat with shorn thaws is more powerful than he without patronage. Cheat washed him, to the shore of notoriety and chance held him fast. Bulldozing was his sole argument. Jay Hubbell is a novice in comparison with the Virvinia pirate, He held up voters, officeholders and State creditors with e ual and sublime impartiality, and boasted of winia pirate. He held up voters, office-holders and State creditors with e ual and sublime impartiality, and boasted of his achievements. diseases, the most serious of which are at one of the large hotels, where familiar branches are at a discount and clubs command a premium, and when the tools of war will be thrown away and the emblem of peace brought to the front, the w sest prophet cannot predict. Meanwhile the Democracy are enjoying that peace and happiness which comes fr. m a consciousness of virtue, a full appreciation of the magnitude and meaning of the victory, and a determination to deserve the new vote of confidence given them by the people. They not only expect to profit by the defeat of their opponents, but to avoid similar defeat themselves by refusing to commit the sins, the penalty of which Republicans are now enduring. They may not, will not, be faultless in the future, but if, with the experiences of the past, they do not earnestly strive to reduce faults and follies to a minimum, the next popular verdict is not likely to be in their favor.—St. Louis Republican.

COL. C. L. FOSTER.

Youngstown, Ohio, May 10th, 1880. Dr. B. J. KENDALL & Go; Gents:-1 bad a very valuable Hamidetonian colt that I prized very highly; he had a large bous spavinion one joint and a small one on the other, which made him very lane; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons, who failed to cure him. I was one day, reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spaviniture, in the Chicago Express, I determined at once to try it, and got our druggist here to send for its Express, I determined at once to try it, and got our druggist here to send for all they ordered three bottles. I look them all said thought I would give it a therough treas; I used it according to decidons, and the forth day the coit ceased to be lame, and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle, and the coit's limbs are as free from lumps, and as smooth as any horse in the State. He is entir ly cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the semaining two bottles, who are now using it.

THE MILLER BROS. CUTLERY CO:

-Horses bred in mountain districts have good feet, while those in low, marshy sections, have flat, soft feet.—

-Liver stew: Cut up half a pound each of liver and bacon into small pieces. Put the bacon at the bottom of a baking dish, then the liver; sprinkle with pepper and salt; cut up an onion and apple, and stew over the top. Cover tightly to keep in the steam, and bake in a moderate oven one-and-a half hour. No water should be added.—Rural New Yorker.

-The generalization is to the effect that "all thoroughbred animals, whether horses, cattle, sheep or hogs, have one peculiarity in common, which is fineness of bones. It is one of the surest indications and a valuable quality, for such animals give but little offal and waste, while the net is proportionately larger than the tare, as compared with coarser kinds. - Chicago Journal.

-Fattening fowls should not be allowed too large a run. They should have free opportunity to stand in the sunshine and dust themselves to their hearts' content. Give them plenty of pure water to drink and a small amount of pulver-ized charcoal in their diet. Scalded Indian meal is probably the most fattening as well as economical form of food, yet they require some other articles mixed with it, say boiled potatoes or wheat or rye bran.-N. Y. Examiner.

"Aunt Addie" gives to the Country Gentleman this recipe: A hot sauce for meats, which will be found very piquant and appetizing, may be made by chopping two onions very fine and adding them to a can of tomatoes; also a teaspoonful each of cayenne pepper, cinnamon, cloves, salt, just a grating of nut-meg, and a pinch of ground mace. Let these all boil together until the tomatees are thickening; then take from the fire and stir into it a cupful of strong vine gar.

Allen says: "Do not blanket a horse in the stable, except when he comes in warm and sweaty in cold weather; then, the moment the harness is taken off, put on a blanket; but be careful to remove it as soon as he has become cool and dry, and he will not take cold, unless exposed to a draught of air below about 65 degrees. To such a current he should never be exposed under any cir-cumstances, as it is always liable to give a horse a cold or rheumatism, or stiffer him in the joints .- Iowa State Register.

Cooked Food for Hogs.

