COEPUUS CHEISTR.

Fellow Citizens:

The national convention will have done its do before this becomes readable in print. It is to be hoped our great party will act wisely and not lose their heads and do things that will start them home dissatisfied.

We are truly glad of the recognition accorded our great president and his wise administration. We believe it is very unfair to abuse a man who has gone through with so much and then on any other question say: "No man is perfect." Mr. Wilson may have made mistakes, (who hasn't), but our honest belief is that no greater man ever occupied the presidential chair and no one would have gone through the perilous times of his administration and guided the ship to any better advantage. Some look at it differently, but have they said or done anything to bring themselves and opinions into convincing notice of the thinking people who want to live and let live. Political pie looks so good to some men that it would take something of very large dimensions to hide old self and give some one else a half chance at a fair play. This don't only work in politics, but the appliances for hooking on will fit any profession or calling that puts men in power. We needn't slam the whole thing in the face of politicians thinking we can clear the deck. It is to be hoped that the good women of the country will see such beauty in clean, unselfish politics, schools, churches and society that their efforts will be to sweep the deck and cause men to tremble who have so long been indulging in the unclean nets to try to keep up appearances while they reached out for ill-gotten, unmanly gain. I have just returned from the hotel lobby where I heard a representative in the legislature go for the legislators who have been sent to Austin to represent the people. I don't know what some of them might say about him. If he takes God's name in vain there as he did here there is plenty of room for talk. If there is anything un-called for and entirely inexcusable it is profanity such as this representative of the people used. I took notice that every time he cursed he looked around to see if there were any ladies close enough to have heard him. I am sorry for any people who have to admit they have such an irreverent, foul-mouthed piece of humanity as their leader in lawmaking. He violated God's commands and the laws of his state 6 or 8 times in a 20-minute conversation before 6 or 8 men, all of them older than himself. I want to put myself on record as openly and boldly saying, "Shame on a man with no more respect for himself, the place he fills and the people he represents." When that representative left the lobby one man said he would make a better governor than a representative in the legislature. It is no wonder there are jers, schisms and trouble when we have such men at the head of affairs. I don't care how smart a man is if he is so rotten at heart he can't indulge in conversation without repeatedly profaning the name of his Creator, he has no business in office and the people should see to it that there be a cleaning up and get reverent, decent men to represent us. Them's my sentiments. Yours may be otherwise. A lawmaker has no right to make a law, then violate it and then prosecute some poor illiterate man for doing no less. If in this enlightened age an old cussier wants to cuss, let him withdraw from politics, go down in some cave or canyon as close to hell as he can get and as far away from civilization—cuss until he gets tired, then size himself up, make his will, but his brains out against a rock as close to the edge of a precipice as he can get so as to be sure to roll off and pass out beyond the sight of man. If any one wishes to defend and excuse himself for cursing, we presume the editor will give him space. We trust that some of the largest fruits of woman suffrage will be taking the heads off of unclean, foul-mouthed men seeking office.

MISS MARY LINA BLEDSOE ON HONOR LIST OF UNIVERSITY

Austin, Texas, July 8.—The honor list of the University for the spring term has just been compiled. In computing the score of the students an A is counted as 12, a B as 9, a C as 6 and a D as 3. The best one per cent of upperclassmen made scores of 64 and up; the best one per cent of freshmen made scores of 63 up. The remaining groups made scores lower than these, but above 45 in the case of freshmen and 48 in the case of upperclassmen.

A student from Goldthwaite on the honor list for the spring term is Miss Mary Linn Bledsoe.

