FROM WASHINGTON.

THE House Committee on Commerce has adopted a report to accompany the river and harbor appropriation bill. The bill appropriates in the aggregate, $17,342,895, including $925,000 for improving the Missouri and $923,000 for improving the Mississippi River and $780,000 for miscellaneous work upon these two streams-for the improvement of the Mississippi River from the head of the passes to Cairo. The bill appropriates all that the commission asked for. The Committee believe this is a work of such vast national importance and of such a peculiar and intricate character the commission should not only be left entirely unhampered by conditions of any kind, but should also have abundant means for the completion of the great work at the earliest possible time. The report says it is of infinite importance for the protection of the public from undue exaction of railroad companies. The great natural highways of commerce, the rivers of the country, should be placed in the best condition to compete with them.

A SPECIAL from Washington, May 15th, says: The court in bane have definitely agreed to sustain the verdict of the lower court in the Guiteau case. The public de-cision will be deferred a few days.

ciation, collided with a wild engine and caboose, one mile from Oswego. Engineer Russell, on the passenger train, stated that when about a mile and a half north of Oswego he discovered an engine start from the depot. He slacked the speed of his train and had gone but a few rods when he discovered that the engine was dashing down the grade toward him. He whistled, but no answer came from the other engine. He put on his brakes and brought his train to a stop and he and his fireman jumped from their engine and train. The other engine continued to come on with increasing rapidity, making fearful lunges in its mad career, and at a speed of about sev-enty-five miles an hour, plunged headlong into the engine of the passenger train, completely wedging the two engines. and rising into the air like a couple of mad tigers, the escaping steam and the creaking of bending iron resembling the hisses and snarls of infuriated beasts, the two engines, caboose and the baggage car being completely demolished. On going to the wreck it was discovered that no one was on the the loose engine. It was afterward ascertained that Wm. Fitzpatrick, engineer on the runaway engine, had left his engine in charge of his fireman, while he went into the office after orders. At the time he was signing his orders, his engine bounded away and was half a mile off before he had gained the platform. The fireman, being a new man, became alarmed and jumped from the engine, leaving it with full throttle, to go tearing up the road a certain destruction to anything it might encounter. The miraculous part of it is that no one was killed, although several were more or less injured, Road Master Brown being the most hurt of any.

Two regular trains daily are now running on the Leavenworth, Topeka & Southwest-ern Railway to McSouth, Jefferson County, and the track is being extended at the rate of a mile a day toward Topeka. The project for a Santa Fe branch to Leavenworth from Chouteau or Olathe is being galvanized into life again, and the sanguine ones claim that it will be built at once.

SHERIFF W. H. SMITH and Deputy Sheriff L. W. Learn, of Osage County, brought two prisoners to the Penitentiary recently; one, Ed. Beaumont, sentenced to ten years in the first degree; the other, Harond degree, in consideration of his turning State's evidence. Two prisoners, William Bramble and Freeman Myers, one aged seventeen and the other nineteen, both sentenced, one year for stealing stock, were also brought in from Coffee County. Conrad Lewis, for obtaining money under false pretences, had his examination and was held in the County Jail at Leavenworth, in default of $200 bail.

Penitential Politicians.

The spirit, or lack of spirit, mani-ested by the Half-breeds, is truly beaufiful. Their fortitude under affliction is admirable. Their meekness is phenomenal. They are reviled and they revile not again, they are slandered, maligned, ridiculed and actually kicked down the back stairs at the White House, and yet they always come up smiling, manifest-ing a spirit of forgiveness which is more transcendent than the humility of Uriah