In the matter of the value of cooked food as compared with that which is un-cooked, our position is simply this: When food is high, as it is at present, we be lieve it will pay to cook it. On the other hand, when it is cheap we do not think it will pay for the trouble. That cooked food produces larger results is implied, of course, in what we have just said and absolutely complete.—Detroit Post and Tribune. course, in what we have just said, and of that fact there is no doubt. We do not think, however, that it would be entirely wise to count upon such results as some have claimed to achieve by feeding cooked food, for while we do not doubt that all the reports of record are true, we do not think that every one would be equal to some of them. Much must necessarily depend upon the surroundings of the feeder. His hogs must be at good naturally as those which have produced the best results; his system of cook ing must be as thorough as it was in these cases, and the care of the hogs must be as good. Some of our largest breeders and feeders in the West have given it as their opinion that cooking in the corn districts will not pay, an opin-ion that is virtually based upon the same grounds that we stand upon when we say that it will not pay to cook when feed is that it will not pay to cook when feed it cheap. Hogs require something besider dry corn. They need something of more bulk, and cooking will supply this. It may be supplied, however, in other ways when corn is cheap to a better advantage. We believe, as we have frequently stated, that the everlasting feeding of dry corn is the cause of much of our hog disease; and while cooked corn is not free from the objections that are valid against the unfortunate commercial traveler to hold up his hands. Fisher was probably the most astonished man in the State at that moment. His knees smote together, while he seemed to grow shorter—sink into himself as it were—the perfect picture of fright. His hands, however, went about that shiny plug hat instantly. He was not too badly scared to listen to persuasion, but there they trembled and disease; and while cooked corn is not free from the objections that are valid against dry corn, it will furnish something that will more fully distend the organs, and thus conduce to health. The true way of feeding is to feed a mixed food whether the corn is cooked or proceed of half a foot or work of half a foot or wor whether the corn is cooked or uncooked.

One Western feeder gives it as his opinion, after years of feeding corn that is cooked, that the system saves one-fourth of the grain. He feeds corn two parts and oats one part, a very excellent mix-ture. Now if his estimate is correct, it is easy to determine when it will pay to cook feed for hogs. If corn were worth only twenty-five cents a bushelit it would not pay to cook. If it were worth fifty or sixty cents, it would pay. In an experiment by another Western feeder, he found that while pigs of the same litter gained ten pounds to a bushel of raw corn, those that were fed on cooked corn, gained fifteen to the bushel. This was saving one-third of the grain. Another carefully recorded of the grain. Another carefully recorded experiment seemed to demonstrate that cooked food would yield a profit of twenty-five per cent over uncooked. The experiments of H. S. Clay, a Kentucky feeder, are already familiar to many of our readers. After a very thorough trial, he was satisfied that he could get as much work from one hundled foor fed much pork from one bushel of corn fed in the shape of cooked meal, as he could get from three bushels of uncooked corn.

From these experiments which doubtless give the results of feeding cooked and uncooked feed, when fed under the most favorable circumstances, any one can judge whether or not in his particular case, and under existing circumstances, it will pay to cook or not .- West The Cost of Fires.

Few people realize the enormous drain numbers $75,000,000 worth of buildings and personal property actually obliterated in the United States in a single year. This is something like a dollar and a half for every man, woman and child in the country. It is more grevious than a universal poll tax for that amount, for the property does not remain in existence for the support of schools or Government, or for any useful purpose; it is swept off the face of the earth, leaving absolutely nothing in its place. In no European country is the fire loss per inhabitant so great as in the United States. It is larger in England than elsewhere except with us, and according to a correspondent of the London Times the annual total there is about $45,000,-000. The same writer puts the German loss at $30,000,000, the French at $15,000,000 and the Russian at $105,000,000. This last seems like an overestimate, but the fire loss in proportion to the wealth of the country appears to be larger in Russia than in any other part of Europe.

Those who suffer no direct loss by fire contribute, their portion to the fire tax in the shape of insurance premiums, either paid to the companies themselves or to the landlords in the way of rent. It is reported that the annual outlay for premiums in the United States reaches $58,000,000, in England $34,000,000 and in France $42,000,000, but this last item is out of proportion to the losses. The aggregate of annual premiums in the whole world is put at $160,000,000, which is about as much as a million men would earn, over and above their board, by working the whole year round. It needs but a moment's thought to show what an enormous drawback the destruction of property by fire is to the commerce and industry of the world. It represents an appreciable profit on the entire trade that is carried on by the human race. Its abolition would perceptibly increase the comforts of life in every civilized nation.