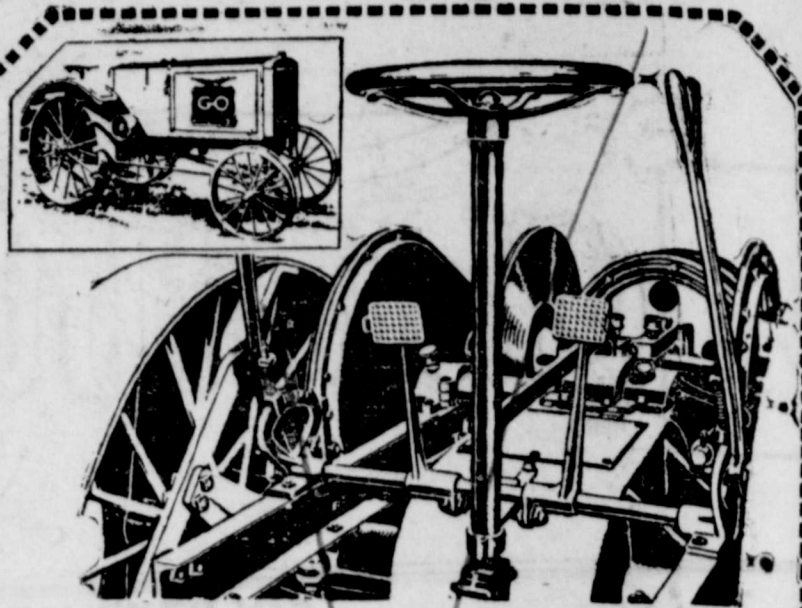

SWAT THE FLY.

The common house fly is one of the greatest breeders of disease. It transmits disease by carrying it from one object to another on their bodies. Tuberculosis, cholera, dysentery, typhoid and other diseases are carried by the fly from one place to another. It wades through sputum and collects millions of germs which may be carried onto food, deposited on the baby's mouth, or any place it happens to light. It may carry disease from the sick to the well.

Flies multiply rapidly, and one fly may be the potential ancestor of millions of others. After a female fly is two weeks old she begins depositing eggs and will deposit several hundred every week.

The way to keep flies from the house is to swat the first one, have all windows and doors well screened, and keep all food covered.

Every fly swatted now means millions less later. Swat the fly!

The First Tractor in America With All Gears Enclosed

It was the G-O Tractor. It led the way. G-O owners have had this protection against sand-cut gears for years.

Look at the picture. See the rigidity, the endurance built into it. From its flexible front wheels to its adjustable drawbar, there's not a gear or bearing exposed. They are all enclosed in a dust-proof casing and running in oil. This protection means a longer life for all working parts and less trouble.

Then there's the advanced G-O driving mechanism that other tractors can't copy. Patents protect it. It applies all the power direct to the rims of the rear wheels. Prevents strain on the hubs and spokes. Eliminates gears and chains and saves the power they would consume for traction. It gives you six speeds for drawbar or belt work—and you can't strip gears. The G-O transmission has no gears to strip.

These are some of the features that made me pick the G-O. They make it the easiest tractor to handle and understand. A man doesn't have to be a mechanic to make almost all adjustments ever necessary with a G-O.

And remember this: Its big, kerosene-burning, 14-28 H. P. Waukesha motor makes it the most powerful tractor for its weight in America. Come in and look it over, or write me for a catalog.

GOODYEAR

Equal Rights - Matrimonial

Mary Graham Bonner

RAYMOND WELLMAN had voted for suffrage once and he intended to do so again. It was before New York women had succeeded in obtaining the vote and Raymond had always thoroughly approved of women. It was not that he fell in love frequently—he had never been in love before, but still he considered that beside women, men counted for very little. Somehow women could even make more money than men—that is, when they did make money at all—and when they started out to work they were always successful.

It was the day of the great suffrage parade. He stood on the densely crowded sidewalk and watched the women march by.

And as he saw Mildred Aldrich march by, head erect, leading her division, Raymond's heart leaped and he felt as if a voice within him had suddenly proclaimed to all the marchers:

"You're all splendid, every one of you, but there is one, just one of you, who is everything in the world!"

Mildred gave an informal supper at her studio after the parade. Mildred's parents were dead and she had come to New York to work her way.

They had the jolliest of times that evening, but after the others had left Raymond lingered for a moment.

"May I stay?" he asked. And Mildred smiled her answer. She showed him a new baby's head she had just made for which she had received $500. For Mildred had already taken her place in the ranks of the leading sculptors and her work commanded large sums.

Raymond started one topic of conversation after another. Then he stopped abruptly.