Heep On the other hand what could be more heartless than the treatment accorded their half-brothers by the Stalwart poli-ticians? Directly and indirectly, openly and covertly, in the Cabinet and in the Senate, the Half-breed leaders are assailed mercilessly. Their forbearance and brotherly love only increase the contempt in which they are held and assure the 306 that their power in the party is irresistible and the mode of punishment entirely safe. Not a leader of the opposition to the 306 at Chicago escapes persecution, and not one dares even to enter a plea in behalf of mercy. Now and then some bold editor pipes out a protest against this wholesale slaughter and indiscriminate punishment, but he is so lonely, and his voice is so hollow and weak, he is himself ashamed of it, and soon swears it was only meant in a Pickwickian sense. President Garfield was not buried before the most virulent slanders were invented by the ingenuity of his opponents; his public and private life was assailed, he was accused of treachery and duplicity, of a lack of firmness, of weakness, of cowardice. It was said he betrayed Conkling; that he stabbed Rosecrans in the back; that he was alternately the tool and enemy of Blaine. No crime or weakness which could lower his position in the opinions of men or lessen the esteem of the people was omitted from the catalogue of his shortcomings, as enumerated by the friends of his successor. It is safe to say no man after his death has ever been assailed with the devilish malignity manifested against Garfield. His assailants have been utterly shameless and openly rewarded. It is a chapter of political history altogether unique. Nor has Blaine fared any better except for the fact that he still lives, and, hough he is weak and cast down, though his former hauteur has vanished, though his knightly plume is lowered and he shuns a conflict, cowardice is still the characteristic of his opponents, and they think perhaps the day may come when Blaine's star may be in the ascendant; so he is attacked with rather more caution, though with equal determination.

John Sherman is another victim marked for slaughter. He stood in the marked for slaughter. He stood in the way of the 306 at Chicago, and he asked Mr. Arthur to leave the New York Cus-tom-house. He will be made to plead MORE land is being fenced and broken in Wabaunsee County this spring than during tom-house. He will be made to plead forgiveness, and it will be refused. He stands as the last remaining member of the Administration of President Hayes, and no means that spies or detectives will furnish will be spared to destroy him.

Good-Bye, and Heaven Bless You!

The counter coalition by which Ma-hone was defeated and Bossism overthrown in Virginia, we trust forever, having fully succeeded in accomplishing what it set out to do, had as well be dissolved now by mutual consent and both parties to it take their separate ways until another danger of a similar nature threatens. We say this because we do not well see how they can travel the same road together any further at pres-ent. In the leading principles which control and direct their ideas of the polity of the State, they are still very widely at variance, and must continue so; and although at times they may meet on a common ground for the common defense, and agree to act together when the Commonwealth is in real danger; yet, that passed, they are better friends yet, that passed, they are better friends apart, and therefore we say to the Big Four, or Big Five, of the Senate and those who stood with them in the House and outside of it, if not adieu, why at least au revoir. If it is not hail and farewell, let it be at least good-bye, and Heaven bless you until the next time we need each other's help.

That the conservative people of Vir-ginia are much indebted to John E. Massey and his friends in the General Assembly is a fact that there is no use in trying to disguise, any more than there is need to deny or belittle their service. Nor does it matter that the Parson did not act wholly from disin-terested motives, but, bent on avenging the heaped-up wrongs he had received at the hands of the insolent Boss, he, Samson-like, used his strength to pull down the vile temple of his power-we must still give him credit and pay him the gratitude we owe for the great and good work he performed. There is a wide difference between Massey and the Boss. The first is a man eminent or his learning, and fit to be a leader of men, taking his place among leaders by the right of his own greatness; while the other is but a vulgar overseer, a mere driver of slaves, with not one attribute of leadership or claim to be ranked among great men. Mahone is the mere creature of accident, and has been the child of luck from his birth up to the present, when fortune seems to have for the nonce turned its back upon him. Everything hitherto that he has touched has turned to gold; but, alas! for the fate of Midas. The Pactolian stream has at last become too golden even for his uses, and he finds himself embarrassed in the richness of its sparkcrushed, with not one friendly hand, made serviceable by acts of kindness, to

One can not fail to admire the thoroughness of the Stalwarts, whatever one may think of their objects. They are both cruel and cautious, but they are just as determined and as vindictive as at Chicago. The same inflexible selfishness, the same bitter animosity, the same intolerance shown when Robertson was nominated, when Conkling resigned, when the Senatorial contest was carried on at Albany-which naturally culminated in assassination because it paved the way to murder—is shown now in the management of the party, in the reconstruction of the Cabinet, in the contempt manifested for Civil-Service Reform in the Boston nominations.

This is not so remarkable as the heavonly peace which fills the bosoms of the Half-breeds; it passes understanding. When, in defiance of the wishes of the New York Senators, Robertson was made Collector, those Senators re-signed; when Arthur appointed, in opposition to the wishes of Senators from Massachusetts, a Stalwart editor Collector of the Port of Boston, Harper's Weekly "views it with regret," and the New York Post says "it is deplorable," but thinks the Republicans will take it "calmly."