There is rarely a considerable loss by fire except in connection with the burn-ing of a building, and one of the most important problems of the future is, how valuable breeds of cattle, of which, says to build with materials that are incombustible. Bricks, terra cotta and the products of clay by burning of whatever name, form everywhere the best and in many places the cheapest substance that breed grades." With the exception of kind of a house, from a national capitol Short-Horns and Jerseys, we have considerable herds, and of these two breeds as a building material is perhaps the most as a building material is perhaps the most ancient of all, and modern skill has given we have not one each where we should have hundreds. If the general farmer and the dairyman were fully awakened substantial structures; but the great substantial structures; but the great desideratum is, after all, some process that will convert wood into a sort of vegetable asbestos that cannot be set on fire. Whoever can discover this will achieve an invention worthy of rank with those of the mariner's compass, printing and the magnetic telegraph. Until this can be done, or until those who build can be induced to make structures that can be induced to make structures that can

A Craven Drummer.

A traveling man writing from Buffalo gives an account of how two men sought to rob a drummer out West. His name was Fisher, and he was making a trip out through the Western country, where, if reckless men ever caught a drummer in a safe place and could get the drop on him, they were pretty certain of a good haul, as the victim always had money. Fisher had left the hotel and had wandered down a little creek to enjoy the fresh air, and neared a little clump of trees.

Two men were sitting under the trees watching his heedless approach. As he got within a few paces of them they suddenly jumped up, and one of them leveled a long navy revolver, and told the unfortunate commercial traveler to hold up his hands. Fisher was probably the most astonished man in the State at that moment. His knees smote together, a comical sight to see them, limp and white "flapping" around through a space of half a foot or more. The brigand thought so, too, and could not help raising his eye from his pistol to look at them. Fisher, through his half-closed eyelids, saw the movement of the robber's eyes, and then that trembling hand seemed to flash down behind the tall black hat and back again with something in it. There were two reports as the black hat and back again with something in it. There were two reports as the hand came before, instead of behind the plug. The highwayman threw up his hands and sank back with a bullet hole between his eyes, while the tall, shining plug rolled off the back of Fisher's head, with a clean cut across the crown, where the bullet from the long and had the bullet from the long navy had the bullet from the long navy had plowed its way.

The other robber obeyed a gruff order to hold up his hands with an alacrity born of excellent judgment, for Fisher had lost that wild look, and had drawn a bead on that chap that meant business. The fear and trembling was but a clever ruse, and when the highwayman took his eye from Fisher's to watch that trembling eye from Fisher's to watch that trembling white hand, his surviving partner learned why the commercial traveler wore coats made of stiff goods, so as to make the collar stand out free from the back of

No matter whether the direct loss is borne by the owner or by the insurance company, there is so much property gone out of existence and the country is to just to that extent impoverished.

The New York Commercial Bulletin gives its summary of the fires of 1882 under the heading of "A $90,000,000 Ash-Heap." #### Michael Davitt's Diamond Ring.

Hero-worship takes singular forms in England, but since the Cetewayo episode. I have had nothing more comic to chronicle than the history of the diamond ring which adorns the effigy of Mr. Davitt at Mme. Tussaud's. A fair and wealthy admirer of the father of the Land League wrote him an effusively eulogistic letter a few weeks since, inclosing a valuable ring. Mr. Davitt, who is, I believe, quite fancy free, transatlantically speaking, was too honorable to accept a sentimental offering on false pretenses, and returned the gem with a letter of modest gratitude; whereon his persevering admirer went off to Backer street and placed the ring on Michael's waxen finger, leaving an unsigned note to the custodians to warn them of the valuable and vicarious offering, which has necessitated, I hear, an additional amount of surveilance on the part of Mme. Tussaud's heirs .- London Truth.

A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Proti Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than the ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work.

A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts. • While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.