"Oh, hang it all, Mildred," he exclaimed, "this is no way to do it, but you know I'm not well versed in the art—and, anyhow—my point is—I want to marry you!"

"I've thought of this for a long time," said Mildred. "It's nonsense to pretend I'm surprised to hear what you've said."

He leaned forward and took her hand. She wondered if he was going to kiss her, and he was wondering just why he didn't seem to feel like kissing her.

"Well, I know you're tired, my dear," he said affectionately, "so I'll be on my way. You've had a big day and I've had a bigger one."

"Good night," Mildred said in a low voice. Raymond took her hand again and held it to his lips for a moment.

They talked of marrying after the war, for Raymond had received his commission in the air service and was going abroad.

When he returned, just six months after peace had come, they both seemed to feel something missing in their feelings. Both knew they should be so glad, so gay, so happy, so relieved. Mildred found herself becoming nervous and irritable.

"Are you sure," she asked him one night with an inexplicable expression in her eyes, "that you love me as much as you did?"

"I'm quite sure," Raymond answered, but in his mind he was asking himself if he was just as fond of her as he had been. He felt he was—but really it was something else that was worrying him. He knew now that he had never been as fond of her as he ought to have been. He admired her so much, he loved to talk to her, but he never seemed to be able, now that the time grew closer, to think of her in his home as his wife, possibly as a mother. Mildred working, doing tremendously big things, Mildred making the loveliest of babies' heads in plaster, this was the Mildred he knew, but he couldn't picture Mildred with a baby of her own. He couldn't quite visualize it and he was annoyed at himself because he couldn't.

They had settled on the date of their wedding—it would take place on the fourth of July. They felt it was the complete, he reflected; or it could be so woefully incomplete and miserable.

It was an unusually chilly day for May, when he went to her studio. Her cousin had just arrived. She was a striking contrast to Mildred, who was of statuesque beauty, tall and fair with clear, penetrating blue eyes. This girl was younger and rather short. Her eyes were gray, her hair black and wavy, her skin dark with color which came and went.

"Here's Elizabeth Irving," Mildred

said, as Raymond entered. "Our cousin," she smiled.

"I'm glad to welcome you here," he said after a moment.

"I have to finish some work tonight," said Mildred, after they had finished tea. "I'm ever so sorry, as I did so want to see that play we've tickets for. But I've been neglecting things so shamefully and I must settle down and get a little more work accomplished so I can take my holiday later! Why don't you take Beth to my place, Raymond?"

So it was decided upon and he stayed for dinner. Throughout the meal it seemed to be thrust upon him repeatedly how different this cousin was, how strangely and instantly he felt himself drawn to her, and he felt disloyal and small and wretched.

"Didn't I tell you she had ideas tucked away?" asked Mildred laughing at a remark of Beth's.

was called out tonight anywhere. I've had a suspicion that she just made it up—that story of the neighbor's child. I think she has gone out to walk and walk and walk. She has been pacing the floor at night almost ever since I came. I think she thinks—" Beth stopped.

"Do you think she thinks—that we're—that we've grown fond—" Raymond began.

Beth nodded.

"It has been lately, since these invitations have come and we've been addressing them," Beth continued. "She has let some queer remarks slip." And suddenly Raymond noticed that Beth's eyes were slightly red and that she had let two tears fall on an envelope.

"My dear," Raymond said, "you do love me? I'm right, you love me so much, so much." He was at her side now, his arm tight around her.

"Stand up!" he commanded. "Now kiss me! Now! I must kiss you. . . This once. . . Never again. Oh, my own, my own," he murmured, as Beth's shoulders shook and she trembled in his arms.

A slight sound startled them and turning they both saw Mildred.

"Mildred!" cried Beth and flew from the room. But Mildred called her back.

"Listen to me! Both of you! You must listen to me. I know now," she said, looking at Raymond, "that we both made a hideous mistake, but up to tonight I only thought I had made it. I've been so worried, so nervous, I've tried to forget everything in my work and I you've been dearer and kinder to me so that I've felt miserable. I tried to make myself believe I loved you. I wanted love and marriage so much. Then as the time passed and the wedding grew nearer I felt that I couldn't go through with it. But I didn't see what I was to do! It wasn't the thing I thought it was. There was always something missing.