Of course they will; these Half-breeds are nothing if not calm, all except the excitable Halstead, who threatens to kick out of the traces and turn Ohio over to the Democrats, not because of the assassination or the failure of Civilservice Reform, or because Grantism is the dominating influence at Washington, but merely because of some local measures relating to whisky and Sunday drinking, which disturb his ideas of right even if they do not restrict his personal liberty. All this calmness and humility, this exhibition of brotherly love, this determination to forgive Arthur in spite of himself, must bring comfort and consolation to those who believe in the near approach of the millennium. No insult, no indignity, nothing the Administration can do will disturb these saints of the Lord. They are in the world but not of it. All life seems to them but a fleeting show, scarcely worth living. Such meekness, such resignation was not expected. The brave words they uttered last spring, when Garfield was President; their contempt for Conkling and Arthur, their hot indignation when assassination triumphed, might have led those who were not familiar with work. ings of the regenerate heart to expect such sentiments to resolve themselves into action, to result at least in some effective protest. With a true leader, a man of Massey's skill and knowledge, his kindly nature and winning ways, how easy was the task of demolishing the strong-hold and lofty tower of this man's purchased greatness! The fable of the lion and the mouse over again, and wherefore should we moralize further?

That we of Richmond are greatly beholden to Mr. Massey and his friends, the Big Four of Five, we think everybody here is ready to acknowledge. But for them our city charter would have been torn to shreds, and we should have been turned quite out of doors from our own homes. The State at large, too, owes them an obligation, for the defeat of at least two of the most infamous of Mahone's measures, while the country is indebted to them not a little for pre-venting the consummation of that crowning outrage, the false and unfair re-districting of the State, by which a large portion of the people would have been deprived of proper representation in the popular branch of the Federal Government, even as they are deprived of their rightful representatives in the Senate.

We are not astonished at Mahone's eleventh hour repentance, and that he should call frantically upon the despised Massey, this meek and humble Parson, to save him from his enimies when he finds himself inextricably emmeshed in the net of his destruction; but, alas! he counted without his host. The Parson is a meek, a Christian man, but he had been struck once too often on the right cheek to think then of turning the left to receive the coup de grace. had trusted this Boss twice and found him faithless, and he would not give him a third trial. He had him on the hip, and there he held him in a death grip. It was his victory, not ours, though he was indebted to our friends for it; but they received their full share, and are willing he should wear its chief honors, whatever the sequel may prove them to be worth to him. We know not now what his aims are, except they are still intended to humble the boasted power of our Virginia Goliath and his Philistine horde, and in this enterprise we must wish him all the prosperity we can, not wronging those to whom our closer allegiance is due, and our better duty must be given. -- Richmond (Va.) If there is any virtue in "Kendall's Spavin Cure" and "Ridway's Ready Relief," "Pega-us" and his master, will, in the course of time, be sailing through the upper deep, as "Pegasus" will then, no boubt, have become in reality a flying horse, and his master will have become fitted to hold the reins while he soars aloft through space. The County Clerk's Annua! Report threw us a little behind last week; but as there was nearly $150 worth of county printing in the reknow, from personal examination, that all the costs in both these habeas corpus cases were taxed to and his drug store.

The approval by the President of the act for another appropriation for the Washington Monument has infused engy among the contractors and sses having charge of its erection. As soon as the fund is available, proposals for bids will be issued by the engineer. In the meantime Superintendent P. H. McLaughlin is busy in erecting the iron work in the interior of the shaft, a force work in the interior of the shaft, a force of twelve men having been put on only two days ago. In about ten days the masons will be employed in putting the marble blocks in position. The super-intendent is confident of adding seven-ty-five feet to its present height before the new appropriation is expended, and thus reaching an altitude of 325 feet. The summit of the shaft in its present and ressed condition, is forty-five feet andressed condition, is forty-five feet square, the walls being seven feet thick. At the base the monument is fifty-five feet square, thus decreasing in its upward course at the rate of one-quarter of an inch per foot.