"I suppose I didn't realize anything like this—because I was so worried and absorbed in myself."

Raymond was looking at her, still amazed. "And you don't love me?" he repeated incredulously.

"Oh, the eternal man!" laughed Mildred. "You can't believe that I actually don't love you! Oh, I understand, I'm not being any martyr sacrificing myself because I see you love another, I'm happy, so happy! I want to work and work and work until I find someone who can make me love him better than work. It's not that I'm so mighty fond of my career; I would always keep on, but when I marry I want someone who means more to me than anything—that's what I want and need!"

"Mildred, you dear," Beth kept repeating, "and that's why you have been unhappy and nervous and have gone flying out of the studio so often."

"I must have given you a bad time of it," she said. "But doesn't it seem absurd," she asked Raymond, "when we believe in equal rights for women, equal mental, financial, municipal rights, that we don't yet believe in equal matrimonial rights for both? We've boasted that we were both ideal citizens of this democracy believing in liberty. And I thought the day of independence was none too good as a wedding day for two such independent people. We've both been wrong and neither of us would admit it, so we went on blindly, stumbling and almost falling. We're fine ones to talk of independence, of equal rights, both of us. But, oh, I'm glad! So glad!" she repeated.

And her eyes shone with an unmistakable love for them both, a grateful, inspiring love because of the realization that the opportunity which would make them both happy was the trail of happiness for herself.

Independence hall came into existence without any thought of the part it was destined to play in the birth of the nation. Necessity really created it. It appears, from documents well authenticated, that the Provincial assembly of Pennsylvania had been meeting in a house, annually rented in Philadelphia, until May 1, 1773. It was shortly after this date that the assembly voted £2,000 toward the purchase of ground for the building and its construction. It was designed by Andrew Hamilton, a barrister of Philadelphia, who in making his plans, provided for two wings, one of them Congress hall. In 1773 ground for the building was broken, but the construction dragged on for some years before the work was finished, although certain rooms were used for some years before the whole was completed.

Construction of Congress hall began in 1787, and was completed in 1789, and the remaining wing of Independence hall, known as "City Hall," was started in 1789 and finished in 1791.

most significant date upon which they could be married, with their ideas of independence and equality and liberty and democracy, at least Mildred had decided that.

Raymond had been home two weeks when Mildred told him she had asked her cousin, Elizabeth Irving, who lived in the west, to help her in these last weeks. Elizabeth had written she would be delighted to come. She was expected now any day.

Raymond couldn't understand Mildred's interest in the details of the wedding. And as he wondered, the doubts once banished came bustling back. She was tremendously engrossed in her life work—her artistry—and he realized it so forcibly now.

He spent sleepless nights when he thought that he had missed his chance for happiness by making such a dreadful mistake in the main step of his life. Life could be so wonderful, so and those very red lips which he had already heard say some quite astonishing things. Why had he never felt that way toward Mildred? he asked himself.

Mildred seemed to grow busier as the days passed. Perhaps, Raymond reflected, she was putting him to a test, and he redoubled his efforts to be particularly affectionate and considerate.

So it went on. The wedding was three weeks away. In a few days the invitations would be out. Beth had been busy all one day addressing them, as had Mildred. In the evening he was going to help them.

He arrived early and Beth opened the door.

"Mildred is out," she said. "Some one telephoned her. It was very urgent. A child of a neighbor is dangerously ill and they were at wits' ends and wanted Mildred to help them. She said she would be back in less

They went to the play and as Raymond brought her home in the taxi he kept repeating to himself, "You won't make trouble here. You mustn't make trouble here." He had always hated that situation known as the eternal triangle, yet here it was rearing itself before him. He shuddered.

Somehow as he talked to this girl from the west he felt how close she was to him and he was filled with a longing to seize her and hold her very close and kiss her soft unruly hair.

Their pens squeaked along for about 15 minutes. Neither had spoken.

"You'll make her very happy, won't you?" asked Beth softly, with a tiny break in her voice. "Mildred's the finest girl I know. And she has had a lonely sort of a life, I think."

"I hope I'll make her happy," he answered, without looking up.

"She has seemed so different lately," Beth continued. "I don't believe she

SUBSTITUTE FOR GASOLINE HAS NOW BEEN DISCOVERED

Hail to lowly and sticky molasses! From it is being produced "motor alcohol"—a substitute for gasoline.

Discovered by J. P. Foster, chemist of one of the big sugar plantations on the island of Maui, Hawaii, production within the next three months will be sufficient to furnish fuel for all cars on the islands should a gasoline shortage occur.

According to the first reports of the new fuel, brought to San Francisco by District Manager F. E. Carroll of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of California, "motor alcohol" gives more power, greater mileage, easier starting and more freedom from carbon than gasoline. It can be used without an adjustment of the carburetor.

When a Goldthwaite citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. Home endorsement is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Goldthwaite resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

According to the Director of the Census, the number of acres of land subject to irrigation in Mills county at this time is 402. During the year 1919 no land was irrigated. This is explained by the fact that 1919 was an abnormally wet year in Texas.

The problem of how to supply the community with both a church and theatre on money sufficient for only one building has been solved in a small Western town by building one large auditorium with a stage at one end of the hall and a pulpit at the other, according to a Y. W. C. A. dramatic director who visited the town recently.
This novel arrangement diplomatically meets certain apparent objections and at the same time gives the proper setting for either form of gathering. The seats are reversible.

On August 7, the special train of five Pullman cars—the Texas Farm Boys' Special—will leave the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, en route to the north and east to study the latest agricultural methods. The first stop of the special will be Wichita, Kansas, and places of interest to be visited include New York City, a trip through the Bethlehem Steel works, a visit to the White House in Washington and possibly an audience with the president. The farmers will make stops in Canada, and will visit Niagara Falls.

Once upon a time girls were "psy-chologized" to determine the kind of men they should marry. Now they are being "psychologized" to see what positions they can best fill. In the employment bureau of the largest New York City Y. W. C. A. the placement secretary who answers calls from hundreds of employers and who examines as many applicants for positions, is a specially-trained psychologist. She examines every applicant carefully and finds that "many women misunderstand their abilities and apply for positions they could not fill." On her testing cards six types of personality are listed which determine fitness or unfitness for various jobs—positive, negative, aggressive, vivid, balanced and colorless. Because of this personality test especially, the director has seldom made a misfit in placing women and girls.

Heavy Milkers are Summer Fed

Look up the production records of cows that show a big milk flow year after year, and you will find that they are all summer fed. Their owners have realized the deficiencies of only grass. Algae, it can't produce a maximum flow, because a cow can't consume sufficient grass to supply the necessary protein. The protein in grass varies throughout the season.

These inequalities of a grass ration are perfectly corrected by using

Purina Cow Chow

It not only straightens up the ration—24%—but it is now absolute guarantee of purity and uniformity.

Practical tests by dairymen show that Cow Chow will make the average cow produce 6 lbs. more milk per day at an added cost of about 6c.

Lafayette
CHAMPION OF FREEDOM

General Lafayette, From a Picture Made Late in Life.

He came to fight for Freedom's cause
Against a tyrant's power,
When Washington at Valley Forge
Had reached his darkest hour.
His army fought beside our own,
And, when the task was done,
Another nation had been born,
For victory was won.

A boy in years—a man in heart—
Son of a mighty race,
He wrote his name in mighty deeds
That time shall not erase.
He brought new hope, and faith, and strength
In time of black despair,
And freedom triumphed on our soil,
For France was fighting there.

And then across the many years,
By history's glorious chance,
Against oppression's heavy hand
Our soldiers fought for France;
And when the last hard fight was won
We well had paid the debt
That always had been ours to pay
To France and Lafayette!