The memorial blocks which were stored away during the thirty years the work was suspended, have been brightened up and are ready to be put in posi-tion. Between forty and fifty stones have been put in the walls, and, in passup and down in the elevator, are ing studied to an advantage by the aid of a lantern. About ninety more are in the lapidarium yet to be put in the walls. Some of these have been mutilated by vandal hands. The most seriously defaced stone is that which was presented by the Temple of Honor and Temperance. Some of the carved emblems are badly broken, done before Superintendent McLaughlin took charge. Conspie-uous among the stones that will be put in the shaft this year is the one from the Temple of Æsculapius, on the Isl-and of Paros; a block from the original chapel of William Tell, built in 1388, on Lake Lucerne, where he escaped from Gessler, and a large square of marble from the Grecian Archipelago, sent as a tribute from the islands of Paros and Naxos. A finely polished piece of marble, which was given by J. A. Lehman, has also been set aside. Imbedded in its face is a head which was carved two or three thousand years ago by the ancient Egyptians for the temple erected in honor of Augustus, on the banks of the Nile. The head is of a hard, dark brown rock, of a granite grain and from its irregular appearance was apparently broken in its removal from its original resting place. The stones from the Swiss confederation, Turkey and China, will, it is said, take precedent of the many fine pieces of carved work that have been presented by the secret societies and other organizations. The latest block sent to the lapidarium comes from Nevada, having been received but a short time ago. It is  $3x1\frac{1}{2}$  feet and is cut from granite. Its face, which is polished, bears the inscription: "All for our country-1881," in gilt letters. The line "Nevada" extends across the middle in plain six-inch letters of solid silver. It is one of the most attractive stones in the collection and the only one that has been received for a number of years. Washington Post.

About Walking.

No two of us walk alike. The hinges of our gates turn the same way, but with different results.

The baby strikes out a toddle because it hasn't strength enough to walk, but it hasn't strength enough to walk, but it has the underlying principle of a nat-ural walk, because it "toes in." "Toe-ing out" is a military artifice, invented for the purpose of showing how much more a man knew than the Lord did. The hippity, hoppity, skip and jump, is peculiarly the little girl's gait. ### Doomed to Failure.

Fifteen years ago Harry Fowler-we do not use the real name—was a bril-liant but nervous boy, in a preparatory school in one of our large cities. He entered college, and soon became noted for his essays in the literary club, which he joined. He was not a thorough scholar and his observation had been limited; but he had a happy faculty of expression, and could say "nothing" with a crisp vivacity which strongly recombined with

The college boys with one voice pro-nounced him a genius. He was the man—every college can boast of one— who "would be heard of in the world." Mashed potatoes etc. To one-third of beef use two-third potatoes; the meat should be chopped fine, every particle to be chopped evenly, and not too fine Mashed potatoes etc. for authorship? Poeta nascitur, etc. He sent one or two articles to a daily paper. Unfortunately they were ac-cepted. He left college, went to the city, and at nineteen began what he was pleased to call "a literary life." The boy had talent, immature but at-tractive. A sketch or two was accepted by the magazines, and won praise. But there his success ended. He had neither knowledge, experience, nor poetic fancy to give the world, and pleasing nothings do not long command a sale in publishing offices. To support life he became a reporter on a daily paper, working all night to gain the pittance which supported him. At the same time he besieged in vain every magazine and publisher in the country with novels, sketches and poems. Made fiful and uncertain by his temperament and habits of life. he soon lost his position of salaried reporter and became a sensational writer, a mere hack, furnishing accounts of murders, of prize-fights, accidents, etc., at so much-or so little-a column. Disappointment and irregular hours had soured his temper and worn on his nerves. He began to "need something to brace him up." There is no need that we should go down the miserable road step by step. A few weeks ago Harry Fowler committed suicide in his room leaving a latter babind in mhis room, leaving a letter behind, in which he arraigned the world as blind to his real worth, and God as unjust to him. How many other young men and women are rushing into authorship, seeking to take the position of teachers of mankind, while as yet they have accumulated no resources of thought or of knowledge, have seen nothing of the world, and have not even learned how to work! The end of them may not be as tragic as in this case. But it will assuredly be disappointment, bitter and enduring. "Do not," said Jerrold to such an ambitious lad, "take down the shutters until you have something to put in the windows." --- Youth's Companion.

-Thomas Kongmacher, of Yardley-ville, Pa., left a will directing that his body be drawn to the grave-yard by the two young stallions that had, by running away, caused him injuries re-sulting in his death, and that a friend should follow the hearse on horseback carrying a banner "representing the four races in the faces of Henry W. Longfellow, of Boston; E. G. Brown, of Richmond; Spotted Dog, of the Chey-enne tribe, and Loo Choo, of Cali-fornia." He also ordered that, in lieu of any ordinary funeral service, a Gov-ernment bond of $100 should be burned over his coffin. As the will has just been found, two years after his death, it is too late to carry out all these provisions.-N. Y. Sun.