Good men in fustian, stand ye still;
The men in red come o'er the hill.
"Lay down your arms!" . . . cry
The men in red full haughtily.
But never a grounding gun is heard;
The men in fustian stand unstartred;
Dead calm save maybe a wise bluebird
Puts in his little heavenly word.
O men in red! if ye but knew
The half as much as bluebirds do
Now in this little tender calm
Each hand would out, and every palm
With patriot palm strike brotherhood's stroke
Or ere these lines of battle broke.
O men in red! if ye but knew
The least of all that bluebirds do,
Now in this little godly calm
Yon voice might sing the Future's Psalm—
The Psalm of Love with the brotherly eyes
Who pardons and is very wise—
Yon voice that shouts with high-hoarse ire, Fire!

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Editor Eagle:
Sir:—The other great political party has spoken, at San Francisco, and now the people of our nation can line up on the principles that most nearly coincide with their views and open up our great presidential campaign.

The peculiar thing about the whole situation in the League of Nations plank. Every one expected a clear-cut short expression on this plank that would clearly sustain the president's work at Versailles, France, but we did not get it. The Democrats were evidently afraid to make a clear-cut issue of the League, but have themselves straddled this issue as well as the prohibition issue. It, the Democratic party, now stands for reservations to the league that will clarify our duties to our associate members of the league. This is an admission that there is confusion or rather that the waters have been muddied and that clarification would be acceptable to them. Now what would clarify for one member of the Democratic party would evidently not clarify for all of them and we would likely have as many different opinions as to reservations necessary to clarify as there are individual Democrats to clarify in the senate. So the Democratic party, so far as clarifying its own position on the League is concerned, leaves the country, in general, so far as its position is concerned, in as deep darkness and as much doubt as they were in at the time congress adjourned.

While the party went to San Francisco condemning a long platform and boasting the brevity with which they intended to state their own case to the dear people, this one plank covers almost a column of newspaper space and is so full of evasion that every frank and honest Democrat must be ashamed of it. While outwardly endorsing all the work of President Wilson at Versailles they humbly admit that classification would be welcomed by them. Well, that's some admission, ain't it? Most prudent men will not endorse the work of any one until that work is clear to them, but in this case the democratic convention endorses the work of a democratic president but it admits that clarification of the work endorsed would be perfectly satisfactory to it. And while this plank is very long as it stands, most thinking men can read more between the lines than they can on the lines, so on the whole it's a very bungling attempt to evade the question.

It is very evident that the party is trying to swim with a millstone around its neck and Woodrow Wilson's covenant of the League of Nations is the millstone.
But when we come down to the realer thinking on the proposition of clarification of our duty to our associate members of the league, we have struck a snag of no small or doubtful proportions. I think, and I assume that all thinking men must think, that clarification of our duty to our associate members of the league can only come when the league is put in operation and the duty of each nation is pointed out to it by the governing authority of the league which is supposed to reside in the nine members of the executive committee.

According to the present arrangements, Great Britain will, with her outlying possessions, have five of the nine members, the rest of the world will have four. The matter of construing the compact and "clarifying" our duty to our associate members will not really begin until we have been roped in and then it will be too late. Neither the Democratic party nor the Republican party can clarify our duty and we must either accept its construction or take the consequences of going, possibly, against all the rest of the league membership. That America will not always accept European designation of her duty I take as a foregone conclusion and therein lies the great danger of friction and international irritation that will very likely ripen into international strife.

We must remember that it is not ours to construe a contract of this kind; therefore we can't clarify our duty. We can only clarify according to our construction but our construction is hardly worth considering.

Let us remember that when we built the Panama Canal at a cost of one-half billion of dollars that we had a treaty with Great Britain, known as the Clayton-Bulwar treaty, relative to constructing this great commercial waterway, and in this treaty and subsequent interpretations and agreements thereunder we claimed the right to transport our coastwise trade through this waterway free of tolls. This great advantage to our people of having water rates from our Pacific coast to our Atlantic coast would so reduce freight rates that the difference between water rates and railroad rates would soon equal the cost of the canal and the people, especially those of the Atlantic seaboard in the south would reap immediately and permanently a great benefit from the canal and that our domestic water carrying transportation would be greatly stimulated. But strange to say when this canal was completed by our own money and across our national territory and we started our coastwise trade through it, Great Britain says hold on, Uncle Sam, your coastwise trade can't pass through the canal without paying the same rate of toll that you charge Great Britain for shipping her cargoes through there, according to our construction of the Clayton-Bulwar treaty, and after a brief exchange of notes, Woodrow Wilson, to the dismay of all of us, acquiesced in the British construction of the treaty and we find ourselves in this peculiar position; viz: that we can't use our own canal, built across our own territory with our own money, without paying toll and this toll, when paid, has to be added to the shipping rate which makes water rates as high or higher than rail rates. It killed our coastwise shipping and the cities and peoples of our Southern Atlantic seaboard were deprived of the benefits they were promised and had a right to expect from the construction of this canal. And might I be permitted right here to add that his promised boom was made possible to the south by a Republican administration and congress and destroyed to the south by a Democratic administration. Here we see the interests of the "Solid South" trampled under foot by a Democratic administration while it acquiesces in a construction that benefits the northern railroads and the British shipping interests.

In the face of this unhappy and unjust construction of the British government the Democratic party is again asking us to let it put our hand in the lion's mouth by returning it to power in 1920, so that it can ratify the Versailles covenant and put another document in British hands to be construed against us.

Will we do it? Never, never, never, while true Americanism retains its common American horse sense. No.

GRISHAM RENEWS CHALLENGE TO BLANTON FOR JOINT DEBATE

Eastland, Texas, June 29, 1920.
Hon. Thomas L. Blanton, Abilene, Tex.
Dear Sir: Your recent statement, wherein you dodge the issue of joint debate, has just been called to my attention.

I am advised that you have sent copies of this Blanton advertisement to all of the newspapers in this district, and to some out of the district. By said propaganda you would have the public believe that I am unwilling to meet you in joint debate. You conclude by requesting me to not again say that you will not meet me.

On March 2, I challenged you directly to meet me anywhere and at any time in this district in joint discussion. I have renewed this challenge in every speech I have made. I have spoken in every county in the district, and have said that you would not accept the challenge. I here now repeat it.

I now offer to affirm at any place in the district after July 7, the following proposition:
"Blanton has pursued a course in and out of congress which has destroyed his usefulness as a representative of this district, and forfeited his right to be returned to congress."

I will give you equal division of time and we will select a fair and impartial chairman.

Do not answer with evasion. Meet me or confess by your refusal your inability to defend your hopeless record.
R. N. GRISHAM.

AUTOMOBILE LAWS WILL BE ENFORCED IN GOLDTHWAITE

Owing to the fact that drivers of automobiles are beginning to get reckless and sometimes exceed the speed limit on the streets of Goldthwaite, we want to give warning to them that the speed laws will be strictly and impartially enforced by us. If we allow experienced drivers to drive through the streets faster than the limit fixed by law, it encourages reckless drivers to do the same, which will be a menace to the pedestrians. We therefore desire to warn all drivers of automobiles that we will show no discrimination in enforcing the law, and we ask that the people observe the speed law, as we do not want to be compelled to make them pay a fine. We do not want their money, but want the law enforced. If we are compelled to make arrests, every one violating the speed law will be prosecuted.

COUNTY CAMPAIGN IS SO WARM AS TO BE—HOT

The candidates for county office are on the go these days, and the campaign is becoming nearly as warm as the city without ice. All the candidates are making speeches in the different voting precincts of the county and plan to systematically cover the territory before the election, winding up with a speaking in Goldthwaite the night before the election. The candidates go in pairs, and each one has a chance to answer his opponent. Each speaker takes pains to let the audience know he and his opponent are the "best of friends." The candidates spoke at Pleasant Grove on July 1, Payne Gap, July 2, Star and Center City July 3, Midway schoolhouse Tuesday night of this week, and Mullin picnic Friday. They plan to speak at Oakland school house Saturday night.

A report from Temple telling of the condition of Little Herman Richards, son of W. A. Richards, was received with much joy by friends in this city. Little Herman is doing nicely.

Mrs. S. H. Allen and children of Temple were here this week visiting Mrs. Allen's sister, Mrs. Walter Fairman, and other relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Evna Walker left Wednesday night for Ranger, where they will make their home.

T. F. Cox is numbered among the new subscribers to the Eagle this week.

Judge Mallory Blair arrived in Goldthwaite Thursday night to spend the night among friends before going to the picnic at Mullin creek.

Mrs. S. A. R. Smith was a pleasant visitor at the Eagle office Friday.

C. R. Crim, while working on his gin, commonly known as the round bale gin, last week fell and hurt himself pretty badly. However, his friends will be glad to know that he is doing well.

Miss Frances Brooking and Dr. Mary C. Brooking of Star were pleasant visitors at the Eagle office Friday afternoon.

TEXAS CROP CONDITIONS.

Dallas, Texas, July 5.—Crop conditions and prospects in Texas have materially improved within the last few weeks, according to reports from correspondents of the Texas Industrial Congress in 129 counties. Crops are said to be from thirty to forty days late, but with generally fair weather conditions prevailing since June 1, the farmers, with limited help but working during every available hour of daylight, have made wonderful progress in planting, re-planting and cultivating. From 20 per cent to 25 per cent of the cotton crop remained to be planted on July 15. Wheat and oats harvesting is in progress and potato digging is under way. Excessive rainfall during May has stored an ample supply of moisture in the soil. A protracted drouth in portions of West Texas has been broken by general rains and range conditions are reported excellent. The total cultivated acreage of the state this year, according to reports is 8 per cent less than in 1919. Labor conditions on the farms have not improved, but show a further decrease of 17 per cent since April 1, when the available supply was estimated at 87 per cent. This additional, and to some extent, alarming decrease is attributed to the fact that many Mexicans in Southwest Texas have returned to Mexico since the revolution there; to extensive operations in the oil fields; to the demand of the saw mills and turpentine camps in East Texas, and to renewed activity, with the coming of favorable weather, in work of a public nature, chiefly road construction, in all parts of the state. The reports received by the congress agree that the determining factors in making this year's crops are weather conditions during the next sixty days and the probability of obtaining a reasonable amount of labor. Wages on the farms range from a minimum of $1 per day in Southwest Texas, where Mexican labor is more abundant, to $6 in the Panhandle for harvest fields. The average daily wage is $2.75. In many cases board is included.

Cotton—114 counties report a probable acreage of 10,139,000 acres, or 98 per cent of last year's acreage. Condition, compared with 1919, 75.8 per cent; compared with the ten-year average the condition is 60.61 per cent. A number of counties report replanting necessary because of poor stand and overflows. From 20 to 25 per cent of the crop remained to be planted on June 1. Some damage from grasshoppers, boll weevil and boll worms is noted.

FOR SALE.

Olive school published:

We, the undersigned patrons of the Mt. Olive school district, can heartily and gladly recommend W. M. Roberts as a teacher, as he has taught this school and his character and ability have met with our approval in every respect.

Los Angeles Man Gained Fifteen Pounds Taking Tanlac—Troubles Overcome.

"Tanlac has not only rid me of my troubles but has added fifteen pounds to my weight," said Joseph A. Dunmire of 402 Crocker St., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Dunmire has been a trusted employe of the Los Angeles Transfer Co. for twenty-seven years.

"Before I started taking Tanlac," he continued, "I could not eat a single meal without my food fermenting and gas forming so bad it made me miserable. I had rheumatism in my right leg so bad at times I could hardly get about and at night I was too restless to get much sleep. I had very little appetite and went down hill so fast that I lost fifteen pounds and got so weak I could hardly do my work."

"Well, sir, in spite of the bad condition I was in I hadn't taken more than half a bottle of Tanlac before I felt a hundred per cent better. Now all my sufferings have stopped completely. I can eat three hearty meals every day and sleep like a log at night. I have regained every pound of my lost weight and am in as good health as a man wants to be. I have started my daughter taking Tanlac, so you see what I think of it."

Tanlac is sold in Goldthwaite by all dealers.—Adv.
